may exchange its quality of freezing for that of scalding.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. i. c. 1.

Wantonness and sauiness are laughed at and encouraged as marks of spirit.—Knox. Liberal Education, s. 33.

SAVE, v. Fr. Sauver, sauf; It. Sal-vare, salvo; Sp. Salvar, salvo; SA'VEABLE. Lat. Salvere, i. e. salvum esse, SA'VEABLENESS. from the Gr. Σαος, (inserta SA'VE. liquida.) To save— SA'VING, n. To take out, to keep out SA'VINGLY. of harm, ill, danger; to SA'VINGNESS. rescue or free from, to pre- SA'VIOUR. serve from, harm, ill, or SAFE, adj. danger; to secure, to keep SAFE, v. from waste, from expendi- SA'FELY. ture; to reserve; to spare. SA'FENESS. SA'FETY. Saviour, emphatically,— the saver or preserver of men.

And be yuolled in holy water, & myd Cristendom monge ge mowe sauflyche thet holy thyng, as he dude, auonge.
R. Gloucester, p. 239.

& if a clerke men founde in his lond that reft,
Thorgh slauhter or wounde, or thorgh other theft,
Men suld schewe his guilte in the courte of lay,
& ther be saued or splite, bot Thomas said him nay.
R. Brunne, p. 129.

R. for alle the pres sauely did tham vp ryue.—Id. p. 191.

The mayden Edward toke, also he was fulle curteys,
In saufle did hir toke, & thanked the burgeis.—Id. p. 136.

For wente nevere men this way. that he ne was here rifled
Save my selve sothliche. and suche as ich lovede.
Piers Plouhman, p. 326.

Ich shal by seche for alle synfulle. our Sauyours of grace.
To a menden ous of oure mysdedes. do mercy to ous alle.
Id. p. 116.

For God sent not his sone into the world, that he juge
the world, but that the world be saued by him.
Wiclif. Jon, c. 3.

For God sente not hys sonne into the worlde, to con-dempe the worlde: but that the worlde thorowe him, myght be saued.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

But he sigh the wynd strong, and was aferd, and whanne
he biganne to drenche he criede and seide, lord make me saaf.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 14.

But when he sawe a myghtye wynde, he was afrayed.
And as he beganne to syncke, he cryed sayinge: master sau me.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And if thou werken wolt by good consel,
I undertake, withouten mast or seyl,
Yet shal I saven hire, and thee and me.
Hast thou not herd how saued was Noe.
Chaucer. Miller's Tale, v. 3527.

And though that nothing, save the death only,
Might thee fro me depart trewly,
Thou shalt no more departe now fro me
Than fro the death, for I woll go with thee.
Id. The Legend of Tisbe of Babilon.

Women may now go sauely up and down.
Id. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6460.

As for hir soules safete,
At lord and lady, and hir meine,
I aske, whan they hem to me shrive,
The propertie of all hir live.—Id. The Rom. of the Rose.

And God so wise be my succour,
But thou yewe me my saviour
At Easter, whan it liketh mee,
Without preasing more on thee.
Id. Ib.

And fethermore with good courage
He saith, be so he maie hir haue,
That Christ, that came this worlde to *sau*e,
He woll beleue.
Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

I my self dyd read the safeconduite that came vnto hym, which had but onely this one condition annexed vnto it, that if he came before the feast of Christmasse then next insueing, he should haue free libertie to departe at his pleasure.—Fryth. Workes, p. 156.

And therefore (quod the Archebischoppe of Yorke) Godde forbydde that anye manne shoulde for anye thyng earthlye enterpryse to breake the immunitie, and libertye of that sacred saintuary, that hath bene the safegarde of so many a good mannes life.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 46.

This name Jesus signifieth a sauoure, and therefore there is nothinge asked in the name of Jesus, but that is wholesome and helping to the saluacion of the asker.—Id. Ib. p. 18.

Flee then my son, and geue this trauail end;
Ne shall I thee forsake in sausegard till
I haue thee brought vnto thy fathers gate.
Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

Sagittarius, one of ye foresayde iiii of that company, the whiche myne auctor reportith to be a bysshop, fled to haue sausegardy hym selfe, but in his flyght he was slayne.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 123.

Say heav'nly powers, where shall we find such love,
Which of ye will be mortal to redeem
Man's mortal crime, and just th' unjust to save,
Dwells in all heaven charitie so deare?
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

Seest thou yon dreary plain, forlorn and wilde,
The seat of desolation, voyd of light,
Save what the glimmering of these livid flames
Casts pale and dreadful?
Id. Ib. b. i.

The meaning of which observation is, that we may understand, that as in the person prayed for there ought to be the great disposition of being in a sauable condition; so there ought also all the intermedial aptnesses.
Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 6.

And a man cannot ordinarily know that he is in a sau- able condition.—Id. vol. iii. Ser. 1.

This not doing the deed, to make him a saver he was fain to crave another help of the same hand under the new name of a subsidie.—Fuller. Worthies. Cornwall.

Hail Son of God, Saviour of men, thy name
Shall be the copious matter of my song
Henceforth, and never shall my harp thy praise
Forget, nor from thy father's praise disjoine.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

And who so worketh or ministreth iustice in due order, he not onlie safegardeth himself, but also holdeth people in a suertie of restfulness, of the which insueth peace and plentie.—Holinshed. Chronicles. Rich. II. an. 23.

— My more particular,
And that which most with you should *saf*e my going,
Is Fulvia's death.
Shakespeare. Antony & Cleopatra, Act i. sc. 3.

"Daunger without discretion to attempt,
Inglorious, beast-like is; therefore, sir knight,
Aread what course of you is safest dempt,
And how we with our foe may come to fight."
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 11.

Here now behoveth us well to avyse,
And of our safety good heede to take;
For here before a perious passage lyes.—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 12.

Ne thenceforth his approved skill, to ward,
Or strike, or hurle round in warlike gyre,
Remembred he, ne car'd for his saufigard,
But rugely rag'd, and like a cruell tygre far'd.
Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 5.

— And after her are gone
All the brave knightes, that doen in armes excell,
To saueguard her ywandred all alone.—Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 8.

He kept the verge of Troy, nor dar'd to wait
Achilles' fury at the Scæan gate;
He try'd it once, and scarce was sav'd by fate.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ix.

For as much as concerns the main question now in agitation (about the sauableness of Protestants) if the first part of your book be answered, there needs no reply to the second.
Chillingworth. Religion of Protestants, p. 317.

Of. How sits the conquest on great Arthur's brow?
Alb. As when the lover, with the king is mixt,
He puts the gain of Britain in a scale,
Which weighing with the loss of Emmeline
He thinks he's scarce a saver.
Dryden. Plays. K. Arthur, Act ii.

Now ask the fruit of all his favour—
"He was not hitherto a saver."
Swift. The Pheasant & the Lark.

The nature of certain subjects proper for moving the passions may require a little more latitude, and then, without offence to the critics, sure there may be room for a saving in equity from the severity of the common law of Parnassus, as well as of the King's Bench.
Lansdowne. The British Enchanters, Pref.

They are capable of being savingly born of water and the spirit, and of being adopted into sonship with what depends thereupon; because, though they bring no virtues with them, no positive righteousness, yet they bring no obstacle or impediment.—Waterland. Workes, vol. vi. p. 357.

As to the safety and savingness which it promiseth [the great imposture of the times] I do sincerely represent here, both what it is, and what it can do.
Brevint. Saul & Samuel, Pref. p. v.

From the loud camp retir'd, and noisy court,
In honourable ease and rural sport,
The remnant of his days he safely past;
Nor found they lag'd too slow, nor flew too fast.
Prior. Henry & Emma.

If a man should forbear his food or his business; till he and certainty of the safeness of what he was going about, he must starve and die disputing.—South.

As the well-laying the foundations of a house secures the superstructures against the violences of all future storms and foul weather, so the first settling of your resolutions upon a firm and stedfast basis, will be a mighty safeguard to it against all ensuing storms of temptation.
Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 4.

Proud of his well-spread walls, he views his trees,
That meet, no barren interval between,
With pleasure more than ev'n their fruits afford;
Which, save himself who trains them, none can feel.
Cowper. Task, b. iii.

Nay if thy poet rightly weens,
(Though little skill'd in ways and means)
Its save-all is but shallow.—Mason. Ode to Pinchbeck.

These poultry as they are fed with what would otherwise be lost, are a mere save-all; and as they cost the farmer scarce any thing, so he can afford to sell them for very little.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 11.

SA'VINE. Fr. Savinier; Lat. Sabina. See the quotation from Pliny.

There is an herbe, whiche men calleth
Saucyne, and that behoueth nede
To hym, that woll his purpose spede.
Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

As for the savine, an hearbe or plant it is that will take if it be in this sort couched in the ground: also, a sprig if it be slipped off clean from the stocke, will come againe and root.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 13.

SAUNDRES. Fr. Sandal. "Sanders,—a sweet smelling wood, brought out of the Indies," (Cotgrave.)

But of some dele I am beknowe,
That I maie stonde in thilke rowe
Amonge hem, that saundres vse,
I woll not me therof excuse.
Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

SAUNTER, v. } Skinner derives from the SAUNTER, n. } Fr. Sauter, to leap, to skip; SAUNTERER. } i.e. consequentially, to move desultorily, without fixed aim or object. Lye says, some learned men suppose it formed of the It.
Alla santa terra, and refer its origin to the time of the expeditions to the Holy Land; but he thinks the word too modern for such an origin: others again, from sans terre, applied to wanderers without a home. (See Grose.) Mr. Thomson invents a Barb. Lat. Segnitare, from segnis, idle, sluggish.

To loiter or linger about; to wander, stroll, or move about idly, sluggishly.

Unhappy wretch!
What hast thou gotten by this fetch,
Of all thy tricks, in this new trade,
Thy holy brotherhood o' th' blade?
By sauntering still on some adventure,
And growing to thy horse a centaur?

Hudibras, pt. iii. c. 1.

Upon the first suspicion a father has, that his son is of a sauntering temper, he must carefully observe him, whether he be listless and indifferent in all his actions, or whether in some things alone he be slow and sluggish, but in others vigorous and eager.—Locke. Of Education.

Whether on the other hand, a handsome seat amidst well-improved lands, fair villages, and a thriving neighbourhood, may not invite a man to dwell on his own estate, and quit the life of an insignificant saunterer about town, for that of an useful country-gentleman?—Berkeley. The Querist, § 413.

For in my bed, or in the colonnade
Sauntering, I call reflection to my aid.
This was well done. Here happiness attends.
This conduct makes me pleasing to my friends.
Francis. Horace. Satires, b. i. Sat. 4.

She walks all the morning sauntering about the shop with her armes through her pocket holes, or stands gaping at the door-sill, and looking at every person that passes by.
Idler, No. 15.

What numbers, here, would into fame advance,
Conscious of merit, in the coxcomb's dance;
The tavern! park! assembly! mask! and play!
Those dear destroyers of the tedious day!
That wheel of fops, that saunter of the town!
Young. Love of Fame, Sat. 1.

SA'VOUR, n. } Fr. Saveur, savourer; It.
SA'VOUR, v. } Sapòre, saporare; Sp. Savor, SA'VOURY. } savorear; Lat. Sapere. (See SA'VOURILY. } SAPID.) Savour is applied SA'VOURINESS. } either to the—SA'VOURLESS. } Taste or smell; to the SA'VOURLY. } relish, or flavour, scent, odour: SA'VOUROUS. } (met.) quick, keen sensation or perception.

Ac eet nat ich hote, or hunger ye take
And send of hus sauce, to saverie with thy lippes.
Piers Plouhman, p. 142.

— Fayn ich wolde
A saye what savour hit hadde. Id. p. 309.

— Somme aren rype Swetour and saverour. Id. p. 307.

And he turnyde and seide to Petir, Sathanas go aftir me, thou art a sclaundre to me, for thou saverist not tho thingis that ben of God, but tho thingis that ben of men.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 16.

Thē turned he about, and said vnto Peter: come after me Satan, thou offendest me, because thou sauourest not godlye thynges, but worldly thynges.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

For I seie bi the grace that is ghounn to me to alle that ben among ghou, that ghe sauere not more than it bihoueth to sauere, but for to sauere to sobrenesse, and to ech man as God hath departid the mesure of feith.
Wiclif. Romaynes, c. 12.

And the hous was fulfillid of the sauoure of the oynement.
Id. Jon, c. 12.

And ye house was filled of the sauer of the ointment.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

And every man schal be saltid with fier and every slayn sacrifice schal be maad savery with salt. Salt is good—if salt be unsavery in what thing schulen ye make it savery?
have ye salt among you, and have ye pees among you.
Wiclif. Mark, c. 9.

"Abide," quod she, "my tale is not begonne;
Nay thou shalt drinke of another tonne
Er that I go, shal savour worse than all."
Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 5751.

— I wonder this time of the yere
Whennes that swete savour cometh so
Of roses and lilies, that I smelle here.
Id. The Second Nonnes Tale, v. 15,651.

And further over ther they shul have defeaute of all maner delites, for certes delites ben after the appetites of the five wittes; as sight, hering, smelling, savouring, and touching.
Id. The Persones Tale.

If it [love] be wicke, a wonder thinketh me,
Whan every torment and adversite
That cometh of him, may to me savery think:
For aie thurst I the more that iche it drinke.
Id. Troil. & Cres. b. i.

For to ben gay and amorous,
The time is then so sauourous.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

That what man couth awaie take
The rust, of whiche thei woxen blake,
And the sauour of the hardnes,
Thei shulden take the sikenes
Of golde or siluer perfectly. Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

What if the salte haue lost his propre strength and sauerinesse, and as Christe saithe, be good for no vse, scante woorth the castinge on the dounghill.
Jewell. Defence of the Apology, p. 604.

Goe whither Fate and inclination strong Leads thee, I shall not lag behinde, nor erre
The way, thou leading, such a sent I draw
Of carnage, prey innumerable, and taste
The savour of death from all things there that live.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

Not such as earth out of her fruitfull wombe
Throwes forth to men, sweet and well savored,
But direfull deadly black, both leafe and bloom,
Fitt to adorne the dead and deck the dreary toombe.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

The vallies there, being watered with sundrie pleasant streames, doo yeeld a sweet and verie sauorie grasse, wherewith all sorts of cattell are verie much delighted.
Holinshed. Description of Scotland, c. 5.

For the base Trochyle thinketh it no pain,
To scour vile carrion for a savoury gain.
Drayton. The Owl.

The learned, think them too perspicuous; being named with Juvenal, Persius, and the other antient satires: the unlearned, savourless; because too obscure, and obscure because not under their reach.
Bp. Hall. Postscript to Satires.

Other sometimes bearing the image of Christ in her arms, weeping savourily, she would make her hair to increase to that length and largeness that it would come to her heels, and cover her all over and the image of Christ in her armes.
Morre. An Antidote against Atheism, b. iii. c. 4.

His [Rubens] gusto of design savours somewhat more of the Flemish than of the beauty of the antique, because he stay'd not long at Rome.
Dryden. Du Fresnoy's Judgment. Principal Painters.

There will be something peculiar and distinguishing in his manner, something savouring of the pious frame and disposition of his heart.—Waterland. Works, vol. viii. p. 418.

There's a dearth of wit in this dull town,
When silly plays so savourily go down.—Dryden.

Then when he hath done his best toward the dispatch of his work, his food doth taste savourily, then his divertise-ments and recreations have a lively gustfulness, then his sleep is very sound and pleasant; according to that of the preacher, the sleep of a labouring man is sweet.
Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 19.

While as they rode, he better mark'd her face,
Her beauteous features, and her pleasing grace,
That savour'd of a court. Hoole. Ariosto, b. iv.

Omai himself now began to think that they were of no manner of use to him; that a baked hog was more savory food than a boiled one.—Cooke. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 6.

SAUTE, i.e. Salt, (qv.) A bitch is said to be salt, when in heat, (Moor, Suffolk Words.)

In as much as the weddingys of our virgins (shame it is to speake it) are more lyke vnto the saute of a bitches, then the mariying of a reasonable creature.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 107.

SAUTE, i.e. Assault.

Sheding of blood, ne manfull hardnesse,
Ne oft wounding at soutes by distresse,
Nor in parting of life nor death also,
All is for nought, loue taketh no heed thereto.
Chaucer. The Complaint of the Black Knight.

SAUTER. } Sauter is the Psalter or Book SAUTRY. } of Psalms. Sautry is also psal-terium, a musical instrument, a harp or lyre.
See Du Cange.

David in the sauter, of shuche maketh mynde.
Piers Plouhman, p. 259.

For him was lever han et his beddes hed
A twenty bokes, clothed in black or red,
Of Aristotle, and his philosophie,
Than robes riche, or fidel, or sautrie
Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 276.

As harpes, pipes, lutes, and sautry.
Id. The Flower and the Leaf.

Their instruments were various in their kind,
Some for the bow, and some for breathing wind:
The sautry, pipe, and hautboy's noisy band,
And the soft lute trembling beneath the touching hand.
Dryden. The Flower and the Leaf.

SAW, n. A. S. Saga, a saying See SAY.
Any thing said; a saying; a sententious saying; a maxim.

This that I haf said it is Pers sawe,
Als he in romance laid, ther after gan I drawe.
R. Brunne, p. 205.

To Paris turned the kyng, for that ilk sawe, & ther a samenyng his barons thider gan drawe.
Id. p. 143.

And that my sawe be soth, the sauter bereth wittenesse.
Piers Plouhman, p. 177.

Ful litel wote Arcite of his felaw,
That was so neigh to herken of his saw,
For in the bush he sitteth now full still.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1457.

For Caton sayth, that "he that gilty is,
Demeth all thing be spoken of him ywis:"
That was the cause, he gan so nigh him drawe
To his Yeman, to herken all his sawe.
Id. The Chanones Yemannes Prologue, v. 16,151.

The painym herde, an vnderstoode,
And thought it was a wonder lave.
And thus vpon their sondrie sawe
Talkende both forth thei went.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Nowe tolden thei, nowe tolde he,
Thei spoken pleyne after the lawe,
But he the wordes of his sawe
Coloureth in an other wei Spekende. Id. Ib.

First and foremost therefore, I will for the most part deale by oracles, that is to say, sententious sawes, for to determine this question in hand: concerning which, there are as many to be found in number, and those as true in effect, as in any other part and possession of this our life whatsoever.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 4.

Severe to censure; earnest to advise,
And with old saws the present age chastise.
Francis. Horace. Art of Poetry.

SAW, n. } A. S. Saw-an, saga; Ger. Scag-
SAW, v. } en, scege; Dut. Saeg-en, saege; SA'WYER. } Sw. Scaga, sag; Fr. Scier, or sier, SA'WING, n. } scie; It. Seg-are, sèga; Sp.
Aserrar, sierra. Menage derives the Fr. from the Lat. Sec-are, to cut. The Spanish is plainly the Lat. Serra, (from sec-are, q. d. secerra, unless formed from the sound,—Vossius.) Skinner, Wachter, and Ihre, refer the northern words to the Lat. Sec-are, to cut. To saw is (by usage)—To cut, by moving the tool backwards and forwards with pressure of the edge upon the material to be cut.

Sawyer was formerly written sawer, as lawyer, lawer.

And because it [elme] twineth and casteth not, it is passing good for hinges and hookes, for sawne bords, for ledges in dores and gates.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvi. c. 40.

Carpenters' art was the invention of Dedalus, as also the tooles thereto belonging, to wit, the saw, the chip, axe, and hatchet, the plumbe line, the auger, and wimble, the strong glew, as also fish-glew, and stone-saudre.

Id. Ib. b. vii. c. 56.

By which meanes the slit is hindred, and the worke goeth not forward: which is the cause also that the sawyers draw up and let downe the saw twice, before the teeth send from them any dust into the pit.—Id. Ib. b. xvi. c. 43.

The oke and the box wood, which although they be greene, doe stiffely withstand the saw-gate, choking and filling up their teeth even.—Id. Ib.

Then saws were tooth'd, and sounding axes made.

(For wedges first did yielding wood invade;)

And various arts in order did succeed.

Dryden. Ovid. Georgics, b. i.

The persons I am now arguing against, love their palats too well, to admire those who can discern no difference of tastes; and would be well enough contented to be thought deaf if they could put no distinction between the pleasant sound of vocal or instrumental musick, and the harsh jarring of two saws drawn cross each other.

Stillfleet, vol. i. Ser. 10.

Make chips of elms produce the largest trees,

Or sowing saw-dust furnish nurseries.

Butler. The Elephant in the Moon.

It is that [landscape by Rubens] where two men are sawing the trunk of a tree.

Reynolds. Journey to Flanders & Holland.

SAXON.

SAXONISM.

SAXONIST.

See the quotation from Ver-stegan.

This name then of Saxons they undoubtedly have (though some hold it unlikely) of their use and wearing of a certaine kind of sword or weapon invented and made bowing crooked, much after the fashion of a sithe, in imitation thereof it should seeme to have first bin made. And when of late I conferred with the excellent learned man, M. Justu. Lipsius about the Saxons true appellation (who I also found to concur with me in opinion) he could presently put me in mind that a sithe is yet at this present in the Nether-lands called a saisen.—Verslegan. Restitution of Decay. Intell. c. i.

Elstob, the learned Saxonist.

Note in Bp. Nicolson's Ep. Corr. i. 68.

The language is not much more easy or intelligible than that of many of the Norman Saxon poems quoted in the preceeding section; it is full of Saxonisms, which indeed abound, more or less, in every writer before Gower and Chaucer.—Warton. History of English Poetry, vol. i. p. 49.

SAY, v. } That the word did exist in Goth.

SA'YING, n. } is clear from the compounds inn-sagaht, (Serm. Luc. i. 29, insaht narratio, Luc i. l.) In A. S. Sag-an, sæg-an, seçgan, dicere, narrare; Ger. Sag-en; Dut. Segghen; Sw. Sæg-a. Wachter thinks all are of Latin origin: in which language seco, sequo, and sequor, were anciently used for dicere, (see Sequor in Vossius.) Re-sequi, is respondere. Verba (Wachter adds) secari dicuntur, sicut dicuntur rumpi, (see Wachter and Ihre.) The Ger. Sæg-en, scindere (probably the same word as sag-en) is also referred by Wachter to the same Latin origin. See To SAW. To say is—

To project or produce:—to utter, or to give utterance, (sc.) vocally, or in separate words, or vocal sounds, by speech, or the organs of speech; subsequently—in writing. To speak, to tell, to pronounce, to relate, to repeat, to rehearse, (sc. in words, orally or in writing.) Saying is distinguished from singing, as in the directions to sing or say, (see the Book of Common Prayer.)

"My Goddes of heuene and of erthe, wat segge now ge?"
R. Gloucester, p. 57.

"The prynce," he seide, "other kyng nys to preyse nogt,
"That in tyme of werre as a lomb ys bothe meke & mylde,
"And in tyme of pes as a lyon bothe cruel & wyld."
Id. Ib.

Whan the kyng herd say, sho had so wele farn,
Thider he went away, to se hir & hir barn.

R. Brunne, p. 310.

Men sais in the courte of France, among the deze pers,
With right he leses his chance, thürgh faut that not apers.
Id. p. 255.

Ich segge hit by suche quath studie. that shewen by here werkus.
Piers Plouhman, p. 183.

The sauter seith it is no synne. for suche men as ben trewe
For to seggen as thei seen.
Id. p. 202.

Certes ich seyde. and so me God helpe
Ich am to walk to worche. wt sykel othr wt sythe.
Id. p. 76.

And the tempter came nigh & seide to him, yf thou art
godis sone, seye that these stones be maad looves.
Wiclif. Matt. c. 4.

Then came to hi the tēpter, & said: yf thou be ye sonne of god, commaund y^e these stones be made bread.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

And Pilat axide him art thou kyng of Jewis? and Jhesus answeride and seide to him thou seist.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 15.

And Pylate aaked him: arte thou the kynge of the Jewes?
And he answered and saide vnto him: thou sayest it.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

And Jhesus answeride & seide to hem treuly I sey to you, yf ye han feith and douten not, not only ye schulen do as of the fyge tre; but also if ye seyen to this hill, take & caste thee into the see it schal be don so.—Wiclif. Matt. c. 21.

Jesús answered & sayde vnto the; Verely I say vnto you, yf ye shall haue faith and shall not doute, ye shall not only do that which I haue done to ye fygge tree; but also yf ye shall say vnto this mountayne, take thy selfe a waye, and cast thy selfe into the sea it shal be done.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

That other answered, "I not how that may be;
He wote well that the gold is with us tweye,
What shuln we don? what shuln we to him seye?"
Chaucer. The Pardoner's Tale, v. 12,750.

But sayth and conseilth me as you liketh, for I am redy to do right as ye wol desire.—Id. The Tale of Melibeus.

But soth is said, gon sithen are many yeres,
That feld hath eyen, and the wood hath eres.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1453.

Certainly his noble sayings, can I not amend.
Id. The Testament of Loue, b. iii.

Thus grante I yow myn holl voyce,
Chese for vs both, I yow praie:
And what as euer that ye saie,
Right as ye woll, so woll I.
Gower. Con. A. b. i.

And she began the wood rage,
And asketh hym, what diuel he thought
And bare on hond, that hym ne rought
What labour that she toke on honde,
And saith, that suche an husbonde
Was to a wif not worth a stre.
Id. Ib. b. iii.

Demetrius men saiden tho
The better knight was of the two,
To whom the lande was attendant,
As he whiche heire was apparent
To regne after his fathers daie.
Id. Ib. b. ii.

But it was a common saying with him, that suche altercations were for a logician, and not merely for a philosopher.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 5.

Unjust thou saist
Flatly unjust, to bind with laws the free,
And equal over equals to let reigne,
One over all with unsucceeded power.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. v.

My heart hath beene a store-house long of things
And sayings laid up, portending strange events.
Id. Paradise Regained, b. ii.

'Tis hard to say, if greater want of skill
Appear in writing or in judging ill.
Pope. Essay on Criticism.

I. Say first, of God above, or man below,
What can we reason, but from what we know?
Of man, what see we but his station here,
From which to reason, or to which refer?
Through worlds unnumber'd though the God be known,
'Tis ours to trace him only in our own.
Id. Essay on Man, Ep. 1.

I say the pulpit (in the sober use Of its legitimate, peculiar pow'rs)
Must stand acknowledg'd, while the world shall stand,
The most important and effectual guard,
Support, and ornament, of virtue's cause.
Cowper. Task, b. ii.

SAY, v. } i. e. to assay. To try or attempt,
SAY, n. } to examine, to prove.

Which when he spyde upon the earth t' encroch,
Through the dead carcasses he made his way,
Mongst which he found a sword of better say,
With which he forth went into th' open light.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 11.

Once I'll say
To strike the ear of time in those fresh strains,
As shall, beside the cunning of their ground,
Give cause to some of wonder, some despite,
And more despair, to imitate their sound.
B. Jonson. The Poetaster, To the Reader.

This fellow, captain,
Will come, in time, to be a great distiller,
And give a say—I will not say directly,
But very fair—at the philosopher's stone.
Id. The Alchymist, Act i. sc. 1.

The tailor brings a suit home; he it says,
Looks o'er the bill, likes it.

B. Jonson. Epigrams, Epig. 12.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name;
But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,
And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes,
What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn.
Shakespeare. Lear, Act v. sc. 3.

Weston, their treasure, as their treasurer,
That mine of wisdom, and of counsells deep,
Great say-master of state, who cannot erre,
But doth his carract, and just standard keepe
In all the prov'd assayes.—B. Jonson. Underwoods.

SAY, n. Fr. Saye; It. Sàia. Menage and Skinner derive from the Lat. Sagum, a military cloak; because (says Skinner) the kind of stuff called Say was very suitable for making such cloaks. The Fr. Saye, It. Sàio, Sp. Sayo—is a sagum, or cassock.

This is making of that fine say, whereof silke cloth is made; which men also are not abashed to put on and use, because in summer time they would goe light and thin.
Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 23.

His garment neither was of silke nor say,
But paynted plumes in goodly order dight,
Like as the sunburnt Indians do aray
Their tawney bodies in their proudest plight.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 12.

And henge on hym a scheld,
Ryche and over geld,
Wyth a gryffoun of say.
Rilson, vol. ii. Lybeaus Disconus.

Whether the woollen manufacture of England is not divided into several parts or branches, appropriated to particular places, where they are only principally manufactured; fine cloths in Somersetshire, saies at Sudbury, crapes at Norwich, and so forth?—Bp. Berkeley. Querist, § 520.

SCAB. } It. Scàbbia; Dut. Schabbe; Sw.
SCA'BBED. } Skabbe; Lat. Scabies; from scabere, SCA'BBY. } Σκαπτ-ειν, fod-ere, to dig. Perhaps from the Dut. and Ger. Schab-en, A. S.
Scaf-an, to shave, radere, tondere; to rub or scrape off; to peel off. In Latin as well as English applied (met.) to—

A shabby fellow; a mean, dirty, fellow.

A scab,—a dry, hard portion of skin, peeling or separating from the continuous surface of the skin, usually covering a sore, and formed from the matter of it.

Thou scabbed Scotte, thi nek the deuelle it breke.
R. Brunne, p. 282.

Rynouse scabbes
Bules and botches.
Piers Plouhman, p. 396.

And fathermore
Of pokes, and of scab, and every sore
Shal every shepe be hole, that of this well
Drinketh a draught; take kepe of that I tell.
Chaucer. The Pardoner's Tale, v. 12,231.

For thys little scabbe of his folye hee laboureth somewhat to hide and couer, so that a manne must put of the cloute ere he can spie the botche.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1078.

There might seeme some deformitie in their owne cankered carkase, by the comparyng of these whole members to their scabed body.—Fryth. Workes, fol. 116.

The keepyng of people from heresies and putting the scabbed heretikes out of the clene flocke, is one of the special things that the apostle gaue the bishop warning of.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 939.

That free from gouts thou may'st preserve thy care,
And clear from scabs, produc'd by freezing ayre.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iii.

Th' infectious scab, arising from extremes
Of want, or surfeit, is by water cur'd
Of lime, or sodden stave-acre, or oil
Dispersive of Norwegian tar, renown'd
By virtuous Berkeley, whose benevolence Explor'd its powers, and easy medicine thence Sought for the poor.
Dyer. The Fleece, b. i.

A kind of periodic bird, [the cuckoo]
Of nasty hue, and body scabby,
No would-be-play-wright half so shabby.
Lloyd. To David Garrick, Esq. (1760. p. 34.

SCA'BBARD. Dut. Schabbe. Schobbe vetus.
Operculum, (Kilian.) In Dutch and German, Scheide, or Scheyde, a sheath, (qv.) from A. S.
Scead-an, separate, segregare, dividere; to separate, to dispart. Scabbard, (Scauberd, in R.
Gloucester) seems to form more readily from
A. S. Scaf-an. See SCAB.

The sheath or case in which a sword or other instrument is enclosed, and from which it is drawn.

Old K. You will say so then,
Alas sweet neece, all this is but the scabbard,
Now I draw forth the weapon.

Beaum. & Fletcher. Wit at several Weapons, Act i. sc. 1.

Sometimes it [lightning] hath been known to scorch up the cloaths without penetrating the body; and sometimes again, to break all the bones without discolouring the flesh or cloaths; nay, even to melt the sword without injuring the scabbard.—Warburton. Julian, b. ii. c. 3.

Some of our people said they could distinguish several of the natives parading about in the clothes of our unfortunate comrades; and among them a chief brandishing Captain Cook's hanger, and a woman holding the scabbard.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. v. c. 4.

SCABROUS. } Fr. Scabreux; It. Scabroso; SCABRE'DITY } Sp. Escabroso; Lat. Scabrosus, scaber, from scabies. See SCAB.
Rough, rugged, harsh, uneven, halting.

Lucretius is scabrous and rough in these; he seeks them: as some do Chaucerisms with us, which were better expunged and banished.—B. Jonson. Discoveries.

He will find neves, inequalities, roughness, scabredity, paleness.—Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 558.

Then, his verse is scabrous, and hobbling, and his words not every where well chosen.—Dryden. Juvenal, Ded.

SCAFFOLD. } Fr. Eschafaut, eschafauder, SCAFFOLDAGE } eschafaudage; Dut. Schavot.
SCAFFOLDING, n. } Some, (says Skinner,) derive from Ger. Schawhausz, and this from the verb, schawen, spectare, and hausz, a house: or from the same schawwen, and vat, a vessel, or any thing that can hold or contain, (sc.) spectators; q. d. a place to look or see from. Skinner himself prefers Ger. Schaffen, efficere, formare, to make, to frame, to shape; fabrica tumultuaria, a fabrick hastily raised. Lye refers to the A. S. Scylf, a shelf. The word is applied to—

A fabrick raised, a stage for a temporary purpose; from which something is to be seen, or on which some spectacle is to be exhibited: or any other structure to be formed, or work to be performed, by builders, painters, or other artists.

Sometime to shew his lightnesse and maistrie
He plaith Herode on a scaffold hie.

Chaucer. The Miller's Tale, v. 3484.

They dradde none assaut,
Of ginne, gonne, nor schaffaut.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

Worc'ster (who had escap'd unhappily
His death in battle) on a scaffold dies.

Daniel. Civil Wars, b. iv.

And like a strutting player, whose conceit
Lies in his ham-string, and doth thinke it rich
To heare the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretcht footing, and the scaffoldage.

Shakespeare. Troyl. & Cress. Act i. sc. 3.

They [faith and consideration, hearing of God's word, &c.] are all but scaffolds to that heavenly building of inward purity and goodness; and when this is once finished for eternity, then must those scaffolds all go down as things of no farther use or necessity.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 2.

Yet this solution but once more affords
New change of terms, and scaffolding of words.

Prior. Solomon, b. i. Knowledge.

As soon as the priests had ended their prayers, the carcass of the dog, with what belonged to it, were laid on a whatta, or scaffold, about six feet high, that stood close by.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 2.

He begins now to look for those excellences which address themselves to the admiration, and considers deception as a scaffolding to be now thrown aside, as of no importance to this finished fabrick.—Reynolds. Art of Painting, Note 52.

SCALADO. } From the Sp. Escalada, sca-
SCALARY. } lada; Fr. Escalade; It. Scalata, the assault of a city per scalas, (Skinner,) by ladders. See ESCALADE, and SCALE, infra.

And therefore friends, while we hold parley here,
Raise your scalado on the other side,
But enter'd wreak your sufferings.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Double Marriage, Act v. sc. 1.

Finally as touching the honour which geese deserved and woon by discovering the skallade that the Frenchmen made into the capitoll hill of Rome, I have written heretofore.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxix. c. 3.

He [Caius Gracchus] made at nearer distances certain elevated places and scalary ascents, that they might with better ease ascend or mount their horses.

Brown. Valgar Errors, b. v. c. 13.

SCALE, v. } Skinner says,—To scale, from SCALE, n. } the Sp. Escalar; Fr. Escaller, SCALES. } escheller; It. Scalare, per scalas, SCALL. } ascendere, to mount or ascend SCA'LED. } by ladders. Scales (of fish), SCALD, v. } from the Fr. Escailles; It. Scag- SCALD, n. } ghia. Scales (of balance), from SCA'LING, n. } the A. S. Sceale, lanx, trutina.
SCA'LELESS. } To scald, from the Fr. Es- SCA'LY. } chauder, from the It. Scaldare, calida urere, q. d. ex-calidare, to burn with hot (water). Scald head (he thinks), may be —caput ustulatum, or scaled head: in this latter he agrees with Tooke; who derives all these words and many others (see SHELL, SHOAL, &c.) from the A. S. Scyl-an, to divide, to separate, to make a difference, to discern, to skill: and he is elaborate and decisive in his explanation of some of the passages quoted below; and which explanations are not only applicable to, but confirmed by various other passages from our elder writers, and also quoted below. We have (he observes) scale, a ladder; and thence, scale of a besieged place; a pair of scales; a scale of degrees; scale of a fish or of our diseased skin; scale of a bone, or (he might have added) of any other substance; scall, and scaled or scald head; in all of which one common meaning presents itself, viz. divided, separated.

Scale, Lat. Scala,—a ladder, so called from the separations between step and step, or of the separate stepping-pieces of which it consists. See ESCALADE.

Scale of a besieged place, consequentially, because effected by mounting or ascending by a scale or ladder; and to scale, to mount, to ascend, to climb.

Scall or scald, because the skin, or a portion (of the skin) is separated from the flesh by the heat; and hence, scalding hot, is hot enough to take off the skin; burning hot—excessively hot. See the quotation from Sir T. More.

In Meas. for Meas.—"The corrupt deputy was scaled, by separating from him, or stripping off his covering of hypocrisy." The tale of Menenius (in Coriolanus) was "scaled a little more," by being divided more into particulars and degrees; more circumstantially or at length.—"Scaling his present bearing with the past," (also in Coriolanus,) looking separately at each, and, thence, comparing them.

"An old seck is aye skailing," (Ray's Scottish Proverbs) i. e. parting, dividing, separating, breaking, (Tooke.) The shedding or spilling of the grain is the consequence.

"Scale,—to spread, as manure, gravel, or other loose materials, (North.) Skale or skail,—to scatter and throw abroad, as mole hills are when levelled, (North.)" Grose, (see also Brocket, and Jamieson, Nares, and the Commentators on Shakespeare.) Jamieson supplies some peculiar Scottish usages, all tending to establish the etymology of Tooke.

Next the foresaid circle of the A B C vnder the crosse line is marked the scale, in manner of two squares, or els in manner of ledders, that serueth by his xxii. pointes, and his diuisions of full many a subtil conclusion of this forsaid scale.—Chaucer. Astrolabe, Conclusion.

Under thy long locks thou maist haue the scall.

Id. Words unto his own Scrivener.

Upon the poore folke they geten
Full much of that they spend or kepe,
Nis none of hem that they nill strepe,
And wrine hem selfe well at full,
Without scalding they hem pull.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

As hote he was, and likerous as a sparwe,
With scalled browes blake, and pilled berd.

Id. Prolog. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 628.

And euer amonge the holy tales,
Like as thei weren fisshes scales
They fellen from hym nowe and ofte.

Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

The Grekes toward the palace rushed fast
And couered with engines the gates beset,
And rered vp ladders against the walles,
Under the windowes scaling by their steppes.

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

Than shall al these scalde and scabbed peces scale cleane of, and the hole body of Christes holy church remaine pure.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 185.

He had promised himself not only the conquest of him, but the scaling of the walls, and delivery of Pamela.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

How often have I scaled the craggie oke,
All to dislodge the raven of her nest?

Spenser. Shepherd's Calender. December.

He [Manlius Capitolinus] was the first Roman knight or man of armes, that was honored with a murall crown of gold for skaling over the wall in an assault.

Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 28.

Others have besides them, sharpe prickes, as the vrehins. Some be skaled, as fishes: others are rough-coated, as the soles, and with their skins folke use to polish and smooth wood an yvorie.—Id. Id. b. ix. c. 12.

And here, by this, is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy scaled.—Shakespeare. Meas. for Meas. Act iii. sc. 1.

— I shall tell you

A pretty tale; it may be, you have heard it;
But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture
To scale 't a little more.—Id. Coriolanus, Act i. sc. 1.

— Your gravity once laid

My head and heels together in the dungeon,
For cracking a scald officer's crown, for which
A time is come for vengeance, and expect it;
For know, you have not full three hours to live.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Bloody Brothers, Act i. sc. 1.

— Saucy lictors

Will catch at us, like strumpets; and scald rhymers Ballad us out o' tune.

Shakespeare. Antony & Cleopatra, Act v. sc. 2.

— But you have found,

Scaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.—Id. Coriolanus, Act ii. sc. 3.

Satan from hence now on the lower stair
That scald by steps of God to heav'n gate
Looke down with wonder at the sudden view
Of all this world at once.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

"Now take the right likewise," sayd Artegale,
"And counterpoise the same with so much wrong."
So first the right he put into one scale;
And then the gyant strove with puissance strong
To fill the other scale with so much wrong.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 2.

Eva. This is well; he has made us his viouting-stog. I desire you, that we may be friends; and let us knog our prains together, to be revenge on this same scall, scurvy, coggng companion, the host of the garter.

Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor, Act iii. sc. 2.

— But to all weathers,

The chilling frost and scalding sun, expose
Their equal face.

Carew. Cælum Britannicum.

And the right side of his [Hugh de Lacie] face from the chin vpwards by a mischance was shrewdly skalled

Holinshed. Conquest of Ireland, c. 24.

— Her head—altogether bald,

Was overgrown with scurfe and filthy scald.

Spenser. Shepherd's Calender. December.

Baveuse, f. A certain scaleless fish, that covers her selfe, when she lists with her own foam.—Colgrave, in v. Baveuse.

Who when those pittifull outcries he heard
Through all the seas so ruefully resound,
His charett swifte in hast he thether steard,
Which with a teeme of scaly phocas bound
Was drawne upon the waves, that fomed him arownd.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 8.

— Before the gates there sat

On either side a formidable shape;
The one seem'd woman to the waste, and fair,
But ended foul in many a scaly fould
Voluminous and vast, a serpent arm'd
With mortal sting.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

She came not, like a good old wife, to know
The wholesome nature of all plants that grow;
Nor did so far from her own country roam,
To cure scald-heads and broken shins at home.

Cowley. Wisdom.

Trembling he sat, and shrunk in abject fears,
From his wild visage wip'd the scalding tears.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

A very ravenous wolf, with craving maw,
With hungry teeth and wide-devouring jaw,
He charg'd with fury, as the folks report,
Scald the high wall, and sack't a royal fort Replete with various wealth.

Francis. Horace. Epistle, b. ii.

The head, back, and tail is fenced with pretty hard scales, joyed together with a very thick tough skin: over its eyes there are two hard scally knobs, as big as a man's fist.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1676.

On the 12th of January, 1780, at noon, we unmoored, and scaled the guns, which, on board my ship, now amounted to ten.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. v. c. 10.

For the mind uses a nicer balance than the master of the mint; a cobweb will draw down the scale when nothing offers to counterpoize.—Search. Light of Nature, pt. i. c. 6.

In the same grove what music void of strife!
Heirs of one stream what tribes of scaly life!
Langhorne. Enlargement of the Mind, Epis. 1.

SCA'LLOP, or } See ESCALOP. Skinner SCO'LLOP. } believes, from the A. S. Scald, sceald, shells; and that it signifies a shell generally,
and also a kind of shell fish, ostreum, piscis testaceus, κατ' ἐξοκην.

To scallop is—to form or shape in likeness to the edge of the shell of the scallop; i.e. with segments of circles.

The great scallops in the sea, are counted of the same race [as sea-snails] which lie hidden also in the time of great heat as well as cold. They have certain nailes as it were, shining like fire in the night season.

Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 33.

Behold, the ensignes of a Christian knight,
Whose field is, like his minde, of siluer bright;
His bloody crosse supports five golden shels,
A precious pearly in euery scallop dwells.
J. Beaumont. Vpon Lord Buckingham's Armes.

It may be known, that Monteth was a gentleman with a scaloped coat.—King. Art of Cookery.

The wooden heel may raise the dancer's bound,
And with the scallop'd top his step be crown'd;
Let firm, well-hammer'd soles protect thy feet
Through freezing snows, and rains, and soaking sleet.
Gay. Trivia, b. i.

And luscious scallops to allure the tastes
Of rigid zealots to delicious fasts. Id. ib. b. ii.

In the middle is the fire-place, surrounded with heaps of muscle, pearl, scallop, and cray-fish shells.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 7.

SCALP, n. } Skinner derives the scalp of SCALP, v. } the head (in It. Scalpo della testa), from the Dut. Shelpe, a shell; and a scalping iron,
that which takes off the skin of the head, scalpsit.
Chirurgorum scalprum, a scalpendo.

The scalp,—is that which is shaled, or scaled, or stripped (the skin, hair, &c.) from the skull.

Whose iugemēt semeth me som what like, as though me should gesse ye beuty of one longe before departed, by her scalpe taken out of the charnel house.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 57.

Upon his crested scalp so sore did smite,
That to the skull a yawning wound it made;
The deadly dint his dulled senses all dismay'd.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

The Anthropophagi, about the North pole, use to drinke
out of the skulls of men's heads, and to weare the scalpes, haire and all, in steed of mandellions or stomachers before their breasts, according as Isogonius the Nicean witnesseth.
Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 2.

In the first place the hairy scalp presents itself to our eyes; and therein is to be considered its thickness, sense, and vessels, with the muscles that lie under it.
Wiseman. Surgery, b. v. c. 9.

The art of scalping the head was probably introduced to avoid the trouble and fatigue of carrying these sanguinary trophies to any considerable distance.
Beloe. Herodotus, b. iv. Note 70.

Her rank oppressions gave them cause to rise,
Her want of prudence means, and arms supplies,
Whilst her brave rage, not satisfied with life,
Rising in blood, adopts the scalping-knife.
Churchill. Gotham, b. i.

SCA'MBLE, v. } Skinner says, if he had SCA'MBLER. } Greek enough he would SCA'MBLING, n. } boldly derive from the Gr.
Σκαμμος, oblique, incurvate, writhing. Dr. Percy thinks scamble to be so written for scramble, (qv.) Gifford, in his note upon Ford, says, "Scambling appears to be used for obtaining by impudent im-portunity, by false pretences, &c., in a word, much in the sense of skelder as we have in Johnson, Dekker, and others. See Todd, who gives it among the words considered by Tooke as false English.

Whereas I bathe not now in blisse pardie,
But boyle in Bale and skamble thus in skathe,
Bycause I thinke on thine vnconstancie.
Gascoigne. Dan Bartholomew of Bathe.

It may be in like sort that your honour will take offense at my rash and retchlesse behauiour vsed in the composition of this volume, and much more that being scambled vp after this manner, I dare presume to make tendour of the protection therof vnto your lordships hands.

Holinshed. Chronicle, Epist. Ded.

"Yea, but it is a harder, and not so easie for an old man, since the cushion was taken away from it;" meaning, since
Dr. Scambler had scambled away the revenues thereof.

Fuller. Worthies. London.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you,—that self bill is urg'd,
Which in the eleventh year o' the last king's reign
Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
But that the scambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.

Shakespeare. Henry V. Act i. sc. 1.

A world of desperate undertakings, possibly,
Procures some hungry meals, some tavern surfeits,
Some frippery to hide nakedness; perhaps
The scambling half a ducat now and then
To roar and noise it with the tattling hostess,
For a week's lodging.—Ford. Chaste & Noble, Act i. sc. 3.

But now the pillars that bare Up this blessed town in that regular debate, and Scambling, are dead, the more's the pity.

Beaum. & Fletch. Love's Pilgrimage, Act iv. sc. 2.

What man! I know them, yea,
And what they weigh, even to the utmost scruple:
Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mong'ring boys,
That lie, and cog, and flout, deprave and slander.

Shakespeare. Much Adoe about Nothing, Act v. sc. 1.

The Scots' proverb [is] "It is well kenn'd your father's son was never a scambler." A scambler, in its literal sense, is one who goes about among his friends to get a dinner, by the Irish called a cosherer.

Steevens. Note on Shakespeare's Much Adoe, ut sup.

SCAMPER, v. The It. Scampare, Fr. Es- camper, Sp. Escampar, to escape, are derived by Menage from campus, thus,—exscampus, exscampo, scampo; to run from the field, ex campo exire. See
TO ESCAPE, and SCAPE.

To run with the speed and disorder of those who are pursued by an enemy.

His wandering slaves he did command,
And made them scamper right, and in rude ranges run.
Pomfret. Dies Novissima.

We were forc'd to cut our cables in all haste, and scamper away as well as we could.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1685.

What causes move us, knowing as we must,
That these menageries all fail their trust,
To send our sons to scout and scamper there,
While colts and puppies cost us so much care?
Cowper. Tirocinium.

SCAN, v. } Fr. Scandre un vers; It. Scandere SCA'NSION. } un verso; Lat. Scandere versus:— sic enim (says Skinner) ab uno digito ad alterum quasi per gradus ascendimus,—

To measure, and number the feet of a verse;
to examine it; and thus, generally,—to examine,
to balance, to ponder, to weigh.

All were to little for the merchautes hande,
And yet my brauerye bigger than his booke:
But when this hotte accompte was coldly scande,
I thought highe time about me for to looke.

Gascoigne. Memories.

Whose silver gates (by which there sate an hory
Old aged sire, with hower-glasse in hand, Hight Tyme) she entred, were he lief or sory;
Ne staide till she the highest stage had scand,
Where Cynthia did sit, that never still did stand.
Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 6.

Moreover, it was commonly scanned abroad of every body, that it seemed the goddess was not content, nor glad of Alcibiades return: and that she did hide herself, because she would not see him, nor have him come near her.

North. Plutarch, p. 181.

Bold is the wretch, and blasphemous the man,
Who, finite, will attempt to scan
The works of him that's infinitely wise.

Pomfret. On the Divine Attributes.

Poly. My reverend city-Friends, you are well met!
On what great work were your grave wisdoms set?
Which of my actions were you scanning here?
Dryden. Marriage à-la-Mode, Act iv. sc. 4.

A pen I handled for a fan,
And learnt not how to dance but scan.

Wharton. Sappho Advice.

Wonderful is the advantage of scansion, aided by the occasional admission of pes proceleusmaticus, in detecting the errors of copyists and printers.

Gifford. B. Jonson. Works, vol. iii. p. 178. Note.

SCANDAL, n. } Fr. Scandale; It. Scàn- SCA'NDAL, v. } dalo; Sp. Escandalo; Low SCA'NDALIZE, v. } Lat. Scandalum. The Gr.
SCA'NDALOUS. } Σκανδαλον, σκανδαλιζω,— SCA'NDALOUSLY. } are only to be found SCA'NDALOUSNESS. } apud ecclesiæ scriptores.

Vossius de Vitiis:—he derives σκανδαλον with Scapula, from σκαξ-ειν, to halt, to trip, to stumble;
and explains it to be any thing laid in the way,
that may cause the passenger, who strikes his foot against it, to stumble or fall. And hence, in the New Test. σκανδαλιζ-ειν is (met.) to cause one to fall into, to ensnare into, sin and ruin. (See Parkhurst, and the quotation from Sharp.)
Scandal is,—

A cause or occasion of sin; also, a charge or imputation of sin or evil, of guilt or criminality;
(falsely, is usually implied or understood.)

Scandal, is also applied—to things scandalous, opprobrious, or infamous.

The loss in war, sustained through his blame,
A lasting scandal to the English name.
Drayton. The Barons' Wars, b. v.

Who will live
So innocently pious, as to give
The world no scandal?
Habington. On the Death of the Earl of S.

By their petulant life
The goods deuouring, scandalizing the wife
Of no meane person; who (they still would say)
Could neuer more see his returning day.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxiv.

Must I be scandal'd by ye,
That hedg'd in all the helps I had to save ye?
Beaum. & Fletch. Humorous Lieutenant, Act ii. sc. 2.

Cas. Hear me, the villain
Scandals her, honour'd lords.
Id. The Lawes of Candy, Act ii. sc. 1.

For now thou art enforc'd t' apologize
With foreign states, for two enormous things,
Wherein thou dost appear to scandalize
The public right, and common cause of kings.
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. iv.

This, by the calumniators of Epicurus's philosophy, was objected as one of the most scandalous of all their sayings; which, according to my charitable understanding, may admit a very virtuous sense.—Cowley. Of Liberty.

Cupid must go no more so scandalously naked, but is enjoynd to make him breeches, though of his mother's petticoats.—Carew. Cælum Britannicum.

Nor would it much mend the matter, if instead of offences, we would say scandals, and instead of offending we should say scandalizing, and instead of being offended, we should say being scandalized; for tho' these be English words now, and of the very same sound with the Greek, and are indeed taken from them, yet as we commonly apply them, they have a quite different sense in our language from what those terms have in scripture.—Sharp, vol. vi. Ser. 3.

A troop of silly pilgrims, as 'tis said,
Foolishly zealous, scandalously play'd,
Instead of heroes, and of love's complaints,
The angels, God, the virgin, and the saints.
Dryden. The Art of Poetry.

When Scandal has new minted an old lie,
Or tax'd invention for a fresh supply,
'Tis call'd a satire, and the world appears Gath'ring around it with erected ears.—Cowper. Charity.

Words tending to scandalize a magistrate; or person in a public trust, are reputed more highly injurious than when spoken of a private man.—Blackstone. Com. b. iii. c. 8.

Then Nature injur'd, scandaliz'd, defil'd, Unveil'd her blushing cheek, look'd on, and smil'd.
Cowper. Expostulation.

But if that proves otherwise; and either the scandalousness of their lives, or imminent danger of being at length perverted by them, requires a more speedy and abrupt step to be taken, we shall do well, on some flagrant occasion, to renounce all commerce with them at once.

Secker, vol. i. Ser. 28.

SCANT, adj. } Junius has some suspicion SCANT, n. } that Scant, may be from the SCANT, v. } A. S. verb Scæn-an, frangere, SCA'NTY. } comminuere; to break, to re-
SCA'NTILY. } duce to small pieces. Skinner SCA'NTINESS. } says,—Scant, to which any SCA'NTLY. } thing is wanting; any thing SCA'NTNESS. } cut or shorn close; from which SCA'NTLE, v. } the cantles or corners are cut SCA'NTLET. } or shorn away. See CANTLE, SCA'NTLING, n. } CANTON.

Curt, short; deficient, scarce, sparing, parsimonious, penurious.

Scantlet,—a short or small piece or portion; a portion or proportion.

To scantle,—to shear or divide; to reduce to small pieces or portions; to diminish, to lessen, to be deficient, to fail or fall.

And Seint Gregory sayth, that precious clothing is culpable for the derthe of it, and for his softnesse, and for his strangenesse and disguising, and for the superfluitee, or for the inordinate scantnesse of it.—Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

Though it were of no rounde stone,
Wrought with squier and scantilone.—Id. Rom. of the R.

It appeareth, M. Harding is mutche scanted of good authorities, when he is thus driuen by tales, and fables, to countreuaile the tradition of ye apostles.

Bp. Jewell. Replie to Hardinge, p. 552.

The tyme doth flete, and I see how the howers do bend,
So fast, that I haue scant the space to marke my comming end.
Wyatt. The Absence of his Loue.

Aluredde ladde an vncertayne lyfe, and vneasy, with fewe folks aboute hym in the wode countree of Somersetshyre, and had ryght scante to lyue with, but suche as he & his people myght purchase by huntynge and fysshynge.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 172.

Than to brynge this storye to effecte, whereof, if I shuld declare ye specialtyes thereof, wolde aske a longe tyme; for ye shall vnderstonde that theyse jj storyes of the great Charlys, and of this Lewys, occupy in Frēshe, of leuys of great scāteleon, ouer LXIII.—Id. Ib. c. 62.

And after Whitsontyde the kyng beyng scantly hole of ye wouid, assemblyd his houst and made toward ye kynges of Westsaxon.—Id. Ib. c. 130.

When I [Sir T More] sent word by my servant into the Prior of the Charterhouse, that she [the Nun of Kent] was undoubtedly proved a false deceiving hypocrite; the good man had had so good opinion of her so long, that he could at the first scantly believe me therein.

Burnet. Records, vol. ii. pt. ii. b. ii. No. 21.

Doubting lest they some needful things might want,
As in the army victuals might grow scant.
Drayton. David & Goliath.

Remain still firm; be provident,
And think before the summer's spent
Of following winter; like the ant
In plenty hoard for time of scant.
Carew. Persuasions to Love.

Per. Was she a maid do you think?
Marg. I dare not swear for her,
For she had but a scant fame.

Beaum. & Fletch. Rule a Wife, &c. Act iii. sc. 1.

What can the cause be, when the king hath given
His poet sack, the house-hold will not pay?
Are they so scanted in their store? or driven
For want of knowing the poet, to say him nay?
B. Jonson. An Epigram, 1630.

Such is the scantitie of them here in England, in comparison of the plentie that is to be seene in other countries.

Holinshed. Description of England, b. iii. c. 4.

But if I may crave your patience till time you see me shoot my bolt, I hope you will not denie, but that as neere the pricke as you are, and as verie an hagler as I am, yet the scantling shall be mine.—Id. Description of Ireland, c. 1.

Yet still the more the Hebrews are oppress'd
Like to firm seed they fructify the more,
That by th' eternal providence fore-blest,
Goshen gives roomth, but scantly to their store.
Drayton. Moses his Birth and Miracles, b. i.

But I dare assure any man, that if he do but search into the bottom of this enormous disease of the soul, as Trismegist truly calls it, he will find nothing to be the cause thereof but either vanity of mind, or brutish sensuality and an untamed desire of satisfying a man's own will in every thing, an obnoxious conscience, and a base fear of divine vengeance, ignorance of the scantness and insufficiency of second causes, a jumbled feculency and incompleteness of the spirits by reason of perpetual intemperance and luxury.

H. More. Antidote against Atheism, b. iii. c. 6.

She could sell winds to any one that would
Buy them for money, forcing them to hold
What time she listed, tie them in a thread,
Which ever as the seafarer undid,
They rose or scantled, as his sails would drive,
To the same port whereas he would arrive.
Drayton. The Moon-Calf.

The soaring kite there scantled his large wings,
And to the ark the hovering castril brings.
Id. Noah's Flood.

While the world was but thin, the ages of mankind were longer; and as the world grew fuller, so their lives were successively reduced to a shorter scantlet, till they came to that time of life which they now have.

Hale. Origin of Mankind.

Why am I scanted by a niggard birth?
My soul disclaims the kindred of her earth.
Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel.

As provisions are the staple commodity of that place and of its neighbourhood, the knowledge of this circumstance may be of great use to such cruisers, as find their provisions grow scant.—Anson. Voyage, b. ii. c. 8.

It is wisdom that applies remedy to these mischiefs. Things must be compared to, and arbitrated by, her standard, or else they will contain something of monstrous enormity; either strutting in unwieldy bulk, or sinking in defective scantness.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 9.

But still she found, or rather thought she found,
Her own worth wanting, others to abound;
Ascrib'd above their due to every one,
Unjust and scanty to herself alone.—Dryden. Eleonora.

For such is the scantiness of sensual goods, that we not being able to content our selves with any one of them, are fain to walk the rounds in a constant succession and circle of varieties.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. iii. c. 3.

For in this narrow scantling of capacity, which we are accustomed to, and sensible of here, wherein we enjoy but one pleasure at once, which, when all uneasiness is away, is, whilst it lasts sufficient to make us think ourselves happy; it is not all remote, and even apparent good, that affects us.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 21.

The wind was scant, so that we had to ply up.
Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 8.

The lowest class of labourers, therefore, notwithstanding their scanty subsistence, must some way or another make shift to continue their race so far as to keep up their usual numbers.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 8.

One of the arts of supplying the defect of a scantiness of dress by means of the back-ground, may be observed in a whole length portrait by Vandyck, which is in the cabinet of the Duke of Montague.

Reynolds. On the Art of Painting, Note 212.

To suppose the contemplation forced upon him [God] involuntarily would be still building with our slender scantlings, and judging rashly of his intelligence by our own.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 24.

His kirtle made of forest green,
Reached scantly to his knee;
And, at his belt, of arrows keen
A furbished sheaf bore he.
Scott. Lay of the Last Minstrel, c. 3.

SCAPE, v. } i. e. 'Scape or escape, (qv.)
SCAPE, n. } To go away, get away, (sc.) out of the reach of danger, out of difficulty, out of sight, out of notice; to avoid or evade.

And slow hem to gronde al for nogt, so that at the laste, Heo, that mygte of scape, bi gone to fle faste.
R. Gloucester, p. 20.

Git he skaped out, the monke of prisoun.
R. Brunne, p. 171.

For whanne thei schulen seie pees is and sikyrnesse, thanne sodeyn deeth schal come on hem as sorowe to a womman that is with childe, and thei schulen not scape.
Wiclif. 1 Tessal. c. 5.

When they shall saye peace and no daunger, then commeth on them soden destruccion, as ye trauaylynge of a woman wyth chylde, and they shall not scape.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

He knew full well there shall nat scapen one That Troian is.
Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. v.

For as a bittur in the eagles clawe,
That may not hope by flight to scape alive,
Still waytes for death with dread and trembling aw.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 8.

I Cred. I Sir, it may be so; but we must be paid, and we will be paid before you scape; we have wife and children, and a charge.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Honest Man's Fortune, Act ii. sc. 1.

Declaring unto them, that though we do presume the gods are easie to be pacified, and that they readily pardon all faults and scapes committed by negligence, yet if it were no more but for respect of commonwealths sake, they should not slightly or carelessly dissemble or pass over faults committed in those matters.—North. Plutarch, p. 206.

—Then lay'st thy scapes on names ador'd, Apollo, Neptune, Jupiter or Pan,
Satyr, or fawn, or silvan?
Milton. Paradise Regained, b. ii.

For shortlie vpō his deliuerance, he gathered a power of wicked scapethrifts, and with the same comming into Inuernes, burnt the towne.

Holinshed. Historie of Scotland, an. 1427.

Wretch! thou hast 'scap'd again, once more thy flight
Has sav'd thee, and the partial god of light.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xx.

SCA/PULAR. } Lat. Scapula, the shoulder-SCA/PULARY. } blades; from σκαπτεσθαι, to be hollow: externally they project, internally they are hollow, (Vossius.) Of or pertaining to—

The shoulder blades.

A scapulary, (Fr. Scapulaire; It. Scapulàre; Sp. Escapulario;) so called because thrown over the shoulders. See the quotation from Brevint.

What betokeneth your great hood, your scaplerie, your knotted girdle, and your wide cope?
Jack Upland. Imputed to Chaucer.

Not one side too heavy for the other, but all in nice equipoise: the shoulders, arms, and sides æquillibrated on one part; on the other part the viscera of the belly counterpoised with the weight of the scapular part, and that useful cushion of flesh behind.—Derham. Physico-Theology, b. v. c. 2.

The head of the shoulder-bone being round, is inserted into so shallow a cavity in the scapular, that were there no other guards for it, it would fall out, or be thrust out, almost upon every occasion.—Wiseman. Surgery, b. vii. c. 5.

The badge it gives which is call'd the holy scapulary, is made of two small pieces of woollen stuff, about the extent of a hand, hanging by two little laces down from the neck upon both the back and the breast of the devout person who wears it.—Brevint. Saul & Samuel, c. 13.

SCAR, n. } Fr. Eschar; Ger. Schar, vul-
SCAR, v. } nus, vel incisio, (says Wachter,)
SCA/RLESS. } from the Ger. Scheer-en, secare, SCA/RRY. } to sheer, to cut, (see SHEER;) and Serenius derives from the Sw. Skara, to cut:—and in Sw. Skeier (Ihre says) is a rock divided from the land; and Tooke considers it (scar) to be the past part. of the A. S. Scyr-an, to shear, to cut, to divide, to separate. Camden says,—scarr is a craggy, stony hill; and Ray,—a scarre, the cliff of a rock, and a naked rock on the dry land, from the Sax. Carre, cautes. Pot-scars (he adds), pot-shreds, or broken pieces of pots. A scar is any—

Cliff, cleft, or division or separation—in the skin, in a bank, hill, or any thing else; the mark left by a cut, or wound.

Scar, in Scarborough, is the same word, (Ray.)

And eke full ofte a littel skare
Upon a banke, er men be ware,
Let in the streame, whiche with gret peine,
If any man it shall restraine.
Where lawe failleth, errour groweth.
Gower. Con. A. Prol.

And leaues a skarre although the wound be heald,
Which giues disgrace and cannot be conceald.
Gascoigne. Fruits of Warre.

Ne may I (friend) forget (vnlesse I would but faine)
The salue that doth recure my sore and heales the scarre againe.
Turberville. Answer to his Ladie.

They [radish roots] will bring to the native and lively colour, the parts that are cicatrized or newly skarked.
Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 4.

"I know a cave, wherein the bright day's eye,
Look'd never but ascanse, through a small creeke,
Or little cranny of the fretted scarre:
There have I sometimes liv'd."
The Tragedy of Hoffman, (1631.)

His fury when his waves on Furnesse seem to war, Whose crooked back is arm'd with many a rugged scarr.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, a. 28.

So after all the spoil, disgrace and wreck,
That time, the world, and death, could bring combin'd,
Amidst that mass of ruins they did make,
Safe and all scarless yet remains my mind.
Drummond. Flowers of Sion.

When it is come to Masham, it receiueh the Burne by south west (as it did the Wile, from verie deepe scarrie rockes, before at Askaran) and diuerse other wild rilles not worthie to be remembered.

Holinshed. Description of Britaine, c. 14.

But if the soil be barren, only scar
The surface, and but lightly print the share,
When cold Arcturus rises with the sun.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

We found in it both the hands of Captain Cook entire, which were well known from a remarkable scar on one of them, that divided the thumb from the fore-finger, the whole length of the metacarpal bone.
Cook. Third Voyage, b. v. c. 4.

SCA/RAB. } Lat. Scarabæus; It. Scarabæo; SCA/RABIE. } Gr. Καπαβος.

Mart. Note but yonder scarabs,
That liv'd upon the dung of her base pleasures,
How from the fear that she may yet prove honest
Hang down their wicked heads.

Beaum. & Fletch. Thierry & Theodoret, Act ii. sc. 1.

Up to my pitch no common judgment flies,
I scorn all earthly dung-bred scarabies.
Drayton. Ideas s. 31.

Such as you render the throne of majesty, the court, suspected and contemptible; you are scarabæes that batten in her dung, and have no palats to taste her curious viands. Beaum. & Fletcher. The Elder Brother, Act iv. sc. 1.

How the scarab lays its eggs in the leaf, whether by terrebrating the leaf, or whether the maggot when hatched, loth it, I could never see.

Derham. Physico-Theology, b. ii. c. 14.

To signify, the sun, they sometimes painted a hawk, and this was tropical; sometimes a scarabæus with a round ball in its claws, and this, as we see in Clemens, was of the enigmatic kind.—Warburton. Divine Legation, b. iv. s. 4.

SCARAMOUC. It. Scaramuccia; Fr. Escarmocheur;—a skirmisher.

A buffoon, so called, from the skirmishing anticks he performs.

They [Saturnian and Fescennine verses] were made extempore, and were, as the French call them, impromptus; for which the Tarsians of old were much renowned; and we see the daily examples of them in the Italian farces of Harlequin and Scaramoucha.—Dryden. Dedication to Juvenal.

Th' Italian merry-andrews took their place,
And quite debauch'd the stage with lewd grimace;
Instead of wit, and humours, your delight
Was there to see two hobby-horses fight,
Stout scaramoucha with rush lance rode in,
And ran a tilt at centaure Arlequin.

Dryden. Epilogue spoken by Mr. Hart.

Scaramouch is to have the honour of the day, and now marches to the engagement on the shoulders of the philosopher.—Warburton. On Prodigies, p. 31.

SCARCE, adj. } Fr. Escars; It. Scårso; SCARCE, ad. } Sp. Escasso; Dut. Schaers.
SCARCELY. } Menage forms the It. Scårso
SCARCENESS. } from exparcus; Wachter,— SCARCITY. } from the Ger. Karg; Dut.
SCARCEHEAD. } Karig. Tooke thinks it may have a northern origin, but proposes nothing.
In Dut. Schaers, is a share, from sheer-en, A. S. Scyr-an, to shear. May not schaers, parcus, be from the same source, sheared or short, (see SHORT;) and thus mean short; consequentially,— Deficient, wanting, sparing; parsimonious, penurious; and also rare, unfrequent.

Hys moder he dude in warde, & scars lyf lede he fonde.
R. Gloucester, p. 334.

For I seie this thing, he that soweth scarsli schal also reape scarsli, and he that sowith in blessingis schal also reape of blessingis.—Wiclif. 2 Cor. c. 9.

Looke that no man for scarce thee hold
For that may greeue thee manifold.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

The thridde maner is venial sinne; trewely, scarsely may any of this be without venial sinne, for the corruption and for the delit therof.—Id. The Persones Tale.

Of which ther was a dosein in that hous,
Worthy to ben stewardes of rent and lond
Of any lord that is in Englelond,
To maken him live by his propre good,
In honour detteles, but if he were wood,
Or live as scarsly, as him list desire.
Id. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 579.

But in his court let him first deuse
To exile scarcehead and couetise.
Lidgate. The Story of Thebes, pt. iii.

This is to sayn, the more that cloth is wasted, the more must it cost to the poure peple for the scarceness.
Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

I say not that honestee in clothing of man or woman is uncovenable, but certes the superfluitee or disordinat scarceitee of clothing is reprevable.—Id. Ib.

For thy my sonne, as thou arte holde
Touchende of this telle me the shrifte,
Hast thou be scarce or large of gifte Unto thy loue, whom thou seruest.—Gower. Con. A. D. V.

What man that scarce vs of his good,
And wol not gyue, he shall nought take.—Id. Ib. p. 159.

Panthus, quod I, in what estate stand we?
Or for refuge what fortresse shall we take?
Scarce spake I thus, when wailing thus he sayd.
Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

And where the riche wanteth, what can the pore finde, who in a common scarsitie, lyueth most scarsely, and feeleth quickliest the sharpeneße of staruing, when euerye man for lack is hungerbitten.

Checke. The Hurt of Sedition, p. 49.

The grounde was vntylled and vnsowen, wherof ensued great scarsytie and hunger, and after hunger ensued deth.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 75.

With loftie eyes, halfe loth to looke so lowe,
She thancked them in her disdainfull wise;
Ne other grace vouchsafed them to shoue
Of princesse worthy; scarce them bad arise.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 4.

—Some great intent
Conceals him; when twelve years he scarce had seen,
I lost him, but so found, as well I saw
He could not loose himself; but went about His Father's business.—Milton. Paradise Regained, b. ii.
And what the people but a herd confus'd,
A miscellaneous rabble, who extol
Things vulgar, and well weigh'd, scarce worth the praise,
They praise and they admire they know not what;
And know not whom, but as one leads the other.
Id. Ib. b. iii.

And eke so faint in every ioynt and wayne,
Through that fraile fountain, which him feeble made,
That scarcely could he weeld his bootlesse single blade.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 7.

High o'er his head the circling lash he wieldis;
His bounding horses scarcely touch the fields.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xxiii.

For the rarity of transparent gems, their lustre, and the great value, which their scarceness, and men's folly sets upon them, imboldens some to say, and inclines others to believe, that such rare and noble productions of nature must be endowed with proportionable, and consequently, with extraordinary qualities.—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 544.

All hands are at work, first to build the house they are to dwell in, and to divide it into its several apartments, and then to store them all with provision against the ensuing time of scarcity.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 4.

Another defect of this great painter [Rubens] is his inattention to the foldings of his drapery, especially that of his women; it is scarcely ever cast with any choice or skill.
Reynolds. A Tour to Flanders & Holland.

Value is more frequently raised by scarcity than by use.
Idler, No. 103.

SCARE, v. Skinner gives a preference to the It. Scoràre, to discourage:—animos seu cor adimere.

To scare seems to be, to cause to separate, or disperse, (A. S. Scyran, see SCAR.) We have the expression—To sheer off,—applied when it appears dangerous or disagreeable to stay any longer. And see To FEAR.

To disperse, or put to flight; and hence, applied to the feeling which causes or attends the flight:—
To terrify, to affright or frighten.

The very same Metellus became blind in his old age: for he lost both his eyes in a skare-fire, at what time as he would have saved and got away the Palladium, i. the image of Minerva, out of the temple of Vesta.
Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 43.

—Let me twine
Mine armes about that body, where against My grained ash an hundred times hath broke,
And scarr'd the moone with splinters.
Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act iv. sc. 5.

Th' insnared fish, here on the toppe doth scud,
There underneath the banckes, then in the mud;
And with his franticke fits so scarses the shole,
That each one takes his hyde or starting hole.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. i. s. 5.

Thereat the scarcrow waxed wondrous prowd,
Through fortune of his first adventure fayre,
And with big thundering voice revyled him lowd.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 3.

Bob. Oh craven-chicken of a cock o' th' game; well, what remedy? did thy father see this, O' my conscience, we would cut off thy masculine gender, crop thine ears, beat out thine eyes, and set thee in one of the pear-trees for a scarcrow.—Beaum. & Fletcher. Love's Cure, Act ii. sc. 2.

It much conduces, all the cares to know
Of gardening, how to scare nocturnal thieves,
And how the little race of birds that hop
From spray to spray, scooping the costliest fruit
Insatiate, undisturb'd.
Philips. Cider, b. i.

Captain Swan seeing the blaze by us, cut his cables as we did, his bark did the like; so we kept under sail all the night, being more scar'd than hurt.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1685.

And as a child, when scaring sounds molest,
Clings close and closer to the mother's breast,
So the loud torrent, and the whirlwind's roar,
But bind him to his native mountains more.
Goldsmith. The Traveller.

SCARF, n. } Also written Scarp. Fr. Es- SCARF, v. } charp; Ger. Scherpe. Skinner derives from the Ger. Scherf, segmen, or rather from the A. S. Scarp, clothing, apparel. in

A. S. Scearf, is a fragment, probably from the verb Scyr-an, to shear, to separate; and a scarf, fascia, qua læsum brachium suspenditur, semper ex latiori serico vel linteo descenditur, (Skinner.)

Scarf is applied to—

A loose piece, (sc.) of silk, gauze, &c. used as an article of dress, or for the purpose mentioned by Skinner, viz. to support a disabled limb.

Scarf or Scarp, (Fr. Escarpe.) Cotgrave calls "a little wall without the main rampier of a fort," i.e. separated from it.

To scarf (see the quotation from Anson),—to piece or put parts or pieces together.

Ham. Vp from my cabin
My sea-gowne scarft about me in the darke, Grop'd I to finde out them.
Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act v. sc. 2.

The sturdy plough-man doth the soldier see
All scarfed with py'd colours to the knee,
Whom Indian pillage hath made fortunate,
And now he gins to loathe his former state.
Bp. Hall, b. iv. Sat. 6.

For this was Dony, Florimells owne dwarfe,
Whom having lost (as ye have heard whyleare)
And finding in the way the scattred scarfe,
The fortune of her life long time did feare.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 2.

Iris there with humid bow
Waters the odorous banks, that blow
Flowers of more mingled hue
Than her purpled scarf can shew.—Milton. Comus.

With eager haste away she moves,
Never regarding scarf or gloves:
Into the grotto soon she creeps,
And into every thicket peeps.—King. Art of Love.

The leak was found to be below the fifteen foot mark, and was principally occasioned by one of the bolts being wore away and loose in the joining of the stern, where it was scarfed.—Anson. Voyage, b. ii. c. 7.

SCARIFY, v. } Fr. Scarifier; It. Scarifi- SCARIFICATION. } càre; Lat. Scarificare. But Vossius thinks Scarifo the true Latin word, Gr. Σκαρίφ-ασθαι, scalpere, radere, superficiem leviter scindere. The A. S. Scyr-an, to cut (see SCAR), still presents itself as the root. Cotgrave says,— Slightly to open or make incision into.

And for the foresaid corns of the feet especially, if they be scarified and scraped before, it is of great efficacy.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 23.

Now concerning the juice or soveraigne liquour before-said, the manner was to draw it after two sorts; to wit, by scarification, either out of the root; or forth of the stem and maister stalke.—Id. Ib. b. xix. c. 3.

We are content to fast, when we perceive it's necessary to obviate an approaching fever; to be cupp'd and scarified with all the artifice of pain to prevent or remove a dangerous disease.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 4.

They will think you defunct in earnest, and finding your vital motions continue, but no signs of sensation, they will send doctors and surgeons to wrap you in blisters and scarify you all over.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. ii. c. 23.

SCARLET, adj. } Fr. Escarlate; Sp. Escar- SCARLET, n. } lata; It. Scarlàtto; Ger.
Scharlack; Low Lat. Scarletum. Of unknown origin. See Scharlack in Wachter, Escarlate in Menage, Scarlatum in Du Cange.

Hire hosen weren of fine scarlet rede,
Ful streite yteyed, and shoon ful moist and newe.
Chaucer. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 458.

Hee had a faire companion of his way,
A goodly lady clad in scarlet red,
Purpled with gold and pearle of rich assay.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 2.

All sodainely she saw transfigured
Her linnen stole to robe of scarlet red,
And moone-like mitre to a crowne of gold.
Id. Ib. b. v. c. 7.

To say nothing of the graine brought out of Galatia, Affricke, and Portugall, whereof is made the royall skarlet, reserved for princes only and great captaines to weare in their rich mantles of estate and coats of armes.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 2.

When they [the cochineel] fly up they are red, when they fall down they are black; and when first they are quite dry they are white as the sheet wherein they lie, though the colour change a little after. These yield the much esteemed scarlet.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1685.

The meanness which would pass unnoticed, or might even be palliated in his natural station becomes, when he is invested with the gold chain and the scarlet robe, a solemn mockery of magistracy.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 56.

There was one piece of scarlet broad-cloth, four or five yards in length, conspicuous among the other ornaments; which, no doubt, had been a present from the Spaniards.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 1.

SCA'RMOGE. See SKIRMISH.

SCATHE, v. } Goth. Skath-jan, ga-shath; SCATHE, n. } jan; A. S. Scath-an, scath-ian;
SCA'THEFUL. } Ger. Schaden; Dut. Schaeden; SCA'THELESS. } Sw. Skada. The A. S. Scad- SCA'THELY. } ian, scad-an, dividere, separare, to divide, to sever (see SHADE), appears to give the origin. Sceath-ian is, to take away, to steal. And hence—"to harm, hurt, or do scath, or mischief." To scathe may thus be—

To separate, to sever, (sc.) parts constituting one whole; what appertains or belongs to another; and, thus, to harm or injure; also, to sever, to split, to rend asunder, to destroy.

Grete scathe afterward in a litlle thrawe
Come tille kyng R. for that envios sawe.

R. Brunne, p. 180.

W'oute gult God wot. gat ich thys scaythe.

Piers Plouhman, p. 68.

But he was slaine alas, the more harme is,
Unhappily at Thebes all to rathe,
Polimite, and many a man to scathe.

Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. v.

A good wif was ther of beside Bathe,
But she was som del defe, and that was scathe.

Id. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 447.

Creseide, which that never did hem scathe,
Shall now no longer in her blisse bathe,
But Antenor, he shall come home to toun,
And she shall out.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iv.

O scathful harm, condition of poverté,
With thirst, with cold, with hunger so confounded.

Id. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 4519.

But at the laste than thought I
That scatheless, full sickerly,
I might vnto the welle go,
Whereof shull I abashen so.—Ia. Rom. of the Rose.

Thou sleer, devourer, and confusion
Of gentlewomen, gentle creatures,
Thou madest thy reclaiming and thy lures
To ladies of thy scathliche appaunce,
And of thy words farsed with pleasaunce.

Id. The Legend of Hipsiphile.

Whereas I bathe not now in blisse pardie,
But boyle in Bale and skamble thus in skathe,
Bycause I thinke on thine vnconstancie.

Gascoigne. Dan Bartholomew of Bathe.

But he was after demed an enemy to the empyre for harme and scathes by hym done in Fraunce.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 75.

So be it, Troy: and sated by me from scathe,
Kepe faith with me, and stand to thy behest,
If I speake truth, and opening thinges of weight
For graunt of life requite thee large amendes.

Surrey. Virgile. Eneis, b. ii.

Astonnied some the scathefull gift beheld, Behight by vow vnto the chaste Minerve.—Id. Ib.

Thereat sir Guyon smylde; "And is that all,"
Said he, "that thee so sore displeased hath?
Great mercy sure, for to enlarge a thrall,
Whose freedom shall thee turne to greatest scath!"

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 5.

1 Cap. You are a saucy boy;—I'st so, indeed?
This trick may chance to scath you.

Shakespeare. Romeo & Juliet, Act i. sc. 5.

—As when heaven's fire

Hath scath'd the Forrest oaks, or mountain pines,
With singed top thir stately growth though bare Stands on the blasted heath.—Milton. Par. Lost, b. i.

Then said the prophesier—that is the scathfull wind and dreadfull tempest, which shall blow such calamitie and trouble to the whole state of the whole realme of Scotland.
Holinshed. Historie of Scotland, an. 1279.

A bawbling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught, and bulk, unprizable;
With which such scathful grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet,
That very envy, and the tongue of loss,
Cry'd fame and honour on him.

Shakespeare. Twelfth Night, Act v. sc. 1.

SCA'TTER, v. } Dut. Schetteren; A. S.
SCA'TTEREDLY. } Scad-ian; Dut. Sheeden, SCA'TTERER. } sheyden; Ger. Sheeden; to SCA'TTERING, n. } divide, to separate, to dis-SCA'TTERINGLY. } perse. See SCATHE, and SCA'TTERLING, n. } SHED.

To disperse, to dissipate; to throw about, to drop, to fall, to shed in small scanty parts, or portions.

He that is not with me: is agens me, and he that gedrith not with me: scaterith abroad.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 12.

He that is not with me, is agaist me. And he y^t gathereth not w^t me, scattereth abroad.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

For feare of which persecution they fled into all costes and preached vnto the Jewes that were scattered, prouing that Jesus was Christ the Saulour of the world, both by the scripture and also by miracles.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 275.

They kepte theym hole togyder without scatterynge or sprynge abroad.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 217.

The godly matrone by the hand him beares
Forth from her presence, by a narrow way,
Scattered with bushy thornes and ragged breares,
Which still before him she remov'd away.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

But the rest (despairing by reason of the shamefull flight of the gouernor) did scatteringle depart, wandring whither they thought good, without anie order.

Holinshed. Historie of Scotland, an. 1544.

Yet oft annoyd with sondry bordragings
Of neighbour Scots, and forrein scatterlings
With which the world did in those dayes abound.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 10.

And gathering unto him all the scatterlings and out-lawes out of all the woods and mountaines, in which they long had lurked, hee marched forth into the English pale.

Id. View of the State of Ireland.

A thousand temptations doth he really prevent, which would otherwise come upon us, scattering the snares of our malicious adversary, and counter-working his stratagems.

Sharp, vol. vi. Ser. 14.

The idea of God, is not a complement or aggregation of things, which exist scatteredly and apart in the world; for then would it be a meer arbitrary thing; and it might be what every one pleased; one adding more things together, and another fewer.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 695.

So God sends us from heaven in one volume, a, at least virtual, collection of those divine truths and holy precepts, others scatteringly and sparingly glean out of human books.

Boyle. Works, vol. ii. p. 286.

As soon as we got round this cape, we hauled our wind to the westward, in order to get within the islands, which lie scattered in the bay in great numbers, and extend out to sea as far as the eye could reach even from the mast-head.

Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 2.

As we found the hulls of these scattered round the places where the Indians had made their fires, we took for granted that they were fit to eat; those however who made the experiment paid dear for their knowledge of the contrary, for they operated both as an emetic and cathartic with great violence.—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 6.

SCA'Venger. A. S. Scaf-an; Dut. Scha- ben; Ger. Schaben, to shave, to scrape. Applied to—

Those who scrape and clear away the filth from publick streets, or other places.

To see the pope's blacke knight, a cloaked frere,
Sweating in the channel like a scavengere.

Bp. Hall. Satires, b. iv. Sat. 7.

Do not I know thee for the Alguazier, Whose dunghill all the parish scavengers
Could never rid?

Beaum. & Fletch. The Martial Maid, Act iii. sc. 1.

The hero or patron in a libel is but a scavenger to carry off the dirt, and by that very employment is the filthiest creature in the street.—Tatler, No. 92.

For thee the scavenger bids kennels glide
Within their bounds, and heaps of dirt subside.

Gay. Trivia, b. i.

SCE/LESTICK. Lat. Scelestus, wicked, from scelus, wickedness; Fr. Scélere, scélérat.

For my own part, I think the world hath not better men, then some, that suffer under that name; nor withall, more scelestique villaines.—Feltham, pt. i. Res. 5.

SCENE. } Fr. Scène; It. Scena; Sp.
SCE'NERY. } Scena; Lat. Scena; Gr.
SCE'NICK. } Σκηνή, commonly derived from SCE'NICAL. } σκια, i. e. umbra,—quia scena
SCE'NOGRAPHY. } proprie sit umbraculum seu tabernaculum; the word being first applied to the shaded part of a theatre. See the quotation from Potter.

The shaded part of the theatre assigned to the actors; the dramatick action, part or parts of the dramatick action represented there; the painting before which the actors perform their parts; any view or spectacle; a combination of objects viewed, or presenting themselves to the view or sight.

Sceno-graphy,—Gr. Σκηνή, and γραφ-ειν, to describe.

But now prepare thee for another scene.

He lookt and saw wide territorie spread Before him, towns and rural works between,
Cities of men with lofty gates and towers,
Concours in arms, fierce faces threatening warr,
Giants of mighty bone, and bould emprise.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. xi.

They dance over a distracted comedy of love, expressing their confused affections, in the scenical persons and habits of the four prime European nations.

B. Jonson. Love's Triumph.

Scena was a partition assigned for the actors, reaching quite cross the theatre, which at the first, agreeably to the ancient simplicity, was dressed with boughs and leaves, but in more expensive ages was adorned with rich and costly hangings, to hide the management of machines, and other actions of the players, from the spectators.

Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. i. c. 8.

I, to the temple will conduct the crew;
The sacrifice and sacrificers view;

From thence return, attended with my train,
Where the proud theatres disclose the scene.

Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. v.

The hills shine out, the rocks in prospect rise,
And streams, and vales, and forests, strike the eyes;
The smiling scene wide opens to the sight,
And all th' unmeasur'd ether flames with light.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xvi.

To make a sketch, or a more perfect model of a picture, is, in the language of poets, to draw up the scenery of a play;
and the reason is the same for both; to guide the undertaking, and to preserve the remembrance of such things, whose natures are difficult to obtain.

Dryden. On Poetry & Painting.

We shall here also represent to you the ichnography, and scenography, of the ancient burial-places of the Egyptians, near the pyramids, out of which the mummies are brought;
with a prospect of Memphis, Babylon, Cairo.

Greenhill. Art of Embalming, p. 203.

The entrance of a new personage upon the stage, forms what is called, a new scene. These scenes, or successive conversations, should be closely linked and connected with each other; and much of the art of dramatic composition is shown in maintaining this connection.

Blair. Lectures, Lect. 45

Sophocles increased the number of actors to three, and added the decoration of painted scenery.

Twining. Aristotle on Poetry, pt. i.

I shall not urge, as of much weight, what hath been observed who take this side of the question, the scenical image of Job and his friends sitting together on the ground seven days and seven nights without a word speaking.

Warburton. Divine Legation, b. vi. s. 2.

If he [Gildas] had prepared any thing scenical to be acted on the theater, certainly it would have been a tragedy.

Fuller. Worthies. Somersetshire.

'Tis yours, this night, to bid the reign commence,
Of rescued nature and reviving sense;
To chase the charms of sound, the pomp of show,
For useful mirth and salutary woe;
Bid scenic virtue form the rising age,
And truth diffuse her radiance from the stage.

Johnson. Prol. Opening Drury Lane, 1747

SCENT, n. } Formerly also written sent SCENT, v. } Fr. Sentir; It. Sentire; Lat.
SCE'NTFUL. } Sentire, to feel: usually re-SCE'NTLESS. } stricted in English to the feel-SCE'NTINGLY. } ing or sense of smell.

To feel (by the sense of smell), to smell; to cause to smell, or emit a smell. And the noun—Smell, that which smells or causes the sensation of smelling; an odour, a perfume.

One that had marked him would have judged, that his eyes would have run into him, and his soul out of him; so unkindly did either take a scent of danger.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

There is a fish called a rasoir: looke whatsoever toucheth it, senteth presently of yron.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxii. c. 2.

Thunderbolts and lightnings in like manner doe sent strongly of brimstone.—Id. Ib. b. xxxv. c. 15.

Fer. Is Virolet in the conspiracie?

Ron. The head of all, he only scented me:
And from his fear, that I plaid false is fled.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Double Marriage, Act i. sc. 1

That kind of Sideritis growing upon mud wals, if it be brused or stamped, yeeldeth a stinking sent.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxv. c. 5

— A maiden gath'ring on the plains
A sentfull nosegay (to set neere her pap,
Or as a favour, for her shepherds cap)
Is scene farre off to stray, if she have spide
A flower that might increase her posie's pride.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 2.

The sentfull osprey by the rocke had fish'd,
And many a prittie shrimp in scallops dish'd,
Some way convay'd her. Id. Ib. b. ii. s. 3.

Yet I find but one man, Richard Smart by name (the more remarkable because but once, and that scentingly mentioned by Mr. Fox) burnt at Salisbury.

Fuller. Worthies. Wiltshire.

And lo! this second Paris come again,
With his unmanly, soft, luxurious train,
In scented tresses and a mitre gay,
To bear my bride, his ravish'd prize, away.
Pitt. Virgil. Æneid, b. iv.

Meantime the king, his son, and Helen, went
Where the rich wardrobe breath'd a costly scent.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xv.

Ye blossoms, that one varied landscape rise,
And send your scented tribute to the skies;
Diffusive like yon royal branches smile,
Grace the young year, and glad the grateful isle!
Savage. The Volunteer Laureat, No. 2.

The thing which first strikes him and fixes his attention, is the majesty and splendour of the king's own dress; which indeed is described by the single circumstance of the profusion of rich perfumes with which it was scented.
Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 8.

The scentless and the scented rose; this red,
And of an humbler growth, the other tall,
And throwing up into the darkest gloom
Of neigh'ring cypress, or more sable yew,
Her silver globes, light as the foamy surf,
That the wind severs from the broken wave.
Cowper. Task, b. vi.

SCEPTRE. } Fr. Sceptre; It. Scettro; Sp.
SCEPTRED. } Cetro; Lat. Sceptrum; Gr.
Σκηπτρον, baculus, quo quis innititur; from σκηπτ- ειν, inniti, a staff, on which any one leans. (See the quotation from Potter.) It is applied, generally, to—

The ensign of authority; to royal or imperial authority or power.

And she that bare the sceptre ful of floures, Shal bere a distaf hire cost for to quite.
Chaucer. The Monkes Tale, v. 14, 378.

And forsothe this foresaied woman, bare smale bookes in her right hande, and in her left hand, she bare a scepter.
Id. Boecius, b. i.

But in a body which doth freely yeeld
His partes to reasons rule obedient,
And letteth her that ought the scepter weeld,
All happy peace and goodly government
Is settled there in sure establishment.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 11.

Thy temples wounded with a thorny crown, thy face spat upon, thy cheeks buffeted, thy head smitten, thy hand sceptred with a reed, thyself derided with wry mouths, bended knees, scoffing acclamations?
Bp. Hall. Cont. Christ before Pilate.

— our faire Phœbus' shine,
Shall light those places,
With lustrous graces,
Where darknesse, with her glomie sceptred hand,
Doth now command.
B. Jonson. To James Earl of Desmond.

Sometime let gorgeous tragedy
In scepter'd pall come sweeping by,
Presenting Thebes, or Pelops line,
Or the tale of Troy divine.
Milton. Il Penseroso.

It may not be improper to mention in this place, that Σκηπτρον the scepter, or staff, was always the ensign of judicial and sovereign power; whence in Homer it is accounted sacred, and the most solemn oaths are sworn by it.
Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. i. c. 20.

High on his car Sesostrius struck my view
Whom scepter'd slaves in golden harness drew.
Pope. Temple of Fame.

SCERN, i.e. Discern.

But, as he higher drew, he easily
Might scerne that it was not his sweetest sweet.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 10.

SCHEDULE. Also anciently written Cedule, (qv.) Fr. Schede, schedule, cédula; It. Cédola; Sp. Cedula; Lat. Schedula, scheda; Gr. Σχῆδῆ or σχῆδῆ, a sheet (of paper), from σχίζ-ειν, to divide, to cleave; Cotgrave calls it—

“A scrowl, hand-writing, or private instrument in writing: an addition or scrowl, annexed unto a testament or other deed.” Also a list, a catalogue.

Than sir Loys of Sanxere, marshall of France, signified the state of thenglysshmen to Parys to y^e kyng, and to the knightes that were ther, and made writynges and seadules to be set vp on the pales, and in other places sayeng thus, &c.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 273.

Then were certain devices for laws delivered to my learned council to pen, as by a schedule appeareth.
Burnet. Records, pt. ii. b. ii. King Edward's Journal.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood.
Shakespeare. A Lover's Complaint.

SCHEME, n. } Gr. Σχῆμα, habitus, from SCHEME, v. } σχεθεω, habere, the habit, form.
SCHEMATISM. } Our application of this word
SCHEMATIST. } seems to be modern, and pecu-SCHEMIST. } liar to our own language.
SCHEMER. } The form, or frame, fabrick, construction, contrivance; the plan or plot, the design or purpose.

Schemer is common in speech.

I might tary long time, in declaring the nature of diuers schemes, which are wordes or sentences altered, either by speaking, or writing, contrarie to the vulgare custome of our speech, without chaunging their nature at al.
Wilson. Arte of Rhetorique, p. 179.

All schemes are slighted which attempt to shine
At once with strange and probable design.
Parnell. On the different Styles of Poetry.

They are not either of them ingenerable and incorruptible elements, much less the sole matter of all tangible bodies, but only two of the primordial and of the most obvious schematisms of that, which is indeed the universal matter.
Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 106.

The treasurer maketh little use of the schematists, who are dayly plying him with their visions, but to be thoroughly convinced by the comparison that his own notions are the best.—Swift. Letter to Dr. King.

Baron Puffendorf observed well of those independent schemists, in the words here following.
Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 500.

For useless lay the now-neglected chain;
Threats fail'd, and punishments were schem'd in vain.
Lewis. Statius. Thebaid, b. ii.

The idea of the possibility of multiplying paper money to almost any extent, was the real foundation of what is called the Mississippi scheme, the most extravagant project, both of banking and stock-jobbing, that perhaps the world ever saw.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. ii. c. 2.

SCHIRROUS. } Fr. Scirre, squirre; It.
SKIRROUS, or } Scirro; Lat. Schirrus; Gr.
SCHIRRHUS. } Σκίρρ-ος, tumor durus; a hard SCHIRROSITY. } swelling, from σκειρο-ειν, in- durare, to harden. Cotgrave calls it—

A hard and almost insensible swelling; a kernel, bred between the flesh and skin, by cold;— or of thick and clammy flegm.

Such a thing breeds in men upon the hardnesse of liver or spleene, which the physicians call scirrhus, i. an hard wedge, and cake under the short ribs.
Holland. Plinie, b. vi. c. 15.

All hard and schirrous tumors, occasioned by the gathering of humors, are healed with vervaine or cinquefoile sodden in vinegre.—Id. Ib. b. xxvi. c. 12.

As for cisterne waters, the physicians also themselves con-fesse, that they breed obstructions and schirrhosities in the bellie, yea, and otherwise bee hurtfull to the throat.
Id. Ib. b. xxxi. c. 3.

The difficulty of swallowing and breathing, occasioned by schirrosities of the glands, is not to be cured any otherwise than by extirpation.—Arbuthnot. On Diet, c. 3.

The rough file grates; yet useful is its touch,
As sharp corrosives to the schirrhous flesh,
Or, to the stubborn temper, keen rebuke.
Jago. Edge-Hill, b. iii.

A fine portrait of Vesalius the anatomist, when young, by Tintoret. He has a skirrous bone in his left hand, the other holds a compass.
Reynolds. Journey to Flanders & Holland.

SCHISM. } Fr. Scisme; It. Scis-
SCHISMATICK. } mo; Sp. Cisma; Low SCHISMATICAL. } Lat. Scisma; Gr. Σχισ- SCHISMATICALLY. } μα, from σχίζ-ειν, to SCHISMATICALNESS, v. } divide or sever. Cot-SCHISMLESS. } grave renders Fr.
Scismatizer, to schismatize it, to play the schisma- tick. See the quotation from Locke.

A division, a separation.

Neither had the world any rest this many hundred yeares for reformyng of friers and monkes and ceasyng of schismes that were among our clergy.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 176.

Euen to be called a rayler, seditious, a maker of discorde and a troubler of the comō peace, yea a schismaticke and an hereticke also.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 196.

Surely by hys holy saintes & martirs he meaneth theyr holy scysmatikes and heretiques.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 302.

Therefore we are well assured that your schismaticall superintendentship can not stande, though al the power of the world were bente to holde it vp.
Jewell. Defence of the Apology, p. 697.

Item. Whether any such as were ordered schismatically, and contrary to the old order and custom of the catholick church, or being unlawfully and schismatically married.
Burnet. Records, pt. ii. b. ii. No. 15.

Schism is a rent or division in the church, when it comes to the separating of congregations; and may also happen to a true church, as well as to a false.
Milton. Of True Religion, &c.

None gives religion a more dangerous wound,
(Of which firme union is a certaine signe)
Then schismatics, whose dreames would truth confound,
And to divide what faith should fast combine.
Stirling. Domes-day. Seventh Houre.

As mischievous a mark as any of her carnality, is her dissension and schismaticallness even to mutual persecution; as also the unnatural and unchristian wars of one part of reformed Christendom against the other.
More. On the Seven Churches, p. 113.

The peace and good of the church is not terminated in the schismless estate of one or two kingdoms, but should be provided for the joint consultation of all reformed Christendom: that all controversy may end in the final pronounce or canon of one arch-primate or protestant pope.
Milton. Reason. of Church Government, b. i. c. 6.

Schism then, for the same reasons that have already been alleged, is nothing else but a separation made in the communion of the church, upon account of something in divine worship, or ecclesiastical discipline, that is not any necessary part of it.—Locke. Let. concern. Toleration.

He that denies not any thing that the Holy Scriptures teach in express words, nor makes a separation upon occasion of any thing that is not manifestly contained in the sacred text; however he may be nick-named by any sect of Christians, and declared by some, or all of them, to be utterly void of true Christianity; yet in deed and in truth this man cannot be either a heretick or schismatick.—Id. Ib.

But being schismatically inclined, he [John Gere] refused to conform to certain ceremonies in the Church of England.
Wood. Athenæ Oxon. b. ii.

The vulgar thus through imitation err;
As oft the learn'd by being singular;
So much they scorn the crowd, that if the throng
By chance go right, they purposely go wrong:
So schismatics the plain believers quit,
And are but damn'd for having too much wit.
Pope. Essay on Criticism.

The design of all which is to bind us over to the study and practice of unity and concord, and restrain us by the strictest obligations from all schismatically, factious, and turbulent behaviour in those sacred or civil societies whereof we are members.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 3.

The sin of schism, as such, is by no means the object of temporal coercion and punishment.
Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 4.

SCHOLY, n. } Fr. Scholiaste; It. Sco- SCHOLY, v. } liaste; Sp. Ecoleador; Lat.
SCHOLICAL. } Scholiastes; Gr. Σχολιαστής, SCHOLIAZE, v. } scriptor scholiorum, (quasi a SCHOLIAST. } σχολιαζειν,) quod per otium SCHOLIASTICK. } (εν σχολῃ) componatur, (see Vossius and Martinius.) A scholy, or scholium, seems to have been,—

A note, remark, or observation, to explain or illustrate, written without much labour. See SCHOOL.

He therefore which made vs to liue, hath also taught vs to pray, to the end that speaking vnto the Father in the Sonnes owne prescript forme without scholy or glosse of ours, wee may bee sure that we vtter nothing which God will eyther disallow or deny.
Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. v. § 35.

This being required euen of learners in the schoole of Christ, the dutie of their teachers in bringing them vnto such ripenesse, must needes bee somewhat more, then only to reade the sentences of scripture, and then paraphrastically to scholy them, to vary them with sundry formes of speech, without arguing or disputing about any thing which they contain.—Id. Ib. b. iii. § 8.

Whereunto Maximus Planudes (except my memorie fail me) addeth this scholie after his maner, sauing that from morning vnto noone (whiche is six of the clocke after the vnequall accompt) each one dooth trauell about his neces-sarie affaires, that beeing doone, &c.
Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii.

He thinks to scholiaz upon the Gospel.
Milton. Tetrachordon.

It is a common scholical error to fill our papers and notebooks with observations of great and famous events;—meanwhile things of ordinary course and common life gain no room in our paper-books.—Hales. Rem. p. 275.

The bending shelves with ponderous scholiasts groan,
And deep divines, to modern shops unknown.
Gay. Trivia, b. ii.

And therefore the true illuminated (that is to say, the darkest of all) have met with such numberless commentators, whose scholastic [scholastic] midwifery hath delivered them of meanings, that the authors themselves perhaps never conceived, and yet may very justly be allowed the lawful parents of them.—Swift. Tale of a Tub, § 10.

From morn to ev'ning destin'd to explore
Th' verbal critic and the scholiast's lore;
Alas! what beam of heav'nly ardour shines
In musty lexicons and school divines?
Blacklock. To Dr. Beattie.

SCHOOL, n. Fr. Eschole, escole; It. Scuola; Sp. Escuela; Lat. Schola; Gr. Σχολή, otium; inhibitio operis, from σχε-ειν, otium, inhilere; as applied—to retirement from active labours; and, consequently, leisure for study, for literary or philosophical speculations; to the place, where literary or philosophical men assembled. See the quotation from Pliny. (See also SCHOLY.) The common modern application is to—

The place, the house in which persons are taught, instructed, educated, disciplined, trained; then, to the system or peculiar doctrines of different sects; teachers or instructors; limitedly,—to certain teachers or writers, and their doctrines; the realists, nominalists, &c.

Ion the Balliol, no witte was in thi pol, whan thou folic thouhtis,
To leue the right scole.
R. Brunne, p. 279.

— Freres go to scole
And lerne logyk and lawe. and eke contemplacion.
Piers Plouhman, p. 406.

He ghede awei fro hem and departide the disciplis, and disputed in the scole of a myghti man ech dai.
Wiclif. Dedis, c. 19.

He departed from them, and seperated the disciples, and he disputed dailye in the scole of one called Tyrannus.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

But all that he might of his frendes hente,
On bokes and on lerning he it spente,
And besily gan for the soules praie
Of hem, that yave him wherwith to scolaie.
Chaucer. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 282.

Than were ther yonge scoleres two,
That dwelten in the halle of which I say.
Id. The Reves Tale, v. 3950.

Twies a day it passed thurgh his throte,
To scoleward and homeward whan he wente.
Id. The Prioresses Tale, v. 13,478.

There maie a man the schole lere
Of rhetoric the eloquence.
Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Your owne scholeman say, the popes power is so greate, that no man can, nor may discusse it.
Barnes. Workes, p. 213.

The nominales against the reales: the scholasticalles against the canonistes; the contention is greater, & the doubts darker, then euer they were before.
Bp. Jewell. Replie to Hardinge, p. 259.

As for virtue he counted it but a school-name.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. iv.

Mene. Consider this: He ha's bin bred f' th' warres
Since a could draw a sword, and is ill-school'd
In bouted language; meale and bran together
He throwes without distinction.
Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act iii. sc. 1.

If thy nature still wants schooling,
As thou dost grow old, grow wise.
Brome. The New Gentry.

For hee pictured the noble ladie Hesione, K. Alexander the Great, and Phillip the king his father, with the goddess Minerva; which tables hang in the philosophers schoole or walking-place within the stately galleries of Octavia, where the learned clerks and gentlemen favours of learning, were wont to meet and converse.
Holland. Plinie. b. xxxv. c. 10.

In the same place, and namelie in the schoole or gallerie of learned men, there be many more images highly commended, and yet no man knoweth who wrought them.
Id. Ib. b. xxxvi. c. 5

The world thou hast not seen, much less her glory,
Empires, and monarchs, and their radiant courts,
Best school of best experience, quickest in sight
In all things that to greatest actions lead.
Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iii.

— From whose [Socrates] mouth issu'd forth
Mellifluous streams that water'd all the schools
Of academics old and new.
Id. Ib. b. iv.

To which hem needs a guileful hollow heart
Marked with fair dissembling courtesy,
A filed tongue furnish'd with termes of art,
Not art of school, but courtiers schoolery.
Spenser. Colin Clouts come Home again.

— But Demetrius come,
And come Egeus, you shall go with me,
I haue some priuate schooling for you both.
Shakespeare. Midsummer Night's Dream, Act i. sc. 1.

— From his cradle
He was a scholler, and a ripe, and good one:
Exceeding wise, faire spoken, and perswading.
Id. Hen. VIII. Act iv. sc. 2.

Ana. Content, I'll pay your scholarity. Who offers?
B. Jonson. Cynthia's Revels, Act v. sc. 2.

This place should be at once both school and university, not needing a remove to any other house of scholarship, except it be some peculiar college of law, or physic, where they mean to be practitioners.—Milton. Of Education.

His second argument is drawn from that scholasticke riddle, which I must confess seems to verge too near to profound non-sense, That the soul of man is tota in tota in quibet parte corporis.
More. Immortality of the Soul, b. i. c. 10.

I believe their honest and ingenuous natures coming to the universities to store themselves with good and solid learning, and there unfortunately fed with nothing else but the scragged and thorny lectures of monkish and miserable sophistry, were sent home again, with such a scholastical bur in their throats, as hath stopp'd and hinder'd all true and generous philosophy from entering.
Milton. Reason of Church Government, b. ii.

Silo. What labour and what travel have I run through
And through what cities to absolve this riddle:
Diviners, dreamers, school-men, deep magicians,
All have I try'd, and all give several meaning.
Beaum. & Fletcher. Woman Pleas'd, Act iv. sc. 1.

The sleek-fac'd schoolboy satchel takes,
And with slow pace small riddance makes;
For why, the haste we make, you know,
To knowledge and to virtue's slow.
Colton. The Morning Quatrains.

Leonides his tutor and schoolemaister, by way of a light reproofe, said unto him [Alexander] thus, Sir you should in that manner burne incense when you have once conquered those nations where there growth incense.
Holland. Plinie, b. xii. c. 14.

Sith that in salvage forests she did dwell,
So farre from court and royall citadell,
The great schoolmaistresse of all courtesy.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 6.

To this abuse, and the mischiefs of confounding the signification of words, logick and the liberal sciences, as they have been handled in the schools, have given reputation.
Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 10.

He remembers only the name of Conon, and forgets the other on set purpose (whether he means Anaximander or Eudoxus I dispute not); but he was certainly forgotten, to shew his country swain was no great scholar.
Dryden. Virgil, Ded.

In the most strict and scholastical sense of that word.
Barrow. On the Creed.

As for the obligation, I know no moralists, or casuists, that treat scholastically of justice, but treat of gratitude under that general head, as a part or species of it.
South, vol. i. Ser. 11.

It ought to be determined whether those we call monsters be really a distinct species, according to the scholastic notion of the word species.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 6.

Scholasticks have been so intemperate in the use of these words, that they could not make a rational discourse of any thing, though never so small, but they must stuff it with their quiddities, entities, essences, hæcceties, and the like.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 67.

Great schools rejected then, as those that swell
Beyond a size that can be manag'd well.
Cowper. Tirocinium.

Men of rank and fortune bring up their children with care, and bestow upon them every improvement which their capacity will receive, and there is often found, in the gentleest and most elevated circles of society, the union of the fine gentleman with the polite and well accomplished scholar.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 26.

Ye once were justly fam'd for bringing forth,
Undoubted scholarship and genuine worth.
Cowper. Tirocinium.

The charitable foundations of scholarships, exhibitions, bursaries, &c. necessarily attach a certain number of students to certain colleges, independent altogether of the merit of those particular colleges.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 1.

The talents of Abelard were not confined to theology, jurisprudence, philosophy, and the thorny paths of scholasticism.—Warton. Essay on Pope.

He [the father] may also delegate part of his parental authority, during his life, to the tutor or schoolmaster of his child; who is then in loco parentis, and has such a portion of the power of the parent committed to his charge, viz. that of restraint and correction, as may be necessary to answer the purposes for which he is employed.
Blackstone. Commentaries, b. i. c. 16.

SCIA'GRAPHY. } Gr. Σκιαγραφία, from SCIATE'RICAL. } σκια, a shadow, and γραφ-ειν, scribere, describere: to describe, to delineate.

A description or delineation of shade or shadow; the art of shadowing, of delineating.

Sciaterical (Gr. Σκιαιτικός),—that can or may shade or shadow, or form shades or shadows.

This cunning of shadowes and skill named Gnomonice, Anaximenes the Milesian, the disciple of Anaximander abovenamed, invented: and he was the first also that shewed in Lacedæmon the horologue or diall, which they call sciotericon.—Holland. Plinie, b. ii. c. 76.

Let those, who are delighted with sciagraphy, paint out, if they please, these shadow-patriarchs.
Fuller. Holy War, p. 111.

The former of these [two atheistical hypotheses] was the more ancient, and the first sciography, or rude delineation of atheism.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 836.

There were also from great antiquity, sciaterical or sun dials, by the shadow of a stile or gnomon denoting the hours of the day.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. v. c. 18.

Let the plane be sciaterically prepared, and it shall be necessary for the shadow of the sun to go back.
Gregory. Posthum. p. 37.

SCIA'TIC. Fr. Isciatique, sciaticque; It. & Sp. Sciatica, Lat. Sciaticus, ischiadicus; Gr. ισχιαδικος, from ισχίς, lumbus.
A gouty pain in the hip, (Cotgrave.)

Rack'd with sciatick, martyr'd with the stone,
Will any mortal let himself alone.—Pope.

SCIENCE, n. } Fr. Science; It. Scienza; SCI'ENTIAL. } Sp. Sciencier; Lat. Scientia, SCIEN'TIFICK. } from sciens, pres. part. of SCIEN'TIFICAL. } scire, to know; Vossius de-SCIEN'TIFICALLY. } rives from Gr. ισκω;— SCI'ENCED. } εισ-κω, εισω, from ειδ-ειν, to see; Lennep,—from σχι-ειν, obsolete theme of σχιε-ειν, findere, to cleave, to separate; and thus giving it an origin of much similarity to that of skill, from scyl-an, to separate; to discern, (to ken.)

For the philosophical distribution of science, see the quotation from Locke.
Science is generally used as equivalent to—Knowledge, emphatically, not imperfect or pretended.

Science may be thus briefly distinguished from art: Science is knowledge: art,—power or skill in the use of it; and thus, logick is a science, and also an art: the art is the practical use of the science; of the principles of the science. And see Whately, Logic, c. 2. Note.

Painting, music, &c. are arts; and the best artist is he who uses the science, the principles of the science, with the greatest practical skill and dexterity.

Ge syre ich seyde by so that no man were a grevede
Alle the science under sonne. and alle sotile craftes
Ich wolde ich knewe and couthe. kyndeliche in myn harte
Piers Plouhman, p. 274.

Thou schalt go bfore the face of the Lord to make redy hise weyes. To geve science of heeth to his puple into remission of her synnes.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 1.

Thei ben taught in charite into alle the richessis of the plentee of undirstondyng into the knowyng of mysterie of God the fadir of Iesus Crist in whom alle the tresouris of wisdom and of science ben hid.—Id. Colocensis, c. 2.

Yonge clerkes, that ben likerous
To reden artes that ben curious,
Seken in every walke and every herne
Particular sciences for to lerne.
Chaucer. The Frankeleines Tale, v. 1172.

Lo thus dane Aristoteles
These three sciences hath devided,
And in nature also decided,
Wherof that eche of hem shall serue.

Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges,
Defective in their natures, grow to wildness;
Even so our houses, and ourselves, and children,
Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time,
The sciences that should become our country.

Shakespeare. Hen. V. Act v. sc. 2

There is not in the world any art or science, which proposing unto itself an end, (as every one doth some end or other,) hath been therefore thought defective, if it have not delivered simply whatsoever is needful to the same end; but all kinds of knowledge have their certain bounds and limits: each of them presupposeth many necessary things learned in other sciences and known beforehand.

Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. i.

O sacred, wise, and wisdom-giving plant,
Mother of science, now I feel thy power Within me cleere, not only to discern Things in thir causes, but to trace the wayes
Of highest agents, deemd however wise.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ix.

His light sciential is, and, past mere nature,
Can salve the rude defects of every creature.

B. Jonson. Masques at Court.

So saying, from the tree her step she turnd,
But first low reverence don, as to the power
That dwelt within, whose presence had infus'd
Into the plant sciential sap, deriv'd
From nectar, drink of gods.—Milton. Par. Lost, b. ix.

And in these modern times, the most speculative and scientificall men, both in Germany and Italy, seem to adhere to it.—Howell, b. iii. Let. 9.

I think, science, may be divided properly into these three sorts.

First, The knowledge of things, as they are in their own proper beings, their constitutions, properties, and operations.

Secondly, The skill of right applying our own powers and actions, for the attainment of things good and useful.

Thirdly, The third branch may be call'd, σημωτική, or the doctrine of signs, the most usual whereof being words, it is aptly enough term'd also logick.

Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iv. c. 21.

The necessity of this intuitive knowledge, in each step of scientific or demonstrative reasoning, gave occasion, I imagine, to that mistaken axiom, that all reasoning was "ex præcognitis & præconcessis."—Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 2.

Sometimes it [the understanding] rests upon testimony, when testimony of right has nothing to do, because it is easier to believe than to be scientifically instructed.—Id. Ib.

The works of speculation or science may be reduced to the four classes of philosophy, mathematics, astronomy, and physic.—Gibbon. Roman Empire, c. 52.

A fugitive from heaven and prayer;
I mock'd at all religious fear,

Deep scienc'd in the mazy love

Of mad philosophy; but now

Hoist sail, and back my voyage plough
To that blest harbour, which I left before.

Francis. Horace, b. i. Ode 34.

The volumes of scientific and literary societies or academies are infinite.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 2.

Voyages and travels, when not obscured by scientific observations, are always delightful to youthful curiosity.

Id. Essay 14.

SCIMITAR. Fr. Cimeterre; It. Scimitarra; Sp. Cimatarra; Low Lat. Scimitarra; Turcis dicitur quod Latinis—Gladius falcatus, (Vossius de Vitiis, lib. i. c. 7.) See CIMETER.

A falchion. See the quotation from Potter.

He dies vpon my semilars sharpe point,
That touches this my first borne sonne and heire.

Shakespeare. Titus Andronicus, Act iv. sc. 2.

They had sometimes another sword call'd Κομισ, which was the same with the Roman Ensis falcatus, and our falchion, or scimeter, and was chiefly us'd by the inhabitants of Argos.—Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. iii. c. 4.

Wit in his [Dr. South] hand was sharp and irresistible, and made its way like the scymitar or the battle-axe.

Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 62.

SCINTILLANT. } Fr. Scintiller, scintilla-
SCINTILLA'TION. } tion; It. Scintillare, scin- SCINTI'LOUS. } tillazione; Lat. Scin-tilla, which some Latin etymologists derive from scindere, q. d. scindilla; quia flamma videtur quasi scindi, dum scintilla excutitur; because the flame seems to be split when the spark is thrown out. Vossius thinks this far-fetched; and thinks scintilla is spintella, from the Gr. Σπινθηρ, of the same signification.

A spark, or sparkling; an atom emitted.

Wyth theyr eyen beholdinge a trauers of stomackes chaufed syntillously.—Skelton. The Boke of Three Fooles.

For these scintillations are not the accension of the ayr, upon the collision of two hard bodies, but rather the inflammable effluencies discharged from the bodies collided.

Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. ii. c. 1.

The light being tremulous and twinkling, as well as briak, they seemed to emulate so many little stars in a cloudless but dark night, and continued this scintillation longer than one would have expected.—Boyle. Works, vol. iv. p. 474.

But who can view the pointed rays,
That from black eyes scintillant blaze?

Love on the throne of glory seems Encompass'd with satellite beams.—Green. The Spleen.

Few among the experienced in didactics have read Milton's letter to Hartlib with approbation: curious as it is, and displaying as it does scintillations of great genius, yet what parent or preceptor is persuaded by it to adopt the plan in his own case or practice?—Knox. Rem. on Grammar Schools.

SCIO'GRAPHY. See SCIAGRAPHY.

SCPOLIST. } Lat. Sciolus, qui putet se
SCI'OLOUS. } Sci'olous. } multa scire.

One, who is knowing, wise;—in his own conceit: a pretender to knowledge.

Indeed some sciolists will boast to distinguish bones of beasts from men by their porosity, which the learned deride as an undifferencing difference.—Fuller. Worthies. Essex.

Some have the hap to be term'd learned men, tho' they have gathered up but the scraps of knowledge here and there, tho' they be but smatterers and mere sciolists.

Howell. Letters, b. iii. Let. 8.

I could wish these sciolous zelotists had more judgement joined with their zeal.—Id. Ib.

I have inclosed a small part of it within brackets, looking upon it as a marginal gloss, made by some ignorant sciolist, and afterwards foisted into the text.

Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 166.

The writers against religion have been for the most part men of great pride and audacity; but in learning, little better than sciolists; and in judgment, rash and unsound.

Knox, Ser. 8.

SCIO'MACHY. Gr. Σκία, a shadow, and μαχη, a fight or combat. See the quotation.

But pray, countryman, to avoid this sciomachy, or imaginary combat with words, let me know, sir, what you mean by the name of tyrant.

Cowley. On the Government of Oliver Cromwell.

SCION. Fr. Scien. Minshew derives from scind-ere, quia, sc. (says Skinner) scinditur ab arbore: potius, he adds, from situm, for insitum, implanted. Others,—from scissum; thus, scissum, scissio, scissione, scion. See Menage.

A slip or cutting, (sc.) to be engrafted or inserted.

Our syens, put in wilde and sauage stock,
Spirt vp so suddenly into the clouds,
And ouer-looke their grafters.

Shakespeare. Hen. V. Act iii. sc. 5.

It [the elder tree] will grow of sions and impes even as the poplar.—Holland. Plinie, b. vi. c. 20.

SCISSARS. Fr. Ciseaux; It. Cesòie. In Sp. Tigeras, or tixeras. (See CIZAR.) Manifestly, (says Junius,) from Cisius, the past part. of ced-or, cid-ere, to cut. Caseneuve resorts to Sicilire, used by the Latin writers on affairs of husbandry, for secare, to cut. Minshew derives the French from the Lat. Scissus, and the Sp. from Scissuras.

Scissars, are instruments to cut or sheer with; small sheers.

And mo berdes in two hours

Without rasour or sisours

Ymade, than graines be of sands.

Chaucer. The House of Fame.

Aid me, Narcissa! aid me to keep pace

With Destiny; and ere her scissars cut

My thread of life, to break this tougher thread

Of moral death, that ties me to the world.

Young. Complaint, Night 5.

As to the Parcæ, supposed in heathen mythology to spin the thread of life, and by their scissars to determine the period of it, I should understand this thread only to express the series of events befalling every man, not the series of causes operating to bring them forth.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 26.

SCISSIBLE. } Lat. Scissilis, contraction of SCI'SSILE. } Scissibiles: Scissio, from

SCI'SSION. } scissus, past part. of scindere,

SCI'SSURE. } to cleave, to cut.

Scissible,—that can or may be cut or severed.
Scissure,—a cleft, a rent.

The differences of impressible, and not impressible; figurable, and not figurable; mouldable, and not mouldable; scissible, and not scissible; and many other passions of matter, are plebeian notions, applied unto the instruments and uses which men ordinarily practice.

Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 846.

To this sect may be imputed all the scissures that have happen'd in Christianity.—Howell. Letters, b. iii. Let. 3.

Animal fat is a sort of amphibious substance; it is scissile like a solid, resolvable by heat not greater than what is incident to human bodies, circumscribed and contained in proper vessels like a fluid.

Arbuthnot. Nature of Aliments, c. 6.

Nerves may be many ways wounded, viz. by scission or puncture.—Wiseman. Surgery, b. v. c. 3.

SCISSITATION. Lat. Scissitari; which (Vossius) is spoken of those who desire to know, and ask of those who, they suppose, do know.

An asking; an inquiry.

There is not a more noble prooffe of our faith, then to captivate all the powers of our understanding and will to our Creator; and, without all scissitations, to goe blindfold whither hee will leade us.—Bp. Hall. Cont. The Annunciation.

SCLEROTICK. Gr. Σκληρος, hard, rigid, stiff, from σκλη-ειν, exsiccare, indurare, to harden.

Therefore the ciliary processes, or rather the ligaments in the inside of the sclerotick tunicles of the eye, by a late ingenious anatomist, do serve instead of a muscle, by their contraction to alter the figure of the eye, and make it broader.—Ray. On the Creation, pt. ii.

SCOFF, v.

SCOFF, n.

SCOFFER.

SCOFFERY.

SCOFFINGLY.

Manifestly, (says Junius,) from the Gr. Σκωπ-τειν, a word of the same meaning: but he does not attempt to trace its progress into our language. The Dut. Schobben, schoffen (he adds) is convitiare, calumniare,—to reproach, to calumniate; but this must be a consequential usage. The A. S. Sceof-an; Ger. Schaf-fen; Dut. Shuyven, to shove, seems to present the true origin. Somner explains, the A. S. A-sceaf-an,—to shut out or exclude, to explode, to drive, or hiss out. To scoff, then, may mean,—

To shove or push, (sc.) contemptuously, as to insult, is to leap on or against, (sc.) contemptuously: and then, generally,—

To act or behave towards with insult, contempt, derision, contumely; to speak of or to, contemptuously, contumeliously, slightly, scornfully.

"Bereue me goddesse," (quod he) "of thy might,

My skornes all and scoffes, that I haue

No power for to moken any wight,

That in thy seruice dwell.—Chaucer. The Court of Loue.

And so in this jolly scoffing bravery he went over us all, saying, he left one, because she was over-wayward: another, because she was too soon won.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

For all her wordes she drown'd with laughter vaine,

And wanted grace in utt'ring of the same,

That turned all her pleasure to a scoffing game.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 6.

"You alwayes loue your friends with scoffes to try."

"If I can tell, the gods my life confound."

"But where will Cæsar giue his souldiers ground,

"In Italie, or the Triniacrian ile?"

"I sweare I know not."—Beaumont. Horat. lib. ii. Sat. 6.

Cry the man mercy, loue him, take his offer,

Foule is most foule, being foule to be a scoffer.

Shakespeare. As You Like It, Act iii. sc. 5.

King Henrie the fift in his beginning thought it a meere scofferie to pursue anle fallow deere with hounds or greihounds.—Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 4.

He [Alphonso] did scoffingly and audaciously profess, that if he had stood by whilst God made the world, he could have directed the frame of it better.

H. More. Antidote against Atheism, App. c. 5.

If the more coarsely complexioned, that they may still seem to have something further to object, shall scoffingly cavil, as if we had used over-much subtilty in the management of our arguments, I can onely advertise them of this, That subtilty is as consistent with truth as the most grosse theories.—Id. Ib. c. 11.

A Socrates himself, in that loose age,
Was made the pastime of a scoffing stage.
Dryden. The Art of Poetry.

Only we have learnt this much already, that scoffs and revilings are of the growth of all nations; and consequently that neither the Greek poets borrowed from other people their art of railing, neither needed the Romans to take it from them.—Id. Dedication to Juvenal.

How weak is mortal pride! To heaven alone
Th' event of actions and our fates are known:
Scoffer, behold what gratitude we bear:
The victim's heel is answer'd with this spear.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxii.

In answer to which divers did exercise their pens, some scoffingly and some in earnest.
Wood. Athenæ Oxonienses, vol. ii.

Alas, not so! the poorest of the flock
Are proud, and set their faces as a rock;
Denied that earthly opulence they choose,
God's better gift they scoff at and refuse.
Cowper. Expostulation.

If indeed they have, since they came to a full use of reason, deliberately professed Christianity, and then forsaken it, and become railers and scoffers at it; this case is worse than if they had never believed.—Secker, vol. i. Ser. 9.

SCOLD, v. } A. S. Be-scyldigan; Dut. Be-
SCOLD, n. } schuldigen; A. S. Scyld-an, cri-SCOLDER. } minari, (Benson;) Ger. Schelten; SCOLDING, n. } Dut. Schelden; crimen ob-SCOLDINGLY. } cere, verbis injuriis infamare, laccessere; to attack with injurious, reproachful, angry language. The Sw. Skälla, (Ihre says,) means, to bark, and thence convitiari, to scold; and this he refers to the Ger. Gellen, to yell, (which is also written schallen.) In Dut. Ghillen, stridere, (schal, sonitus;) A. S. Giellan, gyllan. To scold is—

To attack, to assail with, to use towards, reproachful angry language; rude, noisy, quarrelsome language.

To storme and to scolde. sclaunders to make.
Piers Plouhman, p. 28.

A sclaunders tunge, a tunge of a skolde,
Worketh more mischief than can be tolde.
Skelton. Against Sclaunder.

& fal from meke learnyng into idle despitons, brawlyng and scoldyng about wordes.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 372.

In the second chapter he raungeth the field, and searcheth out with all diligence, what worde I haue spoken that might be takē in the worst sence, and calleth them rayling, gesting, and scolding wordes.—Fryth. Workes, p. 66.

Whether any be braulers, slanderers, chiders, scolders, and sowers of discord between one person and another.
Abp. Cranmer. Art. of Visitation.

Finding himself without the compass of blows, he fell to a fresh scolding, in such mannerly manner, as might well shew he had passed thro' the discipline of a tavern.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

Tra. Saw you no more? Mark'd you not how hir sister Began to scolde, and raise vp such a storme,
That mortal eares might hardly indure the din.
Shakespeare. Taming of the Shrew, Act i. sc. 1.

Gre. Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?
Petr. I know she is an irkesome bawling scolde:
If that be all masters, I heare no harme.
Id. Ib. Act i. sc. 2.

He [De Burgo] shewed himself so forward for it [the divorce of K. Hen. VIII. from Q. Katharine] that the women of Oxon. did not only scolde at him publicly, but threw stones after him as he passed along the street.
Wood. Fasti Oxon. vol. i.

But human frailty nicely to unfold,
Distinguishes a satyr from a scolde.
Buckinghamshire. Ess. on Poetry.

"Good ancient gentlewoman," said this rough old soldier, "spare your breath, and set your hearts at rest, for our master is not a man to be scratched and *scolde*d out of his kingdom."—Warburton. On Bolingbroke's Philosophy, Let. 1.

A common scolde, communis rixatrix, (for our law-latin confines it to the feminine gender,) is a public nuisance to her neighbourhood.—Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 13.

SCOMFIT, i.e. discomfited.

Thence it foloweth in the storye of Brenne, when he was thus scomfited of the Romaynes, he tourned his people towarde the Macedoynes or Greks, and deuyded his people in ii. hosts.—Fabyan. Chronicle, vol. i. c. 31.

SCOMM. } Lat. Scommā; Gr. Σκωμμα, SCOMMA'TICK. } from σκωπτειν, irridere, cavillare; a scoff, a taunt. A scomm is—

A scoff, a mock; also, a scoffer, a mocker, a buffoon. See SCOPTICAL.

The scommas, or buffoons of quality, are wolvish in conversation.—L'Estrange.

His vain ostentation is worthily scoffed with [the] scommæ of the orator.—Fotherby. Atheom. (1622,) p. 189.

The heroique poem dramatique, is tragedy. The scommatque narrative is satire; dramatique is comedy.
Hobbs. Answer to Pref. to Gondibert.

SCONCE, v. } See ENSCONCE. Ger. Schantz; SCONCE, n. } Dut. Schantse; Sw. Skans, munimentum. Wachter writes learnedly and elaborately, but not satisfactorily. Ihre thinks the opinion of Junius more probable, that schantze in Dut. formerly signified the branches of cut trees tied together in bundles, that these bundles of branches were used in forming ramparts, and that hence the name schantze was extended to the rampart or fortification itself. And he derives from the A. S. Scæn-an, frangere, comminuere, to break, to separate into small parts. Skinner thinks sconce originally signified—

A bulwark or defence; then the head.
To sconce, to put, to impose upon the head, (sc.) a charge, a fine; and, hence, to fine. In Lancashire—a lantern is called a Scoance, and the name in other parts is not uncommon for a utensil to hold a candle. In the North, Grose says,—a fixed seat by the side of a fire-place is so called; perhaps from its snugness and security.

My meaning was further at the head of the river in the place of my descent where I would haue left my boats, to haue raised a sconce with a small trench, and a pallisado vpon the top of it.—Hackluyt. Voyages, vol. iii. p. 256.

Amphialus at the same time issued out, and winning with an abundance of courage one of the sconces which Basilius had builded, made way for his friend Anaxius.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

Ant. S. Now, as I am a christian, answer me,
In what safe place you have bestow'd my money;
Or shall I brake that merry sconce of yours,
That stands on tricks when I am indispos'd.
Shakespeare. Comedy of Errours, Act i. sc. 2.

King. What will they do with this poor Prince, the gods know, and I fear.

Di. Why sir: they'l flea him, and make church buckets on's skin to squench rebellion, then clap a rivet in's sconce, and hang him up for a sign Beaum. & Fletch. Philaster, Act iv. sc. 1.

Young Lo. What art thou now then?
Sav. If you consider me in little, I am with your worship's reverence sir, a rascal: one that upon the next anger of your brother, must raise a sconce by the high way, and sell switches.—Id. The Scornful Lady, Act iv. sc. 1.

Besides Agricola had this excellence in him, so providently to chuse his places where to fortify, as not another General then alive. No sconce or fortress of his raising was ever known either to have been forc'd, or yielded up, or quitted.—Milton. History of England, b. ii.

Yet they found the rebels horse (superior in number by much to theirs) drawn up in five bodies on the south-side of the town, near their sconce; as if, upon the advantage of that ground, they meant to fight.
Clarendon. History of the Rebellion, vol. ii. p. 544.

At length upon the hearing of one of Sir Hen. Savile's mathematic lectures by accident, or rather to save the sconce of a groat, if he had been absent, he [Gellibrand] was so extremely taken with it, that he immediately fell to the study of that noble science.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. i.

If golden sconces hang not on the walls,
To light the costly suppers and the balls;
If the proud palace shines not with the state
Of burnish'd bowls, and of reflected plate;
If well-tun'd harps, nor the more pleasing sound
Of voices, from the vaulted roofs rebound;
Yet on the grass, beneath a poplar shade,
By the cool stream, our careless limbs are lay'd.
Dryden. Lucretius, b. i.

You may likewise stick the candle so loose, that it will fall upon the glass of the sconce, and break it into shatters.
Swift. Direction to the Butler.

Mem. Pease-pudding not boiled enough. Cook reprimanded, and sconced in my presence.—Idler, No. 33.

SCOOP, n. } Dut. Schoepe, schuppe, a shovel.
SCOOP, v. } Shoep-en, Ger. Schöpfen, to draw SCO'PPET, v. } out. The origin may be the
A. S. Scypp-an, to frame, form or fashion, to shape.

A scoop,—any thing, something formed (in contradistinction to a flat instrument or tool) to dig out with, to hollow, to excavate with.

To scoop,—to hollow; to excavate; to draw or take out in a scoop, to lade.

Liv. Never hope it.
'Tis as easie with a sieve to scoop the ocean,
As to tame Petruchio.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Woman's Prize, Act 1. sc. 2.

The savorie pulp they chew, and in the rinde
Still as they thirsted scoop the brimming stream.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

What do we with all our endeavours, but as that fond man, who wearies himself lading out the channel with a shallow dish, while the spring runs full and unchecked? Vain man! can he possibly hope, to scoppet it out so fast as it fills?—Bp. Hall. Ser. Ps. lx. 2.

—These
With weighty rains, and melted Alpine snows,
The mountain-cisterns fill, those ample stores
Of water, scoop'd among the hollow rocks.
Thomson. Autumn.

Onward, methinks, and diligently slow,
The firm connected bulwark seems to grow;
Spreads its long arms amidst the wat'ry roar,
Scoops out an empire, and usurps the shore.
Goldsmith. The Traveller.

Nor did I acquaint them with what I intended to do, but placed her towards the light, and passed a scoop-like instrument up.—Wiseman. Surgery, b. iii. c. 5.

SCOPE. It. Scopo; Lat. Scopus; Gr. Σκοπος, that which is looked at, viewed, aimed at; from σκοπεσθαι, to view, to observe.

That which is viewed or observed; the mark, aim, intention, design, purpose; the space or extent viewed; generally,—space, room, extent, enlargement.

If thou didst see upon what rack my tormented soul is set, little would you think I had any scope now to leap to any new change.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

Which when the prince beheld, a lothfull sight,
And that perforce, for want of lenger light,
He mote surceasse his suit, and lose the hope
Of his long labour; he gan fowly wyte
His wicked fortune that had turn'd aslope,
And curs'd Night that rest from him so goodly scope.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 4.

Luc. Why how nowe Claudio? whence comes this restraint.
Cla. From too much liberty, (my Lucio) liberty.
As surfet is the father of much fast,
So euery scope, by the immediate vse
Turns to restraint.
Shakespeare. Measure for Measure, Act i. sc. 3.

Ang. I did but smile till now,
Now, good my lord, giue me the scope of iustice;
My patience here is touch'd.
Id. Ib. Act v. sc. 1.

I think I could easily demonstrate that from Adam to Moses, from Moses to the prophets, from the prophets to Jesus Christ, the main scope and design of all divine revelation, hath been the gradual discovery of this great mystery of the mediation.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 2.

Dumb as a senator, and as a priest
A piece of mere church-furniture at best;
To live estrang'd from God his total scope,
And his end sure, without one glimpse of hope.
Cowper. Tirocinium.

SCOPPET. See SCOOP.

SCOPTICAL. Gr. Σκωπτικός, from σκοπτειν, irridere, cavillare, to scoff, to haunt. See SCOMM. Scoffing, taunting, deriding.

Another most ingenious and spritfull imitation of the life, and ridiculous humour of Ajax, I must needs note here, because it flies all his translators and interpreters; who take it merely for serious, when it is apparently scoptical and ridiculous, with which our author would delight his understanding reader; and mixe mirth with matter.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xvii. Comment.

And Hellen (in contempt of her too much observing men) bids her renounce heauen, and come liue with Paris till he make her his wife or seruant; scoptically or scornfully speaking it: which Villa, Emmanus, and all other interpreters (but these adverbium) haue vtterly mist.
Id. Ib. Pref.

And in the meane time shew you, that in this first and next verse, Homer [speaking scoptically] breakes open the fountaine of his ridiculous humor following: neuer by anie interpreter vnderstood, or touched at, being yet the most ingenious conceited person that any man can shew in any heroical poeme, or in any comick poet.
Id. Ib. b. ii. Comment.

SCORBUTE, n. } Fr. Scorbut, scorbutique; SCORBU'TICK, adj. } It. Scorbuto, scorbutico; SCORBU'TICK, n. } Low Lat. Scorbutus, the SCORBU'TICAL. } scurvy. Dut. Scheurbuick; SCORBU'TICALLY. } Ger. Scharboch; Sw. Skörbjug. Wachter thinks the Ger. Dut. and Sw. have sprung from the Lat. and that the Lat. may have been formed from the Dut. Scherpte, acrimonia; and he calls it a disease arising from acrimony of blood. But see SCURVY.

Another observation of this our author, is the scurvie or scorbute, whereunto they are much subject in navigations neere the line; the cause he ascribeth, the weakness of the stomach in immoderate heate; salt meats, specially fish, calmes and the sea-water.

Purchas. Pilgrimage, b. ix. c. 13. § 2.

I confess, that the scorbute did justly punish me for defaults in the best philosophy. My inward discomforts begot the disease.—Boyle. Works, vol. vi. p. 350.

It being moreover the height of the dry season, and my men growing scorbutick for want of refreshments, so that I had little incouragement to search further; I resolved to leave this coast.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1699.

A person about forty years of age, of a full and scorbutical body, by some accident broke her shin, and endeavoured the curing of it: but it daily growing more painful, and not to be endured, I was sent for, and observing the ulcer, proposed digestion, as the only way to remove the pain.

Wiseman. Surgery, b. ii. c. 4.

Thus in scorbutically-habited ill bodies, abounding with cacochymia, we frequently see these simple ulcers afflicted with sharp humours, which corrode them, and render them painful sordid ulcers.—Id. Ib.

Spoon-wort was there, scorbutics to supply.

Harte. Eulogius.

Mention hath already been made of sweet wort being given to such as were scorbutic.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 3.

SCORCH, v. } Skinner derives from the SCORCHING, n. } Fr. Escorcher; It. Scorticare; Lat. Excorticare, i. e. cortice exuere, because the skin, which is as it were the bark of the body, falls off when scorched. Lye has found two instances of scorched, ustus, (parched.) Serenius has no doubt that the old Goth. Skior, ignis, is the origin. Skinner's opinion seems rational. Or it may be from the A. S. Scyr-an, to scar, (qv.); and see SCALD. To scorch is—

To burn the outward part, the skin, the surface;
 to burn superficially or slightly; to parch, to dry with heat.

And eke Nero governed all the peoples, that the violent wind nothus skorclith, and baketh the brennyng sandes, by his drie heate, that is to saie, al the peoples in the southe.

Chaucer. Boecius, b. ii.

But such as once haue felt the skorching fire,
 Will seldome (efte) to play with flame desire.

Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

His tenants deliuered their evidences to their landlord, who did scantle well peruse them when he floong them all in the fire. The poore tenants espieing this subtil pranke to be verie vnfitting for a bishop, could not bridle their toongs, but brake out on a sudden: Thou an archbishop?
 Naie, thou art a scorchvillain.

Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 5.

Besides, it causeth it to seeme scorchted and full of knots, yea and to grow like a dwarfe or wreckling.

Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 22.

The heate whereof, and harmefull pestilence,
 So sore him noyd, that forst him to retire
 A little backward for his best defence,
 To save his body from the scorching fire.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

The excessive scorchings of this and the two following months (and not seldom the winters also,) do frequently indanger the untimely falling of blossom and fruit before their maturity.—Evelyn. Kalendarium. June.

— For oft these vallies shift
 Their green-embroider'd robe to fiery brown,
 And swift to green again, as scorching suns,
 Or streaming dews and torrent rains, prevail.

Thomson. Summer.

Some of the pieces which were then brought from its repositories, appeared to have been scorched with the fire which happened in the town-house soon after the bank was established.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 3.

SCORE, v. } Skinner resorts to the Lat.
SCORE, n. } Excorticare. (See SCORCH.) Tooke finds it in the A. S. Scyr-an, to shear, to cut, to divide, to separate.

Score,—for the number twenty,—our ancestors are supposed, that they might avoid the embarrassment of large numbers, when they had made twice ten notches, to have cut off the piece or talley (taglie) containing them, and afterwards to have counted the scores or pieces cut off, and reckoned by the number of separate pieces or by scores. See TOOKE.

Score, n.—an account or reckoning by divisions,
 marks or notches, cut in pieces of stick or wood.

Score, v.—to cut, to make an incision, to mark by a line cut; to set a mark upon, to charge or set it to the account.

In the vyf hondred ger of grace Seynt Austyn hyder com
 And four score ger and tuo, to prechy Cristendom.

R. Gloucester, p. 230.

For I wol pay you wel and redily
 Fro day to day, and if so be I faille,
 I am your wif, score it upon my taile,
 And I shal pay as sone as ever I may.

Chaucer. The Shipman's Tale, v. 13,344.

I wote not wel howe many score,
 Suche as I spake of nowe tofore Louers, that comen to beholde.—Gower. Con. A. b. viii.

Soone after in the stede of those three score and tenne, he chose other three score and tenne discyples as I before shewed you, whome he sent aboute to preache as he had sent his twelve apostles before.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1075.

And on his brest a bloodie crosse he bore,
 The deare remembrance of his dying Lord,
 For whose sweete sake that glorious badge he wore,
 And dead, as living ever, him ador'd:
 Upon his shield the like was also scor'd,
 For soveraine hope, which in his helpe he had.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

The mightie shield all scored full they view
 Of pictures faire, ranged in meet array.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xvii. s. 58.

1 Guard. Bear up, man,
 'Tis but a scratch.
Get. Scoring a man o'r the coxcomb
 Is but a scratch with you.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Prophetess, Act iv. sc. 5.

Thou hast most traterously corrupted the youth of the realme, in erecting a grammar schoole; and whereas before, our fore-fathers had no other bookes but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be vs'd, and contrary to the king, his crowne, and dignity, thou hast built a papermill.—Shakespeare. Hen. VI. Act iv. sc. 7.

The litle that I have growes dayly more Without my care, but only to attend it;
 My lambes doe every yeare increase their score,
 And my flockes father daily doth amend it.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 9.

Frank to the mansion-house now come,
 Rejoic'd to find himself at home;
 Neighbours around, and cousins went
 By scores, to pay their compliment.

Somerville. The Yeoman of Kent.

It very ill becomes this gentleman, when he has such large scores of his own, and while he bends under the weight of many insuperable objections, to grow so exceeding flip-pant, and above measure assuming, upon the strength only of two or three stale cavils, borrowed from ancient heresies.

Waterland. Works, vol. iv. p. 12.

The obligation to these ordinary performances is not grounded upon any peculiar respects, special qualifications, or singular actions of men, (which are contingent and variable,) but upon the indefectible score of common humanity.—Barrow, vol. ii. Ser. 21.

They have likewise a method of scoring them with a heated instrument, so as to give them the appearance of being painted in a variety of neat and elegant designs.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. v. c. 7.

SCORIOUS. Lat. Scoria; Gr. Σκωπια, from σκωπ, stercus, q. d. metalli stercus. See the quotation from Pliny.

The gross substance cast up from the pot or vessell and swimming aloft (whether it be the drosse comming of gold thus tried, by heat of the furnace, or any other metall) is named scoria.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiii. c. 4.

For by the fire they omit not onely many drossie and scorious parts, but whatsoever they had received from the earth or loadstone.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. ii. c. 2.

SCORN, v. } Dut. Schern; Fr. Escorner; SCORN, n. } It. Schernire; Sp. Escarneier; SCORNER. } It. Scorno, scornare, Menage SCORNING, n. } derives from schernir. The SCORNFUL. } Fr. Escorner, It. Scornare, SCORNFULLY. } mean—to strip off the horns,

(cornu); and, consequentially, to deface, to disgrace; and hence—

To strip, deprive, or divest—of grace or favour,
 of respect or honour; to disrespect, to dishonour, to disdain; to contemn; to treat disdainfully or contemptuously.

" Treus thou askes a throwe, for tuo gere or thre,
 " Tho men, that the knowe, say thou skornes me.

R. Brunne, p. 195.

The scpture scorned me.—Piers Plouhman, p. 192.

And aftir that they hadden scorned him thei unclothiden him of the mantel.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 27.

The damsel is not deed but slepith, and thei scorneden him.—Id. Mark, c. 5.

The maiden is not dead, but slepeth. And they laughte him to scorne.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

His felaw that lay by his beddes side,
 Gan for to laugh, and scorned him ful faste.

Chaucer. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, 15,092.

So loveth she this hendy Nicholas,
 That Absalon may blow the buckes horne:
 He ne had for his labour but a score.

Id. The Miller's Tale, v. 3388.

Afterward speke we of scorning, which is a wicked sinne, and namely, whan he scorneth a man for his good werkes:
 for certes, swiche scorners faren like the foule tode, may not endure to smell the swete savour of the vine, whan it flou-risheth.—Id. The Persones Tale.

But such a scornefull chere wherewith she him rewarded
 Was neuer sene I trow the like to such as well deserued.

Surrey. Of a Ladie that refused to dance with him.

— Our poet ever writ
 Language so good, mixt with such sprightly wit,
 He made the theatre so sovereign
 With his rare scenes, he scorn'd this crouching vein.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Nice Valour, Prol.

If wrathfull wight;—then fowle rebuke and shame
 Be theirs that have so cruell thee forlorne!
 But, if through inward griefe, or wilfull scorne
 Of life, it be; then better doe advise.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 8.

To love myself I learned had in schoole.
 Thus I triumphed long in lovers paine,
 And, sitting carelesse on the scorners stoole,
 Did laugh at those that did lament and plaine!
 But all is now repayd with interest againe.

Id. Ib. b. vi. c. 8.

He declareth that when the faithfull are so ful, that they can no more endure the oppressions, and scornings of the wicked, there is alway helpe aboue, if with hungry desires they call for it.—Bible, 1583. Psalm cxxiii. Note b.

— The folly of man

Let in these wasteful furies, who impute
 Folly to mee, so doth the prince of hell
 And his adherents, that with so much ease
 I suffer them to enter and possess
 A place so heav'nly, and conniving seem
 To gratifie my scorneful enemies.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

The goodly horse of hot and fiery strain,
 In his high courage hardly brook'd his food,
 That ditch or mound not lately could contain,
 On the firm ground so scornfully that stood Crest-fall'n hangs down his hardly manag'd head.

Drayton. Moses his Birth & Miracles, b. ii.

It was this that raised his spirits, and made him [Job] stand his ground against the opposition of his friends, and the scorn of his enemies.—Stillingfleet, vol. ii. Ser. 9.

All but themselves they looked on with a very scornful piety, and thought that God hated them because they did.

Id. vol. i. Ser. 8.

Let us possess our souls in patience and peace; and go on in the plain paths of godliness and honesty, without turning to the right, or to the left, for whatever men scornfully
 witty can say of us, or to us.—Atterbury, vol. i. Ser. 5.

Or tell me, if you can, what pow'r maintains
 A Briton's scorn of arbitrary chains;
 That were a theme might animate the dead,
 And move the lips of poets cast in lead.

Cowper. Table Talk.

Every instance, greater or less, of wilfully disregarding truth, instead of seeking and embracing it, argues a proportionable depravity of heart; whether the dislike be manifested in a studious opposition to it, or an indolent scorn of it.—Secker. Works, vol. i. Ser. 1.

The frontispiece to the Rules of Holy Dying cannot but excite mirth even in those, who do not habitually sit in the seat of the scorner.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 44.

SCORPION. Fr. Scorpione; It. Scorpiòne; Sp. Escorpion; Lat. Scorpio; Gr. Σκorpion. Of uncertain etymology. Some suggest the Gr.
Σκορπιε-ειν, to scatter, to cast. Applied (met.) from the sting of the animal to—
 A severe lash or scourge.

And lo y have gown to you power to trede on serpentis and scorpiouns, and on al the vertu of the enemy: and no thing schal anoye you.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 10.

Beholde I geue unto you power to trede on serpentis, and scorpions, and ouer all maner power of ye enemye: and nothyng shal hurt you.—Bible, 1551. Id.

Or if he axe an eg: whether he schal areche him a scorpioun?—Wiclif. Luk, c. 11.

Or yf he aske an egge: wyll he offer him a scorpion?
Bible, 1551. Id.

The land scorpions doe lay certayne little worms or grubs in manner of eggs; and when they have so done, perish likewise for their labour, as the spider.

Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 25.

I speak my thoughts freely, though I know the editors of newspapers have vengeance in their own hands, and are able to repel their assailants, with a lash of scorpions.

Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 20.

SCORSE, v. } Grose says,—Scorse or scoace, SCORSE, n. } in the Exmore dialect, is to exchange: in Scotch, Cose or coss has the same signification. Lye thinks scorse is a corrupt writing of cose, which he derives from kiosa, eligere, to cheese or choose. The A. S. Ceos-an, had before been given by the Gloss. to G. Douglas, and this reason added,—that an exchange is a mutual or alternate election or choosing, (or taking, for that is the literal meaning.) See CHOOSE.

To exchange, to barter, to deal.

A horse-courser, or corser, or, (as Lye thinks,) a horse-coser, is—a horse-dealer.

But Paridell sore brused with the blow
Could not arise, the counterchange to scorse;
Till that young squyre him reared from below;
Then drew he his bright sword, and gan about him throw.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 9.

But in this song of mine, he seriously that reads,
Shall find, ere I have done, the Briton (so extoll'd, Whose height each mountaine strives so vainly to uphold) Match'd with as valiant men, and of as clean a might,
As skilful to command, and as inur'd to fight.
Who, when their fortune will'd that after they should scorse
Blows with the big-bon'd Dane, exchanging force by force.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 12.

Wasp. Will you scourse with him? you are in Smithfield, you may fit yourself with a fine easy going street-nag, for your saddle, again Michaelmas term, do.

B. Jonson. Bartholomew Fair, Act iii. sc. 1.

And therein sat an old old man, halfe blind,
And all decrepit in his feeble corse,
Yet lively vigour rested in his mind,
And recompent them with a better scorse:
Weake body well is chang'd for mind's redoubled force.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

SCORSED. That is, coursed, chased; from It. Scorso, past part. of scorere, (currere,) to run.

Him first from court he to the citties coursed,
And from the citties to the townes him prest,
And from the townes into the countrie forsed,
And from the country back to private farmes he scorsed.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 9.

SCOT. Fr. Escot, écot; It. Scotto; Sp. Escote. Tooke derives from the A. S. Scyt-an, to throw, to cast.

Scot or shot,—is a cast, so much cast or thrown down, (sc.) as a share of the reckoning of the whole sum to be paid. See Escot, and SHOT.

But yet or we entre I shall counsell that we ryde to the frôte of our enemyes, for I thinke there be some among theym that to auance themselves, or to seke for some forage, wold come abrode in the mornyng, we may fortune to mete with suche that shall pay for our scotte.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 207.

Twas time to counterfet, or that hotte termagant Scot, had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit?

Shakespeare. Henry IV. Act v. sc. 4.

He cannot scape yet scotfree vncontroll'd.
Mirroure for Magistrates, p. 159.

SCOTCH. In Macbeth, the first folio reads scorch'd; in the other examples, scotched, and scotches. In the Scottish, they have to scutch, which Jamieson says, means—to beat, to drub; in scutching lint, he adds, the flax is beat with a switch, and he thinks scutch and switch may be radically the same. Our older lexicographers have not the word. To lash—is to throw or cast out, to strike with any thing thrown out, to cut with it.

To scotch—may have a similar meaning; from A. S. Scyt-an, to shoot or throw out; consequently, to strike,—

To cut, to give or make a cut, or incision.

Thou sycophant, unsheath thy shamefull blade,
Plucke out thy bloudie fawchon (dastard thou)
Wherewith thou hast many a skirmish made
And scotcht the braynes of many a learned brow.
Turberville. To the Rayling Route of Sycophants.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it.
Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act iii. sc. 2.

Scar. Wee'll beat 'em into bench-holes; I have yet Room for six scotches more.

Id. Antony & Cleopatra, Act iv. sc. 8.

He was too hard for him directly, to say the troth on't before Corioles, he scotcht him, and notcht him like a Carbinado.—Id. Coriolanus, Act iv. sc. 5.

Then give him [the eel] three or four scotches with a knife; and then put into his belly and those scotches—sweet herbs.—Walton. Angler, pt. i. c. 13.

A cook perhaps has mighty things profess'd,
Then sent up but two dishes nicely dress'd;
What signify Scotcht-collops to a feast.
King. The Art of Cookery.

SCOTOMY. It. Scotomia; Lat. Scotoma; Gr. σκοτωμα, from σκοτος, darkness, dimness; generally applied to—

The dimness accompanying a dizziness.

Mos. O, sir, 'tis past the scotomy; he now Hath lost his feeling, and hath left to snort.
B. Jonson. The Fox, Act i. sc. 1.

I have got the scotomy in my head already,
The whimsy: you all turn round—do not you dance, gallants?—Massinger. The Old Law, Act iii. sc. 2.

SCOUNDREL. The Fr. Maraude, a scoundrel; Maraudaille, scoundrelism, (Cotgrave.) Skinner says, either from the Ger. and Dut. Schande, ignominy, q.d. an ignominious or infamous man; or from the It. Scandaruolo, from scondere (abscondere), to hide; a hider, and thus, a rogue, (qv.) The instances of the usage of this word are so modern, that it seems difficult to connect it with an Anglo-Saxon origin; otherwise, the first etymology of Skinner seems plausible. Ger. and Dut. Schande; A. S. Scande; from scunian, ascunian, to shun; to avoid, to fly from, to detest, to eschew, (Somner.) Scoundrel would then mean—

One shunned; because, infamous; and hence—An infamous fellow; a base villain, or rascal.

These are the goddesses enroll'd
In Curll's collection, new and old,
Whose scoundrel fathers would no know'em,
If they should meet them in a poem.—Swift. To Stella.

Go! if your ancient, but ignoble blood
Has crept through scoundrels ever since the flood,
Go! and pretend your family is young;
Nor own your fathers have been fools so long.
Pope. Essay on Man, Ep. 4.

And, as to the thief, he appeared to be a hardened scoundrel, I punished him more severely than I had ever done any one culprit before.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 6.

He [Concannon by name] married there an opulent widow, and died very rich, a few years ago here in England: but of so scoundrel a temper, that he avoided ever coming into my sight.—Warburton, Let. 93.

SCOUR, v. } Goth. Scauron; Ger. Scheu; SCOURER, } ren; Dut. Shueren; Sw. Skura.
SCOURING, n. } Fr. Escurer; It. Scurare, fri-care, defricare, mundare, purgare fricando, to rub, to cleanse, to clear off foulness by rubbing. The A. S. Scyr-an, tondere, to shear; radere, to clear away by scraping or rubbing, seems to be the original word.

To clear off or away (by rubbing); to cleanse, to purify, to purge.

To clear away forcibly by rapid motion; to move rapidly; to run, to range swiftly.

In these latter applications the It. Scorrere (Lat. Currere), to run, to over-run, is considered by Thomson to be the root. See SCUR, SCURRY.

Her hair was as yellowe of hewe
As any bason scoured newe.—Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

This Edgar, amôge other of his polytyke dedes, vsed, in the somer tyme, to scoure the see with certeyne shippes of warre, and agayne the wynter he prouided to laye the sayd shippes in sure hauyns.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 193.

Those doctours knew of none authoritie that one byshop should haue aboute another, neither thought or once dreamed that euer any such should be, or of any such whispering or of pardons, or scouring of purgatory, as they haue fayned.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 176.

[There] being but newe scourers of olde heresie.
Martin. Marr. of Priests, 1554.

For they themselves were evill groomes, they sayd,
Unwont with heards to watch, or pasture sheepe,
But to forray the land, or scoure the deepe.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 11.

There is a kind of poppies much sought after for blaunching and bleaching of linnen cloths; for being skoured therewith, it is wonderfull how white and pure they will looke.—Holland. Plinie, b. xix. c. 1.

They dwelt in the furthest part of Italy, that bordereth upon the great Alpes, and the row of Alpes, whereof the foot joyneth to the Thuscan sea, and pointeth towards Afric, and are mingled with the Gauls and Spaniards, neighbours unto the sea coast; who scouring all the Meditteranian sea at that time, unto the straight of Hercules pillar, did with their little light pinnaces of pirates, let all the traffick and intercourse of merchandize.—North. Plutarch, p. 207.

It hath come to passe, that some apothecaries, upon stamping of coloquintida, have been put into a great skouring, by the vapour only.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 921.

Thus outlaws open villany maintain,
They steal not, but in squadrons scour the plain.
Dryden. The Medal.

Part scour the rusty shields with seam, and part
New grind the blunted ax, and point the dart.
Id. Virgil. Aeneis, b. vii.

Will Parker was an honest poor man (as a schismatical writer tells you) and a scourer or calender of worsteds in Norwich.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. i.

He knew the Arabs scour'd the country far,
Yet never deem'd their insolence would dare
To storm his trenches with offensive war.
Hoole. Jerusalem Delivered, b. ix.

SCOURGE, n. } Fr. Escourgée, a scourge SCOURGE, v. } or whip; It. Scoreggiare; SCOURGER, } from Corium, corigia, coreg- SCOURGING, n. } gia, scoreggia, (Menage.)
Lat. Scutica; It. Scorrizza, quo quis excoriatur, aut excorrigitur, ut ita dicam, (Martinius.) The Fr. Escourgée, and the Lat. Corrigia, a thong, a latchet.

A thong, a lash, a whip (sc. of strips of leather, cords, &c.), a chastisement, a punishment, an affliction.

Hii nome hym & scourged hym, & suththe naked hym bounde
To a tre.—R. Gloucester, p. 263.

Therefore Pilat took thanne Iesus and scourgide.
Wiclif. Jon, c. 19.

Then Pylate toke Iesus and scourged hym.
Bible, 1551. Id.

And whanne he hadde maad as it were a scourge of smale cordis, he droof out alle of the temple, & oxon & sheep.
Wiclif. Jon, c. 2.

And he made a scourge of small cordes, and draue the al out of the temple, with the shepe and oxen.—Bible, 1551. Id.

And suffreth us, as for our exercise,
With sharpe scourges of adversitee
Ful often to be bete in sondry wise.
Chaucer. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8969.

Plato had a cause his seruante to scourge, and yet cleped he his neighbour, to performe the doing, himself would not, lest wrath had made him a maistred, and so might he haue laid on to moche.—Id. The Testament of Loue.

My Ratclif, when thy retchlesse youth offendes, Receue thy scourge by others chastisement.
Surrey. Exhortacion to learne, &c.

Other tasted of mockynges and scourginges, more ouer of bondes and prysonment.—Bible, 1551. Hebrues, c. 11.

1 Bish. Put on his spurs, and girt him with the sword,
The scourge of infidels, and tipes of speed.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Knight of Malta, Act iv. sc. 1.

Let tyrants govern with an iron rod,
Oppress, destroy, and be the scourge of God.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. ii.

The sect of the scourgers (i. e. flagellants) broached several capital errors.—Tyndall. Rapin's Hist. of England.

These are occasions, wherein we ought to kiss the rod, which scourges us, and reverence that authority, which we think has been unjustly exercised against us.

Bolingbroke. Final Answer to Remarks.

Nor can despotism itself do any great matter without aid of free will: for rewards, honours, and encouragements, those engines of free agency, contribute more to the valour of armies, than any scourges of punishment, or peremptory edicts concluding. For such is our Will.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 26.

SCOUT, n. } Fr. Escoute, a spie, eaves drop-Scout, v. } per, prying companion: also a scout, scout-watch, or sentinel: the discoverer, or forerunner of an army, (Cotgrave.) Skinner derives from Escouter (auscultare,) to listen.
 Junius gives the Dut. Schout, speculatores, from Schouwen, speculari, and derives from the Greek of the Later Ages Σκουλαται, auscultatores, listeners. Tooke says,—a scout means (subaud.
 some one, any one) sent out, (used in old Eng. as equivalent to,—thrown, or cast; and is past part.
 of Scyt-an, to throw, to cast forth, to throw out.)

One sent out before an army, to collect intelligence by any means.

To scout,—to throw or cast away; to reject;
 to act as a scout, or as one sent out as a spy; to go out or about as a spy.

To scout, (met.)—to reject, to repel or repulse.

Such was his hap to warre both night and daye,
 To watche and warde at every time and tyde,
 Though foes were farre yet skouted he alwaye.
Gascoigne. Dan Bartholomew of Batha.

Thus cōtynually they were faine to make watche by their constables in ye felde, and high wayes about ye courte, and to sende out scout watches a myle of, to se euer if any suche people were commyng to them warde, as they were enfourmed of, to the entent that if theyr scout watche hard any noyse, or mouyng of people drawyng to the cite warde, than incontinent they shulde gyue them knowledge.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 16.

—The best sort of those,
 That woo thy mother, watchfull scouts addresse
 Both in the streights of th' Ithacensian seas,
 And dusty Samos.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xv.

Mount. What were those past by?

Roc. Some scout of soldiers, I think.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Knight of Malta, Act iv. sc. 2.

Whereas his posting scouts, king Henry's power descry'd, Tow'rds whom with speedy march, this valiant general
 hy'd.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 22.

Jun. Take more men,
 And scout him round.

Beaum. & Fletch. Bonduca, Act iv. sc. 2.

See tools of arbitrary sway,
 And priests, like locusts, scout away
 Before the western wind.—Walsh. Imitation of Horace.

About that time he [Michael Hudson] being esteemed an understanding and sober person and of great fidelity, was made scoutmaster-general to the army in the north parts of England.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. ii.

One Sir Wm. Neale, Knight, had been scout-master general to K. Chas. I. and a stout proper man and a good soldier.—Id. Ib.

What causes move us, knowing as we must,
 That these menageries all fail their trust,
 To send our sons to scout and scamper there,
 While colts and puppies cost us so much care?
Cowper. Tirocinium.

When lo! so will'd her fate, a numerous band
 Of Christian scouts were ambush'd near at hand, Dispatch'd to impede the passage, o'er the plain,
 Of sheep and oxen to the pagan train.
Hooke. Jerusalem Delivered, b. iv.

SCOWL, n. } A. S. Sceol-eag; Ger. Shæl, Scowl, v. } shiel. Wachter derives from the
 Gr. Ελ-ειν, vertere, contorquere, to turn, to twist.
 Tooke thinks scowl is the past part. of Scyllan, to separate: that Sceol-eag are separated eyes, or eyes looking different ways: and he produces this very early usage—"Than scripture scorned me and a skile loked," (Vision of Piers Plouhman,
 p. 53.)

A scowl, (of the eyes)—is a look or cast of the eyes (with contracted brows) indifferently, sideways or straightforwards: a frowning look of anger or discontent. To scowl, formed upon the noun, is,—

To look frowningly, with anger or discontent, gloom or sullenness.

Miso having now her authority increased, came with scowling eyes to deliver a slaving good morrow to the two ladies.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

But with bent louting brows, as she would threat,
 She scould, and frownd with froward countenance;
 Unworthy of faire ladies comely governaunce.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 2.

Euen so, or with much more contempt, men's eyes
 Did scowle on Richard.—Shakes. Rich. II. Act v. sc. 2.

As when from mountain tops the dusky clouds
 Ascending, while the north wind sleeps, o'respread
 Heav'n's cheerful face, the lowering element
 Scowls o're the dark'ned lantskip snow, or shoure.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

I've seen the morning's lovely ray
 Hover o'er the new-born day,
 With rosy wings so richly bright,
 As if he scorn'd to think of night,
 When a ruddy storm, whose scowl
 Made heaven's radiant face look foul,
 Call'd for an untimely night
 To blot the newly-blossom'd light.
Crashaw. The Delights of the Muses.

—In rueful gaze
 The cattle stand, and on the scowling heavens
 Cast a deploring eye, by man forsook,
 Who to the crowded cottage hies him fast,
 Or seeks the shelter of the downward cave.
Thomson. Summer.

Each letter'd, grave, pedantic dunce
 Wakes from his lethargy at once,
 Shrugs, shakes his head, and rubs his eyes,
 And, being dull, looks wondrous wise,
 With solemn phiz, and critic scowl.
Lloyd. To William Hogarth, Esq.

Lower'd the grim morn, in murky dies,
 Damp mists involv'd the scowling skies,
 And dimm'd the struggling day.—Warton. The Suicide.

SCRA'BBLE. Dut. Schraepen, schrabben, schraeffen, schraeffeten,

To scrape,—of which word, (scrape,) scrabble is the diminutive, with the mere change of p into b.

And he changed his behaiour before them, and fained him selfe mad in their hands, and scrabbled on the doores of the gate, and let his spettel fall downe vpon his beard.
Bible. 1 Sam. xxi. 13.

SCRAG, n. } Scrag appears to be formed SCRA'GGED. } from crag; and in G. Douglas, SCRA'GGY. } crabs are called scrabbis. Lye has Hrac-od, laceratus, ragged; the common prefix ge- forms geh-rac-od, whence geh-rag, grag, crag,—a ragged or broken mass.

Any thing ragged, cleft, cracked or broken: any thing bare, or meagre, spare or lean.

I believe their honest and ingenuous natures coming to the universities to store themselves with good and solid learning, and there unfortunately fed with nothing else but the scrugged and thorny lectures of monkish and miserable sophistry, was sent home again with such a scholastical bur in their throats, as hath stopp'd and hinder'd all true and generous philosophy from entering.

Milton. The Reason of Church Government, b. ii.

—Nor untrembling canst thou see,
 How from a scraggy rock, whose prominence
 Half overshades the ocean.
Philip. Cider, b. i.

The Bashee Island hath one steep scraggy hill, but Goat Island is all flat and very even.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1687.

Such a constitution is easily known by the outward appearances of the body being lean, warm, hairy, scraggy, dry, without a disease, with hard and firm muscles.
Arbuthnot. Nature of Aliments, c. 6.

SCRA'LLING. Perhaps scrabbling or scrambling.

Let him but attempt to touch the eggs, they will shew like young scrawling pullets without feather or downe.
Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 4.

SCRA'MBLE, v. } Scramble, certatim arri-SCRA'MBLE, n. } pere,—either from the SCRA'MBLER. } Dut. Krabbelen, to tear with the nails, or from screep-an; Dut. Schreffen, radere, scalpere, q. d. corradere, to scrape together, (Skinner.) In the North it is called a scraffle.

 In the Lancashire dialect, a striving to catch things on the hands and knees on the floor is called a scramble, scrabble, or scrattle. Generally,—

To strive or struggle, disorderly, indiscrimi-nately; to seize, or get possession of all or any portion of a common prize.

The cowardly wretch fell down, crying for succour, and,
scrambling through the legs of them that were about him.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Dor. I thank ye, dear friend,
 I know she loves him.
Alice. Yes, and will not lose him,
 Unless he leap into the moon, believe that,
 And then she'll scramble too.
Beaum. & Fletch. Mons. Thomas, Act ii. sc. 1.

I love a souldier, and can lead him on,
 And if he fight well, I dare make him drunk;
 This is my vertue, and if this will do,
 I'll scramble yet amongst 'em.—Id. Captain, Act ii. sc. 1.

1684

With him, that power his pride had lov'd so well,
 His monstrous universal empire, fell:
 No heir, no just successor left behind,
 Eternal wars he to his friends assign'd,
 To tear the world, and scramble for mankind.
Rowe. Lucan's Pharsalia, b. x.

But because the desire of money is constantly, almost every where the same, its vent varies very little, but as its greater scarcity enhances its price, and increases the scramble:
 there being nothing else that does easily supply the want of it.—Locke. Of Lowering of Interest.

All the little scramblers after fame fall upon him.
Addison.

To the undiscerning eye of giddy ambition it naturally presents itself, amidst the confused scramble of politics and war, as a very dazzling object to fight for.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 7.

SCRA'NNEL. Scrannil, a meagre or lean person, (Gloss. of Lanc. Words.) The word seems connected with, if not the same as cranny, a small chink or fissure: and applied by Milton to pipes, as if not sound or air-tight. And hence,— Harsh, shrill, shrieking; sharp, meagre, spare.

"And when they list, their lean and flashy songs Grate on their scrannel pipes of wretched straw."
Milton. Lycidas.

Unlike to living sounds it came,
 Unmix'd, unmelodis'd with breath;
 But, grinding through some scrannel frame,
 Creak'd from the bony lungs of death.
Langhorne. Fables of Flora, Fab. 11.

SCRAP, or } A scrap (of food) quod a cibo SCRAPE. } abrasum. Skinner,—the past part. of the A. S. Screop-an, any thing, something scraped off, (Tooke.)
 A small, a minute portion.

A poore man shall as soone breake his necke as his fast with them, but of the scraps and wyth the dogges, when dinner is done.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 134.

He drinks water, and lives on wort leaves, pulse, like a hogge, or scrapes like a dogge.
Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 157.

But of a little remnant, got by fraud,
 (For all ill turns he lov'd, all good detested, and believ'd no God)
 Thrice in a week he chang'd a hoarded groat,
 With which of beggars' scraps he bought.
Otway. Complaint of his Muse.

There are no tame animals here [Botany Bay] except dogs, and of these we saw but two or three, which frequently came about the tents, to pick up the scraps and bones that happened to lie scattered near them.
Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 5.

SCRAPE, v. } A. S. Screop-an; Dut. Schrab-
SCRAPE, n. } ben, schrapen; Ger. Schrappen; SCRA'PER, n. } Sw. Skrapa, radere, corradere, SCRA'PING, n. } scalpere; to rase, to scrub.
SCRA'PINGLY. } (qv.)

To draw one thing (usually, something edged, an edged tool or instrument) over the surface in contact with the surface of another thing or substance, (to rub;) to draw or get together by scraps, by bits or small portions, by parsimonious earnings or savings. Scrape, n. (met.)

A state of difficulty; generally, the effect of heedlessness or mischievousness.

And scrapid the dorr welplich, and wynyd wyth his mowith
 After a doggis lyden, as ner as he couith.
The Pardonere & Tapstre.

And then shall he dooe therein as did a lyke learned priest, that through out al the gospels scraped out diabolus and wrote Jesus Christus, because he thought the deuils name was not mete to stande in so good a place.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 421.

And how soon einig may be turned into ewig, not with scrape of knife, but with the least dash of a pen, so that it shall neuer be perceived, a man that will proue may easely see.—Ascham. Discourse of Germany.

The abbot of St. Albans sent the book so disfigured with scrappings and blottings out, with other such writings as there were found, unto the king.
State Trials. Hen. V. an. 1413.

Thereafter all that mucky pelfe he tooke,
 The spoile of peoples evil gotten good,
 The which her sire had scrap't by hooke and crooke,
 And burning all to ashes pour'd it down the brooke.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 2.

The same experience hath taught, that for old olive trees (overgrowne with a kind of mossie skurfe) it is passing good, ech other yeare to scrape and claw them well.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 18.

Yet this inestimable pearly, wil all
Our dunghill chanticheres, but obvious call;
Each moderne scraper, this gem scratching by;
His oate preferring far.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxiv.

Unblest with his ill-gotten store,
Th' insatiate youth still craves for more;
To counsel deaf, t' examples blind,
Scrapes up whatever he can find.

Somerville. The Bald Batchelor.

Having laid a pretty quantity of these scrapings together,
I found, as I looked for, that the heap they composed was white.—Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 721.

That live scrapingly and uncharitably, and uselessly to the world, all their lives long, and then when they come to die, think to atone for their sins and neglects of this kind by shewing some extraordinary bounty to the poor, or devoting some part of their estates to public or pious uses?
Sharp, vol. i. Ser. 3.

To arrive at this surprising expedition, this musical legerdmain, it is, indeed, necessary to do little else than scrape and pipe.—Knox, Ess. 70.

The too eager pursuit of this his old enemy through thick and thin has led him into many of these scrapes.
Waburton. Divine Legation, b. ii.

SCRAT, i. e. Scratch, (qv.)

Ambitious mind, a world of wealth would haue,
So scrats, and scrapes, for scorfe and scornie drosse.
Mirrour for Magistrates, p. 506.

It is an ordinary thing for women in such cases to scrat
the faces, slit the noses of such as they suspect.
Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 610.

SCRAT, n. A. S. Scritta, hermaphroditus; because such being supposed to have a small scrat
or scratch, or fissure.

At the same time word was brought out of Vmbria, that there was an hermaphrodite or skrat found, almost twelve years old.—Holland. Liuy, p. 1036.

SCRATCH, v. } Dut. Krassen, kratsen, or SCRATCH, n. } kratsen; Ger. Kreetzen; SCRATCHING, n. } Fr. Grater; It. Grattare.
SCRATCHINGLY. } Chaucer writes—"cratching of cheeks." See CRATCH.

To make narrow or lineal separations of the surface, by drawing a rough or hard substance over it; to tear the surface, (sc. with the nails, with any thing pointed:) to draw irregular lines;
to write irregularly, badly.

The which kind of pleasure, if any man take for his felicity, that man must needs grant that then he shall be in most felicity, if he live that life which is led in continual hunger, thirst, itching, eating, drinking, scratching, and rubbing.—Sir T. More. Utopia, b. ii. c. 7.

Himself, which methinks is strange, shewing at one instant both steadiness and nimbleness; sometimes making him turn close to the ground, like a cat, when scratchingly
she wheels about after a mouse.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

"How can I tell, but that his talants may Yet scratch my sonne, or rend his tender hand?"
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 12.

Tho. 'Tis most necessary,
Hang up your julips and your Portugal possets,
Your barley broths, and sorrel saps, they are mangy,
And breed the scratches only.

Beaum. & Fletcher. Monsieur Thomas, Act iii. sc. 1.

Can we not leave this worme? or will we not?
Is that the truer excuse? or have we got
In this, and like, an itch of vanitie,
That scratching now's our best felicitie?

B. Jonson. Epistle to a Friend.

Thou'lt ha' vapours i' thy leg again presently; pray thee go in, it may turn to the scratches else.

Id. Bartholomew Fair.

Thou hast but done what boys or women can;
Such hands may wound, but not incense a man.
Nor boast the scratch thy feeble arrow gave,
A coward's weapon never hurts the brave.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xi.

Black soot, or yellow walnut, shall disgrace
This little red and white of Emma's face.
These nails with scratches shall deform my breast,
Lest by my look or colour be express'd
The mark of aught high-born, or ever better dress'd.

Prior. Henry & Emma.

No skill in swordmanship, however just,
Can be secure against a madman's thrust;
And even virtue, so unfairly match'd,
Although immortal, may be prick'd or scratch'd.

Cowper. Charity.

If it were not so common among us we should be astonished to think how a man, by looking upon a few scratches upon paper, according to the shapes in which they are drawn shall come to the knowledge of what his senses and his experience could not have informed him.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. ii. c. 21.

SCRAW. The quotation explains the Irish usage of the word.

Neither should that odious custom be allowed of cutting scraws (as they call them) which is flaying off the green surface of the ground to cover their cabins, or make up their ditches.—Swift. Drapier's Letters, Let. 7.

SCRAWL, v. } Contracted (says Skinner)
SCRAWL, n. } from scrabble.

To scrape, or scratch, (sc.) ill formed letters.

Beware of Latin authors all!
Nor think your verses sterling,
Though with a golden pen you scrawl,
And scribble in a Berlin.

Swift.

But as the name of every plant and flower
(So common that each peasant knows its power)
Physicians in mysterious cant express,
T' amuse the patient, and enhance their fees;
So from the letters of our native tongue,
Put in Greek scrawls, a mystery too is sprung.

Tickell. The Horn-Book.

In sable scrawls I Nero's name perus'd,
And Herod's, with a sanguine stain suffus'd.
Harte. The Vision of Death.

SCREEK, or } Also written To shriek, (qv.)
SCREECH, v. } A screech or shriek, is—the SCREEK, n. } cry of terror, or passion; per-SCHREECH. } haps it may be called, sharper and harsher than a scream; but, in human beings especially, scarcely to be distinguished from it.
In Lancashire they use reak, and also ream.

But scorning all these kinds
I would become a cat,
To combat with the creeping mouse
and scratch the screeching rat.—Turberville. The Louer.

The little babe did loudly srike and squall,
And all the woods with piteous plaints did fill.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 4.

Let screeching owls nest in your razed roofs.
Bp. Hall, b. i. Sat. 9.

It keepeth them from starting or skrieking in their sleep for feare, and allaieth the paine which they feelee in toothing.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxviii. c. 19.

Under his cave the buzzing screech-owl sings,
Beating the windows with her fatal wings.
Dryden. The Barons' Wars, b. v.

The birds obscene, that nightly flock'd to taste,
With hollow screeches fled the dire repast;
And ravenous dogs, allur'd by scented blood,
And starving wolves ran howling to the wood.
Pope. Thebais of Statius, b. i.

Others peep forth into the light, as it were only to see it;
and having, by a skreek or two, given testimony to the misery of this life, presently die and vanish.

Bp. Bull, vol. iii. Ser. 1.

The owl at Freedom's window scream'd,
The screech-owl, prophet dire, whose breath
Brings sickness, and whose note is death.
Churchill. The Duellist, b. i.

As soon as learning began to dawn, toward the beginning of the sixteenth century, these birds of night were forced to fly from day, though they screeched and clapped their wings for a while.

Bolingbroke. Ess. Authority in Matters of Religion.

SCREAM, v. } In Lancashire—to Ream, (see SCREAM, n. } RUMBLE,) from A. S. Hræman, plorare, clamare, ejulare, to weep, to cry, to weep with crying and bewailing, (Somner.) In Sw.
Skreema, is—terrefacere; in Dut. Schroom, horror;
schroomen, horrere, horrescere, (Ihre and Kilian.)

Scream is especially applied—to the cry of terror uttered by females; of children in pain or passion;—though not confined to these.

Where we lay, our chimneys were blowne downe,
And (as they say) lamentings heard i' th' ayre;
Strange schreemes of death.

Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act ii. sc. 3.

Macb. I have done the deed:
Didst thou not heare a noyse?
Lady. I heard the owl schreame, and the crickets cry.
Did not you speake?

Id. Id. Act ii. sc. 2.

For soon a whirlwind rose around,
And from afar he heard a screaming sound,
As of a dame distress'd, who cry'd for aid,
And fill'd with loud laments the secret shade.
Dryden. Theodore & Honoria.

From trembling tombs the ghosts of greatness rise,
And o'er their bodies hang with wistful eyes;
Or discontented stalk and mix their howls
With howling wolves, their screams with screaming owls.
Savage. The Wanderer, c. 4.

The famish'd eagle screams, and passes by.
Gray. The Bard.

SCREEN, v. } Fr. Ecran, escrene, écrene; SCREEN, or } Low Lat. Screona, screuna. In SKREEN, n. } some places,—the holes or caverns dug in the earth, and covered with heaps of dirt (of which Tacitus speaks as usual among the ancient Germans, Ger. c. 16,) are at this day called Escrenes. See Du Cange, Voss. (de Vit.
lib. ii. c. 17,) and Menage. The editor of Menage derives from the Ger. Schrein, arca; and this (Wachter says) is—the Low Lat. Screona, also from scrinium. (See SHRINE.) Skinner thinks—from Ger. Schirmen, tegere, protegere, to cover, to protect, to defend.

A screen is—any thing that covers, hides, conceals, protects.

He brought our Saviour to the western side
Of that high mountain, whence he might behold
Another plain, long but in breadth not wide,
Wash'd by the southern sea, and on the north
To equal length back'd with a ridge of hills
That screen'd the fruits of th' earth and seats of men
From cold Septentrion blasts.

Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

There, as they entred at the scriene, they saw
Some one, whose tongue was for his trespasses vyle
Nayld to a post, adjudged so by law.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 9.

The whiles the prince hard preased in betweene,
And entraunce wonne: streight th' other fled away,
And ran into the hall, where he did weene
Himselfe to save; but he there slew him at the skreene.
Id. Id. c. 11.

The trees (as screenlike greatnesse) shades his raye,
As it should shine on none but such as they.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals b. ii. s. 5.

A little within the shoar where we anchored was a town of negroes, natives of this coast. It was skreen'd from our sight by a large grove of trees that grew between them and the shoar.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1683.

Beneath a table, trembling with dismay,
Couch'd close to earth, unhappy Medon lay,
Wrapp'd in a new-slain ox's ample hide:
Swift at the word he cast his screen aside.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxii.

He therefore timely warn'd himself supplies
Her want of care, screening and keeping warm
The plenteous bloom, that no rough blast may sweep
His garlands from the boughs.—Cowper. Task, b. iii.

Our fathers knew the value of a screen
From sultry suns; and in their shaded walks
And long protracted bow'rs, enjoy'd at noon
The gloom and coolness of declining day.—Id. Id. b. i.

SCREEN, n. } Perhaps, consequentially, from SCREEN, v. } screen, supra; which, being sometimes made of twigs at some distance apart, would serve as a sifter. Some say—from the Bar.
Lat. Secerniculum, from se-cernere. See SECERN.

A skuttle or skreene, to rid soil from the corn.
Tusser. Husbandry Furniture.

Mixing it with one part of rotten cow-dung, (some prefer horse-dung) or very mellow soil, screen'd and prepar'd some time before.—Evelyn. Kalendarium. May.

SCREW, v. } Fr. Escroue; Dut. Schroef; SCREW, n. } Ger. Schraube. Skinner derives the Fr. from ex, and roue; because it is turned round like a wheel. Wachter,—from the Ger. which (he says) is the genuine word, and Germanic in its origin. See the quotation from Wilkins, for a scientific description of the screw.
To screw (met.) is,—

To twist close, to distort.
To twist close, to pinch hard; to squeeze tight.

—No more: to what end?
Why should I write this downe, that's riueted,
Screw'd to my memorie.

Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act ii. sc. 2.

With stormes of whistlings then, his flocks he draue
Vp to the mountaines; and occasion gaue
For me to vse my wits; which to their height,
I striu'd to skrew vp.—Chapman. Homer. Odyss. b. ix.

The salt rilles also that crosse the same doo so separat the one of them from the other, that they resemble the slope course of the cutting part of a serue or gimlet, in verie perfect maner, if a man doo imagine himself to looke downe from the top of the mast vpon them.

Holinshead. Description of Britaine, c. 10.

Why, suppose I had a delicate screw'd gun, if I left her clean, and found her foul, I should discover, to my cost, she had been shot in.—Dryden. Marriage à la Mode, Act v. sc. 1.

That which is usually recited for the sixth and last mechanic faculty, is the screw, which is described to be a kind of wedge that is multiplied, or continued by a helical [spiral] revolution about a cylinder, receiving its motion not from any stroke, but from a vectis at one end of it.

Wilkins. Archimedes, c. 9.

If while our backs are turned an unlucky boy screws a piece of deal upon one of the leaves, we do not reckon the chip or the deal a part of the table.

Search. Light of Nature, pt. i. c. 2.

How readily upon the gospel plan,
That question has its answer—What is man?
Sinful and weak, in ev'ry sense a wretch;
An instrument, whose chords upon the stretch,
And strain'd to the last screw that he can bear,
Yield only discord in his Maker's ear.—Cowper. Truth.

SCRIBE. Fr. Scribe, escrivaine, escri-vaillée; It. Scriba; Sp. Escriba; Lat. Scrib-ere. Becan (see Vossius) derives from the Dut. Schrabben, (to scrape,) because a line or stroke in writing is formed by scraping or drawing (sc. a style, a pen) over the surface (of paper, parchment, or other substance). Scribble would then be scrabble, with the mere difference of the vowel. Vossius thinks scrib-ere is manifestly from Gr. γραφ-ειν,—γ changed into c. The origin of all is probably the same. See GRAVE.

Scribe,—a writer; and see the quotation from South.

To scribble,—to write careless, hasty, ill-formed letters; to write carelessly, hastily.

And I seye to you that but your rightwiseness be more plentiful thanne of scribes and farisees, ye schul not entre in to the kyngdom of hevenes.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 5.

For I saye vnto you, excepte your ryghteousnes excede the ryghteousnes of the scribes and pharyses, ye can not entre into the kyngdō of heauē.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

In sooth to say, though all the erth so wanne
Were parchment smooth, white, and scribabe,
And the great sea, that called is the oceane,
Were touned into ink blacker than sabell,
Euery stick a pen, each man a scriuener abell,
Not coud they write womans trechery,
Beware therefore, the blind eateth many a flie.

Ballad on Woman's Chastity. Imputed to Chaucer.

One of the foresayde jj parsonis so condempned, was scribe to the pope, and that other was donar.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 159.

Thereat Jove wexeth wroth, and in his sight
Did inly grudge, yet did it well conceale;
And bade Dan Phœbus scribe her appellation seale.

Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 6.

My hasty hand forthwith doth scribble on apace,
Least willing hart might thinke, it ment to come behind.
Gascoigne. The Lower declareth his Affections, &c.

For al ye time betwene his death & the pclamig could scant haue suffised vnto ye bare wryting alone, all had it bene but in paper & scribled forth in hast at aduētūre.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 56.

My lowely and myek scribling unto your noble grace at this time is, grudging in my conscience, that the religion which we do observe and keep is no rule of S. Benet, nor yet no commandment of God.

Styrie. Eccles. Mem. Hen. VIII. b. i. c. 35.

But soon forgetting what she went about,
Poor queen, she fell to scribling to her lover:
Here she put in, and there she blotted out,
Her passion did so violently move her.

Drayton. Barons' Wars, b. vi.

Lastly, that in my tedious scribble
I may not seem incorrigible,
I will conclude.—Cotton. Epistle to J. Bradshaw, Esq.

We have some letters of popes (though not many), for popes were then not very scribacious, or not so pragmatical.

Barrow. Of the Pope's Supremacy.

This is the same, (some few alterations being made,) with a fanatical scribble publish'd open and bare-fac'd to the world.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. ii.

And Martin Mar-prelate, the Marvel of those times, was the first presbyterian scribbler, who sanctified libels and scurrility to the use of the good old cause.

Dryden. Religio Laici, Pref.

Scribe was a name, which among the Jews was applied to two sorts of officers. 1. To a civil; and so it signifies a notary, or in a large sense any one employed to draw up deeds and writings. 2. This name scribe signifies a church-officer, one skilful, and conversant in the law to interpret and explain it.—South, vol. iv. Ser. 1.

Leave dangerous truths to unsuccessful satires,
And flattery to some fulsome dedicators.
Whom, when they praise, the world believes no more Than when they promise to give scribbling o'er.
Pope. Essay on Criticism.

But this was one of the charitable expedients employed to set me right, and to prevent the disgrace of scribbling much to no purpose.—Warburton. Divine Legation, b. v. s. 4.

That pestilent herd of libertine scribblers I would hunt down, as good king Edgar did his wolves; from the mighty author of Christianity as old as the Creation, to the drunken blaspheming cobbler, who wrote against Jesus and the resurrection.—Id. Rem. on Occasional Reflections.

SCRIMER. A.S. Scrimbre, (or scirmbre, a fencer,—Verstegan.) A sword player, a master of defence or fencing master, (Somner.) Dut. Scheimer; Fr. Escumeur, from Shirmen, to defend. See SCREEN and SKIRMISH.

—The scrimers of their nation,
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them.—Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act iv. sc. 7.

SCRINE, i. e. Shrine, (qv.) Lat. Scrinium. Anciently, (says Verstegan,) a chest or cofer.

Help then, O holy virgin, chiefe of nyne,
The weaker novice to perform thy will;
Lay forth out of thine everlasting scryne
The antique rolles, which there lye hidden still,
Of faerie knights.—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. Introd.

This man of infinite remembrance was,
And things foregone through many ages held,
Which he recorded still as they did pas,
Ne suffred them to perish through long eld,
As all things els the which this world doth weld;
But laid them up in his immortal scrine,
Where they for ever incorrupted dweld.—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 9.

SCRIP. } Sw. Skrappa, skreppa.
SCRIPPAGE. } Minshew derives from Scirpus, a rush, whence Scripea, a basket made of rushes. Skinner prefers A.S. Scrape, meet, convenient, fit, q.d. Theca commoda. May it not be—
A scrap-bag, a small bag or sack for *scrap*s?

And he seide to hem, whanne I sente you without sachel and scrippe and schoon, wher only thing failde to you? And thei seiden nothing.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 22.

And he said vnto them: when I sent you wythout wallet and scryppe & shoes: lacked ye any thyng? And they said, no.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Whan folk in chirche had yeve him what hem lest,
He went his way, no longer wold he rest,
With scrippe and tipped staf, ytucked hie.

Chaucer. The Somnours Tale, v. 7316.

—This house in all times
Was full of shipmen and pilgrimes,
With scrippes brette full of leasings,
Entermelled with tidings.—Id. House of Fame, b. iii.

He picks out five, away with him to bring,
Such as he knew would fit his trusty sling,
And in his scrip them closely doth bestow,
By which he vows Goliath's overthrow.

Drayton. David & Goliath.

Clo. Come Shepheard, let vs make an honorable retreat, though not with bagge and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.—Shakespeare. As You Like It, Act iii. sc. 2.

"Blest be Telemachus! in every deed Inspire him, Jove! in every wish succeed!"
This said, the portion from his son convey'd
With smiles receiving on his scrip he lay'd.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xvii.

SCRIPT. } Lat. Scriptum, past part. of SCRIPTURE. } scrib-ere, to write. Scripture, SCRIPTURAL. } —Fr. Escripture; It. Scrittura; Sp. Escritura; Lat.
SCRIPTORY. } Scriptura. (See SCRIBE.)
SCRIPTURIENT. }
SCRIPTURIST. } Script or Scrp,—

Any thing written; usually applied to some legal or mercantile instrument in writing.

Scripture,—a writing; emphatically, a holy or sacred writing. The Scriptures,—contained in or comprising the Bible. See the quotation from Hooker.

And he bigan at Moyses & at alle the profetis and declare to hem in alle scripturis that weren of him.

Wiclif. Luk, c. 24.

And he began at Moyses, and at all the prophets, and interpreted vnto the in all scriptures which were wrytten of hym.—Bible, 1551. Luk, c. 24.

I trow it were to longe you to tary,
If I you told of every script and bond,
By which that she was feoffed in his lond;
Or for to rekken of hire rich array.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9500.

The statue of Mars upon a carte stood Armed, and loked grim as he were wood,
And over his hed ther shinen two figures
Of sterres, that ben cleped in scriptures.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2088.

Of whiche thyng all the ordinaunce and the sothe (for as moche as folke that been to comen after our daies, shal knowen it) I haue putte it in scripture, and in remembrance.—Id. Boecius, b. i.

Whiche Daniell in his scripture
Expowned, as to fore it tolde.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

Thane the olde man sayde, sir, surely vnder this tombe, lyeth your father; than the lorde of Manny redde the scripture on the tombe, the whiche was in latyn, and ther he founde y^t the olde man had sayd trouth, and gaue hym his rewarde.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 110.

But herein appeared his true hautinesse of mind indeed, and that unmatched spirit of his, That when upon the battell at Pharsalia, as wel the cofers and caskets, with letters and other writings of Pompey as also those of Scipioes before Thapsus, came into his hands, he was most true unto them, and burnt al, without reading one script or scroll.
Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 25.

With such differences of reeds, vallatory, sagittary, scriptory, and others, that might be furnished in Judea.
Brown. Miscell. p. 82.

By scripture it hath in the wisdom of God seemed meet to deliuer vnto the world much but personally expedient to be practised of certaine men; many deepe and profound points of doctrine, as being the maine originall ground whereupon the precepts of dutie depend; many prophesies, the cleere performance whereof might confirme the world in beliefe of things vnseene; many histories to serue as looking glasses to behold the mercy, the truth, the righteousness of God towards all that faithfully serue, obey and honour him; yea, many entire meditations of pietie, to be as patternes and presidents in cases of like nature; many things needfull for explication, many for application vnto particular occasions, such as the prouidence of God from time to time hath taken to haue the seuerall bookes of his holy ordinance written.
Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. i. § 13.

It is ridiculous to say, that bills of exchange shall pay our debts abroad: that cannot be, till scripts of paper can be made current coin. [Scripts of paper, Locke afterwards calls three or four lines writ on paper.]
Locke. Considerations on Interest, &c.

For if you will stand to what you have granted, That scripture is as perfect a rule of faith as a writing can be: you must then grant it both so compleat, that it needs no addition, and so evident, that it needs no interpretation: For both these properties are requisite to a perfect rule, and a writing is capable of both these properties.
Chillingworth. Religion of Protestants, pt. i. c. 2.

This grand scripturient paper-spiller,
This endless, needless margin filler,
Was strangely tost from post to pillar.
Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. ii. Wm. Prynn.

It must argue great conceitedness and self-sufficiency, for a man to expect to be heard, or attended to, as a scripturist, or a textuary, in opposition to the Christian world; unless he first fairly considers and confutes what the ablest writers have pleaded for the received construction, and next as fairly proves and enforces his own.
Waterland. Works, vol. vii. p. 9. Introd.

Whoever expects to find in the Scriptures a specific direction for every moral doubt that arises, looks for more than he will meet with.—Paley. Philosophy, c. 4.

Giving up as indefensible, what is truly scriptural, is so far casting off scripture; and unbelievers will refute our interpretations, and take advantage of our concessions; whereas, keeping close to the plan of God's word, we need not fear maintaining our ground.—Secker, vol. ii. Ser. 35.

SCRIVENER. See SCRIBE. Fr. Ecrivain; Sp. Escribano.
A writer; one who writes or draws up in writing—legal, commercial, or mercantile securities; securities for money.

The wofull complaint, which that ye shall here,
But even like as doth a skriuener,
That can no more what that he shall write,
But as his maister beside doth endite.
Chaucer. The Complaint of the Black Knight.

Touching thy letter, thou art wise enough,
I wot thou nilte it deigneliche endite,
As make it with these argumentes tough,
Ne scribeinishe or craftely thou it write.
Id. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

This also is to be noted as a testimonie remaining still of our language, derived from the Saxons, that the generall name for the most part of euerie skilfull artificer in his trade endeth in here with vs, albeit the h be left out, and er onlie inserted, as scriuenhere, writehere, shiphere, &c. for scriuener, writer, and shipper, &c. beside manie other reliques of that speech, neuer to be abolished.

Holinshed. Description of Britaine, c. 6.

Send for your daughter by your seruant here,
My boy shall fetch the scriuener presentlie.

Shakespeare. Taming of the Shrew, Act v. sc. 4.

Laughing we leave an entertainment rare,
The paltry pomp of Fundi's foolish mayor,
The scriuener Luscus; now with pride elate,
With incense fum'd, and big with robes of state.

Francis. Horace, b. i. Sat. 5.

SCROFULA. } It. Scrofa, scrofolia; Fr.
SCROFULOUS. } Scrofoles; Lat. Scrofula, from scrofa, a sow. The disease and the animal have the same Gr. name, Xoipas.

A cataplasme of the leaves and hogs grease incorporat together, doth resolve the scrophules or swelling kernels called the king's evil.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 14.

Excess, the scrophulous and itchy plague,
That seizes first the opulent, descends
To the next rank contagious, and in time
Taints downwards all the graduated scale
Of order, from the chariot to the plough.

Cowper. Task, b. iv.

SCROLL, or } Fr. Escroue. (See ESCROW.)
SCROWL. } The book wherein a goaler sets down and registers the names and surnames of his prisoners: a roll containing the particulars of the court's expense: a survey of ground held by a copyholder. (See Cotgrave.) Minshew thinks scroll is corrupted from roll; and Skinner derives escroue (see SCREW) from ex, and roue, a wheel.
We say indifferently,—

A scroll or roll of parchment; a paper or writing, rolled or folded up.

Knowynge that y^e sayd Baylly vsed to bere scrowys and prophecie aboute hy, shewyng to his cōpany that he was an enchauter and of ylle disposiciō, and that they shuld well knowe by such bokes as he bare vpon hym.

Fabyan. Chronycle. Hen. VI. an. 1450.

All though he [Rich. II.] had and myght sufficiently haue declared his renoucement by the redynge of an other meane persone, yet he, for the more suretie of the mater, and for the sayde resynacyon shuld haue his full force and strengthe, he therefore redde the scrowle of resynacyon hymselfe, in maner and fourme as foloweth.—Id. Ib. an. 1398.

To whose hands, custody, knowledge, or possession, any of the said accompts, books, scroles, instruments, or other writings concerning the premises, or any part thereof, did, or is come.—Burnet. Records, pt. ii. b. ii. No. 28.

What wonder though my melancholious muse,
Whose generous course some lucklesse starre contractes
Her bold attempts to prosecute refuse,
And would faine burie my abortiue scroules.

Stirling. Of an Inundation of Douer.

But herein appeared his [Cæsar's] true hautinesse of mind indeed, and that unmatchable spirit of his, that when upon the battell at Pharsalia, as wel the cofers and caskets with letters and other writings of Pompey, as also those of Scipioes before Thapsus, came into his hands, he was most true unto them, and burnt al, without reading one script or scroll.—Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 25.

When the strangers go away, their Peans [guides among the Moors,] desire them to give them their names in writing, with a certificate of their honest and diligent serving 'em: and these they shew to the next comers, to get into business; some being able to produce a large scrowl of such certificates.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1689.

There is in the poor-house of this city, his own [De Vos,] portrait by himself, in black, leaning on the back of a chair, with a scroll of blue paper in his hand, so highly finished, in the broad manner of Correggio, that nothing can exceed it.
Reynolds. Journey to Flanders & Holland.

SCROYLE. "These scroyles of Angiers:"—
Fr. Escrouelles, i. e. scabby, scrophulous fellows, (Whalley and Steevens.) Fr. Les escrouelles, the king's evil, (Cotgrave.)

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you, kings.

Shakespeare. John, Act ii. sc. 2.

Hang them, scroyles! there's nothing in them, if the world.
B. Jonson. Every Man in his Humour, Act i. sc. 1.

I cry thee mercy, my good scroyle, was't thou?
Id. The Poetaster, Act iv. sc. 1.

SCRUB, v. } To scrub is—to scrape, by the SCRUB, n. } change of the vowel a into u, and the p into b. (See SCRAPE.) The difference of usage now depends upon that with which the act is performed: thus,—the butcher scrapes his block with a knife, and scrubs or rubs it with a brush.

A scrub,—one who scrubs or scrapes together;
any one, any thing mean.

Now sooping in side robes of royalty,
That erst did skrub in lowly brokery.

Bp. Hall. Satires, b. i. Sat. 2.

Must I, thought I, giue ayme to such A skrub and such a saint,
That skowndrell, and this counterfeit Confounded so I faint.

Warner. Albion's England, b. vi. c. 31.

Gra. Now by this hand I gaue it to a youth,
A kinde of boy, a little scrubbed boy,
No higher then thy selfe, the judges clearke.

Shakespeare. Merchant of Venice, Act v. sc. 1.

The yawning youth, scarce half awake, essays,
His lazy limbs and dozy head to raise:
Then rubs his grummy eyes, and scrubs his pate.

Dryden. Persius, Sat. 3.

We lay here all the day, and scrubb'd our new bark, that if ever we should be chased we might the better escape.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1681.

When that was done we heeled her, scrubbed her bottom, and tallow'd it.—Id. Ib. an. 1687.

And neighbouring jades resolv'd to tarry,
Rather than with such scrubs they'd marry.

King. Art of Love, pt. ii.

As the hair was got off one part, another was applied to the fire till they had got off the whole, yet not so clean but that another operation was necessary; which was to carry it to the sea side, and there give it a good scrubbing with sandy stones, and sand.—Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 25.

Well; all this is very pleasing; but how goes on business in the shop—(I beg pardon)—in the warehouse? O, the scrubs mind that.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 9.

SCRUPLE, n.

SCRUPLE, v.

SCRUPLER.

SCRUPULIZE, v.

SCRUPULOUS.

SCRUPULOUSLY.

SCRUPULOUSNESS.

SCRUPULOSITY.

Fr. Scrupule; It. Scrupolo; Sp. Escrupulo; Lat.
Scrupulus, from scrupus, saxum asperum, a sharp stone: hence, a hurt, a hinderance, an impediment.
Met.—

A difficulty, a hesitation,
a doubt, a fear, an apprehension; a nicety, a delicacy.

A weight equalling twenty grains, or the third part of a dram: any small portion.

And sith I looke in this matter but only vnto God, it maketh me little matter, though men cal it as it please thē, & say it is no consience but a foolish scruple.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1435.

Thinke you that apostles would not haue bene to scrupulous to haue dronkē his very bloud? seing it was so playne agaynst Moses lawe if they had vnderstand hym so grossely as ye do.—Fryth. Workes, p. 143.

He ware vpon his head a diademe of purple, interpaied with white, like as Darius was accustomed, and fashioned his appaile after the manner of the Persians, wythout scrupulositie of any euill token that it signified for the victorer to change his habite into the fashion of him whome he had vanquished.

Brende. Quintus Curtius, fol. 151.

From the bough
She gave him of that fair enticing fruit
With liberal hand: he scrup'd not to eat
Against his better knowledge, not deceav'd,
But fondly overcome with femal charm.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ix.

If you please, fetch hither that of Greekelade, which I will not importune you to believe: but without scruple you cannot but credit that of a monk of St. Dewi's.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 11.

Away with those nice scruplers, who for some further ends haue endeavoured to keep us in an undue sense.

Bp. Hall. Remaines, p. 295.

The much urging this article not to be found in ancient creeds; not to haue been taught or beleev'd of the Easterne churches; not of that of Constantinople; and I know not what else, tending to make men first waver in their faith, then to doubt of their faith, and at length flatly to denie their faith; if in this, why not in other articles that eyther are or may be so scrupulized, all made ours, laid unto our charge by our adversary, and made the publick doctrine of our Church?—Mountagu. Appeal to Cæsar, c. 18.

The consideration whereof ought eternally to silence their scrupulositie who are so amused that the harms of the body should be the pains of the soul, the body in the mean time being not pained.

H. More. Immortality of the Soul, pt. ii. p. 104.

1697

We shall therefore choose rather to break those laws of method, (neglecting the scrupulositie thereof) and subjoyn them immediately in this place, craving the reader's pardon for this preposterousness.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, b. i. c. 3.

Captain Swan having received the two letters, did not doubt but that the English did design to settle a factory here: therefore he did not much scruple the honesty of these people, but immediately ordered us to get the ship into the river.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1686.

And there is no occasion to be scrupulously nice and critical in distinguishing to which of the parts the name strictly belongs.—Waterland. Works, vol. vii. p. 24.

The scrupulousness of the parents or friends of the deceased persons deprives us oftentimes of the opportunities of anatomizing the bodies of men, and much more those of women.—Boyle. Works, vol. ii. p. 68.

I have been so severe in rejecting not only relations, but even authors not otherwise obscure, that, how much soever
I foresaw my scrupulousness might impoverish my history, yet there are some whole treatises about cold countries,
whence I have shunned to borrow any one authority.

Id. Ib. p. 478. Pref.

It may indeed, and doth sometimes happen, that this perplexity and scrupulositie about actions, doth proceed from distemper and indisposition of body; and, where it doth so, it is a spice of that religious melancholy I am here to speak of.—Sharp, vol. iii. Ser. 2.

In matters, I mean, where duty doth intervene, and where pure consience ought to guide and govern us; from making professions and ostentations, (void of substance, of truth, of knowledge, of good purpose,) great semblances of peculiar sanctimony, integrity, scrupulositie, spirituality, refinedness, like those Pharisees so often therefore taxed in the Gospel.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 11.

In what more the love of God consists, I know not: so that I scruple not to rest it on reason, rather than on passion.—Gilpin. Hints for Sermons, § 29.

Pleasure and interest are his chief good, his only objects of serious pursuit; and in the attainment of these he is not scrupulously delicate.—Knox. Ess. No. 102.

Motives, indeed, are not to be too scrupulously inquired into, while actions are found to be laudable.

Id. Ser. Religion the chief Concern of Life.

SCRUTATOR. } Fr. Scrutateur, scrutiné; SCRUTINY, n. } It. Scrutatore, scrutinio; SCRUTINIZE, v. } Sp. Escrutinader, escrutinio; SCRUTINOUS. } Lat. Scrutator, scrutinium;

from scrutari, to search into; from Lat. Scruta, Gr. Xpυτη, γpυτη, orts, lumber; things thrown aside together, as litter or refuse: and thence scrutari, to look into such things, (sc.) for some article that may be applied to a use. See Vossius in v. Scruta. And, generally, Scrutiny, is,—

A search, an examination, an inquiry, an investigation.

Of all gentylwomen he hath the scruteny
In Fames court reporting the same.

Skellon. The Crowne of Laurell.

For al three months a scrutiny was held,
And searchers then sent every where about,
That in that time if any were conceal'd,
They should make proof and straightly bring them out.

Drayton. Moses his Birth & Miracles, b. i.

But age is froward, uneasy, scrutinous,
Hard to be pleas'd, and parsimonious.

Denham. Of Old Age, pt. iv.

The manner of election was by scrutiny. The deputies of every province in Scripto exhibiting one. The scrutators were two of the seculars.

Hales. Letter from the Synod of Dort, (Nov. 1618.)

The compromissarii should chuse according to the votes of such, whose votes they were obliged to scrutinize.

Ayliffe. Parergon.

Nor did he [Eusebius] live to see how easily the Arian sophistry was defeated and baffled after it had passed the scrutiny of such masterly hands.

Waterland. Works, vol. iii. p. 155.

And he should be chiefly conversant in such authors as require close attention, and will abide the test of a rational, though candid, scrutiny.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Ev. 42.

Every thing about him is, on some account or other, declared to be good; and he thinks it presumption to scrutinize into its defects, or to endeavour to imagine how it might be better.—Goldsmith. History of the Earth, c. 3.

As all good history deals with the motives of men's actions, so the peculiar business (as it seems to me) of religious history is to scrutinize their religious motives: of these the principall is the consideration of a future state.

Warburton. Divine Legation, b. v.

I have likewise scrutinized minutely the motions of freewill, explained the difference between necessity and certainty, and shewn the consistence of liberty with pre-appointment.—Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 28.

SCRUZE, v. } For squeeze, to compress, or SCRU'ZING, n. } press close together. It seems, (Lye adds,) to be formed from screw. Phillips, in his New World of Words, says—the obsolete verb “scruse,” is to crowd or press hard: through heedless pronunciation corrupted by Londoners to scrouge, (Johnson and Pegge.) It is probably from—to crush.

The sovereign weede betwixt two marbles plaine
Shee powdered small, and did in peeces bruze;
And then atweene her lilly handes twaine
Into his wound the juice thereof did scruse.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 5.

Tho up he caught him twixt his puissant hands,
And having scrus'd out of his carrion corse
The lothfull life, now loosd from sinfull bands,
Upon his shoulders carried him perforce
Above three furlongs. Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 11.

And as for immoderation in drinking, the first news that we hear of wine is in Noah's drunkenness; he was the true Janus, the inventor of the scruxing of the grape to his cost.
Bp. Hall. Christian Moderation, § 2.

SCRY, i. e. Ascry, (qv.)

And so with the scry, he was fayne to flye in his shirte barefote and barelegged, fro house to house, fro garden to garden, in great dout and feare of taking by the frenchmen, who had scaled and won the fortesse.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 272.

On Christmas day, nor all the feestes after, there was nothing doone; howbeit, the englysshmen euery aught looked to be waked with scryes.—Id. Ib. vol. i. c. 371.

SCRYDE, i. e. Descried, (qv.)

They both arose, and at him loudly cryde,
As it had bene two shepheards curres had scryde
A ravenous wolfe amongst the scattered flockes.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 12.

SCUD, v. } Ger. Schiessen, celeriter mo-SCUD, n. } veri; schieten, fugere; Sw.
SCU'DDING, n. } Skutta, cursitare, to move quickly, to fly, to run; from A. S. Scyt-an, to shoot, (qv.)

To shoot along, run, flee, or flit along; move speedily or rapidly. And see the last quotation from Falconer.

The Driades were wont about thy lawns to rove,
To trip from wood to wood, and scud from grove to grove.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 26.

The baron of Ophalie not sleeping nor slacking his matter, squadded with all hast into England.
Holinshed. Description of Ireland, an. 1290.

When he [the lion] hath gained the thickets and woods, and gotten once into the forrests out of sight, then he skuds away, then hee runneth amaine for life.
Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 16.

She rais'd her voice on high, and sung so clear,
The fawns came scudding from the groves to hear:
And all the bending forest lent an ear.
Dryden. The Flower and the Leaf.

All which time we scudded, or run before the wind very swift, tho' only with our bare poles, that is, without any sail abroad.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1687.

The jilt, not many hours before,
With the Plate-fleet had left the shore,
Laughs at the credulous fool behind,
And joyful skuds before the wind.
Somerville. The Fortune Hunter, c. 5.

The black'ning ocean curls, the winds arise,
And the dark scud in swift succession flies.
Falconer. The Shipwreck, c. 2.

Scudding is that movement in navigation by which a ship is carried precipitately before a tempest.—Id. Ib. Note.

SCUFFLE, n. } Skinner thinks it to be SCU'FFLE, v. } shuffle, (qv.) with the change of h into c, and to mean—

A confused and tumultuous contest or fight. See CUFF?

Neither had this skuffling an end vntill night was begun: at what time the Latines, Rutiles, and Troians left the wild medley, howbeit not discontinuing their malice.
Warner. Albion's England, Add. to b. ii.

Get. Scoring a man o'r the coxcomb
Is but a scratch with you! o' your occupation,
Your scurvy scuffling trade; I was told before
My face was bad enough; but now I look Like bloody bone, and raw head, to fright children.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Prophetess, Act iv. sc. 5.

Di. All they were but scratches; but the loss of blood, made him faint.

Cle. We dally gentlemen.

Thra. Away.

Di. We'll scuffle hard before he perish.

Beaum. & Fletch. Philaster, Act v. sc. 1.

— His captaines heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his brest, reneages all temper,
And is become the bellows and the fan
To coole a Gypsies lust.

Shakespeare. Antony & Cleopatra, Act i. sc. 1.

A worthie sport it is to see the manner of their skuffling.
Holland. Plinie, b. x. c. 3.

By an odd chance, though not uncommon in blind scuffles, the infidels and we have changed weapons.

Warburton. Divine Legation, b. iv. s. 2.

The meek and bashful boy will soon be taught,
To be as bold and forward as he ought;
The rude will scuffle through with ease enough,
Great schools suit best the sturdy and the rough.

Cowper. Tirocinium.

The officer refusing to give it up, and being joined by the crew of the pinnace, which was waiting for Captain Cook, a scuffle ensued, in which Pareca was knocked down, by a violent blow on the head, with an oar.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. v. c. 3.

SCULK, or } The Dut. Schuylen, Sw. Skyla, SKULK, v. } and Scholka, are—latitare, occultare, to lie hidden, to hide, to conceal. In R. Gloucester and Gower, it is—

To move or go under covert, secretly, sliely: and the origin seems to be the A. S. Scyl-an, to separate, to secrete. And see TO SHEER.

To secrete; to go secretly, or concealedly; to go, or move into, be, or stay in secret places; to conceal, to lurk.

Bote hii thus myd scolkynge vp the Englysse wende.
R. Gloucester, p. 256.

When he seeth the lusty knightes Reuden, where these women are,
Away he sculketh as an hare.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

Pae. Are not you he that rather than you durst goe an industrious voyage being press'd to the islands, skulk'd till the fleet was gone?

Beaum. & Fletch. The Martial Maid, Act ii. sc. 1.

And as a lyon sculking all in night,
Farre off in pastures; and come home, all dight
In iawes and brest-locks with an oxes blood
New feasted on him, his lookes full of mood.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxii.

But I suppose they chose Perico rather for the scene of their enterprize, partly because they might there best skulk among the islands.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1685.

They would forthwith publish slanders unpunished, the authors being anonymous, and skulking under the wings of publishers, a set of men who neither scrupled to vend either calumny or blasphemy, as long as the town would call for it.
Pope. The Dunciad. Scriblerus on the Poem.

The thief discover'd straight his prey forsook,
And skulk'd amid the sedges of the brook.
Beattie. Virgil, Past. 3.

SCULL, or } Skinner says,—the shell of SKULL, n. } the head, but why so used he does not explain. Scull, Tooke considers to be—the past part. of scyl-an, to divide, to separate, whether applied to the separated bone of the head, or to a division, or portion of fish divided or separated from the main body; i. e. to shoals of fish.

See SCALE, SHOAL, and SHOULDER.

Corineus tok hys bowe of hym, & smot hym a wonde
A bouen on the scolle with ys owne bowe anon,
That the scolle to breke in peses mony on.
R. Gloucester, p. 16.

And with the staf she draw ay nere and nere,
And wend han hit this Alein atte full,
And smote the miller on the pilld skull,
That down he goth, and cried, “Harrow! I die.”
Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 4233.

And she to his byddyng obeide,
And toke the sculle, and what hir liste
She drinketh, as she, whiche nothyng wist
What cup it was: and than all out
The kynge in audience about Hath tolde, it was hir fathers sculle.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

— Ryuers ren nat till the sprynge be full Better a dumme mouthe than a braynes scull.
Skelton. The Crowne of Laurell.

The anthropophagi about the north pole use to drinke out of the sculs of mens heads, and to weare the scalpes, haire and all, in steed of mandellions or stomachers before their breasts, according as Isogonus the Nicean witnesseth.
Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 2.

But all the ground with sculs was scattered
And dead mens bones, which round about were flong;
Whose lives, it seemed, whilome there were shed,
And their vile carsases now left unburied.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

The cormorant next comes, by his devouring kind,
Which flying o'er the fen immediately doth find
The fleet best stor'd of fish, when from his wings al full,
As though he shot himself into the thicken'd skull,
He under water goes, and so the shoal pursues.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 25.

— Anon, he's there afoot,
And there they fly, or die, like scaled sculls
Before the belching whale.

Shakespeare. Troil. & Cres. Act v. sc. 5.

Forthwith the sounds and seas, each creek and bay
With frie innumerable swarms, and shoales
Of fish that with their fins and shining scales
Glide under the green wave, in sculles that oft Bank the mid sea. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vii.

The followers of Odin, sung the praise of death in their hymns, witness the ode of good king Lodbrog; and had no better a reason for it than the hope of drinking beer in the sculls of their enemies at the palace of Odin.

Bolingbroke. Fragments of Essays, § 50.

The scull, below the eye-brows, they cut off, and having cleansed it thoroughly, if they are poor they merely cover it with a piece of leather; if they are rich, in addition to this they decorate the inside with gold; it is afterwards used as a drinking cup.—Beloe. Hist. of Herodotus, b. iv. c. 65.

SCULL. } A kind of boat. Minshew derives

SCU'LLER. } from the hollowness of a boat like a shell or scull; or it may be, (Skinner adds,) from the Fr. Escuelle, Lat. Scutula, from some resemblance to a platter or charger. G. Douglas uses the word skul for a vessel to contain liquids:—“We keest on mony a skul of warme milk,” (p. 29, v. 20.) “In flakoun (flagon) and in skull,” (p. 210, v. 5.) The Glossarist declares for the etymology of Minshew. See Ihre in v. Shoal; and Jamieson.

Ono. I erre, you have the marshaling of all the ghosts too, that passe the Stygian ferry, and I suspect you for a share with the old sculler there, if the truth were knowne; but let that scape.—B. Jonson. Cynthia's Revels, Act i. sc. 1.

Struck with dumb wonder at those songs,
He [the dog] wish'd more ears, and fewer tongues.
Charon amaz'd his oar foreslows,
While the boat the sculler rows.—Fletcher. Boethius, b. iii.

Like caitiff vile that for misdeed
Rides with his face to rump of steed;
Or rowing scull, he's fain to love,
Look one way and another move.—Hudibras, pt. i. c. 3.

What should he do, who twice had lost his love?
What notes invent, what new petitions move?
Her soul already was consign'd to fate,
And shivering in the leaky sculler sate.

Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iv.

“This is his moral,” say his under-pullers,
“The poor and innocent are safe in scullers.”
Byrom. Remarks on Horace, p. 238.

SCULLION. } Old Fr. Sculier,—“Officier
SCU'LLIONLY. } qui a soin de la vaisselle, des SCU'LLERY. } plat, et des assiettes,” (Roquefort.) Fr. Escuelle, a platter; q. d. Escullion, a washer of plates and dishes, (Skinner.) Lat. Scutula.

The servant whose duty it is to clean the plates and dishes, or other kitchen utensils. And hence applied to—any thing low, and mean.

They bee not vned to coulede, as you may see by their smoked scollions faces, handes, and feete, with all the place where they stande.—Barnes. Workes, p. 341.

At Christmas a fire happened at the king's palace at Westminster; the effect, as it seems, of the great feasting there. For it fell chiefly in the kitchen and office adjoining, as the scullery.—Strype. Eccles. Mem. Edw. VI. c. 24.

Which brought forth his scullionly paraphrase on St. Paul, whom he brings in, discoursing such idle stuff to the maids and widows, as his own servile inurbanity forbears not to put in the apostle's mouth, of the soul's conversing.

Milton. Colasterion.

This butcher looks as if he were dough-bak'd,—a little butter now, and I would eat him like an oaten-cake: his fathers diet was new cheese and onions when he got him: what a scallion-fac'd rascal 'tis?

Beaum. & Fletch. Love's Cure, Act ii. sc. 1.

Upon an address from parliament to remove his chancellor and treasurer, his answer was, “that he [Richard the Second] would not remove, at their request, the meanest scullion out of his kitchen.”

Bolingbroke. Rem. on the Hist. of Eng. Let. 6.

I shall pay so much respect to my contemporaries as never to offend their delicacy willingly: therefore shall choose such illustrations as may appear fashionable and courtly as well as clear and luminous wherever I have the option; but where I want skill to compass both, shall hope for indulgence if I prefer clearness and aptness before neatness and politeness, and fetch comparisons from the stable or the scullery when none occur suitable to my purpose in the parlour or the drawing room.

Search. Light of Nature, Introd. p. xxxv.

SCU'LPTOR. } See INSCULP. Fr. Sculp- SCU'LPTURE, n. } teur; It. Scultore; Sp.
SCU'LPTURE, v. } Escultor, esculpidor; Lat.
SCU'LPTILE. } Sculptor, from sculpere, to SCULPT. } cut, to grave, which (Vossius) differs from scalpere only in usage; and he derives from the Gr. Γλαφω, with the Æolic prefix, σγλαφω, σγλ'υφω,—
To grave or engrave, to cut or carve into, to inscribe.

Zeuxis fonde first the portrature;
And Promætheus the sculpture,
After what forme that hem thought,
The resemblance anon thei wrought.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.
O, that the tenor of my just complaint
Were sculpt with steel on rocks of adamant!—Sandys.

The same description [Moses with horns] we find in a silver medal; that is upon one side Moses horned, and on the reverse the commandment against sculptile images.
Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. v. c. 9.

Anon out of the earth a fabrick huge Rose like an exhalation, with the sound
Of dulcet symphonies and voyces sweet,
Built like a temple, where pilasters round
Were set, and Doric pillars overlaid
With golden architrave; nor did there want Cornice or freeze, with bony sculptures grav'n.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

A pleasing vigour his fair face express'd;
His neck, his hands, his shoulders, and his breast,
Did next in gracefulness and beauty stand,
To breathing figures of the sculptor's hand.
Dryden. Ovid. Met. b. xii.

Still as a tomb-stone, never to be mov'd,
On some good man or woman unprov'd
Lays its eternal weight; or fix'd as stands
A marble courser by the sculptor's hands, Plac'd on the hero's grave.—Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xvii.

What are to him the sculptures of the shield,
Heaven's planets, earth, and ocean's watery field?
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. xiii.

—The massy sculptur'd vase,
Glittering with golden studs, four handles grace;
And curling vines around each handle roll'd
Support two turtle doves emboss'd in gold.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xi.

If these observations have hitherto referred principally to painting, let it be remembered that this art is much more extensive and complicated than sculpture, and affords therefore a more ample field for criticism; and as the greater includes the less, the leading principles of sculpture are comprised in those of painting.—Reynolds, Dis. 10.

SCUPPER. Skupper holes, (says Skinner,) are holes in the benches of a ship (in transtris) through which the water flows; from the Ger. Schopfen, haurire, because through them the water is drawn or drained off. They are said to be—

Holes in the deck, through which the water drains off.

No sooner we were at sea, but by the violence of the storm, and the working of the ship, we made a great quantity of water through our holes, ports, and scuppers.
Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 4.

SCUR, v. } i. e. to Scour; to move rapidly,
SCURRER. } to clear the ground swiftly.
SCURRY.

And he sente for the scurrs to aduise the dealynge of their ennemes, and to se where they were, and what nombre they were of.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 33.

I have seen these Britains, that you magnifie,
Run as they would outrun time, and roaring
Basely for mercy, roaring; the light shadows,
That in a thour scur o'r the fields of corn,
Halted on crutches to 'em.
Beaum. & Fletch. Bonduca, Act i. sc. i.

Then he [Hannibal] commanded the horsemen of the Numidians to scurry to the trenches of the Romans, to entice them to come to battell.—North. Plutarch, p. 882.

SCURF. } Dut. Schorft, schorftig, scurf, SCURFY. } scurfy; A. S. Sceorf-a, from SCURFINES. } sceorf-ian, rodere, mandere, to SCURVY, n. } gnaw, to bite, (Skinner;) with SCURVY, adj. } whom Lye coincides,—quod in SCURVILY. } morbum istum edacem optime
VOL. II.

quadrat. Scurvie or scorbie, (says Junius,)—is the disease which is commonly called Scorbute. He and Skinner give to the words Scorbie or scorbute the same origin. (See SCORBUTE.) Scurvy seems no other than scurfy, (See ROYNE;) and (met.) is—

Shabby, mean, vile, worthless; despicable, contemptible.

He said, "He never denied pilgrimages, but that much scurff must be pared away, e're it could be well done; as superstition, idolatry."

Strype. Eccles. Mem. Hen. VIII. b. i. c. 22.

Her crafty head was altogether bald,
And, as in hate of honorable eld,
Was overgrowne with scurfe and filthy scald.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 9.

And euer to remayne
In wretched beggary,
And maungy misery,
In lousy lothsumnesse,
And scabbed scurffynesse.—Skelton. D. of Albany, &c.

A sorte of foul drabbes
All scurvy with scabbes.—Id. Elinour Rumming.

Pi. Is she not very angry?
Ser. You'l find that quickly;
May be she'll call ye sauey scurvey fellow,
Or some such familiar name.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Wild-Goose Chase, Act ii. sc. 2.

Such boyst'rous trifles thy Muse would not brooke,
Save when she'd show how scurvily they looke.
Berkenhard. On the Collec. of Beaum. & Fletch. Works.

A cake of scurf lies baking on the ground,
And prickly stubs, instead of trees, are found.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. ii.

But here come folks a-preaching to us
A saving doctrine to undo us,
Whose notions fanciful and scurvy,
Turn old religion topsy-turvy.
Lloyd. The Cobbler of Tessionington's Letter.

Upon examination, we found their teeth loose; and that many of them had every other symptom of an inveterate sea scurvy.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 4.

She makes forward advances to the unwary to bring them to her, but when she has gotten them fast in her fetters she uses them scurvily, allowing them no rest in her service, and feeding them only with delusive expectations and stale scraps of enjoyment that have utterly lost their savour.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 32.

SCURRILE. } Fr. Scurrilité; It. Scurri- SCURRILITY. } lità; Lat. Scurrilis, from SCURRILIOUS. } scurra, a jester, a scoffer. Of SCURRILOUSLY. } uncertain etymology; perhaps from Scur-an. (See SCOUR.) The adjective is applied from the lowest uses of jesting or scoffing.

Jesting or scoffing, like a vulgar buffoon; with vulgar, low calumny or scandal; low, vulgar, indecent or unbecoming.

Now I need not to tell that scurrilitie, or ale-house jesting, would be thought odious, or grosse mirth would be deemed madness.—Wilson. Arte of Rhetorique, p. 4.

And sacred silver mistress, lend thine ear (Which ne'er heard scurril term, into whose port Ne'er entred wanton sound,) to my petition
Season'd with holy fear.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Two Noble Kinsmen, Act v. sc. i.

The people's guilty too, of brow more bold,
That sits, and dares thrice scurril lords behold.
Holyday. Juvenal, Sat. 8.

Herein onellie are the inferiour sort somewhat to be blamed, that being thus assembled, their talke is now and then such as savoureth of scurrilitie and ribaldrie.
Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 6.

If either you, or I, know the right way
To part scurrilitie from wit, or can
A lawfull verse, by th' eare, or finger scan.
B. Jonson. Horace. Art of Poetrie.

One would suspect him [John Standish] not the same man called by Bale a scurrilous fool, and admired by Pils for piety and learning, jealous lest another man should be more wise to salvation than himself.
Fuller. Worthies. Lancashire.

He is ever merry, but still modest: not dissolved into undecent laughter, or tickled with wit scurrilous or injurious.
Habington. Castara, pt. iii.

If we are of a sanguine and jovial disposition, our idle hours will be so many tempting opportunities to intemperance and wantonness, profaneness and scurrility, and all the other wickednesses of a lewd and dissolute conversation.
Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 4.

But Ponet, late bishop of Winton, now in exile, excellently answered this scurrilous book, with great learning and clearness.—Strype. Eccles. Mem. Mary, c. 20.

In this book he is exceeding bitter against Morus and pretends to give a true history of his notorious impurities both at Geneva and Leyden, and an account of his own particular life, to vindicate himself from what, as he thought, was scurrilously said of him by Morus.
Wood. Fasti Oxon. vol. i.

It may be so; but then remember, it was not till you yourselves had led the way to the abuse of words; and had called calumny plain dealing; and a scurril license, urbanity.
Warburton. Dedication to the Freethinkers.

We must acknowledge, and we ought to lament, that our public papers have abounded in scurrility.
Bolingbroke. Answer to the Defence.

Within a few years satire has reassumed her original rude form of scurrilous and petulant abuse Knox. Essay on Satire.

SCUSE, i. e. Excuse.

Por. That scuse serves many men to saue their gifts,
And if your wife be not a mad woman,
And know how well I haue deseru'd this ring,
Shee would not hold out enemy for euer
For giuing it to me.
Shakespeare. Merchant of Venice, Act iv. sc. 1.

SCUT. Lye suggests the Goth. Skaut, fimbria, the edge or border: it is perhaps from the A. S. Scyt-an, to shoot; that which shoots up, (sc.) like the short, erect tale of a hare.

Mased as a marche hare, he ran lyke a scut.
Skelton. The Crowne of Laurell.

The husband [should] take a frogg and spit her [as it were] a length upon a reed, so as it goe in at the skut or matrice behind and come forth againe at the mouth.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxxii. c. 5.

Which in the hare holds not the common position, but is aversly seated, and in its distention enclines unto the coecix or scut.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 15.

SCUTE. } See ESCUAGE, ESCUTCHEON.
SCUTAGE. } Low Lat. Scutagium, from Lat.
SCUTCHEON. } Scutum, a shield. Scutcheon,
Fr. Escusson,—

A small target or shield. See the quotations from Blackstone and Hume

I painted all with amorettes,
And with losenges and scochons.—Chaucer. Rom. of the R.

The crowns that they on their scochones bere,
Were set with pearle, ruby, and saphire.
Id. The Flower and the Leaf.

Confessing that he was himselfe a Mountacute,
And bare the selfe same armes that I dyd quarter in my scute.
Gascoigne. Deuise of a Maske.

But yet they ouer shoote us
With crownes and with scutus
With scutes and crownes of golde
I drede we are bought and solde.
Skelton. Why come ye not to Court?

And in liij. conveyent places of the said gravestone I will be sett liij. platts graven with liij. scochens of armys folowing, that is to say, at the hede the armes of the citie of London, and the drapers armes, and at the fett myn owne armes, and my merchaunt marke.—Fabyan. Chronicles, Pref.

For within the chappell of Bellona, he caused to bee set up the scutcheons and shields of his auncestours; taking great contentment to have the armes of his predecessours seene on high, and the same accompanied with the titles of their honourable dignities to be read.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxxv. c. 3.

And following these vain pleasures and delights, when he [Alcibiades] was in his galley, he caused the plancks of the poop thereof to be cut and broken up, that he might lie the softer; for his bed was not laid upon the overlop, but laid upon girthes strained over the hole, cut out and fastened to the sides, and he carried to the wars with him a gilded scuchion wherein he had no cognizance nor ordinary device of the Athenians, but onely had the image of Cupid in it, holding lighting in his hand.—North. Plutarch, p. 171.

Though all the titles, coronets, and stars,
That statesmen aim at, and that Malton bears,
Enrich your scutcheon, dignify your crest,
Beam on your coach, and blaze upon your breast.
Cawthorn. The Equal. of Human Conditions

This pecuniary satisfaction (in lieu of personal attendance, scutifer, bearing a shield) at last came to be levied, by assessment at so much for every knight's fee under the name of scutage.—Blackstone. Commentaries, b. i. c. 8.

The king could require in war the personal attendance of his vassals, that is, almost all the landed proprietors; and if they declined the service, they were obliged to pay him a composition in money, which was called a scutage.
Hume. History of England, vol. ii. App. 2.

SCUTTLE. Fr. Escoutilles; It. Scodella; Sp. Escotilla. Skinner thinks may be from the Dut. Schuyte, a boat, or from schuttel, scuttella, a kind of dish or platter: it is more probably from the A. S. Scyt-an, to shoot.

The scuttles in the deck of a ship,—the opening through which goods, &c. are shot into the hold.

A coal-scuttle:—to shoot coals into the cellar is a common expression; from the scuttle they are shot or thrown upon the fire.

To scuttle off or away, is—to scud or scuddle off.

To scuttle a ship,—to make openings or holes.

The commodore, having no occasion for these other vessels, had ordered the masts of all five of them to be cut away at his first arrival; and on his leaving the place they were towed out of the harbour, and scuttled and sunk.

Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 4.

We hoysed out our boat, and took up some of them; as also a small hatch, or scuttle rather, belonging to some bark.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

Then we jogg'd on again to the northward, and saw many small dolphins and whales, and abundance of scuttle-shells swimming on the sea.—Id. Ib. an. 1699.

SCUTTLE. Dut. Schotel; Fr. Escuelle; It. Scodella; Sp. Escudilla; Lat. Scutella, scutula, a dish, a platter, from scutum, (says Vossius,) because the scutella was formed like an oblong shield. Scull is—

A Scotch name for a basket of a semicircular form, (Jamieson.) It is perhaps the same word as the preceding.

A skuttle or skreene, to rid soil from the corn.

Tusser. Husbandry Furniture, p. 14.

The earth and stones they are fain to carry from under their feet in scuttles and baskets.—Hakewell. On Providence.

SCYTH. See SITHE.

SDAIN, or SDEIGN. } i. e. Disdain, disdainful.
SDEIGNFUL. }

Yet durst she not disclose her fancies wound,
Ne to himselfe, for doubt of being sdayned,
Ne yet to any other wight on ground,
For feare her mistresse should have knowledge gayned.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 5.

— Lifted up so high
I sdein'd subjection, and thought one step higher
Would set me highest, and in a moment quit
The debt immense of endless gratitude.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

She strikes, and twines away her sdaignefull eyes
From his sweet face, she fals dead in a swoone, Fals as a floure halfe cut, that bending lies.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xx. s. 128.

SEA. Goth. Saiw; A. S. Sæ; Dut. See; Ger. See; Sp. Sió, from the Gr. ζε-ειν, fervere, bullire, (ζε δ' υδωρ, bulliebat aqua. Homer, Iliad, 21, v. 365,) say the etymologists; but the Gr. has no name for the sea derived from that verb.

Sea is opposed—geographically—to land, to rivers, lakes, &c.; it is applied to the great mass of salt waters, or different portions of it,—to any large quantity, liquid or fluid; to any thing stormy or distinguished by other qualities of the sea.

Sea is very much used, prefixed.

Other half ger we habbeth nowe y went with oute reste
In the grete see of ocean, forto seche vr beste,
That oure lyf ys loth, & we nuste war bi leue.

R. Gloucester, p. 40.

Now is Robert Cristen, he dightes his nauie, & ferde ouer the see, & conquerd Normundie.

R. Brunne, p. 25.

Thanne he roos and commaundide to the wyndis and the see; and a greet pesiblenesse was maad.

Wiclif. Matthew, c. 8.

Then he arose, and rebuked the wyndes and the sea, and there folowed a great calme.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

He mote be ded, the king as shall a page;
Som in his bed, som in the depe see.

Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 3032.

And God called the dry land the erth, and the gatheryng togyther of waters called he the sea.—Bible, 1551. Gen. c. 1.

And the erle of Arundell, with xxvii. vessels with hym, whether they wolde or nat, were fayne to caste ancre in a lytell haven called the Palysce a two small leages fro Rochell, and ye wynde was so streynable on seeborde, that they coude nat departe thence.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 150.

Suddenly attempting their purpose (the rocks being very dangerous for the boat, and the sea-gate exceeding great) by shooting their arrows hurt and wounded every one of our men.—Drake. Voyages, an. 1578.

This Moruidus walkynge or rydynge vpon the see stronde espyed a wonderfull monstre, the whiche of his corage and knyghthod, he thought to sle.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 37.

Ne did it then deserve a name to have,
Till that the venturous mariner that way
Learning his ship from those white rocks to save,
Which all along the southerne sea-coast lay Threatning unheedy wrecke and rash decay,
For safety that same his sea-marke made,
And nam'd it Albion.—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 10.

She could sell winds to any one that would
Buy them for money, forcing them to hold
What time she listed, tie them in a thread,
Which ever as the seafarer undid;
They rose or scanted, as his sails would drive,
To the same port whereas he would arrive.

Drayton. The Moon Calf.

How should I joy of thy arrive to hear?
But as a poor sea-faring passenger,
After long travel, tempest-torn and wrack'd,
By some unpitt'ing pirate that is sack'd.

Id. Charles Brandon to Mary the French Queen.

— Such murmur fill'd
Th' assembly, as when hollow rocks retain
The sound of blustering winds, which all night long Had rous'd the sea,—now with hoarse cadence lull
Sea-faring men orewatcht, whose bark by chance
Or pinnace anchors in a craggy bay
After the tempest.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

The sea is a collection of waters in the deep vallies of the earth: if the earth were all plain, and had not those deep hollows, the earth would be all covered with water; because the water being lighter than the earth, would be above the earth, as the air is above the water.

Locke. Elements of Natural Philosophy, c. 7.

If we should offer to make a rude estimate, we should find that all the rivers in the world, flowing into the bed of the sea, with a continuance of their present stores, would take up at least 800 years to fill it to its present height.

Goldsmith. Animated Nature, pt. i. c. 15.

SEAL. A. S. Sele, seol, a sea calf; Sw. Sjal; Dut. Zeehond.

These seals be hardly killed, unlesse a man dash out their brains. In their sleepe, they seeme to low or blea, and thereupon they be called sea-calves.

Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 13.

— Proteus, thy song to heare,
Seas list'ning stand, and windes to whistle fear;
The lively dolphins dance, and bristly seales give eare.

Fletcher. The Prize, Ecl. 7.

He told us that at first he was forced to eat seal, which is very ordinary meat, before he had made hooks; but afterward he never killed any seals but to make lines, cutting their skins into thongs.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1683.

The price of raw hides is a good deal lower at present than it was a few years ago; owing probably to the taking off the duty upon seal skins, and to the allowing, for a limited time, the importation of raw hides from Ireland and from the plantations, duty free, which was done in 1769.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 11.

The seal, in general, resembles a quadruped in some respects; and a fish in others. The head is round, like that of a man; the nose broad like that of the otter; the teeth like those of a dog; the eyes large and sparkling; no external ears, but holes that served for that purpose.

Goldsmith. Animated Nature, b. v. c. 5.

SEAL, v. } Fr. Seel, seau; It. Sigillo; Sp. Sigilo; Lat. Sigillum; Dut. Seghel; SEAL, n. } Sigilo; Sw. Sigill; A. S. Sigel, sigel-an;
Ger. Siegel; Sw. Sigill; A. S. Sigel, sigel-an;
Goth. Sighyan, ga-sighyan, signare, to sign, to set or make a sign or mark. And see SEEL.

To set a sign or mark, (sc.) in token of assent, affirmance, assurance; to affirm, or confirm, to assure, to secure; and also—(from the effect of sealing) to fasten, to fix; to fasten together, closely, to close, to shut.

Of him haf thei chartre seled with his seale.

R. Brunne, p. 29.

For he had grantid ther to the chartre for to sele,
& after that selyng alle suld thei come
The barons & the kyng, & tak of tham hard dome.

Id. p. 300.

And I saigh in the righthond of the sitter on the trone, a book writun withynne and without, and seelid with seuene seelis.—Wiclif. Apocalips, c. 5.

He that it wrought, [the steed] he coude many a gin;
He waited many a constellation,
Or he had don this operation,
And knew ful many a sele and many a bond.

Chaucer. The Squieres Tale, v. 10,429.

— And thervpon
With letters, and with seales out
Thei send in euery londe aboute
The yonge children for to seche.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

And yet the more, if he strake handes, if he geue his hād writing, and seale it: so is the promise more, and more be-leued.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 142.

Now she brought them to see a seeled dove, who, the blinder she was, the higher she strove.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

— If from this houre
Within these hallowd limits thou appeer,
Back to th' infernal pit I drag thee chaind,
And seale thee so, as henceforth not to scorne
The facil gates of hell too slightly barrd.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

King. Clarence and Gloster, loue my louely queene,
And kiss your princely nephew brothers both.
Cla. The duty that I owe vnto your maestye,
I seale vpon the lips of this sweet babe.

Shakespeare. Hen. VI. Act v. sc. 7.

Yor. What seale is that that hangs without thy bosom?
Yea, look'st thou pale? Let me see the writing.

Id. Rich. II. Act ii. sc. 4.

Now pleasing sleep had seal'd each mortal eye.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

Volkelius, more complaisant with respect to the name, turns all his resentment upon the thing, flatly denying that the Eucharist is a sacrament: his reason is, it neither exhibits nor seals any spiritual grace.

Waterland. Works, vol. vii. p. 35.

The passion which fires the competitors in any honourable contest is a laudable ambition to excel; and the prize is no otherwise valued than as the mark and seal of victory.

Bp. Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 27.

The use of seals, as a mark of authenticity to letters and other instruments in writing, is extremely antient. We read of it among the Jews and Persians in the earliest and most sacred records of history.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. ii. c. 20.

SEAM, v. } A. S. Seam, seamster; Dut. Seam, n. } Soom; Ger. Saum; Sw. Seom, SEAM, n. } sutura; seoma, consuere.
SE'AMLESS. }
SE'AMSTER, or } Wachter derives from the Lat.
SE'MSTER. } Su-ere. Skinner, — from to SE'MSTRESS. } sew or to sow; or from Lat.
SE'AMY. } Sumen.

The line formed by sewing or sowing, the continued suture;—a suture, a juncture; a mark resembling a lineal suture.

And the coote was without seem and woun al aboute, therfor thei seiden togidre, kitte we not it, but caste we lotte whos it is.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 19.

The coote was without seme, wroughte vpon thorowe oute, and they sayd one to another. Let vs not deuyd it, but cast lottes who shal haue it.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Let us than speke of chiding and repreving, which ben ful grete woundes in mannes herte, for they unsow the seames of frendship in mannes herte.

Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

O sheare that shreadst the seeme-rent sheete of shame.

Gascoigne. Dan Bartholomew of Bathe

And every seam the nymphs shall sew
With th' smallest of the spinner's clue.

Drayton. The Muses' Elysium, Nymphal 8.

The remainders of thy sacred person are not yet free; the souldiers have parted thy garments, and cast lots upon thy seamelesse coat.—Bp. Hall. Cont. vol. ii. p. 273. The Crucifix.

The righteousness evangelical must be like Christ's seam- less coat, all of a piece from the top to the bottom.

Bp. Taylor, vol. iii. Ser. 1.

In these, heav'n's holy fire does vainly burn;
Nor warms, nor lights, but is in sparkles spent;
Where froward authors, with disputes, have torn
The garment seamless as the firmament.

Davenant. Gondibert, b. ii. c. 5.

His [Aristippus] delight was to paint shops of barbers, shomakers, coblers, taylers and semsters.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxxv. c. 10.

Lo! what is it that makes goose wings so scant,
That the distressed sempster did them want.

Bp. Hall, b. ii. Sat. 1.

Ismen. Of fidlers: Thou a company?
No, no, keep thy company at home, and cause cuckolds.
The wars will hurt thy face, there's no semsters.

Beaum. & Fletch. Cupid's Revenge, Act i. sc. 1.

Deli. Why, sir?
Fast. That you can consort yorselves with such poor seam-rent fellows.

B. Jonson. Every man out of his Humour, Act ii. sc. 2.

I am sorry I can follow the allegory so far, being informed that now it is not only seam-ript but torn in the whole cloth.
Fuller. Worthies. Sussex.

The subject of his sermon was, to prove, "That Christ's poverty was the pattern of humane perfection; and that men professing eminent sanctity should conform to his precedent, going on foot, feeding on barley bread, wearing seamless-woven coats, having no houses of their own, &c.
Id. Ib. Yorkshire.

Æmil. Oh fie vpon them: some such squire he was
That turn'd your wit, the seamy-side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moore.
Shakespeare. Othello, Act iv. sc. 2.

Say, has the small or greater pox
Sunk down her nose, or seam'd her face?
Swift. Cassinus & Peter.

Who can forsake thy walls, and not admire
The proud cathedral, and the lofty spire?
What sempstress has not prov'd thy scissors good?
Gay, Ep. 2.

Though still his crimson seamy scars reveal
The sure-aim'd vengeance of the Lusian steel.
Mickle. The Lusiad, b. iv.

SEAM, n. See ENSEAM. A. S. Seime, seam, or sweet tallow, (Somner.) Fr. Sain; Sp. Sayn;
It. Saime; Lat. Sagina, fat. Cotgrave calls it—
The tallow, fat or grease of a hog, or of a ravenous wild beast.

— Shall the proud lord,
That bastes his arrogance with his own seam.
Shakespeare. Troil. & Cres. Act ii. sc. 3.

Seeth it with good old seame or grease, or in milke, it is singular for the cough.—Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 6.

SEAR, v. } A. S. Sear-an; Dut. Sooren,
SEAR, adj. } soren, urere, arescere, siccare,
SEAR, n. } to parch, to dry, to wither.
SEA'REDNESS. } To parch, to burn, to dry, to wither; to dry up, the sap or moisture; to harden.

He felt him heuy & ferly seke, his body wex alle seere,
His childre he wild auance, till he o lyue were.
R. Brunne, p. 18.

Sered pokettes, sal peter, and vitriole.
Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16, 213.

And Maie deuoid of all delite,
With seer braunches, blossoms vngrene.
Id. Rom. of the Rose.

Breakinge and ill lucke in vowes I will passe over, with an hundred mo seer thinges, which chaunceth every day to them that shoote most.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. i.

Therefore I have seene good shooters which would have for everye bowe a seer case, made of wullen clothe, and then you maye putte three or four of them so cased, into a lether case if you will.—Id. Ib. b. ii. p. 137.

Friar. Thy conscience, youth, is sear'd,
Else thou would'st stoop to warning.
Ford. 'Tis Pity she's a Whore, Act v. sc. 3.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo; down!
Thy crown does sear mine eye-balls.
Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act iv. sc. 1.

"All so my lustfull leafe is drie and seer,
My timely buds with wayling all are wasted."
Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender. Jan.

The scorging flame sore swinged all his face,
And through his armour all his body seard,
That he could not endure so cruell case,
But thought his armes to leave, and helmet to unlace.
Id. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

He threw down before him a dry sear piece of leather, and then put his foot upon one of the ends of it.
North. Plutarch, p. 586.

Take to your better judgement my declining,
My age hung full of impotence, and ills,
My body budding now no more: seer winter
Hath seal'd that sap up, at the best and happiest
I can but be your infant.
Beaum. & Fletch. Monsieur Thomas, Act ii. sc. 4.

He is deformed, crooked, old, and seer,
Ill-fac'd, worse body'd, shapeless every where.
Shakespeare. Comedy of Errors, Act iv. sc. 2.

I have liv'd long enough: my way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf:
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have.—Id. Macbeth, Act v. sc. 3.

— Which bids us seek

Som better shroud, from better warmth to cherish
Our limbs benumm'd, ere this diurnal starr
Leave cold the night, how we his gather'd beams Reflected, may with matter seer foment.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

And first he wonders at my extreame prodigality of credit, & searedness of conscience; in citing an epistle so convicted by Bellarmine, Baronius.

Bp. Hall. Honour of the Married Clergie, § 5.

There sate we, till we saw him feeding come,
And on his necke a burthen lugging home,
Most highly huge of seer-wood; which the pile
That fed his fire, supplide all supper while.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. ix.

To think well of ourselves, if we deserve it,—it is a lustre in us, and every good we have, strives to shew gracious,— what use is it else? Old age like seer-trees, is seldom seen affected,—stirs sometimes at rehearsal of such acts as his daring youth endeavour'd.

Beaum. & Fletch. Wit without Money, Act iii. sc. 1.

If, indeed, we put epithets to conscience, and talk of a good conscience, or an evil conscience; a tender conscience, or a seared conscience, or the like; then it includes more, both in scripture, and in common language, than I have now mentioned.—Sharp, vol. ii. A Discourse of Conscience.

And here it will be requisite to shew what this searedness
of conscience means: which I shall endeavour to explain from that place of scripture, in 1 Tim. iv. 2. Having their consciences seared with a hot iron.—South, vol. ix. Ser. 2.

This once resolv'd, the peasants were enjoin'd
Sere-wood, and firs, and dodder'd oaks to find.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. ii.

O cruel! will not pang of pity pierce
That heart, by lust of lucre sear'd to stone?
Beattie. The Minstrel, b. i.

— 'Twere wiser far
For me, enamour'd of sequester'd scenes,
And charm'd with rural beauty, to repose,
Where chance may throw me, beneath elm or vine,
My languid limbs, when summer sears the plains.
Cowper. Task.

SEAR, v. } See CERE, CERECLOTH.
SE'ARCLOTH. } To close or fasten up, as with wax, (cera.)

Whan this Charlys was dede, his frēdys entēdyng to haue caryed y^e corps into Fraunce, causyd it to be seerd and enoynted with ryche and precyous oyntmentis, and aroma-tykes.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 175.

Thus this duke dyed in Calais; his body was enbaumed and seared in leed and couered, and so sente by see into Englande.—Berners. Froissart. Chronycle, vol. ii. c. 226.

Then perriwigs and searcloth gloves doth show,
To make their hands as white as swan or snow.
Drayton. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph 7.

Pod. I marked the man, if he be a man.
Fool. H'as much adoe to be so,
Searcloths and stirrups glew him close together,
He would fall a pieces else.
Beaum. & Fletch. A Wife for a Month, Act v. sc. 1.

But in hell, God doth as it were wrap the whole man up in searcloth, and set it on fire round about them, so that they are tormented in every part, neither soul nor body escaping, nor any power or faculty of the one, nor any part or member of the other.—Hopkins. Works, Ser. 5.

SEARCE, v. } Fr. Sasser, to sift or searce;
SEARCE, n. } from squassare for excussare, SE'ARCER. } to shake out, or from setacium, because made of hair (seta.) (See in Menage, Caseneuve.) Searce and search have probably the same origin.
To sift, to bould.

That ellebore was like unto a valiant and hardie captaine:
for when (quoth he) it hath stirred all the humore within the bodie, it selfe issueth forth first and maketh way before them. Moreover, there is a strange and singular devise,
To clip the root of ellebore with small sizzers or sheares into little peeces; then, to sift them through a searce, that the bark or rind may remaine still.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxv. c. 5.

I found, that either exquisitely calcined hartshorn, or clean tobacco-pipes, or (which is better than that) mutton-bones (taken between the knuckles, and burnt to a perfect whiteness, being fully powdered and searsed, and well rubbed upon paper, would make it fit to be written upon with the point of a table book pin.
Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 413.

A man would not thinke (who seeth the long yarne in her web wrought seer-wise, smoothed and polished so cunningly, and the verie manner of the woof so glewish and clammie as it is, of it selfe) that all were to any purpose.
Id. Ib. vol. i. p. 323.

SEARCH, v. } Fr. Chercher; It. Cercare; SEARCH, n. } q. d. Circare, i. e. circumcirca SE'ARCHER. } dispicere, ubi lateat quod in-SE'ARCHING, n. } vestigamus, to look around, SE'ARCHLESS. } cast our eyes around to discover, where that may lay, which we seek to find, (Junius;) and see also Menage.

To look after or about, seeh, or inquire; to pry into, to investigate, to examine; to explore, to try.

He serchis alle the coste, where were best comyng,
To bring in frankis oste, forto take our kyng.
R. Brunne, p. 268.

So would to God, that authour is of kind,
That with his bond, love of his vertue list
To seachen hertes all, and fast bind,
That from his bond no weight the wey out wist.
Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. iv.

Thei fellen vnto his accorde,
That Phorceus, of his recorde, Whiche was an astronomien,
And eke a great magician,
Shulde of his calculacion
Serche of constellacion,
How thei the citee mighten gette.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

Now find I well this noble serche maye eke be called vayne.
Surrey. Ecclesiastes, c. 2.

For the divisions of Reuben, there were great searchings of heart.—Judges, v. 16.

Dyuers Troyans beyng vnder the rule of nobles of the same lygnage, as Helenus sone of Pryamus, Eneas, Anthe-norus, and othere serchyd the worlde, and landyd in dyuers countries.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 76.

When searchers see, al corners in a shippe,
(And spie no pens by any sight they see.)
Gascoigne. The Steele Glas.

She was well pleas'd, and forth her damzells sent Through all the woods, to search from place to place
If any tract of him or tidings they mote trace.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 6.

Man. You are mistaken,
Prosperity does search a gentleman's temper,
More than his adverse fortune.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Custom of the Country, Act ii. sc. 1.

Yet you must see him, lest impatient love
Should urge his temper to too nice a search,
And ill-tim'd absence should disclose your crime.
Smith. Phædra & Hippolitus, Act iii.

With searching wisdom, fatal to their ease,
They still find out why what may should not please.
Rochester. Artemisa to Chloe.

Th' inticing smile; the modest-seeming eye,
Beneath whose beauteous beams, belying heaven,
Lurk searchless cunning, cruelty, and death.
Thomson. Spring.

O! teach me to reveal the grateful charm
That searchless nature o'er the sense of man
Diffuses, to behold, in lifeless things,
The inexpressive semblance of himself,
Of thought and passion.
Akenside. Pleasures of Imagination, b. iii.

He told the people whom he met, as he was advancing along the shore, that he was in search of plants, which indeed was also true.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 13.

And scorn of wickedness, and esteem of our duty, shewn in practice, will recommend us, not only to fallible beings, but to the unerring searcher of our hearts, and final rewarder of our deeds.—Secker, vol. i. Ser. 13.

SE'ASON, n. } Fr. Saison; It. Stagione; SE'ASON, v. } Sp. Sazon, which some SE'ASONABLE. } derive from satio, the time
SE'ASONABLENESS. } for sowing, setting, plant-SE'ASONABLY. } ing; and hence extended SE'ASONAGE. } to the different periods SE'ASONING, n. } for the different labours of husbandry, the different times of the year: others from statio, q. d. says Skinner, temporis statio.
(See Menage, Skinner, and Junius.) To season, Fr. Assaisonner, Skinner derives from Ger. Saltzen, salire, sale condire, to preserve with salt. Junius thinks the latter merely a metaphorical use of the former:—to preserve or prepare meats for keeping at proper times. Season is applied to—

The four divisions of the year; to a fit or proper, convenient or suitable time: a portion of time.

To season,—to do any thing at a fit or proper time; to prepare for fit or proper use; to prepare by time; to mature: to give a taste or savour; to savour, to qualify, to temper.

SEA

In a some seyson. whan softe was the sonne
Y shop into shrobbis. Piers Plouhman, p. 5.

In somer seson thider wold he go,
And May his wif, and no wight but they two.
Chaucer. The Merchant's Tale, v. 9924.

The seson priketh every gentil herte,
And maketh him out of his slepe to sterte,
And sayth, "Arise, and do thin observance."
Id. The Knight's Tale, v. 1046.

Some season, the englisshemen folowed them so nere, that all day they skyrmysshed togyther; and in a skyrmysshe, this said lorde Wylliam Môtague lost one of his yen.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 26.

That I might be found faith full to my father, and Lord in distributyng vnto my bretheren and felowes of one faith, their due and necessary fode: so dressing it and seasonyng it, that the weake stomackes may receiue it also, and be the better for it.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 33.

A stele must be well seasoned for castinge, and it must be made as the graine lyeth, and as it groweth, or els it will never flye cleane.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. ii.

O she is falne
Into a pit of inke, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her cleane againe,
And salt too little, which may season giue
To her foule tainted flesh.

Shakespeare. Much Adoe about Nothing, Act iv. sc. 1.

Sicin. We charge you, that you haue contriv'd to take
From Rome all season'd office, and to winde
Your selfe into a power tyrannicall.

Id. Coriolanus, Act ii. sc. 3.

Then came faire May, the fayrest mayd on ground,
Dekt all with dainties of her seasons pryde,
And throwing floures out of her lap around.

Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 7.

There be so many ill-favoured quick-sands, and rocks in the way (as I have it from a good hand) that one may easily take a prospect of your shipwrack if you go on: therefore desist, as you regard your own safety, and the seasonable advise of your J. H.—Howell, b. ii. Let. 15.

Seasonableness is the best in all these things which have their ripeness and decay. We can never hope too much of the timely blossomes of grace, whose spring is perpetuall, and whose harvest begins with our end.

Bp. Hall. Holy Observance.

Thus seasonably did this grave and learned [Bullinger] man instruct this young and towardly prince, [Edw. VI.]

Strype. Eccles. Mem. b. i. c. 30.

In burthen'd vessels first, with speedy care,
His plenteous stores do season'd timber send:
Thither the brawny carpenters repair,
And as the surgeons of maim'd ships attend.

Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Still sing the God of seasons, as they roll.
For me, when I forget the darling theme,
Whether the blossom blows, the summer-ray
Russets the plain, inspiring autumn gleams;
Or winter rises in the blackening east;
Be my tongue mute, my fancy paint no more,
And, dead to joy, forget my heart to beat.

Thomson. A Hymn.

And when they expire, the trade-wind (which constantly blows on that coast at W. S. W. an S. W.) returns with the customary seasonableness of weather.

Dampier. Voyages, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 5.

I doubt not but they were very glad to have so great an authority as they thought him [Socinus] to be, to vouch for an interpretation which was so seasonably devis'd for the relief of their cause, in so much danger to be overthrown by a text that was so plain and full against them.

Tillotson, vol. i. Ser. 44.

Of all the creatures that have issued from the workmanship of omnipotence, there is none so pleasing, so refreshing, or rather so enlivening as the light; which is that, that gives a seasonage to all other fruitions, that lays open the bosom of the universe, and shews the treasures of nature; and in a word, gives opportunity to the enjoyment of all the other senses.—South, vol. viii. Ser. 14.

Charity is the grand seasonage of every christian duty: it gives it a gloss in the sight of God, and a value in the sense of men.—Id. vol. ix. Ser. 5.

Sharp hunger was their seasoning, or they took Such salt as issued from the native rock.

King. Art of Cookery.

This, besides giving us an opportunity to make the preceding observations, was very serviceable to us on many other accounts, and came at a very seasonable time.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 2.

SEAT, n. } A. S. Setl, setol; Dut. Sate; SEAT, v. } Ger. Sessel, sidel; Sw. Säte. See SET, SIT:—

That on which we set or sit, put or place any thing; in which we reside or dwell;—place or position.

To seat,—to put or place on a seat; to put or place; to reside; to fix.

SEC

Thanne Jhesus spak to the puple, and to hise disciplis, and seide, on the chaier of Moyses han sete scribis and fari-sees.—Wiclif. Matt. c. 23.

Then spake Jesus to ye people, and to his disciples, sayinge:
The scribes and the pharises synt in Moses seate.

Bible, 1551. Ib.

I woot where thou dwellest, where the seate of Satanas is.
Wiclif. Apocalips, c. 2.

I know thi workes & wher thou dwellest, euen wher Satans seat is.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Who climeth oft on hie, and trusts the rotten bowe:
If that bow breake may catch a fall, such state stande I in now.

Me thought I was a loft, and yet my seate full sure.
Gascoigne. Flowers.

The drie coler, with his hete,
By weie of kynde his propre sete
Hath in the galle, where he dwelleth.

Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

He followed fast, and chaced him so nie,
That to the folds, where sheepe at night doe seat,
And to the litle cots, where shepherds lie
In winters wrathfull time, he forced him to flie.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 9.

Before I see thee seated in that throne,
Which now the house of Lancaster vsurpes,
I vow by Heauen, these eyes shall neuer close.

Shakespeare. 3 Pt. Hen. VI. Act i. sc. 1.

Not Babylon,
Nor great Alcairo such magnificence
Equal'd in all thir glories, to inshrine
Belus or Serapis thir Gods, or seat
Thir kings, when Egypt with Assyria strove
In wealth and luxury.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

Light as the lightning glimps they ran, they flew,
From thir foundations loosning to and fro
They pluckt the seated hills with all thir load, Rocks, waters, woods.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

Peace shall goe sleepe with Turkes and Infidels,
And in this seat of peace, tumultuous warres
Shall kinne with kinne, and kinde with kinde confound.

Shakespeare. Rich. II. Act iv. sc. 1.

Or whether that the body publique, be
A horse whereon the gouernor doth ride,
Who newly in the seate, that it may know
He can command; lets it strait feell the spur.

Id. Measure for Measure, Act i. sc. 3.

Seest thou yon dreary plain, forlorn and wilde,
The seat of desolation, voyd of light,
Save what the glimmering of these liuid flames
Casts pale and dreadful.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

Rais'd of grassie terf
Thir table was, and mossie seats had round.—Id. Ib. b. v.

The gates of heaven unfold; Jove summons all
The gods to council in the common hall.
Sublimely seated, he surveys from far
The fields, the camp, the fortune of the war.

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. x.

And o'er the seat, with plenteous wadding stuff'd,
Induc'd a splendid cover, green and blue,
Yellow and red, of tap'stry richly wrought
And woven close, or needle-work sublime.

Cowper. Task.

SE/CANT. Lat. Secans, cutting.
A line so called because it cuts another line,
called the tangent.

Upon the whole I observe that the same line cannot be both tangent and secant.—Berkeley. The Analyst, § 25.

SECE/DE, v. } Lat. Secedere, (se, and ce-SECE/DER. } dere, to go,) to go away from.
SECE/SS. } To go away, depart, or se-SECE/SSION. } parate from.
Seceder is a common name.

Silent secess, waste solitude.
More. Song of the Soul, (1647,) b. iv. Pref.

Under the times of the gospell, what need we any other witness then the cels and cloysters of retired votaries, whose very secession proclaims their contempt of sinfull seculars; and doth as good as say,—This people, which knoweth not the law, is accursed?

Bp. Hall. Peace Maker, § 8.

The brave with tyrant ministers contests;
Instead of speeches now I'll write protests;
Call back the thunderstruck seceding crew,
Instead of going out, I'll turn out you.

Cambridge. Parody on Death and the Lady.

The seceding members had again resumed their seats in the House of Commons; and Mr. Pulteney thought proper to vindicate the extraordinary step, which they had taken.

Smollet. Hist. of England, an. 1739.

[Sir Rob. Walpole] affirmed the nation was generally sensible that the many useful and popular acts which passed towards the end of the last session, were greatly forwarded and facilitated by the secession of those gentlemen.—Id. Ib.

1692

SEC

SECE/RN. Lat. Secernere, (se, and cernere, to separate, to disjoin.) See SECRETE.

To separate; to strain out.

Birds are better meat than beasts, because their flesh doth assimilate more finely, and secerneth more subtilly.
Bacon.

The pituite or mucus, secerned in the nose, mouth, palate, stomach, intestines, and wind-pipe, is not an excremen-titious but a laudable humour.

Arbuthnot. On Aliments, c. 6.

SE/CLE. Lat. Seculum; Fr. Siècle; It. Sècolo.

A century, a hundred years.

Of a man's age, part he lives in his father's life time, and part after his son's birth; and thereupon it is wont to be said that three generations make one secle, or hundred years in the genealogies.—Hammond. Pract. Catech.

SECLU/DE, v. } Sp. Secluso; Fr. Seclus, SECLU/SION. } kept or shut up from, deprived of, (Cotgrave); Lat. Secludere, (se, and claudere,) to shut in, to confine.

To shut, keep, or confine, away from; to keep private or apart, in close retirement or solitude.

But you haue bene of long continuance secluded from the scriptures, whiche is cause of such grosse errors as ye are now fallen in, so that ye could neither search them, nor yet once looke on them.—Fryth. Workes, p. 3. To the Reader.

For how can we think of him without dread and reverence, when we consider how he is secluded by the infinite sacredness of his own Majesty from all immediate converse and intercourse with us.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 7.

If they have any vices, he will now be in much greater danger of moral infection, and will suffer worse consequences from it, than if he had not been secluded from boys at a boyish age.—Knox. Works, vol. iii. p. 397.

The invincible mansion of departed spirits, though certainly not a place of penal confinement to the good, is nevertheless in some respects a prison. It is a place of seclusion from the external world.

Bp. Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 20.

SE/COND, adj. } Fr. Seconde, second; It.
SE/COND, n. } Secòndo, secondàre; Sp. Segundo, segundar; Lat. Secundus, from sequi, or sec-are;
SE/CONDARY, adj. } from seq-ui, secundus, sequitur primum; from sec-are;
SE/CONDARILY. } in se-cundo, sectio sive divi-SE/CONDARINESS. } sio incipit, communum sit SE/CONDER. } indivisum. See Vossius and Martinius.

The next in place or order to the first; the next in degree. To second,—

To stand or be placed, to follow or succeed, next to; in assistance, support, aid, or maintenance; to assist, to support, to aid, to maintain.

Jhesus dide efte this seconde tokene, whanne he cam fro Judee into Galilee.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 4.

Thys is againe the seconde myracle, that Jesus dyd, after he was come oute of Jewrye into Galile.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Secondarily I say that no man is so great a sinner, if he repent and beleue, but that he is righteous in Crist and in the promises; yet if thou looke on the flesh and vnto the law there is no man so perfect that is not founde a sinner.

Tyndall. Workes, p. 120.

First of al on my part I should abstain from al commerce-ment with that party, either by word, writing or deed:
secundarily, procure by al honest wayes, if I would not by dishonest, to repair this malignity.

Strype. Eccles. Records. Hen. VIII. No. 84.

When in that way they went, next Sebert them succeeds, Scarce seconded again for sanctimonious deeds.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 11.

The great Selanus crackes, and of that face,
Which once the second in the world was nam'd,
Are basons, frying-pans, and dishes fram'd.

Beaumont. Juvenal, Sat. x.

Soul. There is one desperate fellow, has broke into us,
And here he bangs ye two or three before him,
There five or six; ventures upon whole companies.

Ptol. And is not seconded?

Soul. Not a man follows.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Humorous Lieutenant, Act iii. sc. 6.

If Europe herself hath so many mother languages, quite discrepant one from the other, besides secondary tongues and dialects, which exceed the number of their mothers, what shall we think of the other three huge continents in point of different languages.—Howell, b. ii. Let. 60.

But here you exclaim, of the "strange abuse made of quotations and second-hand representations."

Waterland. Works, vol. iii. p. 111.

SEC

Nor was the fact foretold by him alone;
Nature herself stood forth, and seconded the sun.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

That which is peculiar and discriminative must be taken from the primariness and secondariness of the perception.
Norris.

The occasion, on which we are now assembled, requires that we view him as the world's great luminary in another sense; a sense most highly interesting to man, though in comparison, but secondary and subordinate.
Knox. Works, vol. vi. Ser. 28.

He [Barclay] sometimes has a stroke of humour; as in the following stanza, where he wishes to take on board the eight secondaries, or minor canons, of his college.
Warton. Hist. of English Poetry, vol. ii. p. 242.

I do not tell the respectable mover and second, by a perversion of their sense and expressions, that their proposition halts between the ridiculous and dangerous.
Burke. On the Duration of Parliaments.

SE/CRET, adj. Fr. Secret; It. Segrèto; Sp. Secreto; Lat. Secretus; (past part. of secernere), to SE/CRET, n. put away from, asunder, or SE/CRECY. apart; to keep away, in SE/CRETLY. private.
SE/CRETING, n. Secret, adj.—separated or SE/CRETARY. set apart, removed, with-
SE/CRETARISHIP. drawn, (sc.) out of sight, or SECRE/TE, v. view; hidden, concealed,
SECRE/TION. private.
SE/CRETIST. The Lat. Secretarium is SECRE/TIOUS. a secret, or private place;
SE/CRETORY, adj. Fr. Sécrétaire; It. Secretario, SE/CRETNESS. segretario; Sp. Secretario; Low Lat. Secretarius, one entrusted with the secrets of his office, of his employer.

This jure unto this cherl his tale hath told
In secre wise, and made him to ensure,
He shulde tell it to no creature,
And if he did, he shulde lese his hede.
Chaucer. The Doctoures Tale, v. 12,076.

O messenger, fulfilled of drunkenesse,
Strong is thy breth, thy limmes faltren ay,
And thou bewreiest alle secrenese.
Id. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 5192.

"But this is counsaile, keepe it secretly," (Quod she) "I nold for all the world about,
The queene of loue it wist."
Id. Court of Loue.

For wythyn is yhyd the strength and the vigoure of men in the secretour of hir hertes.—Id. Boecius, b. iv.

'Uoid backe the prease' (quod she) 'vp to the wall,
Make large roome, but looke ye do not tary,
And take these billets to the secretary?'
Id. The Assembly of Ladies.

He seith in open, phy, to sinne,
And in secrete there is no vice,
Of whiche that he nys a novice.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

Was neuer yet so wise a clerke,
Whiche might knowe all goddes werke,
Ne the secrete, whiche god hath sette
Ayene a man, maie not be lette.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

Whenne he [Constantyne] awoke he called this vicyon to mynde, and tolde vnto his secretes, by whose counsayll he cōmaunded the sygne of the crosse to be peynted, and sette in his baners and penons, and of all his knyghtes.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 68.

Our maister Crist saith in an other place, that I haue shewed you in secretnes, preach it on the tope of the house.
Barnes. Workes, p. 291.

He had alwayes goyng with hym vp and downe in Gaunt lx or fourscore variettes armed, and amonge them, there were thre or foure that knewe y^e secretnes of his mynde; he had commaunded his secret variettes, that whanne soeuer he mette any persone, and made suche a sygne to theym, that incōtynent they shulde slee hym.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 29.

There came to the duke of Berrey a clerke, secretorie, to Sir Peter of Craon, and sayde to hym in secrete maner; Sir, I wyll shewe you a thyng in secretnesse, whiche is lykely to come to a poore cōclusyon.—Id. Ib. vol. ii. c. 186.

Mr. Wotton gave his secretaryship, and Mr. Cecil got it of him.—Burnet. Records. K. Ed. Journal, 1549.

A loathly, wrinkled hag, ill favoured, old,
Whose secret filth good manners biddeth not be told.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 9.

Mal. I haue play'd the fool, the gross fool, to believe
The bosom of a friend will hold a secret,
Mine own could not contain.
Massinger. The Unnatural Combat, Act v. sc. 2.

— And he doth soonest rise
That best can handle his deceitfull wit
In subtil shifts, and finest sleights devise,
Either by slaundring his well deemed name,

SEC

Through leasings lewd, and fained forgerie;
Or else by breeding him some blot of blame,
By creeping close into his secrecie.
Spenser. Colin Clouts come Home again.

They beene ybrought into a comely boure,
And servd of all things that mote needfull bee;
Yet secretly their hoste did on them lowre,
And welcomde more for feare then charitee.
Id. Faerie Queene, b. iiii. c. 9.

As there is great care to be used for the counsellors themselves to be chosen; so there is of the clerks of the council also, for the secreting of their consultations.
Bacon. Advice to Villiers.

None alive did better ken the secretary-craft to get counsels out of others, and keep them in himself.
Fuller. Worthies. Kent.

For I could muster up, as well as you,
My giants and my witches too,
Which are vast Constancy, and Secretness,
But these I neither look for nor profess.
Donne. The Damp.

The deist thinks he stands on firmer ground;
Cries Ευρεκα the mighty secret's found.
Dryden. Religio Laici.

There I saw how the secret felon wrought,
And treason labouring in the traitor's thought:
And midwife time the ripen'd plot to murder brought.
Id. Palamon & Arcite, b. ii.

Again, generation and corruption may be sufficiently explained by concretion and secretion, or local motion, without substantial forms and qualities.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, b. i. c. 1.

They suppose two other divine hypostases superiour there-unto, which were perfectly secrete from matter.—Id. Ib. c. 4.

Some things I have not yet thought fit so plainly to reveal, not out of any envious design of having them buried with me, but that I may barter with those secretists, that will not part with one secret but in exchange for another.
Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 315.

They have a similitude or contrariety to the secretitious
humours in taste and quality.—Floyer. On the Humours.

They [glands] give the blood time to stop and separate through the pores of the capillary vessels into the secretory ones, which afterwards all exonerate themselves into one common ductus.—Ray. On the Creation, pt. ii.

If they shall say unto you,—Behold he is in the desert,— go not forth; behold he is in the secret chambers,—believe it not.—Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 2.

And one thing more—to free yourself from foes,
Never a secret to your friend disclose;
Secrets with girls, like loaded guns with boys,
Are never valued till they make a noise.
Crabbe. Tales of the Hall, b. xi.

When king John of France, in order to pay his debts, adulterated his coin, all the officers of his mint were sworn to secrecy.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 3.

The verse has a primary sense which reveals a future
state, and a secondary sense which hides and secretes it.
Warburton. Divine Legation, b. vi. § 3.

As Pringle, to procure a sane secretion,
Purges the primæ viæ of repletion.
Mason. Epis. to Dr. Shebbeare.

An Englishman will do you a piece of service secretly, and be distressed with the expressions of your gratitude.
Knox. Ess. No. 44.

SECT. Fr. Secte; It. Sètta; Sp. Secta;
SE/CTARY. Lat. Secta,—a fol-
SECTA/RIAN, adj. lower, (sc.) of a particular SECTA/RIANISM doctrine, from sequi, to fol-SE/CTARISM. low; or a partisan, from the SE/CTARIST. Lat. Sec-are, to sever or part.
SECTA/TOR. See Vossius and Martinius.
SE/CTION. The doctrine followed:
SE/GMENT. the party separated; or following a particular or especial doctrine or creed:
holding or teaching particular tenets or principles.

— And no gome elles
And he is āvaunt al way he seith. and of hus secte bothe
And whether he be oth^r be nat. he bereth the sygne of poverté
And in that secte oure Savvour. saved al mankynde.
Piers Plouhman, p. 267.

Bi the moost certeyn secte of oure religioun I lyude a farisee.—Wiclif. Dedes, c. 26.

For after the mooste straytest secte of oure lawe, lyued I a Pharisaye.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

This noble king was cleped Cambuscan.
Which in his time was of so gret renoun,
That ther n'as no wher in no regioun,
So excellent a lord in alle thing:
Him lacked nought that longeth to a king,
As of the secte of which that he was borne.
Chaucer. The Squires Tale, v. 10,326.

SEC

Why steal ye men's children for to make hem your sect, sith that theft is against God's hosts, and sith your sect is not perfect?—Jack Upland.

— Causeth for to bringe
This newe secte of Lollardie. Gower. Con. A. Prol.

And about this seasō, reygned, or began to reygne
y^e cursyd secte of y^t detestable & false prophete Machomet.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 133.

But we haue reason to coole our raging motions, our car-nall stings, or vnbitted lusts: wherefore I take this, that you call loue, to be a sect, or seyen, [scion.]
Shakespeare. Othello, Act i. sc. 3.

The sectaries of my celestial skill,
That wont to be the world's chief ornament,
They under keep.—Spenser.

Wherevpon the queene regent did send Noualle the king of Frances orator in that realme, to request the queene of England, that she would call hir ships home againe, and that she would not send aiding souldiers to the lords of the religion (whom Lesleus neuer tearmeth by anie other name than sectaries and seditious persons) whereby the peace might be broken with the French, and so occasion of warre giuen.—Holinshed. Historie of Scotland, an. 1560.

Gard. My lord, my lord you are a sectary,
That's the plaine truth; your painted glosse discovers
To men that vnderstand you, words and weaknesse.
Shakespeare. Hen. VIII. Act v. sc. 2.

Nothing hath more marks of schism and sectarism than this presbyterian way.—King Charles.

The best learned of the philosophers were not ignorant, as Cicero witnesseth for them, gathering the opinion of Aristotle and his sectators, with those of Plato, and the Academicks, to this effect, that the same power which they called animam mundi, the soul of the world, was no other than that incomprehensible wisdom, which we express by the name of God, governing every being as well in heaven as in earth.—Raleigh. History of the World, b. i. c. 1.

In one place, he adviseth his sectatours in disputations to be ambiguous: and in another, to bring forth any thing that occurs, rather than give way to their adversary;
counsel very well becoming an enquirer after verity.
Glanvill. Vanity of Dogmatizing, c. 17.

These six branches will, as I conceive, embrace the whole business: through which I shall run in as many several chapters or sections.—Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 74.

In the section of bodies, we find man, of all sensible creatures, to have the fullest brain to his proportion, and that it was so provided by the Supreme Wisdom, for the lodging of the intellective faculties.—Id. p. 80.

Who I beseech you is it in this case that makes the sect?
Is it not those who contract the church of Christ within limits of their own contrivance? who by articles and ceremonies of their own forming, separate from their communion all that have not persuasions which just jump with their model?—Locke. Third Letter for Toleration.

This done, he sent a journeyman sectary
He'ad brought up to retrieve, and fetch, and carry.
Butler. Upon Nye's Beard.

But that unfaithful test unsound will pass,
The dross of atheists, and sectarian brass.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

Segment-leaves, are leaves of plants divided or cut into many shreds.—Miller. Gar. Diet.

As the paths of error are various and infinite, the gnostics were imperceptibly divided into more than fifty particular sects, of whom the most celebrated appear to have been the basilidians, the valentinians, the marcionites, and, in a still later period, the manichæans.
Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 15.

Milton was certainly of that profession, or general principle, in which all sectarists agree; a departure from establishment.—Warton. Milton, son. 14. Note.

The segment is any part of a circle bounded by an arc and its chord.—Hutton. Mensuration. Definitions.

SE/CULAR. Fr. Séculier; It. Secolare;
SE/CULARITY. Sp. Secular, seglar; Lat. Se-
SE/CULARIZE, v. cularis, from seculum, sequicu- lum, from sequi, to follow. Seculum nihil aliud est quam annorum multorum series et sequela; a series, sequence or succession of many years.
Secular is used as distinguished from eternal, and equivalent to—

Temporal; pertaining to temporal things, things of this world, worldly: also opposed to—spiritual, to—holy.

Religious folke ben full couert,
Secular folke ben more apert.—Chaucer. Rom. of the R.

But now at erst I woll begin,
To expoune you the pith within,
And the seculars comprehend,
That Christes lawe woll defend.
Id. Ib.

And right so in semblable cas
This vice hath eke his officers
Amonge these other seculers
Of great men, for of the smale
As for to accompte he set no tale.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

But this is a mischeuous abomination, that they will not suffer the seculare power, to know the cause why they put men to death.—Fryth. Workes, p. 104.

For it is to be considered, that men of a secular life and conversation are generally so engaged in the business and affairs of this world, that they very rarely acquire skill enough in religion to conduct themselves safely to heaven through all those difficulties and temptations that lie in their way.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 4. p. 95.

The famous secular poem of Horace was composed for this last day, in the secular game held by Augustus.

Kennett. Antiq. of Rome, pt. ii. b. v. c. 7.

In secular duties, secularity is apt to creep in too much, and it is very easy always, in the performing them, to keep the mind and heart intent upon God, or to perform them upon a purely religious principle, which is the only thing that can make them valuable.

Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 481.

Let us all—but let the younger clergy, more especially, beware how they become secularized in the general cast and fashion of their lives.—Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 13.

SE/CUNDINE. Fr. Secondes, secondines; It. Secònda, secondiner; Sp. Secundina; Lat. Secundæ, quasi secundæ membranæ. See the quotations.

The casting of the skin, is by the ancients compared to the breaking of the secundine, or call; but not rightly: for that were to make every casting of the skin a new birth:
and besides, the secundine is but a general cover, not shaped according to the parts; but the skin is shaped according to the parts.—Bacon. Nat. Hist. § 730.

Now for the use of the young during its enclosure in the womb there are several parts formed as the membranes involoping it, called the secundines, the umbilical vessels.

Ray. On the Creation, pt. ii. p. 343.

SECURE, adj. } Anciently written, as now SECURE, v. } in Scotch, Siker. Fr. Seur; SECURELY. } It. Sicuro; Sp. Seguro; Lat.
SECUREMENT. } Securus, i. e. sine cura, with-SECURENESS. } out care, careless.
SECURITY. } Careless, or free from care, from fear; careless, heedless; confident; free or freed from fear, or cause of fear, from hazard, from danger; and, consequentially, safe.

To secure,—

To free from fear, or cause of fear, from hazard, from danger; to place in safety, in certainty; to confirm, to guard, to protect in safety.

And, forto be the sikere, he wende to Scotland,
And made hym there gret ost of folk of that lond.
R. Gloucester, p. 75.

Whan thou of thise ert sikere to the thorgh alliance,
Than is tyme to bikere with the kyng of France.
R. Brunne, p. 256.

So wele were thei chastised, alle com tille his grith,
That the pes of the lond the sikered him alle with.
Id. p. 34.

Unto the terme for told, of Saynt Andrewmesse,
The pope did him hold, with gode sikernesne.—Id. p. 316.

And certainly a man hath most honour
To dien in his excellence and flour,
When he is siker of his goode name.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 3050.

“And sothly suster mine,” (quod she)
“Now be we duchesses both I and ye,
And sikerde to the regals of Athenes,
And both hereafter likely to be queenes.”
Id. The Legend of Ariadne.

For at an hole in shone the mone bright,
And by that light she saw hem bothe two,
But sikerly she n'iste who was who.
Id. The Reves Tale, v. 4226.

And I pray you let me speke with your adversaries in privee place, for they shuln not knowe that it be of youre will or youre assent; and than, whan I knowe hir will and hir entente, I may conseille you the more seurely.

Id. The Tale of Melibeus.

And trewely it sit wel to be so,
That bachelers have often peine and wo:
On brotel ground they bilde, and brotelnesse
They finden, whan they wenen sikernesne:
They live but as a bird or as a beste.
Id. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9153.

He shuld beare a siker eie,
That he to lowe, ne to hie
His cart driue, at any throwe, Wherof that he might ouerthrowe.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

But wel is hym, that god wolle helpe.
For he stant on the siker side,
Whiche elles shulde go beside.—Id. Ib. b. v.

Nay (saide Florent) that male not bee,
Ride than forth thy way, quod shee:
And if thou go forth without reade,
Thou shalt be sikerly deade.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

This lorde, whiche herde of this tempest,
That he tofore his gate blewe,
Tho wist he by the lawe, and knewe,
That he was sekerly deade.—Id. Ib.

For he doth all his thyng by gesse,
And voideth all sikernesne.—Id. Ib.

For your security from any treachery (having no hostage worthy to countervail you) take my word, which I esteem above all respects.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

He forced was to turne from him and fly:
Yet ere he fled, he with his tooth impure
Him heedlesse bit, the whiles he was thereof secure.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 5.

But ah! who can deceive his destiny,
Or weene by warning to avoyd his fate?
That, when he sleepes in most security
And safest seemes, him soonest doth amate.
Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 4.

Lightly she leaped, as a wight forlore,
From her dull horse, in desperate distresse,
And to her feet betooke her doubtfull sikernesne.
Id. Ib. c. 7.

And unto Wor'ster he himself did move
A reconcilment to be made of all;
But Wor'ster, knowing't could not be secur'd,
His nephew's onset yet for all procur'd.
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. iv.

But now he was exil'd, he thought him sure;
And, free from farther doubting liv'd secure.—Id. Ib. b. i.

But you at home blest with securst ease,
Sitt'st and beleev'st that there are seas,
And watrye dangers.—Corbet. The Country Life.

And how his limbs, resolv'd through idle leisour,
Unto sweete sleepe he may securely lend.
Spenser. Virgil's Gnat.

Aga. 'Tis done like Hector, but securely done,
A little proudly, and great deale disprising
The knight oppos'd.
Shakespeare. Troyl. & Cress. Act iv. sc. 5.

They, like Judas, desire death; Cain, on the contrary, grew afraid thereof, and obtained a securment from it.
Brown. Vulgar Errors.

Sop. Alas, my son, nor fate, nor heaven it selfe,
Can or would wrest my whole care of your good
To any least secureness in your ill.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Bloody Brother, Act ii. sc. 4.

The sacred cradle to your charge receive,
Ye seraphs, and by turns the guard relieve;
Thy father's angel, and thy father join,
To keep possession, and secure the line.
Dryden. Britannia Rediviva.

“The winds, my friend, inspire a pleasing gale;
The ships, without thy care, securely sail.
Now steal an hour of sweet repose; and I
Will take the rudder, and thy room supply.”
Id. Virgil's Æneis, b. v.

In this district, however, the people seemed to live in a state of conscious security, and to avail themselves of their advantage.—Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 10.

SEDA'N. Florio calls Seggiètta, “a kind of chaire used in Italy to carrie men and women up and down.” And Skinner derives, Sedan, q. d.
Sedana, sediana, from the Lat. Sed-ere, to set.

A seat; an enclosed seat used for the same purposes as the It. Seggiètta.

—Nay, some have learn'd the trick
To beg for absent persons; feign them sick,
Close mew'd in their sedans, for fear of air:
And for their wives produce an empty chair.
Dryden. Juvenal, Sat. 2.

Possess ye therefore, ye who, borne about
In chariots and sedans, know no fatigue
But that of idleness, and taste no scenes
But such as art contrives, possess ye still Your element; there only can ye shine.—Cowper. Task.

SEDA'TE. } It. Sedato; Lat. Sedatus;
SEDA'TELY. } past part. of Sed-are, facere ut SEDA'TENESS. } aliquid resident; to cause any SE'DATIVE. } thing to settle, or become still.
See SAD.

Still, quiet, composed, calm, tranquil, serious.
Sedative (not uncommon), Fr. Sédatif,— Quieting, assuaging, mitigating, easing, appeasing, stinting, (Cotgrave.)

His silence here, with blushes, Paris breaks:
“’Tis just, my brother, what your anger speaks;
But who like thee can boast a soul sedate,
So firmly proof to all the shocks of fate?”
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. iii.

Go! fair example of untainted youth,
Of modest wisdom, and pacific truth;
Compos'd in sufferings, and in joy sedate,
Good without noise, without pretension great.
Id. Epit. on Robert Digby.

If we did heartily believe, and seriously consider what the present life is, and what will come after. If we did sedately weigh the infinite disproportion between a moment and eternity.—Sharp, vol. ii. Ser. 5.

They might have afforded us more light, if they had had less heat, and had been careful to preserve the coolness and sedateness proper to religious or learned inquiries.
Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 499.

I shall not trouble you with those common-place ideas which may be found in every good book of morality, but shall proceed to remind you of the substantial pleasures which belong to the sedate, the serious, the thoughtful.
Knox, vol. vi. Ser. 6.

Thus while she spoke, her eye, sedately meek,
Look'd the pure fervour of maternal love.
Beattie. The Judgment of Paris, p. 555.

—his [Saint Andrew] deep and piercing eye
Look'd wisdom, and mature sedateness weigh'd
To doubtful counsels.
Hamilton. Episode of the Thistle, b. i.

SE'DENTARY. } Fr. Sédentaire; It. Seden- SE'DENTARINESS. } tàrio; Sp. Sedentario; Lat.
Sedentarius, from sedere, to set, or sit.

Remaining or continuing sitting or at rest;
motionless, inactive.

Lastly, the great expence it will require, being not to remain sedentary in one place as other agents, but to be often in itinerary motion.—Howell, b. i. Let. 25.

—And on their orbs impose
Such restless revolution day by day
Repeated, while the sedentarie earth,
That better might with far less compass move,
Serv'd by more noble than her self, attaines
Her end without least motion.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. viii.

—Length of years
And sedentary numness craze my limbs
To a contemptible old age obscure.—Id. Samson Agonistes.

Real scruples of conscience, as to this particular, remain but with a few, and those the most sedentary and least enterprising of any.—Waterland, vol. viii. p. 462.

Those that live in great towns, together with the wealthier sort in the country, are inclined to paleness, which may be imputed to their sedentariness, or want of motion; for they seldom stir abroad.—L. Addison. West Barbary, (1671) p. 113.

But of all the barbarians, this humour would be least seen in the Egyptians; whose sages were not sedentary scholastic sophists, like the Grecian; but men employed and busied in the public affairs of religion and government.
Waburton. Divine Legation, b. iii. § 4.

SEDGE. } A. S. Secg; Dut. Seek, carex, SE'DGED. } from secando, because easily cut; SE'DGY. } or rather from the sharp edges of the leaves which cut the hand. The gladiolus (Skinner adds) has its name for the same reason.

Jay. But why all this haste, sir?
Woo. I'll tell you quickly. As I late was angling
In the great lake that lies behind the palace,
From the far shore, thick set with reeds and sedges.
Beaum. & Fletch. Two Noble Kinsmen, Act iv. sc. 1.

—Their horse at chariots fed,
Or greatest parsly, and on sedge, that in the fens is bred.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

Iris. You nimphs cald nayades of ye windring brooks,
With your sedg'd crownes, and euer-harmeslesse lookes,
Leave your criske channels, and on this greene-land
Answer your summons.—Shakes. Tempest, Act iv. sc. 1.

Hot. Reuolted Mortimer?
He neuer did fall off, my soueraigne liege,
But by the chance of Warre; to proue that true,
Needs no more but one tongue. For all those wounds,
Those mouthed wounds, which valiantly he tooke,
When on the gentle Seuernes siedgie banke,
In single opposition hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an houre
In changing hardiment with great Glendower.
Id. 1 Pt. Hen. IV. Act i. sc. 3.

Jaq. Let's go discharge our selves, and he that serves her
Or speaks a good word of her from this hour,
A sedgly curse light on him: which is, Pedro,
The fiend ride through him booted and spurr'd with a sythe at's back.
Beaum. & Fletch. Woman's Prize, Act v. sc. 2.

Old father Thames rais'd up his reverend head,
But fear'd the fate of Simois would return:
Deep in his ooze he sought his sedgy bed,
And shrunk his waters back into his urn.
Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Nor bind thy brows with humble sedges round.
Philips. To James Craggs, Esq.

SEDIMENT. Fr. Sédiment; It. Sedimento;
Lat. Sedimentum; for sedere, to set, or settle.
That which sets, settles, or sinks; which subsides.

The spirits in the ventricles of the brain, playing about and hitting against the sides of the caverns they are in, will in process of time abate of their agitation, the grosser parts especially; and so necessarily come to a more course consistency, and settle into some such like moist sediment as is found at the bottome of the ventricles, which nature dischargeth through fit passages whereby the spirits are left more pure.—H. More. Immortality of the Soul, b. ii. c. 9.

There is also a sort of water, of which there is only one small pond upon the island, as far distant as the lake, and, to appearance, very good, with a yellow sediment at the bottom.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 8.

SEDITION. Fr. Sédition; It. Sedizione; SEDITIONOUS. Lat. Seditio, from se, i. e.
SEDITIONOUSLY. seorsim, et itum, (Vossius.) SEDITIONARY. (See AMBITION.) Seorsim ire,
—to go separate or apart: and thus, separation,
departure, discord, or dissension (among citizens).
Departure, dissension, (sc. from union or peace, from submission, from obedience;) dissension, resistance, contention (against established authority).

And oon there was that was said Barabas that was bounden with men of discencioun that hadden doon manslaughter and sedicioun.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 15

Albe it he layeth great default vnto kyng Richard, saying i seducious & vyle wordis, y^t kyng Richard falsly brake his appoyntmētes, & kept no promesse y^t by hym was made.
Fabyan. Chronicle, an. 1192.

For wee see such miseries, hange ouer the whole state of common wealth, through the great misorder of your sedition, that it maketh vs much to reioyce, that we haue bene neither parteners of your doings, nor conspirers of your counsayles.—Cheeke. The Hurt of Sedition.

And now thorowe your seditions meanes, thinges that were afore quiet and in good order, lawes feared and obeyed, subiectes ruled and kept in duetie, be all now in a great disorder, and like if it be not holpen, to growe to wildenesse.
Id. Ib.

One said, of a sermon he preached before King Edward, when one asked him, how he liked Latimer's sermon before King Edward; "Even as I liked him always. A seditious fellow."—Strype. Eccles. Memor. Hen. VIII. b. i. c. 271.

If any speake vnreuerently or seditionously against the prince or the prime counsell, I haue seene them not onely interrupted, but it hath bene moued after to the house, and they haue sent them to the Tower.
Smith. Commonwealth, b. ii. c. 3.

What majesty of princes can
A tempest awe;
When the distracted Ocean
Swells to sedition, and obeys no law?
Habington. Castara, pt. iii.

A seditionary in a state, or a schismatick in the church, is like a sulphureous fiery vapour in the bowels of the earth, able to make that stable element reel again.
Bp. Hall. Remains, p. 71.

In vain seditious scribes with libel strive
T' inflame the crowd; while he with watchful eye
Observes, and shoots their treasons as they fly:
Their weekly frauds his keen replies detect;
He undeceives more fast than they infect.
Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel.

If any thing pass in a religious meeting seditionously, and contrary to the public peace, it is to be punished in the same manner, and no otherwise, than as if it had happened in a fair or market.—Locke. On Toleration.

I shall now move, "That it is the opinion of this Committee, that a Bill be brought in to renew and amend the Bill passed in the thirty-eighth year of his present Majesty, for securing and detaining persons accused of treason and sedition: and that a Bill be brought in to suppress seditious societies and seditious practices."
Pitt. Speech, April 19, 1799.

SEDUCE, v. Fr. Séduire; It. Sedurre;
SEDUCEMENT. Sp. Seducir; Lat. Seducere:
SEDUCER. (se, and ducere,) to draw or SEDUCING, n. lead apart or away from.
SEDUCIBLE. To draw or lead apart or SEDUCTION. away, out of the way or SEDUCTIVE. path; to withdraw, to allure, to entice, to mislead.

And such for drede or gayne as shall thy name refuse,
Shall perishe with their golden godds that did their harts seduce.
Surrey. Psalm 73.

Now will I endeauour my selfe to ouerthrow and vtterly put out the second errorr whiche hath long raigned and seduced many.—Fryth. Workes, p. 95.

I will explaine, that which being before misticallie couered, and commonly misconstrued, might be perillous in seducing you.—Gascoigne. To the Youth of England.

For, as for these my [Boner's] accusers, as they be euil, infamed, notorious, and criminous persons, so are they manifest and notable heretickes, and seducers of the people, especially touching the sacrament of the aultar.
Fox. Edw. VI. p. 1195.

But if the Scripture allow them, that you can not deny but it is so, then resist not ye doctrine of God, but knowledge your ignorance and seduction, and returne gladly into the right way.—Fryth. Workes, p. 3. To the Reader.

Who so hateth the intolerable outrage of your abuses, and pitieth the miserable seducings, and mocking of the people.—Jewell. Answer to M. Harding's Conclusion.

And after her did Paridell produce
His false Duessa, that she might be seene;
Who with her forged beautie did seduce
The hearts of some that fairest her did weene.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 5.

—What seducing charmes
Could on your clouded minds such darknesse bring,
To serue an out-law, and neglect the king?"
Beaumont. Bosworth Field.

'Tis true, 'twas a weak part in Eve to yield to the seducement of Satan; but it was a weaker thing in Adam to suffer himself to be tempted by Eve, being the weaker vessel.
Howell, b. ii. Let. 24.

Perez. No indeed,
There was no wisdom in't, to bid an artist,
An old seducer to a fermal banquet,
I can cut up my pye without your instructions.
Beaum. & Fletch. Rule a Wife & have a Wife, Act ii. sc. 1.

The vicious examples of ages past, poyson the curiosity of these present, affording a hint of sin unto seducible spirits, and soliciting those unto the imitation of them, whose heads were never so perversely principled as to invent them.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. vii. c. 19.

The true sense, which is only known by the tradition and consent of the catholick church: so that the one without the other is not a direction, but a seduction, to a simple man.—Strype. Eccles. Memoir. Mary I. c. 8.

They are not so much afraid of puzzling and perplexing the vulgar by doing it, as they are of betraying and exposing them to the attempts of seducers, should they not do it.
Waterland. Works, vol. iv. p. 313.

An ingenuous young man takes up the book, from the laudable motive of improving his mind with historical knowledge; but, as he reads, he finds himself seduced, and cheated into irreligion and libertinism.—Knox. Ess. 13.

Our thoughts too, as well as our passions, and appetites, are great seducers.—Gilpin, vol. i. Ser. 21.

Go, splendid sycophant! no more Display thy soft seductive arts!
The flattering clime of courts explore,
Nor spoil the convent's simple hearts.
Langhorne. The Sun-Flower and the Ivy.

SEDULOUS. Fr. Séduité; Lat. Seduli- SEDULOUSLY. tas, sedulus, from sedes, as SEDULOUSNESS. assiduus from assid-ere, to SEDULITY. sit to; sitting to, keeping close to, closely employed upon.

Keeping closely, earnestly employed; studiously, actively, diligent, industrious; taking much pains or labour.

Be sedulous to discharge thy trust, to perform thy charge; be zealous for souls, and careless of money.
Bp. Taylor, vol. iii. Ser. 4.

But for the imputation of rashness, in making it my business to divulge those secrets or mysteries that Moses had so sedulously covered in his obscure text; I say, it is the privilege of Christianity, the times now more than ever requiring it, to pull off the veil from Moses his face.
More. Def. of Philosophick Cabbala, c. 12. App.

When the very hauing of the bookes of God was a matter of no small charge and difficultie in as much as they could not be had otherwise then only in written copies, it was the necessitie not of preaching things agreeable with the word, but of reading the word it selfe at large to the people, which caused churches throughout the world to haue publique care that the sacred oracles of God being procured by common charge, might with great sedulitie be kept both intire and sincere.—Hooker. Eccles. Politie, b. v. § 22.

And therefore all things are in some measure obscure and intricate, that the sedulity of that divine spark, the soul of man, may have matter of conquest and triumph, when he has done bravely by a superadvenient assistance of his God.
More. Antidote against Atheism, b. ii. c. 6.

—The Britons squeeze the works
Of sedulous bees, and mixing odorous herbs
Prepare balsamic cups, to wheezing lungs
Medicinal, and short-breath'd, ancient sires.
J. Philips. Cider, b. ii.

—Then sedulously think
To meliorate thy stock. Id. Ib. b. i.

That matchless lady Jane [Grey] was a conspicuous studier of the inspired books; wherein her prospered sedulousness gave her an understanding much above her age and sex, though not above her virtue.
Boyle. Works, vol. ii. p. 316.

Hence the precepts importing the general tenor of Christian practice are usually couched in terms implying great sedulity and contention of soul.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 14.

Practice is justly called purblind; for practice, that is tolerable in its way, is not totally blind: an imperceptible theory, which grows out of, accompanies, and directs it, is never wholly wanting to a sedulous practice.
Reynolds. Art of Painting, Note 8.

I next endeavour to prove, that even those of them (namely, the several sects of Grecian philosophers) who did not believe this future state, yet, for the sake of society sedulously taught and propagated it.
Warburton. Rem. on Occasional Reflections, § 3.

SEE, n. Fr. Siège; It. Sède, sedia; Sp. Sede;
Lat. Sedes, a seat. See SIEGE.

A seat, (sc.) of power; of episcopal power or jurisdiction.

His holiness shewed me, that he perceived by your grace's letters, that I had certain credence to shew unto him of great moment and importance, concerning him and the see apostolick.—Burnet. Records, vol. i. pt. ii. b. ii. No. 29.

Nor that, which that wise king of Jurie framed
With endlesse cost to be th' Almighties see.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 10.

—You, Lord Arch-bishop,
Whose see is by a ciuill peace maintain'd.
Shakespeare. 2 Pt. Hen. IV. Act iv. sc. 1.

SEE, v. Goth. Saihwān; A. S. Seon; Dut.
SEER. } Sien; Ger. Sehen; Sw. Se. Junius and Skinner derive from the Gr. Θεωμαι, by the change of θ into σ . Wachter,—from aug, och, the eye, by prefixing the sibilant s quia verba sensuum derivari solent ab organis. Se in A. S. was the article, equivalent to the, by which it has been supplanted. To see is—

To take; to receive sensations or feelings—by the eye; to keep or hold—before the eye; to look at, to behold, to observe: generally—to perceive, to conceive, to discern, to distinguish, to detect. See the quotations from Locke and Reid.

SEER,—one who sees; sees into the future, foresees. See SEEK, SEEM.

But I seye to you that every man that seeth a woman to covete hir hath now do leecherie bi hir in his herte.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 5.

And Nathanaell sayde vnto hym: Can there any good thyng come out of Nazareth? Philip sayde to him: come and see.—Bible, 1551. John, c. 1.

And Nathanael seide to hym, of Nasareth, may som good thing be? Philip seide to him, come and se. Jhesus sigh Nathanael comynge to him, and seide to him, lo verilli a man of Israel, in whom is no gile.—Wiclif. Ib.

This frere came, as he were in a rage,
Wher as this lord sat eting at his bord:
Unnethes might the frere speke a word,
Til atte last he saide, "God you see."
Chaucer. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 7678.

(Quod Pandarus) "Madame, God you see,
With your booke, and all the companie."
Id. Troil. & Cres.

She was wel more blisful on to see
Than is the newe perjenete tree;
And softer than the wolle is of a wether.
Id. The Milleres Tale, v. 3248.

But netheles she herde his boone,
And saide, in truste of Christes lawe,
Whiche done was on the crosse and slawe,
Thou blynde man beholde and see.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

And as they were goig vp into the cite, they met with damosseles y^t came out to draw water, and sayd vnto them; is there here a sear. And the maydes answered thē: yea, behold he goeth there before you.—Bible, 1551. 1 Sam. c. 9.

SEE

*Imo. I see before me [man] nor heere, nor heere;
Nor what ensues but haue a fog in them
That I cannot looke through.*

Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act ii. sc. 2.

*Spir. Care, and utmost shifts
How to secure the lady from surprisal,
Brought to my mind a certain shepherd lad,
Of small regard to see to, yet well skill'd
In every virtuous plant, and healing herb,
That spreads her verdant leaf to th' morning ray.*
Milton. Comus.

Should kings and nations from thy mouth consult,
Thy counsel would be as the oracle
Urim and Thummim, those oraculous gems
Of Aaron's breast; or tongue of seers old Infallible.
Id. Paradise Regained, b. iii.

In the beginning of 1583, he contracted with certaine spirits to act and converse with them, and appointing Edw.
Kelley to be his seer or skryer, the first sight and discourse they had with them was at Lesden on the 28th of May the same year.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. ii.

The organ of seeing is the eye; consisting of variety of parts wonderfully contrived, for the admitting and re-fracting the rays of light; so that those that come from the same point of the object, and fall upon different parts of the pupil, are brought to meet again at the bottom of the eye, whereby the whole object is painted on the retina that is spread there.—Locke. Elements of Nat. Phil. c. 11.

It is not without reason, that the faculty of seeing is looked upon, not only as more noble than the other senses, but as having something in it of a nature superior to sensation.
The evidence of reason is called seeing, not feeling, smelling or tasting. Yea, we are wont to express the manner of the divine knowledge by seeing, as that kind of knowledge which is most perfect in us.—Reid. Inquiry, c. 6. s. 1.

SEED, n. } A. S. Sæd; Dut. Sæd; Ger. Sat, SEED, v. } saat; and Sw. Sæd, which Ihre SEE'DLING. } derives from soa, serere. The SEE'DNESS. } A. S. Sæd is also the past part.
SEE'DY. } of the A. S. verb Saw-an, (saw-ed, sau-ed, sæd), that which is sowed or sown. Seed is applied generally, to—

The origin, first principle, source, as—the cause;
also, to the product, offspring, progeny, race, as—the effect.

To seed,—to bear or produce seed.

Sholde nevere wete wexe, bote wete fyrste deyde
And othr sedes al so.
Piers Plouhman, p. 211.

And the servauntis of the husbonde man camen and seiden to him, lord wher thou hast not sowed good seed in the feeld?
Wiclif. Matt. c. 13.

Then came the seruantes of the housholder, and sayde
vnto hym: Syr, sowedst not thou good seeds in thy closse?
Bible, 1551. Ib.

And the thridde took hir also and alle sevene and leften not seed but ben deed.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 20.

The floure nill sedem of my corne.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

Wel wiste he by the drought, and by the rain,
The yelding of his seed, and of his grain.
Id. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 597.

Perseuer styll vnto the daye of Christes commynge, that you maye than appeare ryche, and aboundauntlye ful of good workes, wherof in this world you make as it wer a seedenesse, and shal reape ye frute therof at y^t day w^t moste plenteous encrease.—Udal. Philippians, c. 1.

— But all without,
The barren ground was full of wicked weedes,
Which she herselfe had sowed all about,
Now grown great, at first of little seedes,
The seedes of evill wordes and factious deedes.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 1.

— Nor creeps
That hardy worm with pointed tail,
But if I be under sail,
Flying faster than the wind,
Leaving all the clouds behind,
But doth hide her tender head
In some hollow tree or bed
Of seeded nettles.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Faithful Shepherdess, Act iv. sc. 1.

— Forthwith they reacht the tent
A shaggie rooffe of seedy reedes, mowne from the meades, a hall
Of state they made their king in, and strengthened it withall,
Thicke with firre rafters.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xxiv.

— As blossoming time
That from the seednes, the bare fallow brings
The teeming foyson euen so, &c.
Shakespeare. Measure for Measure, Act i. sc. 5.

Well, I say thrive, thrive brave artillerie yard,
Thou seed-plot of the warre.
B. Jonson. Excecrations upon Vulcan.

SEE

The seed of a plant consists of an embryo, with its coat or cover.—Miller. Dict. in v. Seed.

Prepare also matrasses, boxes, cases, pots, &c. for shelter to your tender plants and seedlings newly sown, if the weather prove very bitter.—Evelyn. Kalendarium. Nov.

Till, vain of mortals empty praise, he strove
To match the seed of cloud-compelling Jove!
Too daring bard! whose unsuccessful pride
Th' immortal Muses in their art defy'd.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

Ask we what makes one keep and one bestow,
That Power who bids the ocean ebb and flow,
Bids seed-time, harvest, equal course maintain,
Through reconcil'd extremes of drought and rain,
Builds life on death, on change duration founds,
And gives th' eternal wheels to know their rounds.
Id. Moral Essay, Ep. 3.

He therefore, who would see his flou'rs dispos'd Sightly and in just order, ere he gives
The beds the trusted treasure of their seeds,
Forecasts the future whole.
Couper. Task, b. iii.

— Whether you choose
The vernal blades that rise with seeded stem
Of hue purpureal.
Mason. English Garden, b. ii.

SEEK, v. } Goth. Soc-yan; A. S. Sec-an, SEE'KER. } (i. e. se-ic-an); Dut. Soek-en; SOUGHT. } Ger. Suchen; Sw. Soeka, from the verb to see, (Skinner,) because they who seek any thing, see or look for it.

To look for or after; to search, to inquire, to try or endeavour; to find or discover, to get or gain.

Brut wende forth into Engolond, and aspiede vp and doun
For to seche an ese place, to make an heued toun.
R. Gloucester, p. 23.

For the luther Maximian westward hider sogte,
And Cristenemen, that he fond, to strong deth he brogte.
Id. p. 81.

The body son thei fonde, the hade was in doute.
Up & doune in the felde thei souht it aboute.
R. Brunne, p. 22.

And thei helden the word at himsilf seekinge what this schulde be, whanne he had risun agen fro deeth.
Wiclif. Mark, c. 9.

And he seide this lyknesse; a man hadde a fige tree plauntid in his vyneyerd, and he cam sekinge fruyt in it and found noon.—Id. Luk, c. 13.

Thei that soughten the lyfe of the child ben deed.
Id. Matt. c. 2.

For they are deade which sought y^t childes life.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

"Brother," quod he, "wher is now your dwelling Another day if that I shuld you seche?"
Chaucer. The Freres Tale, v. 6992.

And wicked tongue is with these two,
That suffreth no man thider goe,
For er a thing be doe he shall,
Where that he commeth over all,
In fortie places, if it be sought,
Saie thing that never was done ne wrought.
Id. Rom. of the Rose.

And ouer that was saide them eke,
That whan men wolde vertue seke,
Men shulde it in the prestes fynde,
Their order is of so highe a kynde,
That thei be diuisers of the weie.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

The golde hath made his wittes lame,
So that sechende his owne shame,
He rouneth in the kynges eare,
And said hym, that he wist where
A gentill and a lustie one Tho was, and thither wolde he gone,
But he mote yeue yeftes great.—Id. Ib. b. v.

Men seyn how that thei [clerkes] were tho,
Whiche of wisdom the vertue soughten,
Unto the god firste thei besoughten,
As to the substance of their schoole,
That thei ne shulde not befoole
Their witte vpon none erthly werkes, Whiche were ayenst the astate of clerkes.—Id. Ib. Prol.

Montr. I required not
To be sought to this poor way; yet 'tis so far
A kind of satisfaction, that I will Dispense a little with those serious oaths
You made me take.
Massinger. The Unnatural Combat, Act v. sc. 2.

— It was your delight
To seek to me with more obsequiousness
Than I desired.
Id. The Picture, Act i. sc. 2.

— And Wisdom's self
Oft seeks to sweet retired solitude,
Where with her best nurse Contemplation
She plumes her feathers, and lets grow her wings.
Milton. Comus.

SEE

Whereupon by the endeavours of those inclin'd that way, he [Erbury] was made a chaplain in the Earl of Essex his army; and therein he sometimes exercised himself in military concerns, but mostly in those relating to his function, whereby he corrupted the soldiers with strange opinions, Antinomian doctrines, and other dangerous errors; and by degrees fell to grosser opinions, holding (as a presbyterian writer saith) universal redemption, &c. and afterwards became a seeker, and I know not what.
Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. ii.

SEEL, v. } To seel a ship, a nautical term
SEEL, n. } (says Skinner), when a ship leans, yields, gives—to one side; perhaps from syllan, to give. See To SELL.

When a ship seels or rolls in foul weather, the breaking loose of ordnance is a thing very dangerous.—Raleigh.

At his command black tempests rise;
Then mount they to the troubled skies:
Thence sinking to the depths below,
The ship hulls as the billows flow:
And all aboard, at every seele,
Like drunkards on the hatches reele.
Sandys. Ps. (ed. 1636,) p. 181.

SEEL. Seems to be the same word as sæl, in sæl-d. (See SELDOM.) Ray says—

Seel or seal, time or season, it is a fair seel for you to come at; i. e. a fair time or season:
spoken ironically to them that come late, (Essex.
ab. A. S. Sæl, time.) See also Moore, Suffolk
Words.

SEEL, v. Fr. Siller les yeux; to close the eyes of the dead, of a hawk: Fr. Seeler, to seal, (qv.) and consequentially, to fasten together, to close, to shut.

To close, to shut, to hoodwink; to sow up closely.

Iago. Why goo to then:
Shee that so young could giue out such a seeming
To seele her father's eyes vp, close as oake.
Shakespeare. Othello, Act iii. sc. 3.

— Come, seeling night,
Skarfe vp the tender eye of pittifull day,
And with thy bloodie and inuisible hand
Cancell and teare to pieces that great bond,
Which keepes me pale.—Id. Macbeth, Act iii. sc. 2.

Ambition, like a seeded dove, mounts upward,
Higher and higher still, to perch on clouds,
But tumbles headlong down with heavier ruin.
Ford. The Broken Heart, Act ii. sc. 2.

When he, tame crow, was winking at his farm,
Or, had he been here, and present, would have kept
Both eyes and beak seel'd up, for six sesterces.
B. Jonson. Catiline, Act ii. sc. 1.

SEE'LY. See SILLY.

SEEM, v. } See BESEEM.
SEE'MER. } Skinner says, from Ger.
SEE'MING, n. } Ziemen, decere, and this from SEE'MINGLY. } Ger. Schen; Dut. Sien; be-SEE'MINGNESS. } cause pleasing to the eyes or SEE'MLESS. } sight.
SEE'MLY. } It seemeth—appears to be SEE'MLINESS. } an elliptical expression; q. d.
SEE'MLIHED. } it seemeth as it should or ought; i. e. to see or look or appear fit, becoming, convenient, suitable, proper; it is good or well looking, it looks well; is good or pleasing or agreeable to see or look at: it is specious: specious or plausible in appearance, at first sight:

it appears or looks as if it were really so.

To seem, is,—to look, to present to the sight,
to appear or present the appearance.

And other seiden, he semeth to be a teller of newe feendis, for he teelde to hem ihesu and the aghenrisyng.
Wiclif. Dedis, c. 17.

Other sayde: he semeth to be a tydynges bringer of new dyuels, because he preached vnto them Jesus and the resur-rectyō.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Beware, I pray you, for by heven king
Ful many a man weneth to see a thing,
And it is all another than it semeth;
He which that misconceiveth oft misdremeth.
Chaucer. The Marchante Tale, v. 10,281.

Well could she sing and lustely
None halfe so well and seemly:
And cothe make in song such refraining,
It sate her wonder well to sing.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

The jay shall double without gesse
Whan thou thinkest on her seemliness.—Id. Ib.

SEE

Dame Richesse on her hond gan lede
A yong man full of semelyhede,
That she best loued of any thing
His lust was much in housholding.—Chaucer. R. of the R.

These olde clerkes tellen this:
That it is like a goat skipende:
And for that it is suche semende,
It is hote Capra saliens. Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

It wer farre more seeming that they shoulde wt the by good liuing begin to be men, then thou shouldest with them by the leauing of thy good purpose, shamefully begin to bee a beast.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 12.

And that gose he would haue fortified, and made somewhat semely with an other worde of Christ.—Id. p. 164.

Therefore to drawe easely and uniformelye, that is for to say, not wagginge our hand, now upward, now downward, but alwayes after one fashion, untill you come to the rigge or shouldringe of the heade, is best both for profite and seemelnesse.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. i.

Ham. I, madam it is common.

Queen. If it be;

Why seemes it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seemes Madam? Nay it is: I know not seemes.
Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act i. sc. 2.

Beyond this flood a frozen continent
Lies dark and wilde, beat with perpetual storms
Of whirlwind and dire hail, which on firm land Thaws not, but gathers heap, and ruin seems
Of ancient pile. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

— Lord Angelo is precise,

Stands at a guard with enuie: scarce confesses
That his blood flows: or that his appetite
Is more to bread than stone: hence shall we see
If power change purpose, what our seemers be.
Shakespeare. Measure for Measure, Act i. sc. 4.

Queen. My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weake
To oppose your cunning. Yare meek, and humblemouth'd,
You signe your place, and calling, in full seeming,
With meeknesse and humilitie.
Id. Hen. VIII. Act ii. sc. 4.

— In her ears the sound
Yet wrung of his perswasive words, impregn'd
With reason, to her seeming, and with truth.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ix.

What is this vain and idle reputation
Which to the show you seemingly respect?
Drayton. Matilda the Fair.

— Thence he her drewe
By the faire lockes, and fowly did array Withouten pittie of her goodly hew,
That Artegall himselfe her seemlesse plight did rew.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 2.

— You must learn to rhyme too
And riddle neatly; studie the hardest language
And 'tis no matter whether it be sense, or no
So it go seemlie off.
Beaumont & Fletcher. The Loyal Subject, Act iii. sc. 6.

He [John Terer] erected a seemly water-work, built steeple-wise, at the bridge gate, by his own ingenious industry and charge.—Fuller. Worthies. Chester.

Of face faire and manlike, eies bright and shining, and in age bald, but so as it was rather a seemelnesse to those his ancient yeares than any disfiguring to his visage.
Holinshed. Historie of England, Edw. III. an. 1377.

Strip thou their meretricious seemliness,
And tinfold glitt'ring, bare to ev'ry sight,
That we may loth their inward ugliness.
P. Fletcher. The Purple Island, c. 8.

Yet nathemore his meaning she aied,
But wondred much at his so selcouth case;
And by his persons secret seemlyhed
Well weend that he had bene some man of place,
Before misfortune did his hew deface.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 8.

It is not that I am ignorant how many several texts of scripture seemingly support that cause; but neither am I ignorant how all those texts may receive a kinder and more mollified interpretation.—Dryden. Religio Laici, Pref.

The authority of Aristotle and his learned followers, presses us on the one side; and the seemingness of those reasons we have already mention'd, perswades us on the other side.—Digby. Of Bodies, c. 7.

The Characteristics, and the Fable of the Bees, are two seemingly inconsistent systems: The extravagance of the first is in giving a scheme of virtue without religion; and of the latter a scheme of religion without virtue.
Warburton. Works, vol. ii. p. 34.

I cannot understand that any man's bare perception of the natural seemliness of one action and unseemliness of another should bring him under an obligation upon all occasions to do the one and avoid the other, at the hazard of his life, to the detriment of his fortune, or even to the diminution of his own ease.—Bp. Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 21.

VOL. II.

SEI

SEE'SAW, n. } Perhaps Saw-saw, a re-SEE'SAW, v. } duplication of saw, and intended to express the motion to and fro, backwards and forwards, in the act of sawing.

His wit all seesaw, between that and this;
Now high, now low, now master up, now miss,
And he himself one vile Antithesis.—Pope. Prof. to the Sat.

When desperate heroines grieve with tedious moan
And whine their sorrows in a see-saw tone
The same soft sounds of unimpassion'd woes
Can only make the yawning hearers doze.
Lloyd. The Actor.

SEETHE, v. } A. S. Seothan; Dut. Sied-en; SEE'THER. } Ger. Sied-en; Sw. Siuda, bul-SOD. } lire, ebullire, fervere, aqua fervida coquere. P. Plouhman writes the past tense Soth.

To boil; to be boiling hot. Seethed, seeth'd,
see'd, sod, sodden.

Peter fyshed for his foode, and hys fellowe Andrewe,
Some they sold, and some they soth, & so they liued both,
Piers Plouhman, fol. 81. p. 2.

He conde roste, and sethe, and broile, and frie.
Chaucer. Prof. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 384.

Certes, right so thise shrewes ne hold hem not apaied of rosted flesh and sodden, with which the peple feden hem in gret reverence.—Id. The Persones Tale.

Vapour, a dewie miste, as the smoke of a seething pot.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 7.

But the women of every family by course have the office and charge of cookery for seething and dressing the meat, and ordering all things thereto belonging.
More. Utopia, b. ii. c. 5.

The kynge of Englande and the great men of his oost had euer with theym in their cariages, tentes, pavilions, mylles, ouyns, and forges, to syeth and to bake, and to forge shoos for horses.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, c. 210.

And many times (their drink is) meath made of honey, or liquorice sodden in water; for thereof they have great store.
Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 1.

Jacob sod potage, and Esau came fro the felde & was faynty, & sayde to Jacob: let me suppe of y^e redde potage, for I am faynty.—Bible, 1551. Genesis, c. 25.

Of all creatures, this [lobster] onely hath a tender and short kind of flesh, which in the seething will not hang together, unlesse it be sodden alive in scalding water, and then it will be stiffe and callous as brawne.
Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 30.

Nor must we be so grosse to imagine, that Homer made Achilles or Diomed blubber, or sob, &c. but in the very point and sting of their unvented anger, shed a few violent and seething-over teares.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. i. Comment.

The fire thus form'd, she sets the kettle on,
(Like burnish'd gold the little seether shone.)
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. viii.

This operation they repeat till they think the contents are sufficiently stewed or seethed.
Cook. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 3.

SE/GMENT. See SECT.

SE/GREGATE, v. } Fr. Ségréger; It. Se-
SE/GREGATE, adj. } gregare; Sp. Segregar; SEGREGA'TION. } Lat. Segregare, a grege separare, to separate from a flock or herd, and thus opposed to aggregate, (qv.); generally,—
To separate, to sever, to select.

He translateth those wordes in those places into the englishe tong by other wordes then suche as in the englishe tong doe signifye those holie consecrate companyes, the tone segregate from paynims by the sacrament of baptyisme, the tother segregate fro the laye peple by the sacrament of order.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 428.

These gallants of the time had some yeares before, besides their near alliance by marriage of Pompey to Julius Caesar's daughter, (a lady of imperious allurements) been likewise united together in a triumphal knot with Marcus Crassus, the wealthiest of the whole nobility, which consortship was in effect a kind of segregate, or cabinet-senate.
Reliquiae Wottonianae, p. 240.

— What shall we heare of this?
A segregation of the Turkish fleet.
Shakespeare. Othello, Act ii. sc. 1.

To decline offences; to be careful and conscionable in our severall actions, is a purity, that every man ought to labour for, which we may well doe, without a sullen segregation from all society.—Feltham, pt. i. Res. 5.

SE/GNIOR. See SENIOR.

1697

SEI

SEINE. } Fr. Sacune, seine; It. Sagena; SE'INER. } Lat. Sagena; Gr. Σαγηνή,—which Cotgrave calls,—

A very great and long fishing net.

The sayne is a net, of about fortie fathome in length, with which they encompasse a part of the sea, and drawe the same on land by two ropes, fastned at his ends, together with such fish, as lighteth within his precinct.
Carew. Survey of Cornwall, fol. 30.

Sayners complayne with open mouth, that these drouers worke much prejudice to the commonwealth of fishermen, and reape thereby small gaine to themselves.—Id. Ib. fol. 32.

In fair weather you shall have 8 or 10 great boats, each with a sain or haling net.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

We caught fish here in tolerable quantities, especially when the smoothness of the water permitted us to hale the seyne.—Anson. Voyages, c. 12.

They make also a kind of seine, of a coarse broad grass, the blades of which are like flags; these they twist and tie together in a loose manner, till the net, which is about as wide as a large sack, is from sixty to eighty fathom long.
Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 18.

For two or three days, great quantities of mackerel had been caught by the natives, within the reef, in seines.
Id. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 3.

SE/JOIN, v. } Lat. Sejungere, (se, and jungere,) SE/JUNCTION. } to separate things joined.
SE/JUNGIBLE. } To separate, to sever.

I would be the first that would cast this stone at Rome;
but now, that we share with them these sinnes, there is no reason wee should be sejoyned in the censure.
Bp. Hall. The Hypocrite.

The constitution of that people was made by a sejunction and separation of them from all other nations in the earth.
Pearson. On the Creed, Art. 2.

The spawn and egg are sejungible from the fish and fowl,
and yet still retain the prolific power of generation.
Id. Ib. Art. 1.

SEIZE, v. } See DISSEIZE. Fr. Saisir;
SE'IZIN. } Low Lat. Saisire, which signi-SE'IZURE. } fies—vel occupare, manum inji-cere, invadere; vel alteri possidendum tradere, (Vossius, de Vit. lib. ii. c. 25.) from Sessione, or the Gr. Σακκίζω, saccum expilare. (See Menage, Skinner, Du Cange.) It is perhaps merely the verb To cheese. A. S. Ceos-an, cis-an, to take.

To take, to take hold or possession of; to take or keep hold, fast hold; to fasten, to fix.

Vor this slazt the king of France orn vpe the king son,
& his londes bizonde se seisede anon
Aquitayne & Normandie.—R. Gloucester, p. 493.

Ac wende hym out of Normandye anon to Englelond, Vorto nyme hastelyche seisyne of hys londe.—Id. p. 382.

Knoute & Edrik thei seised thorgh tresone Bokyngham & Bedford, the toun of Huntynghone.
R. Brunne, p. 47.

He gaf londes bityme, of whilk ther successoure
Hold git the seisyne, with fulle grete honoure.—Id. p. 72.

This knight, whiche houted and abode
Embuished vpon horsbake,
All sodenliche vpon hym brake,
And hath hym by the bridell seised.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

For that partie was the best,
And double as muche as other two.
And was that tyme bounded so,
Wher as the floud, which men Nile calleth,
Departed fro his cours, and falleth
In to the sea Alexandrine,
There taketh Asia first seisine
Towarde the weste.
Id. Ib. b. vii.

They could scarcely understand the last words; for death began to seize himself of his heart.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

And [the same dean and chapter] shall be adjudged and deemed in actual possession and seizin of, and in the same premises, to all intents and purposes, according to their old corporation.—Burnet. Records, vol. i. pt. ii. b. iii. No. 16.

Thus the kynge of England had the possession and seesyn- ynge of the duchie of Aquitayne, and of the countie of Ponthieu, of Guynes, and of all the landes that he ought to haue on that syde of the see.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 214.

We will, consent, and grant, that he as superiour lord to performe the premisses may haue the seizine of all the land and castels of the same, till they that pretend title to the croune be satisfied in their suit.
Holinshed. Historie of England, an. 1291.

And the other course, that of seizure, he judged to be repugnant to his majesty's laws.
Strype. Eccles. Memor. Hen. VIII. vol. i. b. i. c. 33.

10 G

— When that disdainful beast,
Encountering fierce, him sudden doth surprize;
And, seizing cruell claws on trembling brest,
Under his lordly foot him proudly hath suppress.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 5.

As when a beare hath seiz'd her cruell claws
Upon the carcas of some beast too weake,
Proudly stands over, and awhile doth pause
To heare the piteous beast pleading her plaintiffe cause.
Id. Ib. b. v. c. 4.

— Admiration seiz'd
All heav'n, what this might mean, or whither tend.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

Adam, Heav'n's high behest no preface needs:
Sufficient that thy prayers are heard, and death,
Then due by sentence when thou didst transgress,
Defeated of his seizure many dayes
Giv'n thee of grace.
Id. Ib. b. xi.

The Indians having perceived, by our seizure of the bark the night before, that we were enemies, they immediately fled into the woody parts of the island.
Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 2.

This livery of seisin is no other than the pure feudal investiture, or delivery of corporeal possession of the land or tenement; which was held absolutely necessary to complete the donation.—Blackstone. Commentaries, b. ii. c. 20.

In this sense the apostle speaks of Christ's laying hold on him, to conduct him into the path of life, and to support him in it; at the same time, not without some oblique allusion to the miraculous manner of his first conversion, under the image of a sudden and violent seizure.
Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 27.

SELCOU' TH. } "That much people saved SELCOU' THLY. } of selcouth sores," (Piers Ploughman, speaking of Christ's miraculous cures.)
In A. S. Selcouth, comp. of seld, seldom, rarely, and cuth, known.

Seldom or rarely known; rare, strange, unusual.

Wele tuelue gere kept he this lond,
& how he died here selcouthly I fond.—R. Brunne, p. 93.

Yet nathemore his meaning she ared,
But wondred much at his so selcouth case;
And by his persons secret seemlyhed
Well weend that he had bene some man of place,
Before misfortune did his hew deface.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 8.

SELD. } Sel in A. S. is—well, very well,
SELDOM, adj. } enough, and sel-d is—rare,
SELDOM, ad. } unusual, (Somner.)
SELDOMNESS. } A. S. Seld, seldom; Dut. Selden; Ger. Selten. Wachter leads back to the A. S. Syllic, sellic, mirabilis. See SILLY, and SEEL.

Tooke produces the quotation from Chaucer's Clerkes Tale, where it is used adjectively, and remarks,—the Dutch have also the adj. selden, sellen; the Germans, Sellen; the Danes, Seldsom; the Swedes, Sellsynt.

Rare, unusual, uncommon: and the adv.—
Rarely, unusually, uncommonly, scarcely.

— Somme [apples] aren rype
Swettour and savorour. and also more grettour
Than that seilde haven the sonne.—Piers Ploughman, p. 307.

The book of decrees sayth: 'Selden or with gret peine ben causes ybrought to a good ende, whan they ben badly begonne.—Chaucer. Tale of Melibeus.

And Jesus, filius Sirach, as I gesse,
He speketh of you but selden reverence.
Id. The Marchantes Tale, v. 10,054.

I me rejoiced of my libertee,
That selden time is found in mariage.
Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 7958.

— There is game none
That fro my bookes maketh me to gone
But it be seldome on the holy daie,
Save certainly, whan that the month of May
Is comen.
Id. Legend of Good Women.

I saw how stedfastnes did flee with winges of often change
A flyeing bird, but seldome sene, her nature is so strange.
Of the Mutability of the World.

She like one of Vesta's nuns, entertained her self for a few days in all shew of straightness, yet once a day coming to her duty to the king and queen, in whom the seldomness of the sight increased the more unquiet longing.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

Upon the earth the spring was seldom seen,
'Twas winter there, when each place else was green;
When summer did her most abundance yield,
There lay still brown as any fallow field.
Drayton. The Moon-Calf.

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure,
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.
Shakespeare. Son. 42.

In poets as true genius is but rare,
True taste as seldom is the critic's share.
Pope. Essay on Criticism.

It seldom happens, however, that great fortunes are made, even in great towns, by any one regular, established, and well-known branch of business, but in consequence of a long life of industry, frugality and attention.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 10.

SELE'CT, v. } It. Scgeliere; Lat. Seligere, SELE'CT, adj. } select-um, (se, and legere, Gr.
SELECTION. } Λεγ-ειν,) to choose, to take SELECTOR. } out or apart from others.

To choose out of; to take in preference, or because preferred, to others.

To whom th' aggrieved son, (as if disgrac'd)
"Ah! father, have you then selected me
To be the man, whom you would have displac'd
Out of the roll of immortality?"—Daniel. Civil Wars, b. vi.

Him for to seeke, she left her heavenly hous,
The house of goodly formes and faire aspects,
Whence all the world derives the glorious Features of beautie, and all shapes select,
With which high God his workmanship hath deckt.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 6.

And Richard, duke of York, still struggling for the crown,
Whom Salisbury assists, the man with whose renown
The mouth of fame seem'd fill'd, there having with them then
Some few selected Welsh, and southern gentlemen.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 22.

While we single out several dishes, and reject others, the selection seems but arbitrary, or upon opinion.
Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 25.

As guided by a god, secure he goes,
Arm'd with my fellowship, amid the foes:
And sure no little merit I may boast,
Whom such a man selects from such a host.
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. xiii.

There breathes not scarce a man on British ground
(An isle for love and arms of old renown'd)
But would have sold his life to purchase fame,
To Palamon or Arcite sent his name:
And had the land selected of the best,
Half had come hence, and let the world provide the rest.
Id. Palamon & Arcite.

Men, in their ill-advised zeal to defend the scripture-doctrine of the Son's divinity, were not always sufficiently careful in selecting their arguments.
Warburton. Bolingbroke's Philosophy, Let. 2.

Let the boy's judgement then be exercised and strengthened by being early habituated to the work of selection.
Knox. Liberal Education, § 25.

Like all inventors and selectors of their own systems, they have been hurried to excess, and have disgraced the rational parts of their philosophy by far-fetch'd refinements or by foolish tenets, which could originate only in the madness of enthusiasm.—Id. Ess. 104.

SELF. } Goth. Silba, or silbo; A. S.
SELVE. } Sylf, or sylfa; Dut. Self; Ger.
SE'LFISH. } Selb. B. Jonson calls self a SE'LFISHLY. } pronoun signifying a reciprocation. Wallis declares it to be SE'LFISHNESS. } a noun substantive, to which SELF-NESS. }

the Lat. has scarcely any substantive that corresponds; the word persona or propria persona approaches nearest: thus—my self, thy self, our selves, your selves (ego ipse, &c.) are mea persona, tua persona, nostra persona, &c. Himself, itself, themselves, (he says,) are used for his-self, its-self, their-selves; and (by introducing own) his own self, its own self, their own selves, are ipsius propria persona, illorum propria persona. Mr. Tyrwhitt has shown (from Hickeys) that sylf in A. S. was declined like other adjectives, and joined in construction with pronouns personal and substantives just as ipse in Latin: and he thinks that a custom was gradually introduced of annexing self to pronouns in the sing. number only, and selves to those in the plural; and this he imagines was one cause of the mistake grammarians have committed in considering self to be a substantive: self is undoubtedly prefixed to nouns substantive adjectively, and annexed to pronouns, substantively. Could the original meaning of the word be discovered, the various usages, and their progress might be accounted for;—it may sometimes be supplied by same, as in Chaucer and North, self place, same place; by own, as by any self industry in Sidney, any industry of its own.

The force of the word seems always to be to confirm or strengthen the sameness, identity or individuality of some person or thing.

Self-ish,—pertaining to self; partial to, subservient to self; the interests or pleasures of self.

And in this manner was Engolond brought first in seruage,
And thorg treson of this selue lond forst gef truage.
R. Gloucester, p. 59.

Holy writ whitneseth. ther were suche eremytes
Solitarie by hemself. and in here selles lyveden
Whith oute borwyng other begginge.
Piers Ploughman, p. 285.

Therefore Jhesus criede in the temple, techinge, and seide, ye knowen me, and ye knowen of whennes I am: and I cam not of my self, but he that sente me, whom he knownen not.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 7.

Then cried Jesus in the tēple as he taught, saying: ye know me, and whēce I am ye know. And yet I am not come of my selfe, but he that sente me is true, whome ye knowe not.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And in the selve moment Palamon
Is, under Venus, estward in the place,
With baner white, and hardy chere and face.
Chaucer. The Knights Tale, v. 2587.

And at the last he toke conclusion,
That ther at first, Arcite and Palamon
Hadden for love the bataille hem betwene,
That in that selve grove, sote and grene,
Ther as he hadde his amorous desires,
His complaint, and for love his hote fires,
He wolde make a fire, in which the office
Of funeral he might all accomplise.
Id. Ib.

— She was slaine right in the selve place.
Id. The Frankeleines Tale, v. 11,716.

I beare of love the gonfounone,
Of curtesie the banere,
For I am of the selve manere,
Gentle, courteous, meeke and free.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

How it was written full of names,
Of folke that had afore great fames,
Of old time, and yet they were
As fresh as men had written hem there
The self day, or that houre
That I on hem gan to poure.—Id. House of Fame, b. iii.

For good counsell is good to here,
All though a man be wise hym selue,
Yet is the wisdom more of twelue.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

— He all other set at nought
And weneth of him seluen so:
That suche as he is, there be no mo.
Id. Ib. b. i.

Let vs receaue all thinges of God whether it be good or bad; let vs humble our selues vnder his mighty hand, and submitte our selues vnto his nurture as chastising, and not withdraw our selues from his correction.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 119

They both perceived a thing which floated, drawing nearer and nearer to the bank; but rather by the favourable working of the sea, than by any self-industry.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

Wholly her's, all selfness he forbears.
Id. Astrophet & Stella.

The whiles that mighty man did her demeane
With all the evil termes and cruell meane
That he could make; and eeke that angry foole
Which follow'd her, with cursed hands uncleane
Whipping her horse, did with his smarting tooles
Oft whip her dainty selfe, and much augment her doole.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 7.

Albeit this love was a thing even incorporated into them, that the most honest and vertuosest women loved the young maids thus also; yet was there no jealousie nor suspicion that grew hereof, but rather to the contrary, there grew a marvellous mutual love and kindness between them, which lived in one self place.—North. Plutarch, p. 43.

By reason whereof, having to deal with another captain alike venturous and valiant as himself, in all service and execution, he shewed the self boldness and courage that Hannibal did.—Id. Ib. p. 159.

He at the length was slaine and layd on ground,
Yet holding faste twixt both his armes extended Fayre Pastorell, who with the selve same wound Launcht through the arme fell down with him in drerie swound.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 11.

The selve same authors doe affirme.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 14.

O false and wicked colours of desire!
Eternal bondage unto him that seeks
To be possess of all things that he likes!
Shall I, a son and subject, seem to dare,
For any selfness, to set realms on fire?
Lord Brooke. Mustapha.

Love did us both with one self-arrow strike,
Our wounds both one, our cure should be the like.
Drayton. Hen. Howard to Lady Geraldine.

— Do you feel

What follows a self-bloud, whether you venture,
And to what punishment?

Beaum. & Fletcher. Thierry & Theodoret, Act iv. sc. 1.

In the story I dare follow none of the modern erroneously transcribing relators or seeming correctors, but have, as I might, took it from the best self-fountains.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 8. Note.

Thou self-idea of all joys to come,
Whose love is such, would make the rudest speak,
Whose love is such, would make the wisest dumb;
O when wilt thou thy too long silence break,
And overcome the strong to save the weak!

G. Fletcher. Christ's Victory & Triumph, p. 65.

Moreover, I have observ'd that he is too much given to his study and self-society, especially to converse with dead men, I mean books.—Howell. Letters, b. ii. Let. 51.

But whatsoever to some men makes a man, and consequently the same individual man, wherein perhaps few are agreed, personal identity can by us be placed in nothing but consciousness (which is that alone which makes what we call self) without involving us in great absurdities.

Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 27.

They judge of things according to their own private appetites, and selfish passions, and not with a free uncapitivated universality of mind, and an impartial regard to the good of the whole.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 670.

To save, where you have power to kill,
Argues your power above your will;
And that your will and power have less Than both might have of selfishness.

Hudibras, pt. i. c. 2.

While nought save narrow selfishness succeeds,
And low design, the sneaking passions all
Let loose, and reigning in the rankled breast.

Thomson. Britannia.

Whatever contradiction may vulgarly be supposed between the selfish and social sentiments or dispositions, they are really no more opposite than selfish and ambitious, selfish and revengeful, selfish and vain.

Hume. On the Understanding, s. 9.

But men are led into this mistake by laying too much stress upon etymology, for selfishness being derived from self, they learnedly infer that whatever is done to please one's own inclination must fall under that appellation, not considering that derivatives do not always retain the full latitude of their roots.—Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 54.

SELL, n. Fr. Selle; It. Sella, a seat, a saddle;
Lat. Sella.

A seat; a seat on horseback; a saddle.

— And, passing by
With his bright blade did smite at him so fell,
That the sharpe steele, arriving forcibly
On his broad shield, bitt not, but glauncing fell
On his horse necke before the quilted sell,
And from the head the body sundred quight.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 5.

Yet was the force so furious and so fell,
That horse and man it made to reele asyde:
Nath'lesse the prince would not forsake his sell,
(For well of yore he learned had to ryde).—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 8.

The tyrant proud frown'd from his lofty cell,
And with his lookes made all his monsters tremble.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. iv. s. 7.

SELL, v. } A. S. Syllan; Dut. Sellen; Ger.
SE'LLER, n. } Selen; Sw. Sälja, dare, tradere, SALE, n. } to give, to deliver; to give or deliver, for or in exchange for; hence—vendere.

Verstegan says: "Syle, or seale, to pay or to give; siling, paying or giving. We now use the word selling for ought that is given or delivered for the value thereof."

It is used where something is given or delivered in exchange for money or security for money;
and thus (as buy also is) distinguished from bartering or exchanging goods for goods, wares for wares. As opposed to buy,—

To give or deliver, part with or dispose of, for something paid and received as equivalent.

These sent this men & said, "that ther conseele so ches,
"Thei wild till vs be laid, in gode lufe & pes,
"That our merchantz mot go forto bie & selle."

R. Brunne, p. 287.

Jhesus selth to him, if thou wolt be parfit: go and sille alle thingis that thou hast, and gyve to pore men and thou schalt have tresour in heven, and come and sue me.

Wiclif. Matt. c. 19.

And Jesus sayde vnto hym yf thou wylt be perfecte, goo and sel that thou hast, and geue it to the poore, and yu shalt haue treasure in heauen, & come & folow me.

Bible, 1551. Ib.

And Jhesus entride into the temple of god, and castide out of the temple alle thet boughten & solden.

Wiclif. Matt. c. 21.

And Jesus wēt into ye tēple of God, & cast out al the y^t solde & boughte in ye tēple.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Therefore he seide to hem, but now he that hath a sachel:
take also and a scrippe, and he that hath noon selle his coote and bye a swerd.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 22.

And he said to them: but now he that hath a wallet let him take it vp, & lykewyse hys scrippe. And he that hath no swerde, let hym sell hys cote & bye one.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

For hou manye euer weren possessioneris of feeldis either of housis thei seelden and broughten the pris of the thingis that thei seelden and leiden before the feet of apostlis.

Wiclif. Dedis, c. 4.

But thei that use 'hem in misse manere,
Or set 'hem up to any sale,
I trowe thei shall abie 'hem dere.

The Plowman's Tale, pt. iii.

His highness, by the advice of his council, hath ordained and taxed, That the sellers thereof shall not take for any of the said bibles unbound, above the price of ten shillings.

Burnet. Records, pt. ii. b. iii. No. 24.

As for your eloquence, and furniture of woordes, as it serueth wel, to make the matter more saleable in the sight of the simple, so it addeth but smal weight vnto the trueth.

Jewell. Replie to M. Hardinge, p. 645.

If in my flower of youth and strength, when all men
Lov'd, honour'd, fear'd me, thou alone couldst hate me
Thy husband, slight me, sell me and forego me.

Milton. Samson Agonistes.

This is that then, which makes land, as well as other things dear: plenty of buyers, and but few sellers; and so by the rule of contraries, plenty of sellers and few buyers makes land cheap.—Locke. Of the Lowering of Interest.

By diminishing the number of sellers, therefore, we necessarily diminish that of buyers, and are thus likely not only to buy foreign goods dearer, but to sell our own cheaper, than if there was a more perfect freedom of trade.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 2.

Those crowds of books which are obtruded upon us under this form, by those whose only intention is to make a saleable commodity, might certainly, as far as the interests of literature are concerned, be spared.

Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 52.

SE/LVEDGE. In Dut. Self-egghe, self-end, self-kant; ora panni vel telæ; extremitates panni aut lintei, Kilian;—who says, that in Sax. Self, sulf, is extremitas and extremus; but this does not account for closing the edge. Skinner thinks selvage to be—quasi salvage; quia, (sc.) vestem
conservat, roborat, efficitque ut diutius duret.
Mr. Thomson conjectures that the Dut. (where it is also written self-weg) is formed of zeel, a cord; and voege, a joining. (Zeel, in A. S. Sæl, is from the A. S. verb Sæl-an, Dut. Seel-en, ligare, vincire, to bind, to fasten. Zeel or sæl will not give zef or self; otherwise selv-edge might be—the fastened edge, the closed edge.) From the Dut.
it is plain that selv-edge is a compound word, the latter portion of which is edge. May it not be the self or selve-edge; emphatically its own proper edge; the final edge of the piece; that which finishes or confines it.

Then shalt thou make loupes of jacynete coloure alonge by the edge of ye one curtayne euen in the seluege of the coupling courtayne.—Bible, 1551. Exodus, c. 26.

And they made fyftie loupes of jacynete alonge by the edge of the vttermost curtayne, euen in the seluege of the coupling curtayne.—Id. Ib. c. 36.

SE'MBLANT, adj.

SE'MBLANT, n.

SE'MBLANCE.

SE'MBLABLE.

SE'MBLABLY.

SE'MBLATIVE.

Like; having, bearing, presenting, showing, a like or similar appearance. The n.—

Likeness; like appearance; generally, appearance, form or figure, representation.

Ther come in tuelf olde men myd euene pas there,
Men of wel vayr semblant, and branchys hii bere
Of olyue, as in sygne that hii of pes were.

R. Gloucester, p. 139.

O God Almyghty that man. made and wrouht Semblable to hym self.—Piers Ploukman, p. 315.

1699

And whanne thei dredden and bowiden her semblant into erthe, thei seiden to hem, what seeken ye him that lyeth with deede men?—Wiclif. Luk, c. 24.

Right so this god of loves hypocrite
Doth so his ceremonies and obeisance,
And kepeth in semblant alle his observance,
That souneth unto gentillnesse of love.

Chaucer. The Squieres Tale, v. 10,828.

Full like to her was thilke image,
That maked was like her semblance.—Id. R. of the R.

Whan that oure Lord had created Adam oure forme father, he sayd—in this wise; 'It is not good to be a man allone: make we to him an helpe semblable to himself.'

Id. Tale of Melibeus.

In all this case, and in semblables,
If that there ben mo reasonables,
He may begge, as I tell you here,
And eles not in no manere.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

Of fals semblant I shall tell,
Aboue all other it is the well,
Out of the whiche deceite floweth.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

He made an image of entaile,
Liche to a woman in semblance,
Of feature, and of countenance.—Id. Ib. b. iv.

Than is it wonder of a man,
Whiche kinde hath, and reason can,
That he wold either more or lasse
His kinde and reason ouerpasse,
And slea that is to hym semblable.—Id. Ib. b. iii.

To the ende that the Brytons shuld thynke that dede to be done agayne his mynde and wyll, [Vortiger] wept and made semblant of all sorowe and heynes.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 81.

But gentle sleepe envyde him any rest;
Instead thereof sad sorow and disdaine
Of his hard hap did vexe his noble brest,
And thousand fancies bett his ydle brayne
With their light wings, the sights of semblants vaine.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 4.

And ever, when the prince unto him spake,
He louted lowly, as did him becum,
And humble homage did unto him make;
Midst sorrow shewing joyous semblance for his sake.

Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 7.

And many other semblable things arising from natural causes.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxviii. c. 1.

Semblably the geographers varie and disagree much about the measure and dimension of Æthiopia.

Id. Ib. b. vi. c. 29.

Semblably, the writings of Diocles the Carystian, were no lesse stored with the like medicines, [herbs,] and yet a famous physician he was, and both in time and reputation next and second to Hippocrates.—Id. Ib. b. xxvi. c. 2.

Hot. This Douglas? No, I know this face full well:
A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt,
Semblably furnished like the king himselfe.

Shakespeare. 1 Pt. Hen. IV. Act v. sc. 4.

Du. Deere Lad, beleue it;
For they shall yet belye thy happy yeeres,
That say thou art a man; Dianas lip
Is not more smooth, and rubious: thy small pipe
Is as the maiden's organ, shrill, and sound,
And all is semblative a womans part.

Id. Twelfth Night, Act i. sc. 4.

Two youths approach, whose semblant features prove Their blood devolving from the source of Jove.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. iv.

I last the visionary semblance view'd
Of Hercules, a shadowy form; for he,
The real son of Jove, in Heaven's high court
Abides, associate with the gods, and shares Celestial banquets.—Fenton. Homer Imitated.

SE'MI. Lat. Semis, from the Gr. ἡμιος; for αἰσος, hoc autem haud dubie pro μυος cui vicinum μεσος medius, (Lenep.) middle; q. d.
divided in the middle; a moiety, a half.

Semi is much written—prefixed.

Of double worsted was his semicope,
That round was a belle out of the presse.

Chaucer. Prolog. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 244.

He cometh to the carpenteres hous,
And still he stant under the shot window;
Unto his brest it rought, it was so low;
And soft he cougheth with a semisoun.

Id. The Milleres Tale, v. 3694.

In summe, she [the nightingale] varieth and altereth her voice to all keyes; one while, full of her largs, longs, briefes, semibriefes, and minims; another while in her crotchets, quavers, semiquavers, and double semiquavers.

Holland. Plinie, b. x. c. 29.

Thou woulst make an absolute courtier, and the firme fixture of thy foote, would glue an excellent motion to thy gate, in a semi-circled farthingale.

Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor, Act iii. sc. 3.

New by the degree of reason and philosophy, the rain-bow hath its ground in nature, and caused by the rayes of the sun, falling upon a roride and opposite cloud; wherefore some reflected, others refracted, beget that semi-circular variety we generally call the rain-bow.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. vii. c. 4.

There is a good riding in all this semicircular bay between the islands and Sumatra.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

And on the top of each of them [pillars] there is a semiglobe, with the flat surface upwards; the whole of the pillars and semi-globe is solid, being composed of sand and stone cemented together, and plaistered over.

Anson. Voyage, b. iii. c. 2.

Occidus is a pastor of renown,
When he has pray'd and preach'd the sabbath down,
With wire and catgut he concludes the day
Quav'ring and semiquav'ring care away

Cowper. Progress of Error.

A series of sounds relating to one leading note is called a mode, or a tone, and there are twelve semitones in the scale, each of which may be made in its turn the leader of a mode.

Jones. On the Imitative Arts.

SEMINAL, adj. } Fr. Séminale, semer; It. Seminale, seminare; Sp. Seminario, sementar; Lat. Seminalis, from semen, a seed. Semen, quasi serimen, from serere, to sow. (See SEED.) Seminal,—That can or may seed, or bear or produce seed: of or pertaining to seed.

Seminary,—where seeds are set: (met.) where the seeds or first principles are implanted; the seed or first principle, the origin.

A seminal form is a created spirit organizing duly prepared matter into life and vegetation proper to this or the other kind of plant.—More. Immort. of the Soul, b. i. c. 8.

Which seminal principle is a mixture of the divers particles of matter and spirits, derived and elicited from the plant or animal.—Hale. Origin of Mankind, p. 76.

The seminals of other iniquities.

Brown. Christian Morals, b. iii. c. 4.

For if in every part from whence the seed doth flow, there be contained the idea of the whole; there was a seminality and contracted Adam in the rib, which by the information of a soul, was individuated into Eve.

Id. Vulgar Errors, b. vi. c. 1.

The true seeds of cypresse are indistinguishable by old eyes. From such undiscernable seminalities arise spontaneous productions.—Id. Cyrus' Garden, c. 3.

Seminary vessels, both preparatory and ejaculatory.

Smith. On Old Age, (1666,) p. 117.

As concerning seminaries and nource-gardens, Nature hath shewed us the reason and manner thereof, by certain trees that put forth at the root a thicke spring of young roots or sions: but lightly the mother that beareth these imps, killeth them when she hath done, with her shade and dropping together.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 10.

As, a while ago, they made me, yea me, to mistake an honest zealous pursuivant for a seminary.

B. Jonson. Bartholomew Fair, Act ii. sc. 1.

Her garments blue, and semined with stars.

Id. Masques at Court.

For the fourth and last way, of secret semination, wherein we had been hitherto wholly deficient and asleep: this I said was the particular scope of my present charge.

Reliquiae Wottonianae, p. 494.

We are made to believe, that in the fourteenth year males are seminifical and pubescent; but he that shall enquire into the generality, will rather adhere unto the cautious assertion of Aristotle.—Brown. Vulg. Err. b. vi. c. 8.

A seminary, is a seed-plot, which is adapted or set apart for the growing of seeds.

Seminal leaves are two plain, soft, and undivided leaves, that first shoot forth from the greatest part of all sown seeds. Seminiferous, bearing or producing seed.

Miller. Gardener's Dictionary.

It [Mr. Locke's book] is said, very unjustly, to contain the seminal principles of Mr. Paine's matured and expanded tree.—Knox. The Spirit of Despotism.

Those pious benefactors to mankind did not mean to establish seminaries to prepare men for the world, but to teach them to despise it.—Id. Ess. 128.

SEMPITERNE. } Fr. Sempiternel; It. Sempiternale, sempiterno; Sp. Sempiterno; Lat. Sempiternus, semper and aternus. See ETERNAL. Eternal, or without either beginning or end; everlasting.

That is the God, whose magestee
All other thynges shall gouerne,

And his beinge is sempiterno.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

This silent night, when all things lie in lap of sweet repose,
Ye only wake, the pourses of sleepe your eyes do neuer close,
To shew the sempiternitie, to which their names ye raise
On wings of your immortal verse, that truly merit praise.

Mirror for Magistrates, p. 557.

To the end that they may carry the communication of the divine goodness and benignity as far as is possible (they) are not contented to suppose the world to be sempiternal or eternal à parte post, or to be as ancient as the sacred scriptures inform us, but will carry up the creation of the world to an immense antiquity, long before six thousand years.

Hale. Origin of Mankind, p. 91.

If it [the world] had been created a million of years sooner, yet the future eternity or sempiternity of the world being of all hands admitted, though the eternity à parte ante be denied, there will be a future infinity for the emanation of the divine goodness and beneficence to his creatures.—Id. Ib. p. 94.

Upon a supposition of a future sempiternity, this would produce the same difficulty, without such interposition of the Divine Wisdom and Providence.—Id. Ib. p. 227.

If that one man was sempiternal, why Did he, since independant, ever die?

Blackmore. Creation, b. vi.

SE'NARY. Lat. Senarius, six. See the quotation.

The senary or the number six has a double reference, the one to this particular day's work, the other to the whole creation.—H. More. Defence of Phil. Cabbala, c. 1.

SE'NATE. } Fr. Sénat; It. Senato; Sp. Senado; Lat. Senatus: so called quia a senioribus constabat, because it consisted of the senior or older men; and thus constituted a council of the ancients. See the quotation from North.

Fram the cenatour of Rome hii come, and thys seyde:
"Lucie, the cenatour of Rome, to Arture the kyng"

R. Gloucester, p. 193.

For which this emperour hath sent anon
His senatour, with real ordinance,
And other lordes, God wote, many on,
On Surriens to taken high vengeance.

Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 5380.

And netheles in this mattere
It hapned that like tyme so,
This lorde, with whome she shulde go,
Of Rome was the senatour.

Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

After this, he made a hundred counsellors of the best and honestest men of the city, which he called patricians; and the whole company of them together he called senatus, as one would say, the Council of the Ancients.

North. Plutarch, p. 21.

You are my second, sweet, to every cup,
I add unto the senate a new honour,
And to the sons of Mars a donative.

Beaum. & Fletcher. Tragedy of Valentinian, Act v. sc. 7.

And so he created a hundred senatours: either because that number seemed great ynough, or for that there were no more but one hundred that were of worth to bee elected counsellors or [wise] fathers.—Holland. Livius, p. 7.

From which step his courage and wisdom raysed him by degrees to the sovereignty of Lucca, the senatorship of Rome, the special fauour of the emperor, and a neere hope, (only by death preuented,) of subduing Florence.

Carew. Survey of Cornwall, fol. 120.

The right of naming senators belonged at first to the kings; afterwards the consuls chose, and referred them to the people for their approbation: but, at last, the censors engrossed the whole privilege of conferring this honour.

Kennett. Romae Antiquae Notitia, pt. ii. b. iii. c. 2.

The mother was cheerful; the father senatorially grave.

Drummond. Trav. (Let. dated 1744), p. 17.

I remember, in a conversation I once had with my ever dear friend Garrick, who was the first of actors, because he was the most acute observer of nature I ever knew, I asked him how it happened, that, whenever a senate appeared on the stage the audience seemed always disposed to laughter? He said the reason was plain; the audience was well acquainted with the faces of most of the senators.

Burke. On a Regicide Peace, Let. 4.

If the most unbounded libertinism of sentiment and practice be a qualification for a senator, then let him be educated in an English university, as it is now constituted.

Knox. Of Education, § 43.

Though his [Titian] style is not so pure as that of many other of the Italian schools, yet there is a sort of senatorial dignity about him, which, however awkward in his imitators, seems to become him exceedingly.—Reynolds, Dis. 4.

This year, therefore, was particularly fortunate to him, as it brought an increase, not only of issue, but of dignity into his family, by raising it from the equestrian to the senatorial rank.—Middleton. Life of Cicero, vol. i. § 1.

SEND, v. } Dut. Seynden, senden; Ger. Senden; Sw. Sända; A. S. Sendan, jacere, jaculari, emittere, mittere, facere ut eat, to cast or throw. In Luke xxi. 1, "They castiden her gifts," is in A. S. Sendan. In Mark xii. 44, "Alle hesten of that thing," is in A. S. Sendon. And in the old English version quoted by Mr. Tooke, (Mark xii. 41,) the word is cast, (to cast money,) and in the three remaining verses it is sent: "She sente twey minutis; this pore widewe sente; all senten:"—send and cast being thus used as equivalent terms. And so send continues in vulgar speech to be still used; and see the quotation from Spenser.

To throw or cast, to shoot; to cause to go or move; to convey by agency of another; to confer.

It is used with correspondent English prepositions as equivalent to the compounds of the Lat. Mittere; to emit or send forth, to immit, to dismiss, to transmit, &c.

This erl bi grete lordes to this kyng ofte sende,
That he schulde for Gode's loue ys wylle som del amende.
R. Gloucester, p. 54.

Oure lord, among other thinges, hym sende a fair sonde,
That he hadde an holy dogter at Colchestre in this londe
Id. p. 82.

Kyng Macolon hurde telle her of in Scotlonde,
To hym to Gloucestre sone he sende hys sonde.—Id. p. 391.

He sent for alle the kynges, fro Berwik vnto Kent, & thei with fulle gode wille alle vnto him went.
R. Brunne, p. 19.

After than thow seyndest hem somer. that is hem sovereyn
joye
And blisse to alle been. bothe wilde and tame.
Piers Plouhman, p. 258.

And he sente hem in to Bethleem: and seide go ye, and axe ye bisily of the childe, and whanne ye han foundun tell ye it to me; that I also come and worschipe him.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 2.

And set them to Bethleem, saying: Goo & search diligently for the childe, and whē ye haue founde him, brynge me worde, that I maye come and worship him also.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

For I cam down fro heuene, not that I do my wille, but the wille of him that sente me.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 6.

For I came doune from heauen; not to do myne owne wyl; but his wyl whiche hath sent me.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

— The king of Arabie and of Inde,
My liege lord, on this solempne day
Salueth you as he best can and may,
And sendeth you in honour of your feste
By me, that am al redy at your heste,
This stede of bras.—Chaucer. The Squieres Tale, v. 10,424.

Yet had I neuer suche mattere,
Wherof myn herte myght amende,
Not of so muche as she sende
By mouth, and saide, Grete him well.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

Wherefore in all haste he (Rycharde 1st.) sent downe, guyng straye commaundement that they shuld cease of the ryot, but the people were in such ire & wodeness, that they refrayned not for all the kynges sonde, tyll they had executyd the fyne of their malyce.
Fabyan. Chronycle, an. 1191.

In his right hand he held a trembling dart,
Whose fellow he before had sent apart.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 2.

— But first whom shall we send
In search of this new world, whom shall we find Sufficient?
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

— Thy words
Attentive, and with more delightful eare, Divine instructor, I have heard, then when Cherubic songs by night from neighbouring hills
Aereal music send.
Id. Ib. b. v.

Cas. Hey-day!
Good words my masters; this is court-infection,
And none but cowards ply them; tell me, Decius,
Without more circumstance, who is the sender?
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Laws of Candy, Act iii. sc. 1.

Eze. This was a merry message.
King. We hope to make the sender blush at it.
Shakespeare. Henry V. Act i. sc. 2.

— If I must contend, said he,
Best with the best, the sender not the sent,
Or all at once; more glorie will be wonn,
Or less be lost.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

His wounded men he first sends off to shore,
Never till now unwilling to obey;
They, not their wounds, but want of strength, deplore,
And think them happy who with him can stay.
Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

SE'NDAL. Fr. Sendal; It. Cendalo; Sp. Cendal; Low Lat. Cendalum, a very thin or fine silk.

And ge worthly women. wit goure longe fyingres
That ge on selke and sendel. to sewen wenne tyme ys.
Piers Plouhman, p. 128.

In sanguin and in perse he clad was alle
Lined with taffata, and with sendalle.

Chaucer. Prolog. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 441.

The courteins were of sendall thyn.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

SE'NESCHAL. } Fr. Séneschal, séneschall; SE'NESCHAUNCE. } It. Seniscalco, siniscalco; Sp.
Seniscal; Low Lat. Senescallus. (See MARSHAL,
i. e. Marischal, Low Lat. Mariscalcus.) Menage, Wachter, Vossius, Lye, &c. have written largely upon this word; and the result seems to be that sen is (Goth. Sineigs senior, (qv.) and scalus, (Goth. Skalks;) A. S. Scalc, scealc; Ger. Schalk;
It. Scalio, (as in Mareschal;) and that thus senescalcus is—senior servus, honorator,—
The elder servant, the superior officer.

Somme aren as seneschals. and serven oth^r lordes.

Piers Ploughman, p. 5.

The seneschall was cal'd to deeme the right.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 1.

Which to provide, she hath this castle dight,
And therein hath a seneschall assynd, Cald Malefort, a man of mickle might,
Who executeth her wicked will with worse despight.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vi.

—Then marshal'd feast

Serv'd up in hall with sewers, and seneshals.

Id. Ib. b. ix.

The gouernynge of Lāguedocke was taken awaye fro the duke of Berrey, and deuoyded into seneschaunces to the kynges profyte.—Berners. Froissart. Cron. vol. ii. c. 160.

SE'NIOR, or SE'IGNIOR, adj. & n.

SI'GNIOR.

SI'GNIOREY.

SE'NIORITY.

SE'NIORIZE, v.

SE'IGNEURIAL.

SE'NE'SCENCE.

SE'NILE.

SE'NILITY.

Fr. Seigneur; It. Signore; Sp. Senor; Lat.
Senior, from seni; so called—a sensus diminution, or quasi semi-nex,
i. e. semi-mortuus; or by metathesis from the Heb.
or the Arabic. (See Vossius.) In the Gothic version of the Gospels

sineig, senex, sinista, maxime senex, are of ordinary occurrence; and Wachter thinks sen may mean senior, e. g. Senones, the most ancient of the Suevi, (Tac. Ger. c. 39.) Sin, in A. S. Lye interprets, semper, perpetuo. Further the etymologists do not carry us: a conjecture may be allowed that the verb see is the radical origin, and that sen or sin means seen. A senior, one who has seen many years, much time pass away.

Aged or elderly, more aged or elderly; having seen, passed, lived—many, more, years.

Senior or signior,—a title bestowed on elders, or superiors, or those having or exercising authority or power, rule or dominion, lordship, sovereignty.

—And hym sulf he wolde wende

Vor to wynne seynorye aboute in other ende.

R. Gloucester, p. 186.

Rollo was his name, a knyght fulle douhty,

That Alfride wend wele, haf lorn the seignory.

R. Brunne, p. 24.

And [God] yaf her [reason] sith such aduantage,

That she hath might and seignory

To kepe men from all folly.—Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

And yf he meane to take the latin woorde seniour, that word in the latin tongue neuer signified a priest, but onely an elder man.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 221.

No man in heauen, nor in earth, neither vnder the earth, was able to open the booke, or to looke on y^e booke, till the lambe came, vnto whom the seniours spake, on this maner.

Barnes. Workes, p. 227.

His faire mother behight him not to vs
Such one to be; ne therefore twyse him saued
From Grekish armes; but such a one
As mete might seme great Italie to rule,
Dreedful in arms, charged with seignorie,
Shewing in profe his worthy Teuerian race;
And vnder lawes, the whole world to subdue.

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. iv.

And than they came to the isle of Chyfolgnie, and there luded, and founde a great nombre of ladyes and damosels, who had the sygniorite of that isle.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 224.

And, as in well growne woods, on trees, cold spinie grashoppers
Sit chirping, and send voyces out, that scarce can pierce
our eares
For softnesse, and their weake faint sounds: so (talking on the toure)
These seniors of the people sate.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. iii.

A third seignorie or shire there is that goeth to Apamia,
which in old times was called Celenæ.

Holland. Plinie, b. v. c. 29.

As faire he was, as Cithereas make,

As proud as he, that *signorise*th hell,

In fashions way-ward, and in loue vnkinde,

For Cupid deignes not wound a curish minde.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. iv.

Rome thou art tam'd, and th' earth dew'd with thy blood
Doth laugh to see how thou art signoriz'd.

Cornelia, 1594. E. 2.

Think'st thou to signorize, or be the king

Of such a number, nobler than thy selfe.

Id. E. 3.

The names of lord, signior, seigneur, senior, in the Italian, French, and Spanish languages, seem to have at first imported only elder men, who thereby were grown into authority among the several governments and nations, which seated themselves into those countries upon the fall of the Roman empire.—Sir W. Temple. On Government.

As in insurrections the ringleader is looked on with a peculiar severity, so, in this case, the first provoker has, by his seniority and primogeniture, a double portion of the guilt.—Government of the Tongue.

The earth and all things will continue in the state wherein they now are, without the least senescence or decay, without jarring, disorder, or invasion of one another.—Woodward.

My green youth made me very unripe for a task of that nature, whose difficulty requires that it should be handled by a person in whom nature, education, and time have happily matched a senile maturity of judgement with youthful vigour or fancy.—Boyle. On Colours.

This chief was styled senior, lord, and the like terms, which marked out a superiority in age and merit.

Burke. Abridg. of Eng. Hist. b. ii. c. 7.

In consequence of this idea, the pleasures of the table, and of horses and dogs, are commonly the chief objects of pursuit, even among those whose seniority ought to render them patterns of industry, frugality, and decency to the junior members.—Knox. Works, vol. iv. p. 177.

They [the clergy] were the statesmen, they were the lawyers; from them were often taken the bailiffs of the seigneurial courts.—Burke. Abridg. of Eng. Hist. b. iii. c. 6.

Mr. Edwards, when going away, again recurred to his consciousness of senility; and looking full in Johnson's face, said to him, You'll find in Dr. Young, "O my coevals!
remnants of yourselves." Johnson did not relish this at all,
but shook his head with impatience.

Boswell. Life of Johnson, an. 1778.

SENOCULAR. Having six eyes, senos oculos.

So that as most animals are binocual, spiders for the most part octonocular, and some (as Mr. Willughby thought) senocular; so flies, &c. are multocular, having as many eyes as there are perforations in their corneæ.

Derham. Physico-Theology, b. viii. c. 3. p. 372. Note.

SENSE, n.

SE'NSED.

SENSA'TION.

SE'NSATED.

SE'NSEFUL.

SE'NSELESS.

SE'NSELESSLY.

SE'NSELESSNESS.

SE'NSIBLE, adj.

SE'NSIBLE, n.

SE'NSIBLENESS.

SE'NSIBLY.

SENSIB'LITY.

SENSITIVE.

SENSITIVELY.

SENSIVE.

SE'NSORY, adj.

SE'NSORY, n.

SENSO'RIAL.

SE'NSUAL.

SE'NSUALIST.

SE'NSUALLY.

SENSUAL'ITY.

SE'NSUALIZE, v.

SE'NSUOUS.

SE'NTIENT, adj.

SE'NTIENT, n.

Fr. Sens, sensible, sensitif, sentir; It. Senso, sensato, sensibile, sensitivo, sensivo, sensuale, sentire; Sp. Senso, sentato, sensacion, sensible,
sensitivo, sensual, sentir; Lat.
Sensus, sentire, to ken, to feel, to think; which (Vossius) may perhaps be (by transposition of letters) from the Gr. Αισθαν-εσθαι.

The bodily senses are,— seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, feeling. Sense is then applied to—

Perception, apprehension, conception by the mind; to the perceptions, apprehensions, conceptions of the mind; to the mind, thought;
to what the mind thinks, or receives or comprehends by thought; the meaning or signification.

Tooke remarks our improper use of the adj. sensible (in common with many other adjectives in bilis),—"We have senseful, full of sense; sensitive, that can feel; and sensible, that may be felt: and yet we talk of a sensible man, who is very sensible of the cold, and of any sensible change in the weather."

Sensation,—feeling, idea.

Sensual,—relating to, acting upon—the senses,
or bodily feelings.

A sensual person, or sensualist,—one whose thoughts, feelings, are confined to his bodily feelings or sensations; who is addicted, devoted to their gratification.

Sensuous is used by Milton as equivalent to senseful, full of sense or feeling (bodily or corporeal); and he converts sensible into a noun substantive.

Thou shalt vnderstand therefore that the Scripture hath but one sence, which is the litteral sence. And that litteral sence is the roote and ground of all, and the ancre that neuer fayleth, whereunto if thou cleaue thou canst neuer erre or go out of the way.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 166.

Popilius flieth therwhile, and leauing there
The senseless stock, a griezely sight doth beare, Unto Antonius board, with mischief fed.

Vncertaine Auctors. Cicero's Death.

Then he was lying down senselesly on his senseless friend,
as in all estates striving to be still like him.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

And from thys eternall dampnation of sensyble paine in the fyre of hel, thei thought that neuer any of the kynde of man shoulde be preserued, but by the merytes of the passion of Christe, and faythe in him comen or to come.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1281.

Palms do rejoyce to be joynd by the match of a male to a female,

And shall sensive things be so senseless as to resist sense?

Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

If thou wilt mighty be, flee from the rage

Of cruell will, and see thou kepe the free

From the foul yoke of sensual bondage.

Wyatt. He ruleth not, &c.

Originally all conceptions proceed from the action of the thing itself, whereof it is the conception: Now when the action is present, the conception it produceth is called,
Sense: and the thing by whose action the same is produced, is called the object of the sense.—Hobbs. Hum. Nature, c. 2.

—Can it be

That modesty may more betray our sence

Then womans lightnesse?

Shakespeare. Measure for Measure, Act ii. sc. 2.

God to remove his wayes from human sence,

Plac'd heaven from earth so farr, that earthly sight,

If it presume, might erre in things too high,

And no advantage gaine.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. viii.

—Sense of pleasure we may well

Spare out of life perhaps, and not repine,

But live content, which is the calmest life.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

On a green shadie bank profuse of flours

Pensive I sate me down; there gentle sleep

First found me, and with soft oppression seisd

My droused sence.

Id. Ib.

Now let the sciolist tell me, why things must needs be so, as his individual senses represent them? Is he sure, that objects are not otherwise sensed by others, then they are by him? and why must his sense be the infallible criterion? It may be, what is white to us, is black to negroes, and our angels to them are fiends.

Glanvill. Vanity of Dogmatizing, c. 22.

Those that make motion and sensation thus really the same, they must of necessity acknowledge, that no longer motion, no longer sensation, (as Mr. Hobbs has ingeniously confessed in his Elements of Philosophy;) and that every motion or re-action must be a new sensation, as well as every ceasing of re-action a ceasing of sensation.

More. Immortality of the Soul, pt. ii. b. i. c. 12.

The ladie, hearkning to his sensefull speech,

Found nothing that he said unmeet nor geason,

Having oft seene it tryde as he did teach.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 4.

Where when confusedly they came, they fownd

Their lady lying on the sencelesse grownd.

Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 1.

Then up he tooke the slombred sencelesse corse;

And, ere he could out of his swone awake,

Him to his castle brought with hastie forse,

And in a dongeon deepe him threw without remorse.

Id. Ib. b. i. c. 7.

And if a man have his wits about him, and be not drunk with sensuality and sencelessness, he need not much to dispute before he pass the sentence.

Bp. Taylor, vol. ii. Ser. 18.

First she them led up to the castle wall,

That was so high as foe might not it clime,

And all so faire and sensible withall.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

Our torments also may in length of time

Become our elements, these piercing fires

As soft as now severe, our temper chang'd

Into their temper; which must needs remove

The sensible of pain.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

Heraclides, writeth of a woman, that for a seven-night lay for dead, and fetched not out her breath sensibly, who in the end was raised againe to life.—Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 52.

Then I spied a great stone, and sitting awhile upon't, I fell to weigh in my thoughts that that stone was in a happier condition in some respects, than either those sensitive creatures or vegetables I saw before.—Howell, b. ii. Let. 50.

The sensitive faculty, through the nature of man's sense, may express itself more sensitively towards an inferior object than towards God; this is a piece of frailty.—Hammond.

I say in general, that sensation is made by the arrival of motion from the object to the organ; where it is received in all the circumstances we perceive it in, and conveyed by virtue of the soul's presence there, assisted by her immediate instrument the spirits, by virtue of whose continuity to those in the common sensorium, the image or impress of every object is faithfully transmitted thither.

More. Immortality of the Soul, pt. iv. b. ii. c. 11.

And this brave knight, that for this virtue fights,
Now comes to point of that same perilous sted,
Where pleasure dwelles in sensuall delights, Mongst thousand dangers and ten thousand magick mightes. Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

And they, so perfect is their misery,
Not once perceive their foul disfigurement,
But boast themselves more comely than before;
And all their friends and native home forget,
To roll with pleasure in a sensual sty.—Milton. Comus.

But negligent security and ease,
Unbridled sensuality begat,
That only sought his appetite to please,
As it in midst of much abundance sat.
Drayton. Thomas Cromwell, p. 160.

For there is a sanctity even of body and complexion, which the sensually-minded do not so much as dream of.

More. Phil. Writings, Gen. Pref. p. viii.

And [the soul] finding the ease she had from her visible and sensuous colleague the body, in performance of religious duties, her pinions now broken, and flagging, shifted off from her self the labour of high soaring any more, forgot her heavenly flight, and left the dull and droyling carcase to plod on in the old road, and drudging trade of outward conformity.—Milton. Of Reformation in England, b. i.

To which poetry would be made subsequent, or indeed rather precedent, as being less subtle and fine, but more simple, sensuous, and passionate.—Id. Of Education.

Laertius tells us, that Boethius, an eminent and famous stoical doctor, did plainly deny the world to be an animal, that is to have any sentient, conscious or intellectual nature presiding over it.—Cudworth. Intell. System, b. i. c. 3.

If the sentient be carried passibus æquis with the body, whose motion it would observe; (supposing the former condition, that it be regular and steady), in this case especially the remove is insensible.—Glanvill. Van. of Dogmat. c. 9.

Oft did I wish those dreadful pois'ned lees,
Which clos'd the ever waking dragon's eyes;
Or I had had those sense-bereaving stalks,
That grow in shady Proserpine's dark walks.
Drayton. Q. Isabel to Mortimer.

The first thing to be considered in common to all the sensitive creatures, is their faculty of seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, and feeling; and the organs ministering to these five senses, together with the exact accommodation of those senses and their organs to the state and make of every tribe of animals.—Derham. Physico-Theology, b. iv. c. 1.

Which when I say the senses convey into the mind, I mean they from external objects convey into the mind what produces there those perceptions. This great source of most of the ideas we have, depending wholly upon our senses, and deriv'd by them to the understanding, I call sensation.
Locke. Origin of Ideas, b. ii. c. 1.

As those of the one are sensated by the ear, so those of the other are by the eye.—Hooke, in Hist. R. S. vol. iii. p. 194.

But 'tis in vain; the wretch is drench'd too deep;
His soul is stupid, and his heart asleep;
Fatten'd in vice; so callous, and so gross,
He sins, and sees not; senseless of his loss.
Dryden. Persius, Sat. 3.

For of all Nature's works we most should scorn
The thing who thinks himself a poet born,
Unbred, untaught, he rhymes, yet hardly spells,
And senselessly, as squirrels jangle bells.
Otway. Upon Mr. Creech's Trans. of Lucretius.

Thus, from their profane neglect of God's worship, men naturally slide into an habitual senselessness and incogitancy of him, and from thence to not believing; and from thence to disbelieving him, in an easy and almost necessary transition.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 3.

Our senses, conversant about particular sensible objects, do convey into the mind several distinct perceptions of things, according to those various ways wherein those objects do affect them: and thus we come by those ideas we have, of yellow, white, heat, cold, soft, hard, bitter, sweet, and all those which we call sensible qualities.
Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 1.

For as in the collation, it is not the gold or the silver, the food or the apparel, in which the benefit consists, but the will and benevolent intention of him that bestows them: so reciprocally it is the good acceptance, the sensibleness of, and acquiescence in the benefactor's goodness, that constitutes the gratitude.—Barrow, vol. ii. Ser. 16.

This works the natural effect of choler, and turns his rage against him by whom he was last affronted, and most sensibly.—Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, Ded.

Sensitive knowledge reaching no farther than the existence of things actually present to our senses, is yet much narrower than either of the former.

Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iv. c. 3.

And the reason is clear, because the seat of the one is in the intellectual reasonable nature; the seat of the other is in the sensitive.—Sharp, vol. iv. Ser. 8.

The same idea, when it again recurs without the operation of the like object on the external sensory, is remembrance.

Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 19.

For these heavenly graces are the palate by which the immortal mind tastes and relishes its heaven, the blessed organs and sensories by which it feels and perceives the joys of the world to come, and without which it can no more relish and enjoy them, than the senseless hive can the sweetness of the honey that is in it.

Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 4. s. 4.

Now the sensual man is, of all men living, the most improper for enquiries after truth, and the least at leisure for it.—Atterbury, vol. i. Ser. 5.

If ever we mean to conquer our bad inclinations, we must not only abstain from the sins we are inclined to, but also from the occasions of them. If it be sensuality we must starve it out by prudent fasting and abstinence.

Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 1.

A sensitized soul would carry such appetites with her thither, for which she could find no suitable objects.

Norris. On the Beatitudes, p. 165.

Nor is he singular in referring them all to the senses; and in beginning an account of language in that manner.

Tooke. Diversions of Purley, pt. i. c. 2.

The very notion of death is, that all sensation and activity and power of motion is in that state of the man extinguished.—Bp. Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 20.

When he brings the same affair before the people, he talks of it as only the wild and senseless escape of a few desperate wretches.—Warburton. The Divine Legation, b. iii. s. 3.

The Hylozoists indeed by Cudworth's account of them held a mean between perceptivity and sencelessness, between motion and rest.—Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. i. c. 5.

The discovery of the mines of America, it is to be observed, does not seem to have had any very sensible effect upon the prices of things in England till after 1570.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 11.

Yet it is certain that these admonitions of nature, however forcible, however importunate, are too often vain; and that many who mark with such accuracy the course of time, appear to have little sensibility of the decline of life.

Idler, No. 43.

The sudden loss of the employment, even of the ships which import the eighty-two thousand hogsheads of tobacco, which are over and above the consumption of Great Britain, might alone be felt very sensibly.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 7.

This spiritual sword of God's awful word penetrates the inmost recesses of the human mind—pierces to the very line of separation, as it were, of the sensitive and the intelligent principle.—Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 7.

But the apostle, having represented these extraordinary gifts to be as defective in themselves as they are contemptible in their abuse, thought fit to add, that this defect did not proceed from any penurious influx of the Holy Spirit, but from the narrowness of the human recipient; the passages to the soul being so clogged up with corporeal obstructions, as to be unable to convey to the sensory any more than an oblique glimpse of the Sovereign Good.

Warburton. Doctrine of Grace, b. ii. c. 2.

Vibrations in the sensory nerves, excited by the impression of external objects and propagated to the brain, communicate vibrations to the corresponding motory nerves, and produce muscular motions.

Belsham. Philosophy of the Human Mind, c. 3. s. 5.

If I can light upon any little hint which may do real service to somebody or other I care not through what channels it is conveyed; whether by the ordinary methods of persuasion, illustration and argumentation as commonly apprehended, or by agitating the sensorial and motorial ether, or by beginning a succession of perceptions.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. i. c. 3.

The wide-stretch'd realm of intellectual woe,
Surpassing sensual far, is all our own.

Young. The Complaint, Night 7.

The beggar who, behind the hedge, divides his offals with his dog, has often more of the real sensualist than he who dines at an elegant table.—Mickle. Lusiad, Introd.

Now during the performance of these actions the virtuous man must be happy, or else he would have gaps in his happiness which it would be wofull heresy to allow; but during such performance he receives no benefit from his virtue, her influence being suspended, for he does the same and feels the same as the sensualist.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 29.

Sobriety is sometimes opposed in scripture to pride, and other disorders of the mind. And sometimes it is opposed to sensuality.—Gilpin. Hints for Sermons, § 20.

From hence we may gather that the providence of God is over all his works, and that in the formation of sentient as well as unsentient natures, he had in view that series of changes and events they would produce, and ordered his whole multitude of second causes so as to execute that plan of providence he had in his intention.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 25.

SENTENCE, n. } Fr. Sentence; It. Sen-
SENTENCE, v. } tènza; Sp. Sentencia; Lat.
SENTENTIAL. } Sententia, (from sentiens, SENTENTIOUS. } pres. part. of sentire, to SENTENTIOUSLY. } think,) what the mind SENTENTIOUSNESS. } kens, thinks, judges. By SENTENTIOSITY. } us applied to—

The expression of a judgment; a judgment or adjudication, determination or decision.

A saying, a maxim; an axiom, any thing expressed in brief sentences. For sentence in grammar, see the quotation from Lowth.

And which of you that bereth him best of alle,
That is to sayn, that telleth in this cas
Tales of best sentence and most solas,
Shal have a souper at youre alle cost
Here in this place sitting by this post.

Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 798.

Herken what is the sentence of the wise,
Bet is to dien than have indigence.

Id. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 4469.

That daie maie no counsaile auaille,
The pledour and the plee shal faile,
The sentence of that yke daie
Maie none appele sette in delaie.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

If it be so, that they wyll so contynue, they do yuell and ronne in the maledyction and sentence of the holy father the pope.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 364.

— Poetes olde, whiche full craftely Vnder as couerte termes as coulede be
Can touche a trowth, and cloke subtylly
With fresshe vtterance full sentencyously.
Skelton. The Bouge of Courte, Prol.

Who, though he tryed by his peeres
Of treason was acquitted
Yeat also of a statute new
He being then indighted,
Was hardly found a felon, and Too strickly sentenc'd so.
Warner. Albion's England, b. viii. c. 40.

— He from wrauth more coole Came the mild Judge and Intercessor both
To sentence man: the voice of God they heard
Now walking in the garden.—Milton. Par. Lost, b. x.

My sentence is for open war; of whiles,
More unexpert, I boast not: them let those Contrive who need, or when they need, not now.
Id. Ib. b. ii.

I laugh, when those who at the spear are bold
And vent'rous, if that fail them, shrink and fear
What yet they know must follow, to endure
Exile, or ignominy, or bonds, or pain,
The sentence of thir conquerour.—Id. Ib.

Learn a rule out of this oracle or sententious riddle, which goeth in this forme; malis bonis, [i. cheapest, best.]
Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 6.

Thence what the lofty grave tragædians taught
In Chorus or Iambic, teachers best
Of moral prudence, with delight receiv'd
In brief sententious precepts while they treat
Of fate, and chance, and change in human life.
Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

They describe her [Fame] in part finely and elegantly, and in part gravely and sententiously; they say, look how many feathers she hath, so many eyes she hath underneath, so many tongues, so many voices, she pricks up so many ears.—Bacon. Fragment of an Essay on Fame.

Nosce teipsum of Thales: Nosce tempus of Pittacus: Nihil nimis of Cleobulus; which notwithstanding to speak indifferently, are but vulgar precepts in morality, carrying with them nothing above the line, or beyond the extemporary sententiousness of common conceits with us.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. i. c. 6.

Can any thing be said in excuse for such a wretch, as being convicted of grievous crimes; and thereupon justly sentenced to suffer death for them; yet through the powerful intercession of the prince with his father, hath not only a pardon offered him, but preferment and honour, and the favour of his sovereign; doth yet, nevertheless, stand out against these overtures, and despiseth these undeserved bounties, and chuseth rather to die miserably, than to live happily?—Sharp, vol. ii. Ser. 5.

The style is clear and strong, short and sententious, abounding with antitheses, elegant turns, and manly strokes of wit.—Waterland. Works, vol. iv. p. 263.

I am confident the Medea is none of his: tho' I esteem it for the gravity and sententiousness of it, which he himself concludes to be suitable to a tragedy.
Dryden. Of Dramatic Poesie.

A sentence is an assemblage of words expressed in proper form and ranged in proper order, and concurring to make a complete sense.—Lowth. Introd. to English Grammar.

When sentence of death, the most terrible and highest judgment in the laws of England, is pronounced, the immediate inseparable consequence from the common law is attainder.—Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 29.

Yet concise maxims of sententious wisdom have always been esteemed in all nations extremely useful, notwithstanding that somewhat remained to be supplied in them by the common sense of the hearers or readers.

Secker, vol. iii. Ser. 21.

SENTIMENT.

SENTIMENTAL.

SENTIMENTALITY.

Fr. Sentement; It. *Sen-*timènto; Sp. Sentimiento.

Skinner calls it a word lately introduced by translators, from the French; and others familiar with that language, from sentir, to feel.

Feeling, thought; the sense or meaning; referring more immediately to the feeling, than opinion, maxim, &c.

Chaucer seems to use it emphatically:—"I this endite of no sentement; not as my own thoughts, not my own invention, but from the Latin,—as I heard."

Ye lovers that can make of sentement,
In this case ought ye be diligent,
To forthren me somewhat in my labour.

Chaucer. Legend of Good Women.

For why, to every lover I me excuse,
That of no sentement I this endite,
But out of Latine in my tongue it write.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

Right so fare I, that of no sentement,
Say right naught in conclusion,
But as I herde when I was present,
This man complaine, with a pitous soun.

Id. The Complaint of the Black Knight.

Synesius though a Christian, yet having been educated in this philosophy, could not be induced by the hopes of a Bishoprick, to stifle or dissemble this sentiment of his mind, I shall never be persuaded to think my soul to be younger than my body.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, b. i. c. 1.

O what passions then,
What melting sentiments of kindly care,
On the new parents seize!

Thomson. Spring.

These arguments on each side are so plausible, that I am apt to suspect they may, the one as well as the other, be solid and satisfactory, and that reason and sentiment concur in almost all moral determinations and conclusions.

Hume. Principles of Morals, s. 1.

Every thing indelicate will of course be excluded; but perhaps there is no less danger in works called sentimental. They attack the heart more successfully, because more cautiously.—Knorr, Ess. 171.

Nay ev'n each moral sentimental stroke,
Where not the character, but poet spoke,
He lopp'd, as foreign to his chaste design,
Nor spar'd an useless, though a golden line.

Whitehead. Prologue to the Roman Father.

She has even the false pity and sentimentality of many modern ladies.

Warton. History of English Poetry, vol. i. p. 436.

SENTINEL.

SENTRY.

Also written Centinel, centry.
Fr. Sentinelle; It. Sentinella;
Sp. Sentinela. From the Lat. Sentire, to ken, to perceive, to see, to look; and hence also sentry, (Skinner.)

One who looks; watches, keeps watch or guard. And—

To sentinel, (Ford,)—to watch, to guard.

And having plac'd their sentinels at last,

They fall to prayer.—Drayton. The Battle of Agincourt.

Go to her and tell
That you will walke the guardian sentinell,
My seule's safe genii, that she need not feare
A mutinous thought, or one close rebell there.

F. Beaumont. Elegy.

Par. All the powers
That sentinel just thrones, double their guards
About your sacred excellence!

Ford. The Lover's Melancholy, Act ii. sc. 1.

What strength, what art can then
Suffice, or what evasion bear him safe
Through the strict sentries and stations thick
Of angels watching round?—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

We see the senses of such eminent use for our well being, situate in the head, as sentinels in a watch-tower, to receive and convey to the soul the impressions of external objects.—Ray. On the Creation, pt. ii.

Here toils, and Death, and Death's half-brother, Sleep, Forms terrible to view, their centry keep.

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis.

Nothing worthy of note happened till the night between the 12th and 13th, when John Harrison, a marine, who was sentinel at the observatory, deserted; carrying with him his musket and accoutrements.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 7.

Upon inquiry, it appeared that not only the sentry placed over the prisoner, but the whole watch upon the quarter-deck where he was confined, had laid themselves down to sleep.—Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 6.

SEPARATE, adj.

SEPARATE, v.

SEPARATELY.

SEPARATENESS.

SEPARATION.

SEPARATIVE.

SEPARATIST.

SEPARATORY.

SEPARABLE.

SEPARABLENESS.

SEPARABILITY.

Fr. Séparer; It. *Sepa-*rare; Sp. Separar; Lat.Separare; and that from*se-par*, (i. e. sine par;) without match, or mate, or fellow; consequently, alone; unjoined with any thing else. See *Vossius*in v. Sperno.

To be or cause to be alone; to disunite, to disjoin, to dispart, to divide, to distinguish.

Thys man sent his commaündement vnto Otto byshop of Constatinople, commaünding to forbydde priestes that had not yet maryed, for to marry. And those y^t had maryed, to bee separated from their wyues.—Barnes. Workes, p. 331.

They haue driuen peace out of all landes & withdrawn them selues from all obediēce to princes, and haue separated them selues from the lay men, countyng the viler the dogges.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 116.

And surelie the distance betwixt London and Lysbon, should not stoppe any kinde of frendlie dewtie, that I could eyther shew to him, or do to his, if the greatest matter of all did not in certeyne pointes separate our myndes.

Ascham. The Schole-master, b. ii.

Else the ambition of one of them meeting of an undermining politick, did occasion this causeless separation.

Burnet. Records, vol. ii. pt. ii. b. i. No. 18.

I answer: though they (fayth, loue, and hope,) be inseparable, yet they haue seperable and sundry offices, as it is aboue sayd of the lawe & fayth.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 188.

O cry for mercy, leave your wicked ways,
And God from time shall separate those days
Of vengeance coming, and he shall disperse
Those clouds now threat'ning the whole universe,
And save the world, which else he will destroy.

Drayton. Noah's Flood.

But if any shall abuse our courtesie of endeavouring to help his imagination (or at least to gratifie it) in this symbolical representation we have made, by conceiving of this center of the soul but as some dull divisible point in matter, and of no great efficacy, and of the vital or arbitrary extension of it, as grossely as if it would necessarily argue as real a divisibility and seperability of the parts as in a body.—More. Antidote against Atheism, pt. i. c. 10.

But pardon too, if, zealous for the right,
A strict observer of each noble flight,
From the fine gold I separate the alloy,
And shew how hasty writers sometimes stray.

Dryden. The Art of Poetry.

Sacred things, which continue their state of separateness and sanctity.—Mede. Rev. of God's House, (1638.)

He who made the separation, is not exempt from sharing the misfortune which he brought upon his party.

Pope. View of the Epic Poem.

As separating into parties, upon little differences in religion, exposes the separatists themselves to great temptations to atheism, so it doth those also who are indifferent on both sides, and stand engaged on neither part of the separation.

Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 3.

Let them then first condemn Dr. Clarke for leading me into it: and, when they have done, I will defend the doctor, so far, by the concurring verdict of the whole christian world, by the maxims of common sense, and by the prevailing custom of speech, which never gives the name of substances to any thing, but where the substance is separate, or seperable.—Waterland. Works, vol. iv. p. 53.

Which may appear, partly by the separableness of such substances from some gems (as we exemplified in granates.)

Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 542.

I shall not insist on this experiment, because of that much more full and eminent experiment of the separative virtue of extreme cold, that was made against their wills, by the formentioned Dutchmen that wintered in Nova Zembla.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 491.

The most conspicuous gland of an animal is the system of the guts, where the lacteals are the emissary vessels or separatory ducts.—Cheyne. Phil. Prin.

Now, if such a one happens to be a separatist, he takes the advantage of the test-law, which, under great penalties, forbids his entrance on this office, till he has given certain marks of his conformity to the established worship; to give which, he makes matter of conscience; and from which, he is at liberty to dissent by the act of toleration.

Warburton. Works, vol. vii. p. 257.

A few private traders, whose subscriptions amounted only to seven thousand two hundred pounds, insisted upon the privilege of trading separately upon their own stocks, and at their own risks.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 1.

The Latin word [colonia] signifies simply a plantation. The Greek word [ἀποικία] on the contrary, signifies a separation of dwelling, a departure from home, a going out of the house.—Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 7.

SEPOSE, v.

SEPOSITION.

Lat. Seponere, sepos-utum;(se, and posit-um;) to set apart.

To set apart, or aside.

Yet God seposed a seventh of our time for his exterior worship.—Donne. Letters to Sir H. G.

To this we must contend with prayer, with actual dereliction and seposition of all our other affairs, though innocent and good in other kinds, by a present spirit.

Bp. Taylor. Great Exemplar, pt. ii. Dis. 12.

SEPT. Fr. Cep, the stock of a tree or plant, (Cotgrave.) It. Ceppe; Sp. Sepa; from Cippus, a sharp stake; or Caput, the head, (met.) the source, origin.

A stock, a race, a generation, nation, tribe or family.

And this judge being as hee is called the Lords Brehon, adjudgeth for the most part, a better share unto his Lord, that is the Lord of the soyle, the head of that sept.

Spenser. View of the State of Ireland.

For the Irish man standeth so much vpon his gentilitie, that he termeth anie one of the English sept, and planted in Ireland, Bobdeagh Galteagh that is, English churle.

Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 8.

Because the inferior sort of the Irish were poor, and not amesnable by law, he provided, that five of the best persons of every sept should bring in all the persons of their surname, to be justified by the law.—Fuller. Worthies. Kent.

But he seemed to suspect, that the true and antient Russians, a sept of whom he told me he had met with in one of the provinces of that empire, were rather white like the Danes than any thing near so brown as the present Muscovites, whom he guesses to be descended of the Tartars, and to have inherited their colour from them.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 715.

Their officers had little power over their soldiers; who, being all of the old Irish septs of Ulster, were entirely govern'd by the fryars.

Clarendon. Civil Wars, vol. iii. p. 430.

SEPTEMBER. Fr. Septembre; It. Settembre; Sp. Septembre; Lat. September; the seventh month from March, with which month the Roman year commenced. Vossius and others say from Imber. See OCTOBER.

His [Libra's] propre month is sayd Septembre, Whiche yeueth men cause to remembre,
If any sore be lefte behynde
Of thyng, which greue maie to kynde.

Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

And the 26 of Sept. (1580) (which was Munday in the just and ordinary reckoning of those that had stayed at home in one place or country, but in our computation was the Lords day or Sunday) we safely with joyfull minds and thankful hearts to God arived at Plimouth.

Sir F. Drake. The World Encompassed, p. 108.

SEPTENARY, adj.

SEPTENARY, n.

SEPTENNIAL.

Fr. Septennaire; It.Settenario; Sp. Septe-nario; Lat. Septenarius,

seven.

Septenary,—consisting of seven.

Septennial,—at every seventh year; or during seven years.

But among all the ancients I have met with, Macrobius, in his first booke of Scipio's dreame, extolling (as Philo doth) the rare and singular effects of the septenary number, most cleerely and learnedly expressest the remarkable pawses and changes of Nature every seaventh yeare in the course of man's age.—Hakewell. Apologie, lib. iii. c. 2.

A moneth of peragratiō, is the time of the moon's revolution from any part of the Zodiack, unto the same again; and this containeth but 27 dayes, and about 8 hours; which cometh short to compleat the septenary account.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iv. c. 12.

The time of the pentarchie indured likewise 49 yeares, or seauen septenaries.—Holinshed. Desc. of Britaine, c. 9.

And the number declares the nature. The Hebdomad or Septenary is a fit symbole of God, as he is considered having finished these six days creation.

More. Defence of Phil. Cabbala, pt. iii. c. 2.

But the subject which of all others employed the eloquence and abilities on both sides to the most vigorous exertion, was a motion made by Mr. Bromley, who proposed that a bill should be brought in for repealing the septennial act, and for the more frequent meeting and calling of parliaments.—Smollett. Hist. of England, Geo. II. b. ii. c. 5.

SEPTE/NTRION. } Fr. Septentrion; It. Settentrione; Sp. Septentrion; Lat. Septentrio; SEPTE/NTRIONAL. } (Septem Triones, Festus; SEPTE/NTRIONALLY. } but Vossius is doubtful.)
SEPTE/NTRIONATE, v. }
SEPTE/NTRIAL. }

The seven stars forming the constellation Arctos, the Bear; and which, from its position in the North, gives name to the North, generally.

And eke this Nero governed all the peoples that be vnder the colde sterres, that highten the septentrions, that is to say, he gouerned all the peoples, that be vnder the partie of the north.—Chaucer. Boecius, b. ii.

Although that Nero were as vicious,
As any fend, that lith ful low adoun,
Yet he, as telleth us Suetonius,
This wide world had in subiectioun,
Both est and west, south and septentrion.
Id. The Monkes Tale, v. 14,381.

Than sawe I well, that the bodie of Uenus in her latitude of degrees septentrional, ascendeth in the ende of degree, fro the hed of Capricorne.—Id. Astrolabie.

Thou art as opposite to euery good,
As the Antipodes are vnto vs,
Or as the south to the Septentrion.
Shakespeare. 3 Pt. Hen. VI. Act i. sc. 4.

— And on the north
To equal length back'd with a ridge of hills
That screen'd the fruits of th' earth and seats of men
From cold Septentrion blasts.
Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

For in the Æthyopians the juice or bloud is drawne upward again by the nature of heat: but among the nations Septentrional, the same is driven to the inferior parts, by reason of moisture apt to fall downward.
Holland. Plinie, b. ii. c. 78.

For if they be powerfully excited and equally let fall, they commonly sink down and break the water at that extrem whereat they were septentrionally excited.
Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. ii. c. 2.

True it is, and confirmable by every experiment, that steel and good iron never excited by the loadstone, discover in themselves a verticity; that is, a directive or polary facultie, whereby, conveniently placed, they do septentrional at one extrem, and Australize.—Id. Ib.

When Waueny in her way, on this septentrional side,
That these two eastern shires doth equally diuide,
From Laphamford leads on her stream into the east.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 20.

— But if the spring
Preceding should be destitute of rain,
Or blast septentrional with brushing wings
Sweep up the smoky mists, and vapours damp,
Then woe to mortals! J. Philips. Cider, b. i.

SEPTICK. } Fr. Septique; Lat. Septicus; SEPTICAL. } Gr. Σηπτικός, from σηπ-ειν, to rot, to putrefy.
Putrefactive.

Cedar,—afte, the nature of septick and escharotick medicines, corrodes and consumes the flesh in a very short time, if applied to a living body; but, on the contrary, is a sovereign preservative for the same body the very moment it is deprived of life.—Greenhill. Art of Embalming, p. 272.

There was no absurdity in Galen, when as a septical medicine he commended the ashes of a salamander.
Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 13.

SEPTILATERAL. Having seven sides (septem latera).

We begin with Saturn, and successively draw lines from angle to angle, until seven equicrural triangles be described, whose bases are the seven sides of the septilateral figure.
Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. v. c. 20.

SEPTUAGENARY. } Fr. Septuagenaire;
SEPTUAGESIMAL. } It. Settuagenario, settuagesima; Sp. Septuagenario, septuagesima; Lat. Septuagenarius, seventy; septuagesimus, seventieth.

Nor can the three hundred years of John oftimes, or Nestor, overthrow the assertion of Moses, or afford a reasonable encouragement beyond his septuagenary determination.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 9.

Whereas in our abridged and septuagesimal ages, it is very rare, and deserves a distick to behold the fourth generation.—Id. Ib. b. vi. c. 6.

SEPULCHRE, n. } Fr. Sépulcre, sépul-
SEPULCHRE, v. } ture; It. Sepòlcro, sepol-
SEPULCHRAL. } tura; Sp. Sepulchro, SEPULTURE. } sepultura; Lat. Sepul- chrum, sepultura; from sepultum, past part. of sepilire, to bury, and this from seps, sepes, a hedge, a fence, a defence. See BURY.

Sepulchre,—that in which, the place where, a burial or entombment is made; a tomb, a grave.

Sepulture,—a burial, or burying, an interment or entombment.

Wel agte that be a wurthe stude, that such sepulture ys.
R. Gloucester, p. 166.

And Joseph broughte lynnē cloth and took him down and wlappe in the lynnē cloth & leyde him in a sepulcre that was hewen of a stoon and walewide a stoon to the dore of the sepulchre.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 15.

And he boughte a lynnē clothe, and toke him doune, and wrapped hym in the lynnē clothe, and layde him in a tombe yt was hewen out of ye rocke, and rolled a stone vnto ye dore of the sepulcre.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

He hath nede of charitable conserlling and visiting in prison and in maladie, and sepulture of his ded body.
Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

And than out of his sepulture
There spronge anone perauenture
Of floures suche a wonder sight,
That men ensample take might Upon the dedes, which he dede.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

Than at last came in there
His masons, for thei shulde craue,
Where that he wolde be begraue,
And of what stone his sepulture
Thei shulden make, and what sculpture.—Id. Ib. b. vii.

Sir John Conweie being president of Vlster, in viewing the sepulture, testified to haue seene three principall iewels.
Holinshed. First Inhabitation of Ireland.

Lear. Regan, I thinke you are: I know what reason
I haue to thinke so, if thou should'st not be glad,
I would diuorce me from thy mother tombe,
Sepulchring an aduultresse.
Shakespeare. Lear, Act ii. sc. 4.

Then thou our fancy of itself bereaving,
Dost make us marble with too much conceiving;
And so sepulcher'd in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die.
Milton. Epitaph on Shakespeare.

As in the land of darkness yet in light,
To live a life half dead, a living death,
And buried; but O yet more miserable!
My self, my sepulcher, a moving grave.
Id. Samson Agonistes.

Such are those thick and gloomy shadows damp
Of seen in charnel vaults, and sepulchres,
Ling'ring and sitting by a new made grave,
As loath to leave the body that it lov'd.—Id. Comus.

Thus hauing slaine him; a sepulchral feast
He made the Argiues, for his lustfull guest,
And for his mother, whom he did detest.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. iii.

Disparted streams shall from their channels fly,
And, deep surcharg'd, by sandy mountains lie,
Obscurely sepulcher'd.
Prior. Solomon, b. i.

Christopher Seintgerman, called by some Senyarmayn or Seyngerman, son of Sir Hen. Seintgerman, Knt. by Anne his wife, daughter of Tho. Tindale, Esq. was born, as I conceiue, in Warwickshire, particularly at Shilton near to the city of Coventry, in the chapel or church of which place his father and mother received sepulture.
Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. i.

The common rites of sepulture bestow,
To soothe a father's and a mother's woe;
Let their large gifts procure an urn at least,
And Hector's ashes in his country rest.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xxii.

I would separate it from those varnished qualities, which, like whitened sepulchres, are but a disguise for internal deformity.—Knox. Ess. 96.

Mr. Monkhouse happening one day to pull a flower from a tree which grew in one of their sepulchral inclosures, an Indian whose jealousy had probably been upon the watch, came suddenly behind him, and struck him.
Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 14.

SEQUACIOUS. } Fr. Séquelle, séquent; It.
SEQUACIOUSNESS. } Sequace, sequèla, sequèla, SEQUACITY. } sequente, sequente; Sp. Se- SEQUEL. } quela; Lat. Sequax, se-
SE'QUENT, adj. } quela, sequens, from sequi, SE'QUENT, n. } to follow, (sequor, from SE'QUENCE. } Gr. Επ-ομαι, conversa con- sonante priori, et spiritu aspero,—Vossius.) May it not be Goth. Soc-yan, A. S. Sec-an, (Se-ic-an), to seek?

Sequacious and sequent are used alike,—following, attending, accompanying, succeeding, continuing in the same course or order; coming after, (sc.) a force used to draw, ductile.

If vertue yet no voided unthankfull time,
Failed of some to blast her endles fame,
A goodly meane both to deterre from crime,
And to her steppes our sequels to enflame.
Surrey. Of the Death of Sir T. W.

For oftentimes it hath been seen, that to a new enterprise, there followeth a new manner, and strange sequel.
Strype. Eccles. Memor. Hen. VIII. b. i. c. 3.

The two dukes hereupon returned to court, bringing the next day the king's letters to the cardinal, who having read them, delivered immediately the great seal; in sequence thereof, also submitting himself to the king.
State Trials. Hen. VIII. an. 20. Cardinal Wolsey.

This [Robert] was cūnyng in many sciences, & a man of good maner and vertue; he made dyuers impnes, sequences, and respondes, as O Juda.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 203.

Wherefore, after punysshment done vpon some of his enemyes, he ferynge ye sequell and reuengement of the same, laft that countree and returned vnto Rome.—Id. Ib. c. 63.

Of such our patrone here, the viscont Mountacute,
Hath many comely sequences, well sorted all in sute.
Gascoigne. Deuise for a Maske for Viscont Mountacute.

All matter whereof creatures are produced by putrefaction, have evermore a closeness, sentour, and sequacitie.
Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 900.

In the greater bodies the forge was easie the matter being ductile and sequacious, obedient to the hand and stroke of the artificer, apt to be drawn, formed or moulded into such shapes and machines, even by clumsy fingers.
Ray. On the Creation, pt. ii.

Yet many of these have continued in a certain channel, and carried a constant stream, as will plainly appear in the sequel of our worthies.—Fuller. Gen. Worthies of England.

The servility and sequaciousness of conscience.
Bp. Taylor. Artificial Handsomeness, p. 181.

Although Almighty God be not bound or straitned in his operation to the sequaciousness of the matter, yet it is not improper for us to suppose that he may pursue the laws of his own making, where it consists with his design and intention.—Hale. Origin. of Mankind, p. 304.

I have seene the fearfull sequels of that experiment, in a man, who upon the taking of that medicine, threw himselfe headlong from an high loft and brake his necke.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 23.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Shakespeare. Son. 60.

— A sequent king, who seeks
To stop thir overgrowth, as inmate guests Too numerous. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. xii.

Per. Sir Holofernes, this Berowne is one of the votaries with the king, and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queenes; which accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried.
Shakespeare. Love's Labour Lost, Act iv. sc. 2.

What should I instance in that, whereof no Scripture, not books, but the whole world is full; the inevitable sequences of sin and punishment?—Bp. Hall. Ser. Ps. cvii. 34.

— Tell my friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout.
Shakespeare. Timon of Athens, Act v. sc. 2.

Orpheus could lead the savage race;
And trees uprooted left their place,
Sequacious of the lyre;
But bright Cecilia rais'd the wonder higher.
Dryden. For St. Cecilia's Day.

As to the violence which those gentlemen are forced to use with our church's forms, it will appear more fully in the sequel.—Waterland. Works, vol. ii. p. 305.

— Now extract
From the sequacious earth the pole, and now
Unmarry from the closely clinging vine.
Smart. The Hop-Garden.

The sequel of the palm, from the end of the seventh verse, exhibits the remarriage,—that is, the restoration of the converted Jews to the religious prerogative of their nation.—Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 6.

SEQUE/STER, v. } Fr. Séquestrer; It. Se-
SEQUE/STRATE, v. } questrare; Sp. Secrestar; SEQUESTRA/TION. } Lat. Sequester, an arbi-
SE/QUESTRATOR. } trator, a mediator; so SEQUE/STRABLE. } called, because each party follows (sequitur) his judgment; or rather from sequo, h. e. dico, ερω, because he pronounces (dicat) judgment; from sequester, Vossius adds—is sequestrare, to act as sequester, or arbitrator; also separare, to separate. Cotgrave explains the Fr. Séquestrer,—"To lay aside, to put into an indifferent person's hands;" and sequestration,—"the separating of it from the possession of those who contend for it." (See the quotation from Blackstone.) To sequester, generally, is,—

To separate or part from, to withdraw, to recede, to retire, to seclude; to go, to put aside, to sever, to disjoin.

For hymn hath the God the father sealed. This is to say, that him hath God the father specially sequestred and seuered and set aside out of the number of all creatures, and hath sent him in to the world, anointed, signed, & marked with ye very prync of his own seale.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1046.

That it appeareth very strange unto us, and a great wonder unto all true subjects, that you will either assist or suffer his Majesty's most royal person to remain in the guard of the Duke of Somerset's men, sequestred from his own old sworn servants.

Burnet. Records, vol. ii. pt. ii. b. i. No. 44.

Which I charge and command you by the same authority to observe and keep upon pain of deprivation, sequestration of your fruits, or such other coercion as to the King's Highness, or his vice-gerent for the time being, shall seem convenient.—Id. Ib. vol. i. pt. ii.

Next I desire them to reflect upon aged sequestred ministers, whom, with their charge, the (generally ill-paid) fifth part will not maintain.—Fuller. General Worthies.

And these must be sequester'd with all speed,
 Or else they vow'd their swords should do the deed.

Daniel. Civil Wars, b. i.

But first a pardon begg'd, if that my cause
 So much constrain'd me as to breake the lawes
 Of her wish'd sequestration.

Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. i. s. 5.

Yet by their sequestrators and sub-committees abroad, men for the most part of insatiable hands, and noted disloyalty, those orders were commonly disobeyed.

Milton. History of England, b. iii.

O, piteous my fate, vouchsafe to shew
 (For what's sequester'd from celestial view?)
 What power becalms th' innavigable seas?
 What guilt provokes him, and what vows appease?

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. iv.

A christian, in all acts of duty, ought to sequester his mind from all respect to an ensuing reward, and to commence his obedience wholly and entirely upon the love of duty itself, abstracted from all regard to any following advantages whatsoever.—South, vol. iv. Ser. 5.

Hartshorn, and divers other bodies belonging to the animal kingdom, abound with a not uneasily sequestrable salt.—Boyle.

In general contagions more perish for want of necessities than by the malignity of the disease, they being sequestered from mankind.—Arbuthnot. On Air.

The infallible effect of the long absence of a master, whose return is quite despaired of, viz. the insolence of his servants and neighbours, the danger of his son and wife, and the sequestration of his estate.

Pope. View of the Epic Poem, (from Bossu.)

Have the periodical criticisms, in which the nation at large is deeply interested, I mean the journals of literature, those important publications which must have great influence on the principles and learning of the times; have these been in the hands of men who enjoy leisure, and a competency in the sequestered shades of Oxford and Cambridge?

Knox. Liberal Education, App.

A sequestration issues to seize all his personal estate, and the profits of his real, and to detain them subject to the order of the court. Sequestrations were first introduced by sir Nicholas Bacon, lord keeper in the reign of queen Elizabeth; before which the court found some difficulty in enforcing it's process and decrees.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iii. c. 27.

SERA/GLIO. Fr. Serrail; It. Serraglio; Sp.
Serallo. Menage calls it—"a Turkish word, that signifies palace." Skinner thinks it from the
 It. Serràra, to serr, (qv.) to shut up.

We've here no gaudy feminines to show,
 As you have had in that great seraglio.

Broome. To Mr. J. B.

SERAPH. } Fr. Séraphin, which Cotgrave
SERA/PHICK. } calls—"a burning or flame
SERA/PHICAL. } coloured angel;" It. Serafino; Sp. Seraphin, from the Heb. Seraphim; from seraph, to burn.

Seraphic,—angelic, heavenly, purified from earthly dross. See the quotation from Boyle.

From about flakred the seraphins, wherof euery one had syxe wynges.—Bible, 1551. Esay, c. 6.

Yet farre more faire be those bright cherubins,
 Which all with golden wings are overdight,
 And those eternall burning seraphins,
 Which from their faces dart out fierie light.

Spenser. Hymne 4. On Heavenly Beauty.

—Bright seraph tell
 In which of all these shining orbes hath man
 His fixed seat, or fixed seat hath none,
 But all these shining orbes his choice to dwell;
 That I may find him.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

The thrones, the cherube, and seraphick bowers,
 That, planted round, there sing before the Lamb,
 A new song to his praise, and great I Am.

B. Jonson. An Elegie. To my Muse.

The first Being, it is certain, is infinitely more remote, in the real excellency of his nature, from the highest and per-fectest of all created beings, than the greatest man, nay purest seraph, is from the most contemptible part of matter.
 Locke. On Humane Understanding, b. iii. c. 6.

This love I have taken the freedom to style seraphic love (not out of any affectation of tumid words or titles, but) borrowing the name from (if the Romish divines be good marshals of the heavenly host) those nobler spirits of the celestial hierarchy, whose name in the language to which it belongs, expresses them to be of a flaming nature; and whose employment (mentioned in the evangelical prophet's mysterious vision) sufficiently points at the divine object, to which the flames, that warm them, aspire and tend.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 249.

The same seraphim, in Hebrew, springs from the root seraph, which signifies to burn or flame.

Id. Ib. p. 250. Note.

Thus some very seraphical men do talk. But it is a very hard doctrine, and yet withal very hard to be disputed against.—Sharp. Works, vol. iii. Ser. 12.

He [William Cartwright] became the most florid and sera- phical preacher in the university.—Wood. Athen. Oxon. vol. ii.

SERENA/DE, n. } Fr. Sérénade; It. Sere- SERENA/DE, v. } nàta; Sp. Serenada; from Fr. Serein, It. Serèno; applied to—

The fresh and cool air of evening; to the evening, evening musick:—"played (adds Cotgrave) at the door, or under the window, of a lovely or beloved object."

—Nor in court amours
 Mixt dance, or wanton mask, or midnight bal,
 Or serenate, which the starv'd lover sings
 To his proud fair, best quitted with disdain.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

These midnight alarms, under the name of serenades, do greatly annoy many well disposed persons, not only in the place above-mentioned, but also in most of the polite towns of this island.—Tatler, No. 222.

A man might as well serenade in Greenland as in our region.—Ib. Ib.

When I go a serenading again with 'em, I'll give 'em leave to make fiddle-strings of my small guts.

Dryden. An Evening's Love, Act ii. sc. 1.

"To dance, dress, sing, and serenade the fair,

"Conduct a finger, or reclaim a hair."

P. Whitehead. State Dunces.

SERE/NE, v. } Fr. Serein, sereigner; It. Se-
SERE/NE, adj. } rèno, serenàre; Sp. Sereno, se-
SERE/NE, n. } renar; Lat. Serenus. Vossius SERE/NELY. } thinks serenus opposed to plu- SERE/NENESS. } uius, rainy, and to be derived SERE/NITUDE. } from the Gr. Æpos, dry: and SERE/NITY. } thus applied to such weather as we should call—

Fair: generally,—calm, still, tranquil, quiet, clear. To serene,—
 To clear, to still, to compose.

Serein, Fr.—the mildew, the harmful dew of some summer evenings. See SERENADE.

She, where she passes, makes the wind to lye
 With gentle motion, and serenes the skye.

Fanshew. Lusiad, (1655.)

If the sky continue still, serene and clear, not one egg in an hundred will miscarry.—Howell, b. i. Let. 28.

—But thou
 Revisit'st not these eyes, that row'le in vain
 To find thy piercing ray, and find no dawn;
 So thick a drop serene hath quencht thir orbes,
 Or dim suffusion veil'd.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.
 Which shewes, where ever death doth please t'appeare,
 Seas, serenes, swords, shot, sickness, all are there.

B. Jonson. On Sir John Roe.

Cel. Some serene blast me, or dire lightning strike
 This my offending face. Id. The Fox, Act iii. sc. 5.

"The fogs and the serene offend us more,
 "Or we may think so, than they did before.

Queen's Arcadia, Act i. sc. 1.

A man that submits to reverent order, that sometimes unbends himself in a moderate relaxation; and in all, labours to approve himself, in the sereneness of a healthfull conscience: such a puritane I will love immutably.

Feltham, pt. i. Res. 5.

From which equal distribution of the phlegmatick humour, which is the proper alloy of fervent blood, I am wont to hope (where I see it) will flow a future quietude and serenitude in the affections, and a discreet sweetness and moderation in the manners.—Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 79.

The place is sickly to them, because they come out of a country which never hath any rains or fogs, but enjoys a constant serenity.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1685.

—Pure serenity apace
 Induces thought, and contemplation still.

Thomson. Spring.

Take sin and wickedness out of hell, and all its blackness and darkness will vanish, and it will presently clear up into light and serenity, and shine out into a glorious heaven.

Scott. Christian Life, pt. iii. c. 6.

Tnough in no proud temples you were prais'd,
 Nor foreign incense on your altar blaz'd;
 Yet white-rob'd faith conducted every swain;
 Yet meek-ey'd piety seren'd the plain.

Grainger. Tibullus, b. i. Elegy 11.

The sky, all beauteous to behold,
 Was streak'd with azure, green, and gold;
 But tho' serenely soft and fair,
 Fever hung brooding in the air.—Cotton. Death.

Wherefore the preferableness of virtue does not arise so much from the transports she occasions as from the calm serenity and steady complacence of mind she ensures.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 36.

SE/RES. Fr. Serre, a hawk's talon; serrer, to close, to serr or serr, (qv.)

The talons, the claws.

—So though we thus farre prease
 Vpon the Grecians; and perhaps, may overturne their wall,
 Their trussed spirits; yet are they, so serpent-like dispos'd
 That they will fight, though in our seres.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xii.

An eagle rose; and in her seres did trusse
 A goose, all white, and huge.—Id. Ib. Odyssey, b. xv.

SERF. Fr. Serf, (servus), a servant, a serving man.

A slave, a bondman.

A great part of them were surfs, and lived in a state of absolute slavery or villainage.

Hume. History of England, vol. ii. App. 2.

SERGE. Fr. Sarge; It. Sàrgia; Sp. Serja, sarja. Skinner derives from Ger. Serge, teges, tegmen; in Dut. Sargie, a coverlet; but whence the Ger. Serge?

Take the same wool, for instance, one man felts it into a hat, another weaves it into cloth, another weaves it into kersey or serge, another weaves it into arras; and possibly these variously subdiversified according to the phantasy of the artificer.—Hale. Origin of Mankind, p. 157.

Now, shepherds, clip your fleecy care;
 Ye maids, your spinning-wheels prepare;
 Ye weavers, all your shuttles throw,
 And bid broad-cloths and serges grow.

Gay. Shepherd's Week, Past. 1.

Through Dart and sullen Exe, whose murmuring wave
 Envies the Dune and Rother, who have won
 The serge and kersie to their blanching streams.

Dyer. The Fleece, b. iii.

SE/RGEANT, or } Fr. Sergeant, sergent;
SE/RJEANT. } It. Sergente; Sp. Sergento; SE/RJEANTY. } all (says Skinner) from the Lat. Serviens; in which Junius and Spelman concur.

A serjeant at law, (says the latter,) quia ser- viens ad legem: and grand serjeanty, grande ser- vitium. See the quotations from Blackstone and Gibbon.

Cotgrave says,—sergent in old Fr. was a footman, or souldier that serves on foot.

In his aughtend gere that William was regnand,
Extendours he sette forto extend the land,
Erdam & baronie how mykelle felle to the schelde,
Knyght & sergeancie als how mykelle thei helde.
R. Brunne, p. 83.

A maner sergeant was this prive man.
Chaucer. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8396.

A sergeant of the lawe ware and wise,
That often hadde yben at the paruis,
Ther was also, ful riche of excellence.
Id. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 292.

Car. He is turn'd wilde upon the question; he looks as he had seen a sergeant.
B. Jonson. Every Man out of his Humour, Act iii. sc. 1.

To avoid the vague expressions of the followers, &c.
I use, after Villehardouin, the word serjeants, for all horsemen who were not knights. There were serjeants at arms, and serjeants at law; and, if we visit the parade and Westminster-hall, we may observe the strange result of the distinction.—Gibbon. Roman Empire, c. 60. Note O.

Such was the tenure by grand serjeanty per magnum servitium, whereby the tenant was bound, instead of serving the king generally in his wars, to do some special honorary service to the king in person; as to carry his banner, his sword, or the like; or to be his butler, champion, or other officer, at his coronation.—Blackstone. Comment. b. ii. c. 5.

The degrees were those of barristers (first styled apprentices from appendere, to learn) who answered to our bachelors: as the state and degree of a serjeant, servientis ad legem, did to that of doctor.—Id. Ib. Intro. § 1.

SE/RIAL, i.e. Cerial, (qv.)

I sie come first all in their clokes white,
A company that ware for their delite,
Chapelets fresh of okes seriall,
Newly sprong.—Chaucer. The Flower & the Leaf.

SERIES. Fr. Série; It. Serie; Sp. Serie;
Lat. Series, from serere, to knit or join.

A conjoined or connected, succession, or course or order.

What may I conclude of this longe serie,
But after sorwe I rede us to be merie,
And thanken Jupiter of all his grace.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 3069.

Such divine fatalists make fate to be an implexed series or concatenation of causes, all in themselves necessary, whereof God is the chief.—Cudworth. Intell. System, p. 3.

Jove and ethereal thrones! with heaven to friend,
If the long series of my woes shall end,
Of human race now rising from repose
Let one a blissful omen here disclose.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. 20.

These subjects being thus dispatched, I shall now turn to the series of our own proceedings.—Anson. Voyage, b. i. c. 5.

SERIOUS. } Fr. Sérieux; It. Serioso, sério; SERIOUSLY. } Sp. Serio; Lat. Serius; from SERIOUSNESS. } se, i.e. sine, and risus; an origin to which Vossius does not refuse his assent, because he finds in Cicero and Horace, serius opposed to jocosus.

Averse from merriment or levity; sedate, grave;
weighty, momentous, important.

Saint Paule would not haue made so serious and earnest remembrance of the putting vpon of the handes (whiche he rehearseth as earnestly as baptisme) if it were but such customable manner that men maye doe and leaue vndone as they list.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 480.

The archebysshop of Yorke, accordyng vnto the kynges desyre, shewyd vnto them seriously the voluntary renounsyng of the kyng.—Fabyan. Chronycle, an. 1399.

—Shee that taught
The Graces grace, and made the Vertues thought
More vertuous than before, is pleased here
To slacke her serious flight, and feed your eare
With Love's delightsome toys.—Spenser. Brittain's Ida.

Row. She made a puppy of me.
Bya. Be that granted:
She must do so sometimes, and oftentimes;
Love were too serious else.

Beaumont & Fletcher. The Woman's Prize, Act iii. sc. 4.
Strong Fastolph with this man compare we justly may,
By Salisbury who oft being seriously employ'd
In many a brave attempt, the general foe annoy'd.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 28.

How conformable Socrates was to the pagan religion and worship, may appear from those last dying words of his (when he should be most serious) after he had drank the poison, wherein he required his friends to offer a votive cock for him to Æsculapius.—Cudworth. Intell. System, p. 400.

Do but seriously set yourselves to be good, do but get your hearts deeply affected with religion as well as your heads, and then there is no fear but you will all be the sons of peace.—Sharp. vol. i. Ser. 1.

Socrates seemed not to express seriousness enough at least, when he bid one of his friends, when he was dying, offer up a cock to Æsculapius for his deliverance.

Stillington, vol. i. Ser. 6.

One might have expected that events so awful and tremendous, as death and judgment; that a question so deeply interesting, as whether we shall go to heaven or to hell, could in no possible case, and in no constitution of mind whatever, fail of exciting the most serious apprehensions.

Paley, Ser. 1.

There are grown men and women, nay, even middle-aged persons, who have not thought seriously about religion an hour, nor a quarter of an hour, in the whole course of their lives.—Id. Ib.

The first requisite in religion is seriousness: no impression can be made without it.—Id. Ib.

SE/RMON, n. } Fr. Sermon, sermonner;
SE/RMON, v. } It. Sermone, sermonare; Sp.
SERMOCINATION. } Sermon, sermoner; Lat.
SERMOCINATOR. } Sermo, sermocinari: Varro SERMONEER. } derives from Seris, (see SE/RMONING, n. } ante,) Scaliger from Gr. Epi-
SE/RMONIZE, v. } eu, or ep-eu, nectere, to knit SE/RMONIZER. } or join together, to connect.
SERMONICAL. } Other etymologies have been suggested. See Vossius.

A discourse: generally applied to discourses delivered from, or adapted to, the pulpit; a discourse of religious admonition or instruction.

Another bisshop tham bi, the first said his sermoun.
R. Brunne, p. 148.

—Prechours of Godes wordes
Saven thogh here sermons mannes soule fro helle.
Piers Ploughman, p. 114.

Right thus while false semblant sermoneth.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

Then sayd he thus to Palamon the knight;
"I trow ther nedeth litel sermoning
To maken you asserten to this thing."
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 3092.

Withouten words mo, right than False semblaunt his sermon began,
And said hem thus in audience.—Id. Rom of the Rose.

I suppose hee [Jonas] did it not in one day: but went faire and easily preaching here a sermon, and there another, and rebuked the sinne of the people, for which they must perish.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 29.

You sermon to vs of a dungeon appointed for offenders and miscredents.—Holinshead. Description of Ireland, c. 4.

So worthy a part of diuine seruice we should greatly wrong, if we did not esteeme preaching as the blessed ordinance of God, sermons as keyes to the kingdome of heauen, as wings to the soule, as spurres to the good affections of men, vnto the sound and healthy as foode, as physicke vnto diseased mindes.—Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. v. § 22.

Is it a small benefit, that I am placed there, where no oaths, no blasphemies beat my ears? where my eyes are in no peril of wounding objects? where I hear no invectives, no false doctrines, no sermocinations of iron-mongers, felt-makers, cobblers, broom-men, grooms, or any other of those inspired ignorants.—Bp. Hall. The Free Prisoner, § 2.

These obstreperous sermocinators make easy impression upon the minds of the vulgar.—Howell.

The wits will leave you, if they once perceive
You cling to lords; and lords, if them you leave
For sermoneeres.—B. Jonson. Epigram on the Court Pucell.

Their sermons are commonly made up of feigned stories and miracles of saints, and exhortations to the worship of them, (and especially of the blessed Virgin) and of their images and relicks. And for the truth of this I appeal to the innumerable volumes of their sermons and postils in print.—Tillotson, Ser. 30.

Under a pretence of sermonizing, they have cast off God's solemn worship on this day:—the primitive church never thought preaching the sole work of the Lord's day.

Bp. Nicholson. On the Catechism, (1662) p. 108.

"First then of the first (forgive my sermonical style), namely, of the fine man."—Knox. Ess. No. 160.

It really gives no improper idea of the method which the old sermonizers pursued to eke out their sermons to their ordinary and most grievous dimensions.

Id. Winter Evenings, Even. 37.

SER/ROSE, or } Fr. Sérieux, sérosité; It.
SE/ROUS. } Sieròsa; Sp. Seroso; Lat.
SERO/SITY. } Serum; Gr. Opos (spiritu in
S. abeunte—Vossius.)
Wheyey; waterish.

[This] cannot keep it from squeezing on all sides, and pressing out the milky and serosa humour in the butter, if there were any such pressure, as is supposed.

More. Antidote against Atheism, b. ii. c. 2.

1706

The Amnios is a general investment, containing the sudorous or thin serosity perspirable through the skin.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. v. c. 21.

This disease [dropsy] may happen wherever there are serous vessels.—Arbuthnot. On Diet, c. 4.

The tumour of the throat, which occasions the difficulty of swallowing and breathing, sometimes proceeds from a serosity obstructing the glands, which may be watery, oedematose, or schirrous, according to the several degrees of the viscosity of the humour.—Id. Ib. c. 3.

SE/RPENT, adj. } Fr. Serpente; It. Ser-
SE/RPENT, n. } pente; Sp. Serpiente; Lat.
SE/RPENTINE, adj. } Serpens, pres. part. of SE/RPENTINE, v. } serp-ere, to creep or crawl, SE/RPENTIZE, v. } Gr. Ept-eiv.

Serpent, adj.—serpentine, winding, writhing, as the motion of a serpent.

Serpentine, also is—subtle, crafty as the serpent:
in any way resembling a serpent.

Or if he axith fyssche, whether ye schal gyue him a serpent for the fyssche.—Wiclif. Luk. c. 11.

Or yf he aske fysshe, will he for a fysshe geue him a serpent.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

A serpent, whiche that Aspidis
Is cleped, of his kinde hath this,
That he the stone noblest of all,
The whiche that men carbuncle call,
Bereth in his heed aboue on high.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

Nowe this glauce that Tyndall in rayling upon popes maketh by ye waye at al temporall princes and lawes is (yf they playnely durst speake it out) the very principal point of all his whole purpose, & his maister Martin Luthers to, and al the serpentine seeds that is disceded of them.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 619.

Heere may you see howe euidently S. Austine confuteth
M. Moses poetrie, and openeth hys serpentine deceite.

Fryth. Workes, p. 84.

This finallie is to be added vnto their commendation, that they are simple, plaine, void of craft, and all maner of serpentine subtiltie, which endeth commonlie with mischeefe, and reigneth in the maine.

Holinshead. Description of Scotland, c. 12.

Their serpent windings, and deceiuing crooks,
Circling about, and wat'ring all the plain,
Empty themselves into th' all drinking main.

P. Fletcher. The Purple Island, c. 2.

But they, or under ground, or circuit wide
With serpent error wandring, found thir way,
And on the washie Oose deep channels wore.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vii.

—This moon, that sun,
Those lesser fires about this round wich run,
Be but the same which under Saturn's reign
Did the serpentine seasons interchain.—Drummond s. 18.

—So though we thus farre prease Vpon the Grecians; and perhaps, may overturne their wall
Our high minds ayming at their fleet; and that we much appall
Their trussed spirits; yet are they, so serpent-like disposd
That they will fight, though in our seres.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xii.

When, dreadful to behold, from sea we spy'd
Two serpents rank'd abreast, the seas diuide,
And smoothly sweep along the swelling tide,
Their flaming crests above the waves they show,
Their bellies seem to burn the seas below:
Their speckled tails advance to steer their course.

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. ii.

What now can simplicity and innocency, and meekness, and patience signifie against all this serpentine subtilty?

Stillington, vol. ii. Ser. 5.

In those fair vales by Nature form'd to please,
Where Guadalquiver *serpentine*s with ease,
(The richest tract the Andalusians know,
Fertile in herbage, grateful to the plow,
A lovely villa stood.

Harle. The Vision of Death.

Old age or leanness produces strait lines; corpulency round lines; but in a state of health, accompanying youth, the outlines are waving, flowing, and serpentine.

Reynolds. Art of Painting, No. 56.

Between them, [two sloping hills] in the most fertile of vallies, the lane *serpentine*s for many a mile, and comes forth ample and clear, thro' a well-wooded and richly-pastured fore-ground.—Mason. Note on Gray, Let. 4.

SERPI/GINOUS. Fr. Serpigine; It. Serpi- gine; Bar. Lat. Serpigo, from serp-ere, to creep.
A creeping, spreading tetter, or inflammation.

It began with a serpigo, making many round spots, such as are generally called ring-worms, with extream itching, which by frequent scratching heated and mattered, and afterwards scabb'd, and in progress overspread her limbs with a dry white scurf, under which the serpiginous circles lay covered.—Wiseman. Surgery, b. i. c. 25.

SERR, v. } Fr. Serrer; It. Serrare, to SE'RRING, n. } close, compact, which (Skinner thinks) is from the Lat. Sera, q.d. obserare, to bolt or bar. And see the writers in Menage. See SERE.

To close, to compress, to compact, to constrain,
to force or press close together.

For the heat doth attenuate; and by attenuation doth send forth the spirit and moister part of a body; and upon that, the more gross of the tangible parts do contract and serve [serr] themselves together.

Bacon. Natural History, § 82.

Grinding of the teeth is caused (likewise) by a gathering and serring of the spirits together to resist.—Id. Ib. § 714.

The frowning and knitting of the brows, is a gathering, or serring of the spirits, to resist in some measure.

Id. Ib. § 716.

— But now

Foule dissipation follow'd, and fore't rout;
Nor serv'd it to relax their serr'd files.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vi.

Impatient thus the Theban chief survey'd
The close-compacted ranks on ev'ry side;
To find where least the serr'd orb could bear
The strong impression of a pointed war.

Wielie. The Epigoniad, b. ii.

Malignant art no engine hath devis'd,
To man destructive, like his own fell hand
In serr'd fight.

Glover. The Athenaid, b. ii.

SE'RRATE. } Fr. Sier; It. Seg-à-re; from SE'RRATED. } Lat. Sec-are, to cut; Sp. Ser-
SE'RRATURE. } rar; Lat. Serra, quasi, secerra, SE'RROUS. } also from sec-are, (Vossius.)

Resembling, formed or fashioned like, a saw or the edge of a saw.

The common heron hath its most remarkable parts adapted to this service; long legs for wading, and a long neck answerable thereto to reach prey, a wide extensive throat to pouch it; long toes, with strong hooked talons, one of which is remarkably serrate on the edge, the better to hold their prey.

Derham. Physico-Theology, b. iv. c. 15.

In the figure they are represented too stiff and too much serrated.—Dampier. Voyages, vol. iii. Plants in New Holland.

These are serrated on the edges; but the serratures are deeper and grosser than in any of the rest.—Woodward.

If while they [bees] hum we lay our finger on the back or other parts, for thereupon will be felt a serrous or jarring motion, like that which happeneth while we blow on the teeth of a combe through paper.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 27.

The serrated border in the petal of a flower, and the fringe on the wing of a fly, display an accuracy of delineation which no pencil ever yet could rival.—Knox, Ess. 115.

SERVE, v. } Fr. Servir, servage, ser-
SE'RVAGE. } viteur; It. Servire, servi- SE'RVANT, n. } gio, servitùre; Sp. Servir, SE'RVANT, v. } servicio, servador; Lat.
SE'RVIER. } Servire; from servus, so SE'RVICE. } called—a servando, seu SE'RVICEABLE. } custodiendo; serv-are, from SE'RVICEABLENESS. } the Gr. Epuev. See CON-SE'RVICEAGE. } SERVE, PRESERVE.
SE'RVIENT. } A servant, or one who SE'RVILE. } serves, is the correlative SE'RVILELY. } of master. To serve,— SERVILITY. } To do the bidding of a SE'RVITOR. } master; to obey, to per-SE'RVITORSHIP. } form, to execute his orders SE'RVITUDE. } or commands; to work or SE'RVULATING. } labour; submit or be subordinate; to aid, to help, to assist, to benefit, to profit, to behave; to avail; to supply the wants; supply the purposes, stand in or supply the place of.

In to the lond of Grece he wende, & tho wonede he there
Of the kynde of Priamus mony men, that thor were,
That werther of hys nexte blode, that were ther in servage.

R. Gloucester, p. 11.

And heo schalle be such, that no prince dorre hem forsake,
Ac for heore prowess gladliche in to here servise take.

Id. p. 112.

William was his heire, receyued the heritage,
That we kalle the bastard, that sette vs in servage.

R. Brunne, p. 52.

The barons & of hise said, "Thei suld not so,
"Sulk a new servise to reise ne to do."—Id. p. 290.

In S. Edward tyme the erle suld with him etc,
A servitour ther was, that served at the mete.

R. Brunne, p. 55.

Agens Dowel thei don uvele. and the devel serven
And after here deth daye. dwellen shalle in helle.

Piers Plouhman, p. 181.

Servuantis obeie ghe to fleischli lordis with drede and trembling in symplenesse of ghoure herte as to Crist, not servynge at the ighe as plesynge to men, but as servuantis of Crist, doynge the wille of God bi discrecioun with good wille servynge as to the lord and not as to men, witynge that ech man whateure good thing he schal do he schal resseyue this of the lord, whether servuante whether free man.—Wiclif. Effesies, c. 6.

Servuantes be obedyent vnto youre carnall masters, with feare and trembling in singlenesse of youre heartes, as vnto Chryst; not with servyce in ye eye syght, as men pleasers:
but as the servuantes of Chryst, doynge the wyl of God from the heart with good wyl, servynge the Lord, and not men.
And remeber that what soeuer good thing any man doeth, that shal he receaue a gayne of the Lorde, whether he be bound or free.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

For thilk creature schal be delyuerid fro servage of corrup-
cioun into liberte of the glorie of the sones of God.

Wiclif. Romaynes, c. 8.

But Martha bisiede aboute the ofte servyce, and sche stood and seide, Lord takist thou no kepe: that my sister hath lefte me aloone to serve?—Id. Luk, c. 10.

And Martha was cōbred about much servynge, and stode and sayde: mayster, doest thou not care, that my syster hath lefte me to minister alone?—Bible, 1551. Ib.

"Not only, lord, that I am glad" (quod she)
"To don your lust, but I desire also
"You for to serve and plesse in my degree,
"Withouten fainting, and shal evermo."
Chaucer. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8843.

Here may men seen an humble wise accord:
Thus hath she take hire servant and hire lord,
Servant in love, and lord in mariage.
Than was he both in lordship and servage?
Id. The Frankleines Tale, v. 11,103.

And after that came woful Emelie,
With fire in hond, as was that time the gise,
To don the office of funeral service.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2912.

He is as wise, discret, and as secree,
As man I wote of his degree,
And therto manly and eke servisable,
And for to ben a thrifty man right able.

Id. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9785.

But now know I in very sothfastnesse,
That in gret lordship, if I me wel avise,
Ther is gret servitude in sondry wise.

Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8672.

And netheles yet or he dyde
He shope his reigne to deuide
To knightes, whiche him had served
And after that thei haue deserved
Yafe the conquestes. Gower. Con. A. Prol.

And for to strength hym in that cas
Of all his londe the sikereest
Of servantes and the worthiest
To kepen hym within warde,
He set his body for to warde.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

The kyng vpon this wrongfull plite,
To kepe his reigne from servage,
Counsailed was of his baronage,
That might with might shal be with stonde.—Id. Ib. b. i.

In highe estate it is a vice
To go to lowe, and in service
It greaeth, for to go to hie. Id. Ib. b. iv.

For the elementes ben servisable
To man. Id. Ib. b. v.

Cassibulan hauynge indignacion, wrote vnto hym sharpe and short answers shewynge that he and euery noble man was bounde specially to kepe his countre from servage, and to kepe his subgettes that they myght enioy lybertie & franchise.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 48.

Ther was an vsage in England, and yet is in diuerse countreys, that the noble men hath great fraiches ouer the comons, and kepeth them in servage.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, c. 381.

Whiche cause and such like taken away, I can not but put trust in the place as Nicromancers do in their circles, and am an image seruer & walke after myne own imagination & not after God's word.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 282.

He came vnto the kynges grace, and wayted vpon hym,
and was no man so obsequyous and serviceable.

Id. Ib. p. 368.

To tame his youth, his lofty crest downe go'th,
His threats he feareth, and obeyes the raine
Of thraldome base, and serviceage, though loth.
Faurefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. viii.

They holde that it is not lawfull to loue and serue God neither for auoiding of pain, nor for obtainig of reward, calling this maner of loue and service, seruile bonde and mercenary.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 362.

It foloweth: true Christian religion (which the mercy of God would haue free, onely with the celebratiō of a few and manifest sacramentes) they oppresse with seruile burdens.

Barnes. Workes, p. 374.

When Tyndall hath proued by thys vnprobable case, that women may consecrate the body of Chryst: then he lamē-teth the miserable seruitude of the symple soules the poore sely women, because men will not suffer them to say masse.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 429.

— But O! th' exceeding grace
Of highest God that loves his creatures so,
And all his workes with mercy doth embrace,
That blessed angels he sends to and fro,
To serve to wicked man, to serve his wicked foe!

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 8.

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affaires
Are seruanted to others.

Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act v. sc. 2.

— Witness th' irreuerent son
Of him who built the ark, who for the shame
Done to his father, heard this heauie curse,
Servant of servants, on his vitious race.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. xii.

That gentle lady whom I love and serve,
After long suit and wearie seruicis,
Did aske me how I could her love deserve,
And how she might be sure that I would never swerve.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 7.

But all the liquour, which was fowle and waste,
Not good nor serviceable elles for ought,
They in another great rownd vessell plaste,
Till by a conduit pipe it thence were brought.

Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 9.

Bri. I embrace their love.
Egr. Which we'll repay with seruulating.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Elder Brother, Act i. sc. 2.

Those long and subordinate concatenations of instrumental serviceableness of such things, say they, is but our fancy, no designe of any First Cause.

More. Antidote against Atheism, pt. i. c. 11.

My soul is from me fled away,
Nor has of late inform'd my body here,
But in another's breast doth lie,
That neither is, nor will be, I,
As a form seruient and assisting there.

Cowley. The Soul.

What! have we hands; and shall we seruile be?
Why were swords made; but to preserve men free?

Daniel. Civil Wars, b. iv.

How like a jade he stood, tied to a tree,
Servilely master'd with a leathern reign!

Shakespeare. Venus & Adonis.

At first I thought that Libertie and heav'n
To heav'nly soules had bin all one; but now
I see that most through sloth had rather serve,
Ministring spirits, train'd up in feast and song;
Such hast thou arm'd, the minstrelsie of heav'n,
Servilitie with freedom to contend.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vi.

For the roume was of that capacitie, that it would receive not only so many to sit with ease at the table, but also the gentlemen and servitors that waited and ministred unto them.—Holland. Plinie, b. xii. c. 1.

When such a man would speak, his words, like so many nimble and airy servitors, trip about him at command, and in well-ordered files, as he would wish, fall aptly into their own places.—Milton. Apology for Smectymnus.

What rage, what madness, England, do we see?
That this brave people, in such multitude Run to confound themselves! and all to be Thus mad for lords, and for mere servitude!

Daniel. Civil Wars, b. viii.

She has nine spur-royals, and the servants say she hoards old gold; and she her self pronounces angrily, that the farmer's eldest son, or her mistres husbands clerk shall be,
that marries her, shall make her a joynture of fourscore pounds a year; she tells tales of the seruing-men.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Scornful Lady, Act i. sc. 1.

And were some ambush for the foes design'd
Ev'n there, thy courage would not lag behind.
In that sharp service, singled from the rest,
The fear of each, or valour, stands confest.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xiii.

In the South Seas the Spaniards do make oakum to chalk their ships, with the husk of the coco-nut, which is more serviceable than that made of hemp, and they said it will never rot.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1686.

It will be needful to pitch upon some general heads, such as, if they do not comprehend all, may yet take in most of those things, to which the labours and endeavours of men are directed, and in the acquisition of which they have com-passed their designs; and to shew the serviceableness of religion above all other means, for the attaining of them.

Sharp, vol. i. Ser. 2.

This celebrated father is full and express, in his famous creed, against any thing created, or servient, in the Trinity; asserting one undivided glory and dominion of all the three Persons.—Waterland. Works, vol. iv. p. 106.

"There is therefore nothing created or servile in this Trinity, nothing adventitious, that once was not, and "came in after."—Id. Ib. vol. v. p. 166.

The menaces affectedly and insolently thrown out on one side, and the flattery, servilely offered on the other, are equally objects of our contempt.

Bolingbroke. Remarks on the History of England, Let. 12.

But it [the mechanical or corpuscular philosophy] principally owes its re-establishment and lustre, to Mr. Boyle, that honourable person of ever blessed memory, who hath not only shewn its usefulness in physiology above the vulgar doctrines of real qualities and substantial forms; but likewise its great serviceableness to religion itself.

Bentley, Ser. 4.

While we, O shame! a base degen'rate host,
Look tamely on, and see our country lost!
Stretch our vile hands to servitude abhor'd,
And court the bondage of a foreign lord.

Pitt. Virgil. Æneid, b. xii.

By the 5th of Elizabeth, commonly called the Statute of Apprenticeship, it was enacted, that no person should for the future exercise any trade, craft, or mystery, at that time exercised in England, unless he had previously served to it an apprenticeship of seven years at least.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 10.

A servant is not bound to obey the unlawful commands of his master; to minister, for instance, to his unlawful pleasures; or to assist him by unlawful practices in his profession; as in smuggling or adulterating the articles in which he deals.—Paley. Moral Philosophy, c. 11.

Service in this country is, as it ought to be, voluntary, and by contract; and the master's authority extends no farther than the terms or equitable construction of the contract will justify.—Id. Ib.

He will leave the meaner artist servilely to suppose that those are the best pictures, which are most likely to deceive the spectator.—Reynolds, Dis. 3.

— Servility with supple knees,
Whose trade it is to smile, to crouch, to please.

Cowper. Table Talk.

The order of servitors (an order which disgraced the common sense and humanity of those who instituted it) is nearly extinct.—Knox. On Education.

Dr. Johnson, by his interest with Dr. Adams, master of Pembroke College, Oxford, where he was educated for some time, obtained a servitorship for young M'Aulay.

Boswell. Tour to the Hebrides.

Beauty of every kind is formed to allure; and there is this peculiar advantage in contemplating the beauties of vegetable nature, that we may permit our hearts to be captivated by them, without apprehension of any dangerous or dishonourable servitude.—Knox, Ess. 135.

SESQUIALTER. } Fr. Sesquialtère, "one SESQUIALTERAL. } and a half, or half as much again, as three in respect of two," (Cotgrave.) Sp. Sesquialtera; Lat. Sesquialter, sesqui, i. e. semis, que; Gr. ἡμισ, half, (Vossius.)

In all the revolutions of the planets about the sun, and of the secondary planets about the primary ones, the periodical times are in a sesquialter proportion to the mean distance.

Cheyne.

For as the six primary planets revolve about him, so the secondary ones are moved about them, the moon about the earth, the satellites about Jupiter, and others about Saturn; the one as regularly as the other, in the same sesquialteral proportion of the times of their periodical revolutions to the semidiameters of their orbs.—Bentley, Ser. 8.

SESS, v. i. e. Assess, (qv.) See also CESS.

When the hostages were brought in by the day limited, he appointed dayesman betwene the cities to consyder of the matter in variance, and to sesse the penalty.

Goldinge. Cæsar, fol. 108.

But after that their seigniority and rule was taken from them, the Grecians were contented a tax should be levied, and that every city should be reasonably essed according to their wealth and ability: because every city might know what they should pay. And for this purpose, they prayed the Athenians they would appoint Aristides to take order for it, unto whom they gave full power and authority to tax and sess every city indifferently, considering the greatness of the territory, and the revenues of the same, as every one was reasonably able to bear it.—North. Plutarch, p. 285.

He [Sir Henry Sidney] established the composition of the pale, in lieu of purveyance and sesse of souldiers.

Fuller. Worthies. Kent.

SESSIO. Fr. Session; It. Sessidne; Sp. Sessio; Lat. Sessio, from sessum, past part. of Sed-ere, to sit. See ASSIZE.

A sitting; the time or duration of sitting or meeting to sit;—the meeting or assembly so sitting.

But the last day of that parliament or session the prince commeth in person in his parliament robes, and sitteth in his state: all the vpper house sitteth about the prince in their states and order in their robes.

Smith. Commonwealth, b. ii. c. 3.

The said Lord President and Council shall keep four general sittings or sessions in the year, every of them to continue by the space of one whole month.

Burnet. Records, pt. ii. b. i. No. 56.

Then of thir session ended they bid cry
With trumpets regal sound the great result.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

Who call'd to council all the Achaian state,
But call'd untimely (not the sacred rite
Observ'd, nor heedful of the setting light, Nor herald sworn the session to proclaim) Sour with debauch a reeling tribe they came.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. iii.

SESTERCE. Fr. Sesterce; It. Sestèrzo; Sp. Sestercio; Lat. Sestertius; i. e. semis tertius,—a piece of money equalling—

Two asses, and half, (sc. of a third.)

So many sesterces were swallow'd down,
To stuff one scarlet-coated court buffoon,
Whom Rome of all her knights now chiefest greets,
From crying stinking fish about her streets.

Duke. Imitation of Juvenal.

In reckoning by sesterces, the Romans had an art, which may be understood by these three rules; the first is, if a numeral noun agree in case, gender, and number, with sestertius, then it denotes precisely so many sestertii, as decem sestertii, just so many; the second is this; if a numeral noun of another case be joined with the genitive plural of sestertius, it denotes so many thousand, as decem sestertium signifies ten thousand sestertii.

Kennet. Roman Antiquities, b. v. c. 13.

SET, v. } Goth. Sat-ian; A. S. Settan; SET, n. } Dut. Setten; Ger. Setzen; Sw.
SET, adj. } Sattia, ponere, locare, statuere, SETTER. } to put or place. See SETTLE.
SETTING, n. } To put or place—in any state,
SETTE. } condition, position.

To set firmly,—to fix, to establish.

To set in order or according to rule; to dispose, to arrange, to adjust, to adapt, to regulate.

To be hard set,—to be set, put, or placed in a hard or difficult state or condition.

To put, or place, or plant; to place, to station, to appoint to a place, station or office.

To set, at a rental,—to put or place (in the occupation of another).

Set (with prepositions)—is used as equivalent to some of the compounds of the Lat. Ponere.

To set against, to oppose;—to set together, to compose; to set upon, to impose; to set across, to transpose.

To set, (with prepositions)—is also frequently used in phrases or expressions elliptical; the ellipsis must be supplied from the context.

To set, as the sun,—to cease or desist from motion; and, consequently, to go down: as the setting is opposed to the rising or apparent ascent of the sun.

A set,—a fixed, regular, usual number or quantity; a combination, disposition or arrangement; that which, any thing which, is set, planted, staked.

Brut ordeynede ys ost, and sette hem wyslyche,
And with god herte a geyn the folc wende baldeliche.

R. Gloucester, p. 19.

Forto reise the treuage, that on the londe was sette.

R. Brunne, p. 55.

At Teteford in Northfolk his baner was displaid
The thre kynges were slayn, the tother were affraid,
That thei went to ther schippes, so hard he sette his chace
Edward had thei maistri, & thanked God his grace.

Id. p. 27.

& said Scotlond suld be, thorgh right & olde setnesse,
Holden of his se, and of non els that es.—Id. p. 265.

In the parail of a pilgrim. and in a poure licknesse
Holy seyntes hym seih. as nevere in sette of riche.

Piers Plouhman, p. 208.

And all that hulpe hym erye. to setten oth^r to sawe.

Id. p. 147.

And he settide on hir hise hondis & anoon sche stood upright and glorified God.—Wiclif. Luk. c. 13.

1708

And thei ledden to Ihesus, and castiden her clothis on the colt: and settiden Ihesus on hym.—Wiclif. Luk. c. 19.

And they cast theyr raymente on the colte, and sette Jesus thereon.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

A man that hath trespassed to a lord, and cometh for to axe mercie and maken his accorde, and setteth him down anon by the lord, men wolde holde him outrageous, and not worthy so sone for to have remission ne mercy.

Chaucer. The Personnes Tale.

All in winning and in profite
Such love setteth his delite.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

Yet sette I cas, ye have bothe might and licence for to venge you, I say that ther ben ful many thinges that shuld restraine you for to encline to suffer.

Id. The Tale of Melibeus.

But if a foole were in a jalous rage,
I nolde setten at his sorow a mite.—Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

Wherefore if thou desire this blisse in parfite loye, thou must set thy purpose ther vertue foloweth, and not to loke after the bodily goodes.—Id. Testament of Loue, b. iii.

The tymé sette of kinde is come,
This lady hath hir chambre nome;
And of a sonne borne full.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

Not many yeares agoe, whole Saxony was chiefly under two princes: the one Duke John Fredericke, borne Elector, who yet liueth, defender of Luther, a noble setter out, and as true a follower of Christ and hys gospell.

Ascham. Of the Affaires of Germany.

Therefore gaue hee them his eternall sprite, that there might bee nothing desired, to the declaration and setting out of his worde.—Barnes. Workes, p. 293.

Than began he suwath plainly to confesse & declare, not only what he had done for the setting forth of that secte, but also partly what oppinions he and other his felowes had holden and were of.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 262.

Anone after, the frenche kyng was lodged thus at the bridge of Bovines, a company of heynous, by the setting on of Sir Wylliam Bayllule, and ye lorde Vanflart de la Croyse, who sayd howe they knewe all the countrey, and that they wolde bring them into such a place on the frenche hoost, y^t they shulde haue some wynnynge.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle. vol. i. c. 58.

He pulleth downe, he setteth up on hy;
He gives to this, from that he takes away.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 2.

Of one and the same vine braunch, a man may in this sort make many kinds of sions or sets.

Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 21.

Iago. Oh you are well tun'd now: but ile set downe the peggs that make this musicke, as honest as I am.

Shakespeare. Othello, Act ii. sc. 1.

When I was yet a child, no childish play
To me was pleasing, all my mind was set Serious to learn and know, and thence to do
What might be publick good.

Milton. Paradise Regained, b. ii.

— I met a foole,
Who laid him downe, and bask'd him in the sun,
And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good termes,
In good set termes, and yet a motley foole.

Shakespeare. As You Like It, Act ii. sc. 7.

When we haue matcht our rackets to these balles,
We will in France (by Gods grace) play a set,
Shall strike his fathers crowne into the hazard.

Id. Hen. V. Act i. sc. 2.

Nor aged Dolius, nor his sons, were there,
Nor servants, absent on another care;
To search the woods for sets of flowery thorn,
Their orchard bounds to strengthen and adorn.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxiv.

St. Paul was therefore said by some of the vulgar Athenians, to have been a setter forth of strange gods, when he preached to them Jesus and the resurrection, because they supposed him not only to have made Jesus a god but also Anastasis or resurrection, a goddess too.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 519.

Sebastian Cabota, born in Bristol, of Genoese parents, who was the chief setter-forth of the first voyage into those parts, was constituted the first governor thereof, during his life.—Strype. Eccles. Mem. Q. Mary, vol. v. c. 40

Ingenious fancy, never better pleas'd,
Than when employ'd t' accommodate the fair,
Heard the sweet moan with pity, and devis'd
The soft settee; one elbow at each end
And in the midst an elbow it received,
United yet divided, twain at once.—Cowper. Task.

To this head may also be referred the practice of what is called a set-off: whereby the defendant acknowledges the justice of the plaintiff's demand on the one hand; but on the other sets up a demand of his own, to counterbalance that of the plaintiff, either in the whole or in part.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iii. c. 20.

I reckon the times of Cæsar [Julius] free; because the commotions left every body a side to take; and the parties were pretty equal at the set-out.

Byron. Diary, Feb. 18. 1827.

SET

SETA'CEOUS. Lat. Seta, a hair.
Hairy, bushy.

The parent-insect, with its stiff setaceous tail, terebrates the rib of the leaf, when tender, and makes way for its egg into the very pith or heart thereof.

Derham. Physico-Theology, b. viii. c. 6.

SETH, i. e. Asseth. See ASSETS.

Wherefore it may wele appere to all that rede this story, that what, lyuyng, this man was demed of, that he purged hym in suche wyse, by penaunce, that he made a seth and amendes to Goddes pleasure.

Fabyan. Froissart. Cronycle, c. 194.

SE/TON. Fr. Séton; from Lat. Seta, a hair, of which the seton was made.

Then passed a seton-needle through the other sinus, and made way beneath for discharge of the matter.

Wiseman. Surgery, b. i. c. 18.

SE/TTLE, v. The A. S. Saht-lian, saht-

SE/TTLE, n. lian, are found (see Lye) used

SE/TTLEDNESS. met. componere, to com-

SE/TTLEMENT. pose, i. e. to set or put toge-

SE/TTLER. ther, at one, in peace, in

SE/TTLING, n. concord; they are from the verb Sattan, sittan, to set, to sit.

To place, fix or establish; to confirm; to cease from motion or commotion, to subside, to sink, to deposit; to fix, a residence, an abiding or dwelling place; (met.) to compose, to repose.

Til that your sight ysateled be a while,
Ther may ful many a sighte you begile.

Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 10, 279.

Where stedfastnesse as chiefe in theese doth raigne.
Pacience thy settled mind doth guide and stene.

Vncertaine Auctors. Of one vnjustly defamed.

Than everye one of them setteth his shiftes abroache,
some with false dyse, some with settling of dyse,

Ascham. Toxophilus, b. i.

Now ginnes that goodly frame of temperaunce
Fayrely to rise, and her adorned hed
To pricke of highest prayse forth to aduance,
Formerly grounded and fast settled
On firme foundation of true bountyhed.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

'Tis true, that a weighty settled sorrow is of that force, that besides the contraction of the spirits, it will work upon the radical moisture, and dry it up, so that the hair can have no moisture at the root.—Howell, b. ii. Let. 28.

Count. You are your self, my lord, I like your settledness.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Woman Hater, Act v. sc. 1.

Every third year (after the full settlement of the foundation) the college shall give an account in print, in proper and ancient Latin, of the fruits of their triennial industry.

Cowley. The College.

They come up many times of their owne accord, in some low grounds where there is a settling or stay of raine water fallen from higher places.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxi. c. 3.

It chanc'd, a cloud of bees in gathering swarms
Swept through the skies, with murmuring hoarse alarms;
Pour'd in, and (settling on the topmost bough)
Stretch'd down, dependent deep in air below.

Pitt. Virgil. Æneid, b. vii.

The man (their hearty welcome first express'd)
A common settle drew for either guest,
Inviting each his weary limbs to rest.

Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. viii.

Our design was, to search for canoas in some river where the Spaniards have neither settlement or trade with the native Indians.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1684.

On her [Princess Sophia] therefore, and the heirs of her body, being protestants, the remainder of the crown, on the death of king William and queen Anne without issue, was settled by statute 12 and 13 W. iii.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. i. c. 3.

These liberties were again asserted at the commencement of the present century, in the act of settlement, whereby the crown was limited to his present majesty's illustrious house;
and some new provisions were added, at the same fortunate æra, for better securing our religion, laws, and liberties; which the statute declares to be "the birthright of the people of England," according to the antient doctrine of the common law.—Id. Ib. b. i. c. 1.

This question, (Who were to be considered as the poor of each parish) after some variation, was at last determined by the 13th and 14th of Charles II. when it was enacted, that forty days' undisturbed residence should gain any person a settlement in any parish.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 8.

All those colonies had established themselves in countreys inhabited by savage and barbarous nations, who easily gave place to the new settlers.—Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 7

SEV

SE/VEN.

SE/VENTH.

SE/VENTHLY.

SE/VENNIGHT.

SE/VENTY.

See Wachter in v. Sieb-en, and Lennepe in v. ἑπτα.
Sevennight,—a space or duration of seven nights (and days), a week.

Seventy,—ten times seven.

Fro the by gynnyng of the world, to the tyme that now is,
Sene ages ther habbeth y be, as sene tyme y wys.

R. Gloucester, p. 9.

Seuentene gere was he kyng thorgh conquest & descent.

R. Brunne, p. 51.

Alle thise passid the se, so com the erle of Artoys
In prison did tham be a seuennyght in Caley.—Id. p. 258.

Ther ben seuene sustres. that serven treuthe evere.

Piers Plouhman, p. 125.

Ich have ywedded a wyf quath he. wel wantowen of maners
Where ich seuennyght fro hure syghte. seggen he wolde
And loure on me and lyghtliche chide. and seye ich love a nothere.—Id. p. 126.

Lord hou ofte schal my brothir synne agens me, and I schal forgyve him? whether til seuene tymes? Jhesus seith to him I seye not to thee til seuene sithis; but til seventy sithis seuene sithis.—Wiclif. Matt. c. 18.

Master howe ofte shall I forgeue my brother, yf he synne agaynst me, seuē tymes? Jesus sayde vnto hym: I saye not unto the seuen times: but seuen times seuentyme.

Bible, 1551. Ib.

And he axide of hem the our in which he was amendid;
and thei seiden to him, fro yistirday in the seventhe oure the feure lefte him.—Wiclif. Jon. c. 4.

Then enquired he of thē the houre when he beganne to amende. And they sayde vnto him: yesterdays the seuenth houre, the feure lefte hym.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

That of hem thre, and her issue

There was so large a retinue

Of nacions seuentie and two.

Gower. Con. A. b. viii.

With that he drew his flaming sword, and strooke
At him so fiercely, that the upper marge
Of his seuenvolded shield away it tooke,
And, glauncing on his helmet, made a large
And open gash therein.—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 5.

And Edwin took the rule; a prince as just and mild
As th' other faithless were: nor could time ever bring
In all the seven-fold rule an absoluter king.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 11.

"And where is that same great seven-headed beast,
That made all nations vassals of her pride,
To fall before her feete at her behest,
And in the necke of all the world did ride?"

Spenser. The Ruines of Time.

As when a wearie traveller, that strays
By muddy-shore of broad seven-mouthed Nile, Unweeting of the perillous wandring wayes,
Doth meete a cruell craftie crocodile.

Id. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 5.

Give place all ye to dying Darius' wounds,
While this great Greek him in his throne enstalls,
Who fell before seven-ported Thebes' walls,
Or under Ilion's old sky-threatening rounds.

Stirling. On his Tragedy of Darius.

SE/VER, v.

SE/VERAL, v.

SE/VERAL, adj.

SE/VERAL, n.

SEVERA'LITY.

SE/VERALTY.

SE/VERALLY.

SE/VERALIZE, v.

SE/VERANCE.

Old Fr. Sevrer; It. Seve-
rare, sceverare, from the Lat.
Separare, or Fr. Séparer; It.

Separare, to separate, i. e.—
To be or cause to be alone;

to disunite, to disjoin, to dis-

part, to divide, to distinguish.

Several is used as a verb

in Holinshead.

Euen so the light of Christes Gospell may not be hid nor made a seuerall thyng, as though it pertayned to some certaine holy persons onely.—Bible, 1551. Matt. c. 5.

Besides all these inward griefes, which euerye one seuer- allye must needes feeble with misery, there hapneth many outward mischaunces.—Cheeke. Hurt of Sedition.

And also though the seuerallye were false and would lye, yet whan thei be wisely & seuerallye examined, thei can seldome so well make their tale before, but that their vntrowth shall in some parte appere.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 209.

Whan y^e Brytons were ware, that were disparkled and seuerd in many coütres, they drew to theym in al hasty wyse.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 92.

Those two riuers enclose a neck of land, in regard of its fruitfulnesse, not unworthy of a seuerance.

Carew. Suruey of Cornwall, fol. 152.

In midst of wrath, of wounds, of blood, and death,
There is he most, where as he may do best;
And there the closest ranks he seuereth,
Drives back the stoutest pou'rs that forward press'd.

Daniel. Civil Wars, b. vi.

SEV

If modesty and women once do seuer,

We may bid farewell to our fame for ever.

Drayton. Countess of Salisbury to the Black Prince.

There are some of the ruder sort so quaint in seuering the name Irish and Ireland, as that they would be named Ireland men, but in no wise Irishmen.

Holinshead. Description of Ireland, c. 1.

In time past, the people of this ile vsed not to seuerall their grounds, but now they dig stonie hillocks, and with the stones thereof they make rude walles, much like to those of Deuonshire.—Id. Description of Britaine, c. 10.

So both tooke goodly leave, and parted seuerall.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 1.

The Tyrian lords and Trojan youth, each where
With Venus' Dardane nephew, now, in fear, Seek out for seuerall shelter through the plain,
Whilst floods come rolling from the hills amain.

B. Jonson. The Poetaster, Act v. sc. 1.

Apollo answer: Strangers? though before Yee dwelt in wooddie Gnosus; yet no more Yee must be made, your owne reciprocalls
To your lou'd cittie, and faire seueralls
Of wiues, and houses.

Chapman. Homer. Hymne to Apollo.

All the seuerallities of the degrees prohibited run still upon the male.—Bp. Hall. Cases of Conscience, Dec. 4. c. 5.

There is one and the same church of Christ, however far determinate in places, however segregated and infinitely seuerallized in persons, however differing in rites and circumstances of worship, however squaring in by-opinion.

Id. The Peace-maker, § 3.

Hear Phœbus clipping Hyacinthus stood,
Whose life's last drops his snowy breast imbrue,
The one's tears mixed with the other's blood,
That should't be blood or tears no sight could view,
So mix'd together in a little flood,
Yet here and there they seuerally withdrew.

Drayton. The Barons' Wars, b. vi.

Thus having considered the precedent apertions, or overtures in seuerally, according to their particular requisites, I am now come to the casting and contexture of the whole work, comprehended under the term of compartition.

Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 39.

"Oh! sunk in avarice, and swoln with pride!
How shall the Greeks, though large of soul they be,
Collect their seuer'd spoils, a heap for thee
To search anew, and cull the choicest share
Amid the mighty harvest of the war?"

Tickell. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

Like kings, we lose the conquests gain'd before,
By vain ambition still to make them more;
Each might his seuerall province well command,
Would all but stoop to what they understand.

Pope. Essay on Criticism.

For the clearer apprehending those three different kinds of men, and their different views in joining together so far in the same cause, it will not be improper to say something seuerally and distinctly of each.

Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 2.

We are, lastly, to enquire how an estate in jointenancy may be seuered and destroyed.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. ii. c. 12.

He that holds lands or tenements in seuerally, or is sole tenant thereof, is he that holds them in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him in point of interest, during his estate therein.—Id. Ib.

If there be two joint-tenants for life, and the inheritance is purchased by or descends upon either, it is a seuerance of the jointure.—Id. Ib.

Still in thought as free as ever,
What are England's rights, I ask,
Me from my delights to seuer,
Me to torture, me to task?

Cowper. The Negroe's Complaint.

SEVERE. } Fr. Sévère; It. Severo; Sp.

SEVERELY. } Severo; Lat. Severus, from the SEVERITY. } Gr. Σεβερῶς, i. e. venerari, and equivalent to σεμνός, venerabilis: such, adds Vossius, are they who regulate their lives, severe, (so as to deserve reverence.)

Rigid or rigorous; exact, austere, coerced, strict, straitened, constrained; distressing; confined to strict rules, to method, or order, within bounds;
strict, methodical, concise.

O fearful frowning Nemesis,
Daughter of Justice most severe,
That art the world's great arbitress,
And queen of causes reigning here.

Daniel. Cleopatra, Chorus.

"No, no," quoth she, "sweet death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear,
When as I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe."

Shakespeare. Venus & Adonis.

SEW

These two examples do prove, that amonges the Romaynes, the obedience of the souldiours was wonderfull greate, and the severity of the captaynes, to see the same kept, wonderfull straye.—Ascham. Texophilus, b. i.

— Men may censure thine
The gentler, if severely thou exact not
More strength from me, than in thy self was found.
Milton. Samson Agonistes.

Strict age, and sour severity,
With their grave saws in slumber lie.—Id. Comus.

Yet Anaxagoras was severely taxed also, by Aristotle and Plato, as one not thorough-paced in Theism, and who did not so fully, as he ought, adhere to his own principles.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 382.

Pass we on now to the Council of Areminium, in the year 359, when the Arians had the secular power on their side, and made use of it with all imaginable severity.
Waterland. Works, vol. i. p. 332.

I am very apt to think that great severity of punishment does but very little good; nay, great harm in education; and I believe it will be found, that, cæteris paribus, those children who have been most chastised, seldom make the best men.—Locke. On Education, § 43.

Nor must the masters of the different trades be suffered so severely to exact the children's labour as to defraud them of the hours that should be daily allotted to devotion, nor of some time in every week, which, besides the leisure of the Sundays, should be set apart for religious instruction.
Horsley, vol. iii. Ser. 40.

The lives of children and servants are no longer at the disposal of the father of the family; nor is domestic authority maintained, as formerly, by severities which the mild spirit of modern laws rarely inflicts on the worst public malefactors.—Id. Ib.

SEW, n. } Spelman describes the office of SE'WER. } Sewer to be—to taste, and place in order, the dishes at a feast; and he adopts the opinion of Cowel, that the word is derived from the Fr. Asseoir, disponere, collocare, to put or place in order. Cowel asserts—that he had seen the word written Assour: and in the Law Lat. of Fleta, this officer is called assessor; i. e. ordinator, collocator, dispositor. In Leland's Collectanea, we have accounts of the feasts given at the respective inthronizations of Abp. Neville and Abp. Warham. Among the different officers employed, the sewer stands conspicuous: it appears that he at certain different times was to go to the dresser, and there take say or assay of every dish: the manner of so doing is described, and it appears to have been a very important business; and clearly his (the sewer's) principal duty; namely, to say or assay the meats (not only as the dresser, but also, in presence, at the table), as it was that of the cup-bearer to taste or assay the drinks. At the feast given by Warham to Henry VIII. and Charles V. on their way through Canterbury from Dover, the Duke of Buckingham as sewer, (we are told) rode upon a white hobby before the banquetting dishes, and after some ceremonies he rode to the table, when he delivered his hobby, and sewed, kneeling at the table where the emperor was. All this seems at variance with the common etymology.

What can sewed here mean; probably, sayed, assayed or tasted. The Fr. Essayeur is one that tastes, or takes an assay;—essayeur, is to take a taste, make a trial of;—essay, is the taste or essay of a prince's meat, or drink, and also the vessel whereout or piece whereof, it is taken, (see Cotgrave.) Sewer then may be from Essayeur, sayeur. To sew,—from the verb Essayer, sayer: and the noun, from the French noun, applied as we now use gout, or haut-gout, to dishes or viands of high taste or flavour.

The French have also their Escuyer trenchant, a carver or squire of the mouth; also, a taster; (for he that carves to a prince, ever tastes of what he carves, before his master touch it,—Cotgrave.) And from this escuyer, our sewer, is by some thought to have sprung; but the carver or carving esquire has his share in the tasting.

Mr. Tyrwhitt says,—Sewes are dishes, from the same verb Asseoir. May it not be from the verb to Seethe?

I wol not tellen of hir strange sewes,
Ne of hir swannes, ne hir heronsewes.
Chaucer. The Squires Tale, v. 10, 381.

SEX

And after with divers spies
The fleshe, when it was so to hewe,
She taketh, and maketh therof a sewe.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.
I want cunning by order to describe
Of every course the diversities,
The strange sewes, and the subtleties,
That were that day served in that place.
Lidgate. Siege of Troy.

At ewle we wonten gambole, daunce,
To carrole, and to sing,
To haue gud spiced sewe, and roste
And plum-pies for a king.
Warner. Albion's England, b. v. c. 24.

SEW, or } Goth. Suijan; A. S. Siwian;
Sow, v. } Sw. Sy. In Lat. Su-ere; Gr.
SE'WSTER. } Συειν, (καρσυνειν, for κατα-συνειν, shows that συνειν—once existed.)

To join together, by the intervention of string, thread, silk, &c.; by needle and thread, silk, &c., or other material, prepared in like manner.

Somme sewethe sak. for shedyng of the wete.
Piers Plouhman, p. 128.

No man seweth a pacche of newe cloth to an olde cloth, else he takith away the newe pacche fro the olde, and a more brekyng is maad.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 2.

Also no man soweth a pece of newe clothe vnto an olde garmente, for then taketh he away the newe pece from the olde, & so is the rent worse.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Than they sowed fygge leues together and made them apurnes.—Id. Gen. c. 3.

And in my herte wondren I began
What that he was, til that I understode,
How that his cloke was sowed to his hode.
Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Prologue, v. 15, 974.

And when they knewe that they were naked, they sowed of a fig-tree leues in maner of breches.
Id. The Persones Tale.

Boethius shewed the art of sowing, as well for tailors, as corviners and shoemakers.—Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 56.

At every twisted thrid my rock let flie
Unto the se'wster, who did sit me nigh.
B. Jonson. The Sad Shepherd, Act ii. sc. 3.

What! means Æacides to spin and sew?
With spear and sword in field thy valour shew;
And, leaving this, the nobler Pallas know.
Dryden. Ovid. Art of Love, b. i.

SEW, v. } See SUE. Fr. Suivre, to follow:
SE'WER. } issir, to issue, to go or depart out, to flow forth, (Cotgrave.)

To sew a pond—is to flow or cause the waters to flow forth; and, consequentially, to drain the pond.

Sewers (called shores)—are courses, canals, through which water, &c. issues, runs off.

And [they] slewe and hurte many of the abbottes tenautes, and spoyled and brake his closures and warynes, and sewyd their pondes and waters, and dyd vnto them many displeasures, to the vtter ruine of that monastery.
Fabyan. Chronycle, an. 1376.

Sew ponds, amend dams, and sell webster thy wool.
Tusser. Husbandry. September.

Under whose floor the common sewer pass'd,
Up to the same a loathsome stench that cast.
Drayton. The Barons' Wars, b. v.

As one who long in populous city pent,
Where houses thick and sewers annoy the aire,
Forth issuing on a summer's morn to breathe
Among the pleasant villeiges and farmes Adjoynd.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ix.

— Thither flow,
As to a common and most noisome sewer,
The dregs and feculence of ev'ry land.—Cowper. Task.

SEX. } Fr. Sexe; It. Sesso; Sp. Sexo;
SE'XUAL. } Lat. Sexus, or secus, from the old SE'XED. } supine sexum, for sextum, because (per sexum) animal is cut (secatur) or divided into male and female, (Vossius.)

The division or distribution into male and female kind; as distinguished into male or female.

Sexual, is a very common, though modern, word.

I speake against my sex,
So I haue done before,
But truth is truth, and muste be tolde
Though daunger keepe the dore.
Gascoigne. The Complaint of Phylomene.

The sex of womankind of all other is most bound to have regardful eye to men's judgments.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Her eyes at all points arm'd with those deceits,
That to her sex are natural every way.
Drayton. The Miseries of Queen Margaret.

SEX

Dor. Stay Sophocles, with this tie up my sight, Let not soft nature so transform'd be
(And lose her gentle sex'd humanitie)
To make me see my Lord bleed.
Beaumont & Fletcher. Four Plays in One.

Till Theseus in his arms convey'd with care,
Far from so sad a sight, the swooning fair.
'Twere loss of time her sorrow to relate;
Ill bears the sex a youthful lover's fate,
When just approaching to the nuptial state.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

A wife! ah, gentle deities, can he
That has a wife, e'er feel adversity?
Would men but follow what the sex advise,
All things would prosper, all the world grow wise.
Pope. January & May.

The poet Euripides happened to be coupled to two noisy vixens, who so plagued him with their jealousies and quarrels, that he became ever after a professed woman-hater; and is the only theatrical writer, perhaps the only poet, that ever entertained an aversion to the sex.—Hume. Ess. 19.

The adoption of the sexual system by Professor Martyn at Cambridge, and by Dr. Hope at Edinburgh, is to be considered as the æra of the establishment of the Linnean system in Britain.—Pulteney. Sketches of Botany.

SEXA'GENARY. } Fr. Sexagénnaire; It. Ses- SEXAGE'SIMAL. } santino; Sp. Sexagenario, sixty, six tens, or threescore.
Sexagesimal, (Lat. Sexagesimus,) the sixtieth.

These are the sexagenary fair ones, and upwards, who, whether they were handsome or not in the last century, ought at least in this to reduce themselves to a decency and gravity of dress suitable to their years.
Chesterfield. Common Sense, No. 6.

SEXA'NGULAR. } Having six angles (sex SEXA'NGULARLY. } angulos).

Chrystal is in its natural growth, a sexangular prisme, sexangularly pointed.—Grew. Cosmologia, b. i. c. 3.

SEXENNIAL. Lat. Sex, annus, at every sixth year, or lasting six years.

This evil was not so much the vice of their constitution itself; as it must now be in your contrivance of sexennial elective judicatories.—Burke.

SE'XTANT. } Fr. Sextant, sextile; It. Ses- SE'XTILE. } tante, sextile; Sp. Sextil; Lat.
Sextans, sextilis, from sex, six. We have the words, but not their particular usage, from the Latin.

A sextant is an astronomical instrument measuring 60 deg. or the 6th part of 360, the circle.

Sextile, in astrology, at the same 6th distant; or two signs, 30 deg. each.

— To the blanc-moone
Her office they prescrib'd, to th' other five Thir planetarie motions and aspects
In sextile, square, and trine, and opposite,
Of noxious efficacy.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

That the reflexion of the solar rays, is terminated in the clouds; was the opinion of the Græcian sage: but lunar observations have convicted it of falshood; and that [that] planet receives the dusky light, we discern in its sextile aspect, from the earth's benignity.
Glanvill. Vanity of Dogmatizing, c. 18.

In one half hour, I have learnt to cant
With an indifferent good grace: conjunction,
Opposition, trine, square, and sextile, are now no longer
Bug-bears to me, I thank my stars for't.
Dryden. An Evening's Love, Act iii.

The intercourse of trade and friendly offices was carried on between us and the natives, without being disturbed by any one accident, till the evening of the 22d, when a man found means to get into Mr. Bayly's observatory, and to carry off a sextant unobserved.
Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 6.

SE'XTON. } Fr. Sacristain; It. Sagrestano; SE'XTONRY. } Sp. Sacristan; a sacro loco quem custodit; from the sacred place of which he has the care. Spelman says he was called by our ancestors segerstane.

The same maister Johan Warëns for all his promotions he resigned the all, and retayned to hymselfe but a small lyueng, and that was the sextenry of our lady church in Renes, worthe by yere, if he be resydent, a C frankes.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 197.

— Let the merry bells
(For unknown joys work unknown miracles)
Ring without help of sexton, and presage
A new-made holy-day for future age!
Cowley. On his Majesty's Return out of Scotland.

The sexton or keeper of this cell was apprehended, and the question demanded, What was become of the treasure aforesaid of 2000 pound which Jupiter had in custodie, and which now was out of the way and be gone?

Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiii. c. 1.

They may get a dispensation to hold the clerkship and sextonship of their own parish in commendam.—Swift.

Human earth

Ejected, to make room for—human earth;

The monarch's terror! and the sexton's trade!

Young. Complaint, Night 9.

Parish clerks and sextons are also regarded by the common law, as persons who have freeholds in their offices; and therefore though they may be punished, yet they cannot be deprived, by ecclesiastical censures.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. i. c. 2.

SEXTUPLE. Six times, six-fold.

Which well agreeth unto the proportion of man; whose length, that is, a perpendicular from the vertex unto the sole of the foot is sextuple unto his breadth, or a right line drawn from the ribs of one side to another; that is, a direct line between the breast bone and the spine.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iv. c. 5.

SHABBY. } Lye is inclined to think shabby, SHA'BILY. } (e. g. a fellow, homo pannis SHA'BBINESS. } obsitus, a manne clothed in rags) is formed from scabby.

To shab, is in vulgar use, and seems to mean,—to shove, (shuv, shub, shab?) to shab or shove off, put off, evade—meanly, dirtily.

They were very shabby fellows, pitifully mounted, and worse armed.—Clarendon. Diary, Dec. 7. 1688.

I wish she would lend you her pretty white hand
In mending your cassock, and smoothing your band.

(For the dean was so shabby, and look'd like a ninny,
That the captain suppos'd he was curate to Jinny.)

Swift. Hamilton's Baron, an. 1729.

He exchanged his gay shabbiness of clothes fit for a much younger man, to warm ones that would be decent for a much older one.—Spectator.

With the drap'ry she had got

Within her little shabby cot,
She might for all the town provide,
And break both York-street and Cheapside.

Lloyd. The New-River Head.

I sat down on one of the benches, at the other end of which was seated a man with very shabby clothes.

Goldsmith. Ess. 6.

These shabby evasions are themselves sufficient arguments against those who use them.

Tooke. Diversions of Purley, pt. ii. c. 7.

SHACK, n. Perhaps Shake. The grain shaken from the ripe ear; and which hogs were turn'd out to find and feed upon. Applied generally to—Feed among stubble.

Covetous men now a daies plow up so nigh the common balkes, and walkes, which good men beforetime made the greater, and broader, partly for the commodious walke of his neyghbour, partly for the better shack in harvest time, to the more comfort of his poore neyghbours cattell.

Homilies. Ser. for Rogation Week.

Yoke seldom thy swine, while the shack time doth last.

Tusser. Husbandry. September.

SHACKLE, v. } A. S. Sceacul; Dut. Schae- SHA'CKLES, n. } chel; Junius thinks, may be SHACK-LOCK. } from the A. S. Sceac-an, to shake, because a prisoner in shackles cannot move without shaking them. Skinner,—from the verb Shaeckelen, to involve, to infold; and this from Shacken, rapere, because robbers deserve a chain of the kind called shackles. To shackle is—

To fetter, to manacle, to chain; to impede, embarrass or restrain, free action or motion.

And it is great

To do that thing that ends all other deedes,
Which shackles accedents, and bolts vp change.

Shakespeare. Antony & Cleopatra, Act v. sc. 1.

His artes he moves, and out of caytives handes
Himselfe he frees by secret meanes unseene;
His shackles emptie left, himselfe escaped cleene.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 1.

For as gaylers with conuicts,

So popes deale with a faultier:
Their sin-salve like the setting loose
From shackles to the haulter.

Warner. Albion's England, b. v. c. 24.

The swarthy smith spits in his buckeorne fist,
And bids his men bring out the five-fold twist,
His shackles, shacklockes, hampers, givies, and chaines,
His linked bolts.—Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. i. s. 5.

No trivial price

Should set him free, nor small should be my praise

To lead him shackled, and expos'd to scorn

Of gathering crowds, the Britons' boasted chief.

J. Philips. Blenheim.

He told me, that most of the men and women on the island were thus painted: and also that they had all ear rings made of gold, and gold shackles about their legs and arms.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1690.

He carried with him the shackle of the bilbo-bolt that was about his leg, which was taken from him, as soon as he got on shore, by one of the chiefs, and given to Omai.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 6.

SHAD. Gesner says, the fish called by Pliny (ix. 43) glanis is the Ger. Schad; so named from Schade (see SCATHE), a damno quod infert.

With this staffe

Old Alvarez has led up men so close,

They could almost spit in the cannon's mouth,

Whilst I with that and this well mounted, scour'd

A horse-troop through, and through, like swift desire,

And seen poor rogues retire, all gore, and gash'd

Like bleeding shads.

Beaum. & Fletch. Love's Cure, Act ii. sc. 2.

The last [Hasselquist] says that the shad is found in the Mediterranean near Smyrna, and on the coast of Egypt, near Rosetto; and that in the months December and January it ascends the Nile, as high as Cairo; that it is stuffed with pot joram, and when dressed in that manner will very nearly intoxicate the eater.

Pennant. The Shad-herring.

SHADE, n.

SHADE, v.

SHA'DEFUL.

SHA'DY.

SHA'DOW, n.

SHA'DOW, v.

SHA'DOWING, n.

SHA'DOWISH.

SHA'DOWY.

Dut. Schade, schaeduwe, schaeduwen; Ger. Schatten. In Sw. Skugga, skygga; A. S. Scade, sceadewan; Goth. Scadaw, which Junius thinks has a manifest affinity with the Gr. Σκία, umbra. Tooke says, they are the past tense and part. of A. S. Scead-an, Goth. Skaid-an, (Dut. Scheyd-en, Ger. Scheiden), separare, segregare, dividere; and mean (something, any thing) secluded, separated, retired; or something by which we are separated from the weather, sun, &c. Shade, consequently, is—

Obscureness, darkness; cloudiness, gloominess; coolness, shelter;—a retired or sheltered place; that which shelters, obscures.

Shade or shadow,—the representation of form or figure, separating or obstructing light.

To shadow,—to darken, obscure, protect, cover; also, to represent obscurely, darkly, imperfectly; to sketch, delineate or describe imperfectly, in an unfinished style.

And the kyng nas bute a schade, & let hym worthe al out.

R. Gloucester, p. 107.

Godes blesside body. hit bar for oure bote

And hit a fereth the feonde. for such is the myghte

May no gryslieche gost glyde ther hit shadeweth.

Piers Plouhman, p. 365.

And the multitude of men and of wymmen bileeyunge in the lord was more encreesid, so that thei broughten out syke men into stretis, and leiden in litil beddis and couchis that whanne Petir cam narneli the schadewe of him schulde schadewe ech of hem, and thei schulen be delyuered fro their sikenessis.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 5.

They brought the syke into ye stretes, and laide them on beddes and palettes, yt at the lest way ye shadowe of Peter whē he came by, might shadow some of the.—Bible, 1551. 1b.

Certes a shadowe hath likenesse of the thing of which it is shadowed, but shadowe is not same thing of which it is shadowed.—Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

Thou nowe knowest, that thilke very reuerence ne maye nat comen by these shadowy transitorye dignities.

Id. Boecius, b. iii.

For Narcissus shortly to tell,

By adventure came to that well

To rest him in the shaddowing

A day, when he came from hunting.—Id. Rom. of the R.

"How is," (quod I) "that he is shaded thus

With yonder cloth, I not of what colour?"

Id. The Court of Loue.

Where he beholdes the worde that sholde confounde

The worde of death, by humility to be

In mortall mayde, in mortall habite made,

Eternitye in mortal vale to shade.—Wyatt. The Auctor.

And so vnder shadowe of that warre, a squyer of Brucels, called Water Ostraste, toke the stronge castel of Robeboyse, in the ryuer of Seyne.—Berners. Froiss. Cron. vol. i. c. 208.

The wiles the prince, prick't with reprochful shame,
As one awakte out of long slombring shade,

Revivynge thought of glory and of fame,

United all his poures to purge himselfe from blame.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 11.

The eastern Avon vaunts, and doth upon her take

To be the only child of shadeful Saverlake.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 3.

Enforst to seeke some covert nigh at hand,

A shadie grove not farr away they spide,

That promist ayde the tempest to withstand.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

They say, that in the towne Syene (which is above Alexandria 50 stadia) at noone-tide in the middes of summer there is no shadow at all; and for farther experiment therof, let a pit be sunke in the ground, and it will be light all over in every corner: whereby it appeareth, that the sunne then is just and directly over the place, as the very zenith thereof.

Holland. Plinie, b. ii. c. 73.

Although his [Tibald] shadowey tomb (being no more than an honourary cenotaph) be shown at Christ-church in Canturbury: yet his substantial monument, wherein his bones are deposited, is to be seen in St. Gregorie's in Sudbury.

Fuller. Worthies. Suffolk.

The warlike elfe much wondred at this tree,

So sayre and great, that shadowed all the ground.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

The line of distance, which makes the third, with all its adumbrations and shadowings.—Evelyn. Of Architecture.

Darkness now rose,

As day-light sunk, and brought in lowring night

Her shadowy off-spring unsubstantial both,

Privation meer of light and absent day.

Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

The Jews' religion was of far less perfection and dignity than ours, ours being that truth whereof theirs was but a shadowish prefigurative resemblance.

Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. viii.

Rise, son of Tydeus! to the brave and strong

Rest seems inglorious, and the night too long.

But sleep'st thou now? when from yon hill the foe

Hangs o'er the fleet, and shades our walls below.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. x.

And, rivell'd up with heat, lay dying in their bed

The ladies gasp'd, and scarcely could respire;

The breath they drew, no longer air, but fire;

The fainty knights were scorch'd; and knew not where

To run for shelter, for no shade was near.

Dryden. The Flower and the Leaf.

My locks (the plenteous harvest of my head)

Hang o'er my manly face; and dangling down,

As with a shady grove, my shoulders crown,

Id. Ovid. Metam. b. xiii.

Nearchus assures us, that during his voyage along the coast of India (for no part of India extends beyond the Oritæ) the 2 shadows fall not the same way, as in other parts; for when they sail'd far into the ocean, towards the south, there, the shadows, nigh noon-day declin'd southward; and when the sun was upon the meridian, they had no shadows at all.

Rooke. Arrian. Hist. of Alexander's Expedition, b. v. c. 25.

But as Augustus is still shadowed of Æneas, I must prepare that subject, by showing how dextrously he managed both the prince and people, so as to displease neither, and to do good to both.—Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, Ded.

By the visible place he means, about their monuments and sepulchres, where the shadowy phantasms of such souls have sometimes appeared.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 3.

I found here a very snug cove sheltered from all winds, which we called Luncheon Cove, because here we dined on cray fish, on the side of a pleasant brook, shaded by the trees from both wind and sun.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 5.

The means by which the painter works, and on which the effect of his picture depends, are light and shade, warm and cold colours.—Reynolds. On the Art of Painting, Note 39.

One of the first rules, for instance, that I believe every master would give to a young pupil, respecting his conduct and management of light and shadow, would be what Leonardo da Vinci has actually given; that you must oppose a light ground to the shadowed side of your figure, and a dark ground to the light side.—Id. ib. Disc. 8.

As they worship false gods, their blessings are of the kind which corresponds with the nature of their deities. They are shadowy and unsubstantial; dreams, bubbles, and meteors, which dance before their eyes, and often lead them to perdition.—Knox, Ess. 155.

SHAFT. } Ger. Schaft, sagitta, et omne

SHA'FTMENT. } telum missile; A. S. Sceaft, scaft, from Ger. Schaffen, A. S. Sceof-an, scof-an, scuf-an,

to shove; in Dut. Schuiven. The A. S. Scof-an,

be-scof-an, Somner interprets,—to thrust, cast, hurt, throw or shove. And Tooke concurs, that shaft means, that which is shov'd. Applied to—

Any missive weapon; an arrow, (sc. cast, thrown, shot from a bow;) to that by which a cart or other carriage is shoved or forced along.

Shaft of a mine,—the opening shoved or shovelled into it.

Shaft of a pillar,—perhaps from the shape resembling the round arrow or missile weapon.

Somner, in v. "Sceafes-byrg, Shaftes-bury," so called happily (saith Mr. Camden) from the churches spire-steeple, such as the Saxons called shafts. Rather (I take it) from the fashion of the hill, being round and smooth, shaft-like, and giving name to the place before any church there erected."

His slepe, his mete, his drinke is him byraft,
That lene he wex, and drie as is a shaft.

Chaucer. The Knights Tale, v. 1364.

So at the last the shaft of tree
I drough out, with the feathers three.—Id. Rom. of the R.

The sailing firre, the cipres death to plaine,
The shooter ewe, the aspe for shaftes plaine.
Id. The Assembly of Fowls.

I will speake of those shaftes which Englishemen, at this daye, most commonly do approve and allowe. A shaft hath three principall parts, the stele, the fethers, and the head; whereof every one must be severallye spoken of.

Ascham. Toxophilus, b. ii.

Therefore let your bow have good bigge bende, a shaftment and two fingers at the least, for these which I have spoken of.—Id. Ib.

Upon a day,
As she the woodes with bow and shaftes did raunge,
The hartlesse hynd and roebucke to dismay,
Dan Faunus chaunst to meet her by the way.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 2.

Called they are so, for that they are but a cubite or three shaftments (or spannes) high, that is to say, three times nine inches.—Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 2.

The great Achilles march'd not to the field,
Till Vulcan that impenetrable shield
And arms had wrought; yet there no bullets flew;
But shafts, and darts, which the weak Phrygians threw.
Waller. Instructions to a Painter.

The racer stumbles in the shaft,
And shows he was not meant for draft.
Lloyd. The Cobbler of Cripplegate's Letter.

To the influence of unjust prepossession it must be attributed, that some kinds of literary pursuits, indisputably innocent at least, such as the study of antiquities, have been attacked with all the shafts of ridicule.

Knox, Ess. 73.

SHAG, adj. } A. S. Sceacga, coma, SHAG, n. } a bush of hair; also the SHAG, v. } boughes, branches, and leaves
SHA'GGED. } of trees or hearbs: also flames
SHA'GGEDNESS. } like hairs. Hereof our shagge SHA'GGY. } for clothe of an high nap: as SHA'GGINESS. } also our shock, for a shaggy, or shagged dogg, (Somner.) Shock is shoke, the past part. of shake, and written by Harrison shacked, shack'd. Shag, may be shaked, shak'd, shag, meaning any thing shaked, in the bushy, rough, confused state of hair, leaves, shaked.

Bushy, rough, rugged; uncombed, unsmoothed; unpolished.

Pope uses the verb almost literally; i.e. shaken, shattered, bruised.

Pand. I will serve: your offers must be full of bounty, velvets to furnish a gown, silks for petticoats, and foreparts, shag for lining.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Woman Hater, Act iv. sc. 2.

Full blacke and griesly did his face appeare,
Besmeard with smoke that nigh his eye-sight blent;
With rugged beard, and hoarie shagged heare,
The which he never wont to combe, or comely sheare.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 5.

Of the same kind is the goat hart, and differing onely in the beard and long shag about the shoulders.

Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 33.

When as those fallow deer, and huge-haunch'd stags that graz'd
Upon her shaggy heaths, the passengers amaz'd
To see their mighty herds, with high palm'd heads to threat
The woods of o'ergrown oaks.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 12.

Round-roof'd, short-jointed, fet locks shag and long,
Broad-breast, full eyes, small head, and nostril wide.
Shakespeare. Venus & Adonis.

The inhabitants could not inform him of the colour, shaggedness, and other qualities of the dog.

More. Mystery of Godliness, (1660.)

— And in front of him, Apollo, who had cast,
About his bright aspect, a cloud; and did before him beare
Joves huge and each-where shaggy shield.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xv.

Father of Gods, will any man, of all earths grassie sphere,
Aske any of the gods consents, to any actions there,
If thou wilt see the shag-haired Greeks, with headstrong labours frame
So huge a worke, and not to us, due offerings first enflame?

Id. Ib. b. vii.

There was an old usurer not far from London, who had train'd up a dog of his to bring his meat after him in a hand-basket, so that in time the shag-dog was so well-bred, that his master us'd to send him by himself to Smithfield Shambles with a basket in his mouth, and a note in the bottom thereof to his butcher.—Howell, b. iv. Let. 33.

Their haire is betweene the wooll of a sheepe and the haire of a goat, resembling both, shacked, and yet absolutelie like vnto neither of both.

Holinshead. Description of Britaine, c. 10.

In this wood were sometime white buls with shack't heares and curled manes like fierce lions.

Id. Description of Scotland, c. 7.

— Then proves if he his scent can foil,
And makes amongst the herds, and flocks of shag-wool'd
sheep,
Them frighting from the guard of those who had their keep.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 13.

— A bleak expanse,
Shagg'd o'er with wavy rocks, cheerless and void
Of every life, that from the dreary months
Flies conscious southward.

Thomson. A Hymn.

As when the polypus, from forth his cave
Torn with full force, reluctant beats the wave;
His ragged claws are stuck with stones and sands:
So the rough rock had shagg'd Ulysses hands.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. v.

Westward, a sumptuous frontispiece appear'd,
On Doric pillars of white marble rear'd,
Crown'd with an architrave of antique mold,
And sculpture rising on the roughen'd gold.
In shaggy spoils here Theseus was beheld,
And Perseus dreadful with Minerva's shield.

Pope. The Temple of Fame.

As if, like him of fabulous renown
They had indeed ability to smooth
The shag of savage nature, and were each
An Orpheus, and omnipotent in song.—Cowper. Task.

Though, from the colour and *shaggy*ness of the hair, and its unlikeness to any land animal, we judged it might probably be that of the large male ursine seal, or sea-bear.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 5.

SHAGRE'EN. Fr. Chagrin; It. Zigrino. See the two last quotations from Goldsmith.

"I have laid it all out in a bargain, and here it is," pulling out a bundle from his breast: "here they are; a gross of green spectacles, with silver rims and shagreen cases."

Goldsmith. The Vicar of Wakefield, c. 12.

The men of Mataia also wear their hair very long; and, when they fight, cover their arms with a substance which is beset with shark's teeth, and their bodies with a sort of shagreen, being skin of fishes.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 9.

The natives take [the wild ass] for their skins, of which that kind of leather is made which is called shagreen.

Goldsmith. Animated Nature. The Ass.

Its skin [the shark's] is by great labour polished into that substance called shagreen.—Id. Ib. The Shark Kind.

SHAKE, v. } Dut. Shocken; Ger. Schocken; SHAKE, n. } Sw. Shaka; Fr. Chocquer; A. S.
SHA'KER. } Sceac-an, quater, concutere,
SHA'KING, n. } agitare.

To move or cause any thing to move, to and from, (quickly) backwards and forwards; to cause it to quake or tremble, or totter; to agitate or act upon with sudden and repeated motion; to move from, and consequentially, to weaken or disturb the steadiness or stedfastness, the firmness or fixedness.

Shakes, n. in Byron, is a vulgarism, which may be traced to the custom of shaking hands; the shake being estimated according to the value set upon the person giving it, and hence applied to the person.

He bi gan to shake ys axe, for to smyte anon,
Ac knyghts criede, & gede bi twene hem monyon.

R. Gloucester, p. 25.

The kynge's side, alas! Symoun did doun shake.

R. Brunne, p. 217.

Tresore that thei mot fynde, with tham away thei shoke.
R. Brunne, p. 323.

He sigh his wyves modir liggyng and schakun with feveres.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 8.

Thei schulen gyve into youre bosum a good mesure and wel fillid, and schakun togider and overflowinge

Id. Luk, c. 6.

Geue, and it shall be geuen vnto you, good mesure, pressed doune, shaken together and running ouer, shal men geue into youre bosomes.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

With that the chorle his clubbe gan shake,
Frowning his eyen gan to make,
And hidous chere, as man in rage,
For ire he brent in his visage.—Chaucer. Rom. of the R.

But full great pittie, that so faire a mould
Did on so weake foundation ever sitt:
For on a sandie hill, that still did flitt
And fall away, it mounted was full hie:
That every breath of heaven shaked itt.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 4.

— When soon the troubled ground,
On her black bosom felt the thunder, which awoke
Her genius, with the shock that violently shook
Her entrails.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 22.

Jove was extremely mou'd with him, and said, What words are these,
Thou mightie shaker of the earth, thou lord of all the seas?

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. vii.

Thou makest us a by-word among the heathen; a shaking of the head among the people.—Psalm 44.

But when aloft he shakes it in the skies,
Shouts in their ears, and lightens in their eyes,
Deep horror seizes every Grecian breast,
Their force is humbled, and their fear confest.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xv.

It seems highly probable, that the shake that is given to one part of the earth by the firing and explosion of subterranean exhalations, (if that be the true and only cause of earthquakes) is not capable of reaching near so far as divers earthquakes have done, but that the fire passes through some little subterranean clefts, or channels, or hidden conveyances, from one great cavity or mine to another.

Boyle. Works, vol. v. p. 14.

I believe they would cordially agree with me, that a truly excellent comedy is that which causes them to shake their sides most frequently with the drollery of its scenes, and the wit and humour of its conversation.

Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 54.

Puff. Why, by that shake of the head, he gave you to understand that even though they had more justice in their cause, and wisdom in their measures—yet, if there was not a greater spirit shown on the part of the people, the country would at last fall a sacrifice to the hostile ambition of the Spanish monarchy.—Sheridan. Critic, Act iii. sc. 1.

For the hand of the heart is the index, declaring
If well or if ill, how its master will stand;
I heed not the tongue, of its friendship that's swearing
I judge of a friend by the shake of his hand.

Ritson. Miscellanies, s. 80.

I had my hands full and my head to, just then [when he wrote Marino Faliero] so it can be no great shakes.

Byron to Murray, Sep. 28, 1820.

SHA'LDER.

Leland heard that an arme ran some time from the head of Darwent also to Scarborough, till such time as two hills betwixt which it ran, did shalder and so choke vp his course.

Holinshead. Description of Britaine, c. 15.

SHALE, i. e. Shell, (qv.) and Scale.

There saw I Coll Tragetour
Upon a table of sicamour
Play an vncouth thing to tell,
I saw him carry a wind mell
Under a walnote shale.—Chaucer. House of Fame, b. iii.

But if thou examine their doctrine, thou shalt finde that this fayth is away in all their frutes, and therefore are they worme eaten and shales with out kernelles.

Tyndall. Workes, p. 244.

And master philosopher, if he drinke his part,
Will not trifle his time in the huske or the shale,
But go to the kernell by the depth of his art,
To be found in the bottome of a pot good ale.

F. Beaumont. The Ex-Ale-Tation of Ale.

Const. To horse you gallant princes, straight to horse.
Doe but behold yond poore and starued band,
And your faire shew shall suck away their souls,
Leauing them but the shakes and huskes of men.

Shakespeare. Hen. V. Act iv. sc. 2.

SHE'ELING. Sheal,—a cottage or shelter:
the word is usual in the wastes of Northumberland and Cumberland, (Camden.) And in Scotch, see Jamieson.

It had much of glamour might
Could make a ladye seem a knight,
A nut shell seem a gilded barge
A sheeling seem a palace large.

Scott. Lay of the Last Minstrel, c. 3.

SHALL. } A. S. Sceal. Shall (says Junius), SHOULD. } debere, to owe. "By the faith I shall to God," per fidem, quam debeo Deo, (Chaucer infra.) A. S. Scyl-an; Ger. Scol-en, sollen; Sw.
Skola, debere; Dut. Schuld, debitum, schuldigh, debens. In A. S. it is also written, sceal-an.
Sceal, (says Lye,) joined to an infinitive has the force of the future: as—Hwæt scealic singan, What shall I sing, or what shall or owe I to sing;—Thou scealt hatan; Thou shalt call; or thou shalt or owest to call. Nu sceal he sylf faran; Now he himself shall go; or now he himself shall or owes to go (ought to go). Wachter says that the Ger. Sollen, debere, embraces within itself not only those duties which we owe to ourselves and others, but also pecuniary debts, and even those penalties which we owe to the laws, and, in fine, all those future circumstances (futuros casus) which ought to be, or become, or be done (fieri). And he adds, that no one has discovered the origin of the word.
 Lye thinks the application to future time is to be deduced from the meaning owe, since that which any one owes to do, is still to be done; is still a duty, a debt to be performed. But this does not reach the difficulty felt by Wachter. Whence scyl-an, scolen, de-bere, to owe? It is at least worth a conjecture. The A. S. Scyl-an, in Dut.
Scheel-en, Ger. Schelen, (see SKILL.) means, to divide, to distinguish: (met.) to discern, to see distinctly, the separate and distinct qualities of things:—to see, to view or survey, to perceive, what is:—to see, to ken, to know: and hence its application to right and duty. In Chaucer, the duty—"I shall to God," is, I know to be God's, I acknowledge to God. The distinction between shall and will, in their application to future time, is founded upon their meaning: shall, upon foresight; will, upon the wish or desire, the willingness to do what is to be done; though in usage now transferred to instances where no wish or willingness can be supposed.

Should, or shulde, is contracted from shulled;
 and would, or wolde, from wolled.

Ther thou schalt fynden a place God in to byleue.
R. Gloucester, p. 14.

Dede him toke & he died, als it salle do vs.
R. Brunne, p. 5.

Alas that riche shal reve. and robbe mannes soule
 For the love of oure Lorde.—Piers Plouhman, p. 260.

A clerk thoru enchantement hym bi gan to telle,
 That the schulde first fader and moder quelle:
 And sethth he schulde mony lond ouer passe and wende
 And mony bataille ouer come, and seththe, at the ende,
 To a noble lond he scholde come, & there al lord be,
 And kynges come of hys blod, & that me schulde se.
R. Gloucester, p. 10.

He seid vnto tham alle, that purueled suld it be,
 That in alle the lond suld be no kyng bot he.
R. Brunne, p. 26.

Thyng that al the worlde wot. wherefore sholdest thou spare
 To rehercen hit by retoryk.—Piers Plouhman, p. 203.

For folk shal rise on folk and rewme on rewme and erthe movyngis and hungir schulen be by placis, these thingis schulen be bigynnyng of sorowis. But se ye ye silf for thei schulen take you in counsels and ye schulen be beeten in synagogis and ye schulen stonde bifore kyngis and domes-men for me in witnessyng to hem.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 13.

For there shall nacion, aryse agaynste nacyon, and kyngdome agaynst kyngdome. And ther shal be earthquakes in al quarters, & famishment & troubles. These are the begynnynge of sorowes. But take hede to your selues. For they shal brynge you vp to ye counsels & into the synagoges, & ye shal be beaten: yea, & shal be broughte before rulers and kinges for my sake for a testimonyall vnto them.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

Jhesus answerde and seide to hem, undo this temple, and in thre dayes I shal reise it. Therfor the Jewis seiden to him, in fourtye and sixe yer this was bildid, and shall thou in thre dayes reise it?—Wiclif. Jon, c. 2.

And he was there to the deth of Eroude that it schulde be fulfillid that was seid of the Lord bi the prophete seiyinge fro Egypt I have clepid my sone.—Id. Matt. c. 2.

And thou Cafarnaum whether thou scalt be arerid up to hevenes? thou schalt go doun into helle, for if the vertues that ben don in thee, hadden be don in Sodome: peraven-ture thei schulden hane dwellid in to this dai.—Id. Ib. c. 11.

For by the faith I shall to God, I wene
 Was neuer straunger none in her degree
 Than was the quene in casting of her eye.
Chaucer. The Court of Loue.

Eche of you to shorten with youre way
 In this viage shal tellen tales twey.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 745.

As I best might, I hid fro him my sorwe,
 And toke him by the hond, Seint John to borwe,
 And said him thus; 'Lo, I am youre all Beth swiche as I have ben to you and shall.'
Id. The Squieres Tale, v. 10,839.

Tiburse answered, and saide; "Brother dere,
 First tell me whither I shal, and to what man."
Id. The Second Nonnes Tale, v. 15,708.

And ye shul bothe anon unto me swere,
 That never mo ye shul my contree dere,
 Ne maken werre upon me night ne day,
 But ben my frendes in all that ye may.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1753.

And therefore of his wise purueyance
 He hath so wel beset his ordinance,
 That spes of thinges and progressions
Shullen endure by successions,
 And not eterne, withouten any lie.—Id. Ib. v. 3013.

And swore his oth, as he was trewe knight,
 He wolde don so ferforthly his might
 Upon the tyrant Creon hem to wreke,
 That all the peple of Grece shulde speke,
 How Creon was of Theseus yserved,
 As he that hath is deth ful wel deserved.—Id. Ib. v. 964.

Also I prae you to forgive it me,
 All have I not sette folk in hir degree,
 Here in this tale, as that they shulden stonde.
Id. Ib. v. 745.

Men shulden wedden after hir estate,
 For youthe and elde is often at debate.
Id. The Milleres Tale, v. 3230.

What shall befall here afterwarde
 God wote, for now vpon this tide
 Men see the worlde on euery side
 In sondrie wise so diuersed
 That it well nigh stant all reuersed.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

For all reason wolde this,
 That vnto him, whiche the head is,
 The membres buxom shall bowe.
Id. Ib. p. 8.

Thei sein, that God is mighty there,
 And shall ordeine, what he wyll,
 There make thei none other skyl.
Id. Ib. p. 10.

For here in erthe amonge vs
 If no man write howe it stode,
 The pris of them that were good Shulde, (as who sayth a great partie)
 Be loste.
Id. Ib. Prol.

For certes suche a maladie
 As I now haue, and longe haue hadde
 It might make a wise man madde,
 If that it shulde longe endure.
Id. Ib. b. i.

Sicin. It is a minde that shall remain a poison
 Where it is: not poysen any further.
Corio. Shall remaine?
 Heare you this Triton of the Minnoues? Marke you
 His absolute shall?—Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act iii. sc. 1.

Remember what I warne thee, shun to taste,
 And shun the bitter consequence: for know
 The day thou eat'st thereof, my sole command
 Transgrest, inevitably thou shalt dye;
 From that day mortal, and this happie state
Shalt loose, expell'd from hence into a world
 Of woe and sorrow.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. viii.

SHA'LLOP. Fr. Chaloupe; which Duchat derives from the Ger. Schale. (See SCALLOP.)
 The Fr. Coquille, a shell, is also, a boat or any open vessel fashioned like a bason or scallop shell, (Cotgrave.)

In the same shee lept, and with the ore
 Did thrust the shallop from the floting strand:
 So safety fownd at sea, which she fownd not at land.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 7.

And goats he brought, the pride of all their race;
 Imported in a shallop not his own;
 The dame re-echoed to their mingled moan.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xx.

Yet there might be little harbours or coves for shallops, or the like, to anchor in, which we did not see or search after.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1687.

SHA'LLOW, adj. } Shallow, shelve or shelf, SHA'LLOW, n. } and shoal, seem to be the SHA'LLOW, v. } same word, differently
SHA'LLOWLY. } written. Shoals, (brevi-SHA'LLOWNESS. } bus vadis,) in the quotation from Dryden's Virgil, is, in G. Douglas, Shellies and undeipis, (i. e. undeeep.) The glossarist says—that shellies are fine blue slates, (see

SLATE, anciently written Sclate; and he thinks the word may be from the A. S. Sceala, whence the English Scale and shell, and perhaps, he adds, the Eng. Shelf, shelves, and shallow. To shelve, (Scotch, see Jamieson.) is—to separate in lamina.
Shelvy rocks,—those which appear in a variety of lamina; also, those which form the bed of a shallow river. Shallow or undeeep seems consequential, and to be only applicable to the shoals or shelves, or separate and distinct ridges, banks, or masses, rising from the main bed near to the surface. (Met.)—

A shallow fellow, is—one whose depth or bottom is soon fathomed, reached, found; superficial; opposed to profound, or deep; shortsighted, simple.

Eftsoones her shallow ship away did slide,
 More swift then swallow sheres the liquid skye,
 Withouten oare or pilot it to guide,
 Or winged canvas with the wind to fly.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 6.

But out, alas! no sea, I find,
 Is troubled like a lover's mind.
 Within it rocks and shallows be,
 Despair, and fond credulity.—Suckling. Love's World.

But for you [rebels] looke to taste the due
 Meet for rebellion, and such acts as yours.
 Most shallowly did you these armes commence,
 Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.
Shakespeare. 2 Pt. Hen. IV. Act iii. sc. 1.

A good reply or second speech, without a good settled speech, sheweth shallownes and weakenesse.
Bacon. Ess. Of Discourse.

In long process of time, the silt and sands shall choak and shallow the sea in and about it.—Brown. Miscel. p. 190.

Then haste, the safer shallows to regain,
 Nor dare the stormy dangers of the main.
Fenton. The Dream.

It then evidently will appear, that upright simplicity is the deepest wisdom, and perverse craft the meekest shallowness.—Barrow, vol. ii. Ser. 13.

Nature, that found that shallowness [in the cavity of the scapula] necessary to the variety of motions which is intended for the joint, found other ways of securing it from running out.—Wiseman. Surgery, b. vii. c. 5.

—That thought alone thy state impairs,
 Thy lofty sinks, and shallows thy profound,
 And straitens thy diffusive.
Young. The Complaint, Night 9.

We found the water shallower here, than at the same distance from any other part of the coast.
Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 7.

We have less than a mariner's line in sounding the depths of eternity; we can only reach the shallows that lie around us—the grandeur of eternity we must look at with the eye of faith.—Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 21.

The surf, which breaks on the coast round the bay, extends to the distance of about one hundred and fifty yards from the shore, within which space the surges of the sea, accumulating from the shallowness of the water, are dashed against the beach with prodigious violence.
Cook. Third Voyage, b. v. c. 7.

SHALM, or } Fr. Chalemie, chalemelle. A SHA'WM. } little pipe made of a reed, or of a wheaten or oaten straw. Menage says—Cha-lumeau, from calamellus, diminutive of Calamus, a straw, a reed, a pipe. Gower writes Shalmele.
 A musical pipe.

Tho saw I standen hem behind,
 A farre from hem, all by themselue,
 Many a thousand times twelue,
 That made loud minstralcies
 In cornmuse and shalmies,
 And many another pipe.—Chaucer. House of Fame, b. iii.

Of Pan, and all that was likynge,
 As in pipynge of melodie
 Was herde in thilke companie.
 So loude that on euery side
 It thought that all the heuen cride
 In suche accorde, and suche a sowne
 Of bumbarde, and of clariowne,
 With cornemuse, and shalmele.—Gower. Con. A. b. viii.

As shawme or pipe lettes out the sounde impreste,
 By muskytes arte forged to-fore and fyled.
Wyatt. Ps. 130. The Auctor.

Cit. What stately musick have you?
 You have shawmes.
Pro. Shawms? no.
Beaum. & Fletch. Knight of the Burning Pestle, 10 I

Wherefore Lysander, when the Athenians had submitted themselves altogether to his will, caused all the women-players of pipes or shalmes to come out of the city.

North. Plutarch, p. 378.

The next morning by break of day, Agesilaus desirous to see if the Thebans had any courage to come down to fight again, commanded his souldiers to put garlands upon their heads, and his musitians to sound their shalmes or pipes, whilst he did set up a token of triumph as victorious.

Id. Ib. p. 516.

A reverend dome there stands, where twice each day
Assembling prophets their devotions pay,
In prayers and hymns to heaven's eternal King,
The cornet, flute, and shawme, assisting as they sing.

Otway. Windsor Castle.

SHAM, adj. } Junius and Skinner do not SHAM, n. } notice this word. Lye derives SHAM, v. } it from the Welsh Skommi, and explains it—fallere, decipere, ludificare.

To play false, to deceive, to make sport of.

I am willing to hope the best, and that it is a meer dissatisfaction in them as to our revealed religion; and that this pretended zeal for natural religion is more than a meer sham and disguise to avoid a more odious imputation.

Stillington. vol. iv. Ser. 9.

I had this account from the surgeon, Mr. Coppinger, who seemed a little concerned at it: because when he told me this, he could not tell whether they should proceed thither or no; but they did go thither, and found all this a sham.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

Then all your wits that fear and sham,
Down from Don Quixote to Tom Tram,
From whom I jests and puns purloin,
And silly put them off for mine,
Fond to be thought a country wit:
The rest—when fate and you think fit.

Prior. To F. Shephard, Esq.

The discipline of the college, at the same time, may enable him to force all his pupils to the most regular attendance upon his sham lecture, and to maintain the most decent and respectful behaviour during the whole time of the performance.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, vol. iii. b. v. c. 1.

SHAMBLE. A. S. Scamol, a bench, a form, a footstool. Hence our modern word of shambles, used as for the formes, stables or benches whereon butchers expose their meat, (Somner.) In Scotch, Shamyll.

And straightwaies the king compassed the commons about, as they had beene a flocke of sheepe that shuld haue beene closed within some fold, till it pleased the sheeheard to appoint fourth, which should be thrust into pasture, and which taken to go to the shambels.

Holinshed. Historie of England, an. 1381.

Doria. I care not if my throat were next: for to live still, and live here, were but to grow fat for the shambles.

Beaum. & Fletch. Cupid's Revenge, Act iv. sc. 1.

As for horse-flesh, I know not whether they kill any purposely for the shambles; or whether they only do it, when they are not likely to live.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

SHAMBLING, adj. } See SCAMBLE.
SHAMBLING, n. }

So when nurse Nokes, to act young Ammon tries,
With shambling legs, long chin, and foolish eyes.

Smith. To the Memory of Mr. John Philips.

By that shambling in his walk, it should be my rich old banker, Gomez, whom I knew at Barcelona: as I live 'tis he.—Dryden. The Spanish Fryar, Act i.

SHAME, n. } See ASHAME. Goth.
SHAME, v. } Shama mic, pudet me, SHA'MER. } erubescio; A. S. Scam-an,
SHA'MING, n. } scamian; Dut. Schaemen; SHA'MEFACED. } Ger. Schaemen; Sw.
SHA'MEFACEDNESS. } Shamm, skamma. What SHA'MEFUL. } we now write shame-faced, SHA'MEFULLY. } is in A. S. Scam-fæst, scam-
SHA'MEFULNESS. } fæstnesse, which Somner SHA'MELESS. } interprets — Shamefast, SHA'MELESSLY. } shamefastnesse; as—sted-SHA'MELESSNESS. } fast, stedfastness. It is also found so written in old authors; the source of the change is obviously from the effect of shame in many cases upon the face. Gower says, "She somdele redde became for shame." In the Lat. Vulgate, the passage quoted from Wiclif below, is, "Qui enim erubuerit me et meos sermones, hunc filius hominis erubescet." To shame, in Wiclif, is in the Bible 1551 and our present version, to be ashamed. To shame, (lit.) may mean—

To blush, to redden; to blush at; to feel disgraced by; to cause the feeling or sensation of shame. See the quotations from Bacon, Locke, and Cogan.

"The trouth is shameless," (Gower); i.e. free from shame; has no cause for shame. A shameless man we now call—one who has no shame or sense of shame.

Shameful,—full of shame or cause of shame; indecent or unbecoming; disgraceful, degrading, ignominious, infamous.

A duk ther was of this lond, Fulgence was ys name,
He stod ageyn hym mid ys ost, & dude hym gret schame.

R. Gloucester, p. 75.

Grete pite it was, that the hede of Cristendam
Suld for any trespas take so foule a scham.

R. Brunne, p. 323.

Alle was thorgh Edrik, that mykelle was to blame.
He was the kynges conseiloure, & did him mykelle schame.—Id. p. 42.

For whoso schameth me and my wordis: mannes sone schal schame him whanne he cometh in his majeste and of the fadris and of the holy aungels.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 9.

For whosoever is ashamed of me, and of my sayings: of hym shal the sonne of man be ashamed, when he cometh in his owne glory, and in the glorie of his father, & of the holye angels.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And seide there was a juge in a citee: that dredde not
God. neither schamed of men.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 18.

Schalt bigynne with schame: to holde the loweste place.

Id. Ib. c. 14.

And thou the begynne with shame to take the lowest roume.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Thus wicked tong, God yeve him shame,
Can put hem euerichone in blame,
Without desert and causelesse.—Chaucer. Rom. of the R.

She [Enuie] is full glad in hir courage,
If she see any great linage
Be brought to nought in shamefull wise.—Id. Ib.

Shamefast she was in maidens shamefastnesse,
Constant in herte, and ever in besinesse
To drive hire out of idel slogardie.

Id. The Doctoures Tale, v. 11,989.

"Cometh nere," (quod he) "my lady prioress,
And ye, sire clerk, let be your shamefastnesse,
Ne studieth nought, lay hand to, every man."

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 841.

And with that worde she wer all milde,
And somdele redde became for shame.

Gower. Con. A. b. vi.

For how so that the cause wende,
The trouth is shameles at ende,
But what thyng that is trouthles,
It maie not well be shameles.—Id. Ib. b. vii.

For again, ther was nothing y^t he more hated and abhorred, cōsidering that thei serued of nought but to the shaming of such other folke as wer in very science much better lerned, and in those trifles ignorant.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 5.

Whan Nicholas Clifforde sawe himselfe so sone aposed, he was shamfast, bycause of the that were there present and herde the mater.—Berners. Froissart. Cron. vol. i. c. 374.

Go not shamefully a begging from house to house, as friers doe.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 59.

Then began decrees, ordinances, depocytions, disposy-cyons, reseruacions, prouysions with like shamefulness for to spring, and there is no remedy, but they must contynue.

Barnes. Workes, p. 204.

He [Bonner] alledged, or rather shamelessly and slanderously cavilled, that those his denouncers were vile, infamed and notorious criminous persons, and also open and manifest heretics.—State Trials. 3 Edw. VI.

And how much that love might move us, so much, and more that faultiness of her mind removed us; her beauty being ballanced by her shamelessness.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

But conscience made her come to her self, and leave Philoclea, who blushing, and withal smiling, making shame- facedness pleasant, and pleasure shamefaced, tenderly moved her feet.—Id. Ib.

Most ugly shapes and horrible aspects,
Such as dame nature selfe mote feare to see,
Or shame, that ever should so fowle defects
From her most cunning hand escaped bee.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

For, whiles his lord pursewd that noble mayd,
After that foster fowle he fiercely ridd
To bene avenged of the shame he did
To that faire damzell.

Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 5.

Shame causeth blushing; and casting down of the eyes.
Blushing is the resort of bloud to the face; which in the passion of shame, is the part that laboureth most.

Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 718.

Petru. My means and my conditions are no shamers
Of him that owes 'em, all the world knows that,
And my friends no reliers on my fortunes.

Beaum. & Fletch. Woman's Prize, Act i. sc. 2.

—Him he chased long
Through the thicke woods wherein he would have hid
His shamefull head from his avengement strong,
And oft him threatned death for his outrageous wrong.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 5.

Griefe, and despight, and gealosy, and scorne,
Did all the way him follow hard behynd;
And he himselfe himselfe loath'd so forlorne,
So shamefully forlorne of womankynd:
That, as a snake, still lurked in his wounded mynd.

Id. Ib. c. 10.

—Thou art a shameless villain,
A thing out of the overchange of nature;
Sent like a thick cloud to disperse a plague
Upon weak catching women.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Maid's Tragedy, Act v.

Theo. Pray stay there lady;
And when the night came, came he, kept he touch with ye?
Be not so shame-fac'd.—Id. Love's Pilgrimage, Act iii. sc. 2.

And next to her sate goodly shamefastnesse,
Ne ever durst her eyes from ground upreare,
Ne ever once did looke up from her desse,
As if some blame of evill she did feare,
That in her cheekes made roses oft appeare.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 10.

For shame, which is an uneasiness of the mind upon the thought of having done something which is indecent, or will lessen the valued esteem which others have for us, has not always blushing accompanying it.

Locke. Of Humane Understanding, b. ii. c. 20.

Tis yours, O warriors, all our hopes to raise;
Oh, recollect your ancient worth and praise:
'Tis your's to save us, if you cease to fear;
Flight, more than shameful, is destructive here.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xiii.

Shame is a painful sensation occasioned by the quick apprehension, that reputation and character are in danger; or by the perception that they are lost. It may arise from the immediate detection, or the fear of detection, or something ignominious. It may also arise from native diffidence in young ingenious minds, when surprised into situations where they attract the peculiar attention of their superiors.

Cogan. On the Passions, c. 2. § 3.

From that period at which the mind begins to think, Sophron was remarkable for a quality which, in children, is called shamefacedness. He could never enter a room full of company without shewing his distress, by a violent suffusion of blushes.—Knox, Ess. 159.

SHANK. A. S. Scanca, sceanca; Ger. Schink; Dut. Schencle; Sw. Shank, the shank or leg:
Earm scanca, the arm-bone, (Somner.) See SHIN.

Applied to—
The leg, from knee to ancle; the leg; the support, as the leg to the body; the leg or arm, the long limb or member.

Thei brak in tuo his shankes, to mak the tounge mete,
The blode was bothe warme & fresh, that of the shankes
lete.

R. Brunne, p. 36.

He stombled at a chance, & felle on his kne,
Thorgh the tother shank he ros, & serued in his degre.

Id. p. 55.

And here and there were pleasant arbors pight,
And shadie seates, and sundry flowing bankes,
To sit and rest the walkers wearie shankes.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 10.

—And as you haue seene
A ship-wright bore a nauall beame; he oft Thrusts at the argurs froofe; works still aloft;
And at the shanke, helpe others; with a cord
Wound round about, to make it sooner bord;
All plying the round still.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. ix.

Cra. His legs were ever villanous, since I knewe him.
Era. Faith his uncles shanks are somewhat the better.

Beaum. & Fletch. Queen of Corinth, Act iii. sc. 1.

"The deuce confound," he cries, "these drum-stick shanks,
They neither have my gratitude nor thanks;
They're perfectly disgraceful!"

Goldsmith. Epilogue in the Character of Harlequin.

SHANTY, i. e. jaunty.

'Tis thine for sleeves to teach the shantiest cuts,
Give empty coxcombs more important struts,
Prescribe new rules for knots, hoops, manteaus, wigs.

Warton. Fashion. A Satire.

SHAPE, v. } Dut. Schaep-en, schep-en;
SHAPE, n. } Ger. Schaffen; Sw. Skapa; A. S.
SHA'PELESS. } Sceappian, scippan, scyppan; SHA'PELY. } formare, fingere; to form, or frame.

To form or frame, to make, to bring, or reduce,
to a form or figure, an image or representation;
to fashion; to prepare, to adapt; to make suitable, or becoming or proportioned to.

His praier did him bryng out of his hard cas,
Thanked God & him so wele for him had shaped,
That of his anguys grim so lightly was escaped.
R. Brunne, p. 201.

And bad shappe hym a shap. of shides and of bordes.
Piers Plouhman, p. 177.

And ich wene hit worth of menyne, as was in Noes tyme
Tho that he shop the shup. of shides and of bordes.
Id. p. 196.

Lyke a shappesters sheres.—Id. p. 91.

By feith noe dredde thorough answer takun of these thingis that ghit weren not seen, and schapide a schip into the heelte of his hous bi which he dampnyde the world and is ordeyned eir of righwisnesse which is bi feith.
Wiclif. Ebrewis, c. 11.

"Nay certainly," quod he, "ther have we non,
But whan as liketh we can take us on,
Or elles make you wene that we ben shape
Somtime like a man, or like an ape;
Or like an angel can I ride or go."
Chaucer. The Freres Tale, v. 7043.

And if so be our destinee be shape
By eterne word to dien in prison,
Of our lignage have som compassion,
That is so low ybrought by tyrannie.
Id. The Knights Tale, v. 1210.

—"Alas the day that I was borne!
Now is my prison werse than beforne:
Now is me shape eternally to dwelle
Not only in purgatorie, but in helle."—Id. Ib. v. 1155.

His felaw was ywalked into toun
Forth with his knave, into that hostellerie,
Wher as he shope him thilke night to lie.
Id. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 360.

"A," quod this sompnour, "benedicite, what say ye?
I wend ye were a yemman trewely.
Ye have a mannes shape as wel as I.
Have ye than a figure determinat
In helle, ther ye ben in your estat?"
Id. The Freres Tale, v. 7038.

Wel semed ech of hem a fayre burgeis,
To sitten in a gild halle, on the deis.
Everich, for the wisdom that he can
Was shapelich for to ben an alderman.
Id. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 371.

Fortune, whiche maie euery threde
To breke and knitte of mans spede
Shape, as this knight rode in a pase
That he by strength taken was.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

And she began him to bemene
And saide: Florent by thy name,
Thou haste on honde suche a game,
That if thou be not better aduised,
Thy deth shapen is, and deuised.
Id. Ib.

Enuie if that I shall descriue,
He is not shapely for to wiuie
In erth amonge the women here.
Id. Ib. b. ii.

A valiant corps, where force and beauty met,
Happy, alas! to happy, but for foes;
Lived, and ran the race, that nature set;
Of manhodes shape, where she the mold did lose.
Surrey. Of the Death of Sir T. W.

And eke his garment, to be thereto meet,
He wilfully did cut and shape anew.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 7.

Which speaches she applying to the scope
Of her intent, this further purpose to him shope.
Id. Ib. b. v. c. 5.

—So taken
She is with Paris the tragedian's shape,
That is to act a lover, I thought once
She would have courted him.
Massinger. The Roman Actor, Act iii. sc. 1.

I see thou know'st what is of use to know,
What best to say canst say, to do canst do;
Thy actions to thy words accord, thy words
To thy large heart give utterance due, thy heart
Contains of good, wise, just, the perfect shape.
Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iii.

And ere those vowes I make do vnperform'd escape,
This world shal once againe renewst resume her shapelesse shape.
Stirling. Aurora, Elegy 2.

I rather would entreat thy company,
To see the wonders of the world abroad;
Then (liuing dully sluggardiz'd at home)
Weare out thy youth with shapelesse idlenesse.
Shakespeare. Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act i. sc. 1.

How many even amongst us, will be found, upon enquiry, to fancy him in the shape of a man sitting in heaven, and to have many other absurd and unfit conceptions of him?
Locke. On Hum. Unders. b. i. c. 4.

Waste sandy valleys, once perplex'd with thorn,
The spiry fir and shapely box adorn.
Pope. Messiah.

In prospects thus, some objects please our eyes,
Which out of Nature's common order rise,
The shapeless rock, or hanging precipice.
Id. Essay on Criticism.

Alas for Sicily! rude fragments now
Lie scatter'd, where the shapely column stood.
Cowper. The Task, b. ii.

Sunk are thy bow'rs in shapeless ruin all,
And the long grass o'ertops the mouldring wall.
Goldsmith. The Deserted Village.

It has been the fashion of the last half century to depreciate his work [Grotius de Jure] as a shapeless compilation in which reason lies buried under a mass of authorities and quotations.—Mackintosh. Study of the Law of Nature.

SHARD. } Shared, shar'd, shard. See SHARE.
SHA'RD. } Any thing separated or divided;
a part or partition, a fragment, or division; a scale,
or shell. See SCALE, and SHELL.

Sharded,—covered with, encased, enclosed in,
protected by shards, or scales, or shells.

Shard-borne beetle is—the beetle borne along the air by its shards or scaly wings, (Steevens.)

For longe tyme it so befelle,
That with his swerd, and with his spere,
He might not the serpent dere;
He was so sharded all aboute,
It held all edge toole withoute.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

And as she loketh to and fro,
She sigh, hir thought, a dragon tho,
Whose scherdes shynen as the sonne.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

What is it, that art and the wit of man hath not devised?
for there is means found to make a strong kind of mortar or cement by the broken sheards of potters vessels.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxxv. c. 12.

Upon that shore he spyd Atin stand,
There by his maister left, when late he far'd
In Phædras flitt bark over that perilous shard.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 6.

—To apprehend thus,
Drawes vs a profit from all things we see:
And often to our comfort, shall we finde
The sharded beetle, in a safer hold
Then is the full-wing'd eagle.
Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act iii. sc. 3.

Her obsequies haue bin as farre inlarg'd,
As we haue warrantis, her death was doubtfull,
And but that great command, o're-swaies the order,
She should in ground vnsanctified haue lodg'd,
Till the last trumpet. For charitable praier, Shardes, flints, and peebles, should be throwne on her.
Id. Hamlet, Act v. sc. 1.

—Ere the bat hath flowne
His cloyster'd flight, ere to black Heccats summons
The shard-borne beetle, with his drowsie hums,
Hath rung night's yawning peale,
There shall be done a deed of dreadfull note.
Id. Macbeth, Act iii. sc. 2.

Not heathpout, or the rarer bird,
Which Phasis or Ionia yields,
More pleasing morsels would afford
Than the fat olives of my fields;
Than shards or mallows for the pot,
That keep the loosen'd body sound.
Dryden. Horace, Epode 2.

SHARE, v. } To share, or shear (see SHEAR)
SHARE, n. } is from the A. S. Scear-an, scyr-SHA'RK. } an, scyr-ian, to cut.
SHA'RING, n. } To cut, to clip, to separate,
to divide; to part, to portion, to partake.

Share or sheerer,—that which cuts or divides, as the plough-share, or sheerer (contracted, Tooke thinks, to avoid the repetition of er, er.)

Share-bone,—where the body is separated or divided.

He schal be demed to the deth. bote yf he do it mythe
In to sykyl oth' into sithe. to shar other to culter.
Piers Plouhman, p. 61.

Of dreames a thousand such eche night I haue a share.
To bannish sleepe from pining corse and nurse my canckred care.
Gascoigne. To his Loue's long Absence.

And therfore must all Israel go downe to ye Philistines, to mende euerye man his share, his mattock, his axe, or his cycle.—Bible, 1551. 1 Sam.

And every day, for guerdon of her song,
He part of his small feast to her would share;
That, at the last, of all his woe and wrong
Companion she became, and so continued long.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 8.

The wicked stroke upon her helmet chaunst
And with the force, which in itself it bore,
Her veritayle shard away, and thence forth glaunst Adowne in vaine, ne harm'd her any more.
Id. Ib. b. vi. c. 6.

But who are your assistants? though I am
So covetous of your glory, that I could wish
You had no sharer in it.
Beaum. & Fletch. Double Marriage, Act i. sc. 1.

Dutch. You are sharer in this happiness,
Myself will wait upon this marriage,
And do the old woman all the honor possible.
Id. Women Pleas'd, Act v. sc. 1.

Sharings, doe greatly enrich, if the hands be well chosen, that are trusted.—Bacon. Ess. On Riches.

They spread their gems the genial warmth to share,
And boldly trust the buds in open air.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. ii.

A field deep-furrow'd next, the god design'd,
The third time labour'd by the sweating hind;
The shining shares full many ploughmen guide,
And turn their crooked yokes on every side.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xviii.

They are the sons of God, and the brethren of Christ, and consequently they shall be sharers of his inheritance, and be glorified with him.—Sharp. Works, vol. v. Dis. 1.

When they trade upon a joint stock, each member sharing in the common profit or loss in proportion to his share in this stock, they are called joint-stock companies.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 1.

It redresses the old Manichean impiety, so derogatory to it, [God's glory,] which makes an evil principle, a sharer with him in the direction of the universe.
Warburton, vol. x. Ser. 18.

SHARK, n. } Skinner says,—perhaps from SHARK, v. } the A. S. Scear-an, to sheer, to SHA'RKER. } cut: applied to the fish, from its voracity; and to the person, from his similar qualities—seizing and devouring eagerly, greedily.
Steevens says,—I believe, to shark up, means to pick up without distinction, as the shark-fish collects his prey. To shark, generally is—To prey upon another, by fraud or rapine; to cheat, to trick, to rob, to plunder.

Fac. 'Slid, prove to day, who shall sharke best. Sub.
Agreed. B. Jonson. Alchymist, Act i. sc. 1.

—Now sir, young Fortinbras,
Of vnimproued mettle, hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway, heere and there,
Shark'd vp a list of landlesse resolute,
For foode and diet, to some enterprize
That hath a stomacke in't.
Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act i. sc. 1.

A hungry renegado, a dirty sharker about the Romish court, who only scribbles that he may dine.
Sir H. Wotton. Let. to M. Velserus, (1612.)

Alguazeir, a sharking panderly constable.
Beaum. & Fletch. Love's Cure, Dram. Pers.

Edmund Gayton, Bach. of Phys. actually created, by virtue of a dispensation from the delegates 1647, turn'd out of his beadleship in the year following by the parliamentarian visitors, lived afterward in London in a sharking condition, and wrote trite things merely to get bread to sustain him and his wife.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. ii.

While we lay in the calms we caught several great sharks, sometimes 2 or 3 in a day, and eat them all, boyling and squeezing them dry, and then stewing them with vinegar, pepper, &c. for we had but little flesh aboard.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1683.

Wretches who live upon the shark, and other men's sins, the common poysoners of youth, equally desperate in their fortunes, and their manners, and getting their very bread by the damnation of souls.—South, vol. ii. Ser. 6.

And thus David's messengers are sent back to him, like so many sharks and runnagates; only for endeavouring to complement an ill nature out of itself; and seeking that by petition, which they might have commanded by their sword.
Id. vol. ii. Ser. 10.

SHARP, adj. } Dut. Scherp, schaerp, scherp-
SHARP, n. } en; Ger. Scharf, scharfen;
SHARP, v. } Sw. Skarpa; A. S. Scearp-an,
SHA'RPEN, v. } scyrpan, scindere, secare, SHA'RPER. } acuere, acuminare; to cut, to SHA'RPLY. } bring to an edge or point that SHA'RPNESS. } will cut or pierce, (sc.) quickly, easily, keenly. Skinner refers to the A. S. Scyr- an, to sheer or share. Sharp, the adj.—

Cutting or piercing, (sc.) quickly, easily;
having an edge or point, that will cut or pierce, quickly, easily. Met.

Acute, quick—of apprehension or invention;
piercing, penetrating, keen, eager; pungent or poignant, painful; causing or afflicting pain:
biting, bitter, acrid: also, biting, sour, acid, tart.

SHA

A sharper, (met.)—one who practises sharpness, (sc.) in cheating, defrauding, gaining any advantages.

Whan the kyng herd say, that David werred on him,
To Wales he went his way fulle sharply & fulle brim.
R. Brunne, p. 244.

And thei dredden lest we schulden have fallun in to scharpe places.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 27.

And thei schulen falle by the scharpnesse of swerd.
Id. Luk, c. 21.

Wo was his coke, but if his sauce were Poinant and sharpe, and ready all his gere.
Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 353.

And after that, with sharpe speres strong
Thei foineden eche at other wonder long.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1656.

He tooke an arrow full sharply whet,
And in his bowe when it was set,
He streight up to his eare drough
The strong bowe, that was so tough.—Id. Rom. of the R.

For their passing study han fresshed our wittes, and oure vnderstandynge han excited in consideracion of trouth by sharpnes of their reasons.—Id. Testament of Loue, b. i.

Fro wordes vnto strokes thus Thei felle, and so Telegonus
Was sore hurte, and well nigh dede
But with his sharpe speares hede;
He maketh defence.
Gower. Con. A. b. vi.

But whan the sharpnes of the spore
The hors side smiteth to sore
It greueth ofte.
Id. Ib. Prol.

But wherein he sharpened his wits to the piercingest point, was touching his men.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

But whether it were right or wrong, it was with so cruel and mortal war revenged, the countries round about joining their help and power to the puissance and malice of both parties, that most flourishing and wealthy people, being some of them shrewdly shaken and some of them sharply beaten, the mischiefs were not finished or ended, until the Alaopolitans at the last were yielded up as bondmen into the jurisdiction of the Nephelogeates.
More. Utopia, b. ii. c. 10.

And were the riche wanteth, what can the pore finde, who in a common scarsitie, lyueth most scarsely, and feeleth quickliest the sharpnesse of staruing, when eurye man for lack is hungerbitten.

Sir John Cheeke. The Hurt of Sedition.

O lord, said Musidorus, how sharp-witted you are to hurt your self; No, answered he, (Pyrocles) but it is the hurt you speak of, which makes me so sharp-witted.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

Not that great champion of the antique world,
Whom famous poets verse so much doth vaunt,
And hath for twelve huge labours high extold,
So many furies and sharpe fits did haunt,
When him the poisoned garment did enchaunt,
With Centaures blood and bloody verses charmd.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

Much more me needs (to draw the semblant trew
Of beauties queene, the worlds sole wonderment)
To sharpe my sence with sundry beauties vew,
And steale from each some part of ornament.
Id. To the Ladies of the Court.

Jul. It is, it is, hie hence be gone away:
It is the larke that sings so out of tune
Straining harsh discords, and vnpleasing sharpes.
Shakespeare. Romeo & Juliet, Act iii. sc. 5.

Which they dig out fro' the dells
For their bairns' bread, wives and sells;
Whom the whetstone sharps to eat,
And cry milstones are good meat.
B. Jonson. Love's Welcome.

The sling, the stiff bow, and the sharpen'd lance,
Floating confus'dly on the waters rude,
They which these weapons lately did advanc'd,
Perish in sight of them they had pursu'd.
Drayton. Moses, b. iii.

The rugged forehead, that with grave foresight
Welds kingdoms causes and affaires of state,
My looser rimes, I wote, doth sharply wite
For praysing love as I have done of late.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. Introd.

And yet (for nerves) there will be found, a strength of poure in mine,
To drive a lance home at thy life; my lance as well as thine
Hath point and sharpnesse.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xx.

On t'other side there stood Destruction bare,
Unpunished Rapine, and a waste of war.
Contest, with sharpen'd knives, in cloisters drawn,
And all with blood bespread the holy lawn.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. ii.

Spare then the person, and expose the vice.
P. How, sir! not damn the sharper, but the dice!
Pope. Ep. to Satires, Dial. 2.

SHA

To this the Panther sharply had reply'd;
But, having gain'd a verdict on her side,
She wisely gave the loser leave to chide.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

The sharp-set squire resolves at last,
Whate'er befel him not to fast.
Somerville. The Officious Messenger.

We had but little wind during the night, some showers of snow, and a very sharp frost.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 1.

Perhaps yo'll think I act the same,
As a sly sharper plays his game.—Cotton. Life, Vision 8.

The sharpness of the air, and gloominess of the weather, for two or three days past, seemed to indicate some sudden change.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 9.

SHA'TTER, v. } i. e. to scatter, (qv.) to SHA'TTER. } divide, or cause to divide or SHA'TTERY. } separate.
To separate, to disperse, to dissipate; to sever
(by breaking) into parts or pieces.
Shatter-brained,—one whose brains, or thoughts are dispersed, not collected.

Windows are shiver'd to forgotten dust,
The slates fall shatter'd from the roof above.
Drayton. Moses his Birth and Miracles, b. ii.

Of Bodies some are fragile; and some are tough, and not fragile; and in the breaking, some fragile bodies break but where the force is; some shatter and flie in many pieces.
Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 841.

— The winds
Blow moist and keen, shattering the graceful locks
Of these fair spreading trees.—Milton. Par. Lost, b. x.

The weary Trojans ply their shatter'd oars
To nearest land, and make the Libyan shores.
Dryden. Virgil. Aeneis, b. i.

Meantime his busy mariners he hastes,
His shatter'd sails with rigging to restore;
And willing pines ascend his broken masts,
Whose lofty heads rise higher than before.
Id. Annus Mirabilis, p. 510.

You may likewise stick the candle so loose, that it will fall upon the glass of the sconce, and break it into shatters.
Swift. Directions to the Butler.

— Rout and carnage sweep
That shatter'd wing before th' Oilean swords.
Glover. The Athenaid, b. xviii.

The quarries are of a course grit stone, often filled with shells, but of too shattery a nature to be used, except in ordinary buildings.—Pennant. Journey from Chester, p. 272.

SHAVE, v. } Dut. Shave, shauen; Ger.
SHA'VELING. } Schaben; Sw. Shaf-wa; A. S.
SHA'VE. } Scaf-an, scæf-an, tondere, ra- SHA'VING, n. } dere, polire: to shave, to polish, to make smooth or fine, (Somner.)

To cut, (sc.) from the surface, superficially, in thin portions; to cut closely, smoothly; to plain, to move or keep in motion, close to the surface.

Shaveling,—a shaven priest or other person.

No berd hadde he, ne never non shuld have,
As smothe it was as it were newe shave.
Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 623.

The clergy wyth their false and subtil wyles had beguiled and mocked the people, & brought them into the ignorance of the word, making the vnderstand by this worde church, nothing but the shauen flocke, of them that shore the whole worlde.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 250.

*Shavelynge*s of prodigious beastlinesse.—Bale. Image, pt. ii.

— Som times
He scours the right hand coast, som times the left,
Now shaves with level wings the deep, then soars
Up to the fiery concave touring high.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

We call the shavings of fish (which are little worth) gubbings; and sure it is they are sensible that the word importeth shame and disgrace.—Fuller. Worthies. Devonshire.

I am a barber, and I'd have you know
A shaver too sometimes, no mad one tho'.
Suckling. A Barber.

Nor by electric bodies do I conceive such onely as take up shavings, straws, and light bodies, in which number the ancients onely placed jet and amber; but such as conveniently placed unto their objects attract all bodies palpable whatsoever.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. ii. c. 4.

And all the stock of learning, they pretend to, is a few shavings of wit, gathered out of plays and romances, and these they pin upon religion, as you have seen unhappy boys do rags at mens backs, to expose it to scorn and derision.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 3.

The Egyptians from a very early age shave their heads, which being constantly exposed to the action of the sun, become firm and hard.—Beloe. Herodotus, b. iii. c. 1.

SHE

The juice, thus diluted, is strained through some fibrous stuff like fine shavings; after which it is fit for drinking.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 14.

SHAW. A. S. Scua, a shadow; Dut. Schawe.
A shade, a shady place,—natural or artificial.

Welcome, quod he, and every good felaw;
Whider ridest thou under this grene shaw?
Chaucer. The Freres Tale.

For love of him thou lovedst in the shawe
I mean Adon, that with the bore was slawe.
Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

— And saide here
I woll abide vnder the shawe
And bad hir women to withdrawe.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

I rede that ye drawe
Into the wode schawe,
Your heddes for to hyde.
Ritson. vol. ii. Lybæus Disconus.

Tymely as the day can dawne,
He led her thorow a feyre schawe
In wodes waste and wyld.
Id. Ib. Le tone Florence of Rome.

SHE. Dut. Su; Ger. Sie; A. S. Sheo, heo; Goth. Si, illa, ipsa. Verstegan, (c. 7.) says, “Heo, shee;—in some places of England, they yet say, heo or hoo, instead of she.” See HE, and IT.
Heo, in R. Gloucester, is Cordelia.

“Sire,” quod heo, “bi hye Godes, Lordes of alle thyng, “Y loue more thi leue lyf than al that in the world ys.”
R. Gloucester, p. 30.

Scho purueid that poyson thorgh hatered of old.
R. Brunne, p. 11.

A voice was herd, an high weepyng, & myche weyllynge, Rachel by weepyng her sonnes and sche wolde not be com-fortid for thei ben not.—Wiclif. Matt. c. 2.

She gathereth floures, partie white and red
To make a sotel gerlond for hire hed
And as an angel hevenliche she song.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1054.

But she, whiche kepeth the blynd whele,
Venus, when thei be moste aboue
In all the hottest of her loue,
Hir whele she torneth, and thei fell
In the maner as I shall tell.
Gower. Con. A. b. i.

For contemplation he and valour form'd,
For softness she and sweet attractive grace:
He for God only, she for God in him.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

SHEAF. } Dut. Schoof, schoove; A. S.
SHE'AFY. } Sceaf, the past part., sceaf, or SHE'AVED. } sceaf-od, from the verb scuf-ian, to shove; that which is shov'd together.

Any number or quantity shov'd together, pushed,
put together: applied to stalks of corn, reeds,
arrows—put together, collected.

— Half a shef of arwes.—Piers Plouhman, p. 62.

The which child of her nativite,
To all good thewes borne was she,
As liked to the goddes or she was borne,
That of the shefe she should be the corne.
Chaucer. The Legende of Hypermetre.

Certaine I am full like indeed
To him that cast in earth his seed,
And hath joy of the new springing,
Whan it greeneth in the ginning,
And is also faire and fresh of flour,
Lustie to seene, swote of odour,
But ere he it in his sheues shere,
May fall a weather that shall it dere,
And make it to fade and fall,
The stalke, the grane, and floures all.—Id. Rom. of the R.

I woulde wyshe that the heade makers of Englande should make theyr sheafe arrow heades more harder pointed than they be.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. ii.

As for our steele, it is not so good for edge-tooles as that of Colaine, and yet the one is often sold for the other, and like tale vsed in both, that is to saie, thirtie gads to the sheffe, and twelue sheffes to the burden.
Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 11.

They that reap must sheafe and binde.
Shakespeare. As You Like It, Act iii. sc. 2.

Her hair, not loose, nor ty'd in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride;
For some, untuck'd descended her sheav'd hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside.
Id. A Lover's Complaint.

They will looke at his verie bow, and sheive of arrows, as at straunge and wonderous things.
Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 32.

In some places the fashion is to cut with a hooke or syccle
the straw in the midst: and betweene every two sheaves
they sit downe, and then crop off the eares just at the straw.
Id. Ib. b. xviii. c. 30.

The bow-man (which no country hath the like)
With his sheaf-arrow proveth by his might,
How many score off he his foe can strike,
Yet not to draw above his bosom's height.
Drayton. The Battle of Agincourt.

Be not too narrow, husbandmen; but fling
From the full sheaf, with charitable stealth,
The liberal handful.
Thomson. Autumn.

Ceres, kind mother of the bounteous year,
Whose golden locks a sheafy garland bear.
Gay. Ovid. Metam. b. vi.

How strongly also did the sheaf of the first-fruits, consecrated, and lifted up to God, represent Christ the first-fruits, raised from the dead!—Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 14.

SHEAR, or } See SHARE and SHARD. Dut.
SHEER, v. } Scheeren; Ger. Scharen, sche-SHEAR, adj. } ren; A. S. Sear-an, scir-an, to SHEAR, n. } cut.
SHEA'RER. } To cut, to divide, to separate SHEA'RING, n. } or sever.
SHEA'RLY. } Shear, sheer, or (as Beaum.
SHEARD, or } & Fletch. write it) shaer,
SHERD. } means—separated or severed.

"Sheer ignorance,—ignorance separated from any the smallest mixture of information.

"Shot sheer away,—so separated as to leave not the smallest particle behind," (Tooke.)

Fountain she, (in Spenser), separate from all intermixture or pollution; unmingled, and, consequently,—pure.

To shear off,—part or separate from; move off or away.

Sheath, n. in the singular, is not now usual.

His berd he lette schere first, and a brod crowne al so.
R. Gloucester, p. 150.

Lyke a shappesters sheres.—Piers Plouhman, p. 91.

As a sheep he was led to sleyn, and as a lombe before a man that scherith him is doumbe withoute voice, so he openyde not his mouth.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 8.

He was ledde as a shepe to be slayne; and like a lambe domme before his sherer, so opened he not his mouthe.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

How high that euer his head he shere,
With rasour whetted neuer so kene.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

— The wheele of kind cometh about,
And naturally hath his cours ironne,
By circuite as doeth the shere sonne.
Lidgate. The Story of Thebes, pt. 1.

God yeve me sorwe, but, and I were pope,
Not only thou but every mighty man,
Though he were shore ful high upon his pan,
Shuld have a wif.
Chaucer. The Monkes Prologue, v. 13,935.

My berd, my here that hangeth long adoun,
That never yet felt non offensoun
Of rasour ne of shere, I wol thee yeve,
And ben thy trewe servant while I live.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2417.

But with no craft of combes brode,
Thei might hir hore lockes shode,
And she ne wolde not be shore.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

This abhorring of coueteousnes is signified as I suppose by shauyng and sheryng of the heare, that the haue no superfluitie.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 135.

Whiche feaste beganne in the euenyng before, that is to wytte on sherethursday whan the eatyng of the paschall lambe was.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1308.

He annointeth them after the maner of ye Jewes, and shaueth them and shoreth them after the maner of the heathen priestes, whiche serue the idoles.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 134.

Her teme at her commandement quiet stands,
Whiles they the corse into her wagon reare,
And strowe with floures the lamentable beare:
Then all the rest into their coches clim,
And through the brackish waves their passage sheare.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 4.

But there no substance was so firme and hard,
But it would pierce or cleave wherso it came;
Ne any armour could his dint out-ward;
But wheresoeuer it did light, it throughly sheard.
Id. Ib. b. v. c. 1.

Thou saw'st great burden'd ships through these thy vallies pass,
Where now the sharp-edg'd scythe shears up the spiring grass.—Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 16.

When sheering time is come I to the river drive
My goodly well fleec'd flocks, (by pleasure thus I thrive)
Which being wash'd at will, upon the sheering day,
My wool I forth in locks, fit for the winter lay.
Id. The Muses' Elysium, Nymphal 6.

Yet goldsmithes cunning could not understand
To frame such subtle wire, so shinie cleare;
For it did glister like the golden sand,
The which Pactolus with his waters shere
Throws forth upon the rivage round about him nere.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 6.

I, fonder then Cephissus foolish chyld,
Who, having vewed in a fountaine shere
His face, was with the love thereof beguyl'd;
I, fonder, love a shade, the body far exyld'd.
Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 2.

And ye breaking thereof is like the breaking of a potters pot, which is broken without pitie, and in the breaking thereof is not found a shearde to take fire out of the hearth, or to take water out of the pit.—Bible, 1583. Isaiah, xxx. 14.

Cit. Let him look narrowly to his service, I shall take him else; I was there my self a pike-man once, in the hottest of the day, wench, had my feather shot shaer away, the fringe of my pike burnt off with powder, my pate broken with a scouring-stick, and yet I thank God I am here.
Beaum. & Fletch. Knight of the Burning Pestle, Act v. sc. 1.

— It met
The sword of Satan with steep force to smite Descending, and in half cut sheere nor staid,
But with swift wheele reverse, deep entering shar'd
All his right side.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vi.

Of other care thy little reckoning make,
Than how to scramble at the shearers feast,
And shove away the worthy bidden guest.—Id. Lycidas.

Turn all the stories over in the world yet,
And search through all the memories of mankind,
And find me such a friend; h'as out-done all,
Outstrip't em sheerly, all, all, thou hast Polydor,
To die for me.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Mad Lover, Act v. sc. 1.

The swain, whom acts of piety delight,
Observant of the gods, begins the rite;
First shears the forehead of the bristly boar,
And suppliant stands, invoking every power
To speed Ulysses to his native shore.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xiv.

When their defenceless limbs, the brambles tear;
Short of the wool, and naked from the sheer.
Dryden. Virgil, Georg. 3.

The sister-lock now sits uncouth, alone,
And in its fellow's fate foresees its own;
Uncurl'd it hangs, the fatal sheers demands,
And tempts, once more, thy sacrilegious hands.
Pope. The Rape of the Lock, c. 4.

That silly thing men call sheer-wit avoid,
With which our age so nauseously is cloy'd!
Humour is all; wit should be only brought
To turn agreeably some proper thought.
Buckinghamshire. Essay on Poetry.

At a sheep-shearing, a countryman standing by, the sheep kicked the shears out of the shearer's hand, and it struck the inside of his leg, and cut the great artery in his leg.—Boyle. Works, vol. vi. p. 473.

Could I recall those notes, which once the muse
Heard at a shearing, near the woody sides
Of blue topp'd Wreakin!—Dyer. The Fleece, b. i.

At shearing-time, along the lively vales,
Rural festivities are often heard.
Beneath each blooming arbour all his joy
And lusty merriment.—Id. Ib.

SHEATH, v. } Dut. Scheyde, scheede;
SHEATH, n. } Ger. Scheide; A. S. Scathe, SHEA'THING, n. } sceathe; from Dut. Scheyd- SHEA'THY. } en; Ger. Scheiden; A. S.
SHEA'THLESS. } Scead-ian; to separate,—non quia a gladio facile separatur, sed quia gladium condit et separem facit, (Wachter.) And Tooke pronounces Sheathe to be the third person of Scead-an, to separate, to seclude.

Sheath,—that which shades, secludes; and, consequently, covers, protects, incloses.

To sheath,—to inclose, to incase, to cover, to protect.

That ich in ys inneward my swerd ne make a schethe.
R. Gloucester, p. 135.

Therefore Jesus seide to Petir, putte thou thi swerd into thy schethe.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 18.

Then sayde Jesus vnto Peter: put vp thy swerde into the sheath.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

It would have done a man good at his heart, to have seen how proudly they displayed their peacock feathers, how much they made of their painted sheaths, and how loftily they set forth and advanced themselves.
More. Utopia, b. ii. c. 6.

Within his side he sheath'd his weapon keene,
Downe fell the Worthie on the dustie plaine.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. iii. s. 45.

There has the purple vengeance a proud seat,
Whose ever-brandisht sword is sheath'd in blood.
Crashaw. Steps to the Temple.

It is generally conceived, an earwig hath no wings, and is reckoned amongst impennous insects by many; but he that shall narrowly observe them, or shall with a needle put aside the short and sheathie cases on their back, may extend and draw forth two wings of a proportionable length for flight, and larger then in many flies.
Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 27.

Some insects fly with four wings, as all vaginipennous, or sheathwinged insects, as beetles and dorrs.—Id. Ib.

He who hath drawn his sword against his prince, ought to throw away the scabbard, never to think of sheathing it again.—Clarendon. Civil Wars, vol. iii. p. 110.

After this, Captain Swan bought timber-trees of the general, and set some of our men to saw them into planks, to sheath the ship's bottom.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1686.

But when his foe lies prostrate on the plain,
He sheaths his paws, uncurls his angry mane,
And, pleas'd with bloodless honours of the day,
Walks over and disdains th' inglorious prey.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

Your shining swords within the sheath restrain,
And pitch your lances in the yielding plain.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. iii.

The next day, (having by this time compleated the new sheathing of the first course,) they righted her again, to set up anew the careening gear, which had stretched much.
Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 8.

The fatal cause was now at last explor'd,
Her veil she knew, and saw his sheathless sword.
Eusden. Ovid. Metam. b. v.

The sword was not likely to be sheathed, till tyranny on the one hand, or anarchy on the other, had introduced a new species of slaughter in the place of the old; and judicial murders had succeeded to the military.
Warburton, vol. x. Ser. 19.

And to complete the scene of distress, we saw by the light of the moon the sheathing boards from the bottom of the vessel floating away all round her.
Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 3.

They found the sheathing gone about the floor heads abreast of the main-mast, and part of a plank a little damaged.—Id. Ib. c. 4.

SHED, v. } A. S. Sced-an, scead-an,— SHED, n. } to separate or sever; to dis-SHE'DDER. } perse, to dissipate. See To SHE'DDING, n. } SCATTER, and SHADE.
To disperse, to throw; to cast dispersedly;
generally,—to spill, to drop.

A shed,—a place for seclusion, retirement, retreat.

"No shed,—no difference between things; to shed, (Lancashire,)—to distinguish, from A. S. Scead-an, to distinguish, disjoin, divide or sever," (Ray.)

"Fro the maistry nys not a kynge's, ne be he neuer so god,
"Ac knyghtes, that vnder hym fygteth, & schedeth here blod."
R. Gloucester, p. 57.

Hys brother gadered hys poer, & azen hym vaste stode,
So that the worre was strong, & gret ssedyng of blood.
Id. p. 388.

"Thoru ssedyng of thy brother blod, that thus ys brogt of dawe."
Id. p. 291.

"He salle sched vs o sonder, fro Acres salle we go."
R. Brunne, p. 174.

That somme sewe the sak. for shedyng of the wete.
Piers Plouhman, p. 128.

He took also the cuppe after that he hadde soupid and seide, this cuppe is the new Testament in my blood that schal be sched for you.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 22.

He toke the cup sayinge; This cup is the new testament in my bloude, whiche shall for you be shedde.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

Sheding of blood, ne manfull hardinesse,
Ne oft wounding at sautes by distresse,
Nor in parting of life nor death also,
All is for nought, Loue taketh no heed thereto.
Chaucer. The Complaint of the Black Knight.

But swiche a rain down from the welken shadde
That slowe the fire, and made to him escape.
Id. The Monkes Tale, v. 14,649.

For thei [Contecke and Homicide] accompten their wrath nought,
But if there be shedyng of blood.—Gower. Con. A. b. iii.

My bloud of this new Testamēt, that is to say my bloud for whose shedding sake this new Testament and couenaunt is made to you, for the forgeuenes of sinne.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 443.

But all the grownd with sculs was scattered
And dead men's bones, which round about were flong;
Whose lives, it seemed, whilome there were shed,
And their vile carcasses now left unburied.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

Ed. I have such means t'employ it as your wish
Can think no better, easier, or securer;
And such as but th' honours I intend
To your partakings, I alone could end:
But your parts in all dues to crying blood
For vengeance in the shedder, are much greater.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Bloody Brother, Act iv. sc. 3.

Entering his den; each thing beheld, did yield
Our admiration; shewes with cheeses heapt;
Sheds stuff with lambs and goates, distinctly kept.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. ix.

As vapours blown by Auster's sultry breath,
Pregnant with plagues, and shedding seeds of death,
Beneath the rage of burning Sirius rise,
Choke the parch'd earth, and blacken all the skies.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. v.

The shedding trees began the ground to strow
With yellow leaves, and bitter blasts to blow.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

About 20 yards from the tower, are little sheds, built with stalls, to lay the provisions on, both of meat and fruits of all sorts, and that in great plenty.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

They met with many houses in the vallies that seemed to be wholly deserted, the people living on the ridges of the hills in a kind of sheds very slightly built.
Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 2.

SHEEN, adj. } A. S. Scen, scene, clarus, ful-
SHEEN, n. } gibus, lucidus.
SHEE'NY. } Clear, bright, brilliant, splendid. See SHINE.

After sharpest shoures quath Pees. most sheene is the
sonne.
Piers Plouhman, p. 364.

Your blisful suster, Lucina the shene,
That of the see is chief goddess and quene,
Though Neptunus have deitree in the see,
Yet emperice aboven him is she.
Chaucer. The Frankeleines Tale, v. 11,357.

Her garment was so bright and wondrous sheene,
That my fraile wit cannot devize to what
It to compare, nor finde like stuffe to that.
Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 7.

Then when he was all dight he tooke his way
Into the forest, that he might be scene
Of the wilde beasts, in his new glory sheene.
Id. Mother Hubbard's Tale.

Yet he her followed still with corage keene
So long, that now the golden Hesperus
Was mounted high in top of heaven sheene.
Id. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 4.

And now they neuer meete in groue, or greene,
By fountaine cleere, or spangled star-light sheene,
But they do square, that all their elues for feare
Creepe into acorne-cups and hide them there.
Shakespeare. Midsummer Night's Dream, Act ii. sc. 1.

But far above in spangled sheen
Celestial Cupid her fam'd son advanc'd,
Holds his dear Psyche sweet intranc'd,
After her wand'ring labours long.—Milton. Comus.

Or did of late earth's sons besiege the wall
Of sheeny Heav'n, and thou some goddess fled Amongst us here below to hide thy nectar'd head?
Id. Ode 7.

Meantime unnumber'd glittering streamlets play'd,
And hurled every where their waters sheen.
Thomson. Castle of Indolence, c. 1.

—— To her succeeds
The sheeny form of Epicaste.
Fenton. Homer Imitated, p. 404.

SHEEP. } A. S. Sceap, sceop; Dut.
SHEE'PISH. } Schaep; Ger. Schaff. The SHEE'PISHLY. } etymologists resort to the SHEE'PISHNESS. } Gr. Σκην-ειν, tegere, because SHEE'PBITE. } it is itself covered with much SHEE'PBITER. } wool, and also covers us with SHE'PHERD. } its wool; but the Greek has SHE'PHERDESS. } no name for this animal from SHE'PHERDISH. } this verb; and if our northern SHE'PHERDLING. } ancestors wished to call it from the qualities above ascribed, they had words of their own for the purpose. The Gr. προβατον, pecus, is said to be so called, παρα το προβαιν-ειν τη βοσκη, because driven or forced to go before by the shepherd. The Eng. Sheep, Ger. Schaff, may have a similar origin. The Ger. Schaff-en, also written shieben, is—agere, pellere, (A. S. Sceof- an, scof-an, to shove.) to drive. Schaff, sceap, or sceop, sheep, may have been merely a drove, as sheep driven on the way (sc. to market) are still called: they were the earliest objects of care to mankind, and for pasture were driven from place to place in numbers, by their owners; and from this circumstance, perhaps, their names.

Sheepish, (met.) from the timid, simple disposition of the animal, is—timid to excess, excessively, needlessly, timorous or bashful; simple, silly, innocent.

At Herford schep & orf, & fruyt at Wircestre.
Sope a boutte Couyntre, yrn at Gloucestre.
R. Gloucester, p. 6.

The ssepurdes and the ssep al so ssulle to pyne of helle.
Id. p. 351.

Dede and fire salle fede the schepurdes & thare schepe.
R. Brunne, p. 66.

I am a good scheparde, and I know my scheep, and my scheep knowen me.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 10.

I am that good shepherd, and know myne, and am known of myne.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

The shepen brenning with the blake smoke.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 2002.

Square was the wall, and high somdele
Enclosed, and ibarred wele,
In stead of hedge, was that gardin,
Come neuer shepherd therein.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

For if the wolfe come in the waie
Their gostly staffe is then awaie,
Wherof thei shuld their flocke defende.
But if the poure shepe offende
In any thyng, though it be lite,
Thei ben all ready for to smite.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

The hare in peace stode with the hounde
And euery man vpon this grounde
Whiche Arion that time herde
As well the lorde as the shepherd
He brought them all in goode accorde.
Id. Ib.

Ye thought she were a sheperdesse,
Yet woll the lorde of wantonnesse
Assaie, all though she be vnmete.
For other mens good is swete.
Id. Ib. b. v.

But while he sought for his knife, which under his armour
he could not well find out, and that Clinias lay with so sheepish a quietness, as if he would have been glad to have his throat cut for fear of more pain.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

When the rest, who as sheep had but followed their fellows, so sheepishly had submitted themselves, these only admitted their safety to the thickest part of those desert woods.—Id. Ib. b. iv.

He would also have drawn her eldest sister, esteemed her match for beauty, in her shepherdish attire, but that rude clown her guardian would not suffer it.—Id. Ib. b. i.

The court could not be visited, prohibited to all men, but to certain shepherdish people.—Id. Ib.

For with such puissance and impetuous maine
Those champions broke on them, that forst them fly,
Like scattered sheepe, whenas the shepherd swaine
A lion and a tigre doth espye
With greedy pace forth rusing from the forest nye.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

Show your sheepe-biting face, and be hang'd an houre.
Shakespeare. Measure for Measure, Act v. sc. 1.

To. Wouldst thou not be glad to haue the niggardly rascally sheepe-biter, come by some notable shame?
Id. Twelfth Night, Act ii. sc. 5.

That sheepcot, which in yonder vale you see, (Beset with groves, and those sweet springs hard by)
I rather would my palace wish to be,
Than any roof of proudest majesty.
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. viii.

But in the entry, on an oxes hide,
Neuer at tanners; his old limbes implide
In warme sheep-fels; yet ouer all, we cast
A mantle, fitting, for a man more grac't.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xx.

When I frown, they hang their most dejected heads,
Like fearful sheepounds; shew 'em a crust of bread
They'll saint me presently, and skip like apes
For a sup of wine.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Sea-Voyage, Act iv. sc. 1.

—— Or where can there be found
So fair and fertile fields, or sheep-walks near so sound?
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 25.

Thou sheepeheard, thou heardman whatsoever, when thou perceivest in summer time by thy shaddow growing short, that noonestead is at hand, drive thy sheepe and cattaille out of the sunne, into some warme-stall and place of shade.
Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 33.

—— Let each young shepherdling
Walke by, or stop his eare, the whilst I sing.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. i. s. 2.

Who, me recomforting all that he might,
Told me that that same was the regiment
Of a great shepherdess, that Cynthia hight,
His liege, his ladie, and his lifes regent.
Spenser. Colin Clouts come home againe.

First, with assiduous care, from winter keep Well-fodder'd in the stalls, thy tender sheep;
Then spread with straw, the bedding of thy fold;
With fern beneath, to fend the bitter cold.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iii.

But when my point was gain'd, then thus I spoke;
"Billy, my dear, how sheepishly you look!
Approach, my spouse, and let me kiss thy cheek;
Thou shouldst be always thus, resign'd and meek!"
Pope. The Wife of Bath.

Sheepishness and ignorance of the world, the faults imputed to a private education, are neither the necessary consequences of being bred at home, nor if they were, are they incurable evils.—Locke. On Education, § 69.

For during his exile and flight before Saul, in which he was frequently put to all the hardships which usually befall the weak, flying before the strong, there happening a great, and solemn festivity, such as the sheep-shearings used to be in those eastern countries, he condescends, by an honourable and kind message, to beg of a rich and great man, some small repast and supply for himself and his poor harassed companions, at that notable time of joy and feasting.
South, vol. ii. Ser. 10.

The number of sheep allowed to be kept in one flock was restrained to two thousand. Sometimes, says the statute, one proprietor, or farmer, would keep a flock of twenty-four thousand.—Hume. History of England. Hen. VIII. c. 33.

Sheep do not show the shepherd how much they have eaten, by producing the grass itself; but after they have inwardly digested the pasture, they produce outwardly wool and milk.—Knox. Liberal Education, s. 10.

Whether to flowery pastures ye repair,
And the lov'd name of shepherdesses bear.
Fawkes. Apoll. Rhodius. Argonautics, b. iv.

SHEET, n. } See SHOOT, which was an-
SHEET, v. } ciently also written Schete.
SHEE'TING, n. } A. S. Sceate, scete; which Tooke SHEE'TY. } considers to be the past part.
of the verb Scyt-an, scit-an, projicere, dijjicere, to throw, to cast forth, to throw out.

The sheet of a bed,—linen or other substance thrown over a bed; a sheet of paper,—as much as is thrown off at once; sheet of lightning,—lightning thrown out, spread out; sheet of water,—an expanse of water.

Sheet or shote-anchor,—the anchor thrown out,
(sc.) for security or preservation, &c.

And he sigh the scheetis leid, and the sudarie that was on his heed not leid with the scheetis but bi it silf wlapid into a place.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 20.

And he sigh heuene opened and a vessel comynge down as a greet schete with foure corneris to be lete down fro heuene into erthe.—Id. Dedis, c. 10.

But whyle they made redy, he fel into a traunce, and sawe heauē opened, and a certayne vessel come doune vnto him, as it had bene a great schete, knit at the foure corners, and was let doune to the earth.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And in his owen chambre hem mad a bedde,
With shetes and with chalons faire yspredde.
Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 4138.

—— Thy pallat the did daine
The roughest berry, on the rudest hedge,
Yea, like the stagge, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou brows'd.
Shakespeare. Antony & Cleopatra, Act i. sc. 4.

In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets.
Id. Hamlet, Act i. sc. 1.

Ah, but in vain, their want we do deplore,
Long time since swaddled in their winding sheet:
And she, I think, is buried at their feet.
Drayton. Pastoral, Ecl. 8.

Hig. I pour on thy pate a pot of good ale,
And by the rogues o' th' a rogue thee instal:
To beg on the way, to rob all thou meets;
To steal from the hedge, both the shirt and the sheets.
Beaum. & Fletcher. Beggar's Bush, Act iii. sc. 3.

A sheet of blank paper that must have this new imprimatur clapt upon it, before it is qualified to communicate any thing to the publick, will make its way in the world but very heavily.—Spectator, No. 445.

Whether it would not on many accounts be right if we observed the same course with respect to our linen-manufacture; and that diapers were made in one town or district, damasks in another, sheeting in a third, fine wearing linen in a fourth, coarse in a fifth.—Berkeley. The Querist, § 522.

I'll seek some lonely church, or dreary hall,
Where fancy paints the glimm'ring taper blue,
Where damps hang mould'ring on the ivy'd wall,
And sheeted ghosts drink up the midnight dew.
Smollett. Love Elegy.

Were the Niagara thus broken, at least if some considerable parts of it were not left broad and sheety, it might be a grand scene of confusion; but it could not be that vast, that uniform, and simple object, which is the most capable of expressing the idea of greatness.
Gilpin. Tour to the Lakes, vol. i. s. 8.

SHE

SHELF. See SHALLOW, and SHOAL.
SHE'LFY. } In Scotch Schald. Shelves in SHELVE, v. } the quotation from Dryden's SHE'LVING, n. } Virgil is in G. Douglas,— schaldis bankes of sand (brevia et syrtes). The glossarist, after noticing the etymologies of Skinner and Junius, says, perhaps from the Dut.
Schelle, a shell, (qv.)

A shelf in the sea,—a separate or distinct ridge, bank or mass, rising from the main bed near towards the surface.

A shelf, for books, &c.,—a deal, or separated or divided piece of wood.

To shelve,—to furnish with, place upon, shelves;
consequently, to dip down, decline, incline, slope,
as shelves or shallows in the sea.

Ah me! (poor wench) on this unhappy shelf,
I grounded me, and cast away myself.

Daniel. The Complaint of Rosamond.

Entring his den; each thing beheld; did yeeld
Our admiration: shelves with cheeses heapt;
Sheds stuff with lambs and goates distinctly kept.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. ix.

God wisheth none should wreck on a strange shelf:
To him man's dearer, than t'himself,
And howsoever we may think things sweet,
He always gives what he knows meet.

B. Jonson. The Forest. To Sir Robert Wroth.

Here he glanceth wittily at the delicacy of this scholar;
from whence he descendeth to the too accurate disposing or shelving of his books.—Comment. on Chaucer, (1665.)

I had been drown'd, but that the shore was sheluy and shallow: a death that I abhorre: for the water swelles a man.—Shakes. The Merry Wives of Windsor, Act iii. sc. 5.

His grave-stone was turned of one side, shelving, and there were several holes in the earth, about the bigness of mouse-holes, that went down to his very coffin.

More. Antidote against Atheism, pt. i. b. iii. c. 9.

Three ships were hurry'd by the southern blast,
And on the secret shelves with fury cast!

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. i.

For elemental war, and wintry Jove,
From Malea's gusty cape his navy drove
To bright Lucina's fane; the shelvy coast,
Where loud Amnisus in the deep is lost.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xix.

Methought I sat upon a shelvy steep,
And watch'd the fish that gambold in the deep.

Fawkes. Theocritus, Idyll. 22.

He spoke, and speaking at his stern he saw
The bold Cloanthus near the shelvings draw.

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. v.

For Locke or Milton, 'tis in vain to look,
These shelves admit not any modern book.

Pope. Moral Essays, Ep. 4.

I shall only add, that the anchoring bank is very shelving, and stretches along the S. W. end of the island, and is entirely free from shoals.—Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 2.

In our return to the ship, we put ashore at a place where, in the corner of a house, we saw four wooden images, each two feet long, standing on a shelf, having a piece of cloth round their middle, and a kind of turban on their heads, in which were stuck long feathers of cocks.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. ii. c. 15.

SHELL, n. } Also written Shale, (qv.) See SHELL, v. } also SCALE. Dut. Schale, schelle; SHE'LLY. } Ger. Schale; A. S. Sceala, which
Skinner derives from the A. S. Sceal-ian, asceal-ian,
(or ascilian), to shale or pull off the shales or skales, (Somner;) but this is a particular application.
And shell is the past part. of the A. S. v. Scyllan, to divide, to separate. "To sheal, to separate, most used of milk. So to sheal milk is to curdle it, to separate the parts of it," (Ray.)

Shell,—that which separates, divides, parts, (sc.) from the substance (animal or vegetable) within it; which it contains or covers: the walls of a house, separate from the interior, is called the shell.

Whiche water haboundeth most of reed purpure, that is to saine, of a maner shel-fyshe, with whiche men dyen pur-pure.—Chaucer. Boecius, b. iii.

And therupon he telleth this,
That as the shelle whole and sounde
Encloseth all aboute rounde
What thyng within a neie belongeth:
Right so this Orbis vnderfongeth
These elementes euerichone.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Mum, mum, he that keeps not crust, not crum,
Weary of all, shall want some. That's a sheal'd pescod.
Shakespeare. Lear, Act i. sc. 4.

Or in their pearlie shells at ease, attend
Moist nutriment, or under rocks thir food
In jointed armour watch.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vii.

Now with his hands, instead of broad-palm'd oares,
The swaine attempts to get the shell-streued store.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 1.

These [torches] being laid aside, shells of fishes succeeded, which they sounded in the manner of trumpets, which in those days were not invented.

Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. iii. c. 9.

Whatever gems the swarthy Indians boast,
Their shelly treasures, and their golden coast,
Alone thou merits't!—Grainger. Sulpicia, Poem 1.

We shall find, almost wherever we make our subterra-neous inquiry, an amazing number of shells that once belonged to aquatic animals.

Goldsmith. History of the Earth, vol. i. c. 3.

Before its death, it pressed out a certain membrane round the whole surface of its body. This membrane was entirely of the shelly nature, and was intended, by the animal, as a supply towards a new one.—Id. Ib. vol. iv. c. 5.

SHE/LTER, v. } Skinner knows not whe-
SHE/LTER, n. } ther from Shell. Shelter is SHE/LTERLESS. } probably shielder, from A. S.
Scyl-an, tegere, protegere, to cover, to protect.
See SHIELD.

A cover, a protection, a defence, a security.

— It was a still
And calmy bay, on th' one side sheltered
With the brode shadow of an hoarie hill.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

The ruthlesse breere, regardlesse of his plight,
Laies holde upon the fleece he should acquite,
And takes advantage of the carelesse prey,
That thought she in securer shelter lay.

Bp. Hall. Satires, b. iii. Sat. 3.

There is a small cove or sandy-bay sheltered from the winds, at the west end of the easternmost island, where ships may carreen.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1684.

While, conscious of the deed, he glares around,
And hears the gathering multitude resound,
Timely he flies the yet-untasted food,
And gains the friendly shelter of the wood.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xv.

— Cheerfulness
Danc'd all the day before her; and at night
Soft slumber waited on her downy pillow—
Now sad and shelterless, perhaps, she lies,
Where piercing winds blow sharp, and the chill rain
Drops from some pent-house on her wretched head.

Rowe. Jane Shore, Act v.

By these islands the bay is sheltered from all winds, and it affords good anchorage.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 2.

From one league to four leagues north of Cape Saunders, the shore forms two or three bays, in which there appeared to be good anchorage, and effectual shelter from the S. W. westerly, and N. westerly winds.—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 7.

SHEND, v. } A. S. Scend-an, to marre, to SHE'NDSHIP. } destroy, to undoe, to condemn, SHE'NDNESS. } to rebuke, to blame, to dis-SHE'NDFULLY. } grace, to dishonour, (Somner and Verstegan.)

Twel emperoures of Rome, Dyoclician,
And an other, ys felaw, that het Maximian,
Were bothe at on tyme, the on in the est ende,
And the other in the west, Cristendom to schende.

R. Gloucester, p. 81.

Hyt byleuede amydde hys throte, astrangled he was rygt
there,

And deyde atte borde al styf, wyth ssendnesse inou.

Id. p. 342.

God seide to Samuel, that Saul shoulde deye
And al hus for that synne, and shendfulliche ende.

Piers Ploukman, p. 60.

Blessid be ye whanne men schulen hate you, and departe you away, and put schenschip to you; and caste out youre name as yvel for mannes sone.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 6.

For if a man norissche long heer it is schenscipe to him.
Id. 1 Corynth. c. 11.

Nyle ghe drede the schenschip of men, and drede ghe not the blasfemyes of hem.—Id. Pistle in Advent. Isaiah, c. 51.

Wel can Senek and many a philosopre
Bewailen tyme, more than gold in coffre.

'For losse of catel may recovered be,
But losse of tyme shendeth us,' quod he.

Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Prologue, v. 4442.

God shilde his corps from shonde.

Id. Rime of Sir Topas, v. 13,836.

1719

SHE

SHE

The all this suffred our Lord Jesu Crist that never forfaiet; and thus sayd he: To mochel am I peined, for things that I never deserved; and to moche defouled for shendship that man is worthy to have.

Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

The kinge him hath rebuked eke,
And euery man vpon him cride.
That was he shente on euery side,
Ayene and in to prisone ladde.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

By whose powers and mercy all knyghthod the enemyes of ye lande were shendfully chasyd and vtterly confounded.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 79.

Debatefull strife, and cruell enmity,
The famous name of knyghthod fowly shend.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 6.

Ne wight with him on that adventure went,
But that wyld man; whom though he oft forbad,
Yet for no bidding, nor for being shent,
Would he restrained be from his attendement.

Id. Ib. b. vi. c. 6.

Though bending from the blast of eastern storms,
Though shent their leaves, and shatter'd are their arms;
Yet Heaven their various plants for use designs;
For houses cedars, and for shipping pines.

Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. ii.

SHE/RBERT. From the It. Sorbetto, a word of Arabian origin, (says Skinner,) who seems to suspect it to have some connexion with syrup, (or sirrop), qv.

The fragrant dairy from its cool recess
Its nectar acid or benign will pour
To drown your thirst; or let the mantling bowl
Of keen sherbet the fickle taste relieve.

Armstrong. The Art of Preserving Health, b. i.

SHE/RIFF. } A. S. Scir-geref; reeve of SHRIEVE. } the shire.
SHRIE'VAL. } See the quotations from Sir SHRIE'VALTY. } T. Smith and Blackstone;
SHE/RIFFWICK. } and SHIRE.
SHE/RIFFDOME. }

— Out of the mot halle
A shereyves clerk cryde. Piers Ploukman, p. 72.

A shereve hadde he ben.
Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 361.

The sherife (which is as much to say as the reeve or bailly of the shire) is properlie word for word questor prouinciae, it is he which gathereth vp, and accounteth for the profits of the shire, that come to the exchequer.

Smith. Common-wealth, b. ii. c. 17.

He had ben a pleader in the lawes of this hall certaine yeres, being one of the vnder shriefes of Lodon.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1421.

King Kenneth, some 850 of the incarnation, placed it at the abbey of Scone (in the sheriffdom of Perth) where the coronation of his successors was usual, as of our monarchs now at Westminster.—Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 17. Illust.

Otherwise it [shires] is gouerned by a shiriffe (a word deriued of shire and greue, and pronounced as shire and riue) whose office is to gather vp and bring his accounts into the exchequer, of the profits of his countie receiued.

Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 4.

There may be somewhat of truth in their spiteful observation, who maintain, that the shrevalty in ancient times was honos sine onere, in the middle times honos cum onere, and in our days little better than onus sine honore.

Fuller. Worthies of England.

One Gerard de Camuille had bought of the king the keeping of the castell of Lincolne, vnto whome also the sheriffewike of the shire was committed for a tyme.

Holinshed. Historie of Englande. Rich. I. an. 1191.

But above all the lady fair
Was pink'd, and deck'd beyond compare;
Scarce a shriue's wife at an assize
Was dress'd so fine, so roll'd her eyes.

Somerville. The Yeoman of Kent.

Chaste were his cellars, and his shriueal board
The grossness of a city feast abhorr'd:
His cooks with long disuse their trade forgot;
Cool was his kitchen, though his brains were hot.

Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel.

The word pronounc'd aloud by shriueal voice Laetamur, which in Polish, is rejoice.—Id. The Medal.

Not only writs or orders were sent to the nobility and clergy in the several sheriffwicks and bailiwicks, but to the commons, to assemble and take into consideration how to redress grievances, and support the publick expenses.

Bolingbroke. Dissertation upon Parties.

The sheriff is an officer of very great antiquity in this kingdom, his name being derived from two Saxon words, scire geref, the reeve, bailiff, or officer of the shire.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. i. c. 9.

This [government of the shire] he [the earl] usually exercised by his deputy, still called in Latin vice-comes, and in English, the sheriff, shrieve, or shire-reve, signifying the officer of the shire; upon whom by process of time, the civil administration of it is now totally devolved.

Blackstone. Commentaries, Introd. § 4.

SHERRY. A well known wine (says Skinner) from the city Xeres in Andalusia, whence it is imported into this country.

A good sherries-sack hath a two-fold operation in it: it ascends me into the braine.

Shakespeare. 2 Pt. Hen. IV. Act iv. sc. 3.

The second propertie of your excellent sherries, is, the warming of the blood.—Id. Ib.

SHEW. See SHOW.

SHIBBOLETH. Used (met.) for—a characteristic, a criterion.

— His prowess quell'd their pride
In that sore battel when so many dy'd
Without reprieve adjudg'd to death,
For want of well pronouncing shibboleth.

Millon. Samson Agonistes.

SHIDES. Ger. Scheide, a shade. Segmentum, from sceadian, separare, dividere, (Skinner.) See SHIVE.

And ich wene hit worth of meny. as was in Noes tyme,
Tho that he shop. the shup of shides and of bordes.

Piers Plouhman, p. 196.

And bad shappe hym a shup. of shides and of bordes.

Id. p. 177.

This kynge the wether gan beholde,
And wist well, thei moten holde
Her cours endonge the marche right,
And made vpon the derke night,
Of great shydes and of blockes,
Great fire agein the great rockes,
To shewe vpon the hilles high:
So that the flete of Grece it sigh.—Gower. Con. A. b. 63.

SHIELD, n. } Dut. Schild; Ger. Schild; SHIELD, v. } Sw. Sköld; A. S. Scyld, from A. S. Scyld-an; Ger. Schilden, tegere, protegere; to cover, to protect.

A cover, a protection, a defence; a defensive piece of armour; to guard or ward against offensive weapons.

Hii caste away sseld & suerd, & turnde al to loue.

R. Gloucester, p. 309.

The Brytones tho of this lond, to schilde hem fro schame, Cheson hem anew kyng. Asclepiod was ys name.

Id. p. 80.

Castels & citez that he of Isaac held,
Baronies & feez, he gald him ilk a scheld.

R. Brunne, p. 167.

He had so light answere, that Arthure toke his leue,
God schilde vs fro the werre, that non with other greue.

Id. p. 336.

This sely carpenter hath gret mervaille
Of Nicholas, or what thing might him aile,
And said: "I am adrad by Seint Thomas
It stondeh not aright with Nicholas:
God schilde that he died sodenly."

Chaucer. The Milleres Tale, v. 3354.

Thus taketh the nightingale her leue of me,
I pray to God alway with her be,
And joy of loue he send her euermore,
And schilde us fro the cuckow and his lore,
For there is not so false a bird as he.

Id. The Cuckow and the Nightingale.

Ther seemen who can juste, and who can ride
Ther shiveren shaftes upon sheldes thicke.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2106.

But Jupiter, whiche wolde schilde
The moder, and the sonne also,
Ordeineth for hem both two,
That thei for euer were saue.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

But Perseus, that worthie knight, Whom Pallas, of hir great might Halpe, and toke him a shelde therto.—Id. Ib. b. i.

Ye, madame, sayde the knytes than,
Ye faryth as well as any man,
And ellys god hyt schelde.

Ritson. Met. Rom. Launfal, v. 160.

Thus sayd the aged man; and therewithall
Forcelesse he cast his weake vnweldy dart:
Which repulst from the brasse, where it gaue dint
Without sound, hong vainly in the shields bosse.

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

— And first he forg'd a strong and spaciuous shield
Adorn'd with twenty severall hewes; about whose verge
he beate,

A ring, three-fold and radiant; and on the backe he set
A siluer handle; fivue-fold were the equall lines he drew
About the whole circumference: in which, his hand did shew,

(Directed with a knowing minde) a rare varietie.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xviii.

Gold were the gods, their radiant garments gold,
And gold their armour: these the squadron led,
August, divine, superior by the head!
A place for ambush fit, they found, and stood Cover'd with shields, beside a silver flood.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xviii.

SHIFT, n. } A. S. Scyft-an, dividere, par-
SHIFT, v. } tiri, to divide, to shift; land
SHIFTER. } scyft-an, to divide or shift land, SHIFTING, n. } as amongst coheirs, (Somner;) and Mr. Tyrwhitt so explains
SHIFTLSS. } it, (sc.) to divide.

To divide, to part, to put away or remove, (sc.) part from part; to remove or change place; to change; to change means or measures; to resort or have recourse to other means, methods or expedients; to get out of, evade or escape (dangers, difficulties).

Shifty, is a common word in Nottinghamshire.

A shifty fellow, is—one quick, cunning at evasions, at expedients; at shifting his ground.

Shift,—an article of clothing, often shifted or changed.

Witnesse Tiburces and Ceciles shrift,
To which God of his bountee wolde shift
Corones two, of floures wel smelling,
And made his angel hem the coronas bring.

Chaucer. The Second Nonnes Tale, v. 15,681.

God clepeth folk to him in sondry wise,
And everich hath of God a propre gift,
Som this, som that, as that him liketh shift.

Id. The Wif of Bathes Prol. v. 5687.

Unto this mā hee made his complaint how that hee must needes make shift shortly for a greate somme of money, desyring hym both to helpe hym, and also of his counsell.

Barnes. Workes, p. 329.

Hereby it is cleare, that the godly fathers, and bishoppes in olde times, misliked muche this shiftinge of maters to Rome.—Jewell. Works, p. 166.

And so to beate my simple shiftlesse brayne,
For some deuce, that might redeeme thy state,
Lo here the cause, for why I take this payne.

Gascoigne. Dan Bartholmew of Bathe.

And whilst he this, and that, and each man's blow
Doth eye, defend, and shift, being laid to sore,
Backward he bears for more advantage now,
Thinking the wall would safe-guard him the more.

Daniel. Civil Wars, b. iii.

Which whenas none she fond, with easy shifte,
For fear least her unware she should abrayd,
Th' embroider'd quilt she lightly up did lifte,
And by her side herselfe she softly layd.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 1.

Pip. They have so little
As well may free them from the name of shifters.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Bloody Brother, Act iv. sc. 2.

The ding-thrift heire his shift-got summe mispent,
Comes drooping like a pennylesse penitent.

Bp. Hall, b. iv. Sat. 5.

The mysteries which Christians must believe Disdain such shifting pageants to receive.

Dryden. Art of Poetry.

The truth is, he was a shiftless man as to worldly affairs.

Wood. Fasti Oxon. vol. i.

Again nothing is more open to dangers (when it doth stray) than this shiftless creature, which hath many enemies, and no defence against them.

Comber. Companion to the Temple, pt. i. § 3.

Then came drum, trumpet, hautboy, fiddle, flute,
Next snuffer, sweeper, shifter, soldier, mute.

Churchill. The Rosciad.

Now left by all the world, as I believed,
I wonder'd much that I so little grieved;
Yet was I frighten'd at the painful view
Of shiftless want, and saw not what to do.

Crabbe. Tales of the Hall, b. xi.

SHILL. i. e. Shell, (qv.)

SHILLING. Dut. Schelling; Ger. Schilling;
A. S. Scill, scilling or scylling; from the A. S. Scyl- an, Ger. Schelen, to divide, (pars solidi majoris in plures minores divisi,—Wachter.)

A part or portion (of a weight or coin); now the twentieth part of a pound or sovereign.

He esste, "wat hii costende? thre ssylling," the other seyde.

R. Gloucester, p. 390.

Yf eny frere were founde there. ich geve fyve shyllinges.

Piers Plouhman, p. 234.

Fine of these pence made their shilling, which they called scilling, probably from scilingus, which the Romanes used for the fourth part of an ounce.—Camden. Rem. Money.

1720

The first currant shilling or siluer peeces of twelue pence stamped within memorie, were coined by K. Henrie the eight in the twentieth yeare of his reigne.

Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 25.

The dull fat captain, with a hound's deep throat,
Would bellow out a laugh, in a base note;
And praise a hundred Zenos just as much
As a clipt sixpence, or a schilling Dutch.

Dryden. Persius, Sat. 6.

The shilling too seems originally to have been the denomination of a weight. When wheat is at twelve shillings the quarter, says an ancient statute of Henry iii, then wastel bread of a farthing shall weigh down eleven shillings and four pence.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 4.

SHILL-I, SHALL-I. Shall I? Shall I? an expression of indecision; of one who does not know his own mind.

Well—all on fire away he stalk'd,
Till come to—where the eagle walk'd.
Bob did not shill-I-shall-I go,
Nor said one word of friend or foe.

King. The Eagle and the Robin.

SHIMMERING. A. S. Scymrian, to cast forth rayes or beames, to cast a shadow. Dut. Schemeren, whereof our shimmering for an imperfect light, like unto that of twilight. Dut. Schemeringhe, (Somner.)

And by the wall she toke a staf anon:
And saw a litel shemering of a light,
For at an hole in shone the mone bright,
And by that light she saw hem bothe two,
But sikerly she n'ist who was who.

Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 4224.

SHIN. Dut. Sheene, shene, scheen-been; Ger.
Sciene, schien-been; Sw. Sheen, skeen-been; A. S.
Scina, scen-ban; probably the skin or skinned bone; the bone covered or protected by skin only; (quia natura ea parte tibiam decarnavit,—Wachter, who derives from the Dut. Schumen, deglubere, or Scandic, Shinna, abradere.) Shin is used alone, bone being understood. See SHANK.

The pure fetters on his shinnes grete
Were of his bitter salte teres wete.

Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1280.

There came an olde rybibe
She halted of a kybe
And had broken her shyn
At the threshold cummyng in.

Skelton. Elinour Rumming.

Di. You say true, are your swords sharp? Well my dear country-men, what ye lack,—if you continue and fall not back upon the first broken shin, I'll have you chronicled.

Beaum. & Fletch. Philaster, Act v. sc. 1.

3 Office. Stay, brother, I may live, for surely I find I'm but hurt in the leg, a dangerous kick on the shin-bone.

Id. The Honest Man's Fortune, Act ii. sc. 1.

SHINE, v. } Goth. Skein-an; A. S. Scin- SHINE, n. } an; Dut. Schijnen; Ger.
SHININGNESS. } Scheinen; Sw. Skina. The SHINY. } literal meaning seems to be—

To stand or start forth; to show, to exhibit, to manifest; to show clearly, conspicuously.

To emit or throw forth light; a bright light;
to be light, to lighten; to be bright or brilliant,
splendent, lucid, luminous; to glitter, to sparkle; (met.) to be conspicuous, splendid, illustrious;
also to give light, warmth (as the sun), animation, encouragement, favour; to favour, to be propitious.

— Of gold shone his coron.

R. Brunne, p. 148.

He was a lanterne brennyng & schynnyng. but ye wolden glade at an our in his light.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 5.

He was a burnyng, & a shining light, and ye woulde for a season haue reioyced in his light.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And [he] was turned into an other likeness bfore hem, and his face shoon as the sunne.—Wiclif. Matt. c. 17.

And [he] was transfigured before them: and his face dyd shyne as the sunne.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

But all thing, which that shineth as the gold,
Ne is no gold, as I have herd it told.

Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16,429.

For at an hole in shone the mone bright,
And by that light she saw hem bothe two,
But sikerly she n'iste who was who.

Id. The Reves Tale, v. 4226.

Proud of such glory and advancement vayne,
While flashing beames do daze his feeble eyen,
He leaves the welkin way most beaten playne,
And, rapt with whirling wheelles, inflames the skyen
With fire not made to burne, but fayrely for to shyne.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 4.

This saide, adowne he looked to the grownd
To have returnd but dazed were his eyne
Through passing brightnes, which did quite confound
His feeble sence, and too exceeding shyne,
So darke are earthly thinges compared to thinges divine!
Id. Ib. b. i. c. 10.

And mooned Ashtaroth,
Heav'n's queen and mother both,
Now sits not girt with tapers holy shine.
Milton, Ode 22.

It was upon a sommer's shynie day,
When Titan faire his beames did display,
In a fresh fountaine, far from all mens vew,
She bath'd her brest the boyling heat t' allay.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 6.

Yet goldsmithes cunning could not understand
To frame such subtle wire, so shynie cleare;
For it did glister like the golden sand,
The which Pactolus with his waters shere
Throwes forth upon the rivage round about him nere.
Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 6.

The epithets marmoreus, eburneus, and candidus, are all applied to beauty by the Roman poets, sometimes as to their shape, and sometimes as to the shiningnes here spoken of.
Spence. Crito.

While, from afar, we heard the cannon play,
Like distant thunder on a shyny day.
Dryden. To the Duchess of York.

SHINGLE. } Fr. Eschandole; Ger. Schindel; SHINGLED. } and Holland writes it shindle, so rendering the Lat. Scandula. Scandula pro scen- dula, from scindere, to split.

A division, a deal.

Except onliche. of eche kynde a peyre
That in thy shyngled shup. with the shal be save.
Piers Plouhman, p. 178.

In the verie fall also it ioineth with Orwell hauen, so neere that of manie they are reputed as one, and parted but by a shingle that dooth run along betweene them.
Holinshed. Description of England.

The bourds or shindles of the wild oke called robur, be of all others simply the best: and next to them, those which are made of other mast-trees, and especially of the beech.
The shindles are more easily rent or cloven out of all those trees which yeeld rosin, but setting aside the pine-wood only, none of them are lasting. Cornelius Nepos writeth, that the housen in Rome were no otherwise covered over head but with shindles, untill the warre with K. Pyrrhus.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvi. c. 10.

They shingle their houses with it.—Evelyn, b. ii. c. 4. § 1.

I reached St. Asaph, as bishop's see, where there is a very poor cathedral church, covered with shingles or tiles.
Ray. Rem. p. 123.

SHINGLES. Holland (in a marginal note on Plinie, b. xxx. c. 13.) calls the Gr. Eprys (a disease so named—quia serpit,) the shingles; and Skinner says it is a kind of erysipelas, which, if it surrounds the whole body, causes death, and derives from the Lat. Cingulum, a girdle. This disease was also called Zona.

All these things are affected by emollient fomentations applied inwardly in clysters, and why not outwardly to the skin? Such are used successfully in other eruptions, as erysipelas, shingles.—Arbuthnot. On Diet, c. 4.

SHIP, n. } Dut. Schip, schep; Ger. Schiff; SHIP, v. } Sw. Skepp; A. S. Scip;
SHIPFUL. } Goth. Shipp. Skinner and Ju-SHIPLESS. } nius,—from the Lat. Scapha;
SHIPPER. } Wachter,—from the Ger. Schie-
SHIPPING, n. } ben, (A. S. Sceof-an.) to shove, SHIPLET. } to push; because pushed or forced on by oars. Tooke,—from A. S. Scippan; Dut. Schep-en; Ger. Schaffen; Sw. Skaba, to form or frame, (to shape); and that it means—

“Something formed, (aliquid formatum,) in contradistinction from a raft, (sc.) for the purpose of conveying merchandize, &c. by water, protected from the water and the weather,” and it may be added, by usage, furnished with sails.

Ware by the shippes mowe come fro the se and wende,
And brynge on lond god y now.—R. Gloucester, p. 2.

To drive & to gaderi thuder god of neizebores aboute,
The stalwardeste men, that me fond, to him vaste he drou,
& of porchas of neizbores ssipede hom wel mou.
Id. p. 538.

Bute a shipful ther of a scapede.—R. Gloucester, p. 70.

— he mette in the see Thritti shipful of men, and of wymmen also,
Of children, and of other god that heo hadden with hem
y do.
Id. p. 39.

At Teteford in Northfolk his baner was displaid,
The thre kynges were slayn, the tother were affraid,
That thei went to ther schippes, so hard he sette his chace,
Edward had the maistri, & thanked God his grace.
R. Brunne, p. 27.

At Bristow in tille Ireland schipped Harald & Lofwyn.
Id. p. 59.

And bad shappe hym a shup. of shides and of bordes.
Piers Plouhman, p. 177.

And ich were hit worth of menye. as was in Noes tyme
Tho that he shap the shup of shides and of bordes.
Id. p. 196.

And we wenten up into a schip, and schippiden into Asson to take poul fro thenns.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 20.

And we went afore to shuppe, and lowsed vnto Asson there to receaue Paul.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Aftir three monethis we schippiden in a schip of Alis-aundre.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 28.

After thre monethes we departed in a ship of Alexandry.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

Thries I was at schipbreche, nyght and dai I was in the depnesse of the see.—Wiclif. 2 Corynth. c. 11.

I suffred thrise shipwracke. Nyght & day haue I bene in the depe of the sea.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

But aftirward that in the fourtenthe dai the nyght cam on us seilynge in the stony see, aboute mydnyght the schipmen supposiden sum cuntree to appere to hem.
Wiclif. Dedis, c. 27.

But whē y^e fourteenth night was come as we were caried in Adria aboute midnight, y^e shipmē demed y^t there appeared some coultre vnto thē.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

“Hast thou not herd,” (quod Nicholas) “also
The sorwe of Noe with his felawship,
Or that he might get his wif to ship?
Him had he lever, I dare wel undertake,
At thilke time, than all his whethers blake,
That she had had ship hireself alone.”
Chaucer. The Milleres Tale, v. 3534.

Than ere I was ware, I neighed to a sea banke, and for ferde of the beastes, shipcraft I ride.
Id. The Testament of Loue, b. i.

A shipman was ther, woned fer by west:
For ought I wote, he was of Dertemouth.
Id. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 390.

And ouer this of suche nature
Thei ben, that with so sweete a steuen
Like to the melodie of heuen
In womens voice thei singe,
With notes of so great likynge,
Of suche measure, of suche musike,
Wherof the shippes thei beswike,
That passen by the costes there.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

The sonne arist, the wedder clereth,
The shipman, which behinde stereth,
Whan that he saw the wyndes saught,
Towards Tharse his cours he straught.—Id. Ib. b. viii.

We craued not onely freedome from our foes,
But shippyng eke with sayles and all full bent
To come againe from whence we first were went.
Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

As to y^e geauntes that Brute founde in this Ile at his arryuayll, they myght be brought in to this lande by some meane of shippes or otherwyse, rather than to be borne of those women as there also is imagyned.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 1.

Though thou hast a thousand holy candels about thee, a C. ton of holy water, a shipfull of pardones, a clothe sacke full of friers coates, and all the ceremonies in the world, and all the good workes, deseruings and merites of all the men in the worlde, bee they or were they neuer so holy, Gods worde onely lasteth for euer, and that which he hath sworne, doth abide, whē all other thynges perish.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 62.

This also is to be noted as a testimonie remaining still of our language, derived from the Saxons, that the generall name for the most part of euerie skilfull artificer in his trade endeth in here with vs, albeit the h be left out, and er onlie inserted, as scriuener, writehere, shiphere, &c. for scriuener, writer, and shipper, &c. beside manie other reliques of that speech, neuer to be abolished.
Holinshed. Description of Britaine, c. 6.

They go to the sea betwixt two hills, wherof that on the one side lieth out like an arme or cape, and maketh the fashion of an hauenet or peere, whither shipleets sometime doo resort for succour.—Id. Ib. c. 12.

Our father and mother, we were sure, first with the shipwrack, and then with the other dangers we daily past, would have little rest in their thoughts till they saw us.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

In shootinge as in all other thinges, aptnesse is the first and chiefe thinge, which if it be awaye, neyther cunninge nor use doth any good at all, as the Scottes and Frenchmen, with knowledge and use of shootinge, shall become good archers, when a cunninge ship-wright shall make a strong shippe of a sallowe tree.—Ascham. Toxophilus.

To see those northern climes, with great desire possess'd,
Himself he thither shipp'd, and skilful in the globe
Took every several height with his true astrolabe.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 19.

And well I wot, that as shipping and navigation speeds well or ill, as the merchant buyeth cheape or deare, the price may rise and fall.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiii. c. 13.

Danaus was the first that sailed with a ship, and so hee passed the seas from Egypt to Greece: for before that time they used but troughs or flat planks, devised by king Erythra to crosse from one iland to another in the red sea.
Id. Ib. b. vii. c. 56.

The king required a loan of money, and sent to London and the port towns to furnish ships for guard of the seas.
Noy his attorney, a great antiquary, had much to do in this business of ship-money.—Whitelock. Memor. Charles I. p. 7.

In wanton ioyes and lustes intemperate,
Did afterwarde make a shipwracke violent
Both of their life and fame for ever fowly blent.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

If we this star once cease to see,
No doubt our state will shipwreck'd be,
And torn and sunk for ever.—Davies. Hymns of Astrea, §22.

The first ships were built without art or contrivance, and had neither strength nor durableness, beauty nor ornament;
but consisted only of planks laid together, and just so compacted as to keep out the water.
Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. iii. c. 14.

By viewing Nature, Nature's handmaid, Art,
Makes mighty things from small beginnings grow:
Thus fishes first to shipping did impart,
Their tail the rudder, and their head the prow.
Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Of all forms of death the most terrible was that by shipwreck, as wherein the body was swallowed up by the deep;
whence Ovid, though willing to resign his miserable life,
yet prays against this death.
Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. iv. c. 1.

Fire wood is very convenient to be got at, and easy to be shipped off.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 2.

The coast is not like Hartlepool; there are no rocks, but only chalky cliffs of no great height till you come to Dover;
there indeed they are noble and picturesque, and the opposite coasts of France begin to bound your view, which was left before to range unlimited by any thing, but the horizon:
yet it is by no means a shipless sea, but every where peopled with white sails, and vessels of all sizes in motion.
Gray. To Dr. Wharton, Let. 53.

SHIRE. } A. S. Scir, scire, from the SHIRE-MOTE. } verb Scyran, to divide, (Skin-SHIRE-REEVE. } ner.) And see the quotation from Holinshed.

A portion, division, or partition of the kingdom.

The Saxones and the Engliche tho heo hadden al an honde,
Fyue and thritti schiren heo maden in Engelande.
R. Gloucester, p. 3.

The bisshop of Canterbire therof payed was he,
For him and alle his schire this gift gaf fulle fre.
R. Brunne, p. 299.

Men said ther were inowe in mores & in medis,
“& if ge wille, we mowe of bestis do gode nedis.”
The cuntre herd it seie, the folk of ilk a schire
Had ther bestis aweie thorgh mede & thorgh mire.
Id. p. 310.

Of any lord that is in Englelond,
To maken him live by his propre good,
In honour detteles, but if he were wood,
Or live as scarsly, as him list desire;
And able for to helpen all a shire.
Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales.

[Alfred] diuided the whole realme into certeine parts or sections, which (of the Saxon word speyran, signifieng to cut) he termed shires, or as we yet speake, shares, or portions, of which some one hath fortie miles in length (as Essex) and almost so manie broad.
Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 4.

A third seignorie or shire there is that goeth to Apamia,
which in old-time was called Celænæ.
Holland. Plinie, b. v. c. 29.

Yes, Thirsis, I doe know thee and thy name,
Nor is my knowledge grounded all on fame;
Art not thou he, that but this other yeare,
Scard'st all the wolves and foxes in the sheere?
Browne. Thirsis & Alexis.

The borough law had been likewise anciently established among the Saxons, whereby every shire was divided into so many hundreds or boroughs, consisting at first of one hundred families therein usually inhabiting; every hundred in so many tythings, consisting of ten families.
Sir W. Temple. Hist. of England, Introd.

If the matter was of great importance it was put in the full shiremote; and if the general voice acquitted, or condemned, decided for one party or the other, this was final in the cause.—Burke. Abridg. of Eng. Hist. b. ii. c. 7.

The Thanes, in their private jurisdictions, had delegated their power of judging to their reeves or stewards; and the earl, or alderman, who was in the shire what the Thane was in his manor, for the same reasons officiated by his deputy, the shire-reeve.—Id. Ib. p. 347.

An indefinite number of these hundreds make up a county or shire. Shire is a Saxon word signifying a division.
Blackstone. Commentaries, vol. i. s. 1. Introd.

SHIRK, } See SHARK. Laud was accused SHERK, or } of fraud in contracting for licenses
SHURK. } to sell tobacco: see the first quotation.

To prey upon another, by fraud or rapine; to cheat, to trick; to shift from or evade—trouble, danger, &c.

Certainly he [Laud] might have spent his time much better, and more for his grace in the pulpit, than thus shirking and raking in the tobacco-shops.
State Trials, 1640. Harbottle Grimstone.

Tell me, you that never heard the call of any vocation, that are free of no other company than your idle companions, that shirke living from others, but time from yourselves; tell me, May it not be said of idleness, as of envy, that it is its own scourge?—Bp. Rainbow, (1635.) Ser. p. 40.

My last letters will have taught you to expect an explosion here: one of the cities shirked from the league.
Lord Byron to Murray. Ravenna, Sept. 7, 1820.

SHIRT, n. } From the A. S. Scyric, scyrc, SHIRT, v. } indusium; Junius, from Dan.
SHIRTLESS. } Shiorte, indusium; Tooke, from the A. S. Scyr-an, to shear, of which he considers it to be the past part. Scired, scirt, (i. e. shirt.) See SARK, and SKIRT.

To cut off a shirt, i. e. a part or portion sufficient for that article of clothing.

And shirt is,—

A part or portion sheared or cut off.

For thei shoulde nat faste, ne forbere sherte
Bote feithfullich defende. & fygte for truthe.
Piers Plouhman, p. 17.

Glad povertie is an honest thing certain.
This wol Senex and other clerkes sain.
Who so that halt him paid of his povertie,
I hold him rich, al had he not a sherte.
Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6765.

By God I hadde lever than my sherte,
That ye had red his legend, as have I.
Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15, 126.

Save of a daughter that I left, alas,
Sleeping at home, when out of Troy I stert, O sterne, O cruell father that I was,
How might I have in that so hard an herte?
Alas that I ne had brought her in my sherte.
Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iv.

When Nessus wist he shulde die,
He toke to Deianyre his sherte,
Whiche with the bloud was of his hert
Through our disteined ouer all.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

— By whose orient light,
The nymph adorn'd me with attires as bright;
Her owne hands putting on, both shirt and weede,
Robes fine, and curious.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. x.

Bend. Yet we may possibly hear farther news;
For while our Africans pursu'd the chace,
The captain of the rabble issued out
With a black shirtless train to spoil the dead,
And seize the living.—Dryden. Don Sebastian, Act. i. sc. 1.

Ah! for so many souls, as but this morn
Were cloath'd with flesh, and warm'd with vital blood,
But naked now, or shirted but with air.
Id. King Arthur, Act ii.

Peel'd, patch'd, and pyebald, linsey-wolsey brothers,
Grave mummers! sleeveless some, and shirtless others.
Pope. The Dunciad, b. iii.

In the present times, through the greater part of Europe, a creditable day-labourer would be ashamed to appear in public without a linen shirt, the want of which would be supposed to denote that disgraceful degree of poverty, which, it is presumed, nobody can well fall into without extreme bad conduct.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 2.

SHUTTLE. } Skinner derives shuttle from SHUTTLE, adj. } A. S. Sceot-an, to shoot; and SHUTTLENESS. } see Tooke.
SHUTTLECORK. } A shuttle or shuttle-cork
(miscalled cock) is a cork shot, i. e. thrown or cast

(backward and forward); knocked about from one to another; and hence, consequentially, shuttle.—

Light, volatile, giddy.

But and it were well sought
I trow all will be nought
Not worth a shuttle cocke.

Skelton. Why come ye not to Court?

— In which lay throwne
Stone cups, stone vessels, shuttles, all of stone.
With which the nymphs their purple mantles wove.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xiii.

We passe not what the people say or thinke:
Their shuttle hate makes none but cowards shrinke.
Mirroure for Magistrates, p. 456.

The vaine *shuttle*nesse of an vnconstant head.
Barret. Alvearie in v.

SHIVE, or } Dut. Schelffer, schelver, shelffe-
SHEEVE. } ren, sheveren, sheven; Ger. Shee-
SHIVER, n. } fer, schiefferen, segmentum SHIVER, v. } secare, findere, assulatum fran- SHIVERING, n. } gere, in micas frangere; to cut, to split, to break into small parts. (See Kilian.) Skinner derives from Ger. Scheden (A. S. Scead- an), which is, to divide or separate by cutting, splitting, breaking or otherwise, (Wachter.) Shive or sheeve (also written as in Chaucer, — shiver) seems to come more obviously from Sceaf-an, scaef-an, to shave; scaef-wa, a shaving.

Shive, or shaving,—a cut or cutting, a slice, a chip, a paring.

Shiver,—a part or portion; usually a very small, minute, part, portion or fragment; a mite, an atom.—Hammond, on Matt. vii. 3, explains mote to be a small thin shiver of wood.

To shiver,—to part, to separate, to dissever.

The noyse of foules for to be deliver'd,
So loude rang, "Have don and let vs wend,"
That well weend I, the wood had al to shiverd.
Chaucer. The Assembly of Fowls.

Ther see men who can juste, and who can ride
Ther shiveren shaftes upon sheldes thicke.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2607.

"Now dame," quod he, "jeo vous die sanz doute,
Have I nat of a capon but the liver,
And of your white bred nat but a shiver,
And after that a rosted pigges hed
(But I ne wolde for me no beest were ded)
Then had I with you homly suffisance."
Id. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 7420.

A sheeve of bread as brown as nut.
Warner. Albion's England.

What man, more water glideth by the mill
Then wots the miller of, and easie it is
Of a cut loafe to steale a shive we know.
Shakespeare. Titus Andronicus, Act ii. sc. 1.

If there bee any spell or shiver of arrowes, if any peece of a dart or whatsoever else sticke within the flesh, which would bee gotten forth.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxx. c. 13.

Edg. Hadst thou beene ought
But gozemore, feathers, ayre,
(So many fathome downe precipitating)
Thoud'st shiver'd like an egge: but thou dost breath.
Shakespeare. K. Lear, Act iv. sc. 6.

The same meale draweth forth spils of broken and shivered bones.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 25.

But, glauncing on the tempred metall, brast
In thousand shivers, and so forth beside her past.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 7.

Or surging waves against a solid rock,
Though all to shivers dasht, the assault renew,
Vain battery, and in froth or bubbles end.
Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

Vpon the breaking and shivering of a great state and empire, you may be sure to have warres.
Bacon. Ess. Of Vicissitude of Things.

And of this kind of parts itself there is also a variety, according to the difference of the tools employed to work on the wood; the shavings made by the plane being in some things differing from those shives or thin and flexible pieces of wood that are obtained by borers, and these from some others obtainable by other tools.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 576.

The bullets, which grazed upon it, would have driven before them such shivers of brick and stone, as would have prevented the garrison from forming behind it.
Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 14.

SHIVER, v. } Wachter says the Ger.
SHIVER, n. } Schaur, is, a trembling; and SHIVERING, n. } Schauen, to tremble; but SHIVERY. } that he does not find the word in other dialects. He has, however, Schauder, horror,—but unfortunately thinking the d superfluous, he overlooked the Dut. Shudder, shudden, to tremble, to shudder or shake. This Dut. Shudden, may be formed from Shocken, to shake, (in A. S. Sceac-an; the root, perhaps, of the whole.) The Sicambric (as Kilian calls the dialect spoken in Gueldres) had the verb, Schoeueren, to shake. See CHIVER.

To shake, to tremble, to quake, to quiver.

To be in a shiver, is a common expression.

From hence forward if you see a poore man shiueryng for cold in the streete, you may byd him walke a knaue and bare hym in hand that he feeleth no harme.

Fryth. Workes, p. 13.

Tisiphone each where doth shake and shiver
Her flaming fier-brond, encountering me, Whose lockes uncombed cruell adders be.

Spenser. Virgil's Gnat.

Streight bitter storms, and balefull countenance
That makes them all to shiver and to shake.

Id. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie.

— The now sad king
(Toss'd here and there, his quiet to confound)
Feels a strange weight of sorrows gathering
Upon his trembling heart, and sees no ground;
Feels sudden terrour bring cold shivering.

Daniel. Civil Wars, b. iii.

"A race of men there are, as Fame has told
Who shivering suffer Hyperborean cold,
Till, nine times bathing in Minerva's lake,
Soft feathers to defend their naked sides they take."
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. xiii.

A hollow wind comes whistling through that door;
And a cold shivering seizes me all o'er.

Id. The Conquest of Granada, Act iv. sc. 1.

A genial day in April is among us the subject of general congratulation. And while the lilac blossoms, and the laburnum drops its gold clusters, the shivering possessor of them is constrained to seek warmth at the side of his chimney.—Knox. Ess. 91.

— Sad ocean's face
A curling undulation shivery swept
From wave to wave.—Mallet. Amyntor & Theodora, c. 1.

SHOAL, or } A shoal or scull of fish,
SHOLE, n. } crows, shepherds, &c. is a SHOAL, v. } division, a portion, (a part SHOLE, adj. } separated from a main body.)
SHO'ALY. } See SCULL.

To shole, (Chapman),—is to move, to come, in shoals or divisions.

Shoals in the sea, are shallows, shelves. See SHALLOW.

Shoaling, (Milton),—growing or becoming shallow.

Shole, adj. (Spenser, Dampier, Cook),—shallow or shoaly.

Shoaled our water,—got into shallow water.

Thus pluckt he from the shore his lance, & left the waues to wash
The wave-sprung entrails, about which fausens and other fish
Did shole, to nibble of the fat what his sweet kindeys hid.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xxi.

Whereupon the women especially by way of revenge for that restraint do flock to St. Maries in such troops, and so early, that the masters of art have no room to sit; so as the vice-chancellor and heads of houses were in deliberation to repress their shoaling thither.

Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 472.

Pal. Sicker this morow, no lenger agoe,
I sawe a shole of shepherdes outgoe
With singing, and shouting, and jolly chere.
Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender. May.

— What they met
Solid or slimie, as in raging sea
Tost up and down, together crowded drove
From each side shoaling towards the mouth of hell.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

But this Molanna, were she not so shole,
Were no lesse faire and beautifull then shee:
Yet, as she is, a fairer flood may no man see.
Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 6.

From thence there came a great shole of crows, making a marvellous noise, that came flying toward Cicero's ship, which rowed upon the shore.—North. Plutarch, p. 729.

— When bright noone did flame
Forth from the sea, in sholes the sea-calves came,
And orderly, at last, lay downe and slept
Along the sands.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. iv.
Beneath, a shoal of silver fishes glides
And plays about the gilted barges' sides.
Waller. On St. James's Park.

The scaly herd, a numerous throng,
Beneath her silver billows glide along,
Whose still-increasing shoals supply
The poor man's wants, the great one's luxury.

Somerville. The Two Springs.

Sergestus in the centaur soon he pass'd,
Wedg'd in the rocky shoals, and sticking fast.

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. v.

Yet all goods imported by sea for Puira are landed at Payta, for the Bay of Chirapee is full of dangerous shoals, and therefore not frequented by shipping.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1684.

There are good wide channels between these islands fit for ships to pass, and in some places shoal water, where there grows plenty of turtle-grass.—Id. Ib.

The watchful hero felt the knocks; and found
The tossing vessel sail'd on shoaly ground.

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. v.

When the sunk sun no homeward sail befriends,
On the rocks brow the light-house kind ascends,
And from the shoaly, o'er the gulfy way,
Points to the pilot's eye the warning ray.

Savage. Public Spirit.

Each finding some protection in being but one of many that are equally liable to invasion, they [herrings] are seen to separate into shoals, one body of which moves to the west, and pours down along the coasts of America, as far south as Carolina, and but seldom farther.

Goldsmith. History of the Earth, pt. iv. b. iii. c. 2.

The shoals, he said, consisted of coral rocks, many of which were dry at low water, and upon one of which he had been ashore.—Cook. First Voyage, vol. ii. c. 4.

As we were steering close round its western extremity, with an intention of fetching the west side of Mowee, we suddenly shoaled our water, and observed the sea breaking on some detached rocks almost right a-head.

Id. Third Voyage, b. v. c. 5.

The depth of water in the mid-way between them was twenty-nine and thirty fathoms, decreasing gradually as we approached either continent, with the difference of being somewhat shoaler on the American than on the Asiatic coast, at the same distance from land.—Id. Ib. c. 4.

SHOCK, n. } Shock, the past part. (shoken, SHOCK, v. } shoke, shock,) of the verb to shake,
(qv.)

A concussion; a quaking, or trembling; a dashing or striking, with a violence or force, that shakes.—To shock, (met.)—

To cause a trembling or shuddering, (sc.) of anguish, horror, dislike.

A shock of corn,—so much as is shoke or shaken into a pile or heap. Dut. Schocke, concussus, jactatio, (Kilian;) and, consequentially, strues.

Shock (dog.) See SHAG.

Reap well, scatter not, gather clean that is shorn,
Bind fast, shock apace, have an eye to thy corn.

Tusser. August's Husbandry.

Corn tithed, sir parson, together go get,
And cause it on shocks, to be by and by set.—Id. Ib.

The day upon the host affrightedly doth look,
To see the dreadful shock, their first encounter gave,
As though it with the roar, the thunder would out-brave.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 22.

— When soon the troubled ground,
On her black bosom felt the thunder, which awoke
Her genius, with the shock that violently shook
Her entrails.

Id. Ib.

The sheaves being yet in shocks in the field, they thought they might not grind the wheat, nor make any commodity of the profit thereof.—North. Plutarch, p. 85.

While these by Juno's will the strife resign,
The warring gods in fierce contention join;
Rekindling rage each heavenly breast alarms;
With horrid clangour shock'd th' æthereal arms.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xxi.

So great was the love which the Jews had to their own country and religion, such an opinion was generally received among them of the peculiar favour of God towards them, that they who could not be shocked by persecution, were in danger of being overcome by flattery.

Stillington. vol. ii. Ser. 3.

Because the conclusion is too shocking to appear in broad terms, and too weak to bear; therefore you keep it under cover; and lay colours upon it, the better to deceive and draw in an unwary reader.—Waterland. Works, vol. i. p. 144.

I would fain know why a shock and a hound are not distinct species as a spaniel and an elephant.

Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 6.

Neglecting this, the master straight spurr'd on,
But th' active Moor his horse's shock did shun;
And 'ere his rider from his reach could go,
Finish'd the combat with one deadly blow.

Dryden. The Conquest of Granada, Act i. sc. 1.

To be sure he will rather have the primitive man to be produced by a long process in a kind of digesting balneum, where all the heavier lees may have time to subside, and a due æquilibrium be maintain'd, not disturb'd by any such rude and violent shocks, that would ruffle and break all the little stamina of the embryo, if it were a making before.

Bentley, Ser. 4.

At once they stoop and swell the lusty sheaves;
While through their cheerful band the rural talk,
The rural scandal, and the rural jest,
Fly harmless, to deceive the tedious time,
And steal unfelt the sultry hours away.
Behind the master walks, builds up the shocks;
And, conscious, glancing oft on every side
His sated eye, feels his heart heave with joy.

Thomson. Autumn.

In this dreadful manner was one, who had been till then of an excellent character, hurried on, from a single, and seemingly slight, indulgence, into the depth of the grossest and most shocking villainies.—Secker, vol. i. Ser. 25.

The infidel principles which have been recently diffused with uncommon industry and art, have an immediate tendency to produce, in a reading age, this shocking corruption.

Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 39.

SHODE. A bush of hair, the head, (Skinner, who thinks it may be from A. S. Scade lucus, q. d.
nemus capillorum.)

The naile ydriven in the shode on hight,
The colde deth, with mouth gaping upright,
Amidde of the temple sate mischance,
With discomfort and sory countenance.

Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 2009.

Crulle was his here, and as the gold it shon,
And strouted as a fanne large and brode;
Full streight and even lay his joly shode.

Id. The Milleres Tale, v. 3316.

SHOE, v. } Goth. Sko; A. S. Sco, sæo, scho;
SHOE, n. } Dut. Schoe, schoen; Ger. Schu, SHOELESS. } schuh; Sw. Sko. In A. S. Ge-scy, calcei, ge-scod, calceatus. Sceog-ian, calceare.
(See Lye.) Tooke derives from A. S. Sky-an, ge-scyan, supponere, to place under. Sceod, sup-positum; under placed, (sc.) the foot; the sole of the foot, (Div. of Purley, 8vo. ed. vol. ii. pp. 65 and 145.) In Mark vi. shood with sandals is υποδεμενους σανδαλια, bound under with sandals;
and the shoe or sandal was itself called υποδημα, something bound under.

The shoe, then, was something placed under the foot—to save it from injury; the covering or upper leather was a subsequent improvement.

And commaundide hem that thei schulden not take any thing in the weye but a yerde oneli, not a scrippe, ne breed, nether money in ther gerdil; but schood with sandalis, and that thei schulden not be clothid with tweie cootis.

Wielif. Mark, c. 6.

And cōmauded, them that they shoulde take no thyng unto their iorney, saue a rodde onely, neyther scrippe, neyther bread, neyther monye in their purses, but shoulde be shood with sandalis.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

So been Augustins, and cordileers,
And carmes, and eke sacked freers,
And all freers shode and bare.—Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

His rode was red, his eyen grey as goos,
With Poules windowes corven on his shoos.

Id. The Milleres Tale, 3317.

For though a widewe hadde but a shoo,
(So pleasant was his in principio)
Yet wold he have a ferthing or he went.

Id. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 255.

He looketh with what hart thou workest, and not what thou workest, how thou acceptest the degree thou art, whether thou be an apostle, or a shoemaker.

Tyndall. Workes, p. 85.

The popes and byshops will keepe their feete ful cleane with shoes of gold and siluer.—Fryth. Workes, p. 98.

As the tale is told, it fell out upon a time, that a shoemaker when he went by seemed to controule his worke-manship about the shoe or pantophle that he had made to a picture, and namely, that there was one latchet fewer than there should bee: Apelles acknowledging that the man said true indeed, mended that fault by the next morning, and set forth his table as his manner was.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxxv. c. 10.

A shoeless soldier there a man might meet
Leading his monsieur by the arms fast bound;
Another his had shackled on the ground.

Drayton. The Battle of Agincourt.

When he [the smith] had observ'd them, he told the host of the house, "That one of those horses had travell'd far; and that he was sure that his four shoes had been made in four several counties; which, whether his skill was able to discover or no, was very true.

Clarendon. Civil Wars, vol. iii. p. 424.

: 1723

He once desired to have a pair of shoes made after the English fashion, tho' he did very seldom wear any: so one of our men made him a pair, which the general liked very well.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1686.

The dresses for the feet and legs amongst the Greeks and Romans were nearly the same; they had both shoes and sandals, the former covered the whole foot, the last consisted of one or of more soles, and were fastened with thongs above the foot.—Beloe. Herodotus, b. i. Note 249.

SHOG, v. } See To Jog. Shog, from SHOGGING, n. } shoke, shock, past part. of shake, (qv.) See also SHAG and SHOCK.

To shake to cause to shake or tremble; to move at a shaking pace; as a shog trot; to move slowly away.

And the boot in the myddil of the see was schoggid with waivis, for the wynd was contrarie to hem.

Wiclif. Matthew, c. 14.

If he can by no meane be shogged out of his deadde slepe, but wil nedes take hys dreame for a verrye trowth.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1193.

Then ever and anone they plied it with stirring and shogging, untill it had lost the cruditie and verdure thereof.

Holland. Plinie, b. xix. c. 3.

Tinck. Come, prethee let's shogg off, and browze an hour or two, there's ale will make a cat speak, at the harrow.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Coxcombe, Act ii. sc. 1.

— These famed words agog

So set the goddesses, that they in anger gan to shog.

Arthur Hale. Iliad, b. iv.

Through the violence of such shoggings [they] are leapt out of the coach.—Harmer. Tr. of Beza, [1587,] p. 385.

Another's diving bow he did adore
Which with a shog casts all the hair before,
Till he with full decorum brings it back,
And rises with a water-spaniel shake.

Dryden. Ep. to the Man of Mode.

SHOOT, v. } Dut. Schieten; Ger. Schies- SHOOT, n. } sen; Sw. Shuita; A. S. Sceo- SHOOTER. } tan, scyt-an, jacere, ejicere, SHOOTING, n. } projicere, jaculari; to throw, SHOOTRESS. } cast, or send out or forth. See SHOT. } Tooke, ii. 130.

To throw or cast; to throw, cast or send out or forth, to emit, to eject, to project; to thrust or push forth, to expel; to move or pass, like any thing shot or thrown.

A shot,—(shot, past part. of shoot)—from a gun, or bow, or other machine; something cast or thrown forth, emitted, ejected, expelled.

A shoot of a tree,—cast forth, thrown, emitted from the tree.

"A shotten herring,—one that has cast or thrown forth its spawn."

A shot window,—a projected window, thrown out beyond the rest of the front, very common in our old houses; Mr. Tyrwhitt supposes it a shut window.

Shote-anchor, or sheet-anchor. See SHEET.

Shot,—cast down as share or sum to be paid.
See SCOT.

Shot-free,—free from shot; from expense, damage, &c.

As he wolde schete an hert, al a geyn hys wille
To dethe he schet ys owne fader, that he lay ther stille.

R. Gloucester, p. 11.

Oft tille our Inglis men was schewed a mervaille grete,
A darte was schot to them, bot non wist who it schete.

R. Brunne, p. 178.

And sheteth out shot ynowh.—Piers Ploughman, p. 355.

And shotten ageyns hym with shot.—Id. p. 403.

Pipen he coude, and fishe, and nettes bete,
And turnen cuppes, and wrastlen wel, and shete.

Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 3926.

But who so shooteth right ywis,
May therewith doen great harme and wo.

Id. Rom. of the Rose.

That Pandarus, for all his wise speach,
Felt eke his part of love's shottes kene,
That could he never so well of loving preach,
It made his hew a day full ofte grene.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

The sailing firre, the cipres death to plaine,
The shooter ewe, the aspe for shaftes plaine.

Id. The Assembly of Fowles.

And forth he goth, jolif and amorous,
Til he came to the carpenteres hous,
A litel after the cockes had ycrow,
And dressed him up by a shot-window.

Id. The Milleres Tale, v. 3356.

He hath so well his shotte tyled,
That he hym through the body smette.
And thus the fals wight he lette.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

The same is blind, and wotteth not what he doth, and ereth and shoteth at a wrong marke.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 81.

This wise reason is their shoteance and all their hold.
Id. Ib. p. 264.

But why I bringe in Textor was this; at last, when he hath rekened all shooters that he can, he sayth thus, Petrus Crinitus wryteth, that the Scottes, which dwell beyonde Englande, be very excellent shooters, and the best bowmen in warre.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. i.

And I promise you shootinge, by my iudgement, is the most honeste pastime of all, and suche one, I am sure, of all other, that hindereth learninge litel or nothings at all, whatsoever you and some other saye.—Id. Ib.

They stop their eares against the sound,
which is the surest shilde Against the dreadful shot of wordes that thousandes had beguilde.
Gascoigne. Of the Louers Estate.

— Herein make abode
So many learned impes, that shoot abroad,
And with their braunches spread all Britany,
No lesse then to her elder sisters broode.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 11.

— Atrides had for share,
Faire-cheekt Chryseis; after which, his priest, that shoots
so farre,
Chryses, the faire Chryseis sire, arriv'd at th' Achive fleete,
With infinite ransome, to redeeme, the deare imprison'd
feete,
Of his faire daughter.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

— His magnetic beam, that gently warms
The unvers, and to each inward part
With gentle penetration, though unseen,
Shoots invisible vertue even to the deep.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

Therefore, when any favour'd of high Jove,
Chances to pass through this adventrous glade,
Swift as the sparkle of a glancing star
I shoot from heav'n, to give him safe convoy,
As now I do. Id. Comus.

— For all shafts that flie Light not in vaine, some worke the shooters will,
And Joue's right hand with thunder cast from skie,
Takes open vengeance oft for secret ill.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xvii. s. 41.

And from her brow no steeld shaft there flew,
But that some bloud the cursed engine got,
Bloud of some valiant knight or man of fame,
For that proud shootresse scorned weaker game.
Id. Ib. b. xi. s. 41.

But come, the bow; now mercie goes to kill,
And shooting well, is then accounted ill:
Thus will I saue my credit in the shoote,
Not wounding, pitie would not let me do't;
If wounding, then it was to shew my skill,
That more for praise, then purpose meant to kill.
Shakespeare. Love's Labour Lost, Act iv. sc. 1.

The Turkish bow giveth a very forcible shoot; insomuch that it hath been known, that the arrow hath pierced a steel target, or a piece of brass of two inches thick; but that which is more strange, the arrow, if it be headed with wood, hath been known to pierce thorow a piece of wood, of eight inches thick.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, c. 8. § 704.

Just. An honest weaver, and as good a workman, as e'er shot shuttle, and as close.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Coxcombe, Act v. sc. 1.

If manhood, good manhood be not forgot vpon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring.
Shakespeare. 1 Pt. Henry IV. Act ii. sc. 4.

Fal. Though I could scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot heere: here's no scoring, but vpon the pate.
Id. Ib. Act v. sc. 3.

As they grow in years they become more dexterous and courageous, and then they will stand a fair mark to any one that will shoot arrows at them; which they will put by with a very small stick, no bigger then the rod of a fowling-piece.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1681.

Some cut the shoot, and plant in furrow'd ground;
Some cover rooted stalks in deeper mould.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. ii.

So spoke he, boastful; but the winged dart
Stopt short of life, and mock'd the shooter's art.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. v.

— The law of arms doth bar
The use of venom'd shot in war.—Hudibras, pt. ii. c. 2.

For if he feel no chagrin or remorse,
His forehead's shot-free, and he's ne'er the worse.
Butler. Upon Drunkenness.

In a third sort, the seed of the world takes deeper hold,
and makes very strong and promising shoots; but thorns and bad weeds, the earlier possessors of the field, rise up and choak it.—Secker, vol. i. Ser. 11.

While we were shooting this gulph, our soundings were from thirty to seven fathom, very irregular, and the ground at bottom very foul.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 5.

Thus when Roger shot the hawk hovering over his master's dovehouse, he only pulled the trigger, the action [of the spring drove down the flint, the action of the flint struck fire into the pan, the action of the fire set the powder in a blaze, that of the powder forced out the shot, that of the shot wounded the bird, and that of gravity brought her to the ground.—Search. Light of Nature, pt. i. c. 2.

As we were crossing a little river that lay in our way we saw some ducks, and Mr. Banks as soon as he had got over fired at them, and happened to kill three at one shot.
Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 9.

SHOP, n. } Fr. Eschoppé, échoppé. Junius SHO'PPING. } thinks shop may be from shape, formare, because in it artists give form or shape (forman) to their commodities. Tooke thinks shop (shope, past part. of shape) to be—aliquid formatum.

Something skope or shopen (in contradistinction from a stall) for the purpose of containing merchandize for sale, protected from the weather.
And see SHIP.

To go shopping,—to go to different shops, cheapening, bargaining, buying. See the quotations from Cowper and Byron.

Shop-lifter:—to lift is to take up, to thief:
a shop-lifter, one who thieves from shops (usually presenting themselves as customers).

And as for yron & latē to be so drawn in length ye shall se it done in xx. shoppis almost in one strete.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 127.

Which tooles, I openlie confesse, be not of myne owne forging, but partlie left unto me by the cunningest master, and one of the worthiest gentlemen that ever Englande bred, Syr John Cheke; partlie borrowed by me out of the shoppe of the dearest frende I have out of Englande, Joh.
Sturmius.—Ascham. Schole-master, b. ii.

Galen would have the liver, which is the shop and source of the blood, and Aristotle the heart, to be the first fram'd, in regard 'tis primum vivens, & ultimum moriens.
Howell, b. ii. Let. 30.

In gospel-phrase their chapmen they betray;
Their shops are dens, the buyer is their prey.
Dryden. The Medal.

Like those women they call shop-lifters, who when they are challenged for their thefts, appear to be mighty angry and affronted.—Swift. Examiner, No. 28.

Garth, generous as his muse, prescribes and gives;
The shopman sells; and by destruction lives.
Dryden, Epist. 13.

Nor deems he wiser him, who gives his noon
To miss, the mercer's plague, from shop to shop
Wand'ring and littring with unfolded silks
The polish'd counter, and approving none,
Or promising with smiles to call again.
Cowper. Task, b. vi.

Books of account, or shop-books, are not allowed of themselves to be given in evidence for the owner.
Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iii. c. 23.

I asked him to come and sit an hour with me: he excused himself, and what do you think was his excuse? He was engaged with his mother and some ladies to go shopping?
And he knows, I set out to morrow to be absent for years, perhaps never to return.—Byron. Life by Moore, an. 1809.

SHORE, n. } A. S. Score; Dut. Schorre,
SHORE, v. } schoore, pars rupta aut scissa; SHO'RELESS. } also schore, ripa, (Kilian; who SHO'RY. } considers them to be different words.) Shore is the past part. of the verb to shear, (qv.) "Shore, (says Tooke,) as the seashore, shore of a river, is the place where the continuity of the land is interrupted, or separated by the sea or the river;"—the bound, the limit.

Shore (the verb formed upon the noun) is—to set, to place, to bring to, to go to the shore or to the land; to land.

In the second quotation from Chapman, shored is—landed, firmly set—as on land: in Mirror for Magistrates it is merely the past part. of shear, and means—separated.

At last they in an island did espy
A seemely maiden, sitting by the shore,
That with great sorrow and sad agony
Seemed some great misfortune to deplore,
And lowd to them for succour called evermore.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 12.

— To his amorous passe
He brought her first, shor'd from his ship to her.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xv.

But, being thy guest; Ile be his supply,
For all weeds, such as mere necessity
Shall more than furnish: fit him with a sword,
And set him where his heart would have bene shor'd.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xvi.

A ground lying low is soone ouerflowen,
And shored houses cannot long continue:
Joints cannot knit where as is no sinew.
Mirror for Magistrates, p. 353.

So that I beleieve there are men which would be puritans;
but indeed not any that are. One will have him one that lives religiously, and will not reveill it in a shorelesse excesse.
Feltham, pt. vi. Res. 5.

Through all the navy doth like ardour reigne,
They quit the shore, and rush into the main:
Plac'd on their banks, the lusty Trojans sweep
Neptune's smooth face, and cleave the yielding deep.
Waller. Virgil. Aeneis, b. iv.

There is commonly a declivity from the shore to the middle part of the channel, and those shory parts are generally but some fathoms deep.—Burnet. Theory.

Vice is the act of man, by passion tost,
And in the shoreless sea of folly lost:
But thou what vice disorders, canst compose,
And profit by the malice of thy foes.
West. The Hymn of Cleanthes.

— Can she unappall'd,
When all the flood-gates of the sky are ope,
The shoreless deluge stem?
Grainger. The Sugar-Cane, b. ii.

SHORE, v. } Dut. Schore, fulcimen, schoren, SHO'RER. } shooren, suffulcire, to prop up, to support. P. Plouhman says,—“It had three shorers to shove it up three shides, of one length,”
(i. e. three sections, deals, cut or divided timber, see SHIDE;) whence it may be inferred that shore is—

A piece of wood, separated, divided from the main bulk, or trunk, and used as a prop or support; and hence to shore, consequentially,—

To prop, to support.
— Bote thenne took ich hede
Hit hadde shoriers to shove it up, thre shides of o lengthye
And of o kynne colour. Piers Plouhman, p. 305.

Then setteth he to it another shorer, that all thinge is in the Newe Testament fulfilled that was promysed before, and also that there is no promise behynde of ought to be shewed more, saue the resurrection. Nowe thys shorer is so surely sette, that it is shortly blowne downe quite, if a man saye no more but what than.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 473.

As touching props and shores to support vines, the best (as we have said) are those of the oke or olive tree.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 22.

SHORT, adj. } Dut. Schorte, schorten; Ger.
SHORT, adv. } Schorten, deficere. A. S.
SHORT, v. } Sceort; in Ger. Kurtz, curt, SHO'RTEN, v. } (qv.) Wachter thinks the SHO'RTENING, n. } words are the same, and that SHO'RTLY. } they might be formed from SHO'RTNESS. } the Dut. Schewen, rumpere, to break; and this verb, he refers to the Ger.
Scheren, to shear, to divide.

Shored, or shorn, is the past part. of shear, (A. S. scyran). Shored, shor'd, short, means—cut off,
and is opposed to long, which means—extended.
(See SHEAR.) To short (the verb) is formed upon the past part. :—we now use shorten.

To cut off, to lop off, to curtail, (sc. part) and, consequentially, to lessen, to diminish, to abridge or abbreviate, be or cause to be brief; to take from the dimensions or extent; to reduce, to contract, to confine;—to diminish or reduce the distance, the duration or continuance; to bring near; to approximate, to take from the efficiency; to fail or cause to fail; to be or become deficient, or imperfect, inadequate or unequal to.

Bote to segge ssortlyche, ther nas ver ne ner,
Of prowess ne of cortesy, in the world ys per.
R. Gloucester, p. 181.

Thorgh Edrike's conseile Knoute did him slo, & tok quene Emme & wedded hir to wife,
Thorgh Edrike's conseile, scho scorted his life.
R. Brunne, p. 49.

Schortly forto say, to Snowdon has he tight.—Id. p. 263.

Therefore britheren, I seie this thing, the tyme is schort.
Wiclif. 1 Cor. c. 7.

This saye I brethren, the tyme is shorte.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Wherefore swiche sorwe shorteth the life of many a man, or that his time is come by way of kinde.
Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

But it was spoken in so short a wise,
In such awaite alway, and in such feare.
Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

And shortly turned was all up so down
Both habit and eke dispositioun
Of him, this woful lover dan Arcite.
Id. The Knights Tale, v. 1380.

Upon that other side, to speke of the horrible disordinat scantnesse of clothing, as ben thise cutted sloppes or hanselines, that thurgh hir shortnesse cover not.
Id. The Persones Tale.

The cause why he came, he telleth
Unto the keepers of the gate,
And wolde haue comen in there ate.
But shortely thei hym sayde naie.—Gower. Con. A. b. vi.

And so they came toward sir Robert Carroll, wher they thought to fynde him; howbeit, their way was shorted, for at a place called the passe of the Pount Volant, the Frenchmen and they met togder sodenly.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 285.

Vouchsafe yet then to go vnto my graue,
And there first write my byrth and then my name:
And how my life was shortned many yeares,
By womens wyles as to the world appeares.
Gascoigne. Hearbes.

A man, that was full earnest sett
To serve his prince at all assayes:
No sycknes could hym from yt lett;
Which was the shortnyng of his dayes.
Wyatt. Epitaph on Sir T. Gravenor.

There was a proclamation signed for shortning of the fall of the mony to that day; in which it should be proclaimed and devised, that it should be in all places of the realm within one day proclaimed.
Burnet. Records, K. Edward's Journal, 1550.

— After short silence then
And summons read, the great consult began.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

— Live while ye may Yet happie pair, enjoy, till I return,
Short pleasures, for long woes are to succeed.
Id. Ib. b. iv.

O glorious trial of exceeding love
Illustrious evidence, example high!
Ingaging me to emulate, but short
Of thy perfection, how shall I attaine.
Id. Ib. b. ix.

Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou liv'st
Live well, how long or short permit to Heav'n:
And now prepare thee for another sight.
Id. Ib. b. xi.

Think not but that I know these things, or think
I know them not; not therefore am I short
Of knowing what I aught; he who receives Light from above, from the fountain of light,
No other doctrine needs, though granted true.
Id. Paradise Regained, b. i.

Gentle lady, may thy grave
Peace and quiet ever have;
After this thy travel sore
Sweet rest seise thee evermore,
That to give the world increase,
Shortned hast thy own life's lease.
Id. Epitaph on the March. of Winchester.

But headlong joy is ever on the wing,
In wintry solstice like the shorten'd light
Soon swallow'd up in dark and long out-living night.
Id. The Passion.

Shortly therein so perfect he became,
That, from the first unto the last degree,
His mortall life he learned had to frame
In holy righteousness, without rebuke or blame.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

Behold them weeping for their native shore!
What could their wives or helpless children more?
What heart but melts to leave the tender train,
And, one short month, endure the wintry main?
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

Nor can they last beyond the time assign'd
By that all-seeing and all-making mind;
Shorten their hours they may; for will is free,
But never pass th' appointed destiny.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

Wherein to check our over-confidence and presumption, we might by every day's experience be made sensible of our short-sightedness and liableness to error.
Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iv. c. 14.

Short-hand, an art, as I have been told, known only in England, may perhaps be thought worth the learning, both for dispatch in what men write for their own memory, and concealment of what they would not have lie open to every eye.—Id. On Education.

Honour at best is but an expedient to supply the shortness of our views and lead us into those courses which we want discernment to see the prudence of.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. i. c. 19.

We made the high land of Otaheite on the 21st, and at noon were about thirteen leagues east of Point Venus, for which we steered, and got pretty well in with it by sun set, when we shortened sail.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. ii. c. 11.

Were we but nearly so modest as we ought to be, we should be very backward to question, whether a Being of unsearchable wisdom can do what there is any competent proof he hath done: and should carry a strong sense of our own short-sightedness and incapacity along with us, to check all petulance of arguing on such points.
Secker, vol. ii. Ser. 34.

SHOVE, v. } Dut. Schuiven; Ger. Scheiben, SHOVE, n. } schaffen; Sw. Skuf-wa; A. S.
SHO'VING, n. } Sceof-an, scof-an, scuf-an; Dut.
SHO'VEL, n. } Schoefle, schoole; Ger. Schaufel; SHO'VEL, v. } Sw. Skif-wel; A. S. Scofl, to shove, to push.—Shovel, (dim. of Shove: i. e. shov-dæl.) that which shoves or pushes.

To push, to thrust; to press again.
To shovel,—to work with a shovel; to push, thrust, take up, throw up, (sc. with, or as with a shovel.)

— Bote thenne took ich hede
Hit hadde shoriers to shove it up, thre shides of o lengthye
And of o kynne colour.—Piers Plouhman, p. 305.

"Now sires," quod this Osewold the Reve,
"I pray you alle, that ye not you greve,
Though I answeere, and somdel set his howve.
For leful is with force force off to showve."
Chaucer. The Reves Prologue, v. 3907.

Ther was gret shoving bothe to and fro
To lift him up, and mochel care and wo,
So unwelky was this sely palled gost.
Id. The Manciples Prologue, v. 17,002.

Full long I shofe, and knocked eke,
And stode full long all herkening,
If that I heard any wight comming.
Id. The Rom. of the Rose.

The high god ordeineth so,
That he within a tyme also,
When he was strengest in his yre,
Was shouen oute of his empyre.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Thus geaunt with his rude might
Part of the bank he shofe downe right,
The whiche euen upon Acis fille.—Id. Ib. b. ii.

And of this pore vassal
He made a kyng rayal
And gaue him a realme to rule
That occupyd a shovel
A mattoke, and a spade
Before that he was made
A kyng.
Skelton. Why come ye not to Court?

— All the crow'd was shov'd about the shore;
In sway, like rude and raging waves, rows'd with the fervent blore
Of th' East and South winds.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

You haue vndone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his graue in quiet; yea,
To dye vpon the bed my father dy'de,
To lye close by his honest bones; but now
Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me
Where no priest shouels in dust.
Shakespeare. The Winter's Tale, Act iv. sc. 3.

Then must you goe deeper and cast up the earth with a broad spade or shovell.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 21.

On a night when the lieutenant and he for their disport were plaicing at slidegrote or shooftboord suddenlie commeth from the cardinal [Woolseie] a mandatum to execute Kildare on the morrow.
Holinshed. Chronicles of Ireland, an. 1528.

Well Timantus, Pray how have you sped here at whom at shovelboord?—Beaum. & Fletch. Cupid's Revenge, Act iii. sc. 1.

I was forced to swim behind, and push the boat forward with one of my hands; and the tide favouring me, I advanced so far that I could feel the ground; I rested two minutes, and then gave the boat another shove, and so on.
Swift. Gulliver's Travels. Lilliput, c. 8.

I have seen not only ducks shovel them up as they swim along the waters, but divers insects also devour them.
Derham. Physico-Theology, b. iv. c. 11. Note.

He might have pass'd his time at nine-pins, or shovel-board, that had been fit sport for such as he.
Dryden. The Wild Gallant, Act iv.

We see bodies moved by other bodies, striking or shoving against them, but the mover gives no more motion than it had itself before and always loses so much as it has imparted to another.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. i. c. 7.

The form of the feet fixes the character of the animal [mole.] They are so many shovels; they determine its action to that of rooting in the ground; and every thing about its body agrees with this destination.
Paley. Natural Theology, c. 15.

SHOUGH, i. e. Shock or shag, (qv.)

Macb. I, in the catalogue ye goe for men,
As hounds and greyhounds, mungrels, spaniels, cures,
Shoughes, water-rugs, and demy-wolues are clipt
All by the name of dogges.
Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act iii. sc. 1.

SHOUGH, i. e. Shog, (qv.)

— I'll make it sure, I
By to morrow this time thy maiden-head Shall not be worth a chicken, if it were Knockt at an out-cry: go, I'll h'a ye before me:
Shough, shough, up to your coop, pea-hen.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Maid in the Mill, Act v. sc. 1.

SHOULDER, n. } Dut. Scholder, schouder; SHOULDER, v. } Ger. Schulter; Sw. Skul- SHOULDERING, n. } dra; A. S. Sculdor, scyldre.
Wachter thinks these words may have the same origin as shield, (quia clypeo simile.) Tooke,— that shoulde (for so he asserts it should be written, and he produces the instance quoted below) is the past part. of Scylan, to divide, to separate.

The part where the arms separate from the body.—From the strength across from one to the other, shoulder is used (met.) for strength, a strong support; also a part, where the arm, the shank—terminates, or is fixed.

Hys sseld, that het Prydwen, was thanne y honge wast
Aboute ys ssoldren, and theron y peynt was and y wort
The ymage of our Lady, inwan was al ys thogt.
R. Gloucester, p. 174.

And whanne he hath foundun it: he joyeth and leith it on hise schuldris, and he cometh hoom.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 15.

And when he hath founde hym, he putteth hym on his shoulders with ioye.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

He was short shuldered, brode, a thikke gnarre,
Ther na's no dore, that he n'olde heve of barre,
Or breke it at a renning with his hede.
Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 551.

The noblest of the Grekes that ther were
Upon his shuldres carrieden the bere,
With slacke pas, and eyen red and wete,
Thurghout the citee, by the maister strete.
Id. The Knights Tale, v. 2831.

And this geant also gladdie is,
And toke this ladie vp alofte,
And set hir on his shulder softe.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

The due fashion of byrth is this, fyrste the head cometh forwarde, then foloweth the necke and shouldes.
Byrthe of Mankynde, fol. 13, (1540.)

They hytte so euyn bothe, that their sheldes fell in peces;
and in passyng by, Bernarde sholdred Sir Langurantes horse in such wyse, that the lorde fell out of the sadell.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 342.

I call that the shoulders in a heade whiche a mans finger shall feele afore it come to the point.—Ascham. Toxoph. b. ii.

It is not drawn certainly so farre one time as at another, because it lacketh shoulderinge, wherewith, as with a sure token, a man might be warned when to louse.—Id. Ib.

Her golden lockes, that late in tresses bright
Embreaded were for hindring of her haste,
Now loose about her shoulders hong undight,
And where with sweet ambrosia all besprinkled light.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 6.

Polon. Yet heere Laertes! Aboord, aboard for shame,
The winde sits in the shoulder of your saile,
And you are staid for there.
Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act i. sc. 3.

His face defac'd with skarres of infamie,
His royall stock grafft with ignoble plants,
And almost shouldred in the swallowing gulfe
Of dark forgetfulness, and deepe Obluion.
Id. Rich. III. Act iii. sc. 7.

The mid-stream's his; I, creeping by the side,
Am shoulder'd off by his impetuous tide.
Dryden. Tyrannick Love, Act ii. sc. 1.

Himself, among the foremost, deals his blows,
And, with his ax, repeated strokes bestows
On the strong doors: then all their shoulders ply,
Till from the posts the brazen hinges fly.
Id. Virgil. Aeneis, b. ii.

The broken soldier, kindly bade to stay,
Sat by his fire, and talk'd the night away;
Wept o'er his wounds, or, tales of sorrow done,
Shoulder'd his crutch, and show'd how fields were won.
Goldsmith. The Deserted Village.

The sail is pointed at the top, square at the bottom, and curved at the side; somewhat resembling what we call a shoulder of mutton sail, and used for boats belonging to men of war.—Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 18.

SHOUT, n. } Skinner says, either from SHOUT, v. } the sound, or from the Dut.
SHO'UTER. } Schirte, scheute (our Shoot).
SHO'UTING, n. } Jaculatio, q.d. vocis contentæ ejaculatio: it is (Tooke) the past part. of the verb, to shoot; meaning,—

"Sound thrown forth from the mouth;" sound ejected or ejaculated; ejaculation, (sc.) of the voice exerted, raised, exalted. See SPEECH.

Up goeth the trumpe, and for to shoute and shele.
Chaucer. The Legend of Good Women.

And men eried in the strete, "Se Troilus Hath right now put to flight the Grekes rout."
With that gonne all her meine for to shout:
"A, go we se, cast up the gates wide,
For through this strete he mote to paleis ride."
Id. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

Ran cow and calf, and eke the very hogges
So fered were for berking of the dogges,
And shouting of the men and women eke,
They rounen so, hem thought hir hertes breke.
Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,401.

With this there was a great shout, crying kyng Richarde kyng Rychard.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 66.

Whom whenas all the people such did vew,
They shouted loud, and signes of gladnesse all did shew.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 3.

The cries, th' encouragements, the shouting shrill,
That all about the beaten air rebounds
Confused, thund'ring murmurs, horrible.
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. iv.

The rest of the Grecians advanced with eager haste and fury, and in the beginning of their onset gave a general shout, to encourage and animate themselves, and strike terror into their enemies.
Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. iii. c. 9.

No noise was heard; no voice, but of the cryer,
Proclaiming peace, and liberty to Sparta;
At that a peal of loud applause rang out,
And thin'd the air, till even the birds fell down
Upon the shouter's heads.
Dryden. The Spartan Hero, Act i. sc. 1.

When he was introduced into a new part of the ship, or when any thing that he had not seen before caught his attention, he shouted with all his force for some minutes, without directing his voice to us or his companions.
Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 3.

Another fall of snow now came on, and continued incessantly for two hours, so that all hopes of seeing them again, at least alive, were given up; but about twelve o'clock, to the great joy of those at the fire, a shouting was heard at some distance.—Id. Ib.

SHOW, or } Dut. Schowen; Ger. Schauwen; SHEW, n. & v. } A. S. Sceawian, ostendere, mon-SHE'WISH. } strare,— SHE'WY. } To cause to see or perceive;
to exhibit or hold forth; to offer, bear, or bring forth; to present, to the eye or view; to discover; to point out, direct, or guide to; to seem, to appear, or cause to appear; to cause to perceive, or apprehend, or understand; to teach;
to convince.

A show, is emphatically an exhibition, a spectacle, intended to please or amuse, by its gaiety or splendour.

Showy,—ostentatious of appearance; conspicuous; splendid, gay, or gaudy.

This kyng, tho he sey then deth, ys knyghtes he let of sende,
And schewede hem al the wey wyder he schulde wende.
R. Gloucester, p. 122.

That the lond is thin, [William's] thi helm schewes it the,
Forsuorn is Haraldyn, he salle no dure.
R. Brunne, p. 70.

Meny prerbis ich myghte have, of meny holy seyntes
To testefie for treuthe, the tale that ich shewe.
Piers Plouhman, p. 210.

But after these thingis whanne tweyne of hem wanderin,
he was schewid in another liknesse to hem goynge to a toun.
Wiclif. Mark, c. 16.

And the devel ladde him into an' high hil, and schewide to him alle the rewmes of the world in a moment of tyme.
Id. Luk, c. 4.

And the deuyll tooke hym into an hie mountayne, and shewed hym all the kyngdome of the world euën in the tyncklynge of an eye.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Ye han yourselven shewed here to-day
So high sentence, so holly, and wel,
That I consent, and confirme every del
Your wordes all, and your opinioun.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9379.

And that by wordes but a fewe
I shall by reason proue and shewe.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

Shall I say, O Zelmane? alas your words be against it.
Shall I say prince Pryocles? wretch that I am, your shew is manifest against it.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Shewbread, because it was always in the sighte and presence of the Lorde.—Bible, 1551. Genesis, Note.

He tooke the charge of me, and of the crowne,
And with kinde shewes of loue so brought to passe,
That through Demascus great report was blowne
How good, how iust, how kinde mine vnle was.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. iv. s. 45.

And to the ground his eyes were lowly bent,
Simple in shew, and voide of malice bad;
And all the way he prayed, as he went,
And often knockt his brest, as one that did repent.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

He said; and cloath'd himselfe in coarse array:
A labouring hind in show, then forth he went,
And to th' Athenian towers his journey bent.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. i.

There is nothing which lies more within the province of a spectator than publick shows and diversions; and as among these there are none which can pretend to vie with those elegant entertainments that are exhibited in our theatres.—Spectator, No. 235.

When they had taken any spoils from the enemy, the men would make a present of every thing that was rich and showy to the women whom they most admired.
Id. No. 434.

My motive for singling out this man [the Man of Ross] was two fold; first to distinguish real and solid worth from showish or plausible expense, and virtue from vanity.
Pope to Tonson. June 7, 1732.

It rendered the outside of this religion pompous and showish: and this was enough to raise and to maintain a respect and veneration for it in the minds of the vulgar.
Bolingbroke. On Human Reason, § 6.

In some disorders, it is no more possible for men to hinder wicked thoughts from taking possession of their minds, or blasphemous words from coming out of their mouths, than to hinder any other distemper, (for plainly this is one) which may attack any other part of them, from shewing itself by its common effects.—Secker, vol. i. Ser. 9.

But the outward act being a matter of great form and punctuality, and sometimes expence too, they easily persuaded themselves of what they had a great mind to believe, that a scrupulous performance of such troublesome and showish duties would certainly be sufficient, whatever their inward dispositions and common behaviour might be.
Id. vol. i. Ser. 15.

Countries which contribute neither revenue nor military force towards the support of the empire, cannot be considered as provinces. They may, perhaps, be considered as appendages, as a sort of splendid and showy equipage of the empire.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 3.

The girl after some entreaty complied, and sat down on the other side of him; he loaded her with beads, and every showy trifle that would please her.
Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 8.

He was conducted all over the ship, every part of which he viewed with great attention. On this occasion Otoo was the principal show-man.—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 12.

SHOWER, n. } A. S. Scar, scyr; Dut.
SHO'WER, v. } Scheure; Ger. Schur; Sw.
SHO'WERLESS. } Shur. Junius, Skinner, and SHO'WERY. } Wachter agree, that a shower consists of drops of water broken from the clouds; Tooke,—that it is the past. part. of Scyr-an;
and means,—

"(Clouds) broken, divided, separated;" and consequently, falling in drops; (met.) any thing falling, like rain, or hail, or snow from the clouds.

After sharpest shoures quath Pees. most sheene is the
sonne.
Piers Plouhman, p. 364.

Riche men routen tho. and in here reste were Tho hit shon to the shephurdes. a shewere of blisse.
Id. p. 234.

And this was on the sixte morwe of May,
Which May had peynted with his softe shoures
This gardin ful of leues and of floures.
Chaucer. The Frankeleines Tale, v. 11,216.

His month assigned eke also
Is Aueril, whiche of shoures Ministreth wey vnto the floures.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

As when a windy tempest bloweth hie,
That nothing may withstand his stormy shoure,
The cloudes, as thinges affrayd, before him flye;
But, all so soone as his outrageous poure
Is layd, they fiercely then begin to shoure.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 8.

Soone as the gates were open to them set,
They pressed forward, entraunce to have made:
But in the middle way they were ymet
With a sharpe shoure of arrowes, which them stay'd
And better bad advise.
Id. Ib. b. v. c. 4.

He saw them in thir forms of battle rang'd,
How quick they wheel'd, and flying behind them shot
Sharp sleet of arrowy shower against the face
Of thir pursuers, and overcame by flight.
Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iii.

The showre-dissoluer answerd: What a speech
Hath past thy palate, O thou great in reach
Of wrackfull empire.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xiii.

It is reported, that if a hilly-field, where the stubble is standing, be set on fire, in the shoury season, it will put forth great store of mushromes.
Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 6.

And long-attending Hymen, from above,
Shower'd on the bed the whole Idalian grove.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

With joy they saw the growing empire rise,
And showers of wealth descending from the skies.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

Scarce in a showerless day the heavens indulge
Our melting clime; except the baleful east
Withers the tender spring, and sourly checks
The fancy of the year.
Armstrong. Art of preserving Health, b. i.

The convex glass, which in that opening glows,
Mid circling rays a pictur'd Saviour shows!
Bright it collects the beams, which trembling all,
Back from the God, a showery radiance fall.
Savage. The Wanderer, c. 2.

SHRAG. "The ends of sticks—of the birchen twigs in a broom, or of whins or furze." "Yar brum owt ta ha' fine shrags." This was said to a man about to dress recently thrashed barley for market. The clipping of live fences. (Moor, Suffolk Words.) It is probably scrag: any thing rough, sharp, craggy, prickly.

SHREAD, n. } A. S. Screade, scread-an.
SHREAD, v. } Skinner suggests from the SHREDDING, n. } verb To Shear. And Tooke forms it from the past part. of that verb,—Shered, shred,—

A cut, or piece cut, separated or severed, broken or torn; a section or segment, a fragment.

Hewe downe this tree, and let it fall.
The leues lette defoule in hast,
And do the frute destroie and wast,
And let of shreden euery branche,
But at rote he let it stanche.
Gower. Con. A. b. i.

"Then since," quoth she, "the terme of each man's life
For nought may lessened nor enlarged bee;
Graunt this; that when ye shred with fatall knife
His line, which is the eldest of the three,
Which is of them the shortest, as I see,
Eftsoones his life may passe into the next."
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 2.

Monc. He is very brave.
Lis. The shreds of what he steals from us, believe it Makes him a mighty man.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Maid in the Mill, Act iii. sc. 1.

In lopping and shredding of trees, when the cut standeth open, there would be no hollow places made like cups, for feare that water should stand therein.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 23.

It [our Common Prayer] they say hath a number of short cuts or shreds, which may be better called wishes than prayers.—Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. v. § 27.

And yet [they] contentedly suffer their minds to appear abroad in a pie-bald livery of coarse patches, and borrowed shreds, such as it has pleased chance, or their country-taylor, (I mean the common opinion of those they have conversed with) to clothe them in.
Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. iv. c. 20.

In some of the richest and best endowed universities, the tutors content themselves with teaching a few unconnected shreds and parcels of this corrupted course.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 1.

SHREW, or } Wachter and Skinner agree
SCHREW, n. } that a shrew is—mulier cla-SCHREW, adj. } mamosa, from Ger. Schreien, SCHREW, v. } to cry out; Skinner adds—
SCHRE'WED, or } or rather from Beschreyen, SHREWD. } to diffame, to calumniate.
SHRE'WDLY. } Schrewd, the adj. he derives SHRE'WNESS. } either from Ger. Beshreyen, SHRE'WISH } to fascinate, q. d. bewitched,
SHRE'WISHLI. } or from the Lat. Crudus, q. d.
SHRE'WISNESS. } Crudelis. A shrew (see the instances quoted below from R. Gloucester, Gower, &c.) was male as well as female; and in Chaucer's translation from Boethius, Pessimis, improbi, are interpreted shrews. Tooke (who evidently considers A.S. Syr-wian, suri-gan, sorghian, to be the same word differently written and applied)—thinks Syrwed, syrewed, the past part. of Syrwan, syrewan, to vex, to molest, to cause mischief to, is our modern shrewed or shrewd; and that Syrwe, syrewe, is our modern shrewe or shrew, and means—

“One who vexes or molests;”—a vexatious, mischievous, vicious, evil, person, and (according to modern usage)—a woman who vexes, or molests, annoys, aggrieves—with her tongue or temper.

Shrewed or shrewd,—vexed, troubled, provoked, and, consequentially, angry, ill-tempered; bitter, or biting, cutting; and hence, keen, cunning, penetrating, sagacious.

Mr. Tyrwhitt explains the verb in Chaucer, To Curse, i. e. to imprecate upon us—trouble, vexation, sorrow, (qv.)

A sone he hadde schrewe y now, Maxencius to name,
Hym me made emperour, mony mon to schame.
He wes, as wel as ys fader, gret schrewe y now.

R. Gloucester, p. 84.

The Saxones were tho euercome, ac heo ne leuede get nogt Heore schrewe dede.—Id. p. 164.

In Wales is a schreward to werre risen on,
For he wend Sir Edward ouer the se wer gon.

R. Brunne, p. 262.

—And *shrewe*de myn emcristyne Agens the consail of Crist. Piers Plouhman, p. 91.

Ech valley schal be fulfild and every hil and litil hil shal be maad low; and schrewe [prava] thingis schulen be into dressid thingis [directa]; and scharpe thingis into pleyne weyes.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 3.

Also with othre wordis ful manye he witnesside to hem and monestide hem and seide, be ghe saued fro this schrewid generacioun, [prava].—Id. Dedis, c. 2.

“Nay then,” quod she, “I shrewe us bothe two.
For though that I be olde, foule, and pore,
I n’olde for all the metal ne the ore,
That under erthe is grave, or lith above,
But if thy wif I were and eke thy love.”

Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6644.

O nice proude cherl, I shrewe his face.

Id. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 7809.

And yet was he to me the moste shrew,
That fele I on my ribbes all by rew,
And ever shal, unto min ending day.

Id. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 6017.

I have a wif, though that she poure be;
But of hire tonge a labbing shrewe is she.

Id. The Squires Prologue, v. 10,301.

And dignitees, that be yeuen to shreude [improbis] folke, not onely ne maketh hem not digne; but sheweth rather all openly, that thei been vnworthy and ingine.

Id. Boecius, b. ii.

And therefore sayth Senek, that ‘a man shal never venge shreuednesse by shrewednesse.’—Id. The Tale of Melibeus.

And the prophete saith: ‘Flee shrewednesse and do goodnesse; seke pees and folwe it, in as muchel as in thee is.’

Id. Ib.

He might his tyrannie shewe

And toke to his counseile a shrewe,

Whom to his father forth he sent.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

He was a *shrewe*d chamberleyn,

So as to begyle a worthy quene,

And that on hym was after sene.

Id. Ib. b. vi.

For it is certayne yt spirits of the heyre may vse their shreudnes in theym that be of mysbylde & vse euyl dedys;
for grace is withdrawn from such maner of men, wherfore
the spirits haue the more power to hurte and greue them.

Pabyan. Chronycle, c. 31.

If too wary, then she’ll shrew the,
If too lavish, she’ll undo thee.

Cotton. The Joys of Marriage, p. 707.

Loren. In such a night
Did pretty Jessica (like a little shrow)
Slander her loue, and he forgave it her.

Shakespeare. Merchant of Venice, Act v. sc. 1.

The fine furr’d ermin, martern and the cat
That voideth civet, there together sat
By the shrewd monkey, babian, and the ape.

Drayton. Noah’s Flood.

Her onely fault, and that is faults enough,
Is, that she is intollerable curst,

And *shrow*d, and froward.

Shakespeare. Taming of the Shrew, Act i. sc. 3.

Her elder sister is so curst and *shrew*d,
That til the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your loue must liue a maide at home.

Id. Ib. Act i. sc. 1.

Shat. Of all the plots the king hath laid for me
This was the shrewdest, ‘tis my life they seek
And they shall have it: if I should refuse
To accept the challenge in the king’s behalfe,
They have some cause to take away my life,
And if I do accept it, who can tell,
But I may fall by doubtful chance of war?
‘Twas *shrew*d, but I must take the least of evils.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Noble Gentleman, Act v. sc. 1.

But it is shreudly probable, that fluid perceptive matter will not fail to find the colours tinctured from one another in some measure in the whole object here also.

More. Immortality of the Soul, pt. iii. b. ii. c. 2.

—Her Garboiles [Caesar],
Made out of her impatience,—which not wanted
Shrodenesse of policie to,—I greeuing grant,
Did you too much disquiet.

Shakespeare. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act ii. sc. 2.

E. Antif. Good signior Angelo you must excuse vs all,
My wife is shrewish when I keepe no houres.

Id. Comedie of Errors, Act iii. sc. 1.

He is verie well favour’d, and he speakes verie shrewishly;
one would thinke his mothers milke were scarce out of him.

Id. Twelfth Night, Act i. sc. 5.

Hel. I pray you though you mocke me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me; I was neuer curst;
I haue no gift at all in shrewishnesse.

Id. Midsummer Night’s Dreame, Act iii. sc. 2.

Some of the observers on board the Centurion shreudly suspected, from the appearance of his armour, that instead of steel, it was composed only of a particular kind of glittering paper.—Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 10.

The aforesaid author observes, very shreudly, that having no certain ideas of the terms of the proposition, it is to him a mystery.—Waterland. Works, vol. i. p. 219.

Professing to despise the ill opinion of mankind creates a shreud suspicion, that we have deserved it.

Secker, vol. iii. Ser. 15.

SHRIEK, v. } Either (says Skinner) from SHRIEK, n. } the Dan. Skriger, clamo, or SHRIE’KER. } from the Dut. Schrecken, to SHRIE’KING, n. } tremble, Schriek, tremour; or SHRIGHT. } from the Ger. Schreyen, to cry.

schrecken, to terrify, schreck, terror; all of them
(he adds) formed from the sound: they (and the Sw. Shreka) appear all the same word, applied to the cry, and the feeling of fear or terror it causes.
See SCREECH, and SCREAM.

And yet againward shried euery nonne,
The pange of loue so straineth them to crie.

Chaucer. The Court of Loue.

But soverainly dame Pertelote shright,
Ful louder than did Hasdruballes wif,
Whan that hire husband hadde ylost his lif.

Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,368.

But the palace within confounded was
With wayling, and with ruful shrikes and cryes.

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

The pitteous mayden, carefull, comfortlesse,
Does throw out shrilling shrikes, and shrieking cryes
(The last vaine helpe of wemens grete distresse)
And with loud plaintes importuneth the skyes.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 6.

Till that, by fortune passing all foresight,
A salvage man, which in those woods did wonne,
Drawne with that ladies loud and piteous shright.

Id. Ib. b. vi. c. 4.

There dwells envy and confusion, disorder and sad remembrances, perpetual woes and continual shriekings, uneasiness, and all the evils of the soul.

Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 3.

She cries, she shrieks; the fierce insulting foe
Relentless mock her violence of woe:
To chains condemn’d, as wildly she deplores:
A widow, and a slave on foreign shores.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. viii.

When, lo! fierce Scylla stoop’d to seize her prey,
Stretch’d her dire jaws, and sweet six men away;
Chiefs of renown! loud-echoing shrieks arise:
I turn and view them quivering in the skies.

Id. Ib. b. xi.

—Mercy! what alarm!
Dare aught on earth that sovereign beauty harm?
Again—the shrieking charmers—how they rend
The gentle air—the shriekers lack a friend.

Crabbe. Tales of the Hall, b. vii.

SHRIEVE. See SHERIFF.

SHRIFT. See SHRIVE.

SHRILL, adj. } Shrill, is plainly from the SHRILL, v. } same source as Scream, or SHRI’LLY. } Shriek; Shriekel, or Shringle, SHRI’LNESS. } shrill; it was anciently also written Shirle. G. Douglas renders vociferans “with shirllis and with shrekis.” It is applied to a sound that is—

Harsh, grating; piercing harshly upon the ear.

Than blew the trumpes fulle loud & fully schille.

R. Brunne, p. 30.

Certes he Jakke Straw, and his mefnie

Ne maden never shoutes half so shrille.

Chaucer. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 1540.

The armonye of them that pype in recorders, flutes, and dromes, and the shirle showte of tropettes waites and shames, shall no more be heard in the delyght of men.

Bale. Image, pt. iii.

As he fully shrilly shrigh.—Turbervile. To his Friend.

These parts first dispose the voice to hoarseness or shrillness.—Smith. On Old Age.

At last they heard a horne that shrilled cleare

Throughout the wood that echoed againe,

And made the Forrest ring, as it would rive in twaine.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 3.

No tree, whose branches did not bravely spring;

No branch, whereon a fine bird did not sitt,

No bird, but did her shrill notes sweetely sing;

No song, but did containe a lovely ditt.—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 6.

Being commonly and most properlie taken in the worse part, and signifieth shrillie, or noise fullie, squeaking.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. ii. Comment.

The different tones melodiously combin’d,

Temper’d with art, in sweet confusion join’d;

The soft, the strong, the clear, the shrill, the deep,

Would sometimes soar aloft, and sometimes creep.

Parnell. On the Death of Mr. Viner.

Host against host with shadowy squadrons drew,

The sounding darts in iron tempests flew,

Victors and vanquish’d join promiscuous cries,

And shrilling shouts and dying groans arise.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. iv.

Her golden trump the goddess sounded thrice,

Whose shrilling clang reach’d heaven’s extremest sphere.

J. Philips. Cerealia.

Round the rough castle shrilly sung

The whirling blast, and wildly flung

On each tall rampart’s thundering side

The surges of the tumbling tide.

Warton. The Grave of King Arthur.

SHRIMP. } In A.S. Scrimin-an, is arescere, SHRI’MPED. } to dry, to wither, and consequentially, to contract. Skinner doubts whether the first be so called from the Ger. Schrump, a wrinkle, from the wrinkles on the back. Junius thinks—from the Ger. Krimpen, to crimp or cramp, to draw together, because when boiled it draws into a gibbous shape, (sc.) its lower half under its upper.
It is applied (met.) to—

Any thing diminutive, contracted in its growth.

Scrimp, as adj. and v. are common words in Scottish writers. See Jamieson.

Religion hath take up all the corn

Of treading, and we borel men ben shrimpes;

Of feble trees ther comen wretched impes.

Chaucer. The Monkes Prologue, v. 13,962.

The periwinckle, prawn, the cockle, and the shrimp.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 25.

Beyond this Lagune there is another large one, wherein is an island and town, named Haniago; its inhabitants most fishermen, whose chief employment is to take shrimps.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1676.

Such things as these go for wit, so long as they continue in Latin; but what dismally shrimped things would they appear, if turned into English.

Echard. Grounds of the Cont. of the Clergy, p. 44.

Very true, says I, and I wondred how such a shrimp as you could dragg about such a great carcass as mine.

Search. Light of Nature, pt. ii. c. 23.

SHRINE, n. } See ENSHRINE. Dut. Schryn; SHRINE, v. } Ger. Scrain; Sw. Skryn; Fr.
Escrine; It. Scrigno; Sp. Escrino; Lat. Scri-nium, a basket or chest, in which books, writings, or other secret things were deposited. We apply the word to—

That which contains or holds, in which is placed or deposited—any thing consecrated, sacred, holy, adored, loved.

In Normandye he dyde, & thulke ger al so,

Seln Egwine at Euesham in srine was verst ido.

R. Gloucester, p. 478.

Now lies he in schryne in golde that is rede.

R. Brunne, p. 23.

"Forsooth," (quod she) a tender "creature
Is shrined there, and Pity is her name,
She saw an egle wreke him on a fle,
And pluck his wing, and eke him in his game,
And tender herte of that hath made her die."
Chaucer. The Court of Loue.

But made her subtilt werkmen make a shrine
Of all the rubies and the stones fine
In all Egypt that she coulede espie,
And put full the shrine of spicerie,
And let the corse enbaume, and forth she fette
This dead corse, and in the shrine it shette.
Id. The Legends of Cleopatras.

And after toke with hym y^e bodye of that blessyd man [seynt Hyllary] and causyd it to be had into the monastery of seynt Denys, and there shrynyd hym.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 32.

The spiritualtie all that ceason preached the Pope mightly, built abbayes for recreation and quyettes, shryning them alway for saintes.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 351.

It falls me here to write of chastity,
That fayrest vertue, far above the rest:
For which what needes me fetch from faery
Forreine ensamples it to have exprest?
Sith it is shrined in my soveraynes brest.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. Intro.

Poore Dolon's spoiles Vlysses had, who shrin'd them on his sterne,
As trophies vow'd to her that sent the good-aboding Herne.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. x.

Whoever by consulting at thy shrine
Return'd the wiser, or the more instruct
To flie or follow what concern'd him most,
And run not sooner to his fatal snare?
For God hath justly giv'n the nations up To thy delusions.—Milton. Paradise Regained, b. i.

He went not with the crowd to see a shrine;
But fed us, by the way, with food divine.
Dryden. The Character of a good Parson.

SHRINK, v. Dut. Schrinken; Ger. Schrencken; A. S. Scrinc-an, SHRINK, n. arescere, to dry, to wither.
SHRINKER, n. To wither; to diminish, to SHRINKING, n. lessen, to contract, to draw into a smaller compass, to withdraw, to retreat (from fear, dislike, &c.)

For shronke with heat, the ladies eke to brent,
That they ne wist where they hem might bestow,
The knights swett for lack of shade nie shent.
Chaucer. The Flower and the Leaf.

The stature of her, was of doutous judgement, for some-tyme she constrained and shronke her seluen, like to the common measure of menne: and sometyme it semed, that she touched the Heauen, with the hight of her hedde.
Id. Boecius, b. i.

He lookt askew with his mistrustfull eyes,
And nyceyly trode, as thornes lay in his way,
Or that the flore to shrinke he did avyse;
And on a broken reed he still did stay
His feeble steps, which shrink when hard thereon he lay.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 12.

But she, now weighing the decayed plight
And shrunken synewes of her chosen knight
Would not a while her forward course pursew.
Id. Ib. b. i. c. 9.

Whereas the Englishmen should haue kept their ground and defended them, they began to shrinke.
Holinshed. Historie of Scotland, an. 834.

Return, Alpheus, the dread voice is past,
That shrunk thy streams.
Milton. Lycidas.

Which public death (receiv'd with such a chear,
As not a sigh, a look, a shrink bewrays
The least felt touch of a degenerate fear)
Gave life to envy, to his courage praise.
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. i.

We are no cowardly shrinkers,
But true Englishmen bred;
We'll play our parts, like valiant hearts,
And never fly for dread.
Old Sea Song. Neptune's Raging Fury.

It is given very well in case of contractions and shrinking of sinews.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 23.

We all have sinn'd, and thou hast laid us low,
As humble earth from whence at first we came:
Like flying shades before the clouds we show,
And shrink like parchment in consuming flame.
Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

It was the same all along, we having purposely forbore to take off the bladder, whose regular intumescencies and shrinkings sufficiently manifested, that the vessel, whereof it was a part, did not leak.—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 381.

As to ancient Troy
Was that Palladian image sent from heav'n,
Be thou to Chalcis. At thy presence known Pale Demonax will shrink.—Glover. The Athenaid, b. xvi.

SHRIVE, v. Shrift, is shrived, shriv'd, SHRIVER, n. shrift. Sw. Skrifta, skrift; which SHRIVING, n. (Ihre thinks) they received SHROVING, n. from the early English preachers SHRIFT. of the gospel. The word is common in the A. S. ecclesiastical writing, Scrif- an, to hear confessions (says Somner) and enjoyne penance. Scrift-boc, a confessional. Ihre adopts the derivation from the Lat. Scrib-ere, to write, because the penance required was given in writing:

Skinner also from scrib-ere, because the names of those confessing were written down. Neither of these reasons have introduced the word into the Italian or French. Lye quotes three instances from A. S. version of Boethius, where the Lat.
Curare is rendered scif-an: and to shrive trees, (Somner tells us,) is to prune them; putare, amputare, resecare. To shrive is by usage—

"To hear confessions and enjoyne penance."
A necessary portion of the duty of those who had the cure of souls.

Shrove-tide,—the tide or time when people are shrived or shriven.

Edward God bisouht, that it suld be forgyuen, & amendid with penance, & therof clene be scryuen.
R. Brunne, p. 65.

And oris confessio. that cometh of shrifte of mouthe.
Piers Plouhman, p. 261.

A good Fryday ich fynde, a felon was ysavede
That unlawfulleche hadde ylyved. al hus lyf tyme
And for he by knew on the crois. and to Crist shrove hym.
Id. p. 197.

Now ayenst the shame that a man hath to shrive him,
and namely these hypocrites, that wold be holden so parfit, that they have no nede to shrive hem, ayenst that shame shuld a man thinke, that by way of reson, he that hath not ben ashamed to do foule thinges, certes him ought not be ashamed to do faire thinges, and that is confessions.
Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

"Nay," quod the sike man, "by Seint Simon
I have been shriven this day of my curat;
I have him told al holly min estat."
Id. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 7678.

For understand wel, that after the time that a man hath defouled his baptisme by sinne, if he wol come to salvation, ther is non other way but by penance, and shrifte, and satisfaction.—Id. The Persones Tale.

Stomak ne conscience know I non;
I shrew thise shrifte-faders everich on.
Id. The Freres Tale, v. 7023.

— And ouer this
Of pride, if there ought elles is Wherof that I me shrive shall,
What thyng it is inspeciall
My father asketh I you praie.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

For what a man shall axe or seine Touchend of shrifte, it mote be pleine
It nedeth nought to make it queint.
For trouth his wordes wol not peint.
Id. Ib.

Shrift in the eare is verely a worke of Sathan, and that the falsest that euer was wrought, and that most hath de-uoured the fayth.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 147.

But afterwards she gan him soft to shrive,
And wooe with fair entreatie, to disclose
Which of the nymphes his heart so sore did mieve.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 12.

Friar. O fearful! if thou wilt not, give me leave
To shrive her; lest she should die unabsolv'd.
Ford. 'Tis Pity She's a Whore, Act ii. sc. 5.

Their diriges, their trentals, and their shrifts,
Their memories, their singings, and their gifts.
Spenser. Mother Hubbard's Tale.

Nur. See where she comes from shrift
With merrie looke.
Shakespeare. Romeo & Juliet, Act iv. sc. 2.

— For he fears
His uncle else, if he should know the drift,
Will hinder all, and call his cuz to shrift.
Ford. 'Tis Pity She's a Whore, Act iii. sc. 5.

How saist thou (friend) have I not well discourst
Upon this common place, though plaine, not wourst,
Better a short tale than a bad long shriving.
Spenser. Mother Hubbard's Tale.

Rich. The ghostly father now hath done his shrift.
Clar. When hee was made a shriner 'twas for shift.
Shakespeare. 1 Pt. Hen. VI. Act iii. sc. 2.

Wife. Servant, your counsel's excellent good,
And shall be follow'd, 'twill be rarely strange
To see him stated thus, as though he went
A shrouing through the city, or intended
To set up some new wake.
Baum. & Fletch. The Noble Gentleman, Act iii. sc. 1.

Eating, drinking, merry-making,—what else, I beseech you, was the whole life of this miserable man here, but in a manner a perpetual shroving?

Hale. Sermon on Luke xvi. 25. (ed. 1683), p. 4.
Unlesse some base hedge-creeping collybist
Scatters his refuse scraps on whom he list
For Easter gloves, or for a shrove-tide hen,
Which bought to give, he takes to sell again.
Bp. Hall, b. iv. Sat. 5.

SHRIVEL, v. Skinner says, either from the Dut. Schrimpelen, Ger. Schrumpelen, to draw into wrinkles; or from the Lat. Scribillare. It is perhaps a diminutive from shrive, which (Somner says) is to prune; and consequentially, to lessen, to diminish.

To draw up together, to contract, (into wrinkles.)

We need not bemoan the shrivell'd condition of the deceased, as if they were stript almost of all substance corporeal, and were too thinly clad to enjoy themselves as to any object of sense.—More. Immortality of the Soul, b. iii. c. 3.

Still at her shrivell'd breasts they hung, whene'er mankind
she curst,
And with these foster-brethren was our monster nurs'd.
Otway. The Poet's Complaint of his Muse.

He calls for Famine, and the meagre fiend
Blows mildew from between his shrivell'd lips,
And taints the golden ear.
Couper. The Task, b. ii.

SHROWD, n. See ENSHROWD. A. S.
SHROWD, v. Scrud, vestitus, clothed, from SHRO'WDY. Scrydan, vestere, to clothe, SHRO'WDLESS. (Skinner.) This past part.

was formerly a general term for any kind of covering, (see the quotation from Pennant,) or clothing, (Tooke,) though now commonly applied only to—

That with which the dead are clothed, and (shrowds) with which the masts of a ship are dressed or clothed.

"I shope me into a shroud as I a schepeherd were;"—Piers Plouhman as quoted by Tooke: but see the quotation in v. SHRUB.

And the erth waxeth proud withall,
For swote dewes that on it fall,
And the poore estate forget,
In which that winter had it set:
And then become the ground so proude,
That it wol have a new shroude,
And maketh so queint his robe and faire,
That it had hewes an hundred paire,
Of grasse and floures.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

— I had routhe, and eke pite,
And gan anone, so softly as I coude,
Among the bushes prively me to shroude.
Id. The Complaint of the Black Knight.

The princes were even compelled by the hail, that the pride of the wind blew into their faces, to seek some shrouding place.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

There I found my sword among some of the shrowds, wishing, I must confess, if I died, to be found with that in my hand.—Id. Ib. b. i.

And in the midst thereof a silver seat,
With a thick arber goodly over-dight,
In which she often usd from open heat
Herselfe to shroud, and pleasures to entreat.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

The towne then shew me; glue my nakednes
Some shroud to shelter it, if to these seas,
Linnen or woollen, you haue brought to clense.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. vi.

If your stray attendance be yet lodg'd
Within these shroudie limits.
Milton. MS. of Comus, Trinity College, Cambridge.

As some fair tulip, by a storm oppress,
Shrinks up, and folds its silken arms to rest;
And, bending to the blast, all pale and dead,
Hears from within, the wind sing round its head:
So, shrowded up, your beauty disappears.
Dryden. Conquest of Granada, Act v.

There is a small island called Santa Clara, which lies east and west; it is of an indifferent length, and it appears like a dead man stretched out in a shroud.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1684.

Mr. Hicks, who was commanding officer on board, took it into his head to punish him, by giving him twelve lashes with a cat-o-nine-tails; and accordingly ordered him to be taken to the gang-way, and tied up to the shrouds.
Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 4.

The far greater part stood exposed [at Paul's Cross] in the open air: for which reason the preacher went, in very bad weather, to a place called the shrouds; a covered space on the side of the church, to protect the congregation in inclement seasons.—Pennant. London, p. 512.

To where a mangled corse
Expos'd without remorse
Lies shroudless, unentomb'd, he points the away—
Points to the prowling wolf exultant o'er his prey.
Dodsley. Melpomene.

SHRUB. } A. S. Scrobbe, scrybe.
SHRUBBED. } Bushy trees of low growth
SHRUBBY. } are called shrubs, and the word SHRUBBERY. } may have been originally applied to the bushes which sprung up in grounds where the trees have been scrubbed up.

In a some seyson. whan softe was the sonne
Y shop into shrobbis.
Piers Plouhman, p. 1.

Neere at hand were growing diuers shrubbed trees, the boughes whereof (for the greater reuerence and exornation of the present solemnitie) he cutting and sluing downe, perceined blood in great abundance issuing from the broken branches.—Warner. Albion's England, b. ii.

Though they be well shrubbed and shred, yet they begin even now before the spring to bud, and hope again in time to florish as the green bay-tree.
Anderson. Expos. of Benedictus, (1573,) fol. 64.

Farre in the Forrest, by a hollow glade
Covered with mossie shrubs, which spreading brode
Did underneath them make a gloomy shade,
Where foot of living creature never trode,
Ne scarce wyld beasts durst come, there was this wight's abode.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 4.

They [rushes] cannot justly be reckoned in the ranke either of shrubs, or brier-bushes and brambles, ne yet of tall plants growing up with stems and stalkes.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvi. c. 37.

First march the heavy mules, securely slow,
O'er hills, o'er dales, o'er crags, o'er rocks they go:
Jumping, high o'er the shrubs of the rough ground,
Rattle the clattering cars, and the shockt axles bound.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xxiii.

The land about it is dry and sandy, bearing only a few shrubby trees.—Dampier. Voyages, c. 6. p. 135.

They lop off the small branches of the large trees, dig under the roots, and there burn the branches and small shrubs and plants which they root up.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 9.

Enter a modern shrubbery formed of a selection of the most agreeable flowering shrubs, and consider, whether there is any thing in the garden of Alcinoüs, in the fields of Elysium, in Milton's Paradise, to be compared with the intermixture of the lilac, the syringa, the laburnum, the double-blossomed cherry, peach, and almond.
Knox. Ess. No. 115.

These are their bread, the only bread they know:
These, and their willing slave the deer that crops
The shrubby herbage on their meagre hills.
Armstrong. The Art of preserving Health.

SHRUB. By an easy corruption of y to h,
Syrop becomes Shrop, shrup, shrub, (Tooke.)

SHRUG, v. } Wachter thinks—from the SHRUG, n. } same source as Shreek, (qv.)
SHRUGGING, n. } which is also anciently written Shright, very nearly approaching to Holland's Shrigged. It is applied to—

A motion or action of the shoulders, by drawing or raising them towards the ears: (in expression of different feelings.)

The touch of the cold water made a pretty kind of a shrugging come over her body, like the twinkling of the fairest among the fixed stars.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Atticus is of opinion, That the shadow of elmes is one of the thickest and most hurtfull: neither doe I make any doubt thereof, if they be let to spread into great armes and boughs at libertie: marie if the branches thereof, or of any tree within- forth be shrugged, (constrictæ) I thinke that the shade will doe no harme at all.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 12.

Yet though he cannot skip forth now to greet
Every fine silken painted fool we meet,
He them to him with amorous smiles allures,
And greins, smacks, shrugs, and such an itch endures,
As pringles or school-boys, which do know
Of some gay sport abroad, yet dare not go.—Donne, Sat. 2.

Upon his being told that they were in the Centurion four hundred firelocks, and between three and four hundred barrels of powder, he shrugged up his shoulders, and seemed to be terrified with the bare recital, saying, that no ships ever came into Canton river armed in that manner.
Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 9.

'Sir Smug,' he cries, (for lowest at the board,
Just made fifth chaplain of his patron lord,
His shoulders witnessing by many a shrug
How much his feelings suffer'd, sat Sir Smug.)
Cowper. Hope.

SHU'DDER, v. } Dut. Schudden, schudder; Ger. Schutten, schuttern, qua-SHU'DDER, n. } tere, tremere. Plainly enough (says Skinner), from the It. Scudtere, Lat. Excudere, to shake off.
Wachter,—from Quatere.
To quake, to shake, to tremble, (with fear, horror.)

Alas they make me shoder.
Skelton. Colin Clout's come home again.

Saue howlings out and shuddering feare
Came nought to eare or sight,
With grievous grones of dying ghosts.
Warner. Albion's England, b. i. c. 6.

— I know you'll sweare, terribly sweare
Into strong shudders, and to heauenly agues
Th' immortal gods that heare you.
Shakespeare. Timon of Athens, Act iv. sc. 3.

The fright was general; but the female band
(A helpless train) in more confusion stand:
With horroir shuddering, on a heap they run,
Sick at the sight of hateful justice done.
Dryden. Theodore & Honoria.

Who see dire spectres through the gloomy air
In threatening forms advance, and shuddering hear
The groan of wandering ghosts, and yellings of despair.
Blackmore. Creation, b. iii.

But see Jerne's moors and hideous bogs,
Immeasurable tract. The traveller
Slow tries his mazy step on th' yielding tuft, Shuddering with fear.
Dyer. Fleece, b. ii.

SHUFFLE, v. } The dim. of shove. A. S.
SHUFFLE, n. } Scuf-ian, to shove, to push.
SHUFFLER. } See SCUFFLE.
SHUFFLING, n. } To shove, or push (sc. the SHUFFLINGLY. } feet,) to move at low short steps; to move at short distances; to move about, to and fro, disorderly, confusedly, irregularly; to move from, push out of the direct course, to evade;
to move or push together, irregularly, hastily, (sc.
to escape notice or detection; and hence)—frau-dulently.

On a night when the lieutenant and he for their disport were plaiing at slidegrote or shooftboord, suddenlie commeth from the cardinal a mandatum to execute Kildare on the morrow.—Holinshed. Chronicles of Ireland, an. 1528.

Besides, as exiles ever from your homes,
You live perpetual in disturbancy;
Contending, thrusting, shuffling for your rooms
Of eare or honour, with impatiency.
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. viii.

A shoeless soldier there a man might meet
Leading his monsieur by the arms fast bound;
Another his had shackled by the feet,
Who like a cripple shuffled on the ground.
Drayton. The Battle of Agincourt.

The use of this perverse hypothesis is only to shuffle off all arguments that are drawn from appaitions.
More. Immortality of the Soul, b. i. c. 13.

The voice of conscience can be no more heard in this continual tumult, then the vagient cries of the infant Jupiter, amidst the rude shuffles and dancings of the Cretick Corybantes, and the tinkling and clashing of their brazen targets.—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 18.

We shall be condemned for the evils that we have done, and shall then remember; God by his power wiping away the dust from the tables of our memory, and taking off the consideration and the voluntary neglect and rude shufflings of our cases of conscience.—Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 2.

A mere undistinguish'd chaos, where sense and reason, brute and man, are shuffled together without any order, like a confounded heap of ruins.
Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 2.

One may judge from hence, that Socinus's pretended reasons against the notion of remembrance were mere shuffle and pretence, carrying more of art and colouring in them, than of truth or sincerity.
Waterland. Works, vol. vii. p. 64.

We had fair weather, and a pretty smart gale of wind at east, for three or four days, and then it shifted to the S.W.
being rainy, but it soon came about again to the east, and blew a gentle gale; yet it often shuffled about to the S.E.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1686.

Eusebius plainly denies the Son to be εκ του μη οντος in the same sense that he affirms it of creatures; and therefore must deny his passing out of non-existence to existence, unless he were the greatest prevaricator and shuffler imaginable.—Waterland. Works, vol. iii. p. 150.

— For soon he sees
A tall black man skulk through the trees;
He knew him by his shuffling pace,
His thread-bare coat and hatchet face.
Somerville. The happy Disappointment.

Perhaps I may go shufflingly, for I was never before walk'd in trammels; yet I shall drudge and moil at constancy, till I have worn off the hitching in my pace.
Dryden. Spanish Friar, Act i.

The paralytic, who can hold her cards,
But cannot play them, borrows a friend's hand,
To deal and shuffle, to divide and sort
Her mingled suits and sequences.—Cowper. Task, b. i.

A provision of endless apparatus, a bustle of infinite inquiry and research, or even the mere mechanical labour of copying, may be employed, to evade and shuffle off real labour,—the real labour of thinking.—Reynolds, Dis. 12.

SHUN, v. } A. S. Scun-ian, ascunian, on- SHUNLESS. } scunian; to fly, fly from or avoid.
See ESCHEW.

To fly from, move out of the way, avoid; to evade.

Ech mein shoneth hies companye.—Piers Plouhman, p. 228.

Bot Henry David sonne, that his heyr suld be,
Contek for to schonne, to Steuen mad feaute.
R. Brunne, p. 111.

I will beware, and make a glasse
of thee whilst I haue breath,
To shunne the sluttish sinfull sect,
thy tipling and thy toys.
Turberville. Auns. to vile Counsell of Epicure.

But when they be debar'd the same which so they shunde before, They crie and call for Tysants [ptisan] then as soueraigne for their sore.
Id. Of the Affections of his Loue.

Disleall knight, whose coward corage chose
To wreake itselfe on beast all innocent,
And shund the marke at which it should be ment;
Therby thine armes seem strong, but manhood frayl.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 5.

— Alone he entred
The mortall gate of th' citie, which he painted
With shunlesse destinie; aydeslesse came off,
And with a sudden re-inforcement stricke
Corioles like a planet.
Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act ii. sc. 2.

It is not supposed, that we should have power always to resist, unless we before-hand do what is in our power to shun temptation.—Atterbury, vol. iii. Ser. 4.

SHUT, v. } Very variously written by SHUT, n. } our old authors. (See SHOOT.)
SHUTTING, n. } Dut. Schutten; Ger. Schutten; SHUTTER. } A. S. Scyt-an, to throw or cast.
SHUTTLE. } To cast or throw to, (sc) the door; to throw it close, to close it; to close in,
to inclose, to include; to exclude, to close against;
to close, to conclude.

To get shut of any thing,—to get it thrown or cast off or away, clear away; to get clear of, rid, or free.

Shuttle,—see SHUTTLE.

Jesus cam while the ghatils weren schit, and stood in the myddil and seide pees to ghous.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 20.

The same daye at night, which was the morow after the Saboth day, when the dores were shut, where ye dysciples were assembled together for feare of the Jewes, came Jesus and stode in the myddes, & said to the: peace be with you.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

And on a day befell, that in that houre,
Whan that his mete wont was to be brought,
The gailer shette the dores of the toure;
He hered it wel, but he spake right nought.
Chaucer. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 14, 733.

My windowes weren shit echone,
And through the glasse the sunne shone
Upon my bed with bright bemes.—Id. Dreame.

And if the dore be so shette,
That he be of his entre lette,
He will in at the wyndowe crepe.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

Syr Thomas More a litle before he was arrayned and condemned (in the yere of our lorde, 1535. and in the xxvii. yere of the raygn of kyng Henry the eight) being shit vp so close in prison in the tower that he had no penne nor inke, wrote with a cole a pistle in latine to maister Anthony Bonnyse.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1454.

And [he] suffered grief so to close his heart, that his breath failing him with a dreadful shutting of his eyes, he fell down at her bed side.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

Ban. — The king's a bed.
He hath beene in vnusual pleasure,
And sent forth great largesse to your offices.
This diamond he greetes your wife withall,
By the name of most kind hostesse,
And shut up in measurelesse content.
Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act ii. sc. 1.

The weaver said, Fie wench, yourselfe you wrong,
Thus to let slip the shuttle of your tong.

Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. i. s. 4.

Just. An honest weaver, and as good a workman, as e'er shot shuttle.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Coxcomb, Act v. sc. 1.

A thousand wayes he them could entertaine,
With all the thriftles games that may be found;
With mumming and with masking all around,
With dice, with cards, with balliards farre unfit,
With shuttelcocks, misseeming manlie wit.

Spenser. Mother Hubbard's Tale, p. 363.

— I us'd your name

And urg'd th' importance home; but had for answer,
That since the shut of evening none had seen him.

Dryden. Don Sebastian, Act iv. sc. 1.

And yet the wealthy will not brook delay,
But sweep above our heads, and make their way;
In lofty litters borne, and read and write,
Or sleep at ease: the shutters make it night.

Id. Juvenal, Sat. 5.

Indeed their success was very near doing honour to their Ave Marias; for, altering their course, in the night, and shutting up their windows to prevent any of their lights from being seen, they had some chance of escaping; but a small crevice in one of the shutters rendered all their invocations ineffectual.—Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 5.

Now, shepherds, clip your fleecy care;
Ye maids, your spinning-wheels prepare;
Ye weavers all your shuttles throw,
And bid broad-cloths and serges grow.

Gay. The Shepherd's Week, Past. 1.

If after all some headstrong hardy lout
Would disobey, though sure to be shut out,
Could he with reason murmur at his case,
Himself sole author of his own disgrace?—Cowper. Hope.

SHY, adj. } Dut. Schouwen; Ger. Schewen;
SHY, v. } Sw. Sky, to shun, to eschew, (qv.)
SHY'NESS. } To shy, is used in common speech, (of a horse,) as, He shies at a post,—starts away from.

Shy, adj. is applied, to one who shuns, avoids, evades, company or society; shuns or avoids to be seen: and thus, timid, diffident, bashful, retiring, reserved; one who shuns through fear of consequences, and thus, wary, cautious.

— Tis not impossible

But one, the wickedst caitiffe on the ground
May seem as shie, as graue, as just, as absolute—
As Angelo. Shakespeare. Meas. for Meas. Act v. sc. 1.

It can be no offence to the knowing and ingenious, that men have a shyness and jealousy against such truths as they have not been acquainted with.

More. Philosophical Writings, Pref. p. iii.

They are very shy, therefore it is hard to shoot them.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1683.

It abounds with goats, who, not being accustomed to be disturbed, were no ways shy or apprehensive of danger, till they had been frequently fired at.

Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 4.

To the account already given, I must add, that there are in all parts of this country a good number of Vicunnas or Peruvian sheep; but these, by reason of their shyness and swiftness, are killed with difficulty.—Id. Id. b. i. c. 6.

SIB, or } Goth. Sib, pax, Gasibyon, recon-SYB. } ciliari, (Junius.) A. S. Sib, syb, sybbe, which Somner explains—peace, quietness,
concord, agreement; kindred, alliance, affinity.
Sib-ian,—to make peace or pacify. Dut. Ghe- sibbe; Sw. Sif. "No more sib'd than sieve and riddle, that grew both in a wood together," (Ray, North Country Words; and see Jamieson, in v.
and Gossip. See also Sibrit, in Moor's Suffolk Words.)

Alle that were ogt ysyb Edmonde the Kyng.

Other in alyance of eny loue, to dethe he let brynge.
R. Gloucester, p. 315.

And ho is sybbe unto thuse sevene.

Piers Plouhman, p. 125.

— And to poverte hym weddeth

The wyche is sibbe to Cryst self. Id. p. 268.

And though so be that youre kinrede be more stedfast and siker than the kin of your adversaries, yet natheles yours kinrede is but a fer kinrede; they ben but litel sibbe to you, and the kin of youre enemies ben nigh sibbe to hem.
Chaucer. The Tale of Melibeus.

But of hem two a man maie lere,

What is to be so sibbe of bloode,
None wist of other howe it stode.—Gower. Con. A. b. viii.

But for to loke of tyme ago,
Howe lust of loue exceedeth lawe,
It ought for to be withdrawe.
For euery man it schulde drede,
And nameliche in his sibrede,
Which tourneth oft to vengeance.—Gower. Con. A. b. viii.

He wonneth in the land of Fayreee,
Yet is no fary borne, ne sib at all
To elves but sprong of seed terrestrial,
And whylome by false faries stolne away,
Whyles yet in infant cradle he did crall.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 3.

— Let

The bloud of mine that's sibbe to him, be suckt
From me with leeches, let them break and fall Off me with that corruption.

Beaum. & Fletch. Two Noble Kinsmen, Act i. sc. 1.

SIBILLANT. } Lat. Sibilans, pres. part. of SIBILA'TION. } Sibilare, to hiss, from Sibilus, which Quintilian has recorded to be one of the three words, (mugitus, sibilus, murmur), formed from the sound, (ονομασπεια, i. e. factio nominis), permitted to the Latin tongue.

Hissing.

All metals quenched in water, give a sibilation or hissing sound; (which hath an affinity with the letter Z,) notwithstanding the sound be created between the water or vapour, and the air.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 176.

It hath been tried, that a pipe a little moistened on the inside, but yet so as there be no drops left, maketh a more solemn sound, than if the pipe were dry: but yet with a sweet degree of sibilation or purling.—Id. Id. § 230.

It were easy to add a nasal letter to each of the other pair of hissing and sibilant letters.

Holder. Elements of Speech.

S has in English the same hissing sound as in other languages, and unhappily prevails in so many of our words, that it produces in the ear of a foreigner a continued sibila-
tion.—Johnson. English Dictionary, Let. S.

SIBYL. } Lat. Sybilla, q.d. σίου βουλη;
SIBYLLINE. } sios, Æol. for θεος; and βουλη, SIBYLLIST. } for βουλη. See Vossius, who is not satisfied with this, but has nothing better.

The pictures of the Sybils are very common, and for their prophecies of Christ in high esteem with Christians; described commonly with youthful faces, and in a defined number.—Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. v. c. 11.

The other extrem may be, in concluding the whole business of the sibylline oracles (as any ways relating to Christianity) to have been a mere cheat and figment; and that there never was any thing in those sibylline books, which were under the custody of the quindecimviri, that did in the least predict our Saviour Christ or the times of Christianity.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 282.

They did not all acknowledge the sibyl to have been a prophetess neither, since upon Celsus mentioning a sect of Christians called Sibyllists, Origen tells us, that these were such as using the sibylline testimonies, were called so in way of disgrace, by other Christians, who would not allow the sibyl to have been a prophetess.—Id. Id. p. 284.

The great agent in this affair is the sibyl; and, as a virgin, she sustains two principal and distinct parts; that of the inspired priestess, to pronounce the oracle; and that of Hierophant, to conduct the initiated through the whole celebration.—Warburton. Divine Legation, b. ii. s. 4.

SICAMORE, or } Fr. Sycomore; It. Sico-
SYCAMORE. } moro; Sp. Sicomoro; Lat.
Sicomorus; Gr. Συκομορεα, from συκη, a fig, and μορεα, morus. The large maple-tree, ridiculously so named, (says Skinner,) though there may be some resemblance in the leaves and trunk, to the Egyptian Sycomorus. See the quotation from Holland's Pliny.

There saw I Coll Tragetour

Upon a table of sicamour

Play an vncouth thing to tell,

I saw him carry a wind mill

Under a walnote shale.—Chaucer. House of Fame, b. iii.

The hegge also that yede in compas,

And closed in all the greene herbere,

With sicamour was set and eglatere.

Id. The Flower & the Leaf.

In Ægypt likewise there be found many trees which grow not elsewhere; and principally the sycomore, which thereupon is called the Ægyptian figtree. The tree for leafe, bignesse, and barke, is like unto the mulberie tree.

Holland. Plinie, b. xiii. c. 7.

SICCITY. Fr. Siccité; It. Siccità; Lat.
Siccitas, from siccus, dry. See DESICCATE.
Dryness.

They speak much of the elementary quality of siccity, or driennesse; and of things dessicating.—Bacon. Life & Death.

That which is concreted by exsiccation or expression of humidity, will be resolved by humectation, as earth, dirt, and clay; that which is coagulated by a fiery siccity, will suffer colliquation from an aqueous humidity, as salt and sugar.—Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. ii. c. 1.

SICK, adj. } Goth. Siuks; A. S. Seok; Dut.
SICK, v. } Sieck; Ger. Siech; Sw. Suik.
SICKEN, v. } Either from the Dut. Swaek, SICKISH. } weak, languid, or Swick-en, SICKLESS. } to shake, to agitate, (Skin-SICKLY, adj. } ner.) It may be from the SICKLY, ad. } A. S. Syc-an, to suck; and ap-SICKLIED. } plied, consequentially, from the SICKLINESS. } weakness, and ailing condition SICKNESS. } of sucking children, of sucklings.

Weak, ailing, diseased, disordered; nauseating,
(as if affected with a sick stomach,) disgusted.

That tyme at Westmynstir Harald sore seke lay.

R. Brunne, p. 53.

Now is Eilred our kyng fallen in sekeness.—Id. p. 46.

Sykenesse com eke among men, that aboute wyde,

Wat vor hongre, wat vor wo, men deyde in eche syde.

R. Gloucester, p. 378.

Ich wot wel quath Hunger. what sykenesse gow aileth

Ye have manged overe muche. that maketh gow be syke.
Piers Plouhman, p. 142.

Among ghou manye ben sike and feble, and manye slepen.

Wiclif. 1 Cor. c. 11.

Many are weake and sicke amög you, & many slepe.

Bible, 1551. Id.

He took oure infirmytees and bar oure sykenessis.

Wiclif. Matthew, c. 8.

He toke on him oure infyrmities, and bare oure sycknessis.

Bible, 1551. Id.

He gaf to hem power of unclene spiritis to cast hem out of men, and to heele every languor & sykenesse.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 10.

& gaue theym power ouer vnclene spirites, to cast them out, & to heale al maner of sicknesses, & al maner diseases.
Bible, 1551. Id.

Thanne he seide to the sykeman in palesye: rise up take thi bed and go into thin hous.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 9.

Then sayd he vnto the sycke of the palsye: aryse, take vp thy bed, and go home to thyne house.—Bible, 1551. Id.

— To Canterbury they wende,

The holy blisful martyr for to seke,

That hem hath holpen, when that they were seke.

Chaucer. Prolog. to Canterbury Tales, v. 18.

Who is so trewe and eke so ententif

To kepe him, sike and hole, as is his make?

Id. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9165.

— "Seinte Marie, how may it be,

That Damian entendeth not to me?

Is he ay sike? or how may this betide?"

His squiers, which that stoden ther beside,

Excused him, because of his siknesse,

Which letteth him to don his businesse:

Non other cause mighte make him tary.—Id. Id. v. 9773

And as these holy bokes seyn,

The houndes comen fro the halle,

Wher that this sicke man was falle,

And as he laie there for to deie

The woundes of his maladie

Thei licken, for to doone hym ease.

Gower. Con. A. b. vi.

Upon the foole vpon the wise

Sekenes and hele enter commune

Maie none eschewe that fortune.—Id. Id. b. ii.

I shewd to hym [my lord cardinall], at the same tyme, yr credence of soden sekeness of yor ervants, wich daily cōtinewes.—Lodge. Illust. Thomas Alen to the Earl of Shrewsbury, an. 1516.

In singing how he doth complaine, in sieping how he wakes:

To languish without ache, sicklesse for to consume.

Surrey. Desc. of the Fickle Affections, &c.

In happie helth when sicklesse limmes have lyfe.

Turbervile. A Promise.

Beseeching his wife with more careful eye to accompany his sickly daughter Philoclea.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

Clar. The riuer hath thrice flow'd, no ebbe betweene:

And the olde folke (Times doting Chronicles)

Say it did so, a little time before

That our great grand-sire Edward sick'd, and dy'de.

Shakespeare. 2 Pt. Hen. IV. Act iv. sc. 4.

SIC

Val. O flatter me: for Love delights in praises.
Pro. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills,
 And I must minister the like to you.
Shakespeare. The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act ii. sc. 4.

My Lord of Southampton and his eldest son sickned at the siege, and died at Berghen.—Howell, b. i. Let. 15.

For if such holy song
 Inwrap our fancy long,
 Time will run back, and fetch the age of gold;
 And speckled Vanity
 Will sicken soon and die,
 And leprous sin will melt from earthly mould.
Milton, Ode 14.

Our heires waxe sickishe of our health,
 Too long oure here abod,
 Meane while the neerer to our graues
 The further wee from God.
Warner. Albion's England, b. v.

Whom Calpeine saluting, as became,
 Besought of courtesie, in that his neede,
 For safe conducting of his sickely dame
 Through that same perillous foord with better heede,
 To take him up behinde upon his steed.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 3.

— And loue of vs,
 Who weare our health but sickly in his life,
 Which in his death were perfect.
Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act iii. sc. 1.

For. I do beseech your Maiestie impute his words
 To wayward sicknesse, and age in him.
Id. Rich. II. Act ii. sc. 1.

Thus conscience does make cowards of vs all,
 And thus the native hew of resolution
 Is sicklied o'er, with the pale cast of thought.
Id. Hamlet, Act iii. sc. 1.

P. Shut, shut the door. good John! fatigu'd I said,
 Tie up the knocker, say I'm sick, I'm dead.
Pope. Prol. to Satires.

She, with one maid of all her menial train,
 Had thence retir'd; and with her second joy,
 The young Astyanax, the hope of Troy,
 Pensive she stood on Ilion's towery height,
 Beheld the war, and sicken'd at the sight.
Id. Homer. Iliad, b. vi.

The medicine had scarce any other sensible operation upon her, and did not make her sickish, especially when she slept upon it.—Boyle. Works, vol. ii. p. 145.

So much the more, as, from a little elf,
 He had an high opinion of himself;
 Though sickly, slender, and not large of limb,
 Concluding all the world was made for him.
Dryden. The Cock and the Fox.

Sickness is a sort of early old age: it teaches us a diffidence in our earthly state, and inspires us with the thoughts of a future, better than a thousand volumes of philosophers and divines.—Pope to Steele, July 15, 1712.

My personal maladies and sickness cannot rightly infer the inefficacy of the medicines I impart or recommended.
Boyle. Works, vol. v. p. 316.

— My ear is pain'd,
 My soul is sick, with ev'ry day's report
 Of wrong and outrage, with which earth is fill'd.
Cowper. Task, b. ii.

The doctrine of Fate, hath been still growing from age to age, in absurdity and impiety: and therefore no wonder, that virtue, whose specific bane it is, should proportionably sicken and decline.—Warburton. Defence of Pope.

Years of dearth, it is to be observed, are generally among the common people years of sickness and mortality, which cannot fail to diminish the produce of their industry.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 8.

SICKER. See SECURE.

SICKLE, n. } Dut. Sichel, seeckel; Ger. Sichel, sechel; Sw. Sikel; A. S. Sicel.
 SICKLED. } Skinner derives from SICKLER. } the Lat. Secula, itself—a secundo, to cut. Varro, (lib. iv.) Falces are so called—a farre, by the change of a letter, and these (falces) are in Compania called seculae, a secundo.

A tool or instrument with which corn, &c. is cut; a reaping hook.

And whanne of it self it hath brought forth fruyt: anon
 he sendith a sikil, for reping tyme is come.
Wiclif. Mark, c. 4.

And assone as the frute is brought forth, anone he thrusteth in the syckell, because the haruest is come.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

Upon his head a wreath, that was enroll'd
 With ears of corne of every sort, he bore;
 And in his hand a sickle he did holde
 To reape the ripened fruits the which the earth had yold.
Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 7.

SID

The fruitful Ceres to great Saturn born,
 The first with sickle cropp'd the rip'ned corn.
Drayton. The Owl.

Their sicklers reap the corn another sows.—Sandys.

Another field rose high with waving grain,
 With bended sickles stand the reaper-train:
 Here, stretch'd in ranks, the levell'd swarths are found,
 Sheaves heap'd on sheaves here thicken up the ground.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xviii.

When Autumn's yellow lustre gilds the world,
 And tempts the sickled swain into the field,
 Seiz'd by the general joy, his heart distends
 With gentle throws; and through the tepid gleams
 Deep musing, then he best exerts his song.
Thomson. Autumn.

— Ye vanquishers of Greeks,
 Beneath your spears yon servile herd will fall,
 As corn before the sickle.—Glover. The Athenaid, b. xxx.

SIDE, n. } Dut. Side; Ger. Seite; Sw. Sida; A. S. Sid, side; latus, SIDE, v. } longus, long, large, great. A. S. Sidder, SIDER. } Side and wide, longe lateque, large SIDDING, n. } and wide, (Somner.) Junius (who SIDDLE, v. } derives the Lat. noun Latus from the Gr. Πλατυς, spacious, extended,) thinks sides also are so called because in latus extensa. Right side, left side, are in old authors called right half, left half. See HALF.

The extent from hips to shoulder, in land animals; the corresponding part in aquatic; the parts running collaterally, as the sides of an animal do; parts or parties opposed; extreme parts; the coast, the edge, the margin; the part opposed to centre, back, &c.

To place, or stand, to be, at the side of; and also (met.) in collateral position; as pair or match, to match; to balance, to equipoise; to take the side or party, to espouse, to engage, to enlist in—the cause or party.

For ther nas knygt in mony lond, ny stalewarde man,
 That in the o syde ther was; & al for a wommon.
R. Gloucester, p. 9.

Toward the south side turned thei thar flete,
 Thar fader & thei o chance togider gan mete.
R. Brunne, p. 59.

And thei schulen go aboute thee and make thee strait on alle sidis, and caste thee down to the erthe, and thy sones that ben in thee.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 19.

For the dayes shal come vpon the, that thy enemyes shall caste a bancke about thee, and compasse the rounde, and kepe the in on euerye side, and make the euen with the grounde, with thy chylidren which are in the.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

But oon of the knyghtis openyde his side with a spere, and anon blood and watir wente out.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 19.

But one of the soudiers with a speare, thruste him into the syde, and forthe with came there out bloude and water.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

The lady tho was crope a side,
 As she that wolde her seluen hide.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

It is great wonder that men caste
 Her herte vpon suche wronge to winne,
 Where no beyete maie be inne,
 And doth disease on euery side.
Id. Ib. b. iii.

Therefore crossing her arms, and looking a sideward, upon the ground, do what you will, said she, with us.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

But lyke as his seruantes were seruyd, eyn soo became of hym, soo that he myghte goo or ryde frowarde or sydewarde, but towarde the chapell myght he in no wyse attygne.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 127.

They were compelled to fight as it were by companies and parts, by reason of bogs and marishes, with such sideling banks on the sides that they could keepe none araie.
Holinshed. Historie of Scotland. Mogall.

At their first incounter he ouerthrew the same Loth:
 but immediatlie therevpon two Pictish horssemen running at Colgerme sidelingwise, bare him quite through.
Id. Ib. Conranus.

For thee, thy minde is ill dispoode, thy bodies powers are poore,
 And therefore are thy troopes so weake: the souldier evermore
 Follows the temper of his chiefe; and thou pull'st down a side.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. v.

— Fly, was he a full priest?
Fly. He belly'd for it, had his velvet sleeves,
 And his branch'd cassock, a side sweeping gown,
 All his formalities, a good cramm'd divine!
B. Jonson. The New Inn, Act v. sc. 1.

SID

— And ever closely eide
 Sir Satyrane, that glaunces might not glide:
 But his blinde eie, that sided Paridell,
 All his demeanure from his sight did hide.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 9.

Vit. 'Tis impossible:
 Foe, nor oppressing odds dare prove Vitelli,
 If Clara side him, and will call him friend.
Beaum. & Fletch. Love's Cure, Act ii. sc. 2.

He sided there a lusty louely lasse,
 And with some courtly termes the wench he bords,
 He fains acquaintance, and as bold appears
 As hee had knowne that virgin twenty yeares.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boeulogne, b. xix. s. 77.

— As I am confident
 Thou dar'st not wrong thy birth and education
 By yielding to a common servile rage
 Of female wantonness, so I am confident
 Thou wilt proportion all my thoughts to side
 Thy equals, if not equal thy superiors.
Ford. Perkin Warbeck, Act i. sc. 2.

Aur. In my country, friend,
 Where I have sided my superiors.
Id. The Lady's Trial, Act i. sc. i.

— Unnumber'd as the sands
 Of Barca or Cyrene's torrid soil,
 Levied to side with warring winds, and poise
 Thir lighter wings.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

These thoughts may startle well, but not astound
 The virtuous mind, that ever walks attended
 By a strong-siding champion, conscience.—Id. Comus.

Kings had need beware, how they side themselves and make themselves as of a faction or party; for leagues within the state, are ever pernicious to monarchies.
Bacon. Ess. On Faction.

All rising to great place, is by a winding staire; and if there be factions, it is good, to side a man's selfe, whilst he is in the rising: and to ballance himselfe, when he is placed.
Id. Ess. On Great Place.

Set with pearles, downe sleeues, side sleeues, and skirts, round vnderborn with a blewish tinsel.
Shakespeare. Much Adoe about Nothing, Act iii. sc. 4.

Such converts are sure to be beset with diverse sorts of adversaries; as the papists and their siders.
Sheldon. Mir. of Antichrist, (1616,) Pref.

I defined heresy, not merely a mistake of judgment, (though in fundamentals) but espousing such erroneous judgment, either teaching and disseminating it, or openly supporting and assisting those that do, siding with them in it.—Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 86.

He is much offended that you do stickle and keep on foot such questions, which may be better sopited and silenced than maintained and drawn into sidings and partakings.
Wood. Athenae Oxon. vol. ii.

Man's sickly soul, though turn'd and toss'd for ever,
 From side to side, can rest on nought but thee:
 Here, in full trust; hereafter, in full joy.
Young. Complaint, Night 9.

Whereas the chaffering with dissenters, and dodging about this or the other ceremony, is but like opening a few wickets, and leaving them at jar, by which no more than one can get in at a time, and that not without stooping, and sideling, and squeezing his body.
Swift. Against abolishing Christianity.

But lo! the storm itself assistance lends,
 While one assaults, another wave defends:
 This lays the sidelong alder on the main,
 And that restores the leaning bark again.
Rowe. Lucan. Pharsalia, b. v.

Yet all this while I have been sailing with some side-wind or other toward the point I proposed in the beginning: the greatness and excellency of an heroic poem, with some of the difficulties that attend that work.
Dryden. Dedication to the Aeneis.

This house is generally at the root of a tree, but not of that upon which their other dwellings are constructed; it is formed like an irregular sided cone.
Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 6.

A man o' the town dines late, but soon enough,
 With reasonable forecast and dispatch,
 T' ensure a side-box station at half price.
Cowper. Task, b. ii.

SIDERAL. } Fr. Sydéral, syderation; It. Sidereus; SIDE'RAL. } Sidereus; Sp. Sidereus; Lat. Sidereus, SIDERATED. } Sidereus, from sidus, a star, or SIDERATION. } rather constellation, from Gr. Eidos, forma, species; sunt enim sidera formæ
 sive figuræ cælestes e stellis, (Vossius.)

As for the misliking of trees (called sideratio) whereby they consume, wither away, and crumble to powder, it is a thing caused only of the weather and influence of some planet, (Holland, Plinie, b. xvii. c. 24.)

SIE

Sideral,—starry, stellar, astral.
Siderate,—struck, blighted, blasted (by the stars or planets).

These changes in the heav'ns, though slow, produc'd
 Like change on sea and land, sideral blast,
 Vapour, and mist, and exhalation hot,
 Corrupt and pestilent.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

So parts cauterized, gangrenated, siderated and mortified become black, the radical moisture, or vital sulphur suffering an extinction, and smothered in the part affected.
Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. vi. c. 12.

Sideration, a blasting of trees or plants by an easterly wind, or excessive heat or drought.—Miller. Dictionary.

By the contagious vapour of the very eggs themselves producing a mortification or syderation in the parts of plants on which they are laid.—Ray. On the Creation, pt. ii.

Ten thousand stars adorn the glittering train,
 Fall when she falls, and rise with her again;
 And o'er the deserts of the sky unfold
 Their burning spangles of sideral gold.
Broome. Paraph. on Eccles. c. 43.

SIEGE, n. } See BESIEGE. Fr. Siège, siéger, SIEGE, v. } assiéger; It. Assedio, assediare; Sp. Sitio, sitiár, from the Lat. Sedes, sedere, as we say,—to sit down before a town.

To set or beset; to set, place or station, (sc.)
 a force, an armed force, before or around.
Siege,—a setting or besetting (with like intent);
 also a seat, a stool: literally and consequentially.

The ost withoute of France bi segede hem a non,
 And bi lai hem so faste, that neg to gronde hem brogte.
R. Gloucester, p. 19.

Sir Edward herd it telle, & dight him to Berwik,
 No stounde wille he duelle, bot seged it also quik.
R. Brunne, p. 271.

Whanne mannes sone schal come in his maieste, and alle hise aungelis with him thanne he schal sitte on the sege of his magestee, and alle folkis schulen be gaderid bifore him.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 25.

And alle we that ben in this aray,
 And maken all this lamentation,
 We losten alle our husbandes at that toun,
 While that the seige thereabouten lay.
Chaucer. The Knights Tale, v. 866.

On morrow, whan the bird began to sing,
 Unto the siege he commeth full prively,
 And by himselfe he walketh soberly.
Id. The Legend of Lucrece.

And for the straunge mens sake,
 That comen fro the siege of Troie, Thei maden well the more iole.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

At Troie when kynge Vlysses
 Upon the sege amonge the pres
 Of hem, that worthy knights were Abode longe tyme stille there.—Id. Ib. b. iv.

The whiche, as before is sayd, with his Brytons, gyrt the cytie of London with a stronge syge, and kepte the foresayd Liuius Gallus and his Romaynes in streyte holde.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 65.

—The reason I laid downe,
 Was but the sparing of my horse, since in a sieged towne,
 I thought our horse-meate would be scant.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. v.

Who with bold grace, and comely gravity,
 Drawing to him the eies of all arownd,
 From lofty siege began these words aloud to sownd.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 2.

That wicked band of villeins fresh begon
 That castle to assaile on every side,
 And lay strong siege about it far and wyde.
Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 11.

As many as live thereof, are infested and troubled neither with the dysenterie or bloudie flix, ne yet with the troublesome offers and streins to the sege without doing any thing, nor any other diseases of the belly.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 21.

There are no footsteps of any siege among the primitive Grecians: their cities were not fortified with walls, but lay open to all invaders; and their inhabitants, once conquered in open field, became an easy prey to the conquerors.
Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. iii. c. 10.

The town of Calais had been defended with remarkable vigilance, constancy, and bravery by the townsmen during a siege of unusual length.
Hume. History of England, Edw. III. c. 15.

Full oft the Tynedale snatchers knock
 At his lone gate, and prove the lock;
 It was but last St. Barnabright
 They seiged him a whole summer night
 But fled at morning.—Scott. Lay of the last Minstrel, c. 4.

SIG

SIEVE, n. } Anciently, sive: whence sived, SIFT, v. } siv'd, sift. A. S. Sibi, sift-an;
 SIFTING, n. } Dut. Seue, seuen, sift-en; Ger.
 SIVVEYER. } Sift, siften, (by modern usage, sichten,—Wachter,) to scarce, to bould.

To sift is—
 To separate, to shake apart, the smaller from the larger parts or particles, the coarser from the finer; to discern, to search, to examine minutely, thoroughly; to scrutinize.

The mullok on an hepe ysweped was,
 And on the flore ycast a canevas,
 And all this mullok in a sive ythrowe,
 And sifted, ay pycked many a throwe.
Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16,406.

Liv. Never hope it.
 'Tis as easie with a sive to scoop the ocean, as To tame Petruchio.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Woman's Prize, Act i. sc. 2.

You are best but honourable earth;
 And howe'er sifted from that coarser bran
 Which doth compound, and knead the common man,
 Nothing immortal, or from earth refin'd
 About you, but your office and your mind.
Drummond. Elegy, p. 662.

And fresh mould sifted and strewed over with riddles, an inch thicke and no more.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 10.

Leave this occupation and sifting of letters, to those masters that shut up a thing so magnificent as philosophy is, in syllables: and do imbrace, yea bring to nothing, and utterly destroy the mind, in teaching things that are not worth the labour and study.—North. Plutarch, p. 1011.

For Time will aske much, to the sifting out
 Of each mans disposition, by his deeds.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xvi.

William Siveyer was born at Shinkley in this bishoprick, where his father was a siveyer or sive-maker; and I commend his humillity in retaining his father's trade for his surname, to mind him of his mean extraction.
Fuller. Worthies. Durham.

Mask. Why then, are you a waiting-woman, as you are the sieve of all your ladies secrets, tell it me.
Dryden. An Evening's Love, Act i. sc. 1.

Even those passages of providence, which at first glimpse appear most opposite or disadvantageous to the goodness of God, (or to our opinion and belief concerning it,) do, being well sifted, no wise prejudice it, but rather serve to corroborate and magnify it.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 2.

Mr. Banks's house admitted the water in every part like a sieve, and it ran through the lower rooms in a stream that would have turned a mill.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 10.

I shall not wonder, if, to those who have not sifted this question to the bottom, (which few, I am persuaded, have done,) the evidence of a providence, arising from prophecies of this sort, should appear to be very slender, or none at all.
Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 17.

SIGH, n. } Anciently written Sike; and the SIGH, v. } past part. of Sigh, was (sighed, SIGHER. } sigh'd) sight; Dut. Suchten; Sw.
 SIGHING, n. } Sucka; A. S. Sic-an, which appears to be the same word as syc-an, to suck; applied to the sucking or drawing in the breath previous to the emission.

To draw in or inhale, to exhale or emit, the breath, (sc.) with longer, deeper breathings than common.

He syghede and seide, sore hit me for thynketh
 Of the dede that ich have down.—Piers Plouhman, p. 344.

"Great is my wo," (quod she) and sighed sore
 As she that feeleth deadly sharpe distresse.
Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. iv.

The morow came, and ghostly for to speke,
 This Diomedes is come vnto Creseide,
 And shortly for himselfe spake and seide,
 That all her sighes sore doune he leide.—Id. Ib. b. v.

This knight adviseth him, and sore siketh
 But at the last he said in this manere.
Id. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6811.

Than wold she sit adoun upon the grene,
 And pitously into the see behold,
 And say right thus, with careful sikes cold.
Id. The Frankleines Tale, v. 11,204.

Then tooke I with mene hondes tway
 The arrow, and full fast it out plight,
 And in the pulling sore I sight.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

It is a sorie lust to like
 Whose ende maketh a man to sike,
 And tourneth ioyes in to sorowe.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

SIG

Layd in my quiet bed, in study as I were,
 I saw within my troubled head, a heape of thoughts
 appeare,
 And euery thought did shewe so lively in myne eyes,
 That now I sighed, and then I smilde, as cause of thoughtes did rise.—Surrey. No Age is content.

I was below'd of many a gentle knight,
 And sude and sought with all the service dew:
 Full many a one for me deepe groand and sigh't.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 8.

Now for the oppression of the needie, & for the sighes of the poore, I will vp saith the Lord, & wil set at liberty him, whom the wicked hath snared.—Bible, 1583. Psalmes, xii. 5.

Here I unclasp the book of my charg'd soul,
 Where I have cast th' accounts of all my care:
 Here have I summ'd my sighs; here I enroll
 How they were spent for thee; look what they are.
Daniel. To Delia.

Yet sometimes a divided sigh, martyr'd as 'twere
 I' th' deliverance, will break from one of them,
 When the other presently, gives it so sweet a rebuke,
 That I could wish myself a sigh to be so chid,
 Or at least a sigher to be comforted.
Beaum. & Fletch. The two Noble Kinsmen, Act ii. sc. 1.

The poor bird was beaten back with the loud sighings of an eastern wind.—Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 5.

—This world, 'tis true,
 Was made for Cæsar—but for Titus too;
 And which more blest? who chain'd his country, say,
 Or he whose virtue sigh'd to lose a day?
Pope. Ess. on Man, Ep. 4.

The passion of love is the most general concern among men; and I am glad to hear by my last advices from Oxford, that there are a set of sighers in that university, who have erected themselves into a society in honour of that tender passion.—Spectator, No. 30.

When the mind reflects with regret upon some good unattained or lost, it feels an internal emotion, which acting upon the diaphragm, and that upon the lungs, produces a sigh.—Goldsmith. Hist. of the Earth, vol. ii. c. 5.

SIGHT. } The pret. per. of See
 SIGHTED. } was anciently written Sigh;
 SIGHTFULNESS. } whence Sighed, sigh'd, sight.
 SIGHTLESS. } Any thing which is seen;
 SIGHTLY. } also the sense, the faculty by SIGHTLINESS. } which any thing is seen;
 vision, view, inspection.

Sightly,—seeming good, or of good seeming, or appearance to the eye.

The kyng wepte with his ine, that sight mykelle he praised.
R. Brunne, p. 79.

So clene, and fair, & purwyte, among other men heo beth,
 That me knoweth them in eche lond bi sygte, where me hem seth.
R. Gloucester, p. 8.

It made fier to come down fro heuen into erthe in the sight of alle men.—Wiclif. Apocalips, c. 13.

He made fyre come doune from heauē in ye sight of men.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

If that your eyen cannot seen aright,
 Loketh that youre mind lacke not his sight.
Chaucer. The Chan. Yemannes Tale, v. 16,886.

Lo howe Egypt all out of sight
 For reason stant in misbeleue.
 For lacke of lore, as I beleue.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

The daie made ende, and loste his sight,
 And comen was the derke night,
 The whiche all the daies eie blent.—Id. Ib.

But still, although we fail of perfect rightfulness,
 Seek we to tame these childish superfluities;
 Let us not wink, though void of purest sightfulness.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

It is generally known and observed, that light, and the object of sight, move swifter than sound; for we see the flash of a peece is seen sooner, than the noise is heard.
Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 210.

The foolish and short-sighted die with fear,
 That they go no-where, or they know not where.
Denham. Of Old Age.

—Then Minerua thought,
 What meanes to wake Vlysses, might be wrought,
 That he might see this lovely sighted maid,
 Whom she intended, should become his aid:
 Bring him to towne; and his return aduance.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. vi.

Borgio and he from this dire region haste;
 Shame makes them sightless to themselves and dumb.
 Their thoughts fly swift as time from what is past,
 And would like him demolish all to come.
Davenant. Gondibert, b. i. c. 5.

— Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milke for gall, you murth'ring ministers,
Where-euer, in your sightlesse substances,
You wait on nature's mischiefe.

Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act 1. sc. 5.

Full of vnpleasing blots, and sightlesse staines.
Id. King John, Act iii. sc. 1.

Bast. It lies as sightly on the back of him
As great Alcides shoes vpon an asse.
Id. K. John, Act ii. sc. 1.

Sir Randel Crew first brought the model of excellent building into these remoter parts; yea brought London into Cheshire, in the loftiness, sightliness, and pleasantness of their structures.—Fuller. Worthies. Cheshire.

Glass-eyes may be used, though not for seeing, for sightliness.—Fuller. Holy State, (1648,) p. 290.

Thus watch'd the Grecians, cautious of surprize,
Each voice, each motion, drew their ears and eyes;
Each step of passing feet increas'd th' affright;
And hostile Troy was ever full in sight.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. x.

Our sight is the most perfect and most delightful of all our senses. It fills the mind with the largest variety of ideas, converses with objects at the greatest distance, and continues the longest in action without being tired or satiated with its proper enjoyments.—Spectator, No. 411.

He from thick films shall purge the visual ray,
And on the sightless eye-ball pour the day.

Pope. Messiah.

We have already chosen thirty members the most sightly of all her majesty's subjects. We elected a president, as many of the ancients did their kings, by reason of his height.—Guardian, No. 108.

When reach'd her ear thy much lov'd sister's death,
Her eyes grew sightless, and she lost her breath.

Boyse. The Disconsolate Hilaria.

SIGIL. Cotgrave has sigillé, sealed, and sigillatif, sigillative, sealable. It. Sigillo; Lat. Sigillum.

A seal.

And sorceries to raise th' infernal powers,
And sigils fram'd in planetary hours.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. ii.

SIGMOIDAL. From the Gr. Σ , sigma, and eidōs, form or shape.

Formed or shaped like the Gr. sigma.

It must necessarily thrust the blood through the open passage of the vena arteriosa, where the sigmoidal portals hindering its return, it must pass through the strainer of the lungs.—Smith. On Old Age, (1666) p. 233.

SIGN, n.

SIGN, v.

SIGNAL, adj.

SIGNAL, n.

SIGNALLY.

SIGNALITY.

SIGNALIZE, v.

SIGNATION.

SIGNATURE.

SIGNATURIST.

SIGNER.

SIGNET,

SIGNIFY, v.

SIGNIFICANT, adj.

SIGNIFICANT, n.

SIGNIFICANCE.

SIGNIFICANCY.

SIGNIFICANTLY.

SIGNIFICATION.

SIGNIFICATIVE.

SIGNIFICATIVELY.

SIGNIFICATOR.

SIGNIFICATORY.

To signify,—to make a sign or mark, a note or token; to make known, to declare, or manifest, the mind, the meaning, purpose, import; to mean,
to purpose, to import.

Signal, adj.—remarkable; conspicuous; worthy of note, or distinction; memorable.

Significant, is used emphatically, (sc.) expressing much meaning; and B. Jonson uses signifying in the same manner.

Signature (sc.) of plants. See the second quotation from H. More.

Signer, is in common use.

— That was to sygnifye,
That he ssolde be duc of Normandy, & kyng of Engeland.
R. Gloucester, p. 345.

R. Gloucester, p. 345.

And in sond a signe wrot.—Piers Plouhman, p. 231.

And oon of hem roos up, Agabus bi name and signified bi the spirit a greet hungur to comynge in al the world, which hungur was maad undir Claudius.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 11.

And there stode vp one of them, named Agabus, and signified by the spirite, y^t there shoulde be a greate dearth thorowe oute all the worlde, which came to passe in the Emperour Claudius dayes.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

" And here I vow me, faithful, true, and kind,
Without offence of mutabilitie,
Humbly to serue, while I haue wit and minde,
Mine hole affiaunce, and my lady free,
In thilke place, there ye me signe to be."

Chaucer. The Court of Loue.

Phebus the sonne ful jolif was and clere,
For he was nigh his exhaltation
In Martes face, and in his mansion
In Aries, the colerike hote signe.

Id. The Squieres Tale, v. 10,402.

The center that standeth a middest the narrowest cercle, is cleapet the signet.—Id. Astrolabie.

For like as bookes of him list expresse,
He set pillars through his hye prowess,
Away at Gades, for to signifie,
That no man might him passe in cheualrie.

Id. The Complaint of the Black Knight.

But though I tell not as blive
Of hir power, ne of hir might,
Hereafter shall I tellen right
The sooth, and eke significance,
As ferre as I haue remembraunce.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

And han wel founden by experience,
That dremes ben significations
As wel of joye, as tribulations,
That folk endure in this lif present.

Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 14,914.

The vertue, whiche is in the stones,
A very signe is for the nones
Of that a kynge shall be honest,
And holde trewely his behest
Of thyng, whiche longeth to kinghed.

Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Vlysses knewe this token nought,
And prayth to witte in some partie,
What thyng it might signifie.
A signe it is, the wight answerde,
Of an empire.

Id. Ib. b. vi.

And whan that he the sooth herde,
Where that the kynge Vlysses was Alone vpon his hors great pas
He rode hym forth, and in his honde
He bare the signall of his londe,
With fisses thre, as I haue tolde.

Id. Ib.

And euen so say they that the doctours called the sacrament the body & bloud of Christ after the same maner onely, because it is the memoriall, the earnest and seale of body and bloud, as the vse of Scriptures is to call signes by the names of thynges signified thereby.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 447.

Than the bysshophe of Caunterbury wrote letters sygned with his hande to London, sygnifyinge the comynge of the erle of Derby.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 240.

As he rode forwarde in the forest of Mans, a great sygni-fyacion fell to hym, by the whiche if he had doone well, he shulde haue called his counsaile aboute hym, and well aduysed hymselfe or he had gone any further.

Id. Ib. vol. ii. c. 187.

It [the church] hath yet or should haue an other signification, little known among the common people now a dayes. That is to wit, it signifieth a congregation, a multitude or a company gathered together in one, of all degrees of people.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 249.

But give me your figurative, significative, and such other like terms, and I will defend that Christ hath not yet ascended; no nor yet that he was incarnate.

State Trials. Mary, an. 1. Cranmer.

Shy. I pray you giue me leaue to goe from hence,
I am not well; send the deed after me,
And I will signe it.

Shakespeare. Merchant of Venice, Act iv. sc. 1.

— Y^{are} meek, & humble-mouth'd
You signe your place, and calling, in full seeming,
With meekenesse and humilitie: but your heart
Is cramm'd with arrogancie, spleene, and pride.

Id. Hen. VIII. Act ii. sc. 4.

1. List list.
2. Hearke.
3. Musicke i' th' ayre.
3. Vnder the earth.
4. It signes well, do's it not?

Id. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act iv. sc. 3.

— Thou Saint George shal called bee,
Saint George of mery England, the signe of victoree.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

God and thou know'st, with what a heavy heart
I took my farewell, when I should depart;
And being shipp'd, gave signal with my hand
Up to the cliff, where I did see thee stand.
Drayton. Mary the French Queen to the Duke of Suffolk.

1733

And therefore herein significations are naturall and concluding upon the infant, but not to be extended unto signa-lities, or any other person.

Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. v. c. 21.

Those other examples of the signation of the foetus from the mother's fancy, Fienus rejecteth.

More. Immortality of the Soul, pt. iii. b. iii. c. 7.

We come now to the signatures of plants. I demand whether it be not a very easie and genuine inference, from the observing that several herbs are marked with some mark or sign that intimates their virtue, what they are good for, and there being such a creature as man in the world that can read and understand these signs and characters;
hence to collect that the Author both of man and them knew the nature of them both.

Id. Antidote against Atheism, b. ii. c. 6.

Whoever shall peruse the signatures of Crollius, or rather the phytognomy of Porta, and strictly observe how vegetable realities are commonly forced into animal representations, may easily perceive in very many, the semblance is but postulatory.—Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. ii. c. 6.

Signaturists have somewhat advanced it; who seldom omitting what ancients delivered; drawing into inferences received distinctions of sex, not willing to examine its human resemblance.—Id. Ib.

They; as if signets in their master's hand,
Gave true impressions, keeping still one forme.

Stirling. Domes-day. The Eighth Houre.

Goe signifie as much, while here we march
Vpon the grassie carpet of this plaine.

Shakespeare. Rich. II. Act iii. sc. 3.

For if the words be but becoming, and signifying, and the sense gentle there is juyce.—B. Jonson. Discoveries.

Other some not so well scene in the English tongue, as perhaps in other languages, if they happen to heare an olde word, albeit very naturall and significant, cry out straightway, that we speake no English, but gibberish, or rather such as in olde time Evanders mother spake.

Spenser. Epistle to Maister Harvey.

York. Since you are tongue-ty'd, and so loth to speake,
In dumbe significants proclayme your thoughts.

Shakespeare. 1 Pt. Hen. VI. Act ii. sc. 4.

Neither in the degrees of kinned they were destitute of significatiue words; for he whom we of a French and English compound word call Grandfather, they called Eald-fader, whom we call Great-grandfather, they call Thirda-fader.

Camden. Remains. Languages.

This sentence must either be taken tropically, that bread may be the body of Christ significatively, or else it is plainly absurd and impossible.

Abp. Usher. Ans. to the Jes. Malone, p. 190.

Seeing the sultan's dominions, in the time of the holy war, extended from Sinus Arabius to the north eastern part of the midland-sea where a barbarous kind of greek was spoken by many—Amirall (thus compounded) was significa-tively comprehensive of his jurisdiction.

Fuller. General Worthies of England.

One saith, diverse diseases of the body and minde proceed their influences [the starres] as I have already proved out of Ptolomy, Pontanus, Lemnius, Cardan, and others, as they are principall significators of manners, diseases.

Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 190.

Here is a double significatory of the spirit, a word and a sign.—Bp. Taylor.

— If this geer hold

Best hang a signe-post up, to tell the signiors,
Here ye may have some lewdness at liverie.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Chances, Act iii. sc. 1.

The people press on every side, to see
Their awful prince, and hear his high decree.
Then signing to their heralds with his hand,
They gave his orders from their lofty stand.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

Who dares inglorious, in his ships to stay,
Who dares to tremble on this signal day;
That wretch, too mean to fall by martial power,
The birds shall mangle, and the dogs devour.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

Now, of all the inventions which have been contrived for securing opportunity, the most effectual is that of making signals by the means of lighted torches.

Hampton. Polybius, b. x. c. 2.

So that neither by this instance is any attribute of God more signalized, than his transcendent goodness.

Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 2.

These, knowing no other Europeans but Spaniards, it might be expected they would treat all strangers with the same cruelty which they had so often and so signally exerted against their Spanish neighbours.

Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 3.

All those virtuous dispositions of mind which we acquire by the practice of virtue, are so many genuine signatures of God, taken from the seal of his law, and participations of his nature.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 1.

Her novices are taught, that bread and wine
Are by the visible and outward signe, Receiv'd by those who in communion join.
But th' inward grace, or the thing signify'd,
His blood and body, who to save us dyd;
The faithful this thing signify'd receive;
What is't those faithful then partake or leave?
For what is signify'd then understood,
Is, by her own confession, flesh and blood.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

If he declares he intends it for the honour of another, he takes away by his words the significance of his action.
Stillfleet.

Thus you see the force and significancy of those texts (and of all texts which intimated a plain personal distinction between the Father and Christ) against the Sabellians.
Waterland. Works, vol. i. p. 295.

For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew forth the Lord's death, until he come, καταγγελλετε, ye do significantly express it, ye do solemnly publish and declare it.—Atterbury, vol. iv. Ser. 6.

To perform this, he made frequent use of tropes, which you know change the nature of a known word, by applying it to some other signification.
Dryden. Letter to Sir R. Howard.

You seem to forget, that it is some time since words have been no longer allowed to be signs of things. Modern grammarians acknowledge them to be (as indeed Aristotle called them, συμβολα παθηματων) the signs of ideas; at the same time denying the other assertion of Aristotle, that ideas are the likenesses of things.
Tooke. Diversions of Purley, pt. i. c. 1.

One of which [boats] I sent away with an officer round a point on the larboard hand, to look for anchorage. This he found, and signified the same by signal.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 3.

No soldier durst begin the battle till the signal was given;
and the signal was contrived to be given in such a manner, that no one could know the exact time of it, but all waited for it patiently; nor, after the signal was once heard, was it lawful for any man to attack or strike the enemy, who had not taken the military oath.—Knox. Antipolemus.

The inhabitants of the extensive, but defenceless plains of Scythia or Tartary, have been frequently united under the dominion of the chief of some conquering horde or clan;
and the havoc and devastation of Asia have always signa- lized their union.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 1.

Since the adherence to our purpose proves so signally serviceable upon great occasions, and so continually useful upon common ones, no wonder it becomes the object of desire in some degree with all men, and gives them vexation upon being crossed, and pleasure upon being gratified.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 23.

Nobody ever saw one animal, by its gestures and natural cries, signify to another, this is mine, that yours; I am willing to give this for that.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 2.

The new name was always significant; and, for the most part, when given by Divine authority, predictive of some peculiarity in the character, the life, the achievements, or the destiny, of the person on whom it was imposed.
Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 13.

The third Commandment would have been of very small significancy under the Gospel, as it only prohibits swearing in vain, if our Saviour, by a subsequent law, had prohibited swearing at all.—Secker, vol. ii. Ser. 30.

It [Lord] is a word, therefore, of large and various signi- fication, denoting dominion of every sort and degree, from the universal and absolute dominion of God to the private and limited dominion of a single slave.
Bp. Horsley, vol. iii. Ser. 30.

2 Kings xiii. 15—19. Here it is not difficult to apprehend, that the prophet, by God's command, directed the king to perform a significant action, whose meaning God had beforehand explained to his messenger.
Warburton. Divine Legation, b. vi. p. 194.

SIGNIOR. See SENIOR.

SIKER. See SECURE.

SILE. } Sw. Sylta, lutum, (Ihre,) perhaps SILT. } from A. S. Syli-an, to soil.

To sile is,—to strain, to purify: Sw. Sila.

A sile is,—a sieve or strainer.

Silt,—may be that which is strained or left by straining; the soil, the sediment.

Sile is still common in northern counties.

In long process of time, the silt and sands shall so choak and shallow the sea in and about it.
Brown. Miscellaneous, p. 190.

In the great level near Thorny, severall trees of oak and fir, some severed from their roots, others joyned to their roots which stand in firm earth below the moor, and in all probability have lain there hundreds of years, till covered by the inundation of the fresh and salt waters, and the silt and moorish earth exaggerated upon them.
Hale. Origin. of Mankind, s. 2. c. 7.

SILENT.

SILENCE, n.

SILENCE, v.

SILENCING, n.

SILENTLY.

SILENTIARY.

Fr. Silence; It. Silèze, silènte, silenzio; Sp. Silencio; Lat.
Silens, pres. part. of silere, which, with the Gr. Σιγαν, the etymologists consider to be formed from the sound: the note of silence, both with Greeks and Latins, they remark, was St. They distinguish silere, to discontinue speaking, from tacere, to abstain from speaking. Silence consists in—

Absence of any sound; and is used as equivalent to stillness, secrecy, cessation, discontinuance of speech, or sound, or noise; oblivion, muteness, taciturnity.

And Alisaundre axide with his hond silence, & wold ghelde a resoun to the peple.—Wiclif. Dedes, c. 19.

But in silence, and in couert
Desyreth for to be beshaded.

Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

And therefore to put all suche heretikes to silence, as would wyth babelyng put downe the good vertuous ceremonies of the church, he sayd, If any man wyll be contencious, we haue no such custome nor the church of God.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 827.

'Twere a concealment worse than a theft,
No lesse than a traducement,
To hide your doings, and to silence that,
Which to the spire, and top of prayes vouch'd,
Would seeme but modest.

Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act i. sc. 9.

For they will not remember how much the scholler of Plato, (who, like an absolute monarch over arts, hath almost silenced his master throughout the schools of Europe) labours to make poesie universally current, by giving laws to the science.—Davenant. Gondibert, Pref. p. 367.

There Faunus saw that pleased much his eye,
And made his hart to tickle in his brest,
That, for great ioy of somewhat he did spy,
He could him not containe in silent rest;
But, breaking forth in laughter, loud profest
His foolish thought.

Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 6.

Now whenas all the world in silence deepe
Yshrowded was, and every mortall wight
Was drowned in the depth of deadly sleepe,
Faerie Malecasta, whose engrieved spright
Could find no rest in such perplexed plight, Lightly arose out of her wearie bed.—Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 1.

When I perceiv'd he my remembrance wan,
Yet with his tears it silently did show,
I wept for woe, to see mine host distrest;
But he for joy, to see his happy guest.

Drayton. Legend of Thomas Cromwell.

I shall only adde his predictions of earthquakes; or rather (because that may seem more natural) his present slaking of plagues in cities, his silencing of violent windes and tempests, his calming the rage of seas and rivers, and the like.
More. Defence of Philosophical Cabbala, pt. iv. c. 3.

— Witnessse earth, and heaven, so farre diffused:
Thou flood, whose silent-gliding waves, the under ground doth beare,
Which is the great'st, and gravest oath, that any god can swear.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xv.

The silenc'd preacher yields to potent strain,
And feels that grace his prayer besought in vain.

Pope. Imitation of Horace, Ep. 1.

Arriv'd, the hero in his tent they find,
With gloomy aspect, on his arm reclin'd,
At awful distance long they silent stand,
Loth to advance, or speak their hard command.

Id. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

The emperor afterwards sent his rescript by Eustathius,
the silentiary, again confirming it.

Barrow. On the Pope's Supremacy.

What the compilers recommended chiefly to our faith, he silently passes over; and instead of recommending the same doctrine, seems to throw it quite out.

Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 387.

After their death, and when the interested individuals, who have been served by their cunning, have been silenced
by the universal leveller, they have been considered as little more than "artful fabricators of their own fortune."

Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 34.

"Here," I have said, "at least I should possess
The poet's treasure, silence, and indulge
The dreams of fancy, tranquil and secure."

Cowper. Task, b. i.

But man is frail, and can but ill sustain
A long immunity from grief and pain;
And after all the joys that plenty leads,
With tiptoe step vice silently succeeds.

Id. Expostulation.

SILVICIOUS. Made of cilicium, i. e. goat's hair; a kind of clothing first used in Cilicia.

A garment of camels' hair; that is, made of some texture of the hair, a coarse garment; a cilicium or sack-cloth habit; suitable to the austerity of his life; the severity of his doctrine, repentance; and the place thereof, the wilderness.
Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. v. c. 15.

SILVICIOUS. Lat. Silicium, from silex, a flint. Vossius thinks—from Gr. Χαλιξ, calx. See CALCARIOUS.

Flinty, stony.

Silicium earth is often found in a stony form, such as flint or quartz; and still more frequently in that of a very fine sand, such as that whereof glass is made.

Kirwan. On Manures.

SILIQUEOUS. Miller says, — Siliquous, having seed-vessels (in Lat. Siliqua) husk, pod or shell.

SILK.

SILKEN, adj.

SILKEN, v.

SILKY.

SILKINESS.

SILKNESS.

The A. S. Seolc, seolcen, seolc- wyrm. Sid, siden, sidwyrm, are evidently of modern introduction. The Dut. Sijde; Ger.
Seeden; It. Seta; Fr. Soye;
Sp. Seda, a Sidonius, from the Sidonians; A. S. Seolc; Eng. Silk, from Lat.
Sericum; Gr. Σηρικον, a seribus, from the Seres.
See the quotations from Pliny and Gibbon.

Silken, silky, from the qualities of silk, are used met.—smooth, soft, delicate.

And ge worthy women. wit goure longe fyngres

That ge on selke and sendel. to sewen wenne tyme ys.

Piers Plouhman, p. 148.

And he vseth in his wrytynge muche playne poetrye, wherewith he daunseth naked not all in a net, but for the more part so starke naked without any net at all, that there is not the bredth of silken threde to couer his poetrye.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 421.

The several graces and elegancies of musick, the soft and silky touches, the nimble transitions and delicate closes.

Smith. On Old Age, (1666,) p. 144.

And on her now a garment she did weare

All lilly white, withoutten spot or pride;

That seemd like silke and silver woven neare;

But neither silke nor silver therein did appeare.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 12.

The first people of any knowledge and acquaintance, be the Seres, famous for the fine silke that their woods doe yeeld.—Holland. Plinie, b. vi. c. 17.

— Her golden lockes, that were upbound

Still in a knot, unto her heeles downe traced,

And like a silken veile in compasse round

About her backe and all her bodie wound.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 1.

Hor. Gods, you doe know it, I can hold no longer;

This brize hath prickt my patience: sir, your silkenesse

Clearly mistakes Mecænas, and his house;

To think, there breathes a spirit beneath his rooffe,

Subject unto those poore affections

Of under-mining envie, and detraction,

Moodes, only proper to base groveling minds.

B. Jonson. Poetaster, Act iii. sc. 1.

It is commonly said, that in the Iland Coas there be certain *silke*worms engendered of flowers, which by the meanes of raine-showers, are beaten downe and fall from the cypres tree, terebinth, oke, and ash: and they soone after doe quicken and take life by the vapour arising out of the earth.

Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 23.

— Let Asia's woods,

Untended, yield the vegetable fleece:

And let the little insect-artist form,

On higher life intent, its silken tomb.

Thomson. Liberty, pt. v.

For now when near the morning's dawn,

The youth began as 'twere to yawn;

His eyes a silky slumber seiz'd.

Congreve. An impossible Thing.

I scarcely understand my own intent:

But silke-worm-like, so long within have wrought,

That I am lost in my own web of thought.

Dryden. The Conquest of Granada, Act i. sc. 2.

I need not explain that silk is originally spun from the bowells of a caterpillar, and that it composes a golden tomb from whence a worm emerges in the form of a butterfly.

Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 40.

Till the reign of Justinian, the silk worms who feed on the leaves of the white mulberry-tree, were confined to China; those of the pine, the oak, and the ash were common in the forests both of Asia and Europe; but as their education is more difficult, and their produce more uncertain, they were generally neglected, except in the little island of Ceos, near the coast of Attica.—Id. Ib.

Off with these silken robes and cap of velvet;

The vest of steele, my liege, and brazen helmet,

Were fitter now.

Mickle. The Siege of Marseilles, Act i. sc. 3.

If your sheep are of Siturian breed,
Nightly to house them dry, on fern, or straw, Silkening their fleeces. Dyer. The Fleece, b. ii.

There are, who over-rate our spongy stores,
Who deem that Nature grants no clime, but ours,
To spread upon its fields the dews of heaven,
And feed the silky fleece. Id. Ib.

The cultivation of mulberry trees, and the breeding of silk-worms, seem not to have been common in the northern parts of Italy before the sixteenth century. Those arts were not introduced into France till the reign of Charles IX.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iii. c. 3.

SILL. A. S. Syl; basis, columna. Hercoles syla, Hercules' pillars. (Somner.) Dut. Syle; Sw.
Sylla; Ger. Saul, which Skinner derives from the Lat. Solum. Lye thinks it more probably from the Goth. Suljan, fundare, to found or lay a foundation. See GROUNDSELL.

The base or foundation; a door-sill, a window-sill,—upon which the side posts or pillars rest.

And with his axe he smote the cord atwo;
And down goth all; he fond neyther to selle
Ne breed ne ale, til he came to the selle,
Upon the flore, and ther aswoune he lay.

Chaucer. The Miller's Tale, v. 3820.

He can scarce lift his legge over a sille, and hath one foot already in Charon's boat.

Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 441.

SILLABUB, Skinner says, is in Lancashire called Sillibauck, and Dr. Th. H. derives from Dut.
Sulle, sille, canalis, and Buych, venter; and supposes the thing to be so called from the form and size of the vessel out of which it was usually drunk; but it is not likely that a name should be compounded of two Dutch words for that which was of home manufacture and consumption.

And while the bag-pipe plays, each lusty jocund swain
Quaffs sillabubs in cans, to all upon the plain,
And to their country girls, whose nosebags they do wear.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 14.

SILLY. } Skinner thinks Silly, stultus, SILLILY. } ευνθης, written by Chaucer Sely, SILLINESS. } is from Ger. Selig, beatus, sanctus, pius; holy men, being for the most part ευνθεις,
i. e. simple; because, as the common lexicons say,
they judge of others from themselves; they themselves being ευνθεις, men of good morals, pure minds. The Ger. Selig, is the A. S. Selig, sellic, ge-selig; and it may be that they are but consequential usages of the A. S. Selig, datus, donatus, condonatus, præditus; beatus, felix, bonus, from the verb Sell-an, to give; given or endowed with gifts, blessed, happy, good. It has already appeared that our own word happy, from hap, is by usage restricted to good hap, and that fortunate and prosperous, owe their present restricted application to usage also. In Chaucer, Seliness, Mr.
Tyrwhitt interprets happiness, that is, the possession of much given, many gifts, many blessings.
See UNSELY.

Sely, or silly,—simple, harmless; i. e. good,
unsuspecting, or unsuspicious, guileless, harmless,
simple; and further, foolish.

A great selly,—is a great folly, (Ritson.)

She sight sely sore, (if Ellis and Jamieson are right,) is wonderfully sore; and is a consequential usage, from sellic, bonus, dignus, moratus, mirabilis.

See Wachter, Ihre, Ruddiman's Gloss. to G.
Douglas, and Jamieson.

Tho this sely mon this herde, to sorwe ys herte drowe.

R. Gloucester, p. 33.

Thus craftely hath she him besette
With her lime rodde, panter and snare,
The sely soule caught in her nette,
Of her sugred mouth alas nothing ware.

Chaucer. The Remedie of Loue.

Those sely clerkes han ful fast yronne
Toward the fen, bothe Alein and eke John.

Id. The Reves Tale, v. 4088.

Be ther non other maner resemblances
That ye may liken your parables to,
But if a sely wif be on of tho?

Id. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 5950.

Now if he wot it nat, how may he say,
That he hath very joy and sillinesse,
That is of ignorance ale in derkenesse?

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

"O God," (quod she) "so worldly selinesse
Which clerkes callen false felicity, Ymedled is with many bitternesse."

Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

Now was this a grete selly,
That trew luf and so grete envy
Als betwix tham twa was than Might bath at anes be in a man.

Ritson, vol. iii. Ywaine & Gawin.

A silly man, in simple weeds forworne,
And soild with dust of the long dried way;
His sandales were with toilsome travell torne,
And face all taud with scorching sunny ray.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 6.

Forth, ye fine wits, and rush into the presse,
And for the cloyed world your works addresse.
Is not a gnat, nor fly, nor seely ant,
But a fine wit can make an elephant.

Bp. Hall, b. vi. Sat. 1.

— Having layne
Her in a boate like the canowes of Inde,
Some seely trough of wood or some trees rind.

Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. i. s. 2.

O fooles, to raise such silly forts, not worth the least account,
Nor able to resist our force, with ease our horse may mount,
Quite ouer all their hollow dike.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. viii.

These kind of knaues I know, which in this plainnesse
Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends,
Then twenty silly-ducking obseruants,
That stretch their duties nicely.

Shakespeare. Lear, Act ii. sc. 2.

Why brook'st thou, ignorant horse, subjection?
Why do you, bull and boar, so sillily
Dissemble weakness, and by one man's stroke die,
Whose whole kind you might swallow and feed upon?

Donne, son. 12.

What can be more sillily arrogant and misbecoming, than for a man to think that he has a mind and understanding in him, but yet in all the universe beside there is no such thing?—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iv. c. 10.

So that it is great weakness and silliness, and not conscience, that prevails with these men I am speaking of, to live in disobedience of the laws.

Sharp, vol. ii. A Disc. of Conscience.

Make it a rule, to abstain, not only from the more shocking sort of oaths and imprecations, but from palliating them under silly disguises; or using others in their stead, that are gentler; for besides that they will lead you to worse, they are bad in themselves.—Secker, vol. ii. Ser. 32.

SILLY-HOW. In Sw. Seger-hufwa. Hufwa, is in Eng. Howve, (qv.) a hood; and silly, A. S.
Selig, happy, prosperous. "In Scotland the women call a haly or sily-how, (i. e. holy or fortunate cap or hood,) a film or membrane stretched over the heads of children new born," (Ruddi-man, Gloss. to G. Douglas in v. How; and see Dr. Jamieson.)

Great conceits are raised of the involution of membranous covering, commonly called the silly-how, that sometimes is found about the heads of children upon their birth, and is therefore preserved with great care, not only as medical in diseases, but effectual in success, concerning the infant and others; which is surely no more than a continued superstition.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. v. c. 11.

SILT. See SILE.

SILVAN, or } It. Silvāno; Lat Sylvanus, S'LVAN. } from sylva; Gr. Ταν, wood.

Of or pertaining to, consisting of, woods or groves; woody.

— Steepe Parnassus, on whose forehead grow,
All sylvan off-springs round.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xix.

Broke by the jutting land on either side;
In double streams the briny waters glide.
Betwixt two rows of rocks, a sylvan scene
Appears above, and groves for ever green.

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. i.

The restless fever of ambition laid,
Calm I retire, and seek the sylvan shade.

Churchill. The Prophecy of Famine.

SILVER, n. } Goth. Siluba; A. S. Seolfer, S'LVER, v. } sulfer; Dut. Silver; Ger. Sil- S'LVEREN. } ber; Sw. Silfwer. Junius de-S'LVERING, n. } rives from the Gr. Σταλβα, S'LVERLY. } to shine. Wachter—(because S'LVERY. } according to Tacitus,—silver was S'LVERLESS. } either unknown or disregarded by the ancient Germans,) also resorts to a Greek origin, and prefers the Gr. Αλφος, white, (s prefixed,) taking its name (as aurum, gold, also does) from its colour. Skinner suggests,—Sel, hence; multum, and fer-an, to fare; to fare well, to prosper; because much or plenty of this metal, efficit beatos. Not one of these is satisfactory.

Silver, (met.)—having the whiteness, the pallid whiteness of the colour of silver; white, whitish; having the softness, gentleness of sound, which that metal has; soft, gentle, dulcet.

Of seluer or and of gold, of tyn and of lede.

R. Gloucester, p. 1.

For he sente hem forth selveries. in a somer garnement.

Piers Ploughman, p. 153.

Four and twenti thousand ponde he gaf away to go,
To haf pes in his lyue, the lond no more schende.
The Danes tok the siluer, to Danmark gan wende.

R. Brunne, p. 39.

And whanne he had cast forth the silver in the temple,
he passide forth and ghede and hangide himself with a snare.

Wiclif. Matt. c. 27.

And he cast downe the syuer plates in the temple and departed, and went and hounge him selfe.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

For a man Demetrie bi name, a worcher in siluer makide siluerne housis to Diane.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 19.

For a certayn man named Demetrius, a syuersmyth, which made syuer schrynes for Diana.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Loke what ther is; put in thin hond and grope;
Thou shalt ther finden silver as I hope.
What, diuel of helle! shuld it elles be?
Shaving of silver, silver is parde.

Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16,705.

Whan was this said, doun in an extasie,
Rauished in spirite, in a dreame she fell,
And by apparaunce herd where she did lie,
Cupide the king tinging a siluer bell,
Which men might here fro heven into hell.

Id. The Testament of Creside.

Me no such cares nor combrous thoughts offend,
Ne once my minds unmoved quiet grieve;
But all the night in silver sleepe I spend,
And all the day to what I list, I doe attend.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 9.

And let your silver chime
Move in melodious time,
And let the base of heav'n's deep organ blow.

Milton, Ode 13.

Not Ancum's silver'd eel excelleth that of Trent.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 26.

Siluer and gold whether the angry or favourable gods haue denied them, I doubt. Neither will I affirme that there is no vaine in Germany which yeeldeth siluer & gold; for who hath sought it?

Greneway. Tacitus. Description of Germany.

The silver-sounding instruments did meet
With the base murmure of the waters fall.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

The siluer-bow bearer [the sun] and she,
That beares as much renouwe for archery;
Stoop with their painles shafts, & strike them dead,
As one would sleepe, and neuer keepe the bed.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xv.

Between compulsion, and a braue respect:
Let me wipe off this honourable dew,
That siluerly doth progresse on thy cheekes.

Shakespeare. K. John, Act v. sc. 2.

The silver here, and all over the kingdom of Mexico, is said to be finer and richer in proportion than that of Portos or Peru, though the oar be not so abundant.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1686.

You must rub it on well, till you find every little cavity of the metal sufficiently silvered over.

Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 492.

"Of all th' enamel'd race, whose silvery wing
Waves to the tepid zephyrs of the spring,
Or swims along the fluid atmosphere,
Once brightest shin'd this child of heat and air."

Pope. The Dunciad, b. iv.

The northern nations who established themselves upon the ruins of the Roman empire, seem to have had silver money from the first beginning of their settlements, and not to have known either gold or copper coins for several ages thereafter.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 5.

And thou, cherubic Gratitude, whose voice
To pious ears sounds silvery so sweet,
Come with thy precious incense, bring thy gifts,
And with thy choicest stores the altar crown.

Smart. On the Omniscience of the Supreme Being.

— His head, [Discipline]
Not yet by time completely silver'd o'er,
Bespoke him past the bounds of freakish youth,
But strong for service still, and unimpair'd.

Cowper. Task, b. ii.

SIM

SIMAGREE. Fr. Chemagrée, sinagrée. Menage derives from simia, an ape or monkey; others from simulacrum. Cotgrave calls it "a wry mouth or filthy face, crabbed visage," &c. Dryden applies it to the visage of the Cyclops in his attempts to look amiable.

Now in the chrystal stream, he looks, to try
His simagres, and rolls his glaring eye.
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. xiii.

SIMAR. See CYMAR.

SIMILAR. Fr. Similaire; It. Simigliante; Sp. Semejante; Lat. Similis; Gr. Ομαλος, even.
SIMILARITY. See DISSIMILAR, RESEMBLE, &c.
SIMILE. Like; having like qualities, like appearances.
SIMILITUDE.
SIMILITUDINARY.

He seyde by a simylitude, He that sowith gede out to sowe his seed, & while he sowith: sum felde bisidis the weye.—Wiclif. Luk. c. 8.

He spake by a similitude. A sower went out to sowe his sode: and as he sowed, some fel by the waye side.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

— Thus she sayde.

"That pitee renneth sone in gentil herte
(Feling his similitude in peines smerte)
Is proved all daye, as men may see,
As wel by werke as by auctoritee,
For gentil herte kitheth gentilisse.
Chaucer. The Squieres Tale, v. 10,792.

A tiraunt that was kinge of Cecyle, that had assayed the perill of his estate, shewed by similitude the dredes of realmes by gastenesse of a swerde, that honge ouer the heed of his famillier.—Id. Boecius, b. iii.

The similitudes proue nothyng, but are made to expresse more playnly that which is contayned in the Scripture and to lead thee into the spirituall understanding of the text.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 170.

Du. Sen. But what said Jacques?

Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1 Lord. O yes, into a thousand similies.

Shakespeare. As You Like It, Act ii. sc. 1.

But Spondanus would excuse Homer, for expressing no more of his applycation; with affirming it impossible; that the thing compared, and the comparison, should answer in all parts; and therefore alledges the vulgar vnderstanding of a simile, which is as grosse as it is vulgar; that a similitude must uno pede semper claudicare.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. ii. Comment.

— Had Phœbus faild to move

Æneas, in similitude of Periphas (the sonne Of grave Epytes) king at armes, and had good service done

To old Anchises; being wise, and even with him in yeares.
Id. Ib. b. xvii.

The same kind of nourishment taken in by animals, is turned into blood, milk, flesh, bones, nerves, and all the other similar parts.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 32.

My present concern is with the commandment to love our neighbour, which is a duty second and similar to that of the love of God.—Waterland. Works, vol. ix. Ser. 2.

Our Saviour chose this similitudinary way to express our union with himself.—Dr. Potter. Christophalg. (1680.) p. 44.

To which let me here add another near of kin to this, at least in name, and that is letting the mind upon the suggestion of any new notion, run immediately after similes to make it the clearer to itself; which, though it may be a good way, and useful in the explaining our thoughts to others; yet it is by no means a right method to settle true notions of any thing in our selves, because similies always fail in some part, and come short of that exactness which our conceptions should have to things, if we would think aright.
Locke. Conduct of the Underst. § 31.

From the knowledge I had of this tree, and the similarity it bore to the spruce, I judged that, with the addition of inspissated juice of wort and melasses, it would make a very wholesome beer.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 4.

Such is the similitude between Judaism, the ancient stock, and Christianity, which was ingrafted upon it.
Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 42.

To the greater part of manufactures, besides, it has already been observed, there are other collateral manufactures of so similar a nature, that a workman can easily transfer his industry from one of them to another.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 2.

In all cases this apparent distance is proportioned to the distance between the point of the retina, where the picture is made in one eye, and the point which is situate similarly to that on which the picture is made on the other eye.
Reid. On the Mind, c. 6. s. 3.

SIM

SIMMER. Written by More, Simber, and by Skinner, simper; the latter thinks it the same word as simper, subridere, (qv.)

To boil or bubble gently, with a gentle noise.

Placing the vessel in warm sand, increase the heat by degrees, till the spirit of wine begin to simmer or to boil a little.—Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 712.

Which things seem to me to be contriv'd even in the behalf of these creatures themselves, that their vital heat and moisture may not always onely simber in one sluggish tenour, but sometimes boil up higher and seethe over, the fire of life being more then ordinarily kindled upon some emergent occasion.
More. An Antidote against Atheism, b. ii. c. 12.

SIMNEL. Law Lat. Siminellus, sinnellus, symnellus; Spelman calls it,—

A purer kind of bread, so named, because made à simila, that is, the purer part of meal.

I'll to thee a simnell bring,
'Gainst thou go'st a mothering;
So that, when she blesseth thee
Half that blessing thou'll give me.

Herrick. Hesperides, p. 278.

SIMONY.

SIMO'NIACK. Fr. Simonie, simoniaque;
SIMONI'ACAL. It. Simonia; Sp. Simonia.
SIMONI'ACALLY. So named from Simon Magus, who proffered money to the apostles, in purchase of the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Simony,—the corrupt presentation of any one to an ecclesiastical benefice, for gift or reward, (Blackstone, b. iv. c. 4.)

For hit is symonye to sulle. that send is of grace.
Piers Plouhman, p. 150.

Spirituel marchandise is proprely simonie, that is, contentif desire to buy thing spirituel, that is, thing which apperteineth to the seintuarie of God, and to the cure of the soule.—Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

It is simonie to sell a benefice (as they call it) but to resigne vpon a pension, and thē to redeme the same, is no simony at all. Oh crafty jugglers and mockers with the word of God.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 108.

And hath committed simony withal spirituall thinges, whiche euen as the cursed Simon Magnus dyd, she hath solde for muche monye and for great riches.
Udal. Revelation of St. John, c. 18.

For a simoniake,
Is but a hermoniake
And no more ye make
Of simony men say
But a childes play.

Skelton. Colin Clout's come home again, p. 283.

Whose examination and proofes being sent vnto the pope, he pronounced him an heretike, schismatike, and simoniake, and declared him accursed, condemning him to perpetuall prison.—Holinshed. Hist. of Scotland, an. 1477. Jam. III.

It is but reasonable to believe, the Holy Ghost will not descend upon the simoniackal, unchaste, concubinary, schismatics, and scandalous priests, and excommunicate.
Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 6.

Benefices—disposed of, if not simoniackally, yet at least unworthily.—Burnet. Own Time.

Simony was not unknown in those times; and the clergy sometimes bought what they intended to sell. It appears that the bishopric of Carthage was purchased by a wealthy matron, named Lucilla, for her servant Majorinus. The price was 400 folles, about 2400*l.*
Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 16.

SIMPER, v. Serenius derives from Sw. Semper, semner, which Ihre says, is spoken of any one who affects extraordinary moderation in his food, (Somner.) SIMPERER.
SIMPERING, n.
SIMPERINGLY.

Gr. Σεινός.

Perhaps from the A.S. Smerc-ian, smer-ian; Ger. Schmieren,—to smirke.

To smirk,—or smile affectedly, conceitedly, foolishly.

With a made countenance about her mouth, between simpering and smiling, her head bowed somewhat down, [she] seemed to languish with over-much idleness.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

Cle. The second?

Di. She is one that may stand still discreetly enough, and ill favour'dly dance her measure; simper when she is courted by her friend, and slight her husband.
Beaum. & Fletcher. Philaster, Act i. sc. 1.

1736

SIM

Yet all day sits she simpering in her mew
Like some chaste dame, or shrined saint in shew.
Bp. Hall. Satires, b. iv. Sat. 1.

A simperer, that a court affords.
Neville. Imitation of Juvenal.

Why looks neat Curus all so simperingly?
Marston. Scourge of Villany, iii. 9.

For we can teach you how to simper,
And when 'tis proper you should whimper.
King. Art of Love, pt. xii.

— The proud Parnassian sneer,
The conscious simper, and the jealous leer,
Mix on his [Cibber] look.—Pope. Dunciad, b. ii.

Betty, with bridled chin, extends her face,
And then contracts her lips with simpering grace.
King. Little Mouths.

If she attempts the dimpled smile, delightful!
The dimpled smile of affectation's frightful:
Mark but her bagatelles—her whine—her whimper—
Her loll—her lisp—her saunter, stare—her simper.
Cunningham. An Epilogue.

There might the muse have saunter'd at her ease,
And, pleasing others, learn'd herself to please;
Lords should have listen'd to the sugar'd treat,
And ladies, simpring, own'd it vastly sweet.
Churchill. Epistle to William Hogarth.

SIMPLE, adj. Fr. Simple, simplese, simplicité; It. Semplice, semplicità, semplicità; Sp. Simple, simpleza, simplicista; Lat. Simplex, quasi sine plica, without fold, (plic-are, Gr. πλεκειν.) See COMPLEX, double.
SIMPLE, n. Plain, single; without fold or involution, mixture or composition; unmixed, unmingled, clear, perspicuous.
SIMPLE, v. Plain, without guile, without art or design, sincere, guileless, artless, undesigning, unsuspecting, credulous, silly.

Simple, Fr. n.—a simple in physick, a physical drug, (Cotgrave.) A herb or plant used for medicines is so called.

The simple men, that heere were, here red ther of nome,
And sende aftur more help to the emperour of Rome.
R. Gloucester, p. 97.

Thenne hadde Pacience as pilgrimes have in here pok
vitalles
Sobrete and symple speche.—Piers Plouhman, p. 252.

Lo I sende you as scheep in the myddil of wolves, therfor be ghe slygh as serpentis: and simple as dowues.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 10.

For oure glorie is this, the witnessyng of our conscience, that in symplenesse and clenness of god and not in fleischli wisdom but in the grace of god we lyuyden in this world, but more plenteuousli to ghou.—Id. 2 Corynth. c. 1.

To simple is my tonge to pronounce,
As minister of my wit, the doublenesse
Of this chanon, rote of all cursednesse.
Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16,767.

Beseching your excellence to defend
My simplesnesse, if ignoraunce offend
In any wise.
Id. Ballade.

That other arrow that hurteth lesse,
Was cleped (as I trow) simplese.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

In so moche as it is ferthereste fro the middleste simplititie of the poincte.—Id. Boecius, b. iv.

Yeftes were faire, but nat for thy
They helpe me but simply,
But Bialacoil loosed bee
To gone at large and to be free.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

He clotheth riches (as men seyne)
Under the simplest of pouerte,
And doth to seme of great deserte Thynge, which is littel worthe within.
Gower. Con. A. b. 1.

These prestes hadden wel conceiued,
That she was of great holynesse,
And with a counterfeit simplese,
Whiche hid was in a fals courage,
Feigned an heuenly message.
Id. Ib.

To fight or for to make cheste
It thought them then not honeste.
But of simplicitee and pacience
Thei maden then no defence.
Id. Ib. Prol.

Phisicians have in store
Their simples to compownd and match in mixture so As ech disease from sicklie corse they can enforce to go.—Turberville. That all Hurles, &c.

Saying, how it was a great symples to beleue so lyghtly such fleyng wordes.—Berners. Frois. Cron. vol. i. c. 320.

Before this cite ther were many assautes, and sore skry-mysshes, nygh euery daye, for they of the cite wolde nat yelde them vp symply, for alwaies they thought to be rescued.—Id. Ib. c. 26.

Thus having past all perill, I was come Within the compasse of that islands space;
The which did seeme, unto my simple doome,
The onely pleasant and delightfull place
That ever troden was of footings trace.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 10.

On every hill side, and each vale he lookes,
If 'mongst their store of simples may be found
An hearbe to draw and heale his smarting wound.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 4.

Go therefore thou, with all thy stirring train
Of swelling sciences, the gifts of grief;
Go loose the links of that soul-binding chain,
Enlarge this uninquisitive belief:
Call up men's spirits, that simples retain.
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. vi.

See, how she paceth forth in virgin-white,
Like what she is, the daughter of a duke,
And sister: darting forth a dazzling light
On all that come her simples to rebuke.
B. Jonson. Epithalamion.

And here in making mention of this matter, I cannot but detect the knaverie of these herbarists and simples.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxi. c. 20.

Impatient simples climbe for blossomes here;
When dewes (heav'n's secret milk) in unseen shou'rs
First feed the early childhood of the year;
And in ripe summer, stoop for hearbs and flou'rs.
Davenant. Gondibert, b. ii. c. 5.

O happy men! you ever did possesse
No wisdom, but was mixt with simples;
So wanting malice: and from folly free,
Since reason went with your simplicity.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 3.

Sometimes the veriest simplicians are most lucky, the wisest politicians least, especially where orders are unobserved.—Archd. Arnway. Tab. of Mod. (1661,) p. 44.

That precept of the Pythagoreans, simplifie your self, reduce your self to one, how wise, how holy, how true is it? What a sure foundation is it of life, liberty, and easie sagacity in things belonging to vertue, religion, and justice?
More. Defence of the Moral Cabbala, pt. iv. c. 1.

A plant so unlike a rose, it hath been mistaken by some good simplist for amomum.
Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. ii. c. 6.

Tho' the qualities that affect our senses are, in the things themselves, so united and blended, that there is no separation, no distance between them; yet 'tis plain, the ideas they produce in the mind enter by the senses simple and unmixed.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 2.

The first who fell, beneath my javelin bled;
King Augia's son, and spouse of Agamede;
(She that all simples healing virtues knew,
And every herb that drinks the morning dew.)
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xi.

I know that here are several sorts of medicinal herbs made use of by the natives, who go often a simpling, seeming to understand their virtues much, and making great use of them.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

They divided the divine attributes into so many persons; because the infirmity of a human mind cannot sufficiently conceive, or explain, so much power and action in a simplicity so great and indivisible as that of God.
Pope. View of the Epic Poem, s. 1.

Philosophers have generally advised men to shun needless occupations, as the certain impediments of a good and happy life: they bid us endeavour to simplify ourselves, or to get into a condition requiring of us the least that can be to do.
Barrow, vol. ii. Ser. 34.

While botanists, all cold to smiles and dimpling,
Forsake the fair, and patiently—go simpling.
Goldsmith. Prol. to Zobeide.

This being of a more balsamic nature than the other, proves that these people have some knowledge of simples.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 2.

They look upon persons employing their time in making verses, pictures, or in reading books, as simpletons easily to be deceived; as much their natural prey, as the pigeon is to the kite.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 60.

By imitation, I do not mean imitation in its largest sense, but simply the following of other masters, and the advantage to be drawn from the study of their works.
Reynolds. Dis. 6.

The simplification of machines renders them more and more perfect, but this simplification of the rudiments of languages renders them more and more imperfect, and less proper for many of the purposes of language; and this for the following reasons.
Smith. On the Formation of Languages.

SIMULACHRE. Fr. Simulacre; It. Simulacro; Sp. Simulacro; Lat. Simulachrum, any thing (figure, image,) made in likeness (similis) of some other thing.

Phidias the Atheniense, whom all wryters do commend, made of yuory the simulachre or image of Jupiter, honoured by the gentiles, on the hyghe hille of Olympus.
Sir T. Elyot. The Governour, b. i. c. 8.

SIMULATE, v. } Fr. Simuler; It. Simulare; Sp. Simular; Lat. Simulare, (from similis, like,) SIMULA'TION. } SIMULAR. }

to form, to feign, to counterfeit a likeness. See DISSEMBLE, and the quotation below from Bolingbroke.

To feign that to be which is not; to put on, or assume false appearances; generally—
To feign, to pretend, to counterfeit.

The monkes were not threatened to be undre this curse, because they had vowed a simulate chastyete.
Bale. English Volaries, pt. ii.

The royalists were at night fain to hang lighted matches on the hedges (so to simulate their aboad thereabouts.)
Fuller. Worthies. Berkshire.

As Christ in the gospel rebuketh the Pharises aboue al other that were open sinners, and calleth them ypocrites, that is to saye simulars and painted sepulcres.
Udal. Prol. to the Romaynes.

I feare me some maintaine blindnes more with theyr simulation, then they open the lyght with theyr preaching.
Fryth. Workes, p. 61.

— Hide thee, thou bloody hand;
Thou periur'd, and thou simular of vertue;
That art incestuous.—Shakespeare. Lear, Act iii. sc. 2.

A general custome of simulation (which is this last degree) is a vice, rising either of a naturall falsenesse, or fearfulness; or of a minde, that hath some maine faults; which because a man must needs disguise, it maketh him practice simulation, in other things, lest his hand should be out of use.—Bacon. Of Simulation & Dissimulation.

What though the first smooth Cæsar's arts caress'd,
Merit and virtue, simulating me?
Severely tender! cruelly humane!
The chain to clinch, and make it softer sit
On the new-broken still ferocious state.
Thomson. Liberty, pt. iii.

Simulation and dissimulation, for instance, are the chief arts of cunning: the first will be esteemed always by a wise man unworthy of him, and will be therefore avoided by him, in every possible case; for, to resume my Lord Bacon's comparison, simulation is put on that we may look into the cards of another, whereas dissimulation intends nothing more than to hide our own.

Bolingbroke. Idea of a Patriot King.

SIMULTA'NEOUS. } The Barb. Lat. Si-
SIMULTA'NEOUSLY. } multaneus, is simulatus.
(See SIMULATE.) Our own word and the modern Fr. Simultanée are from the Lat. Simul.
Being, or acting at the same time, in unison.

All that we have need of, in the performing of these, is only God's concurrence, whether previous or simultaneous.
Hammond, vol. iv. Ser. 2.

He introduces the deities of both acting simultaneously.
Shenstone.

SIMULTY. Fr. Simulté; Lat. Simultas, from simulitas, or similitas. Applied to—

The feeling of envy or hate, that arises between those who have similar pursuits, or objects of rivalry.

Nor seek to get his patron's favour, by embarking himself in the factions of the family; to enquire after domestic simulties, their sports or affections.—B. Jonson. Discoveries.

SIN, n. } A. S. Synne, syng-ian, syn-
SIN, v. } leus, synne-ful; Dut. Sonde, SIN'FUL. } sunde, sondighen; Ger. Sunde, SIN'FULLY. } sundighen; Sw. Synd. Junius SIN'FULNESS. } derives from Gr. Συνεω, no-
SIN'LESS. } cere, ludere, to hurt, to injure.
SIN'LESSNESS. } Wachter,—from Ger. Sun-en,
SIN'NER. } expiare, to expiate, to atone SIN'NER, v. } for; sin, being that which ought to be expiated or atoned for. To sin seems to signify,—to go or do wrong (see WRONG), to err, to go astray; and may be allied to the A. S. verb, Syndrian, to go apart or asunder.

To go or do wrong, to act in disobedience, in opposition—to the laws of God; to violate them, to offend against them, to neglect or disregard them. It is usually applied to offences against the laws of religion, or morality, as distinguished from those of the state. See the quotation from Hobbs.

To sinner (in Pope),—see SAINT.

And the archebyssop of Canterbury, Wyllam that tho was,
Sacrede hym, as yt was rygt, wel synuolyche, alas!
R. Gloucester, p. 445.

& fro thien he went vnto the courte of Rome,
For to tak his penance & of his synnes dome.
R. Brunne, p. 1.

And suffren hem that synful beon. til tyme that thei repent.—Piers Plouhman, p. 389.

— And seide to the Jewes
That seeth hym synneles. cesse nat ich hote
To stryke with stoon oth' with staf. this strompett to dethe.
Id. p. 231.

Thanne Judas that bitriede him saygh that he was dampned he repented and broughte agen the thritty pens to the princes of prestis and to the eldre man of the puple, and seide, I have synned bitraynge rightfull blood.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 27.

Then when Judas whiche betrayed him, sawe that he was condempned, he repeted him selfe, & brought agayne the xxx. plates of syluer to the chiefe priestes & elders, saying: I haue sinned betrayinge the innocente bloude.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

But that ye wite that mannes sone hath power to forgeue synnes in erthe.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 9.

That ye maye knowe that the sonne of man hath power to forgeue synnes in erthe.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Jhesus seide to hem hoole men han no neede to a leche, but thei that ben yvel at eese; for I cam not to clepe just men but synners.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 2.

Jesus heard yt, he sayd vnto them: The hole haue no nede of the phisicion, but the sycke. I came not to call the ryghteous, but the synners to repentaunce.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And whanne Symount Petir sayz [saygh] this thing: he felde down to the knees of Jhesus and seyde, Lord go fro me: for Y am a synful man.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 5.

When Symon Peter sawe that, he fell doune at Jesus knees, sayinge: Lorde go fro me, for I am a synnefull man.
Bible, 1551. Luke, iii. 2.

He that oft falleth in sinne, he despiseth the mercy of God, and encreseth his sinne, and is unkind to Crist, and he waxeth the more feble to withstand sinne, and sinneth the more lightly, and the later ariseth, and is more slow to shrive him.—Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

For as Jesu my sinfull soule saue,
There nis creature in all this world liuing,
Like vnto her that I would gladly haue.
Id. Ballad Pleasant.

Thou blamist Crist, and sayst ful bitterly,
He misdeparteth richesse temporal;
Thy neighebour thou witest sinfully,
And sayst, thou hast a litel, and he hath all.
Id. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 4526.

Full ofte er this it hath be seine
The comen people is ouerleyn,
And hath the kynges synne abought,
All though the people aglite nought.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.
But Achiloo the priest and hee,
So as the bokes it recorden,
For certaine some of golde accorden,
That thilke horrible sinfull dede Assolled was.
Id. Ib. b. iii.

— Down he fell
A monstrous serpent on his belly prone,
Reluctant, but in vaine, a greater power
Now rul'd him, punisht in the shape he sinn'd, According to his doom.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

— But first I mean
To exercise him in the wilderness,
There he shall first lay down the rudiments
Of his great warfare, ere I send him forth
To conquer sin and death the two grand foes,
By humiliation and strong sufferance.
Id. Paradise Regained, b. i.

His weakness shall o'ercome Satanic strength
And all the world, and mass of sinfull flesh.—Id. Ib.

All crimes are indeed sins, but not all sins crimes. A sin may be in the thought or secret purpose of a man, of which neither a judge, nor a witness, nor any man can take notice; but a crime is such a sin as consists in an action against the law, of which action he can be accused, and tried by a judge, and be convinced or cleared by witnesses. Farther, that which is no sin in itself, but indifferent, may be made sin by a positive law.

Hobbs. On the Common Laws of England.
King. So, if a sonne that is by his father sent about merchandize, doe sinfully miscarry vpon the sea; the imputation of his wickednesse, by your rule, should be imposed vpon his father that sent him.
Shakespeare. Hen. V. Act iv. sc. 1.

— Nor yet staid the terror there
Infernal ghosts, and hellish furies, round
Environ'd thee, some howl'd, some yell'd, some shriek'd,
Some bent at thee thir fiery darts, while thou Sat'st unappall'd in calm and sinless peace.
Milton. Paradise Regained, b. i.

— I am sent
To shew thee what shall come in future dayes
To thee and to thy offspring; good with bad
Expect to hear, supernal grace contending With sinfulness of men.—Id. Paradise Lost, b. xi.

For when this externall frame of godliness shall break about their ears, they being really at the bottome devoid of the true fear and love of God, and destitute of a more free and unprejudic'd use of their faculties, by reason of the sinfulness and corruption of their natures, it will be an easy thing to allure them to an assent to that which seems so much for their present interest.

More. Antidote against Atheism, pt. i. c. i.

Is there no means, but that a sin-sick land
Must be let blood with such a boist'rous hand?
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. iv.

All sin is foolish upon many accounts; as proceeding from ignorance, error, inconsiderateness, vanity; as implying weak judgment, and irrational choice; as thwarting the dictates of reason, and best rules of wisdom; as producing very mischievous effects to ourselves, bereaving us of the chief goods, and exposing us to the worst evils.

Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 18.

If men did duly weigh the sinfulness and the danger that all schisms and separations of this kind do bring upon a nation, they would be thus affected.—Sharp, vol. ii. Ser. 1.

And since he condescended to such familiarity to those frail mortals, so many of whom were apt to turn the favours of God into wantonness, we may the less admire at his gracious condescensions to those, the sinfulness of whose condition will keep them from turning his vouchsafements into any thing, but occasions of joy and gratitude.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 287.

How usual it is for persons, well advanced in piety, when they are making such enquiries as these, to dwell altogether on their defects and miscarriages, without regarding the regular course of a virtuous and well-ordered life; and to condemn themselves, as false and insincere, because they are not perfect and sinless?—Atterbury, vol. iii. Ser. 12.

SIN. Dut. Sicht-ent, sind; Ger. Seit, SINCE, prep. sint; Sw. Sid, sed-an, sich-an;
SINCE, conj. Scotch, Sen, syne. In Dut. and SINCE, ad. Ger. Sicht, visus; Sw. Sedd.
SITH. Mr. Tooke has written upon SITHENCE. these words in his best manner.

Sithe—applied to time, seems so used with a subaudition of time; time sith or seen—time past, time, generally.

“Since is a very corrupt abbreviation, confounding together different words and different combinations of words; and is therefore in modern English made (like but) to serve purposes which no one word in any other language can answer;
because the same accidental corruptions, arising from similarity of sound, have not happened in the correspondent words of any other language.”

Where we now employ since, was formerly, according to its respective signification, used, sometimes,—1. Seothan, sioththan, setthan, siththan, siththen, sithen, sithence, sithens, sithnes, sithns;
sometimes,—2. Syne, sine, sene, sen, syn, sin;
sometimes,—3. Seand, seeing, seeing that, seeing as, sens, sense, sence; sometimes,—4. Sithe, sith;
sithe, sith, seen that, seen as, sens, sense, sence.

Accordingly since, in modern English, is used four ways; two as a preposition, connecting (or rather affecting) words, and two as a conjunction, affecting sentences. It is also used adverbially, as, when we say,—It is a year since; i. e. a year seen.

When used as a preposition, it has always the signification, either of the past part. seen joined to thence, (that is, seen, and thence-forward;) or else it has the signification of the past part. seen only.

When used as a conjunction, it has sometimes the signification of the present part. seeing or seeing that; and sometimes the signification of the past part. seen, or seen that. As a preposition,—

1. Since, (for Sithan, sithence, or seen and thence- forward;) as,—“Such a system of government as the present, has not been ventured on by any king since the expulsion of James the Second.”
2. Since, (for syne, sene, or seen;) as,—“Did

George the Third reign before or since that example?” As a conjunction,—3. Since, (for seand, seeing, seeing as, or seeing that;) as,—“If I should labour for any other satisfaction, but that of my own mind, it would be an effect of phrenzy in me, not of hope; since it is not truth, but opinion, that can travel the world without a passport.” 4. Since, (for siththe, sith, seen as, seen that;) as,—“Since death in the end takes from all, whatsoever fortune or force takes from any one; it were a foolish madness in the shipwreck of worldly things, where all sinks but the sorrow, to save that.”

Junius says,—“Since that time, Exinde. Contractum est ex Angl. Sith thence, q. d. sero post: ut Sith illud originem traxerit ex illo Seithu, sero; quod habet Arg. Cod.”

Skinner says,—“Since, a Teut. Sint; Belg.
Sind, post, postea, postquam. Doct. Th. H. putat deflexum a nostro sithence. Non absurdum etiam esset declinare a Lat. Exhinc, E et H abjectis, et x facillima mutatione in s transeunte:”
again, he says,—“Sith ab A. S. Siththan, syththan; Belg. Seyd, sint, post, post illa, postea.”

After the explanation I have given. I suppose it unnecessary to point out the particular errors of the above derivations. Sithence and sith, though now obsolete, continued in good use down even to the time of the Stuarts.

Hooker in his writings, uses—Sithence, sith, see- ing, and since. The two former he always properly distinguishes, using sithence for the true import of the A. S. Siththan, and sith for the true import of the A. S. Siththe; which is the more extraordinary, because authors of the first credit had, very long before Hooker's time, confounded them together, and thereby led the way for the present indiscriminate and corrupt use of since in all the four cases mentioned.

Seeing, Hooker uses sometimes, perhaps, (for it will admit a doubt,) improperly. And since, (according to the corrupt custom which has now universally prevailed in the language,) he uses indifferently either for sithence, seen, seeing, or sith.

Such is the doubtful use of it by Shakespeare, in the following passage:—

“Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear;
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.”

For it may either be resolved thus;—It seems strange that men, seeing that death will come when it will come, should fear;

Or,—Strange that men should fear; it being seen that death will come when it will come.

The first age & tyme was from oure firste fader Adam
To Noe, & seththe tho other from Noe to Abraham.
R. Gloucester, p. 9.

The thrid sorrow of this lond com thorgh the Sessions,
That ten sithes aryued vppon the Bretons & sithen were chaced ageyn away with maistrice.
R. Brunne, p. 7.

And he axide his fadir how long it is sithe this hath falle to him? and he seyde fro childhood.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 9.

And he asked his father: how long is it a goo, sens thys hathe happened him? And he sayd, of a chyld.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

For sithen the fadris dieden all thingis lasten fro the begynnyng of creature.—Wiclif. 2 Peter, c. 3.

For sence the fathers dyed, all thinges continue in the same estate wherein they wer at the begynnyng.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

“O mighty God, if that it be thy will,
Sin thou art rightfull juge, how may it be
That thou wolt soffren innocence to spill,
And wicked folk regne in Prosperitee?”
Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 5234.

For sin he said that we ben jangleresses,
As ever mote I brouken hole my tresses,
I shal nat sparen for no curtesie
To speke him harm, that sayth us vilanie.
Id. The Marchantes Tale, v. 10,181.

And therefore sith I know of love's peine,
And wot how sore it can a man destreine,
As he that oft hath ben caught in his las,
I you foryeve all holly this trespas.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1817.

These felons full of falsite,
Hath many sithes beguiled me.
Chaucer. The Rom. of the Rose

What shuld I tellen hem, sin they ben tolde?
In youthe he made of Ceys and Alcyon,
And sithen hath he spoke of everich on
This noble wives, and thise lovers eke.
Id. The Man of Lawes ProL v. 4478.

This child of Maurice was sithen emperour
Made by the pope, and lived Cristenly,
To Cristes chirche did he gret honour.—Id. Ib. v. 5541.

And sithen than that we fynde,
That werres in her owne kynde
Ben towarde god of no deserte:
And eke thei bringen in pouerte
Of worldes good, it is merueille,
Amonge the men what it maie eyle,
That thei a pees ne connen set.—Gower. Con. A. b. iii.

And whan he wiste, it was Constance,
Was neuer father halfe so blithe,
Wepende he kiste hir ofte sithe,
So was his herte all ouercome.—Id. Ib. b. ii.

In suche wepyng, and suche crie
His dead wife, whiche laie hym bie,
A thousande sithes he hir kiste.—Id. Ib. b. viii.

A man may alway erre, & yet not fayle nor fal away fro
God, sith euery error is not dapnable.
Sir T. More. Works, p. 775.

And therefore sithence the Bishop of Rome wil nowe a daies so be called, and chalengeth vnto him selfe an autho-ritie that is none of his.
Jewell. Defence of the Apologie, p. 122.

Euer sithence the time of this lawe, a woonderful vn-cleannesse of life, and manners in Goddes ministers, and sondrie horrible enormities haue folowed.—Id. Ib. p. 180.

For sithens shootinge was neglected and decayed amonge
the Romaynes, many a battayle and fiede hath ben lost.
Ascham. Toxophilus, b. i.

But whenas Calidore was comen in,
And gan aloud for Pastorell to call,
Knowing his voice, although not heard long sin,
She sudden was revived therewithall,
And wondrous joy felt in her spirits thrall.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 11.

A thousand sithes I curse that carefull houre
Wherein I longd the neighbour towne to see.
Id. The Shepheards Calender. January.

But, faire Fidessa, sithens fortune guile,
Or enimes poure, hath now captived you,
Returne from whence ye came, and rest awhile,
Till morow next.—Id. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 4.

It is not in thy power to turn this destiny,
Nor stop the torrent of those miseries
(If thou neglectst her still) shall fall upon thee.
Sith that thou art dishonest, false of faith,
Proud, and doth think no power can cross thy pleasures.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Prophetess, Act iii. sc. 3.

Warw. Talke not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.
Shakespeare. 3 Pt. Henry VI. Act i. sc. 1.

Thus we see that there was no cause of dissimulation in these things, betweene that one only people before Christ, and the kingdomes of the world since.
Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. iii. § 11.

For since the will by conceiving sin hath the soul of life;
and of life there is no recovery without repentance, the death of sin; repentance not able to kill sin, but by withdrawing the will from it; the will impossible to be withdrawn, unless it concur with a contrary affection to that which accompanied it before in evil: Is it not clear, that as an inordinate delight did first begin sin, so repentance must begin with a just sorrow.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

In saying who soeuer doth beleue & is baptised, he appoint-eth that the partie to whom baptisme is administred shall first beleue, and then be baptized; to the end that beleueing may go before this sacramēt in the receiuer, no otherwise then preaching in the giuer, sith equally in both, the law of Christ declareth not onely what things are required, but also in what order they are required.—Id. Ib. Pref.

Againe, sith the later euen of the apostles owne times, had that which in the former was not thought vpon in this generall proposing of the apostles times, there is no certaine which should be followed, especially seeing that yee giue vs great cause to doubt how farre yee allow those times.
Id. Ib.

Baptizing of infants, although confest by themselves to haue bene continued euen sithence the verie apostles owne times, yet they altogether condemned.—Id. Ib.

For it [imputation] consisteth in such acts and deeds of his,
as could not haue longer continuance then while they were in doing, nor at that very time belong vnto any other but to him from whom they come, and therefore how men either then, or before or sithence should be made partakers of them, there can be no way imagined, but onely by imputation.

SIN

Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. v. § 56.

* Peradventure the Church hath not now the leisure which it had then, or else those things whereupon so much time was then well spent, haue sithence that lost their dignitie and worth. If the reading of the law, the Prophets and Psalmes bee a part of the seruice of God, as needful vnder Christ as before, and the adding the New Testament, as profitable as the ordaining of the Old to bee read; if therewith in stead of Jewish prayer it bee also for the good of the church to annexe that varietie which the apostle doth commend; seeing that the time which wee spend is no more then the orderly performance of these things necessarily required, why are wee thought to exceed in length?

Id. Ib. § 32.

SINAPISM. Fr. Sinapiser; It. Senapismo; Cataplasm, ex sinapi; i.e. of mustard.

The places ought before the application of those topicke medicines, to be well prepared with the razour, and a sinapisme or rubicative made of mustard-seed, untill the place look red.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxix. c. 6.

SINCE'RE. } Fr. Sincère; It. Sincero; Sp. Sincere.
SINCE'RELY. } Sincero; Lat. Sincerus, i. e.
SINCE'RENESS. } sine cera, applied to honey freed SINCE'RITY. } or cleansed from the mixture of wax (cera). And thus generally—

Freed from impurity, from any thing foul, polluted or corrupt, from filth or foulness, pollution or corruption; unmixed, unalloyed, uncorrupt. And further,—

Pure, candid, ingenuous, faithful; free or frank.

Sine vulnere corpus sincerumque fuit, i. e. sound, entire. See the second quotation from Dryden, and that from Hooker.

I answered that master Wickliffe was noted while he was living, to be a man not onely of most famous doctrine, but also of a very sincere life and conuersation.

Fryth. Workes, p. 117.

Seldome or neuer shall you find commonwealths or gouernment, which is absolutely and sincerely made of any of them aboue named, but alwaies mixed with another, and hath the name of that which is more, and ouer-ruleth the other alwaies or for the most part.—Smith. Commonwealth, b. i. c. 6.

If they, or any of them do depose, that I have not sincerely and wholly declared as is contained in the second article, let him and every of them be examined, in virtue of their oath, how they do know it, and by what means.

State Trials. Edw. VI. 1550. Bonner.

It was the necessitie not of preaching things agreeable with the word, but of reading the word it selfe at large to the people, which caused churches throughout the world to haue publike care, that the sacred oracles of God being procured by common charge, might with great sedulitie be kept both intire and sincere.

Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. v. § 22.

But if a man would know the true and syncere vermilion indeed, it ought to have the rich and fresh colour of skarlet.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiii. c. 7.

And think all cunning, all proceeding one,

And nothing simple, and sincerely done.

Daniel. Ded. of the Queen's Arcad.

Ot. I rest as far from wrong of sincereness, As he flies from the practice, trust me madam, I know by their confessions, he suborn'd, What I should eat, drink, touch, or only have scented.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Bloody Brother, Act iii. sc. 1.

You mend old shooes well, mend your old manners better, And suddenly see you leave off this sincereness.

Id. Women Pleas'd, Act iv. sc. 1.

But as a man that lov'd no great commerce With bus'ness and with noise, he ever flies That maze of many ways, which might disperse Him into other men's uncertainties: And with a quiet calm sincerity, H' effects his undertakings really.

Daniel. A Funeral Poem.

Yet, had his aspect nothing of severe, But such a face as promis'd him sincere.

Dryden. Character of a good Parson.

He [Achilles] try'd a third, a tough well chosen spear; The inviolable body stood sincere, Though Cygnus then did no defence provide, But scornful offered his unshielded side.

Id. Ovid. Metam. b. xii.

And a good man may likewise know when he obeys God sincerely. Not but that men often deceive themselves with an opinion, or at least a groundless hope of their own sincerity; but if they will deal fairly with themselves, and use due care and diligence, there are very few cases (if any) wherein they may not know their own sincerity in any act of obedience to God; For what can a man know concerning himself, if not the reality of his own intentions?

Tillotson, Ser. 15.

SIN

The whole time of war ought to be a time of general mourning; a mourning in the heart, a mourning much more sincere than on the death of one of those princes whose accursed ambition is often the sole cause of war.

Knox. On the Folly of War.

Let us consider also, that sincerity is a duty no less plain than important; that our consciences require it of us, and reproach us for every breach of it; that the light of nature taught it the very heathens, though imperfectly, as it did every thing else; and that scripture abounds with the strictest precepts of it, and strongest motives to it.

Id. vol. iii. Ser. 8.

SINDON. Lat. Sindon; Gr. Σινδων, fine linen.

There were found a book and a letter, both written in fine parchment, and wrapped in sindons of linen.—Bacon.

SINE. Fr. Sinus; Lat. Sinus. See the quotation.

The sine or right sine of an arc, is the line drawn from one extremity of the arc, perpendicular, to the diameter which passes through the other extremity.

Hutton. Course of Mathematics, vol. ii. p. 2.

SINECURE. Lat. Sine cura, without care. See the quotation from Blackstone.

But oh! the nymph that mounts above the skies, And, gratis, clears religion's mysteries, Resolv'd the church's welfare to ensure, And make her family a sine-cure.

Young. Love of Fame, Sat. 5.

The great patent offices in the exchequer are in reality and substance no other then pensions, and in no other light shall I consider them. They are sinecures. They are always executed by deputy. The duty of the principal is as nothing.—Burke. On Economical Reform.

When the clerk so presented is distinct from the vicar, the rectory thus invested in him becomes what is called a sine-cure; because he hath no cure of souls, having a vicar under him to whom that cure is committed.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. i. c. 2.

SINew, n. } A. S. Sina, sine, sinew, sinewa, SINew, v. } sinu, nervus. Dut. Senuw, sinuwe; SINewLESS. } Ger. Sene. In old English also SINewy. } written Sin: "And karf atoo SINewish. } a veyn, and the next sin," SINewous. } (P. T., v. 588.) Lye, in Junius.

Applied, consequentially, to—

Strength, might, firmness, vigour, energy.

Usage of labour is a gret thing; for it maketh, as sayth Seint Bernard, the labourer to have strong armes and hard sinewes.—Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

It is not the bones, nor the sinowes, nor the fleshe that hangeth thereon, but it is the highest parte of man, the very soule of man, hee is the grounde and auctor of all conspiscence.—Fryth. Workes, p. 269.

By that which lately hapned, Una saw That this her knight was feeble, and too faint; And all his sinewes woxen weake and raw, Through long enprisonment, and hard constraint.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

And aske the ladie Bona for thy queene; So shalt thou sinow both these lands together, And hauing France thy friend, thou shalt not dread The scattred foe, that hopes to rise againe.

Shakespeare. 3 Pt. Hen. VI. Act ii. sc. 6.

Whose sinewed wings (in their resistless course) Beat the thin air, with such a violent force, That the light birds dropt headlong from the skies.

Drayton. The Owl.

All that ever was said against these helps to beauty, seems to many wise women weak and sinewless.

Bp. Taylor. Artificial Handsoneness, p. 194.

— That first and virgin birth of thine Be so articulate, so masculine, So truly limb'd, so sinewy, so compact, So sweetly fair, so every way exact, As may endure the most judicious touch.

Drayton. Barons' Wars, b. i.

His [Hugh de Lacie] neck was short, and his bodie hairie, as also not fleshie but sinewish and strong compact.

Holinshed. Conquest of Ireland, c. 24.

His [Meillerius] armes and other lims more sinewous than fleshie, a stout and a valiant gentleman he was and emulous.—Id. Ib. c. 10.

In the principal figures of a picture, the painter is to employ the sinews of his art, for in them consists the principal beauty of his work.

Dryden. Paral. between Poetry & Painting.

These seats our sires, a hardy kind, To the fierce sons of war confin'd, The flower of chivalry, who drew With sinew'd arm the stubborn yew.—Tickell. Ode.

1739

SIN

Bold, firm and graceful, are thy generous youth, By hardship sinew'd, and by danger fir'd, Scattering the nations where they go.—Thomson. Summer.

The son of Letus, brave Pelasgus' heir, Hippothous, dragg'd the carcass through the war; The sinewy ancles bor'd the feet he bound With thongs, inserted through the double wound.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xvii.

Then wither'd weakness foils the sinewy arm Of man's meridian and high-hearted power.

Young. On Public Affairs, p. 417.

SING, v. } Sw. Sjunga; Dut. Singhen; SINGER. } Ger. Singen; A. S. Sing-an;
SINGING, n. } Goth. Siggvan, legere, to SINGINGLY. } read: siggvan lokos, legere
SONG. } libros (Luc. iv. 16), to read, SONGISH. } to recite. Applied to the SONGLESS. } reading of numbers of per-SONGSTER. } sons, the murmuring sound of SONGSTRESS. } numbers reading, their chant,
SONNET. } or musical modulation of voice SONNETTE'ER. } in reading or recitation; and SONNETING, n. } hence—SONNETIST. } To utter vocal sounds in tune or harmony, in musical proportion or concord; to write or speak in verse, in poetry; to record, to relate, to rehearse, to celebrate in verse or poetry. Applied also to the vocal utterance of certain birds; to sounds resembling the strains of musick.

Song,—any thing songe, songen, or sung.

So gret & murye was that song, that me song ther inne wyde.

That the folc stod, that ther were, as hil were y nome.

R. Gloucester, p. 190.

Better him wer with eise in clostre haf led his life, The seruise of his song recorded and lered.

R. Brunne, p. 172.

& thi messe songen.—Id. Ib.

And ich sang that song tho. and so dude meny hondred.

Piers Ploughman, p. 377.

And ich y saved as ge may see. with oute syngynge of masse.—Id. p. 206.

Hauynge the harpis of God and syngynge the song of Moises the seruaut of God, and the song of the Lombe.

Wiclif. Apocalips, c. 15.

Hauing the harpes of God, & they songe the songe of Moises the seruaut of God, and the songe of the Lambe.

Bible, 1551. Ib.

These birdes, that I you deuise, They song her song as faire and well, As angels done espirituell, And trusteth me, when I hem herde, Full lustie and well I ferde: For never yet such melodie Was heard of man that mighte die.

Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

And right anon in comen tombesteres Fetis and smale, and yonge frutesteres, Singers with harpes.—Id. The Pardoner's Tale, v. 12,411.

In suffisaunce, in blisse, and in singings, This Troilus gan all his life to lede.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iv.

And playen songes on a smal ribible; Therto he song somtime a loud quible.

Id. The Miller's Tale, v. 3332.

In a foreste alone he was He sawe vpon the grene gras The faire floures fresshe springe, He herd among the leues singe The throstel, with the nyghtingale.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

Whan that she sigh the bowes thicke, And that there is no bare sticke, But all is hid with leaues grene, To woodde cometh this Philomene, And maketh hir firste yers flight, Where as she singeth daie and night: And in hir songe all openly She maketh hir plaint.—Id. Ib. b. v.

But wolde God that nowe were one An other suche as Arione Whiche had an harpe of suche temprure And therto of good measure He songe, that he the beastes wilde Made of his note tame and milde.—Id. Ib. Prol.

For when I wolde with hir glade, And of hir loue songes make: She saide, it was not for hir sake, And liste not my songes here, Ne witen, what the wordes were.—Id. Ib. b. i.

Nowe since I haue performed euery part
Of thy commaunde, as neare as tonge can tell,
Content thee yet before my muse depart,
To take this sonet for my last farewell.
Gascoigne. Dan Bartholomew of Bathe.

And them before, the fry of children yong
Their wanton sportes and childish mirth did play,
And to the maydens sowning tymbrels song
In well attuned notes a ioyous lay.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 12.

— And when the fire
Of appetite was quenched; the muse inflam'd
The sacred singer. Of men highest fam'd,
He sung the glories; and a poeme pend,
That in applause, did ample heauen ascend.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. viii.

Their diriges, their trentals, and their shrifts,
Their memories, their singings, and their gifts.
Spenser. Mother Hubbard's Tale.

Counterfaite courtiers—speaking lispingly, and answering singingly.—North. Philosopher at Court, (1575), p. 16.

Thir song was partial, but the harmony
(What could it less when spirits immortal sing :)
Suspended hell, and took with ravishment
The thronging audience.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

— Yet not the more
Cease I to wander where the Muses haunt
Cleer spring, or shady grove, or sunnie hill,
Smit with the love of sacred song. Id. Ib. b. iii.

— Now is the pleasant time,
The cool, the silent; save where silence yields
To the night-warbling bird, that now awake Tunes sweetest his love-labor'd song. Id. Ib. b. v.

This sing-song was made on the English by the Scots, after they were flush'd with victory over us in the reign of king Edward the second.—Fuller. Worthies. Berkshire.

Assist me some extemporall god of rime, for I am sure I shall turne sonnet.
Shakespeare. Loue's Labour Lost, Act iv. sc. 3.

Nor list I sonnet of my mistress' face,
To paint some blowesse with a borrowed grace.
Bp. Hall, b. i. Sat. 1.

Yea, and the prophet of the heav'nly lyre,
Great Solomon, sings in the English quire;
And is become a new-found sonnetist,
Singing his love, the holy spouse of Christ.—Id. Sat. 8.

Leaue groves now mainly ring,
With each sweet birds sonneting,
Notes that make the echoes long.
Browne. Thyrsis' Praise to his Mistress.

For, fro' thy makings, milke and melly flowes,
To feed the songster-swaines with art's soot-meats.
Browne. Egl. Willie & Wernock.

War, he sung, is toil and trouble;
Honour but an empty bubble;
Never ending, still beginning,
Fighting still, and still destroying;
If the world be worth thy winning,
Think, O think, it worth enjoying.
Dryden. Alexander's Feast.

I ne'er with wits or wittlings pass'd my days,
To spread about the itch of verse and praise;
Nor like a puppy, daggled through the town
To fetch and carry sing-song up and down.
Pope. Prol. to Satires.

Here seem'd the singer touch'd at what he sung,
And grief a while delay'd his hand and tongue.
Parnell. To Lord Visc. Bolingbroke.

The recitative part of the opera requires a more masculine beauty of expression and sound: the other, which (for want of a proper English word) I must call the songish part, must abound in the softness and variety of numbers, it's principal intention being to please the hearing, rather than to gratifie the understanding.
Dryden. Pref. to Albion's England.

— Join'd to these
Innumerable songsters, in the freshening shade
Of new-sprung leaves, their modulations mix Mellifluous. Thomson. Spring.

While Philomel is ours; while in our shades,
Through the soft silence of the listening night,
The sober-suited songstress trills her lay.—Id. Summer.

And some have said, that once the humorous god,
Resolving all such scribblers to confound,
For the short sonnet order'd this strict bound:
Set rules for the just measure, and the time,
The easy running and alternate rhyme.
Dryden. The Art of Poetry.

Who weaves the chaplet, or provides the bays,
For such wool-gathering sonnetteers as these?
Swift. A Poem by Dr. Delany.

He [Green] was at this time a pastoral sonnet-maker and author of several things which were pleasing to men and women of his time.—Wood. Fasti Oxon. vol. i.

This curious piece, [a song or catch in praise of the cuckow] which is thought to be "the most ancient English song, with (or without) the musical notes, any where extant," is preserved in a manuscript of the Harleian Library, in the Museum.—Ritson. Ancient Songs, vol. i. p. 1.

In Venice Tasso's echoes are no more,
And silent rows the songless gondolier;
Her palaces are crumbling to the shore,
And music meets not always now the ear.
Byron. Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, c. 4. s. 3.

A suite of tales was published by George Whetston, a sonnet-writer of some rank, and one of the most passionate among us to bewail the perplexities of love!
Warton. History of English Poetry, vol. iii. p. 483.

SINGE, v. } Dut. Senghen; Ger. Sengen; SINGINGLY. } A. S. Sengan, ustulare, urere, adurere; to scorch,—to mark (by scorching or burning or by "nipping cold," Holland's Plinie :) perhaps originally to mark, or make a mark or sign.

To scorch,—to burn so as to mark the surface,
not deeper than the surface.

Thou sayst also, I walke out like a cat;
For who so wolde senge the cattles skin,
Than wol the cat wel dwellen in hire in.
Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 5929.

Hire bord was served most with white and black,
Milk and broun bred, in which she fond no lack,
Seinde bacon, and sometime an ey or twey.
Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 14,849.

Wee tearme their eies to bee inflamed, sendged, and bloudshotten, when their buds be blasted.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 24.

The corns of the ordinarie wheat Triticum, being parched or rosted upon a red hot yron, are a present remedie for those who are scorched and sindged with nipping cold.
Id. Ib. b. xxii. c. 25.

But to answer more home to the purpose, I confess that the bodies of devils may be not only warm, but sindgingly hot, as it was in him that took one of Melanchthon's relations by the hand, and so scorched her, that she bare the mark of it to her dying day.
More. Antidote against Atheism, App.

The scorching flames climb round on every side:
Then the sing'd members they with skill divide;
On these, in rolls of fat involv'd with art,
The choicest morsels lay from every part.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xiv.

If you want paper to singe a fowl, tear the first book you see about the house.—Swift. Rules for Servants in general.

SINGLE, adj. } Fr. Single, singulaire; It. Singulare; SINGLE, v. } Singulare; Sp. Singular;
SINGLENES. } Lat. Singulus, of unsettled
SINGLY. } etymology. Vossius resorts
SINGULAR, adj. } to the Hebrew. Martinius SINGULAR, n. } suggests signatum, the one SINGULARIST. } marked. Others—sine angulo, SINGULARITY. } or semel unum.
SINGULARLY. } One, only, alone, simple, particular, individual; separate, disunited.

To single,—to take one from more, to select,
to separate.

Singular,—particular, especial, peculiar, extraordinary, uncommon.

And yet say I more, that right as a singular persone sinneth in taking vengeance of another man, right so sinneth the juge, if he do no vengeance of hem that it han deserved.—Chaucer. Tale of Melibeus.

For certes repentance of a singular sinne, and not repentance of all his other sinnes; or elles repenting him of all his other sinnes, and not of a singular sinne, may not avale.
Id. The Persones Tale.

But whan the soule beholdeth, and seeth the high thought, that is to saine God, than knoweth it together the somme and singularities, that is to saine, the principles, and eueriche of hem by hymself.—Id. Boecius, b. v.

Singularly by himsele ther reason faileth.
Id. The Testament of Loue, b. iii.

There was without werre pees,
Without enuie loue stooode,
Richesse vpon the commune good,
And not vpon the singular,
Ordeined was. Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Gods law is pure and single: loue thy neighbour, whether he be good or bad. And by loue God meaneth, to helpe at nede.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 201.

But looke that thine eye be single and robbe not Christ of his honour, ascribe not that to y^e deseruyng of thy workes, which is geuen you freely by the merites of his blood.
Id. Ib. p. 75.

There be that write, how the offer was made by king Edmund for the auoiding of more bloudshed, that the two princes should trie the matter thus together in a singular combat.—Holinshed. Historie of England, b. vii. c. 10.

And also I [Richard II.] renounce the name, worshyp & regaly, and kyngely hyghnesse, clerelye, frelye, syngulerlye and hooly, in the moost best maner and fourme that I may.
Fabyan. Chronycle, an. 1399.

And they cotinued daily with one accorde in the tēple, & brake breade in euery house, and dyd eate their meate together, with gladnes and synglenes of heart praysynge God, & had fauoure with al the people.—Bible, 1551. Dedis, c. 2.

Seruauntes be obedyent vnto youre carnall masters, with feare and tremblyng in singleness of youre heartes, as vnto Chryst.—Id. Ephesians, c. 6.

Most sorry truly we be, that your grace, [Mary] whom we should otherwise honour for the king's majesty's sake, by your own deeds should provoke us to offend you; we do perceive great discommodity to the realm by your grace's sin-gularity, if it may be so named, in opinion.
State Trials, Edw. VI. an. 1551.

But singularly before God is it called vnrighteous mammon, because it is not bestowed, and ministred vnto our neighbors nede.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 71.

Yet did false Archimage her still pursue,
To bring to passe his mischievous intent,
Now that he had her singled from the crew
Of courteous knights.—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 4.

But he might have altered the shape of his argument, and explicated them better in single scenes.
Cor. That had been single indeed.

B. Jonson. Every Man out of his Humour, Act ii. sc. 1.
That you may know my single charity,
Freely I here remit all interest
I e'er could claim, and give you back your vows.
Ford. 'Tis Pity She's a Whore, Act iv. sc. 1.

Vol. You haue heere lady,
(And of your choice) these reuerend fathers, men
Of singular integrity, and learning;
Yea, the elect o' th' land, who are assembled
To pleade your cause.
Shakespeare. Hen. VIII. Act ii. sc. 4.

So spake the fervent angel, but his zeal
None seconded, as out of season judg'd,
Or singular and rash, whereat rejoic'd
The apostat. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. v.

Eloquence would be but a poor thing, if we should only converse with singulars.—B. Jonson. Discoveries.

And in this course of setting down medicines, even as I meet with any hearbe of any singularitie, I will raunge it there whereas I know it to be most soveraigne and effectual.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxv. c. 9.

Oftentimes we find our selves I know not how, singularly delighted with the shew of such naturall rudenesse, and take great pleasure in that disorderly order.
Spenser. Epistle to Maister Harvey.

And what delight to be by such extoll'd,
To live upon thir tongues and be thir talk,
Of whom to be disprais'd were no small praise,
His lot who dares be singularly good.
Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iii.

Him soon she singled from the flying train,
And slew with ease. Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. xi.

Ambergreese is a rare cordial for the refreshing of the spirits, and soveraign for the strengthening the head, besides the most fragrant scent, far stronger in consort when compounded with other things, then when singly it self.
Fuller. Worthies. Cornwall.

You produce texts to show that the Father singly is the Supreme God, and that Christ is excluded from being the Supreme God: but I insist upon it, that you misunderstand those texts.—Waterland. Works, vol. i. p. 4.

Though according to the common course and practice of the world it be somewhat singular for men thoroughly to live up to the principles of their religion, yet singularity in this matter is so far from being a reflection upon any man's prudence, that it is a singular commendation of it.
Tillotson, Ser. 1.

But it being plain, that there are besides singulars, other objects of the mind universal; from whence it seems to follow, that sensibles, are not the only things; some modern atheistick wits, have therefore invented this further devise to maintain the cause, and carry the business on.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 854.

Men not enduring to be termed a foppish simpleton, doting on speculations, and enslaved to rules; a fantastical humourist, a precise bigot, a rigid stoick, a demure sneaksby,
a clownish singularist, or non-conformist to ordinary usage,
a stiff opiniatre.—Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 34.

— Thou hast often seen,
From 'mongst the herd, the fairest and the best
Carefully singled out, and richly drest,
With grandeur mock'd, for sacrifice decreed,
Only in greater pomp at last to bleed.
Churchill. The Times.

Even the pain which they might otherwise inflict, is prevented by a consciousness of having, with singleness of heart, espoused a cause beneficial to mankind, and founded on scriptural, as well as the highest human authority.
Knox. Christian Philosophy, Pref.

SIN

The love of singularity has too often a pernicious effect in disputing societies, and sometimes seminaries of learning; and it is highly prejudicial to that investigation of truth, which is the professed object of these institutions.

Cogan. On the Passions, pt. ii. c. 2.

For had not Providence thus singularly provided for us, our Christmas cheer must have been salt beef and pork.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. iv. c. 2.

SINGULF. } Lat. Singultus, a sob or sigh, S'NGULT. } which Vossius derives from singulus, because it rises separately or singly, and at some interval.

There an huge heape of singulfs did oppresse
His struggling soule, and swelling throbs empeach
His faltring tounge with pangs of drerinesse.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 11.

And ever and anon, with singulfs rife,
He cryed out, to make his undersong.

Id. Colin Clout's come Home again.

So when her teares were stopt from eyther eye
Her singults, blubbrings, seem'd to make them flye.

Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 1.

SINISTER. } Fr. Sinistre; It. Sinistro; S'NISTERLY. } Sp. Siniestro; Lat. Sinister, S'NISTROUS. } from the Gr. Ἀπίστέρος, which S'NISTROUSLY. } the editor of Lennepe, with some speciousness, considers to be the comparative form of an obsolete adjective Ἀπίσ, vehementer, ἀπίστέρος, vehementior; and thence, pejor, magis, infestus, &c. And thence, it must be added, sinister is opposed to dexter, (qv.)

In English, the common usage, is—

Opposed to the right, (sc. hand;) left, on the left-hand.

Opposed to right; ill or evil, treacherous.

Opposed to good, or good fortune; unfortunate, unlucky.

I thought & yet thinke, that it may be that I was shet vp again, vpo some new causeles suspiciō, growen peraduenture vpon some secret sinister informacion.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1447.

Fox doubts not to say, 'That as general councils have sometimes been observed to err, so princes and parliaments may be sometimes informed by sinister heads.'

State Trials. Hen. VIII. an. 33.

Yet lest such as would be glad sinisterly to missecōster euery thynge toward the clergy, might haue occasion to say ye matter were hotely hādeled agāst him to force hī to forbear his suite of the premunire, the byshop therefore did the more forbear.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 297.

And why should you so sinisterly judge the prince, that if ye had shewed these same unto him, he would have thought that ye had brought that tale unto him, more for the strengthening and confirmation of your opinion, than for any other thing else.—Burnet. Records, vol. i. pt. i. b. ii. No. 49.

But when these martiall garboiles are appeased, they are either through false informations wrongfullie behated, or else by enuious carpers sinisterly suspected.

Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 6.

And understood not all was but a shew
Rather than solid vertu, all but a rib
Crooked by nature, bent, as now appears,
More to the part sinister from me drawn.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

The heavens admit not these sinister and dexter respects; there being in them no diversity or difference, but a simplicity of parts, and equiformity in motion continually succeeding each other.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iv. c. 5.

For he concludes the Pythagoreans to have held two such substantial principles of good and evil, merely because they sometimes talkt of the contrarieties and conjugations of things, such as finite and infinite, dextrous and sinistrous, eaven and odd, and the like.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 221.

Many in their infancy are sinistrously disposed, and diuers continue all their life left-handed.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iv. c. 5.

The victor eagle, whose sinister flight
Retards our host, and fills our hearts with fright,
Dismiss'd his conquest in the middle skies,
Allow'd to seize, but not possess the prize.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xii.

The reason was, that he [Nathanael] was a man without guile: he had an honest and upright heart, no sinister or secular ends to serve, no evil affections to mislead him; therefore was he fitly disposed both to believe and embrace the Gospel.—Waterland. Works, vol. ix. p. 58.

SIN

It proves that the man to whom it is shewn, has left his merit to stand or fall, as it might be able of itself; and in the honesty of an upright and ingenuous spirit, has scorned to use sinister and collusive arts to repel the weapons of envy and malice.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 40.

SINK, v. } Sw. Sjunka; Dut. Sincken;
SINK, n. } Ger. Sinker; A. S. Sinc-an, sen-
S'NKING, n. } can; Goth. Sigu-an; deponere, subsidere, deprimere, demergere; to put or place down, to set or settle down; sinc, in A. S. was applied to any deposit, hoard, treasure; consequently—to any collection, to riches, filth collected and deposited.

To set or settle or cause to settle down; to press down, to depress, to lower, to degrade; to subside, to submerge; to fall down, to decay.

A sink,—that through which any thing settles down, or descends; in which (filth or foulness, lit. and met.) is deposited, or deposits itself.

But if they weren wrought of lime and ston;
They percen so, that thurgh the wall they gon;
And som of hem sinke down into the ground,
(Thus have we lost by times many a pound.)

Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16, 378.

For I endure more hard pennaunce
Than any can saine or thinke,
That for the sorrow almost I sinke.—Id. Rom. of the R.

Nowe then vpon that other side
To tell my disobeisance
Full sore it stant to my greunace,
And maie not sinke in to my witte.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

— Alas! and who could thinke
So good a part so hard a happe should have?
A sweete perfume to fall into a sinke.

Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

The bailife that had the charge of the publick sinks
vaulted under the ground, dealt with Scaurus for good securitie.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxvi. c. 2.

Whose corage when the feend perceiv'd to shrinke,
She poured forth out of her hellish sinke
Her fruitfull cursed spawne of serpents small,
(Deformed monsters, fowle, and blacke as inke.)

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

— He cast him downe as deepe
As Tartarus (the brood of night) where Barathrum doth steep
Torment in his profoundest sinks.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. viii.

Return, then, heroes! and our answer bear,
The glorious combat is no more my care;
Not till, amidst yon sinking navy slain,
The blood of Greeks shall dye the sable main.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ix.

In short, the necessity of carrying a stamp, and the improbability of notifying a bloody battel will, I am afraid, both concur to the sinking of those thin folios, which have every other day retailed to us the History of Europe for several years last past.—Spectator No. 445.

When we are in want of necessities, we must part with all superfluities; of which the value, as it rises in times of opulence and prosperity, so it sinks in times of poverty and distress.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 11.

SINQUE, i.e. Cinque, qv.

And you had such a pipe, that piped so sweetly,
You would dance to death, you have learnt your sinque a pace.

Beaum. & Fletch. A Wife for a Month, Act iii. sc. 1.

SINUOUS. } Fr. Sinueux; It. Sinuoso; Lat.
SINUOSITY. } Sinuosity, from sinus, a bay, or S'NUATED. } bow; a curve or curvature, SINUA'TION. } plait or fold.
Bowing or bending, curving, winding.

It would be tryed, how, and with what proportion of disadvantage, the voice would be carried in an horn, which is a line arched; or in a trumpet, which is a line retorted; or in some pipe that were sinuous.

Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 132.

These as a line thir long dimension drew,
Streaking the ground with sinuous trace.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vii.

Meander is a river in Lycia, a province of Natolia, or Asia Minor, famous for the sinuosity and often returning thereof.

Drayton. Rosamond to K. Henry, Annotation.

Another was very perfect, somewhat less with the margin, and more sinuated.—Woodward. On Fossils.

The humane brain is, in proportion to the body, much larger than the brains of brutes, having regard to the size and proportion of their bodies, and fuller of anfractus, or sinuations.—Hale. Origin. of Mankind, p. 65.

SIR

Here Ouse, slow winding through a level plain
Of spacious meads with cattle sprinkled o'er,
Conducts the eye along his sinuous course
Delighted.

Cowper. Task, b. i.

But what is less known, and probably more deserving curiosity, is that they [rivers] run in a more direct channel as they immediately leave their sources; and that their sinuosities and turnings become more numerous as they proceed.—Goldsmith. Animated Nature, pt. i. c. 14.

SIP, n. } Dut. Sippen; A. S. Sip-an, sor-SIP, v. } bere; see To SUP.

S'PPET. } To draw up small quantities of liquid by the lips; to drink or imbibe small portions, small quantities.

Thus serueth he, without meat or sip.

Chaucer. Q. Anelida and false Arcite.

And ye wil geve me a sippet

Of your stale ale. Skelton. Elinour Rummung.

As melting honey dropping from the comb,
So still the words, that spring between thy lips,
Thy lips, where smiling sweetness keeps her home,
And heav'nly eloquence pure manna sips.

G. Fletcher. Christ's Victory & Triumph.

But this will cure all strait, one sip of this Will bathe the drooping spirits in delight,
Beyond the bliss of dreams.

Milton. Comus.

Estif. Green goose you are now in sippets.

Beaum. & Fletch. Rule a Wife & have a Wife, Act iv. sc. 1.

Ridotta sips and dances, till she see
The doubling lustres dance as fast as she.

Pope. Imitations of Horace, b. ii. Sat. 1.

Charles sipped a little of the poisonous draught, but enough however to infect his whole conduct.

Bolingbroke. On Parties, Let. 2.

"Adieu," Vinosa cries, ere yet he sips
The purple bumper trembling at his lips,
"Adieu to all morality! if grace
Make works a vain ingredient in the case."

Cowper. Hope.

SIPHON. Lat. Sipho; Gr. Σίφων, from the sound which liquids make when the siphon is drawn out; or rather from the Hebrew, (Vossius.)

Beneath th' incessant weeping of these drains,
I see the rocky siphons stretch'd immense,
The mighty reservoirs, of harden'd chalk,
Or stiff compacted clay, capacious form'd.

Thomson. Autumn.

— He disdains to toss
In rainbow dew their crystal to the sun;
Or sink in subterranean cisterns deep;
That so, through leaden siphons upward drawn,
Those streams may leap fantastic.

Mason. The English Garden, b. iii.

SIR. } Fr. Sieur, sire; It. Ser, sere, dominus, SIRE. } contracted (Skinner) from the Fr. Seigneur; It. Signore; Lat. Senior. (See SENIOR.)
Applied first to—

Seniors or elders,—then as a title of rank, of respect generally. Sire (Skinner adds) is naturally the master (dominus) of the family; it is the elder of a family or race, the progenitor, the parent.

"Sire," quod heo, "bi hye Godes, Lordes of alle thyng, Y loue more thi leue lyf than al that in the world ys."

R. Gloucester, p. 30.

And suthe ich sauh hym sute. as he a syre were.

Piers Plouhman, p. 143.

"Sire knight," (quod he) "my maister and my lord,
Now draweth cutte, for that is min accorde.
Cometh nere," (quod he) "my lady prioressse,
And ye, sire clerk, let it be your shamefastnesse,
Ne studieth nought, lay hand to, every man."

Chaucer. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 839.

Than spake our hoste with rude speche and bold:

And sayd unto the Nonnes Preest anon,

"Come nere, thou Preest, come hither, thou sire John,

Telle us swiche thing, as may our hertes glade."

Id. The Nonnes Preestes Prologue, v. 14, 824.

"Upon a night Jankin, that was our sire, Red on his book, as he sate by the fire."

Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 6295.

Paine and distresse, sicknesse, and ire,
And melancholly that angrie sire,
Ben of her paleis senatours.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

This bachiler was tho counsaill'd
And wedded, and of thilke empire
He was crowned lord and sire,
And all the lond him hath receiued.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

The most ragged ronagate, and idle idiole amonge theym, is no lesse the a syr, which is a lord in the Latin, as syr John, syr Thomas, syr William.—Bale. Image, pt. ii.

O worthinesse of nature, breed of greatnesse!
"Cowards father cowards, and base things syre base."
Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act iv. sc. 2.

Be not angry
(Most mighty princesse) that I haue aduentur'd
To try your taking of a false report, which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgement,
In the election of a sir, so rare,
Which you know, cannot erre.—Id. Ib. Act i. sc. 7.

SIREN. Lat. Siren; Gr. Σειρηνες, from ειρ-ειν, nectere, vincire, because they bind or hold fast listeners to their song; or from συρειν, trahere, because they attract them.

But it was wonder like to bee
Song of meremaids of the see,
That for hir singen is so clere:
Though we meremaids clepe hem here
In English, as is our vsaunce,
Men clepe hem sereins in Fraunce.—Chaucer. R. of the R.

Over-against the creeke Paestanum, there is Leucasia, called so of a mermaid or sirene there buried.
Holland. Plinie, b. iii. c. 7.

He also is so skill'd at the soft weapon, that by the fair insinuating carriage, by the help of the winning address, the syrene-mode or meen, can inspire poison, whisper in destruction to the soul.—Hammond, vol. iv. Ser. 1.

First, to the sirens ye shall come, that taint
The minds of all men, whom they can acquaint With their attractions. Whosoever shall (For want of knowledge mou'd) but heare the call
Of any siren: he will so despise
Both wife and children, for their sorceries,
That neuer home turnes his affection's streame;
Nor they take joy in him, nor he in them.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xii.

Next, where the sirens dwell, you plough the seas!
Their song is death, and makes destruction please.
Unblest, the man, whom music wins to stay
Nigh the curst shore, and listen to the lay;
No more that wretch shall view the joys of life,
His blooming offspring, or his beauteous wife!
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xii.

SIROCCO. It. Sirocco, scilòcco; Fr. Sirocco, siroch. Menage fashions it from Eurus. Skinner thinks it may be ventus Syriacus, or blowing from Syria, which lies south-east of Italy. Libeccio, is Libyan, or African.

Thwart of these as fierce
Forth rush the Levant and the Ponent windes Eurus and Zephir with thir lateral noise, Sirocco, and Libeccio.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

I ought not to complain: for though it is a sirocco, and a heavy rain, I have not yawned these two days.
Byron. Diary, Jan. 8, 1821.

SIRRAH. The writing of this word by Holland, Sirr-ha, seems to confirm the etymology of Minshew—Sir ha! adopted by Skinner and Junius.

She seeing mine eyes still on her were,
Soon, smilingly, quoth she,
Sirrah! look to your rudder there,
Why look'st thou thus at me?
Dryden. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 7.

Apelles could not endure that, but putting forth his head from behind the painted table, and scorning thus to be checked and reproved, Sirraha, (quoth he,) remember you are but a shoemaker, and therefore meddle no higher I advise you, than with shoes.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxv. c. 10.

SIRT. See SYRTES. Minshew says,—Sirtes, sandy places in the extreme parts of Africa, where the sands are moved in waves. Lat. Syrtis, from Συρ-ειν, trahere, to draw together. See the quotation from Sallust.

They discovered the immense and vast ocean of the courts to be all over full of flats, shelves, shallows, quick-sands, crags, rocks, gulfs, whirlpools, sirts, &c.
Transl. of Boccalini, (1626,) p. 42.

When the sea begins to swell, and to be agitated by the winds, the waves roll along with them slime, sand, and stones of a prodigious size; so that as the wind shifts, the bed of the waters changes; and from this quality of dragging their channel they derive their name syrtis.
Rose. Sallust. The War against Jugurtha, p. 211.

SIRUP, or } Fr. Syrop; It. Siròppo; Low SYRUP. } Lat. Sirupus or syrupus; from SIRUPT. } Gr. Συριος ονος, succus Syriacus, SIRUPY. } because the use of syrups originated with the Syrians (Becman); or from the Arab. Sirab, a drink, a potion, a medicated drink.
See Vossius and Skinner.

The pope hath great prouision at cities and townes to get him of the best that may be founde, well dressed and dayntely to make digestion, with spicery, sawces, siropes, coloured out of kynde.—Fryth. Workes, p. 99.

His drugs, his drinks, and sirops doth apply,
To heat his blood and quicken luxury.—Dryden. The Owl.

They'll fetch you conserve from the hip,
And lay it softly on your lip,
Through their nibbling bills they'll chirup
And fluttering feed you with the sirop.
Id. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 2.

Yet when there haps a honey fall,
We'll lick the syrup leaves;
And tell the bees, that their's is gall
To this upon the greaves.—Id. The Quest of Cynthia.

Apples are of a syrupy tenacious nature.—Mortimer.

The juice which trickles into these vessels, is collected by persons who climb the trees for that purpose, morning and evening, and is the common drink of every individual upon the island; yet a much greater quantity is drawn off than is consumed in this use, and of the surplus they make both a syrup and coarse sugar.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 9.

He infuses into the phial a little syrup of sugar, or a comfortable cordial, that the patient may not make wry faces, or throw it out of the window.
Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 3.

SISTER, n. } A. S. Sweoster, sweostor;
SISTER, v. } Goth. Sivistar; Dut. Sustar; SISTERHOOD. } Ger. Schwester; Sw. Syster.
SISTERLY. } Ihre thinks the labours of etymologists upon the origin of this word have been hitherto in vain. See them in Wachter. Swaes, is suus, proprius; swæstre mæg, proprius cognatus; swæstre sunu, proprium filium. Swæstre, or sweoster, may be a female born of his or her own parents, of the same parents of her- or him-self, of his or her own blood; i. e. of any one so related.

Females by the same parents are sisters; males and females, so related, are brothers and sisters.
More extensively applied to female relations;
females of the same kin or kind; of the same society or association.

For he [Lear] seide, thou ne louest me nogt as thi sostren
doth,
Ac despisest me in myn olde liue.—R. Gloucester, p. 31.

His moder was Sibriht sister, that was a fole kyng.
R. Brunne, p. 14.

Ther ben sevene sustres that seruen Truthe evere.
Piers Plouhman, p. 125.

But bisidis the cross of Jhesus stoden his moder and the sistir of his modir Marie Cleophe and Marie Maudeleyn.
Wiclif. Jon, c. 19.

Then stode by the crosse of Jesus his mother, and his mothers syster, Marye the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

So song the mighty muse she,
That cleped is Caliope,
And her seuen sisterne eke.
Chaucer. The House of Fame, b. iii.

Phedra hir yonge suster eke,
A lustie maide, a sobre, a meke,
Fulfilled of all curtosie,
For susterhode and companie
Of loue, whiche was hem betwene,
To see hir suster be made a quene,
Hir fader lefted.
Gower. Con. A. b. v.

Cal. Yes, I do service for your sister here,
That brings my own poor child to timeless death;
She loves your friend Amintor, such another false-hearted Lord as you.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Maid's Tragedy, Act i. sc. 1.

Thus have I given your lordship the best account I could of the sister-dialects of the Italian, Spanish, and French.
Howell, b. ii. Let. 59.

— And after much debatement
My sisterly remorse confutes mine honour,
And I did yeeld to him.
Shakespeare. Meas. for Meas. Act v. sc. 1.

— And with her needl composes
Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry;
That even her art sisters the natural roses.
Shakespeare. Pericles, Act v. Ch.

Her sister hears, and, furious with despair,
She beats her breast, and rends her yellow hair.
And, calling on Eliza's name aloud,
Runs breathless to the place, and breaks the crowd.
Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. iv.

Well then we hear no more of this sisterly resemblance [of Christianity] to Platonism.
Warburton. Bolingbroke's Philosophy, Let. 3.

SIT, v. Mr. Tyrwhitt says,—to become, to suit with; and it may be that suit is the word intended, though written without the u.

To sit as a garment,—easily, becomingly, gracefully; and hence, to fit or befit, to beseeem, is the usual explanation.

The Fr. Il sied, quoted by Mr. Todd in his Note on Spenser, countenances this, though Cot-grave (ed. 1673,) writes,—this garment becomes, beseems, befits or fits him well. To this may be added that Chaucer writes,—it sate, in the past tense.

My word shal stand, that warne I you certain:
I am king, it sit me not to be.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 10, 189.

But as for me, I say that evil it sit
To assay a wif whan that it is no nede,
And putten hire in anguish and in drede.
Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8336.

Well could she sing and lustely
None halfe so well and seemely:
And cothe make in song such refraining.
It sate her wonder well to sing.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

For thy my sonne, if thou wolt loue,
It sitt the well to leaue pride,
And take humblesse on thy side,
The more of grace thou shalt gete.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

For if men shoulde trouthe seche,
And finde it not within a kyng,
It were an ensittende thyng.
Id. Ib. b. vii.

But shepherds (as Algrind used to say)
Mought not live ylike as men of the laye
With them it sits to care for their heire, Enaunter their heritage doe impaire.
Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender. May.

The. The nightingale is sovereigne of song,
Before him sits the titmouse silent bee;
And I, unfit to thrust in skilfull throng,
Should Colin make iudge of my foolere.
Id. Ib. November.

SIT, v. } Sw. Sitta; Dut. Sitten; Ger.
SITTER. } Sitzen; A. S. Sittan; Goth. Sit-
SITTING, n. } an, sedere:—

To sit, (or to set),—to place or put, to be or cause to be in any place, position, or posture, in any state, situation or condition: applied to a state of rest,—to be at rest; to continue at rest; to reside, to dwell, to abide: applied to a posture of rest, as distinguished from standing or kneeling,—to place or put, to be or cause to be in a seat; in a seat of power or authority.

Set, and sit, differ in usage only. See LIE.
Set that down, sit down, (sc. yourself.) The usage of sit is more restricted than that of set; it is more commonly applied to the posture of the body.

For who is gretter: he that sittith at the mete. or he that mynystrieth? wher not he that sittith at the mete? and I am in the myddil of you as he that mynystrieth.
Wiclif. Luk, c. 22.

For whether is greater, he that sytteth at meate: or he that serueth? Is not he that sytteth at meate? And I am amonge you, as he that mynistreth.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

But at the laste whanne the ellevene discipils saten at the mete, Jhesus apperide to hem and reprevede the unbelieve of hem and the hardnesse of herte for thei bileviden not to hem that hadden seyen that he was risun fro deeth.
Wiclif. Mark, c. 16.

After that, he appered vnto the eleuen as they sate at meate: and caste in their teth their vnbeleve and hardnes of herte: because they beleued not them whiche had sene him after his resurrection.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And he cam and took of the righthond of the sittir in the trone the book.—Wiclif. Apocalips, c. 5.

And he came and toke the boke oute of the ryghte hande of hym that sate vpon the seate.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

I wis he sitteth so nere mine hart,
To speake of him at eve or morrow,
It cureth me of all my sorrow.—Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

There founden thei at home sittyng
Lucrece his wife all enuironed
With women, whiche were abandoned
To werche.
Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Which ryng bare of obliuion
The name, and that was by reason.
That where on a finger it sate,
Anone his loue he so foryate,
As though he had it neuer knowe.—Id. Ib. b. iv.

The said lord president and council shall keep four general sittings or sessions in the year, every of them to continue by the space of one whole month.

Burnet. Records, vol. ii. b. i. pt. ii. No. 56.

— Thou from the first

Wast present, and with mighty wings outspread
Dove-like satst brooding on the vast abyss
And mad'st it pregnant.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

For while they sit contriving, shall the rest,
Millions that stand in arms, and longing wait
The signal to ascend, sit lingring here
Heav'n's fugitives, and for thir dwelling place
Accept this dark opprobrious den of shame,
The prison of his tyranny who reigns
By our delay? Id. Ib. b. ii.

They were contented to adjourn their houses as they had done for some days, and to appoint committees, qualified with more power than the houses had, to meet in London; which, for the convenience of the common council, who took up the Guild-Hall chose to sit in Grocers-Hall.

Clarendon. Civil Wars, b. iv.

SITE.

Also written scite.

SIT'ED.

Barb. Lat. Situare; Fr. Situer;

SIT'UATE.

It. Sito, situare; Sp. Sitio, situar;

SIT'UATED.

Lat. Situs, which Vossius derives

SITUA'TION.

from sin-ere, nam unumquodque

ibi situm est, hoc est, positum, ubi illud sivimus, hoc est, liquimus. It seems more easily (considering its meaning) to be formed from the obsolete past part. of sistere, sistitum, sistum, situm.

The place on which any thing stands; place, locality; seat, or settlement; the state or condition; the circumstances within which any one stands or is placed.

We ask nothing in gift to the foundation, but only the house and scite, the residue for the accustomed rent.

Burnet. Records, vol. ii. b. ii. pt. ii. No. 30.

Set out with all this pomp, when this imperial stream, [Thames]

Himself establish'd sees amidst his wat'ry realm
His much-lov'd Henley leaves, and proudly doth pursue
His wood-nymph Windsor's seat, her lovely site to view.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 15.

— The other but a child,

Compared with her phere, and Inglewood is call'd,
Both in their pleasant scites, most happily install'd.
Id. Ib. s. 30.

These spacious streets, where every private house
Appears a palace to receive a king:

The site, the wealth, the beauty of the place,
Will soon inform thee 'tis imperious Rome,
Rome, the great mistress of the conquer'd world.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Prophetess, Act ii. sc. 3.

It sited was in fruitful soyle of old,
And girt in with two walls on either side.

Spenser. Faerie Queene.

Above were sited the masquers, over whose heads he devised two eminent figures.—B. Jonson. Masques at Court.

He [King Hen. VIII.] conferred on him [John Tregonwell] and his heirs the rich demesne and scite of Middleton, a mitred abby in Dorsetshire, possessed at this day by his posterity.—Fuller. Worthies. Cornwall.

Without the hall, and close vpon the gate,
A goodly orchard ground was situate,
Of neare ten acres; about which, was led
A loffie quickset.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. vii.

Then to the snowy rocke, they next withdrew;
And to the close of Phœbus orient gates:
The nation then of dreames; and then the states
Of those soules idols, that the weary dead
Gause vp in earth: which, in a flowry mead
Had habitable situation. Id. Ib. b. xxiii.

Three colours, black, and red, and white,
So graceful in their proper place,
Remove them to a different scite,
They form a frightful hideous face.

Swift. The Progress of Beauty.

— Borne away

On swelling thought, his wafted spirit flies
To the vain bosom of his distant fair;
And leaves the semblance of a lover fix'd
In melancholy site, with head declin'd,
And love-dejected eyes. Thomson. Spring.

Indeed if we consider the advantage of its scituation, [Leon] we may find it surpassing most places for health and pleasure in America; for the country about it is of a sandy soil, which soon drinks up all the rain that falls, to which these parts are much subject.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1685.

Thus situated, we began to clear places in the woods, in order to set up the astronomer's observatory, the forge to repair our iron work, tents for the sail-makers and coopers to repair the sails and casks in; to land our empty casks, to fill water, and to cut down wood for fuel; all of which were absolutely necessary occupations.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 4.

Nor did the shores and woods appear less destitute of wild fowl; so that we hoped to enjoy with ease, what, in our situation, might be called the luxuries of life.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 4.

SITHE, (time.) See SINCE.

SITHE.

A. S. Sithe; and although

SIT'ED, or written without the c, it may be

SCYTHE.

from A. S. Scead-an, to sever or separate: or otherwise from A. S. Sig-an, Sw. Sig-a, procidere.

That which severs, cuts, mows, hews.

— Yf he do hit smythie,

In to sykkel 0th into sithe, to shar other to culter.

Piers Plouhman, p. 61.

As touching the very sythes, there be two sorts of them. For those of Italie be shorter than other, easie to handle and weld.—Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 28.

Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Shakespeare. A Lover's Complaint.

The stooping sytheman, that doth barb the field,
Thou mak'st wink sure; in night all creatures sleep.

Marston. Malcontent.

Time, cruel time, come and subdue that brow,
Which conquers all but these; and thee too stays,
As if she were exempt from scythe or bow,
From love or years unsubject to decays.—Daniel, s. 23.

Thou saw'st great burden'd ships through these thy vallies pass,
Where now the sharp-edg'd scythe shears up the spiring grass. Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 16.

2 Qu. Honoured Hippolita

Most dreaded Amazonian, thou hast slain

The sith-tusk'd bore.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Two Noble Kinsman, Act i. sc. 1.

Elate the mingled prospect he surveys
Of glitt'ring files unnumber'd, chariots scyth'd,
On thund'ring axles roll'd. Glover. Leonidas, b. iv.

Belinus call'd his painted tribes around,
And rough with many a veteran scar,
Swept the pale legions with the scythed car,
While baffled Cæsar fled to gain
An easier triumph on Pharsalia's plain.

Warton, Ode 21.

SIX.

Fr. Six; It. Sèi; Sp. Seiz;

SIXTH.

Lat Sex; Gr. Eξ, undoubtedly

SIX-TEEN.

(says Lennep) from εξαι, though

SIX-TY.

the cause of signification is not plain. Scheidius conjectures that it is εκ, or εξ, beyond, in addition to, (from an obsolete verb signifying cedere, accedere; the root is probably the verb ic-an, to eke, to add,) and applied—to the number one more than five, i. e. than the number of fingers on the hand; or to the first unit added from the second hand to the number five already counted on the first.

Six-teen,—six and ten; six-ty,—six tens, or six times ten.

Eneas bi gan hys of spryng to Lumbardie first brynge Thre thousand & sixe & tuenti ger fro the worldes bi gynnyng. R. Gloucester, p. 10.

& the sixthe [age] to the incarnation,
That is, forte God was y bore. Id. p. 9.

The date was nien hundreth sixti & sextene,
That was alle forwondred, for his dede come tene.
R. Brunne, p. 37.

Elye was a deedli man lyk us, and in preier he preiede that it schulde not reyne on the erthe, & it reynede not three yeeris and sixe monethis.—Wiclif. James, c. 5.

Helias was a mā mortal, euē as we are, & he prayed in hys prayer, that it myght not rayne: and it rayned not on the earth by the space of thre yeris and sixe monethes.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

But fro the sixte our derknessis weren maad on al the erthe til the nynthe our.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 27.

From ye sixt houre was there darkenes ouer al the lande vnto the nynth houre.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And sche also hath conseyved a sone in hir eelde, and this monethe is the sixte to hir that is clepid bareyn.
Wiclif. Luk, c. 1.

And beholde thy cosē Elizabeth she hath also cōceaved a sōne in her age. And this is her syxt moneth, though she be called barren.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And sum makith an hundrid fold, treuly another sixty- fold and another thritti fold.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 13.

Parte fell in good ground, and brought forth good frut:
some an hundred folde, some sixty fold, some thirtie folde.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

The seeking for a fortune then, is but a desperate after-game: it is a hundred to one, if a man fling two sizes and recover all; especially, if his hand be no luckier than mine.
Cowley. The Danger of Procrastination.

SIZE, v.

i. e. to assise, to cress or assess;

SIZE, n.

to impose a tax or rate at an assize

SIZAR.

or session; generally—to impose a tax, a rate; to rate the measure, weight, quantity, portion.

A size at Cambridge is a portion of bread or drink, which scholars (sizars) have at the buttery.

To size is to set down how much they take on their names in the buttery book, (Minshew.)

Continual claims I've made, injunctions got

To stay my rival's suit, that he should not Proceed; spare me, in Hillary term I went;

You said, if I return'd next 'size in Lent,

I should be in remitter of your grace. Donne, Sat. 2.

There was also a statute, for the dispersing of the standard of the Exchequer, throughout England; thereby to size weights and measures; and two or three more of less importance.—Bacon. Hen. VII. p. 101.

SIZE, n.

See SIZE, ante. Size, as applied to

SIZE, v.

bulk, seems to be to (see Skinner),—

SIZABLE.

A rated, apportioned, proportioned, bulk, bigness, largeness, (magnitude or quantity;) proportioned to some standard; of usual growth, or stature: as, a man of good size, a tree of good size.

To size,—to apportion, to arrange or rank according to bulk; to give bulk or bigness to.

Sizes in Shakespeare (Lear),—is apportioned, settled measure or quantity.

The act spoken of in Fabian is called in Rastal, "An acte for assize of fuel;" and it fixes the quantity of coals to a sack, and the dimensions of different sorts of fire-wood, shides, billets, fag-gots, &c.

Also this yere was an acte of parliament for wood and coal to kepe the fulle size after the purification of our ladie, that shall be in the yere of our Lorde 1543 that no man shall bargain, sell, bryng, or conueigh of any other size, to be vttered or solde, vpon pain of forfeiture.

Fabian. Chronycle. Henry VIII. continued.

When as the age was long, the size was great;
Man's growth confess'd and recompens'd the meate;
So spacious and large, that every soul
Did a fair kingdom and large realm control.

Donne. Anatomy of the World, p. 177.

— Tis not in thee

To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my traine

To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes

And in conclusion, to oppose the bolt

Against my comming in.—Shakes. Lear, Act. ii. sc. 4.

Now what my loue is, prooffe hath made you know,

And as my loue is siz'd, my feare is so.

Id. Hamlet, Act iii. sc. 2.

Witty. Tush, you shall never come to farther answer
for't;

Can you confess your penurious uncle,

In his full face of love, to be so strict

A nigard to your Commons, that you are fain

To size your belly out with shoulder fees?

Beaum. & Fletch. Wit at several Weapons, Act ii. sc. 1.

Now all the horrors of the heavens he spies,

And monstrous shadows of prodigious size,

That, deck'd with stars, lie scatter'd o'er the skies.

Addison. Ovid. Metam. b. ii.

From east to west, look all the world around,

Two troops so match'd were never to be found:

Such bodies built for strength, of equal age,

In stature siz'd; so proud an equipage:

The nicest eye could no distinction make,

Where lay th' advantage, or what side to take.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite.

He should be purged, sweated, vomited, and starved, till he come to a sizeable bulk.—Arbuthnot.

He found here some cockles of so enormous a size that one of them was no more than two men could eat, and a great variety of other shell-fish.

Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 4.

By their joint labours, the whole was drawn out, and digested into a sizeable volume, which came out in 1727, and was entitled, The Legal Judicature in Chancery stated.

Hurd. Life of Warburton.

SIZE.

It. Assisa, assizare, to size; also

SIZY.

to sesse, to assize. "Sisa,—a kind

SIZINESS.

of syse or glew that painters use,"

(Florio.)

Tell him if he i' th' blood-ciz'd field lay swoln,

Shewing the sun his teeth, grinning at the moon,

What you would do.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Two Noble Kinsmen, Act i. sc. 1.

The blood let the first time florid; after a second time sizy.
Arbuthnot. On Diet, c. 4.
Cold is capable of producing a siziness and viscosity in the blood.—Id.

SKAIN, or } Fr. Escaigne, glomus, seu vo-SKEIN. } lumen fili. Skinner suggests—from the prep. Ex, and the Lat. Cannæ, on account of its hollowness; and he observes that very many things hollow, especially if oblong, were called Cannæ.

Some for very nede
Lay down a skain of threde
And some a skain of yarne.—Skelton. Elinour Rummung.

Duc. When you came first, did you not walk the town,
In a long cloak half compass? an old hat,
Lin'd with vellure, and on it for a band,
A skein of crimson cruil?

Beaum. & Fletch. The Noble Gentleman, Act v. sc. 1.

Our style should be like a skein of silk, to be carried and found by the right thread, not ravelled and perplexed; then all is a knot, a heap.—B. Jonson. Discoveries.

SKATE, v. } Lye says, perhaps from Skud,
SKATE, n. } (qv.)

Skates,—from A. S. Scit-an, to throw out,—are so called from the action of the limb, required in using them.

The Dut. Schaetse; Fr. Eschasses; Eng. Escatches, or Skatches, are (Minshew and Cotgrave)—

Stiles or stilts.

— Or, where the Rhine
Branch'd out in many a long canal extends,
From every province swarming, void of care,
Batavia rushes forth; and as they sweep,
On sounding skates, a thousand different ways,
In circling poise, swift as the winds, along,
The then gay land is madden'd all to joy.

Thomson. Winter.

Thus we pass along between two rays, one for right foot and tother for left, much in the same manner as a Dutchman skating upon the ice.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. ii. c. 23.

And they have probably more amusements of this sort, which affords them at least as much pleasure as skating, which is the only one of ours, with whose effects I could compare it.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 9.

SKATE. A. S. Sceadda; It. Squàdro; Lat. Squatus, squatina; quasi squalus, a squallore, i. e. cutis asperitate, (Vossius.)

The fresh gall of a ray or skeat, yea, and the same preserved and kept long in old wine, is an excellent medicine for the eares.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxii. c. 7.

About two the next morning, the yawl, which had been left upon the shoal, returned with three turtles and a large skeat.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 4.

SKEAN. A. S. Scæg-ene, Gladus, ensis,—a sword, a skein. See the quotation from Drayton. Verstegan describes the skein to have been bowing, crooked, much after the fashion of a sithe.

Besides this, he, or any man els that is disposed to mischief or villany, may under his mantle goe privily armed without suspicion of any, carry his head-peece, his skean, or pistol if he please, to be always in readines.

Spenser. Of the State of Ireland.

So gloriously they show, that all the rest among
The Saxons, of her sorts the very noblest were;
And of those crooked skains they us'd in war to bear,
Which in their thund'ring tongue, the Germans handseax name,

They Saxons first were called.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 4.

Scurvie knaue, I am none of his flurt-gils, I am none of his skaines mates, and thou must stand by too and suffer euery knaue to vse me at his pleasure.

Shakespeare. Romeo & Juliet, Act ii. sc. 4.

SKEG. Perhaps Shag, shagged.

That kind of peaches or abricots which bee called tuberes, love better to be grafted either upon a skeg or wild plumb stocke, or quince.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 10.

SKE/GGER. The salmon trout. "I know not," says Skinner, "whether from the A. S. Sceatga, any thing hairy, and so called—ab eximia cutis lævitate et mollitie."

The Thames about Windsor—a little trout called a samlet, or skegger trout.—Walton. Angler, pt. i. c. 4.

And it is noted, that those little salmons called skeggers, which abound in many rivers relating to the sea, are bred by such sick salmons that might not go to the sea; and, that though they abound, yet they never thrive to any considerable bigness.—Id. Ib. c. 7.

SKE/LETON. Fr. Scelete, schelete; It. Schèletro; Sp. Esqueleto; Gr. Σκελετον, exsiccatum, (cadaver) from σκελλειν, arefacere, attenuare.

Democritus, Leucippus, and Protagoras, took only the dead carcase or skeleton of the old Moschical philosophy, namely the atomical physiology.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 51.

My men saw two or three beasts like hungry wolves, lean like so many skeletons, being nothing but skin and bones.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1699.

I thought to meet, (as late as Heav'n might grant!)
A skeleton, ferocious, tall, and gaunt;
Whose loose teeth in their naked sockets shook;
And grinn'd terrific, a Sardonian look.

Hart. The Vision of Death.

The whole skeleton considered jointly, may be looked upon as performing that office to the little world, that Atlas hath been fabulously reported to do to the great one; it bears the whole bulk of it, and sustains it in all its motions; none of which could be performed, if either the bones were not, or not so articulated and jointed, as upon dissection they appear to be.—Wiseman. Surgery, b. vii. c. 1.

A system of precepts, though exquisitely compacted, is, in comparison, but a skeleton, a dry, meagre, lifeless bulk, exhibiting nothing of person, place, time, manner, degree, wherein chiefly the flesh and blood, the colours and graces, the life and soul of things do consist; whereby they please, affect, and move us: but example imparts thereto a goodly corpulency, a life, a motion; renders it conspicuous, specious, and active, transforming its notional universality into the reality of singular subsistence.

Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 2.

SKE/LLUM. Sw. Skelm; Dut. Shelm; Ger. Schelme; Fr. Schelme. The Ger. Schelme (Wachter) is a skinned carcase, from Schel-en, to skin, or take off the skin, (A. S. Scyl-an, to separate;) then tortured in its application, to an abject, worthless person. Dr. Jamieson has an instance of the word shelm.

Sir Richard Greenvil (in 1643) having deserted to the king at Oxford, they declared him traitor, rogue, villain, and skellum.—Biograph. Britann. p. 2306.

SKEP. Sw. Skepp, skäppa; Dut. Schap; Ger. Schaff. See SHIP, SHAPE; and skep, in Jamieson.

Any thing made, formed or fashioned—to hold, or constrain; a cask, a case, a box, basket, hive, &c.

A pitch-fork, a dung-fork, sieve, skep, and a bin,
A broom, and a pail, to put water therein.

Tusser. Husbandry Furniture.

SKE/PTICK.

SKE/PTICAL.

SKE/PTICALLY.

SKE/PTICALNESS.

SKE/PTICISM.

SKE/PTICIZE, v.

Most commonly written Sceptick. Fr. Sceptique;
It. Scettico; Lat. Scepticus; Gr. Σκεπτικός,—one who can or may seek or search.
One (says Cotgrave,) who is ever seeking and never finds. See the quotation from Hume.

Be by thy vertue bold! when that sun shines,
All arts false lights are with disgrace put out;
Her straightness shows it self and crooked lines,
And her plain text the scepticks dare not doubt.

Davenant. Gondibert, b. iii. c. 6.

Th' enamour'd youth, whose flaming breast

Makes goddesses and angels all,

In's contemplation finds no rest,

For all his joys are sceptical.—Brome. Epithalmy.

Notwithstanding all which, that hath been here suggested by us; we shall not our selves venture, to determine any thing, in so great a point; but sceptically leave it undecided.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 806.

Continual wavering or scepticalness, concerning our calling or election.—Fuller. Ser. Of Assurance, p. 4.

If any one pretends to be so sceptical, as to deny his own existence (for really to doubt of it is manifestly impossible) let him for me enjoy his beloved happiness of being nothing, until hunger, or some other pain convince him of the contrary.—Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. iv. c. 10.

You can afford to scepticize, where no one else will so much as hesitate. For almost every one philosophizes dogmatically on this head.

Shaft. Inquiry concerning Virtue, vol. ii. pt. ii. s. 1.

We got clear of popish subtilty and sophistry, showing that there is a medium, namely, moral certainty, between scepticism on one hand, and papal infallibility on the other.

Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 127.

We shall conclude this discourse against the Cartesian scepticism, with that of Origen's, knowledge is the only thing in the world, which creatures have, that is in its own nature firm; they having here something of certainty, but no where else.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 721.

He [Dr. Berkeley] professes, however, in his title-page, (and undoubtedly with great truth,) to have composed his book against the scepticks as well as against the atheists and freethinkers. But that all his arguments, are, in reality, merely sceptical, appears from this, that they admit of no answer and produce no conviction. Their only effect is to cause that momentary amazement and irresolution and confusion, which is the result of scepticism.

Hume. Essays, Note.

SKERE. The same, says Lye, as Sheer, mundus, purus; cleansed or clean, purified or pure; i. e. separated from every thing unclean, or impure. See SHEER.

Of the byshop he hath powere
To soile men, or else thei ben lore,
His absolucion maketh them skere;
Wo is the soule that he singeth for!

Chaucer. The Plowmannes Tale.

And for men saine vnknewe vnkiste,
Hir thome she holt in hir fiste,
So close within hir owne honde,
That there wynneth no man londe:
She leueth not all that she hereth:
And thus ful ofte her selfe she skiereth,
And is all ware of had I wist.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

SKETCH, n. } It. Schizzo; Fr. Esquisse;
SKETCH, v. } Dut. Schets; Ger. Schitz.
Wachter derives from Schatten,—a shade or shadow. Tooke,—from the A. S. verb Scit-an; Dut. Schieten; Ger. Schiessen, to throw, to throw off. See To SHOOT.

Any thing (a design) thrown off, cast off, (sc.) in outline; a delineation, or unfinished draught (of an intended picture or performance).

To make a sketch, or a more perfect model of a picture, is, in the language of poets, to draw up a scenery of a play; and the reason is the same for both; to guide the undertaking, and to preserve the remembrance of such things, whose natures are difficult to retain.

Dryden. Parallel of Poetry & Painting.

The reader I'll leave in the midst of silence to contemplate those ideas I have only sketch'd, and which every man must finish for himself.—Id. Ib.

This plan is not perhaps in all respects so accurate as might be wished, it being composed from the memorandums and rude sketches of the master and surgeon, who were not, I presume, the ablest draughtsmen.

Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 3.

The method of Rubens was to sketch his compositions in colours, with all the parts more determined than sketches generally are; from this sketch his scholars advanced the picture as far as they were capable: after which he retouched the whole himself.

Reynolds. On the Art of Painting, Note 11.

Our point being only to shew, that the anti-christian power in question is a spiritual and not a civil power, I have at present nothing to do with its various abominations, here sketched out, further than as some circumstances, concerning these abominations, speak more fully to the general truth we are upon.—Warburton, vol. x. Dis. 28.

SKEW. } See ASKEW. Dut. Scheef, scheel.

SKE/WED. } Skinner seems to think—from Dut.

Schouwen, to eschew, to shun. "In Dan. Skiev is—wry, crooked, oblique; Skiev, to twist, to wrest; Skievt, twisted, wrested," (Tooke.)

To skew,—to form or frame obliquely, crookedly; to view or look up, cast the eyes upon, crookedly, obliquely.

Skew in Holinshed is perhaps—a skiff.

I find also that as these Scots were reputed for the most Scithian-like and barbarous nation, and longest without letters; so they vsed commonlie to steale ouer into Britaine in leather skewes, and began to helpe the Picts about or not long before the beginning of Cesars time.

Holinshed. Description of Britaine, c. 4.

Put. Do you think sir,

This is the end we fight? can this durt draw us

To such a stupid tameness, that our service

Neglected, and look'd lamely on, and skew'd at

With a few honourable words, and thus, is righted?

Beaum. & Fletch. The Loyal Subject, Act ii. se. 1.

Mir. As I live I am asham'd, this wench has reach'd me,
Monstrous asham'd, but there's no remedy,
This skew'd eyed carrion.

Id. The Wild-Goose Chase, Act iv. sc. 1.

Com. Sen. Here's a gallimaufry of speech indeed.

Mem. I remember about the year 1602 many used this skew kind of language.—Brewer. Lingua, Act iii. sc. 5.

Windows broad within and narrow without, or skewed and closed.—1 Kings, vi. 4. (margin.)

Several have imagin'd, that this skue posture of the axis is a most unfortunate and pernicious thing.

Bentley, Ser. 8.

SKE'WER. In Devonshire (Lye) called a Shiver, which is perhaps a shiver, (qv.) from A. S. Sceaf-an, to shave, to cut; meaning—

A cut or cutting, a slip, (sc.) of wood; afterwards applied to metal of the same form, and for the same purpose.

Sweet-breads, and collops were with skevers prick'd
About the sides; imbibing what they deck'd.

Dryden. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

These are roasted in their shells, then stuck upon long wooden skevers, and taken off occasionally as wanted; being eat without any other preparation, though they often dip them in oil, as a sauce.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 3.

SKIFF. } In German written Schiff, a ship;
SKIFF, v. } from which it differs only in the application. See SHIP.

A boat, formed for lightness.

Nor turn'd she to Damascus kingdoms large,
Nor to the fort built in Asphaltes lake,
But jealous of her deare and precious charge,
And of her loue asham'd, the way did take
To the wide ocean, whither skiffe or barge
From vs doth sold or neuer voyage make.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xiv. s. 69.

— They two have cabin'd

In many as dangerous, as poor a corner,
Peril and want contending, they have skiff
Torrents, whose roaring tyranny and power
I th' least of these was dreadful, and they have Fought out together.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The two Noble Kinsmen, Act i. sc. 3.

S. Cath. Thus with short plummet Heaven's deep will we sound,
That vast abyss where humane wit is drown'd!
In our small skiff we must not launch too far;
We here but coasters, not discoverers are.

Dryden. Tyrannick Love, Act iv. sc. 1.

I sail'd upon a stormy sea,
(Thousands embark'd alike with me)
My skiff was small, and weak beside,
Not built, methought, to stem the tide.

Cotton. Friendship, Vision 6.

SKILL, v.

SKILL, n.

SKILLFUL.

SKILLFULLY.

SKILLFULNESS.

SKILLLESS.

Dut. Scheelen; Ger. Schelen;
A. S. Scylan; to separate, to distinguish.

To distinguish, to discriminate, to mark, note, or observe, distinctions or differences; to discern; to see or perceive clearly and distinctly.

Also, to differ, have or cause a difference.
And skill, n.—

Discernment, discrimination; power or ability to perceive or to perform; knowledge, ability, art, dexterity, adroitness; also distinct or particular cause or reason.

Steuens sauh his skille, that Henry did resoun,
With alle that longed ther tille he gaf him Huntynghoun.
R. Brunne, p. 111.

He praied to hold him stille, tille his tocome mot be,
& he suld do his wille, in alle that skille mot se.
Id. p. 245.

Philip herd that chance, how the Inglis had done, & alle how it bigan, & alle the skille why.—Id. p. 252.

At conseil & at nede he was a skilfulle kyng.—Id. p. 311.

In like maner also Ioon the apostle for humelnesse in his epistle for the same skille sette not his name to fore.

Wiclif. Prolog. to Ebrewis.

A king to kepe his lieges in justice,
Withouthen doute that is his office,
All wolle he kepe his lordes in hir degree,
As it is right and skil, that they bee
Enhaunsed and honoured.

Chaucer. Legend of Good Women, Prolog.

And all that wrought is with a skilful thought,
The gost, that from the fader gan procede,
Hath souled hem withouten any drede.

Id. The Second Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,732.

To whom Cecile answered boldly;
"Men mighten dreden wel and skilfully
This life to lese, min owen dere brother,
If this were living only and non other."—Id. v. 15,724.

Me thinketh thus, that neyther ye nor I,
Ought halfe this wo to maken skilfully,
For there is art inough for to redresse,
That yet is misse, and sleen this hevinesse.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iv.

Myne holy father so I wyll,
For ye haue tolde me suche a skyll
Of this ensample nowe tofore,
That I shall euermo therefore
Her afterwarde mine obseruance
To loue, and to his obeisaunce
The better kepe.

Gower. Con. A. b. i.

VOL. II.

Who ever taught a skilless man to teach,
Or stop a breach that never cannon saw?

Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Gainst whom there singled from the other side
A Painim knight that well in armes was skil'd,
And had in many a battell oft bene tride,
Hight Bruncheval the bold, who fiersly forth did ride.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 4.

And practice, when unpleasant, makes few skill'd.

Davenant. Gondibert, b. ii. c. 6.

It skilleth very much in this matter and question now in hand, to know the nature of the earth wherein wee meane to plant, how many trees it may well beare and nourish.

Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 12.

Q. Mar. And so say I.

York. And I: and now we three have spoke it,
It skilleth not greatly who impugn's our doom.

Shakespeare. 2 Pt. Henry VI. Act iii. sc. 1.

— Mee of these
Nor skill'd nor studious, higher argument Remains.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ix.

Wherefore to passe by the name, let them vse what dialect
they will, whether we call it a priesthood, a presbytership, or a ministrie, it skilleth not.

Hooker. Ecclesiasticali Politie, b. v. s. 78.

Who by her wicked arts and wiely skill,
Too false and strong for earthly skill or might,
Unwares me wrought unto her wicked will,
And to my foe betrayd, when least I feared ill.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 12.

As when a skilful marriner doth reed
A storme approaching that doth perill threat,
He will not bide the daunger of such dread,
But strikes his sayles, and vereth his main sheat.

Id. Id. b. v. c. 12.

And though, by skillesse builders fram'd and wrought,
Their engines rude and rams were late elect,
Yet now the forts and toures (from whence they fought)
Were framed by a cunning architect.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xviii. s. 41.

From these the congregated troops obey
Young Amphilus' and Adrastus' equal sway:
Old Merops' sons; whom skill'd in fates to come,
The sire forewarn'd, and prophesy'd their doom.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

These, if the gods with my desires comply,
(The gods, alas! more mighty far than I,
And better skill'd in dark events to come)
In peace shall land thee at thy native home.

Id. Homer. Odyssey, b. v.

The distribution of land and water, say they [philosophers] is admirable: the one being laid against the other so skil- fully, that there is a just equipoise of the whole globe.

Goldsmith. Animated Nature, vol. i. c. 15.

The ship would quickly strike against the rocks for want of skilfulness in the pilots.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 35.

SKIM, v.

SKIM, n.

SKIMMER, n.

SKIMMING, n.

SKUM, or

SCUM, n & v.

SKUMMY.

SKUMMER, n. & v.

The Dut. Schium; Ger. Schaum; Sw. Skumm. Wachter and Ihre derive also from the Lat. To scum is—

To move or pass over or along the surface; to move or remove any thing from the surface; to pass or glide along superficially.

And in the same yere, sir Edmonde of Holande erle of Kent, was by the kyng made admyrall of the see; the whiche storyd and skymmid ye see right well & manfully.

Fabyan. Chronycle, an. 1409.

Who, but skimming any thing that came before him, was disciplined to leave the trough-handling of all to his gentle wife, who forthwith caused us to be put in prison.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Golde and syluer was no more spared then thoughe it had rayned out of the cloudes, or scomed out of the sea.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 49.

And skommeth it in a tray

Where as the yest is.—Skelton. Elinour Rummung.

Another brought a skommer

A frying pan and a slice.

Id. Id.

These were the skummy remnants of those rebels, whose naughty minds could not trust so much to the goodness of their prince; as to lay their hang-worthy necks upon the constancy of his promised pardon.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iv.

Some scumd the drosse that from the metal came.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

1745

— A second multitude

With wond'rous art found out the massie ore,
Severing each kind, and scum'd the bullion dross.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. 1.

The rest had severall offices assynd;
Some to remove the scum as it did rise,
Others to beare the same away did mynd;
And others it to use according to his kynd.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

But evil on itself shall back recoil,
And mix no more with goodness, when at last Gather'd like scum, and settled to itself,
It shall be in eternal restless change
Self-fed, and self-consum'd.—Milton. Comus.

The uppermost part of the root of ellebor which is the thickest and bulbous like to an onion head, is good for dogs only, and given unto them for to make them scummer.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxv. c. 5.

Full in the prince's passage, hills of sand,
And dangerous flats in secret ambush lay,
Where the false tides skim o'er the cover'd land,
And seamen with dissembled depths betray.

Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Straight to the ships Æneas took his way;
Embark'd his men, and skimm'd along the sea:
Still coasting, till he gain'd Cajeta's bay.

Id. Virgil. Æneis, b. vi.

But the natives in these months watch the rivers, and take up thence multitudes, skimming them [locusts] from off the water with little nets.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

There are different degrees of skimmers; first, he who goes no farther than the title-page; secondly, he who proceeds to the contents and index, &c.

Shelton. Deism Revealed, Dial. 8.

1. Hear, ye sullen pow'r's below;
Hear, ye taskers of the dead.
2. You that boiling cauldrons blow,
You that scum the molten lead.

Dryden. Ædipus, Act iii. sc. 1

They oint their naked limbs with mother'd oil;
Or from the founts where living sulphurs boil,
They mix a medicine to foment their limbs;
With scum that on the molten silver swims.

Id. Virgil. Georgics, b. iii.

The salt, after its crystallizing, falls down to the bottom, and they take it out by wooden scummers, and put it in frails.—Ray. Rem. p. 120.

I have met with persons who could not understand more of what they read in Latin or French than in English, because their mother tongue affording too easy a passage to their thoughts they skim lightly over the surface and never touch the greater part lying at the bottom.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. i. c. 10.

They relished the very skimmings of the kettle, and dregs of the casks.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 7.

They stigmatize them, in the aggregate, as people whom nobody knows, as the scum of the earth, as born only to minister to their pride, and to supply the wants of their luxury.—Knox, Ess. 76.

SKIN, n.

SKIN, v.

SKINNER, n.

SKINNING, n.

SKINNY.

Dut. Schinde, schinden, deglubere, excoriare; Ger. Schinden; Sw. Skinn, skinna. Wachter says,—not from the Lat. Scind- ere, but from the Gr. Σκυρος, pellis. Skinner derives from A. S. Scin-an, to shine, because the skin presents itself conspicuously to the eye. Skin.—

The covering of the flesh of animals; also the covering or coating of vegetables. To skin is either—

To cover with, or strip off, the skin, the hide:
generally,—to cover over, thinly.

And Jon was clothid with heeris of camels and a girdil of skyn was aboute his leendis.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 1.

John was clothed with camelles heer, & with a gyrdil of a skin about his loines.—Bible, 1551. Id.

"For when his horse is in the stable

He may it sell againe parde,

And winnen on it, such happe may be,

All may the manne not lese iwis,

For at the least the skinne is his.

Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

Hir nose baas, hir browes hie,

Hir eies small, and depe sette,

Hir chekes ben with teres wette,

And ruelyn, as an empty skyn

Hangyng downe vnto the chyn.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

— Mother, for loue of grace,

Lay not a flattering vnction to your soule,

That not your trespasses, but my madnesse speakes:

It will but skin and filme the vicerous place,

Whil'st ranke corruption mining all within,

Infects vnscene.—Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act iii. sc. 4.

10 N

Isab. Because authoritie, though it erre like others,
Hath yet a kinde of medicine in it selfe
That skins the vice o' th' top.
Shakespeare. Meas. for Meas. Act ii. sc. 2.

This is but the skinning of an old sore, it will break out upon all occasions.—Bp. Taylor, vol. iii. Ser. 6.

Then freely up those royall spoyle he tooke,
Yet at the lyon's skin he inly quooke;
But it dissembled, and upon his head
The crowne, and on his backe the skin he did,
And the false foxe him helped to array.
Spenser. Mother Hubberd's Tale.

"Let not the skinner's daughter's sonne
Possesse what he pretends,
He lues to die a noble death
That life for freedome spends."
Warner. Albion's England, b. iv.

And [it cureth] the bones charged with purulent and skinnie matter.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxiii. The Proeme.

And it is still episcopacy that before all our eyes worsens and slugs the most learned, and seeming religious of our ministers, who no sooner advanc'd to it, but like a seething-pot set to cool, sensibly exhale and reek out the greatest part of that zeal, and those gifts which were formerly in them, settling in a skinny congealment of ease and sloth at the top.—Milton. Reformation in England, b. i.

After all, that his machine might not seem too violent, we see the hero limping after Turnus. The wound was skinned; but the strength of his thigh was not restored.
Dryden. Virgil. Aeneis, Ded.

These skins were always worn with their hair on; and to render them more terrible and frightful, the teeth were frequently placed grinning on their enemies.
Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. iii. c. 4.

Then the Hockser immediately mounts, and rides after more game, leaving the other to the skinners, who are at hand, and ready to take off his hide.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1676.

"Never since I was born did I hear so much wit,
And, madam, I laugh'd till I thought I should split.
So then you look'd scornful, and snift at the dean,
As you should say, Now, am I skinny and lean?"
Swift. Hamilton's Bawn.

The wounds, our own earth hath formerly received, are yet deep and ghastly; which though skinned over by time and human culture, are seen, by those who pry the least beyond its surface, to bear all the marks and memory of a ruined world.—Warburton, vol. ix. Ser. 2.

What is most remarkable in these [the whistling duck] is, that the end of their beaks is soft, and of a skinny, or more properly, cartilaginous substance.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 5.

Before they set forward, therefore, it was unanimously agreed, that they should eat their vulture; the bird was accordingly skinned.—Id. First Voyage, b. i. c. 4.

SKINK. } A. S. Scænc, a cup, scænc-full, a SKI'NKER. } cup-full. A. S. Scencan, to give drink, to play the Scinker, (Somner.) Dut. Schen- ken; Ger. Schencken,—to pour, to pour (wine:
and consequently, to serve wine, when poured.) "Skynk,—to fill drink, to drink," (Gloss. to G. Douglas;) and see Jamieson; also the quotation below from Bacon. Skink,—
To pour and serve wine.
Skinker,—a wine-server, cup-bearer.

Bacchus the win hem skinketh al aboute.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9596.

Alui. Villaines, why skink you not vnto this fellow,
He makes me blythe, & merry in my thoughts.
Lodge. Looking-glass for England.

We find also that Scotch skinck; (which is a pottage of strong nourishment) is made with the knees and sinews of beef, but long boiled.—Bacon. Naturali Historie, § 45.

But sweet Ned, to sweeten which name of Ned, I giue thee this peniworth of sugar, clapt euen now into my hand by an vnder skinker, one that neuer spake other English in his life, then eight shillings and six pence, and, you are welcome.—Shakespeare. 1 Pt. Hen. IV. Act ii. sc. 4.

The reconciler-bowl went round the board,
Which empty'd, the rude skinker still restor'd.
Dryden. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

The gods laugh'd out, unwear'd, as they spy'd
The busy skinker hop from side to side.—Tickell. Id. Ib.

SKIP, v. } In A. S. Forth-scipe,—is expe-SKI'P, n. } dition, speed, dispatch; but all SKI'PPER. } other traces of the word are SKI'PPINGLY. } lost. To skip, is,— To move by short, quick, jumps or leaps; to move or pass over by a jump or leap: generally,— to pass over, to omit, to miss.

R. herd it say, he dred an oste mot skip
Behind, & stop his way bituex him & Philip.
R. Brunne, p. 181.

And over skippers al so.—Piers Plouhman, p. 221.

And he castide away his cloth & skippide and cam to him.
Wiclif. Mark, c. 10.

And whanne the apostlis, Barnabas and Poul, herden this, thei torenten her cootis, and thei skipten out among the peple, and crieden and seiden, men, what doen ghe this thing?—Id. Dedis, c. 14.

Than shal your soule up into Heven skippe
Swifter than doth an arow of a bow.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9476.

The lambe thinkes not the butcher's knife
Should then bereue him of his life;
For when the sunne doth once runne in,
Then all their gladnes doth begin;
And then their skips, and then their play,
So falls their sadnes then away.
Vncertaine Auctors. The Louer describeth his whole State.

Now the devil, said she, take these villains, that can never leave grinning, because I am not so fair as mistress Mopsa; to see how this skipjack looks at me.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

To nimble shifts the knight himselfe betaketh,
And skippeth here and there for his defence.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. vii. s. 39.

If one read skippingly and by matches, and not take the thread of the story along, it must needs puzzle and distract the memory.—Howell. Instr. Por. Trav. p. 39.

But in a quick succession of thought, it is easy to run ideas one into another, skipping over the intermediate terms which should keep them distinct.
Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 434.

Remember you were in the lowest station of human life, which, as the old ballad says, is that of a skipkennel turned out of place.—Swift. Directions to the Footman.

The nightingale may claim the topmost-bough,
While the poor grasshoppers must chirp below.
Like him unnotic'd, I, and such as I,
Spread little wings, and rather skip than fly.
Cowper. Table Talk.

SKIPPER. Dut. Schipper, a shipper, or shipman.

For in ages past, as the skipper told me, there grew a fair forest in that channel where the Texel makes now her bed.—Howell, b. i. Let. 5.

SKIR. See SCUR, i. e. to scour.

If they will fight with vs, bid them come downe,
Or voyde the field: they do offend our sight.
If they'l do neither, we will come to them,
And make them sker away, as swift as stones
Enforced from the old Assyrian slings.
Shakespeare. Hen. V. Act iv. sc. 7.

Send out moe horses, skirre the country round,
Hang those that talke of feare.—Id. Macbeth, Act v. sc. 3.

—A skyrgaliarde.—Skelton. Laureate.

SKIR'RMISH, v. } Written Scarmish, scarmage, SKI'RMISH, n. } scrymish; "A. S. Scrimbre, SKI'RMISHING, n. } gladiator, a sword-player, a master of defence, or fencing master. Kiliano,— Schermer: hence our words of skirmish and skirmishing; as also the Fr. (who to words of other languages beginning with s often prefix e) Escrimier, (Somner.) Fr. Escarmoucher; It.
Scaramucciare; Sp. Escaramuzar. (See SCARA- MOUCH.) The word seems to have an affinity with the A. S. Scyr-an, to part, to divide.

To fight partially or in parts or divisions; to make partial attacks; to engage in slight or partial conflicts.

And whan the Thebans were besette about,
The manly knights would haue pricked out,
And haue scarmished in hir hasty pride,
With hir fomen on that other side.
Lydgate. The Story of Thebes, pt. iii.

Now let her slepe, and we our tales holde
Of Troilus, that is to paleis ridden,
Fro the scarmishe of which I you tolde.
Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

So happed it that at scarmishing,
She cast her herte vpon Minos the king,
For his beautie, and his cheualrie,
So sore, that she wende for to die.—Id. Ariadne of Athens.

There were dyuerse compaignyons a horseback, that passed the ryuer, and some a foote, to skrymishe with the Scottis: and in like wyse some of the Scottis brake oute, and skrymysshed with them: so that there were dyuerse on bothe partyes slayne, wounded, and takyn prysoners.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 18.

But euery nyght the englishe oste made good and sure watche, for they doubted makynge of skryes: and euer the moste part of the oste laye in their harneys, and euery day ther were skrymysshes made, and men slayne on both parties.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 18.

[Gundefilf] gaderyd a power of knyghtes and made warre vpon his sayd brother, and lastly beseged hym in ye cytie of Vienne, wher vpon eyther parte was by skrymysshes and assautes great people slayne.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 99.

—And ere the war begin,
He lightly skirmishes on every string Charg'd with a flying touch.—Crashaw. Musick's Duel.

But, if for me ye fight, or me will serve,
Not this rude kynd of battaill, nor these armes
Are meet, the whiche doe men in bale to sterue,
And doolefull sorrowe heape with deadly harmes:
Such cruell game my scarmoges disarmes.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 6.

At length they came whereas a troupe of knights
They saw together skirmishing, as seemed:
Sixe they were all, all full of fell despight,
But foure of them the battell best besemed,
That which of them was best mote not be deemed.
Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 9.

They built small works or forts of timber, wherein they plant little guns, and lie in sight of each other 2 or 3 monthes, skirmishing every day in small parties, and sometimes surprising a brest-work.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1686.

Light are their skirmishes, their war is flight,
And still to wheel their wavering troops delight.
Rowe. Lucan. Pharsalia, b. viii.

¶ Tho' there seldom happens a pitch'd battel between them, yet there are often skirmishings, which keep the soldiers on each side upon their guards.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

In this skirmish only two of the Indians were hurt with the small shot, and not a single life was lost, which would not have been the case if I had not restrained the men, who, either from fear or the love of mischief, shewed as much impatience to destroy them as a sportsman to kill his game.
Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 4.

SKIRT, n. } Skirid, sker'd, skirt, from A. S.
SKIRT, v. } Scyr-an, to cut, to divide, to separate.

The part, where the continuity is separated; a separate part or portion; the edge, the border, the bound or boundary.

In a long purple pall, whose skirt with gold
Was fretted all about, she was arrayd.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

Lear. Of all these bounds, euen from this line, to this,
With shaddowie forrests, and with Champains rich'd
With plenteous riuers, and wide-skirted meades
We make thee lady.—Shakespeare. Lear, Act i. sc. 1.

Emil. Canst not thou work such flowers in silk, wench?
Wom. Yes.
Emil. I'll have a gown full of 'em, and of these,
This is a pretty colour, w'il't not do
Rarely upon a skirt wench.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Two Noble Kinsmen, Act ii. sc. 2.

—The middle pair
Girt like a starrie zone his waste, and round
Skirted his loines and thighs with downie gold
And colours dipt in heav'n.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. v.

And the coast itself seemed quite rocky and barren, and the water's edge skirted with precipices.
Anson. Voyages, b. i. c. 10.

The skirts or outer part of the island, especially that part of it which borders on the main sea, is woody.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1687.

In these circumstances, it seems to disagree with those found by the Russians; and also in not having the outer toes of the hind feet skirted with a membrane.
Cook. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 2.

—Mighty winds,
That sweep the skirt of some far-spreading wood
Of ancient growth, make music not unlike
The dash of ocean on his winding shore,
And lull the spirit while they fill the mind.
Cowper. Task, b. i.

SKIT. } From the A. S. Scyt-an, to SKI'TTISH. } throw out.
SKI'TTISHLY. } A wench, who throws or SKI'TTLES. } casts, (sc.) lures or enticements;
a wanton. A jeer or jibe thrown or cast out.
See Tooke.

Skittish, a skittish horse,—one that throws or casts itself out of its course; unsteady, giddy.
Generally—unsteady, uncertain.

Skittels, (skit-dals) dim. of skit,—the bowl cast or thrown; the pins, thrown at.

[Herod] at the request of a dancing skit stroke off the head of St. John the Baptist.
Howard, Earl of Northampton. Def. agt. Sup. Proph. (1583.)

Thy high estate which sets thy heart on fire,
Or new found choyce which cannot serve thee long,
Shal make me dread with pen for to rehearse,
The skittish deedes in thys my parting verse.

Gascoigne. Farewel with a Mischiefe.

For so moche as syr Edward his sone, to whom he had lytle before geuen the erldom of Chester, wolde haue chaungyd some of theyr skytyshe cōdycions.

Fabyan. Chronicle, an. 1257. Hen. III.

A skittish filly will be your fortune Welford, and fair enough for such a packsaddle.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Scornful Lady, Act iii. sc. 1.

Withal it is observed, that the lands in Barkshire are very skittish, and often cast their owners; which yet I impute not so much to the unruliness of the beasts, as to the un-skilfulness of the riders.—Fuller. Worthies. Barkshire.

The beasts were very plump, and skittishly played as they passed by; not knowing whither they were driven.

Situation of Paradise, (1683,) p. 93.

Name not yourself her lover, but her friend.

How many skittish girls have thus been caught!

He prov'd a lover, who a friend was thought.

Dryden. Ovid. Art of Love, b. i.

No more the wherry feels my stroke so true;

At skittles, in a grizzle, can I play?

Woodstock, farewell! and Wallingford, adieu!

Where many a scheme reliev'd the lingering day.

Warton. To a Grizzle Wig.

SKREEN. See SCREEN.

SKRIES, n. See ASCRY.

But every nyght the Englishe oste made good and sure watche, for they doubted makynge of skryes: and ever the most part of the oste laye in their harneys; and every day were skrymysshes made, and men slayne on both parties.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 18.

SKUD. See SCUD.

SKUE. See SKEW.

SKULK. See SCULK.

SKULL. See SCULL.

SKY. } G. Douglas renders—per umbram,

SKY'BY. } (Æn. ii. 732.) throw the sky. A. S.

SKY'ISH. } Scua, scuwa, umbra; Sw. Sky;

SKY'ED. } Dut. Scheye, and it is so used by Chaucer and Gower, a shade, a cloud; and is probably from the A. S. Sced-ian. (See SHADE, SHAW.) It is usually derived from the Gr. Σκία.

A shade, or shadow, a cloud; and thence applied to the region of the clouds, the heavens.

And let a certaine winde go,

That blew so hidously and hie,

That it ne left not a skie

In all the welken long and brode.

Chaucer. The House of Fame, b. iii.

And with that worde, all sodenly

She passeth as it were a skye.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

With that she loketh, and was ware

Downe fro the skie there came a chare,

The whiche dragons aboute drowe.—Id. Ib. b. v.

God layed him [Joseph] where he could neither see sunne nor moone, neyther any starre of the skye, and that many yeares.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 98.

Whose wals were high, but nothing strong nor thick,
And golden foile all over them displayd,
The purest skye with brightnesse they dismaid.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 4.

If wee have regard to the coldnesse of water, necessarie it is that the well should stand in some coole and shadowie place not exposed to the sunne, and nathelesse open to the broad aire, that it may have the full view and sight (as it were) of the skie.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxi. c. 3.

The skiebred eagle, roiall bird,

Percht there upon an oke above.

Spenser. Friend's Passion.

If I do loose thee I do loose a thing

That none but foolles would keepe; a breath thou art,

Servile to all the skyie-influences,

That dost this habitation where thou keepst

Hourly afflict.—Shakes. Meas. for Meas. Act iii. sc. 1.

Now pile your dust, vpon the quicke, and dead,

Till of this flat a mountaine you haue made,

To o're top old Pelion, or the skyish head

Of blew Olympus.—Id. Hamlet, Act v. sc. 1.

—The third his feet

Shaddowd from either heele with featherd maile

Skie-tinctur'd grain.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. v.

Behold, slow-settling o'er the lurid grove

Unusual darkness broods; and growing gains

The full possession of the sky, surcharg'd

With wrathful vapour, from the secret beds,

Where sleep the mineral generations, drawn.

Thomson. Summer.

—The pale deluge floats
O'er the sky'd mountain to the shadowy vale.

Thomson. Summer.

As soon as the soul is dislodged from this cloudy mansion in the body, all things will then appear, not as by an uncertain sky-light in a dark room, but in an open and distinct view, and then it will be impossible to be any longer deceived by false representations of things.

Stillingfleet, vol. iv. Ser. 9.

SLAB.

SLA'BER, n.

SLA'BER, v.

SLA'BRY.

SLA'VER, n.

SLA'VER, v.

SLA'BRY.

SLU'BBERINGLY.

Slabben, slabberen, sorbire.

Slab, is any thing slippery; slime, — wetted,

slopped, earth, stone, &c.

Slabber, or slaver,—the slimy moisture that comes (slips or slides) from the mouth or lips.

To slabber, or slaver,—to produce, to drip or drivel, to cover with such slimy moisture. Also—

To sup up in a slabbering, sloppy manner, i. e.

so as to wet or slop the lips with the pottage.

A slab, (sc.) of timber, stone, &c.,—a slip: in Tusser, said to be the outermost piece, (i. e. slip) cut off by the sawyer. See BESLABBER.

Tho cam sleuthe al by slobered. wit to slymed eyen.

Piers Ploughman, p. 110.

Save slap of thy timber for stable and sty

For horse and for hog, more cleanly to lye.

Tusser. Husbandry. September.

Ill huswife, unskilfull, to make her own cheese,

Through trusting of others, hath this for her fees;

Her milk pan and cream-pot, so slabber'd and sost,

That butter is wanting, and cheese is half lost.

Id. Ib. April.

In the superscription it [the breve of Pope Julius] appeared slubbered, by reason of often handling, peradventure lying among so many his writings and old letters.

State Trials. Hen. VIII. an. 19.

For the rest so perfect proportioned, that nature shewed,

she doth not like men, who slubber up matters of mean account.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

Miso having now her authority increased, came with scouling eyes to deliver a slaving good morrow to the ladies.—Id. Ib. b. ii.

Make the grewell thicke, and slab.

Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act iv. sc. 1.

O love! how sweet thou look'st now? and how gentle?

I should have slubber'd thee, and stain'd thy beauty.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Mad Lover, Act v. sc. 1.

Isab. Who I? I thank you, I am as haste ordain'd me, a thing slubber'd, my sister is a goodly portly lady, a woman of a presence.—Id. Wit without Money, Act i. sc. 1.

—This object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,

Fiering it only heere, should I, (damn'd then)

Slauuer with lippes as common as the stayres

That mount the capitoll.

Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act i. sc. 7.

—But I will sell my dukedome

To buy a slobbry and a durtle farne

In that nooke-shotten Ile of Albion.

Id. Hen. V. Act iii. sc. 5.

Who ingross many pluralities under a non-resident and slubbing dispatch of souls.

Milton. An Apology for Smectymnuus.

Now the gentry of this county were generally addicted to that party, which made them so remiss in this matter, slightly slubbing it over, doing something for shew, and nothing to purpose.—Fuller. Worthies. Yorkshire.

Not such as basely sooth the humour of the time,

And slubberingly patch up some slight and shallow rhyme,

Upon Barnardus' top, that strive to be install'd,

Yet never to that place were by the Muses call'd.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 21.

—Is the marriage done Sir?

Rut. Yes, they are knit; but must this slubberdegullion

Have her?

Beaum. & Fletch. The Custom of the Country, Act i. sc. 1.

They must be diligently cleansed from moss, slab, and oose.—Evelyn.

Like to a light fast lock'd in lanthorn dark,

Whereby by night our wary steps we guide

In slabby streets, and dirty chanel's mark.

More. Pre-existence of the Soul.

And Mathiolus hath also a passage, that a toad communicates its venom, not only by urine, but by the humidity and slaver of its mouth.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 13.

1747

So Armarillis and the cook that slobbers his beard with sack-posset, in The Man's the Master; have, in my opinion, made the most diverting part of the action.

King. Art of Cookery, Let. vi.

When waggish boys the stunted beesom ply,

To rid the slabby pavement, pass not by

Ere thou hast held their hands.—Gay. Trivia, b. ii.

—I have

Other affairs to dispatch of more importance betwixt

Queen Slobber-Chops and myself.

Dryden. The Tempest, Act iii.

Quoth she, "Although thou hast deserv'd,

Base slubberdegullion, to be serv'd

As thou didst vow to deal with me,

If thou hadst got the victory,

Yet I shall rather act a part

That suits my fame, than thy desert.

Hudibras, pt. i. c. 3.

Of all mad creatures, if the learn'd are right,

It is the slaver kills, and not the bite.

Pope. Prol. to Satires.

Your greedy slaving to devour,

Before 'twas in your clutches,—power.

Hudibras, pt. iii. c. 2.

—Three legs upholding firm

A massy slab, in fashion square or round.

Cowper. Task, b. i.

When, bless each little sllobbering mouth,

It had not cut a single tooth.

Mason. The Dean and the Squire.

It [the liboya] lies in wait for wild animals near the paths, and when it throws itself upon them, it wraps them round so closely as to break all the bones; then moistening the whole body over with its slaver, it makes it fit for deglutition, and swallows it whole.

Goldsmith. Animated Nature, pt. v. b. iii. c. 3.

SLACK, adj.

See ASLAKE, and LACK.

SLACK, n.

Dut. Slaeck; Ger. Schlack;

SLACK, v.

Sw. Slak; A. S. Slac, sleac,

SLA'CKEN, v.

from the verb sleac-ian, sleac-

SLA'CKING, n.

gian, tardare, remittere, re-

SLA'CKLY.

laxare, pigrescere; to be, or

SLA'CKNESS.

cause to be, slow, to retard, or remit, to relax, or loosen; to be or cause to be or become sluggish, inert, or inactive.

Slack, adj.—slow, tardy; inactive; relaxed, loose, remiss, abated, diminished, weakened.

Slake, in Norfolk, is,—leisure, (Grose.) In the North, very small coals, to damp or abate

the burning of the larger, are called slake, slack, or sleek.

And whanne thei hadden take up the ancris thei bitooken hem to the see and slakiden togidre the iointouris of gouer-naillis: [simul laxantes juncturas gubernaculorum.]

Wiclif. Dedis, c. 27.

Right so fortune that semeth, as it suffreth with slaked or vngouerned bridles it suffreth bridles, that is to saine, to been gouerned, and passeth by thilke lawe, that is to saine, by the deuine ordenaunce.—Chaucer. Boecius, b. v.

Walter hire gladeth, and hire sorwe slaketh.

Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8920.

The wedding and the feast to devise,

To me that have itake such emprise,

And so many a storie for to make,

It were to longe, lest that I should slake

Of thing that beareth more effect and charge.

Id. Legende of Cleopatras.

The noblest of the Grekes that ther were

Upon hir shouldres carreden the bere

With slacke [some ed. slake] pace.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2904.

And if she than hede toke,

Howe pitousliche on hir I looke,

Whan that I shall my leue take

Hir ought of mercy for to slake

Hir daunger, whiche saith euer naie.—Gower. C. A. b. iv.

Their fastynges were also verve paynefull and precyse:

and ours neglygent, slake and remysse, and nowe almost worne away.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1312.

We are informed that many of you are so negligent and so slack herein, that it doth appear you look rather, as it were, through your fingers, than diligently see to the execution of the said laws and proclamations.

State Trials. Edw. VI. an. 1550.

So God agaynewarde vseth hymselfe towarde hym, in Loidynge aym the more slackely, and than the tother waxeth thereby the more faynte.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 591.

I haue trauelled with the more paines to absolute and end this my worke; not after the maner of a student, but as a traeller; whose nature and condition is, that when he dooth set forth on his iournie verie slacklie and slowlie, then dooth he make the more hast, and trauell the more speedilie.—Hooker. Conquest of Ireland, Proem.

But the Romans could not follow the Britains farre, because they wanted their horsemen which were yet behind, & through slacking of time could not come to land.

Holinshed. Historie of England, b. i. c. 12.

I have marked in you, I will not say, an alteration, but a relenting truly, and a slacking of the main career, you had so notably begun and almost performed.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

But being none of them who think all things done, for which they have once given direction, he followed every where his commandment with his presence, which witnessed of every man's slackness or diligence, chastising the one, and encouraging the other.—Id. Ib. b. v.

Ne ever Artegall his gripe strong
For any thing wold slacke, but still upon him hong.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 2.

Well, I must of another errant to Sir John Falstaffe from my two mistresses: what a beast am I to slacke it.

Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor, Act iii. sc. 4.

From his slack hand the garland wreath'd for Eve
Down drop'd, and all the faded roses shed.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. v.

So it cometh to passe, that they seeme to move more slowly, when they go their highest circuit: not, for that naturall motions doe either hasten or slacke, which bee certaine and severall to every one.—Holland. Plinie, b. ii. c. 16.

Nor shall this storm slacken a whit that firm league of love, wherein I am eternally tied unto you.—Howell, b. i. Let. 53.

— I saw likewise stand,
Vp to the chin, amidst a liquid lake,
Tormented Tantalus; yet could not slake
His burning thirst.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xi.

Some in her threaten fillet still did bide,
And true to bondage, would not break from thence,
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

Shakespeare. A Lover's Complaint.

Th' enraged commons ready are to rise
Upon the regent, to his charge and lay'd,
That from his slackness and base cowardice
These towns were lost, by his neglect of aid.

Drayton. The Miseries of Q. Margaret.

It is the partiality or slackness of the subordinate inferior executions, that is guilty of this prevalence of sin.

Bp. Hall. Ser. Acts, ii. 37, 38, 40.

These are your fatal seats, and this your Troy.
Time calls you now, the precious hour employ.
Slack not the good presage, while Heaven inspires
Our minds to dare, and gives the ready fires.

Dryden. Virgil. Aeneis, b. v.

Illustrious nymphs, from ocean sprung, arise,
Bless with a recent view our longing eyes.
Bid from the thirsty soil a torrent burst,
Or open some hard rock to slake our thirst.

Fawkes. Apollonius Rhodius. Argonautics, b. iv.

Moderate refreshments or recreations, are not only useful, but sometimes necessary to breathe our spirits after they have been almost stifled in a croud of business, and divert our wearied thoughts, which like the strings of a lute, by being slackened now and then, will sound the sweeter when they are wound up again.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 4.

And in other liquors actually cold, like unheated water, and one or two of them far more thin or subtle than it, I have kept lime long without slaking, and without imparting to the ambient liquor any sensible heat.

Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 479.

Such humble acknowledgments as I have been here mentioning, must not however be so understood as to afford any excuse or colour for slackness in our bounden duties, or for pleading any exemption or discharge from true Christian obedience.—Waterland. Works, vol. ix. p. 283.

— Sages after sages strove
In vain to filter off a crystal draught
Pure from the lees, which often more enhanc'd
The thirst than slak'd it, and not seldom bred Intoxication and delirium wild.—Cowper. Task, b. ii.

He sees that human equity is slack
To interfere, though in so just a cause;
And makes the task his own.

Id. Ib. b. vi.

The shaking head, and the contracted limb;
And ling'ring atrophy, and hoary age;
And second childhood, slack'ning ev'ry nerve,
To joy, to reason, and to duty dead!

Jago. Edge-Hill, b. iv.

— What means the bull,
Unconscious of his strength, to play the coward,
And flee before a feeble thing like man,
That, knowing well the slackness of his arm,
Trusts only in the well-invented knife?—Blair. Grave.

SLADE. A.S. Slæd, slade, a valley. (Somner.) A path or way in the vales, between the mountains, (Lye.) Perhaps from A.S. Hlid-an, to hide, to cover. See GLADE.

The thick and well-grown fog doth mat my smoother slades,
And on the lower leas, as on the higher hades,
The dainty glover grows.—Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 13.

SLAG. Grose says—in Gloucestershire, the copper dross: it is perhaps the A.S. Slog, slough, (qv.) Holinshed writes it slawke.

The inert, heavy dross or sediment, the refuse, or recrement: generally,—the sediment, the sludge.

In the yeere after, hauing well doonged it in the meane time with slawke of the sea, they sowe barlie in the selfe places where the turfies grew.

Holinshed. Description of Britaine.

I somewhat doubt, whether this be totally to be ascribed to the air and length of time, or to the leaving of metal in the slaggs in old times, before great furnaces were in use.

Boyle. Works, vol. v. p. 742.

SLAIN. See SLAY.

SLAM. See LAMM. To slam one (in the North) is to beat or cuff one strenuously, to push violently, (Grose.) It is also so used in Suffolk; to slam the door,—to push it violently, to bang it. Lye says, to slam is,—

To beat or bang, to conquer, to defeat:—Slam-pant in North, and Slampaine in Holinshed, seem to denote,—a hit, a knock, a cuff.

It may be corrupted from Goth. Slahan; A.S. Slan; Dut. Slaen, to strike, to beat.

The townsmen being pinched at the heart, that one rascal in such scornfull wise should giue them the slampaine.—Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 3.

In the mean time, Polyperchon, who had the government of the king's person, meaning to give Cassander a slampant and blurt, he sent letters patent unto the people at Athens, declaring how the young king did restore unto them their popular state again.—North. Plutarch, p. 633.

— Thus all the while a club was trump,
There's none could ever beat the rump;
Until a noble general came,
And gave the cheaters a clean slam.—Loyal Songs.

SLA'NDER, n. } Fr. Esclandir, which (Ihre SLA'NDER, v. } observes) is used in the SLA'NDERER. } same sense as the Sw. Klander, SLA'NDEROUS. } i. e. pro infamia.—The SLA'NDEROUSLY. } Fr. Esclandre, for Escandre, from the Lat. Scandalum. (See Menage, and SCANDAL.) Junius suggests the A.S. Sle-an, to beat, to strike; consequentially, to wound by the tongue: and it is worthy of remark, that the Fr. Esclandre also denoted slaughter; but Junius concludes, nevertheless, that the French is from the Latin.

A defamation, detraction, unjust imputation, (Cotgrave.) Scandal, calumny. See the quotation from Tillotson.

And he hath not roote in him self, but is temporal, for whanne tribulacioun and persecution is maad for the word: anon he is schlaundrid.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 13.

Mannes sone schal sende his aungelis, and thei schulen gedre fro his rewme alle his sclaundris, and hem that don wickidnesse.—Id. Ib.

The sclandre of Walter wonder wide spradde
That of a cruel herte he wikkedly,
For he a poure woman wedded hadde,
Hath mured both his children prively:
Swich murmur was among hem comunely.

Chaucer. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8598.

To slander women thus what may profite,
To gentillesse namely, that hem arme should
In defence of women, and hem delite,
As that the ordre of gentillesse wold,
If that a man list gentill to be hold,
He must all eschewe that thereto is contrary,
A sclaundrous tonge is his great adversary.

Id. The Letter of Cupid.

A voice was nerde, whan that thei fel,
Whiche saide: O damned man to hell,
Lo thus hath god thy sclaunder wroke,
That thou agein Constance hath spoke,
Beknowe the sothe er that thou die.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

First slaunder he, which alwayes beareth hate,
To happy harts in heavenly state that bide:
Can play his part to stirre vp some debate,
Whereby suspect into my choyse might glide.
Gascoigne. A Lady wronged by false Suspect.

Yet it is not onely by the comon lawes of this realme vpon greate payne forbydden, that any man shoulde wyth any sclaunderous railing wordes misse vse him selfe towarde his prince, but also by the plaine statute De scandalis magnatum sore and straightlye prohibited, that no man shal sclaunderously speake of anye man in y^e realme.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 622.

"O let that name," quoth she, "from book be torn,
Lest in that place the sad displeased earth
Dooth loath itself, as slander'd with my birth."
Drayton. The Barons' Wars, b. v.

Soone as they thence departed were afore,
That shamefull hag, the slaunder of her sexe,
Them follow'd fast, and them reviled sore.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 8.

And let it be to good men no slight satisfaction, that the slanderer here confesses, he has no further notice of me than his own conjecture.—Milton. Apol. for Smeectymnuus.

— Truth shall retire
Bestuck with slandrous darts, and works of fa'th Rarely be found. Id. Paradise Lost, b. xii.

Whether we speak evil of a man to his face, or behind his back: the former way indeed seems to be the most generous, but yet is a great fault, and that which we call reviling: the latter is more mean and base, and that which we properly call slander or backbiting.—Tillotson, Ser. 42.

So far it [a life of religion] is from abridging us of any of our earthly delights, (as its enemies slanderously represent it) that it abundantly heightens them.—Sharp, vol. i. Ser. 2.

He bids him glow with unremitting love
To all on earth, and to himself above;
Condemns th' injurious deed, the sland'rous tongue,
The thought that meditates a brother's wrong.
Couper. Truth.

SLANG. See SLING.

SLANT, adj. } See ASLANT. Skinner de-SLANT, v. } rives from the Dut. Slanghe; SLA'NTING, n. } Ger. Schlange, serpens; Dut.
SLA'NTWISE. } and Ger. Schlingen, serpere, torquere; A.S. Slinc-an, sling-an.

Oblique; being or moving at any angle less than a right angle.

Slant, the noun, is common in speech,—as it lies on a slant.

Some maketh a hollowness half a foot deep,
With fouer sets in it, set slant-wise asteepe.
Tusser. Husbandry. March.

Or by collision of two bodies grinde
The aire attrite to fire, as late the clouds
Justling or pusht with winds rude in thir shock,
Tine the slant lightning, whose thwart flame driv'n down
Kindles the gummie bark of fir or pine.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

Where the greenhill so gradual slants,
Or flowery glade extends,
Long may these fair, these fav'rite haunts
Prove social to my friends!
Cunningham. An Inscription.

Lo! on the side of yonder slanting hill
Beneath a spreading oak's broad foliage, sits
The shepherd swain. Dodsley. Agriculture, c. 3.

SLAP, v. } Ger. Schlappe, colaphus, ictus SLAP, n. } in vultum, in Eng. Slap, from the SLAP-DASH. } Lat. Alapha, s prefixed (Wachter).
It is perhaps from the A.S. Slip-an, labi; to slip, to fall.

To come down, slap, i. e. as if slipped off the feet, (on the ice, &c.) To slap down or throw down slap, as if slipped out of the hold or hand; to slap, to throw a blow, as if with the slip or fall of the hand—unclosed—before it is closed.

And what defence can properly be used in such a despicable encounter as this, but either the slap or the spurn.
Milton. Colasterion.

Dick, who thus long had passive sat,
Here strok'd his chin, and cock'd his hat;
Then slapp'd his hand upon the board,
And thus the youth put in his word.—Prior. Alma, c. 1.

Peg's servants complained; that if they offered to come into the warehouse, then strait went the yard slap over their noddle.—Swift. History of John Bull, pt. ii. c. 5.

The kiss, snatch'd hasty from the side-long maid,
On purpose guardless, or pretending sleep.
The leap, the slap, the haul; and, shook to notes
Of native music, the respondent dance.
Thomson. Winter.

And yet, slap-dash; is all again
In every sinew, nerve, and vein.—Prior. Alma, c. 1.

If it happened that neither was thrown, after the contest had continued about a minute, they parted either by consent or the intervention of their friends, and in this case each slapped his arm, as a challenge to a new engagement, either with the same antagonist or some other.

Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 11.

SLASH, v. } Dut. Slagen; Ger. Schlagen; SLASH, n. } A. S. Sleg-an, pecutere, cædere, to strike, whether with the hand, sword, &c.
 (Wachter.) To slash is—

To strike with a lash, or any thing thrown out;
 to strike or cut at.

Slash-slash, i. e. slash-slash.

But soone the knights with their bright burning blades
 Broke their rude troops, and orders did confound, Hewing and slashing at their idle shades.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

What's this? a sleeue? 'tis like demi cannon,
 What, vp and downe earu'd like an apple tart?
 Heers snip, and nip, and cut, and slish and slash,
 Like to a censor in a barbers shoope:
 Why what a deuils tailor cal'st thou this?

Shakespeare. The Taming of the Shrew, Act iv. sc. 3.

For knights are bound to feel no blows
 From paltry and unequal foes,
 Who, when they slash, and cut to pieces,
 Do all with civilest addresses.—Hudibras, pt. iii. c. 1.

Prince Giolo, and his royal sisters,
 Scarr'd with ten thousand comely blisters,
 The marks remaining on the skin,
 To tell the quality within;
 Distinguish'd slashes deck the great.—Prior. Alma, c. 2.

SLATE, n. } "Lapis scissilis," says Skin-SLATE, v. } ner; and Junius derives from the SLA'TER. } verb, to slit. Tooke, from the SLA'TY. } A. S. Scyl-an, to scale, to separate; and traces it thus:—shalit, shlait, shlate, slate.
 In Goth. Skaljōs; Dut. Schalien; Scotch, Skellys; and Old Eng. (see the quotations from Wiclif and Fabyan). Sclates. See SCALE.

Slater is common.

And they foundun not in what partie thei schulden bere hem in for the puple wenten on the roof, and by the sclattis
 thei letten him down with the bed into the myddil bifore Jhesus.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 5.

He buylded a royall mynstre of lyme and stoone, and couered it with platys of syluer stede of slate or leade.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 131.

With sunne and the frost together, it [the Columbine marle] will resolve and cleave into most thin slates or flakes.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 8.

Sonnets and elegies to Chloris,
 Would raise a house about two stories,
 A lyrick ode would state.—Swift. Vanbrugh's House.

All the stone that is slaty, with a texture long, and parallel by the site of the stratum, will split only lengthways, or horizontally; and, if placed in any other position, 'tis apt to give way, start, and burst, when any considerable weight is laid upon it.—Woodward. On Fossils.

We proceed in the same manner a person would who should undertake to draw any plan assigned him upon a slate.—Search. Light of Nature vol. ii. pt. i. c. 3

SLA'TTER, v. } Lye refers to slut; and SLA'TTERN, n. } slatter does seem formed SLA'TTERN, adj. } from that word, and to SLA'TTERNLY, adj. } express the effect of lazi- SLA'TTERNLY, ad. } ness, or sluttishness. Dryden distinguishes a slattern from a slut in degree only.
 Ray, in his North Country Words, explains a Dawgos, or dawkin, to be, a dirty or slattering woman.

To be sluggishly, lazily, idly, carelessly inattentive to order, neatness, cleanliness; to idle, to move, to act idly, lazily, carelessly.

A dirty, slattering woman.—Ray, in v. Dawgos.

Besides this, she had heard, that of late I had made
 A friendship with one that had since been her maid;
 One Prose, a slatternly ill-favour'd toad.

Cotton. Epistle to Sir Clifford Clifton.

From her own native France as old Alison past,
 She reproach'd English Nell with neglect or with malice,
 That the slattern had left, in the hurry and hast,
 Her lady's complexion and eye-brows at Calais.

Prior. A Reasonable Affliction.

This sort of woman is usually a janty slattern; she hangs on her cloaths, plays her head, varies her posture, and changes place incessantly.—Spectator, No. 454.

Beneath the lamp her tawdry ribbons glare,
 The now-scour'd manteau, and the slattern air.

Gay. Trivia, b. iii.

A very slatternly, dirty, but at the same time very genteel
 French maid is appropriated to the use of my daughter.

Chesterfield.

A fine suit, ill made, and slatternly or stiffly worn, far from adorning, only exposes the awkwardness of the speaker.—Id.

SLAVE, n. } See ENSLAVE.
SLAVE, v. } Ger. Schlew; Dan. and Sw.
SLA'VEY. } Slaf; Fr. Esclave; It. Schiavo; SLA'VISH. } Sp. Esclavo; Low Lat. Scla-
SLA'VISHLY. } vus. The word, in its present SLA'VISHNESS. } application, is from the Slavi or Scavi, reduced to servitude by the Germans.
 (See the quotation from Gibbon.) In the Slavo- nian tongue, slava or slawa, laus, gloria, is a word (says Gibbon) of familiar use in different dialects, and forms the termination of the most illustrious names.

One reduced to captivity, to servitude, to bondage; who is bound or compelled to serve, labour, or toil for, obey, another.

To slave,—to reduce to servitude or bondage;
 to treat as a slave, to subject, to make subservient. See the note on the quotation from Shakespeare.

There dyd I see such sightes, as yet my heart do pricke,
 I sawe the noble Bragadine, when he was fleyd quicke.
 First like a slawe enforst to beare to euery breach,
 Two baskets laden full with earth Mustaffa dyd him teach.
Gascoigne. Deuise of a Maske for Visc. Mountacute.

In this hall, all vile service, and all slavery, with all la-boursome toil, and drudgery, and base business, is done by bondmen.—More. Utopia, b. ii. c. 5.

Nay grant they had slav'd my body, my free mind,
 Like to the palm-tree walling fruitful Nile,
 Shall grow up straighter and enlarge it selfe
 'Spight of the envious weight that loads it with.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The False One, Act v. sc. 4.

Let the superfluous, and lust-dieted man,
 That slaves your ordinance, that will not see
 Because he do's not feelee, feelee your poure quickly.

Shakespeare. Lear, Act iv. sc. 1.

But I in armes, and in achievements brave,
 Do rather choose my flitting houres to spend,
 And to be the lord of those that riches have,
 Then them to have my selfe, and be their servile slave.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

For knots of cord to ev'ry town they send,
 The captiv'd English that they caught to bind,
 For to perpetual slav'ry they intend
 Those that alive they on the field should find.

Drayton. The Battle of Agincourt.

— Bequeath not to their lot
 The shame that from them no device can take,
 The blemish that will never be forgot;
 Worse than a slavish wipe, or birth-hour's blot.

Shakespeare. Rape of Lucrece.

When perch'd aloft to perfect their estate
 They rack their rents unto a treble rate;
 And hedge in all the neighbour common lands,
 And clogge their slavish tenants with commands.

Ep. Hall, b. iv. Sat. 2.

They are commonly such people, rude, silly, superstitious ideots, nasty, uncleane, lowsy, poore, dejected, slavishly humble.—Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 158.

Detaining them in more than Egyptian slavishness.

Fotherby. Atheom, p. 113.

His willingness to serve such base things, is the great brand of his slavishness.—Id. Ib. p. 120.

Their songs are very melancholy and doleful; so is their muck; but whether it be natural to the Indians to be thus melancholy, or the effect of their slavery, I am not certain.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1684.

He loves command and due restriction;

And she as well likes contradiction.

She never slavishly submits,

She'll have her will, or have her fits.—Gay. Fable 12.

From the Euxine to the Adriatic, in the state of captives or subjects, or allies or enemies, of the Greek empire, they overspread the land; and the national appellation of the slaves has been degraded by chance or malice from the sig-nification of glory to that of servitude.

Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 55.

To exchange that temperate, conditional subordination of the clergy, here laid down, for the slavish dependency which Hobbes and his followers prescribe, would prove a very ill bargain for the state.—Warburton. Alliance, b. ii. c. 1.

But if others (high strained expressions of civility,) of the same sort are coined from time to time to succeed them, this renews and perpetuates the mischief; besides the further inconveniences of making a language absurd, and imprinting a character of slavishness upon it, under a groundless pretence of refining and polishing it.

Secker, vol. iii. Ser. 7.

SLA'VER. See SLAB.

SLAY, v.

SLA'YER.

SLA'YING, n.

SLA'YHTER, n.

SLA'YHTER, v.

SLA'YHTERER.

SLA'YHTEROUS.

This word and the past tense and past part. are very variously written.
Slaughter is formed upon the past part. Slawghed, slawgh'd, slaught. The Goth.
Slahan; A. S. Slan; Dut.
Slaen; Ger. Schlagen, to strike, to beat, to smite;
 and consequentially, to quell or kill. (See SLEIGHT.) Compare Chaucer and Dryden.
 To strike or beat (sc. to death); to kill, or quell; to put to death.

— No tonge telle may

That folk, that ther was y slawe on eyther side that day.
R. Gloucester, p. 17.

The lond folk, tho he hyder com, turnede to hym faste,
 So that ther was slawgt gret, the wyle it wolde laste.
Id. p. 97.

Bituex thise tuo kynges a werre bigan,
Slayn was Bernewolf, & with him many man.
R. Brunne, p. 14.

At that tyme R. there many a man slouh he,
 The kyng sonne of Dare he smote in tuo his the.
Id. p. 191.

Sen this greuance hard, the slauhter & the drede,
 Fulle sone afterward the kyng to Gork gede.—Id. p. 91.

And nyle ye drede hem that sleen the bodi; for thei moun not slee the soul, but rathir drede ye hym that may leese bothe soule and bodi into helle.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 10.

And the keper of the prisoun was awaked and sigh the ghatis of the prisone opened, and with a swerd drawn out he wolde have slaw hymself.—Id. Dedis, c. 16.

Not as Cayn that was of the yuel, and sloug his brothir, and for what thing sloug he hym?—Id. 1 Jon. c. 3.

Not as Cayn which was of the wicked, & slewe his brother.
 And wherefore slew he him?—Bible, 1551. Ib.

But the erthe tileris seynge the sone seyden withynne hemself, this is the eyr, come ye sle we him, and we schulden have his erytage: and thei token and castiden him out of the vyneyerd and slouen him.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 21.

But when the husbandmen sawe the sonne, they sayde amonge them selues. This is the heyre: come let vs kil him, & let vs take his inherytaunce to our selues. And they caughte him and thrust out of ye vineyarde, and slew him.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

For eyther I mote slen him at the gappe;
 Or he mote slen me, if that me mishappe.

Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1647.

So was it showed in that purtreiture
 As is depeinted in the cercles above,
 Who shal be staine or elles ded for love.—Id. Ib. v. 2040.

Divided is thy regne, and it shal be
 To Medes and to Perses yeven, quod he.
 And thilke same night this king was slawe.
Id. The Monkes Tale, v. 14,240.

The sleer of himself yet saw I there
 His herte-blood hath bathed all his here:
 The naile ydriven in the shode on hight
 The colde deth with mouth gaping upright.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2008.

Thou sleer, devourer, and confusion
 Of gentlewomen.—Id. Hipsiphile & Medea, p. 309.

He made of hem through his high renoun,
 So great slaughter and occisioun,
 That as the death from his swerd they fled.
Lidgate. The Story of Thebes, pt. iii.

For this condicion he had,
 That were hym hapneth the victoire,
 His lust and all his most gloire
 Was for to slee, and not to saue.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Pro therto couthe he not accorde,
 But whom he might sleyn, he slough,
 And therof was he glad enough.—Id. Ib.

Euen so Rochester layeth to Marthin Luthers charge the slaying & murthering of Christen men, because they will not beleue in his doctrine.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 129.

Man. Of ruin indeed me thought I heard the noise,
 Oh it continues, they have slain my Son.

Chor. Thy Son is rather slaying them, that outcry
 From slaughter of one foe could not ascend.

Milton. Samson Agonistes.

And he hath giuen it to the fourbished, that he may handle it; this sword is sharpe, and is fourbished, that he may giue it into the hande of the slayer.

Bible, 1583. Ezekiel, xxi. 11.

For the proud souldan, with presumptuous cheare
 And countenance sublime and insolent,
 Sought onely slaughter and avengement.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 2.

Yet, when she saw the heapes which he did make
Of slaughter'd carcasses, her heart did quake
For very ruth, which did it almost rive,
That she his fury willed him to slake.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 11.

Mort. Thou do'st then wrong me as yt slaughterer doth,
Which giueth many wounds, when one will kill.
Mourne not, except thou sorrow for my good,
Onely giue order for my funerall.

Shakespeare. 1 Pt. Hen. VI. Act ii. sc. 5.

I have supt full with horrors,
Direnesse familiar to my slaughterous thoughts Cannot once start me. Wherefore was that cry?

Id. Macbeth, Act v. sc. 5.

When he was knowne once to carie a cruell hand over his poore patients, in cutting, launcing, dismembering, and cauterizing their bodies, they quickly began to alter his name, and to tearme him the bloudie butcher or slaughter-man.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxix. c. 1.

The slayer of himself yet saw I there,
The gore congeal'd was clotted in his hair:
With eyes half clos'd, and gaping mouth he lay,
And grim, as when he breath'd his sullen soul away.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. ii.

In his black thoughts revenge and slaughter roll,
And scenes of blood rise dreadful in his soul.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

How many valiant sons I late enjoy'd,
Valiant in vain! by thy curst arm destroy'd;
Or, worse than slaughter'd, sold in distant isles
To shameful bondage and unworthy toils.—Id. Ib. b. xxii.

Beneath the beech, whose branches bare,
Smit with the lightning's livid glare,
O'er hangs the craggy road,
And whistle hollow as they wave;
Within a solitary grave,

A slayer of himself holds his accurs'd abode.

Warton. The Suicide.

SLEAVE, v. } Thomson says,—To Sleave, SLEAVE, n. } is to untwist thread for placing it in the slay or reed. Nares,—that sleaved and sleid silk are the same. See SLAY.

Eight wild men all apparelled in green moss made with sleved silk.—Holinshed. Historie of England, p. 835.

The more subtle, and more hard to sleave a-two, silken thread of self-seeking, is that dominion over consciences.

Whitlock. Manners of the English, (1554.)

Mertilla. O I could wish this place were strew'd with roses,

And that this bank were thickly thrumb'd with grass
As soft as sleave or sarcenet ever was,
Whereon my Cloris her sweet self reposes.

Dryden. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 4.

At length I on a fountain light
Whose brim with pinks was platted
The bank with daffidillies dight,
With grass, like sleave, was matted.

Id. The Quest of Cynthia.

Macbeth does murder sleepers, the innocent sleepers,
Sleepers that knits up the ravel'd sleeves of care.

Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act ii. sc. 2.

Let coarse bold hands from slimy nest
The bedded fish in banks out-wrest,
Or curious traitors sleave silk flies,
Bewitch poor fishes' wand'ring eyes.—Donne. Witchcraft.

SLED, or } Dut. Sledde, slidde; Ger. Schlitt-
SLEDGE. } ten; Sw. Slæda. Wachter, Ihre, SLEDDED. } and Skinner, concur to derive from A. S. Slidan, Ger. Schlitten, to slide; and if this etymology be right, the proper way of writing the word will be sled.

Some write, That Satyrus, a great architect or engraver, conveied it [Obeliske] to Alexandria by the means of flat bottomes or sleads.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxvi. c. 9.

So frown'd he once, when in an angry parle
He smot the sledded Pollax on the ice.

Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act i. sc. 1.

From thence he furrow'd many a churlish sea;
The viny Rhene, and Volgha's self did pass,
Who sleds doth suffer on his wat'ry lea,
And horses trampling on his icy face.

P. Fletcher, Eclogue 2. s. 13.

In winter they travel only upon sleds, the ways being hard and smooth with snow, the rivers all frozen; one horse with a sled will draw a man 400 miles in 3 days.

Milton. History of Muscovia, c. 1.

Eager on rapid sleds,
Their vigorous youth in bold contention wheel
The long-resounding course.—Thomson. Winter.

So have I seen, amidst the grinning throng,
The sledge procession slowly dragg'd along.

Lloyd. Epist. to C. Churchill.

These [rein-deer] are fitter for drawing the sledge, to which the Laplander accustoms them betimes, and yokes them to it by a strap, which goes round the neck, and comes down between their legs. The sledge is extremely light, and shod at the bottom with the skin of a young deer, the hair turned to slide on the frozen snow.

Goldsmith. Animated Nature, b. ii. c. 5.

Usually [by connivance, at length ripened by humanity into law] a sledge or hurdle is allowed, to preserve the offender from the extreme torment of being dragged on the ground or pavement.—Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 6.

A sledge cannot be drawn along as smoothly, and easily and swiftly as a carriage with wheels; but it may be dragged.
Tooke. Div. of Purley, pt. i. c. 3.

SLEDGE. Dut. Slegghel, slaghel; Sw. Slægga;
A. S. Sleeg, from the verb Slæg-an, to strike; A. S.
Slegele, any thing to strike with.

A tool to strike with; a heavy hammer.

To throw the sledge, to pitch the bar,
To wrestle, and to run,
They all the youth excell'd so far,
That still the prize they won.

Dryden. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 2.

She's a good plain wench, that will do as I will have her,
and bring me lusty boys to throw the sledge, and lift at pigs of lead.—Beaum. & Fletch. The Scornful Lady, Act v. sc. 1.

Your casting of the sledge, or learning how To toss a pike? all chang'd into a sonnet?

Ford. The Lover's Melancholy, Act ii. sc. 1.

Otherwise it would follow that the quick stroke of a light hammer should be of greater efficacy than any softer and more gentle striking of a great sledge.

Wilkins. Archimedes, b. i. c. 8.

SLEEK, or } Dut. Slecht; Ger. Slicht;
SLICK, adj. } Sw. Slæt; A. S. Slith; Goth.
SLEEK, or } Slahits, lævis, smooth; Dut.
SLICK, v. } Slechten; Ger. Schlichten, to SLEE'KLY. } smoothen, to polish; perhaps,
SLEE'KNES. } from A. S. Slæg-an, slic-an; Goth.
SLEE'KY. } Slahan, to beat, to beat flat, level, plain; and then, consequentially, sleek will be—

Smooth, plain; having a glossy smoothness; having the smoothness of an oily, greasy, substance; smooth with fatness.

Her flesh tender as is a chike
With bent browes, smoth and slike.

Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

Thou sayst also, I walke out like a cat;
For who so wolde senge the cattles skin,
Than wol the cat wel dwellen in hire in;
And if the cattles skin be sleke and gay,
She wol nat dwellen in hous half a day,
But forth she wol, or any day be dawed,
To shew hire skin, and gon a caterwawed.

Id. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 5930.

Fred. Come, your honour,
Your house, and you too, if you dare believe me,
Are well enough; sleek up your self, leave crying.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Chances, Act iii. sc. 1.

The third, a gentle squire Ostlerio hight,
Who will our palfries slick with wisps of straw,
And in the maunger put them oats enough.

Id. The Knight of the Burning Pestle, Act ii. sc. 1.

That the bodie thereof is not all over smooth and slike (as we see in birds eggs) which excellent authors have tearmed Tenerum, is showed by good arguments.

Holland. Plinie, b. ii. c. 3.

He clensd his broad-soild-shoulders; backe and head
Yet neuer tam'd. But now, had some and weed, Knit in the faire curls. Which dissolu'd; and he Slickt all with sweet oile: the sweet charitie,
The vntoucht virgin shewd in his attire,
He cloth'd him with.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. vi.

Let their heads bee slickely comb'd, their blew coats brush'd, and their garters of an indifferent knit.

Shakespeare. Taming of the Shrew, Act iv. sc. 1.

I confess, we may live to the spectacle, and the bearing-staffe; to the stooping back, to the snow, or to the sleekness of the declining crown.—Feltham. Res. 22.

I had said, that because the remonstrant was so much offended with those who were tart against the prelates, sure he lov'd toothless satyrs, which I took were as improper as a toothed sleekstone.—Milton. Apology for Smeectymnuus.

Now with a crooked scythe his beard he sleeks,
And mows the stubborn stubble of his cheeks.

Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. xiii.

Me, when to town in winter you repair,
Battening in ease you'll find, sleek, fresh, and fair;
Me, who have learn'd from Epicurus' lore.

Rowe. To Richard Thornhill, Esq.

Of brave Troxartas' line, whose sleeky down
In love compress'd Lychomile the brown.

Parnell. The Battle of the Frogs & Mice, b. i.

1750

Your cheeks, by sleeking, are so lean
That they're like Cynthia in the wane.

Swift. Sheridan's Reply.

Ray. An old hag once told me,
That my friend's hands should tear my heart, should rend
Each string, and while it wrung the master-cord,
With sleek adulterous smile should mock my woes.

Mickle. The Siege of Marseilles, Act ii. sc. 4.

Thus all is here in motion, all is life:
The creaking wain brings copious store of corn:
The grazier's sleeky kine obstruct the roads.

Dyer. The Fleece, b. iii.

[She] ordered them to be employed in common drudgery.
They lost their sleekness and grace, and were soon purchased at half the value.—Rambler, No. 138.

SLEEP, v.

SLEEP, n.

SLEE'PER.

SLEE'PFUL.

SLEE'PY.

SLEE'PILY.

SLEE'PINESS.

SLEE'PING, n.

SLEE'PLESS.

SLEE'PLESSNESS.

Dut. Slapen; Ger.

Schlaffen; A. S. Slap-an, slap-an; Goth. Slep-an,

dormire, Wachter and Kilian derive from slap, laxus

remissus, languidus; Dut.

Slappen; Ger. Schlaf-en,

laxare, torpere, dormire:

perhaps from the A. S. Slaw-

ian, pigrescere; Goth. Slaw-

an, silere, tacere, to be slow or sluggish, still,
silent.

To sleep,—opposed to wake,—see the quotation from Milton.

Cotgrave says, Fr. Dormir is,—to slug it.
Sleep is,—inertness; inactivity, laziness; drowsiness, stupor, of bodily and mental faculties.

The foure & twenty houres he spended in holy life.
The first. viii. houres in praier alderbest.
The tother. viii. houres in slepe & in rest.

R. Brunne, p. 23.

Ac on a May morwenyng, on Malverne hulles
Me by fel for to slepe. for weyrynesse of wandryng.

Piers Plouhman, p. 1.

Sevene slupen a seith the book. more than sixty wynter
Leveden with outen lyfode. and at the laste a wakenen.

Id. p. 257.

And eftsoone he cam and founde hem slepyng for her yghen weren hevied.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 26.

And he came, and founde them a slepe agayne.

Bible, 1551. Ib.

And after these thingis he seith to hem, Lazarus oure frend *slepe*th; but I go to reyse him fro slepe. Therfor his discipulis seiden, lord, if he *slepe*th, he schal be saaf. But Jhesus hadde seide of his deeth: but thei gessiden that he seide of slepyng of slepe.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 11.

And after that, he sayd vnto the: our frende Lazarus *slepe*th, but I go to wake him out of slepe. Then sayde his discipulis: Lorde yf he slepe, he shall do well ynough.
How be it Jhesus spake of his deeth: but they thought that he hadde spoken of the naturall slepe.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

A man to lyen hath great disease,
Which may not sleepe ne reste in ease.

Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

This man out his slepe for fere abraide;
But whan that he was waked of his slepe,
He turned him, and toke of this no kepe;
Him thought his dreame was but a vanitee.
Thus twies in his sleping dreamed he.

Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,014.

And also it is not like to me,
That any herte should slepy be,
In whom that love his fry dart woll smite.

Id. The Cuckoo and the Nightingale.

Thou shalt, he saide, whan time is Awaite, and take right good kepe,
Whan that the pope is fast a slepe,
And that none other man be nie.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

A good father certes no,
I had leauer by my trouth,
Er I were sette on suche a slough,
And beare suche a slepye moute,
Bothe eien of my head were out.

Id. Ib. b. iv.

Lo see myne eyes flow with continual teares,
The body still away slepelesse it weares.

Wyatt. To his vnkinde Loue.

Nor think, though men were none,
That heav'n would want spectators, God want praise,
Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth
Unseen, both when we wake, and when we sleep.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

"Hether," quoth he, "me Archimago sent,
He that the stubborn sprites can wisely tame,
He bids thee to him send for his intent
A fit false dreame, that can elude the slepers sent."

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

Without the castle, in the earth is found
A cave resembling slepy Morpheus' cell,
In strange meanders winding under ground,
Where darkness seeks continually to dwell.

Dryden. The Barons' Wars, b. vi.

I rather chuse to endure the wounds of those darts, which envy casteth at novelty, than to go on safely and sleepily in the easy ways of ancient mistakings.—Raleigh.

Distrust will cure a lethargy; of a sleepful man it makes a wakeful one, and so keeps out poverty.

Scott. Essay on Drapery, (1635,) p. 138.

— You euer

Haue wish'd the sleeping of this busines, neuer desired
It to be stir'd; but oft haue hindred, oft,
The passages made toward it.

Shakespeare. Henry VIII. Act ii. sc. 4.

— A crown,

Golden in shew, is but a wreath of thorns,
Brings dangers, troubles, cares, and sleepless nights
To him who wears the regal diadem,
When on his shoulders each man's burden lies.

Milton. Paradise Regained, b. ii.

That is very memorable which Seneca tells us of great Mæneas, that in three yeers he slept not so much as the space of an hour; which however Lipsius thinks good to mitigate with a favourable construction, as conceiving an impossibility of an absolute sleeplessness.

Bp. Hall. Balm of Gilead.

— O sacred rest,

Sweet pleasing sleep, of all the pow'rs the best!
O peace of mind, repaire of decay,
Whose balms renew the limbs to labours of the day,
Care shuns thy soft approach, and sullen flies away!

Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. xi.

Nor love is always of a vicious kind,
But oft to virtuous acts inflames the mind,
Awakes the sleepy vigour of the soul,
And, brushing o'er, adds motion to the pool.

Id. Cymon & Iphigenia.

Towards the latter end of their prayer, they loudly invoke their prophet, for about a quarter of an hour, both old and young bawling out very strangely, as if they intended to fright him out of his sleepiness or neglect of them.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1686.

For quiet, friend, the soldier fights,
Bears weary marches, sleepless nights,
For this feeds hard, and lodges cold.—Otway, Ode 16.

What age and sickness for a man so bold,
Had done, we know not—none beheld him old:
By night as business urg'd, he sought the wood,
The ditch was deep, the rain had caus'd a flood;
The foot-bridge fail'd, he plung'd beneath the deep,
And slept, if truth were his, th' eternal sleep.

Crabbe. Parish Register.

After some time, those who had charge of the basket placed themselves round it, upon the ground, and leaning upon it, appeared to go to sleep; the others, improving their opportunity, came gently upon them, and lifting them up from the basket, carried off their prize: the sleepers soon after awaking, missed the basket, but presently fell a dancing, without any farther regarding their loss.

Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 20.

The story of the seven sleepers has been adopted, and adorned, by the nations, from Bengal to Africa, who profess the Mahometan religion; and some vestiges of a similar tradition have been discovered in the remote extremities of Scandinavia.—Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 33.

SLEET. } A. S. Sliht, a shower. We call SLEETTY. } what is between snow and rain, sleete, (Somner.) It is (Tooke) the past part. of sle-an, projicere, to cast forth. Sle-ed, sleed, sleet. See SLEIGHT.

Something, that which (between snow and rain) is cast forth, (sc.) from the clouds.

The bitter frostes with the sleet and rain
Destroyed han the grene in every yerd.

Chaucer. The Frankeleines Tale, v. 11,562.

He saw them in thir forms of battel rang'd,
How quick they wheel'd, and flying behind them shot
Sharp sleet of arrowy shower against the face
Of thir pursuers, and overcame by flight.

Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iii.

Now van to van the foremost squadrons meet,
The midmost battles hastening up behind,
Who view far off the storm of falling sleet,
And hear their thunder rattling in the wind.

Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

O'er Cornwall's cliffs the tempest roar'd,
High on the screaming sea-mew soar'd;
On Tintagels topmost tower
Darksome fell the sleety shower.

Warton. The Grave of King Arthur.

In the night the wind increased to a strong gale, attended with sleet and snow, and obliged us to double-reef our top-sails.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 3.

SLEEVE. } Skinner derives from Dut.
SLEEVELESS. } Sloove, tegmen; A. S. Skuf, (slef) formerly called earn-slife, that with which the arm is covered; the past part. of slef-an, (Dut. Sloouen), induere, to put on, clothe, or cover.

Sleeveless, (met.) means,—without a cover or pretence, (Tooke.)

A cover or clothing for the arm.

To laugh in the sleeve,—to laugh covertly.

I say, he toke out of his owen sleeve

A teine of silver (yvel mote he cheve)

Which that ne was but a just unce of weight.

Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16,693.

"Good childe," (quod she) "what echeth soche renome to the conscience of a wise man, that loketh and measureth his goodnesse, not be sleevelesse wordes of the people, but by sothfastnesse of conscience; by God nothings."

Id. The Test. of Loue, b. ii.

For than is pouertee at gate,

And taketh hym euen by the sleeve.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

— For she had sent

The rest on sleevelesse errands from her side.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. vi. s. 89.

Yet when he hath my crabbed pamphlet read
As oftentimes as Philip hath been dead,
Bids all the furies haunt each peevish line
That thus have rack'd their friendly reader's eyne;
Worse than the logogryphes of later times,
Or hundreth riddles shak'd to sleevelesse rhymes.

Bp. Hall, b. iv. Sat. 1.

Their armour is a piece of buffalo-hide, shaped like our carters' frocks, being without sleeves, and sewed both sides together, with holes for the head and the arms to come forth.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1687.

She begs an idle pin of all she meets,
And hoards them in her sleeve; but needful food,
Though press'd with hunger oft, or comelier cloaths,
Though pinch'd with cold, asks never.—Kate is craz'd.

Cowper. Task, b. i.

That great observer of nature, [Cervantes.] made Sancho (to save himself from the vexation of a sleeveless errand) palm upon his master a suppositious Dulcinea.

Warburton. The Divine Legation, b. iii.

SLENDER.

SLENDERLY. } Dut. Slinder, tenuis, exilis;

SLENDERNESS. } is applied to any thing easily broken or bent; of small substance: and may be of the same origin as Slant, to bend out of a right line.

Small in bulk or dimensions, in girth or circumference; small, thin, slight, weak.

Hire freshe beautes, and hire age tendre,

Hire middel smal, hire armes long and slendre.

Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9575.

This maketh that our heires ben so slendre

And feble, that they moun not wel engendre.

Id. The Monkes Prol. v. 13,941.

Aulus Gellius sayeth, that it were a great deale better for a man to bee sharply rebuked yea and openly to haue his faultes published of his enemy, then to bee coldly and slenderly prayd of his frende.

Fryth. Workes, p. 4. To the Christian Reader.

And that he had then advised the king to leave out that point, or to touch it more slenderly.

Styrie. Memorials, b. i. c. 26.

And upon the other side, the slenderness of the abused authority of the pope: which, by patience of princes, simplicity of the people, ambitious avarice of his predecessors, and process of time, was grown to this intolerable iniquity.

Id. Ib. Hen. VIII. b. i. c. 33.

Her sickle hart conceived hasty fyre,
Like sparkes of fire which fall in slender flex,
That shortly brent into extreme desyre,
And ransackt all her veines with passion entyre.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 2.

We now have playde, Augustus, wantonly,
Turning our song into a tender muse,
And, like a cobweb weaving slenderly,
Have only playde.

Id. Virgil's Gnat.

For when a man hath no reason for his faith, but a great many lusts against it, the slenderest shews of probability will suffice to make him an infidel.

Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 3.

Now sapour being an accident or an affection of matter, that relates to our tongue, palate, and other organs of taste, it may very possibly be, that the small parts of a body may be of such a size and shape, as either by their extreme littleness, or by their slenderness, or by their figure, to be unable to pierce into and make perceptible impression upon the nerves or membranous parts of the organs of taste.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 574.

The greater part cannot, from the slenderness of their fortunes, make such a compensation as might probably be required by him [a tutor] when found.

Knox. Hints to Young Men.

SLENT. Slants,—sly jokes or petty lies. "He slants a good deal;" he is given to lying, (Brockett.) Slent, in the first quotation from North, is in the subsequent edition (1676) Jest. (See Nares.) It should perhaps be written as in Brockett,—Slant; meaning—

Sloping or bending (sc. out of a right line); bending or curving, going or dealing crookedly.

One Proteus, a pleasaunt conceited man, and that could slent finely.—North. Plutarch, p. 744.

He [Epaminondas] had no great liking of these dark and mystical arguments of some, that think to hide vertue in the obscurity of their words, but he gave himself wholly to the true practice thereof: though otherwise he was as pleasant a man to give a fine slent in discourse, as could be possible to be found.—Id. Ib. p. 918.

And when Cleopatra found Antonius' jests and slents to be but gross, and souldier-like, in plain manner, she gave it him finely, and without fear taunted him thoroughly.

Id. Ib. p. 763.

SLEW. See SLAY.

SLEY. } A. S. Slæ, pecten tectoris, the slay SLEID. } of a weaver's loom, (Somner.) Perhaps (Skinner) from the A. S. Slæg-an, slæan, to strike, to beat:—Percusso feriunt insecti pectine dentes, (Ovid. Metam. lib. vi. v. 58.) See the quotation from Croxall. Mr. Thomson says, a slay is—

A weaver's reed fastened in a frame, which beats the woof close in the web.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immateriall skiene of slejd silke.

Shakespeare. Troyl. & Cress. Act v. sc. 1.

B'et when she weav'd the sleided silk
With fingers, long, small, white as milk.

Id. Pericles, Act iv.

Around the solid beam the web is ty'd,
While hollow canes the parting warp divide;
Thro' which with nimble flight the shuttles play,
And for the woof prepare a ready way;
The woof and warp unite, press'd by the toothy slay.

Croxall. Ovid. Metam. b. vi.

SLICE, v. } Junius writes—Schise: and de-SLICE, n. } rives from A. S. Slit-an, to slit;
Ger. Schleissen, scindere, findere, to slit, to split.
To divide, to cut; usually, to cut into pieces broad and flat.

Any thing so formed as to cut into such pieces; the piece or part so cut.

Dog, (he replied) urge not my ruth, by parents, soule, nor knees;
I would to God that any rage would let me eate the raw,
Slit't into pieces.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xxii.

They then slit'd off his ears, and nail'd them upon the gates of the city.—Howell. Letters, b. i. Let. 19.

In the burning turne it often with a slice or spatula.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiv. c. 11.

Lay a peece of silver ore upon a schise, plate, or fire-pan of yron red hot, if it continue white still, it is very good, if the same become reddish, goe it may for good too in a lower degree; but in case it look blacke, there is no goodnesse at all in it.—Id. Ib. b. xxxiii. c. 8.

Whereas the pellican hath a beake broade and flat, much like the slice of apothecaries and chirurgions, with which they spreade their plaisters, no way fit to pierce.

Hakewill. Apologie, b. i. c. 1. § 5.

Now let us imagine an iron bar sliced out into a multitude of plates as thin as paper and perfectly smooth.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. i. c. 3.

Be his the great concern to show,
If Roman gowns were tied or no;
Whether the Grecians took a slice
Four times a day, or only twice.—Lloyd. A Dialogue.

SLICK. See SLEEK.

SLIDE, n.

SLIDE, v.

SLYDER, n.

SLYDER, adj.

SLYDDER.

SLYDDINGNESS.

SLYDEGROTE, n.

A. S. Slid-an, slider-ian;
Dut. Slidderen, sledderen, labi, dilabi; see GLIDE.
To move in a continuous, uninterrupted motion; without step, or rotation: to move or pass along smoothly, silently, secretly, stilly. Also without firmness of step; without resistance.

But it is ympossible that thei that ben oonys lightned & han taastid also an heuenli ghifte, and ben maad parteneris of the hooly goost, and netheles han taastid the good word of God, and the vertues of the world to comynge, and ben slidun fur awei, that thei ben renewid eftsoone to penaunce. Wiclif. Ebrewis, c. 6.

For bothe Troilus and Troie toun
Shall knotlesse throughout her herte slide,
For she woll take a purpose for to abide.
Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. v.

He poureth peesen vpon the hatches slider.
Id. Cleopatras. Queene of Egypt.

The whiche wandryng happes nathelesse, thilke declining lownesse of the yerth and the flowyng order of the slidyng water gouerneth.—Id. Boecius, b. v.

For thy but if a kynge his will Fro lustes of his fleshe restreine,
Ageyn hym selfe he maketh a treyne,
Into the whiche if that he slide,
Hym were better go beside.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

For than he leseth his lustie wele,
With dronkeship, and wote not whither
To go, the waies bene so slider,
In whiche he maie percas to fall,
That he shall breke his wittes all.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

Often [he] had used to be an actor in tragedies, where he had learned, besides a slidingness of language, acquaintance with many passions, and to frame his face to bear the figure of them.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

It chaunst (eternall God that chaunce did guide)
As he recoiled backward, in the mire
His nigh forwearied feeble feet did slide,
And downe he fell, with dread of shame sore terrifide.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

On a night when the lieutenant and he for their disport were plaing at slidegrote or shoofleboord, suddenlie commeth from the cardinall a mandatum to execute Kildare on the morrow—Holinshed. Chronicles of Ireland, an. 1528.

In all her religion, and in all her actions of relation towards God, she had a strange evenness and untroubled passage, sliding toward her ocean of God and of infinity with a certain and silent motion.
Bp. Taylor, vol. iii. Ser. 8.

Then looks upon a hill, whose sliding sides
A goodly flocke, like winter's covering, hides.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 3.

Then Pyrrhus thus: "Go thou from me to fate;
And to my father my foul deeds relate.
Now die." With that he dragg'd the trembling sire Sliddering through clotted blood and holy mire
(The mingled paste his murder'd son had made),
Haul'd from beneath the violated shade,
And on the sacred pile the royal victim laid.
Dryden. Virgil. Aeneis, b. ii.

They have not only slid imperceptibly, but have plunged openly into artifice.
Lord Bolingbroke, Ess. 1. On Human Knowledge.

For as young children, who are tied in
Go-carts, to keep their steps from sliding;
When members knit, and legs grow stronger,
Make use of such machine no longer.
Prior. Epist. to Fleetwood Shepherd, Esq.

Prospects, however lovely, may be seen
Till half their beauties fade; the weary sight,
Too well acquainted with their smile, slides off
Fastidious, seeking less familiar scenes.
Cowper. Task, b. i.

SLIGHT, or
SLEIGHT, adj. Our word seems formed
SLIGHT, n. thus—slay, or sley, sleyed, SLIGHT, v. sley'd, sleit, or sleight. Scotch SLIGHT, v. Slight; Dut. Slechten, slichten; SLIGHTEN, v. Ger. Schlichten, destruere,
SLIGHTER. dirimere, evertere, from A. S.
SLIGHTFUL. Slahan, percutere, caedere,
SLIGHTINGLY. decidere, dejicere, (to slay),
SLIGHTLY, adj. to strike or beat, to strike, SLIGHTLY, ad. to fall or cause to fall; to SLIGHTNESS. cast down. (See Skinner.)
SLIGHTY. Junius, and also Jamieson.)

To slight is—

To cast or throw down, to overthrow, to destroy, to demolish. See the quotation from Clarendon.

To cast down or away; to reject, to object, (sc.) as of little worth; to condemn, to neglect, to disregard.

Falstaff was slighted, i.e. thrown into the river.
The letters of Cassius were slighted off, i.e.
thrown off or aside; disregarded.

The maid puts him off, slights him, i.e. throws him aside; the dreadful laws were loosely slighted; thrown or put aside, disregarded, contemned. And thus slight, the adj. is,— Abject or cast aside, (sc.) of little value, of little force or strength; and thus further, inconsiderable, inefficient, weak, feeble, small, slender.

Sleight of hand,—an adroit, dexterous cast or motion of the hand; adroitness, dexterity. To Cast, (qv.) was used consequentially, as equivalent to—
To forecast or project, to contrive. And sleight, (met.) is a dexterous trick or contrivance; an act of slyness; a subtle manoeuvre. In the third quotation from Chaucer, slightly is sily. See SLY, and SLEY.

And stele up on myn enemy
For to slee hym slehtliche. slehtes ich by thenke.
Piers Plouhman, p. 93.

And hardily they dorsten lay her necke,
The miller shuld, not stele hem half a pecke
Of corn by sleight ne by force hem reve.
Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 3937.

Thei ben clerkes, and courts ovir se,
Ther pore tenaunce fully the slite.
Id. The Plowmannes Tale.

Tho weshen they, and set hem down and ete,
And after noone fall slightly, Pandarus
Gan draw him to the window nye the street.
Id. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

The sacrilege whiche he wrought
Was cause, why the Grekes sought Unto the towne, and it belaeie,
And wolden neuer parte awaie,
Till what by sleight, and what by strength,
They had it wonne in brede and length,
And brente, and slayne, that was within.
Gower. Con. A. b. v.

And thoughe it be darkened with mens sleyghtye iugling & counterfait craftes, as it wer with certain mists for a while; yet at the time of God apoynted, it bursteth out again, and sheweth it self clerly like the sonne, whan darknes is banished and chased away.
Bp. Gardner. Of True Obedience, fol. 6.

For the instruction of my consciēce in the matter, I haue not slightly looked, but by many yerres studied & aduisedly considred.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1435.

Alas how long wyl you lacke vnderstanding? perceyue you not yet how they would keepe you in darknes because you shoulde not espye theyr priny practice and slightly conueyaunce.—Fryth. Workes, p. 97.

The rogues slighted me into the riuer with as little remorse, as they would haue drown'de a blinde bitches puppies.—Shakes. Merry Wives of Windsor, Act iii. sc. 5.

You haue condemn'd, and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes heere of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, was slighted off.
Id. Julius Caesar, Act iv. sc. 3.

He makes the maid to answere, Whoop, doe me no harme good man: put's him off, slights him, with Whoop, doe mee no harme good man.—Id. The Winter's Tale, Act iv. sc. 3.

Heare your owne dignity so much prophan'd,
See your most dreadfull lawes, so loosely slighted;
Behold your selfe, so by a sonne disdained.
Id. 2 Pt. Hen. IV. Act v. sc. 2.

Euph. Could my tears speak,
My griefs were slight.—Ford. Broken Heart, Act v. sc. 2.

Mont. Some forty crowns, nay rather not so much, 'tis quickly cast.
Mal. 'Tis strange to me, that your estate shou'd have so low an ebb, to stick at such slight sums.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Honest Man's Fortune, Act ii. sc. 1.

—Thus I herle
My powder'd spells into the spungie air,
Of power to cheat the eye with sleight illusion.
Milton. M.S. Mask of Com. Trinity College, Cambridge.

No more shall now the darknesse of the night
Defend thee from the vengeance of thy fone;
But with thy bloud thou shalt appease the spright
Of Guizor by thee slaine and murdered by thy slight.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 7.

Prig. Will ye see any feats of activity,
Some sleight of hand, legerdemain?
Beaum. & Fletch. Beggar's Bush, Act iii. sc. 1.

Do you think that the wrong you have off'd me,
The most unmanly wrong, unfriendly wrong—
Din. I do confess—
Cler. That boyish sleight—
Din. Not so, Sir.
Id. The Little French Lawyer, Act ii. sc. 1.

It is an odious wisdom to blaspheme,
Much more to slighten, or deny their powers.
B. Jonson. Sejanus, s. 10.

I do not believe you are so great an undervaluer or slighter of it, as not to preserve it tenderly and thrifly.
Bp. Taylor. Artificial Handsomeness, p. 102.

Wilde beasts forsooke their dens on woody hills,
And sleightful otters left the purling rills.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 4.

Read it sweet maid, though it be done but slightly;
Who can shew all his love, doth love but lightly.
Daniel. Sonnet to Delia.

Where an entangled ram does half appear,
And struggles vainly with that fatal net,
Which, though but slightly wrought, was firmly set.
Cowley. The Davideis, b. ii.

—Where gentry, title, wisdom
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance, it must omit Reall necessities, and glue way the while
To vnstable slightnesse.
Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act iii. sc. 1.

It is the best point of wisdom, to take the first opportunity of fixing good motions, which otherwise are of themselves light and slightly.
Bp. Hall. Cont. Nehemiah redressing, &c.

In three days his Majesty being present, they slighted and demolished all the works of that garrison.
Clarendon. History, vol. ii. p. 483.

Encourag'd thus, the blameless man replies;
"Nor vows unpaid, nor slighted sacrifice,
But he our chief, provok'd the raging pest,
Apollon's vengeance for his injur'd priest."
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

They who accuse Aeneas for want of courage, either understand not Virgil, or have read him slightly; otherwise they would not raise an objection so easy to be answered.
Dryden. Virgil. Aeneis, Ded.

And if it were true, yet so long as there is other sufficient proof, (such as every reasonable man must readily acquiesce in,) it should not be slightly spoken of.
Waterland. Works, vol. iv. p. 465.

Though it seem but a slight and trivial preparation, yet experience has given us a better opinion of it, than I fear the slightness of the preparation will as yet allow you.
Boyle. Works, vol. ii. p. 231.

—A heav'nly mind
May be indiff'rent to her house of clay,
And slight the hovel as beneath her care.
Cowper. Task, b. ii.

Nor should you suffer yourselves to suspect that the weight of this argument is at all diminished, if there be others, accounted in the rank of learned men, who have affected to think slightly of the religion of their country.
Warburton, vol. ix. Ser. 13.

We are told by a menial servant, or some other of our spies, that a person whom we esteemed our friend has spoken slightingly of us, made a joke upon us, or cast a severe reflection.—Knox, Ess. 25.

The slightness which we see in his [Gainsborough] best works cannot always be imputed to negligence.
Reynolds, Dis. 14.

SLIKE, i. e. like:—so-like. See SWILKE.

A wilde fire upon her bodies falle,
Wha herked ever slike a ferly thing?
Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 4128.

SLIM. A word of very common use in Lincolnshire, says Skinner,—from the Dut. Slim; Ger. Schlimm, which Kilian interprets to have anciently signified vilis, of little worth: and in the North, slim is—wicked, mischievous, perverse;
and is also used in the same sense with sly, (qv.);
it also signifies,—slender-bodied, and thinly-clothed, (Grose.)

The church of Rome indeed was allowed to be the principal church. But why? Was it in regard to the succession of St. Peter? no that was a slim excuse.
Barrow. On the Pope's Supremacy.

SLIME. } Dut. Slym; Ger. Schleim; Sw.
SL'IMY. } Slem, sordes, eluvies. A. S. Slim, SL'IMNESS. } limus, cœnum, slime, mud. Ihre suggests Lim, lime, (qv.)

An adhesive substance; holding, binding fast;
viscous, glutinous.

Tho cam Sleuthe al by slobered. wit to slymed eyen.
Piers Plouhman, p. 110.

Slyme was their mortar, chap. 11. and slyme pittes, chap. 4 that slyme was a fatnesse that issued out of the earth, like vnto tarre; and thou mayst call it cement, if thou wilt.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 6.

As when old father Nilus gins to swell
With timely pride above the Aegyptian vale,
His fattie waves doe fertile slime outwell,
And overflow each plaine and lowly dale.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

And, shortly after, everie living wight
Crept forth likes wormes out of her slimie nature,
Soone as on them the sun's life-giving light
Had powred kindly heat and formall feature.
Id. Colin Clout's come home again.

Unsatiated yet, they mount up higher,
Where never sun-born frog durst to aspire,
And in the silken beds their slimy members place;
A luxury unknown before to all the watery race!
Cowley. The Plagues of Egypt.

Divers little creatures are procreated by the sun's heat, and the earth's sliminess.—Austin. Hæc Homo, p. 47.

And where in pomp the sunburnt people ride,
On painted barges, o'er the teeming tide,
Which, pouring down from Ethiopian lands,
Makes green the sail with slime, and black prolific sands.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iv.

So there I come to an anchor Jan. 30th, in 33 fathomwater, black slimy ground; about half a mile from the shore; from which distance I took the sight of the town.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1699.

— Nor will the Muse prescribe
A slimy-born and sun-begotten tribe;
Who, far from steeples and their sacred sound,
In fields their sullen conventicles found.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

How the soft slime of the snail hardens, at the bottom of the sea, into the stony substance of a shell, is not easy to conceive! This slime must at least be possessed of very powerful petrifying powers.
Goldsmith. Animated Nature, b. iv. c. 5.

SLING, v. } Dut. Slinghe; Ger. Schlinge;
SLING, n. } Sw. Sliunga; A. S. Sling-an, cir-SLINGER. } cumagere, torquere, conjicere, vibrare, jaculari, to throw or hurl around, to cast,
to dart. See the quotation from Potter.

To throw; usually from something hanging, or pendulous; to move along or convey upon something (a rope, cord, strap, &c.) hanging loosely.

& fyftie armed sueynes porters at that gate.
With slenges & magneles thei kast to kyng Richard
Our Cristen bi parcelles kasted ageynward.
R. Brunne, p. 183.

Sleuthe with hus slynge. an hard saut he made.
Piers Plouhman, p. 403.

Sire Thopas drow abak ful fast;
This geaunt at him stoncs cast
Out of a fel staffe sling.
Chaucer. The Rime of Sire Thopas.

And as longe as ye stones thereof dyd remayne in the walles of brycke the slyngers went vpon it and bette it.
Bible, 1554. Kynges, c. 3.

Load the altars till there rise
Clouds from the burnt sacrifice,
With your censers sling aloof
Their smells, till they ascend the roof.
Drayton. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 8.

Most famous for her folk excelling with the sling,
Of any other here this land inhabiting.
Id. Poly-Olbion, s. 2.

The most common [engine] in field engagements was a sling; which we are told by some, was invented by the natives of the Balearian islands, where it was managed with so great art and dexterity, that young children were not allowed any food by their mothers, till they could sling
it down from the beam, where it was placed aloft. Slings resembled a platted rope, somewhat broad in the middle, with an oval compass, and so by little and little decreasing into two thongs or reins. The manner of slinging was by whirling it twice about the head, and so casting out the bullet.—Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. iii. c. 4.

They repulsed the cavalry, cut the archers and slingers to pieces, surrounded the enemy's left wing, and were the first that obliged them to fly.
Bladen. Cæsar. Comment. b. iii. c. 32.

The yard is slung nearly in the middle, or upon an equipoise.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 2.

Upon this stage stand the fighting-men, whose missile weapons are slings and spears.—Id. First Voyage, b. i. c. 18.

SLINK, v. } Dut. Slinghen; Ger. Schlingen; SLINK, adj. } A. S. Slin-an, to crawl or creep.
“Slinge, to go creepingly away, as if ashamed; to sneak. Hence a slink, a sneak or sneaker.” See Brockett.

To creep or crawl away; to go off or away;
as if ashamed or afraid; to sneak, or steal off privily.

To slink her foal is, perhaps, to sling, i. e. to cast it.

Wherfor yit or eve I shal abate yur pride,
That some of yew shall be right feyn to slynk away and hide.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Second Tale.

And if it go against you and your part go to wracke, then slink away fro the fiede, and make as ye came not ther.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 366.

Bes. The king rages extreamly, shall we slink away?
Beaum. & Fletch. A King and no King, Act i. sc. 1.

To prevent a mare slinking her foal in snowy weather, keep her where she may have good spring water to drink.
Mortimer.

This membrane does not properly appertain to dogs, &c.
yet it may be found in slink calves.—Student, vol. i. p. 340.

— For the wily fox,
Safe in th' increasing number of his foes,
Kens well the great advantage; slinks behind,
And slyly creeps through the same beaten track,
And hunts them step by step.—Somerville. The Chase.

SLIP, n.

SLIP, v.

SLIPPER, adj.

SLIPPER, n.

SLIPPERED.

SLIPPERY.

SLIPPERINESS.

SLIPPING, n.

SLIPPY.

Dut. Slippen; Ger. Schlippen; Sw. Slipa; A. S. Slip-an, labi, dilabi.

By the word slide we express a continuous motion, without step or rotation. By slip,—a motion by which a state of firmness, entireness, security, uprightness, direct-ness, equipoise, is lost; to a motion, involuntary, sudden, unexpected, unnoticed, without effort.
It is also used as equivalent to slide, (qv.)

A slip,—a small part easily removed from the main body; any thing (see Slop) easily put on or off. A small narrow portion. Also,—counterfeit pieces of money—of brass, and covered over with silver, were by the common people called Slips.
See the quotation from Shakespeare, and the commentators upon it.

Slippery,—smooth, too smooth to stand or move upon, to hold or keep; infirm, unsteady, unsure.

Slipper sauce in Tyndall is—slippery or slabby sauce.

What man may the winde restraine,
Or hold a snake by the taile,
Or a slipper ele constraine.—Chaucer. Praise of Women.

And as he couthe hym selfe forshape
In lykenesse of an adder he slipte
Out of his honde, and forthe he skipte.
Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

And as hounde that goth to folde
And hath there take what he wolde,
His mouth upon the gras he wipeth,
And so with feigned chere hym slipeth,
That what as euer of shepe he strangle,
There is no man therof shall iangle,
And for to know who it dede.
Id. Ib. b. v.

The greyhound is agreu'd, although he see his game,
If still it slippe he must be stayde, when he would chase the same.—Gascoigne. An Absent Dame complaining.

Founde thou not manye stones, that is to saye, muche constaunte people whan thou began to edify thy church, were not they whych thou did set in the foundation softe and slipper earth?—Fisher. Penitent. Psalms, Ps. 143. pt. ii.

Many haue so slipper a minde yt they can not kepe in memory a thing shewed too theym by the space of an houre.—Id. Ib. pt. iii.

I know they bee slipper that I haue to do wyth, and there is no holde of them.—Barnes. Workes, p. 283.

Her slipper back doth rowle with forked tong;
And raised brest, lift vp against the sun.
Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

Edwin being wonderouslie amazed, thanked his friend, but refused to depart the countrie, sith he had no iust cause outwardlie giuen to play such a slipper part.
Holinshed. Historie of England, b. v. c. 25.

On his feet he had nothing but slippers, which, after the ancient manner, were tied up with certain laces, which were fastened under his knee, having wrapped about, with many pretty knots, his naked legs.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. v.

So that the ground he stood upon being over-high in happiness, and slippery through affection, he could not hold himself from falling into an error.—Id. Ib.

But the sword more merciful than he to himself, with the slipping of the pommel, the point swerved, and razed him but upon the side.—Id. Ib. b. iii.

His stomacke abhorreth—longyng after slibbersause and swashe, at which a whole stomacke is readye to cast hys gorge.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 65.

These words were no sooner spoken, than the lord Thomas striking the ball to Alen againe, answered, as one that was somewhat slipper tongued, in this wise.
Holinshed. Chron. of Irelande, an. 1532.

And yet if he saied as muche after agayne, and therupō were called againe, he might say againe that he were ouersene in the saying, of a lightnesse of wit and slippernesse of tonge.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 925.

Nathesle so sharply still he him pursewd,
That at advantage him at last he tooke,
When his foote slipt, (that slip he dearely rewd)
And with his yron club to ground him strooke.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 7.

Let the world think me a bad counterfeit, if I cannot give him the slip at an instant.

B. Jonson. Every Man in his Humour, Act ii. sc. 3.

Romeo. Good morrow to you both, what counterfeit did I giue you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip, can you not conceiue?
Shakespeare. Romeo & Juliet, Act ii. sc. 4.

King. Impudent too? Well what have you sworn?
Clar. That I, a simple waiting-woman, having taken
My bodily oath, the first night of admittance
Into her ladieship's service, on her slippers, (That was the book) to serve her well in all things,
And to know no religion but her pleasure.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Lover's Progress, Act v. sc. 1.

— The sixt age shifts
Into the leane and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side.
Shakespeare. As You Like It, Act ii. sc. 7.

The first true verdict at the first may bring,
The last is slow, or slipper as the slime,
Oft changing names of innocence and crime.
Mirroure for Magistrates, p. 310.

But foolish mayd, whyles heedlesse of the hooke
She thus oft-times was beating off and on,
Through slipperie footing fell into the brooke,
And there was caught to her confusion.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 5.

O blessed glorious Trinity,
Bones to philosophy, but milk to faith,
Which as wise serpents diversly
Most slipperiness, yet most entangling hath, &c.
Doane. The Trinity.

1 Cit. Well slip-string. I shall meet with you.
Beaum. & Fletch. A King and no King, Act ii.

These worldly advantages, these honours, profits, pleasures, whatever they be, are of uncertain continuance, and may, in a little time, slip away from us; to be sure, we shall, in a little time, slip away from them, and leave them behind us: and therefore, why should we rest in them? Why should we boast of them?—Atterbury, vol. iv. Ser. 6.

The students did not forbear to whisper among themselves, that rather than there should be a mistake in the calculation, he [R. Burton] sent up his soul to heaven thro' a slip about his neck.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. i.

But when the smoother bole from knots is free,
We make a deep incision in the tree;
And in the solid wood the slip enclose,
The battenning bastard shoots again and grows;
And in short space the laden boughs arise,
With happy fruit advancing to the skies.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. ii.

Thrice rung the bell, the slipper knock'd the ground,
And the press'd watch return'd a silver sound.
Pope. Rape of the Lock, c. 1.

Still pressing onward, to the walls he drew,
Where shafts, and spears, and darts, promiscuous flew;
And sanguine streams the slippery ground embrue.
Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. xii.

I caused one of the bystanders to thrust his arm down to the bottom of the tub, and with his hand to make part of the oiled surface of the upper marble slide off, on any side, from that of the lower, which, by reason of the smoothness and slipperiness of the surfaces, he found most easy to do.
Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 367.

The ancients called it [luxation] a slipping of the head of a bone out of its cavity.—Wiseman. Surg. vol. ii. b. vii. c. 2.

Like quicksilver, the rhet'ric they display
Shines as it runs, but grasp'd at slips away.
Couper. Progress of Errour.

And mistake in the names, by a slip of their pen,
May perhaps have occasion'd mistake in the men.
Byrom. On the Patronage of England.

By the 13th and 14th of Charles II. chap. 7, the exportation, not only of raw hides, but of tanned leather, except in the shape of boots, shoes, or slippers, was prohibited.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 8.

But in the stage-customs what offends me most
Is the slip-door, and slowly rising ghost.
Lloyd. The Actor.

The shiv'ring urchin, bending as he goes,
With slipshod heels, and dewdrop at his nose.
Couper. Truth.

SLIT, n. } A. S. Slit-an, to divide. Slot, SLIT, v. } (of a deer,)—the cleft, (fissura SLITTING, n. } cervini pedis.)
SLOT. } Any cleft or fissure.
To separate: to pull or tear asunder, to cut.

For he hire wombe let slitten to behold
Where he conceived was.

Chaucer. The Monkes Tale, v. 14,402.

In holy churche of suche a slitte
Is for to rewe vnto vs alle.

Gower. Con. A. Prol.

The earl, [Northumberland,] thinking the same [dagge] not to be sufficiently safe in that place, it was by the earl's appointment taken from thence, and put into a slit in the side of a mattress that lay under the earl's bed, near to the bed's head.—State Trials. Q. Elizabeth, an. 1584.

But the fair guerdon when we hope to find,
And think to burst out into sudden blaze,
Comes the blind Fury with th' abhorred shears,
And slits the thin-spun life.

Milton. Lycidas.

The engine wherewith the execution is doone, is a square
blocke of wood of the length of foure foot and an halfe, which dooth ride vp and doone in a slot, rabet, or regall betweene two peeces of timber, that are framed and set vp-right of fiue yarden in height.

Holinshead. Description of England, b. ii. c. 11.

For certainly this tormentor of semicolons is as good at dismembering and slitting sentences, as his grave fathers the prelates, have bin at stigmatizing and slitting noses.

Id. Apology for Smectymnus.

For by his slot, his entries, and his port,
His frayings, fewmets, he doth promise sport,
And standing 'fore the dogs.

B. Jonson. The Sad Shepherd, Act i. sc. 2.

The labouring hunter tufts the thick unbarbed grounds
Where harbour'd is the hart; there often from his feed
The dogs of him do find; or thorough skilful heed,
The huntsman by his slot, or breaking earth perceives.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 13.

Proceeding on to speak of mysterious things in nature I had occasion to fit the language thereafter, matters not; for the reading of this odious fool, who thus ever when he meets with aught above the cogitation of his breeding, leaves the noisome stench of his rude slot behind him, maligning that any thing should be spoke or understood above his own genuine baseness.—Milton. Colasterion.

— For had it hit

The upper part of him, the blow
Had slit, as sure as that below.—Hudibras, pt. i. c. 2.

We made it to move in a perpendicular slit in a piece of pasteboard that was fastened to one part of the upper basis.

Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 252.

Zoe, for fear of the old man
Into the army quickly ran;
And sav'd the slitting of his nose,
By timely changing of her clothes.

King. Art of Love, pt. v.

When the hounds pursue upon the scent, until they have unharboured the stag, they are said to draw on the slot.

Goldsmith. Animated Nature, b. ii. c. 5.

SLIVE. } A. S. Slif-an, findere, to cleave, to SLIVER. } slive, to sliver. The word is thus recognised by Somner as of common use. Mr.
Moor has preserved it in his Suffolk Words. And Grose says,—to slive is to sneak, in Lincolnshire.
See also Ray and Brockett.

To cleave, to split, to slit or slide, to divide.

Alas, that he all hole or of him some slivere
Should have his refute in so digne a place,
That Jove, him sone out of your herte race.

Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From the material sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use.—Shakespeare. Lea, Act iv. sc. 2.

— An envious sliver broke,
When downe the weedy trophies, and her selfe,
Fell in the weeping brooke, her cloathes spred wide,
And mermaid-like, a while they bore her vp.

Id. Hamlet, Act iv. sc. 7.

Gall of goate, and slippes of yew,
Sliver'd in the moones eclipse.

Id. Macbeth, Act iv. sc. 1.

When frost will not suffer to dike or to hedge,
Then get thee a heat, with thy beetle and wedge,
Once Hallowmas come, and a fire in the hall,
Such slivers do well for to lie by the wall.

Tusser. Husbandry. December.

SLOE. A. S. Sla, prunum sylvestre.

A sloe,—so called happily from its slowness in the passage through the belly, (Somner.)

Or search'd the hopefull thicks of hedgy-rows,
For brierie berries, or hawes, or souer sloes.

Bp. Hall, b. iii. Sat. 1.

I fed on scarlet hips, and stony haws,
Or blushing crabs, or berries, that emboss
The bramble, black as jet, or sloes austere.

Cowper. Task, b. i.

SLOOP. Contracted from shallop, qv.

And besides at this island we might build canoas, it being plentifully stored with large cedars for such a purpose, and for this reason the Jamaica men come hither frequently to build sloops.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1680.

SLOP, n. } Skinner has three different ety-SLOP, v. } mologies, for what he thinks are SLO'PPY. } three different words. Junius thinks Slop (a pair of slops) has the same origin as sleeve. Tooke—that slop generally is the past part. of slip. And see SLOPE.

A slop,—liquid, &c. that slips or has slipped.
Slops worn by sailors, labourers,—that slip on easily without dragging.

To slop,—to spill liquids.

Sloppy,—wet with slops.

His overest sloppe it is not worth a mite.

Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16,100.

And well might his proportion be judged, for he had nothing upon him but a pair of slops, and upon his body a goat skin, which he cast over his shoulder.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

— When your surgeon's paid,
And all your leaks stopt, see whose slops are heaviest.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Mad Lover, Act i. sc. 1.

Who is come hither private for his conscience,
And brought munition with him, six great slops,
Bigger than three Dutch hoys.

B. Jonson. The Alchymist, Act iii. sc. 2.

When we lay out a day's diversion by some little excursion abroad we regard what will entertain us most for the day, notwithstanding some trifling inconveniences of sloppy roads, or indifferent accommodations at a paltry inn.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 27.

SLOPE, n. } Skinner derives from Dut.
SLOPE, v. } Slap, laxis, remissus, — loose, SLO'PENESS. } slack, from the line formed by a SLO'PINGLY. } rope hanging loosely. — Tooke SLO'PY. } considers it to be the past part.
of the verb to Slip:—and, consequentially, to mean—

That which, the surface of ground, &c. which we slip along, slip down; which lies on an inclined plane; on a declivity; obliquely to the horizon.

For many times I haue it seene,
That many haue beguiled beene,
For trust that they haue set in hope,
Which fell hem afterward a slope.

Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

Though castles toppel on their warder's heads:
Though pallaces and pyramids do slope
Their heads to their foundations: Though the treasure
Of Nature's germaine, tumble altogether,
Euen till destruction sicken: answer me
To what I aske you.—Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act iv. sc. 1.

Oft till the star that rose, at evening, bright,
Toward heav'n's descent had slop'd his westring wheel.

Milton. Lycidas, v. 30.

The fosse goeth not directlie but slopewise ouer the greatest part of this island.

Holinshead. Description of Britaine, c. 19.

It riseth three or foure miles or more within the land slopewise.—Id. Ib. c. 14.

The growing upon slopes is caused, for that moss, as on the one side it cometh of moisture and water, so on the other side the water must but slide, and not stand or poole.

Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 537.

Where there is a great quantity of water, and space enough, the water moveth with a sloper rise and fall.

Id. Ib.

The Italians are very precise in giving the cover a graceful pendency of slopesness.—Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 48.

To noontide shades incontinent he ran,
Where puris the brook with sleep-inviting sound;
Or when Dan Sol to slope his wheels began,
Amid the broom he bask'd him on the ground,
Where the wild thyme and camomile are found.

Thomson. Castle of Indolence, c. 1.

But soft—by regular approach—not yet—
First through the length of yon hot terrace sweat;
And when up ten steep slopes you've dragg'd your thighs,
Just at his study-door he'll bless your eyes.

Pope. Moral Essays, Epis. 4.

Lyc. Your country friends were told another tale:
That from the sloping mountain to the vale,
And dodder'd oak, and all the banks along,
Menalcas sav'd his fortune with a song.

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, Past. 9.

1754

For this purpose they take to sea with them a great number of mats, which, whenever the rain descends, they range slopingly against the gunwale from one end of the ship to the other, their lower edges resting on a large split bamboe.

Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 10.

Where the mantling willows nod
From the green bank's slopy side,
Patient, with his well-thrown rod,
Many an angler breaks the tide!

Cunningham. A Landscape.

At the other end the earth is raised sloping, to walk up to the entrance, which is by a hole in the top of the roof over that end.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 9.

The land upon this side of the island rises in a gentle slope, from the sea to the foot of the mountains, which occupy the centre of the country.—Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 11.

The self-complacent actor, when he views (Stealing a sidelong glance at a full house)
The slope of faces, from the floor to th' roof
(As if one master-spring controll'd them all) Relax'd into a universal grin,
Sees not a count'nance there, that speaks of joy
Half so refin'd or so sincere as ours.—Cowper. Task, b. iv.

SLOTH, n. } Rather, (says Skinner,)— SLOTH, v. } from our verb, to Slow, and SLOTHFUL. } then more properly written SLOTHFULNESS. } Slouth: and Junius—Slow and slouthful, piger, iners. Tooke considers it to be the third pers. sing. of Slow,—sloweth, slouth, or slouth, slouth.

That which sloweth, or maketh one slow. See SLOUCH, &c. SLUT, and SLUG.

Laziness, idleness, tardiness.

Slouth,—the animal, so called from its slouth.

Vor wanne men beth al ydel, that er batayles sogte,
Her ydelnesse hem ssal brynge to synne lecherye,
To tauerne, and to sleuthe, and to hasarderye.

R. Gloucester, p. 195.

And as thou smellst hem thurgh my praiere,
So shalt thou seen hem, leve brother dere,
If it so be thou wolt withouten slouth
Beleve aright, and know the veray trouthe.

Chaucer. The Second Nonnes Tale, v. 15,660.

— I would vtterly
Right of mine owne honde write her now
A letter, in which I would her tellen how
I farde amisse, and her beseech of routh:
Now help thy selfe, and leave it for no slouth.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

The first point of slouth I call Lachesse, and is the chief of all,
And hath this properly of kinde
To leuen all thyng behynde.

Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

I woll the tellen abouen all,
In whome no vertue maie befall,
Whiche yeueth vnto the vices rest,
And is of slouth the slowest.

Id. Ib.

The Lord commaūdeth the talent to be taken away from the euill and slouthfull seruant, and to bynde hym hand and foote.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 34.

If shootinge coulede speake, she woulde accuse Englande of unkindnesse and slouthfulness; of unkindnesse toward her, because she beinge left to a little blind use, lackes her best maintainer which is cunninge.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. i.

And at Wynchester, in the newe abbey, he put in monkes, where, before dayes, were seculer preestes; y^e cause wherof was, for so moch as the preestes fled or negligently slouthed
the deuyne seruyce of God, and sette vykers in theyr places, whyle they lyued at theyr pleasure in other places, and spent the patrimony of that churche after theyr sensuall wyll.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 193.

But nowe seeinge the order of communion is no more obserued amongst vs, and that through the negligence, and slouthfulness, as wel of the laye people, as of the priestes, the Holy Ghost by the often saleinge of priuate masses, hath founde out a godly remedie for this wante.

Jewell. Replie to Hardinge, p. 478.

For all he did was to deceive good knights,
And draw them from pursuit of praise and fame
To slug in slouth and sensuall delights,
And end their daies with irrenowned shame.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 1.

So she him lefte, and did herselfe betake
Unto her boat again, with which she cleft
The slouthfull wave of that great griesly lake.

Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 6.

The chief thus answer'd mild: "Immortal maid!
I own thy presence, and confess thy aid.
Not fear thou know'st, witholds me from the plains,
Nor slouth hath seiz'd me, but thy word restrains."

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. v.

Still, with your voice, the slouthful soldiers raise,
Urge, by their father's fame, their future praise.

Id. Ib. b. x.

It is natural for men, when they are beaten out of other excuses, to fetch apologies for their neglect, or slothfulness in any business that is pressed upon them, from the greatness of the work, and their own want of strength and ability to go through it.—Sharp, vol. i. Ser. 5.

The lower sort still are ambitious to follow them as close as they can, every day indeed, but on that especially: consume the beginning of it in stupid sloth, the remainder in lewdness or drunkenness.—Secker, vol. i. Ser. 5.

SLOUCH, n. } Skinner derives Slowch from SLO'UCHING, adj. } the Dan. Sloff; Hebes,— SLO'UCHING, n. } the Ger. Schlauz, negligens. Tooke thinks it is the A. S. Slac, (ch for k) from the verb Slac-ian, to slow, or cause to be slow, (qv.) Applied to a slow pace; one who moves a slow pace.

A lazy, idle fellow; one who moves—lazily, idly, heavily; too lazy to move upright; with a bend or stoop; a lazy, stooping, lowing position or gait.

The first of those rude rascalls Lypon hight,
A foul great stooping slouch with heavie eyes,
And hanging lip.—More. On the Soul. Psychozoia, s. 8.

Begin thy carols then, thou vaunting slouch!
Be thine the oaken staff, or mine the pouch.
Gay. The Shepherd's Week, Past. 1.

The awkward, negligent, clumsy, and slouching manner of a booby.—Chesterfield.

As some take stiffness for a grace,
And walk a dancing-master's pace,
And others, for familiar air
Mistake the slouching of a bear.—Lloyd. A Dialogue.

SLOVEN. } Slouen, slouen, sloven (and SLO'VENLY. } slut, qv. from slowed), past SLO'VENLINESS. } part. of the verb to slow, (qv.)
SLO'VENERY. } i.e. to make slow or cause to be slow, (qv.)

One who is too slow, lazy, idle—to do any thing carefully—to dress properly, neatly.

Some sluggyshe slouens that slepe day and night.
Skelton. The Crowne of Laurell.

I beseech ye, friends, ere the brick-bats fly, resolve me and yourselves, is it blasphemy, or any whit disagreeing from Christian meekness, whenas Christ himself speaking of unsavory traditions, scruples not to name the dunghill and the jakes, for me to answer a slovenly wincer of a confutation, that if he would needs put his foot to such a sweaty service, the odour of his sock was like to be neither musk, nor benjamin?—Milton. An Apology for Smectymnus.

Whether the multitudes of sects, and professed slovenliness in God's service, (in too many) have not been guilty of the increase of profaneness amongst us.
Bp. Hall. The Remonstrants' Defence.

There's not a piece of feather in our hoast:
Good argument (I hope) we will not flye:
And time hath worne vs into slovenrie.
Shakespeare. Hen. V. Act iv. sc. 3.

The onellie meane at those daies whereby hir husband his cuntrye was reclaimed from sluttishnesse and slouenrie to cleane bedding and ciuillite.
Holinshed. Chron. of Irelande, an. 1524.

The medium between a fop and a sloven is what a man of sense would endeavour to keep.—Spectator, No. 140.

Canted, and whin'd, and talk'd most odly,
Was very slovenly and godly.
Somerville. The Bald Batchelor.

That its worship may not be exposed to contempt by the slovenliness and barbarity of its outward appendages.
Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 7.

Who, destitute of humour, wit, and taste,
Let all their little knowledge run to waste,
And frustrate each good purpose, whilst they wear
The robes of learning with a sloven's air.
Churchill. Gotham, b. ii.

The reader reflects, how little this invincible demonstration for our holy faith hath been hitherto insisted on; how slightly it hath been handled; and how hastily and slovenly hurried over.—Warburton. Julian, Conclusion.

SLOUGH. } A. S. Slog,—a hollow filled with SLO'UGHY. } mud or mire, (Junius.) Tooke thinks it the past part. of Slacc-ian (a broad), to slow, (qv.); meaning—

Slow (water),—sluggish water; water, mire, that stays, does not drain off.

Slough of an animal (serpent),—the skin cast; probably so called from the sluggish state of the animal during this process of nature; or because the skin cast (like the slough of a wound) is an old skin—succeeded by a new.

Slough of a wound or sore,—the inert, senseless skin, or matter, that separates or comes from it.

That was wel twight, min owen liard boy,
I pray God save thy body and Seint Eloy.
Now is my cart out of the slough parde.
Chaucer. The Freres Tale, v. 7145.

Here never durst the babling cuckow spit,
No slough of falling star did ever hit Upon this bank.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Faithful Shepherdess, Act iii. sc. 1.

In the spring time, serpents first doe cast their sloughes or skins.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxv. c. 2.

Passing over Haerlem mere, a huge island slough, in company of his father who had been at Amsterdam, to look now his bank of money did thrive.—Howell, b. i. Let. 10.

If order were taken that their boughs should continually be kept short, and the bushes not suffered to spread so far into the narrow paths, that inconvenience would also be remedied, and manie a slough proue hard ground that yet is deepe and hollow.—Holinshed. Desc. of Britaine, c. 19.

And when the mind is quickned, out of doubt,
The organs, though defunct and dead of doubt,
Breake vp their drowsie graue, and newly moue
With casted slough, and fresh legeritie.
Shakespeare. Hen. V. Act iv. sc. 1.

The tubercles and breast sunk, and, after the casting forth of some corrupt sloughs, the matter became well scented.—Wiseman. Treatises, b. i. c. 21.

But, when by genial rays of summer sun
Purg'd of his slough, he nimbly thrids the brake, Whetting his sling, his crested head he rears Terrific.
J. Phillips. Cerealia.

When he, renew'd in all the speckled pride
Of pompous youth, has cast his slough aside,
And in his summer livery rolls along,
Erect, and brandishing his forkie tongue,
Leaving his nest, and his imperfect young.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iii.

Neither should that odious custom be allowed of cutting scraws (as they call them), which is flaying off the green surface of the ground to cover their cabins, or make up their ditches; sometimes in shallow soils, where all is gravel within a few inches; and sometimes in low ground, with a thin green sward, and sloughy underneath; which last turns all into bog by this mismanagement.
Swift. Drapier, Let. 7.

SLOW, adj. } A. S. Slac-ian, (a, broad,) SLOW, n. } slaw-ian, tardare, to retard, to SLOW, v. } delay; to move a short space
SLO'WLY. } in a long time. See SLACK, SLO'WNESS. } SLOUCH, SLOUGH, SLUG, SLO-VEN, SLUT.

Tardy, delaying, dilatory; lingering, loitering, dull, heavy; inert, inactive, unready.

Slow-worm, (A. S. Slaw-wyrme.) See the quotation from Goldsmith.

A slowe,—a sloth or sluggard.

His lorde answerde and seide to him, yvel servaunt and slow; wistist thou that I repe where I sewe not, and gedre togidre where I sprede not abroad.—Wiclif. Matt. c. 25.

Ech come bifore to worschipe othir. not slough in bisynesse, feruent in spyryt.—Id. Romaynes, c. 12.

And whanne in many daies we seiliden slowli and unnethe camen aghens gnidon, for the wynd lettide us, we seiliden to Crete bisidis Salomona.—Id. Dedis, c. 27.

And when we had sayled slowly many dayes, & scaë were come ouer against Gnidon (because the wynde withstode vs) we salled harde by the costes of Candy, ouer against Salmo.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

"Fie on you" (quod she) "euerichone,
Ye nastie swine, ye idle wretches,
Full of rotten slow tetches."
Chaucer. The House of Fame, b. iii.

It is a slowe may nat forbear,
Ragges ribaned with gold to weare,
For also well woll loue be sette
Under ragges as rich rotchette.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

—There ben other uices slowe,
Whiche vnto loue do great lette,
If thou thyn herte vpon hem sette.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.
Looke sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.
Shakespeare. Romeo & Juliet, Act iv. sc. 1.

And after him she rode with so much speede,
As her slowre beast could make; but all in vaine:
For him so far had borne his light-foot steede,
Pricked with wrath and fiery fierce disdain,
That him to follow was but fruitlesse paine.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 2.

Ah! when will this long weary day have end,
And lende me leave to come unto my love?
How slowly do the houres theyr numbers spend?
How slowly does sad Time his feathers move?
Spenser. Epithalamion.

Being moderatlie taken (saith he) it [aqua vitæ] sloweth age, it strengthneth youth.
Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 2.

We haue also the sloworme, which is blacke and graiesh of colour, and somewhat shorter than an adder.
Id. Description of England, c. 6.

Impatient friends, stand, that your strength may last!
Burn not, in blaze, rage that should warm you long!
I wish to foes the weaknesses of haste,
To you such slowness as may keep you strong.
Davenant. Gondibert, b. i. c. 5.

The small-ey'd slow-worm held of many blind,
Yet this great ark it quickly out could find,
And as the ark it was about to climb,
Out of its teeth shoots the inuicible slime.
Drayton. Noah's Flood.

What awe did the slow solemn knell inspire;
The pealing organ, and the pausing choir.
Tickell. On the Death of Mr. Addison.

Another backward to the tower would go,
And slowly eats his way against the wind;
But the main body of the marching foe
Against th' imperial palace is design'd.
Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Those words of our Lord to Nicodemus, express some kind of marvel at his slowness of apprehension; "Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?"
Waterland. Works, vol. vi. p. 344.

Having uttered some words, which we were very sorry we could not understand, he went back to his companions, and the whole body slowly retreated.
Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 4.

Various circumstances might take place, added to the slowness of the procession, to retard the execution till nine, the very time fixed by St. Mark.
Knox. Christian Philosophy, App. 1.

SLUBBER v. See SLAB.

SLUDGE. A word common in vulgar speech, written by Holinshed Slucke. See SLUG.

SLUG, n. } Skinner and Junius have SLUG, v. } nothing at all satisfactory to SLUGGARD. } themselves. Tooke thinks SLUGGARDY. } Slug, A. S. Slog, is slow (i.e.
SLUGGARDIZE, v. } reptile.) See SLOW.
SLUGGISH. } A slow reptile,—any thing
SLUGGISHLY. } slow, lazy, dull, heavy,
SLUGGISHNESS. } lumpish, drowsy, dronish.
SLUGGY. } To slug,—to be or cause to be lazy, dull; inert.

Er it was day, as she was wont to do,
She was arisen, and all redy dight;
For May wol have no slogardie a-night.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1042.

Than cometh sompnolence, that is, sluggish slumbring, which maketh a man hevy, and dull in body and in soule, and this sinne cometh of slouthe.—Id. The Persones Tale.

He woll not leue his sluggardie.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

[Telle him] that he shal neuer haue list to slepe, and therby leese the pleasure y^t he was wont to make in slugging.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1258.

In secret sylence of the night
This made me, with a reckles brest,
To wake thy sluggards with my bowe.
Surrey. Against London.

Ye that in loue find lucke and swete abundance,
And liue in lust of joyful jollitie,
Arise for shame, do way your sluggardy.
Wyatt. The Louer unhappy.

But now after they had twice by experience in theselues learned, that through slouthful sitting vnwares thei fell a slepe, for a redye remedy agaynste that sluggish slepy sicknes, gaue he the this lesson to rise.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1375.

Wherefore I doe sore marueile, y^t there bee certain men the which geue the selues, to slouthfulness & sluggishness and will not learne those things, that bee good.
Barnes. Workes, p. 289.

For all he did was to deceive good knights,
And draw them from pursuit of praise and fame
To slug in slouth and sensuall delights,
And end their daies with irrenowned shame.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 1.

That he did never eat his meat, before he had won it with his sword, that he lay not all night slugging in a cabbin under his mantle, but used commonly to keepe others waking to defend their liues.—Id. State of Ireland.

[Usury] doth dull and dampe all industries, improvements, and new inventions, wherein money would be stirring, if it were not for this slugge.—Bacon. Ess. Of Usury.

And it is still episcopacy that before all our eyes worsens and slugs the most learned, and seeming religious of our ministers.—Milton. Of Reformation in England, b. i.

For all the words that came from gullets,
If long, were slugs; if short ones bullets.

Cotton. To John Bradshaw, Esq.

And said; "Ah! wretched sonne of wofull syre,
Doest thou sit wayling by blacke Stygian lake,
Whylest here thy shield is hangd for victors hyre?
And, sluggish german, doest thy forces slake
To after-send his foe, that him may overtake.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 5.

I rather would entreat thy company
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Then (liuing dully sluggardiz'd at home)
Weare out thy youth with shapelesse idlenesse.

Shakespeare. Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act i. sc. i.

Who, that they might not come sluggishly to possess what others had won for them, either by their own seeking, or by appointment, are set in place where they could not but at their first coming give proof of themselves upon the enemy.—Milton. History of England, b. iii.

Mill-stones, in the Greek gospel, are termed μυλοι ονικοι; that is, asses mill-stones; either because asses [as St. Hillary will have it] used to draw them about (before men taught the wind and water to do that work for them), or because the lower mill-stone was called ονος, an asse from the sluggishnesse thereof, as always lying still.

Fuller. Worthies. Anglesey.

Add, that it would also weaken and enervate mens natural faculties, by slugging them, and rather beget a puffy conceit and opinion of knowledge, by a multifarious rabble of indigested notions, than the truth thereof.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 321.

So a man being shot with a slug near the external canthus of the right eye, through that bone, it seemed to the chirurgeon that dressed it, to have passed directly forwards.

Wiseman. Surgery, b. vi. c. 2.

As forc'd from wind-guns, lead itself can fly,
And pond'rous slugs cut swiftly thro' the sky.

Pope. Dunciad, b. i.

For sprightly May commands our youth to keep
The vigils of her night, and breaks their sluggard sleep.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. i.

Answerable to my conjecture, there remained in the bottom a salt, not only far more sluggish than the fugitive one of urine.—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 305.

On shore they [seals] lie very sluggishly, and will not go out of our ways unless we beat them, but snap at us.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1683.

How should this instance of the operative virtue of God's word reproach our sluggishness and insensibility?

Atterbury, vol. iv. Ser. 5.

Slugs pinch'd with hunger, smear'd the slimy wall.

Churchill. The Prophecy of Famine.

Every man who has undertaken to instruct others, can tell what slow advances he has been able to make, and how much patience it requires to recal vagrant inattention, to stimulate sluggish indifference, and to rectify absurd misapprehension.—Knox. On Liberal Education.

I would rather wish a student, as soon as he goes abroad, to employ himself upon whatever he has been incited to by any immediate impulse, than to go sluggishly about a prescribed task.—Reynolds, Disc. 12.

SLUICE, n. } Fr. Escluse; It. Sclosa; Sp.
SLUICE, v. } Esclusa; Dut. Sluyse:—from SLU'ICY. } the Lat. Clausus, closed or dammed up. Sclosa,—locus ubi concluduntur aquæ.

A place in which water is closed or inclosed;
a dam.

To sluice, (or to unsluice, qv.)—to open that which closes,—the gate; to issue forth, (sc.) in or like floods of water; to wet or waste abundantly; to overwhelm.

His governor led his men homeward, while he kept himself still hindmost, as if he had stood at the gate of a sluice to let the stream go, with such proportion as should seem good unto him.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

Most of their towns are thereby incompass'd with water, which by sluices they can contract or dilate as they list.

Howell, b. i. Let. 5.

Jul. Oh, thou hast op'd a sluice was long shut up,
And let a flood of grief in; a buried grief
Thy voice hath wak'd again.

Beaumont & Fletcher. The Maid in the Mill, Act iii. sc. i.

[I say] that he did plot the Duke of Glousters death,
Suggest his soone beleueing aduersaries,
And consequently, like a traitor coward,
Sluc'd out his innocent soule through streames of blood.

Shakespeare. Rich. II. Act i. sc. i.

Nigh on the plain in many cells prepar'd,
That underneath had veins of liquid fire
Sluc'd from the lake, a second multitude
With wond'rous art found out the massie ore,
Severing each kind, and scum'd the bullion dross.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

Torr. You wrong me; if you think I'll sell one drop Within these veins for pageants: but let honour
Call for my blood; and sluce it into streams;
Turn fortune loose again to my pursuit;
And let me hunt her through embattell'd foes,
In dusty plains, amidst the cannon's roar,
There will I be the first.

Dryden. The Spanish Fryar, Act i.

The water which yields this salt works in from out of the sea through a hole in the sand-bank before mentioned, like a sluce, and that only in spring-tides.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1699.

The yellow harvests of the ripen'd year,
And flatted vineyards, one sad waste appear!
While Jove descends in sluicy sheets of rain,
And all the labours of mankind are vain.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. v.

The weight of waters saps the yielding wall,
And to the sea the floating bulwarks fall,
Incessant cataracts the thunderer pours,
And half the skies descend in sluicy showers.

Id. Ib. b. xii.

SLUMBER, v. } Also written (as in Gower) SLUMBER, n. } slomer.
SLUMBERER. } Dut. Sluymeren, sluymeren;
SLUMBERING, n. } Ger. Schlum-mern; A. S.
SLUMBEROUS. } Slummeran, nictare, dormi-SLUMBERY. } tare, to wink, to be inclined or disposed to sleep.

To be sleepy, drowsy, inert; to compose, to still, to quiet; to repose.

And said "Awake," full wonderlich and sharpe.
What slumbrest thou, as in a litherge?
Or art thou like an asse to the harpe,
That heareth sound, whan men the stringes ply.

Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. i.

— And ever lay

Pandare a bed, halfe in a slombring.

Id. Ib. b. ii.

The carpenter out of his slomber sterte,
And herd on crie water, as he were wood,
And thought, "Alas, now cometh Noes flood."

Id. The Reves Tale, v. 3814.

Than cometh sompnolence, that is sluggish slumbring, which maketh a man hevy, and dull in body and in soule,
and this sinne cometh of slouth.—Id. The Persones Tale.

With mocheil wo but at laste
His slomerend eies he vpcaste,
And said hir, that it shall be do.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

In dreames and visions of the night season (when slombryng commeth vpon men, that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he rowndeth them in the eares, he infourmeth them, and sheweth them playnly, that it is he, whiche withdraweth man from euyl, delyuereth hym from pryde, kepeth hys soule from destruccion, and his lyfe fro the swearde.

Bible, 1551. Job, c. 33.

Oft list'ning how the hounds and horn
Chearly rouse the slumbring morn,
From the side of some hoar hill,
Through the high wood echoing shrill.

Milton. L'Allegro.

Yea, rather than my losse should draw on hers,
(Heare, Heaven, the suite which my sad soule preferres!)
Let this her slumber, like Oblivion's streame,
Make her beleue our love was but a dreame!

Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 5.

And as a slumbr'er stretching on his bed,
This way he this, and that way scattered
His other leg, which feet with toes up bear.

Donne. The Progress of the Soul.

The drouping night thus creepeth on them fast;
And the sad humor loading their eye-liddes,
As messenger of Morpheus, on them cast
Sweet slombring deaw, the which to sleep them biddes.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

So long they sought, till they arrived were
In that same shady covert whereas lay Faure Crysgone in slombry traunce whilere.

Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 6.

— God hath set

Labour and rest, as day and night to men
Successive, and the timely dew of sleep
Now falling with soft slumbrous weight inclines
Our eye-lids.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

In th' English fleet each ship resounds with joy,
And loud applause of their great leader's fame;
In fiery dreams the Dutch they still destroy,
And slumbering smile at the imagin'd flame.

Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Now charg'd with blessings while you seek repose,
Officious slumbers haste your eyes to close;
And glorious dreams stand ready to restore
The pleasing shapes of all you saw before.

Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Beneath an ample portico, they spread
The downy fleece to form the slumberous bed;
And o'er soft palls of purple grain, unfold
Rich tapestry, stiff with inwoven gold.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. iv.

Sleep-soothing groves, and quiet lawns between;
And flowery beds that slumberous influence kest,
From poppies breath'd.

Thomson. Castle of Indolence, c. i.

They immediately fell into a deep slumber, which was miraculously prolonged, without injuring the powers of life, during the period of one hundred and eighty seven years.

Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 33.

With these the statesman strove to ease his care,
To sooth his sorrows, and to divert despair
But long his grief sleep's gentle aid denies;
At length a slumbr'ous Briton clos'd his eyes.

P. Whitehead. State Dunces.

At length the hero from the earth he rais'd:
Then to his lips convey'd the balmy draught;
The senseless chief the slumbr'ous potion quaff.
His heavy eyes the slumbr'ous potion clos'd,
Ere yet his tongue his various doubts propos'd.

Cambridge. The Scribleriad, b. v.

SLUR, v. } Perhaps a corruption of slutter,— SLUR, n. } to do as the slut does, (slovenly or sluttishly;) Slirt, from slurred, slur'd, slurt.

To do any thing lazily, carelessly, dirtily; to smear, to soil, to tarnish, to pollute; to cast a soil or spot upon; to pass slightly, (with a view to escape notice); to cheat.

This touched the reputation of Mr. Rich to the very quick, and was a slur that could not be effaced, without the utmost difficulty.—State Trials. Hen. VIII. an. 26.

Then from the table he gave a start,

Where banquet and wine were nothing scarce;
All which he slirted away.—B. Jonson, s. 29.

What was the public faith found out for,
But to slur men of what they fought for?

Hudibras, pt. ii. c. 2.

I can manage the little comb,—set my hat, shake my garniture, toss about my empty noddle, walk with a courrant slurr, and at every step peck down my head.

Dryden. Secret Love, Act v.

A manger was the place that first received the Lord of glory. This slur, this affront God then thought fit to put upon all that external splendor and grandeur, which usually doth so much dazzle the eyes of mortal men.

Sharp, vol. i. Ser. 11.

There would have been one species of beings wanting to compleat the universe; and it would have been a slurre to the divine goodness not to have given being to such creatures as in the idea were fairly possible; and contradicted no other attribute.—Glanvil. Pre-existence of Souls, c. 8.

In every part of the human figure, when not spoiled by too great corpulency, will be found this distinctness, the parts never appearing uncertain or confused, or, as a musician would say, slurred; and all those smaller parts which are comprehended in the larger compartment are still to be there, however tenderly marked.

Reynolds. Art of Painting, Note 56.

Those worthies seem to see no shame in,
Nor strive to pass a slur on gaming.

Cambridge. A Dialogue.

SLUT. } Slut, or (as Gower writes SLUTTERY. } it) slout, is the past part. of SLUTTISH. } the verb slaw-ian, to slow, SLUTTISHLY. } i.e. to make slow, or cause to SLUTTISHNESS. } be slow, and formed thus—slowed, slow'd, sloud, slout, slut. Slut formerly—as sloven now—was applied to males as well as females. See Tooke.

One who is too slow, lazy, idle,—to do any thing carefully, cleanly; to dress properly, neatly; a lazy, uncleanly, dirty person.

It shall not be in hir election,
The foulest slutte in all the toune to refuse,
If that me lust, for all that they can muse.

Chaucer. The Letter of Cupid.

Why is thy lord so sluttish I thee preye,
And is of power better cloth to beye,
If that his dede accorded with thy speche?

Id. The Chanones Yemannes Prologue, v. 16, 104.

Among these other of sloutes kinde,
Whiche all labour set behinde,
And hateth all besines,
There is yet one, whiche Idelnes
Is cleped.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

Than he shewed them, in maner of communycasion, all the nature of the Spanyardes, howe they be sluttyshe and lousy, and enuyous of other mannes welthe.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 31.

Clo. Truly, and to cast away honestie vpon a foule slut, were to put good meate into an vnclene dish.

Shakespeare. As You Like It, Act iii. sc. 2.

Nor i' th' appetite.

Sluttry, to such neate excellencie oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit emptinesse,
Nor so allur'd to feed.—Id. Cymbeline, Act i. sc. 7.

These make our girls their sluttry rue,
By pinching them both black and blue,
And put a penny in their shoe,
The house for cleanly sweeping.

Drayton. Nymphidia. The Court of Fairy.

What rooms are these?

Otr. They are sluttish ones.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Maid in the Mill, Act v. sc. 1.

They have taken a toil, surely very laborious, out of infinite huge volumes to pick whatsoever may seem to be either absurdly, or falsely, or fondly, or scandalously, or dishonestly, or passionately, or sluttishly conceived or written.

Sandys. State of Religion.

The onellie meane at those daies whereby hir husband his countrie was reclaimed from sluttishnesse and slouerie, to cleane bedding and ciuillitie.

Holinshed. Chronicles of Irelands, an. 1524.

Be it enacted then

By the fair laws of thy firm-pointed pen,
God's services no longer shall put on
A sluttishness, for pure religion.

Crashaw. On a Treatise of Charity.

As for spiders, it is evident that they are of the τα αὐτοματὰ γενόμενα, as Aristotle phrases it, and are generated of mere sluttry and putrefaction.

More. Immortality of the Soul, b. iii. c. 13.

A poach'd egge; meat which in the shell may safely be eaten after a sluttish, out of it not after a malicious, hand.

Fuller. Worthies. Essex.

Here by the by I cannot but look upon the strange instinct of this noisome and troublesome creature the louse, of searching out foul and nasty clothes to harbour and breed in, as an effect of Divine Providence, designed to deter men and women from sluttishness and sordidness, and to provoke them to cleanliness and neatness.

Ray. On the Creation, pt. ii.

SLY. } Also written Sleigh, and is per-SLY'LY, or } haps the same word as Sleight, SLY'LY. } (i.e. sleyed, sley'd, sly'd, the final d SLY'NESS. } omitted,) meaning—

Acting with forecast; forecasting or projecting; cautious, circumspect; cunning, crafty; subtle.

Substance sly, in Spenser, is substance slight or slender. Milton, Comus, v. 155—"To cheat the eye with bleat illusion," had been, in the MS. examined by Mr. Todd,—"with sleight illusion."

Slightly, in the fifth quotation from Chaucer, is Slyly.

—And stele up on myn enemy
For to slee hym stehliche. stehles ich by thenke.

Piers Ploukman, p. 93.

Lo I sende you as scheep in the myddil of wolves, therfor be ghe slygh as serpentis; and simple as downis.

Wiclif. Matthew, c. 10.

A thefe he was forsoth, of corn and mele,
And that a slye, and usant for to stele.

Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 3937.

A col fox, ful of sleigh iniquitee.

Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,151.

And eke men brought him out of his contre
Fro yere to yere ful prively his rent.
But honestly and sleightly he it spent,
That no man wondred how that he it hadde.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1446.

And if this man slee here himselfe, alas,
In my presence, it nill be no sollas,
What men would of it deme I can nat say,
It needeth me full sleightly for to play.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

The weshen they, and set hem down and ete,
And after noone fall slightly, Pandarus
Gan draw hem to the window near the street.—Id. Ib.

The heauen is far, the worlde is nigh,
And vaine glorie is eke so sligh,
Whiche couetise hath now witholde,
That thei none other thinge beholde,
But only that thei mighten winne.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

For thei ben sligh in suche a wise,
That thei by slyght, and by queintise
Of fals witnes bringen inne,
That doth hem ofte for to wyne,
That thei be not worthy therto.—Id. Ib. b. v.

Thei shope amonge them such a wile,
The kyng was dead within a while,
So slyly came it not aboute,
That thei ne ben discouered out,
So that it thought them for the best
To flee, for there was no reste.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

Two goodly beacons, set in watches stead,
Therein gave light, and flamd continually:
For they of living fire most subtilly
Were made, and set in silver sockets bright,
Cover'd with lids deviz'd of substance sly,
That readily they shut and open might.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

Beneath that shade two rivers slyly steal,
Through narrow walks, to wider Adice,
Who swallows both, till proudly she does swell,
And hastes to shew her beauty to the sea.

Davenant. Gondibert, b. iii. c. 1.

One may believe that this was in your head, by your slyly remarking, presently after, that Tertullian, Origen, and Lactantius affirmed the same thing of angels and souls, as the Nicene Fathers did of the Son.

Waterland. Works, vol. iii. p. 12.

They tempted me t' attack your highness,
And then, with wonted wile and slyness,
They left me in the lurch.

Swift. Sheridan's Submission.

So that upon an opportunity offering wherein a man may gain some pleasure or advantage slyly and safely without danger of after damage to himself, though with infinite detriment to all the world beside and in breach of every moral obligation, he will act wisely to embrace it.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 36.

SMACK, n. } Dut. Smaecken, sapere, gus-SMACK, v. } tare; Ger. Schmaeck, gustus et SMA'CKING, n. } sapor; Sw. Smaka; A. S. Smæc-can, to taste, to have or take a smack or savour of, (Somner.) Ihre is inclined to believe the verb formed from the sound of the lips in eating eagerly, and thence appropriated to the taste. The word is applied to—

The sound of the lips, separated from compression; to—a similar sound, as of a whip; of the hand upon the face; to—a taste, a savour, a relish.

—She behind thy back
So liberrall is, she woll nothing withsey,
But smartly of another take a smack,
Thus fare these women all the pack.

Chaucer. The Letter of Cupid.

Then Battus kindly leadeth her,
And euer as she trips,
"God blesse thee mouse," the bridegroom said,
And smakt her on the lips.

Warner. Albion's England, b. ii. c. 10.

The tast or smacke of Saverie, Origan, Cressies, and Senvie, is hote and biting.—Holland. Plinie, b. xix. c. 12.

There eke the soft delights, that witchingly
Instill a wanton sweetness through the breast,
And the calm pleasures always hover'd nigh;
But whate'er smack'd of noyance, or unrest,
Was far off expell'd from this delicious nest.

Thomson. Castle of Indolence, c. 1.

At harvest-home, and on the shearing day,
When he should thanks to Pan and Pales pay,
And better Ceres; trembling to approach
The little barrel, which he fears to broach:
He 'says the wimble, often draws it back,
And deals to thirsty servants but a smack.

Dryden. Persius, Sat. 4.

To write in pain, and counterfeit a bliss,
Like the faint smacking of an after-kiss.

Id. Prol. to the Mock Astrologer.

Would often boast his matchless skill,
To curb the steed, and guide the wheel,
And as he pass'd the gazing throng,
With graceful ease, and smack'd the throng.

Whitehead. The Youth & the Philosopher.

But when, obedient to the mode
Of panegyric, courtly ode,
The bard bestrides his annual hack,
In vain I taste, and sip and smack,
I find no favour of the sack.

Lloyd. A Familiar Epistle to a Friend.

Thy soldiery, the pope's well manag'd pack,
Were train'd beneath his lash, and knew the smack,
And, when he laid them on the scent of blood,
Would hunt a Saracen through fire and flood.

Couper. Expostulation.

SMALL, adj. } Dut. Smal; Ger. Schmal;
SMALL, n. } Sp. Smal; A. S. Smæl, smal, SMA'LLY. } smel. Smallunge, minutio, di-SMA'LNES. } minutio, a diminishing; a SMA'LLISH. } making small, thin, or slender.
See MALI.

Minute, thin, slender; opposed to large or great; delicate, gentle; opposed to gross.

A long knyft yt was & smal y nou, as me may gut yse
Atte chyrche of Kauersham, as he ath gare ybe.

R. Gloucester, p. 289

Go out swithe into the grete stretis and smale stretis of the citee: and bringe yn hider pore men and feble. blynde and crokid.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 14.

Ovide, amonges other thinges smale,
Said, Mida had under his longe heres
Growing upon his hed two asses eres.

Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6535.

To supper set, full smally they eat.—Id. Remedie of Loue.

His shoulderes of large brede,
And smallish in the girdlestede.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

—My wittes ben to smale
To telle euery mans tale.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

Her garment was cut after such a fashion, that though the length of it reached to the ancles, yet in her going one might sometimes discern the small of her leg.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

The Frenchmen seeing they could not that way prevail, continued their battery but smally, on which before they had spent 1500 shot in a day.

Burnet. Records. Journal of K. Edward's Reign, an. 3.

A kynnesmā of Sigebert, late kyng, entending to reuenge the depoyng of hys kynnesmā, awaytid y^e tyme, & beset y^e house where Kenulph & his paramoure was smally accōpanyed.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 152.

Thenceforth I gan in my engrieved brest
To scorne all difference of great and small,
Sith that the greatest often are opprest,
And unawares doe into daunger fall.

Spenser. Vision of the World's Vanitie.

Since when the greatness of his charge exceeds
The smallness of his pou'rs, he must collate
The same on others.—Daniel. Civil Wars, b. ii.

Esteem and kindness in one breast would grow:
But 'twas heaven knows how many years ago.
Now some small-chat, and guinea expectation,
Gets all the pretty creatures in the nation.

Dryden. An Epilogue.

That sort of animals being, by reason of their smallness, the fittest of those furnished with lungs and hot blood we could procure.—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 376.

Knights, lords, and dukes—mad wretch, forbear,
Dangers unthought of ambush there;
Confine thy rage to weaker slaves,
Laugh at small fools, and lash small knaves.

Churchill. The Ghost, b. iii.

SMALT. i.e. Smelt.

To make a light purple, mingle ceruse with logwood water: and moreover turnsoil with lac mingled with small of bice.

Peacham.

SMA'RAGD. Dut. and Ger. Schmaragd;
Lat. Smaragdus; Gr. Σμαραγδος, from σμαρασσ-ειν, or μαρασσ-ειν, to shine. See EMERALD.

The forth was of a smaragde or an emerald, which is not only grene of his owne nature, but he maketh all the ayre aboute him to seme grene also.—Bale. Image, pt. iii.

SMART, adj. } Dut. Smerte; Ger. Schmerz; SMART, n. } Sw. Smarta; A. S. Smeort-an,
SMART, v. } dolere, cruciare, to pain. Ihre SMA'RTLY. } supposes the word to have SMA'RTNESS. } been primarily applied to the punishments of the martyrs; and is inclined to derive from the Lat. Martyrus; he thinks that the preposition of the letter s is the principal objection. Perhaps from the A. S. Merr-an, to mar, (qv.) Smart is generally applied to—

An acute, pungent, cutting pain.

Smart, adj.—acute, sharp, quick, lively, active, brisk; trim, spruce.

Thorgh smerted of the law he did tham justise.

R. Brunne, p. 306.

Sir Marmeduk out cam, he trosted on ther fayth,
To him & his thei nam, & smertly did tham grayth.

Id. p. 300.

Ge seggeth soth by my soule quath ich. ich have seyen hit ofte
Her smyt no thyng so smerte. ne smelleth so foule
As shame.

Piers Ploukman, p. 228.

Hold not the devils knif ay to thin herte,
Thine anger doth the all to sore smerte,
But shew to me all thy confession.

Chaucer. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 7673.

— "Alas," said she,
"Is ther no ship, of so many as I see,
Wol bringen home my lord? than were my herte
Al warished of his bitter peines smerte."
Chaucer. The Frankeleines Tale, v. 11,095.

The murmur sleth myn herte and my corage,
For to myn eres cometh the vois so smerte,
That it wel nie destroyed hath myn herte.
Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8443.

And therwith he sterte up smertly and cast down a grote.
Id. The Pardoner & Tapstere.

And for to lede hym swithe and smarte,
After the bright daies lawe,
There ben ordeined for to drawe,
Four hors his chare, and him withall,
Wherof the names tell I shall.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

And when the sunne hath eke the darke opprest,
And brought the day, it doth nothing abate
The trauailes of mine endlesse smart and paine.
Surrey. Of the restless State of a Louer.

And sad Repentance used to embay
His body in salt water smarting sore,
The filthy blotches of sin to wash away.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

And as some speed well ynough with their wicked deeds and irreligion: so others againe feeble the smart and are punished by the saints whom they adore, and the holy ceremonies which they observe.—Holland. Plinie, b. ii. c. 12.

— "Yet, if the stony cold
Have not all seized on your frozen hart,
Let one word fall that may your grief unfold,
And tell the secretes of your mortall smart:
He oft finds present helpe, who does his grieffe impart."
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 1.

Thrice had the golden sun his hote steedes washt
In the west maine, and thrice them smartly lasht
Out of the baulmy east, since the sweet maide
Had in that dismall cave bene sadly laid.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 3.

Objects will then be as present, and will strike as smartly upon our senses.—Barrow, vol. ii. Ser. 7.

Her conversation might, for this reason, seem to want somewhat of that salt and smartness, which the ill-natured part of the world are so fond of.—Atterbury, vol. i. Ser. 6.

— Birch—
Ah, why should birch supply the chair? since oft
Its cruel twigs compel the smarting youth
To dread the hateful seat.—Dodsley. Agriculture, c. 2.

And this we denominate heat, from that best known effect
we find it have upon ourselves in raising a burning smart in our flesh whenever we approach near enough.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. i. c. 7.

SMASH. See MASH. A word very common in speech.

SMATCH, v. } i. e. Smack, (qv.) by the SMATCH, n. } common change of ch into tch.
Smaught is the past tense.

— But yit ner the lattir
He held it nat al foly that Geoffrey did clattir,
But wisely hym governyd, as Geoffrey hym taught.
For percell of his wisdom he had tofore smaught.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Second Tale.

Neuerthesse no man of our tyme and in our Englishe tounge (which none but our selves for our own vse do muche passe on,) writeth so ornately, but that he hath in sundry woordes and phrases sum smatche of his native country phrases, that he was borne in.—Udal. Luke Pref.

I prythee Strato, stay thou by thy lord,
Thou art a fellow of a good respect:
Thy life hath had some smatch of honor in it.
Shakespeare. Julius Cæsar, Act v. sc. 5.

Allowing his description therein to retain and smatche of veritie.—Banister. Hist. of Man, (1578,) p. 22.

We give some Latin, and a smatch of Greek;
Teach him to fence and figure twice a week;
And having done, we think, the best we can,
Praise his proficiency, and dub him man.
Cowper. Progress of Error.

SMA'TTER, n. } Skinner thinks—so written SMA'TTER, v. } q. d. Smacker, (rather SMA'TTERER. } Smatcher. See SMATCH.) SMA'TTERING, n. } He that has a smattering of learning, qui primoribus tantum labiis literas degustavit. And—

To smack, to taste, to savour; to have a mere taste, a slight taste or savour; to act, to employ, slightly or superficially.

For I abhor to smatter
Of one so deuillyshe a matter
But I will make further relation.
Skelton. Why come ye not to Court?

But in the parties themselves, these two causes I conceive of Atheism, I. More abundance of wit than judgment, and of witty and judicious learning, whereby they are more inclined to contradict any thing, than willing to be informed of the truth. They are not therefore men of sound learning for the most, but smatterers.—Cranmer's Letter unto Hooker.

That as for my parts, they were such as he saw;
That, indeed, I had a small smatt'ring of law,
Which I lately had got more by practice and reading,
By sitting o' th' bench, whilst others were pleading.
Cotton. A Voyage to Ireland, c. 2.

The small time I supervis'd the glass-house, I got among those Venetians some smatterings of the Italian tongue.
Howell, b. i. Let. 3.

But being a virtuoso, able
To smatter, quack, and cant, and dabble,
He held his talent most adroit,
For any mystical exploit.—Hudibras, pt. iii. c. 1.

For all other sciences, they were in a manner extinguished during the course of this [Assyrian] empire, excepting only a smatter of judicial astrology, by which, under the name of Chaldeans, some of that race long amused ignorant and credulous people.
Sir W. Temple. Of Ancient & Modern Learning.

Others, that they may seem universally knowing, get a little smattering in every thing.
Locke. Hum. Underst. vol. ii. p. 350.

SMEAR, v. } See BESMEAR.
SMEAR, n. } Smergh, in Scotch, is marrow:
SME'ARY. } and A. S. Smere, any kind of fat, greasy substance. (See Jamieson.) Dut. Smeeren; Ger. Schmierer; Sw. Smörja; A. S. Smer-an;
ungere, linere, illinere;—

To cover or rub over with any greasy, slimy, dirty matter. To soil, to daub.
Smear, n. is not unusual.

Her shone smered with talow.—Skelton. Elinour Rummung.

And Lancashire, not as the least I ween,
Thoro' three crowns three arrows smeared with blood.
Drayton. The Battle of Agincourt, p. 10.

But if that honest licence now you take,
If into rogues omnipotent you rake,
Death is your doom, impal'd upon a stake;
Smeared o'er with wax, and set on blaze, to light
The streets, and make a dreadful fire by night.
Dryden. Juvenal, Sat. 3.

The smeary wax the brightening blaze supplies,
And wavy fires from pitchy planks arise.
Rowe. Lucan. Pharsalia, b. iii.

SMELL, v. } This word has not been satis-SMELL, n. } factorily traced to its origin. In SME'LLER. } A. S.—Smell, the sense of smell- SME'LLING, n. } ing, is Swæc, a word which also denoted, taste. Minshew derived it from the Ger.
Schmeicken; A. S. Smæcc-an, to smack; and he did so, rashly as Skinner thought, and as he thought himself, it may be supposed, from the omission in his second edition. It may however be remarked, that the Ger. Schmeicken denotes both taste and smell: that taste is not the mere touch of the organs of tasting, nor smell of the organs of smelling; and that, from this coincidence, the word applied to the one may have owed its appropriation to the other. It is only to suppose smæc-lian, or smæglian, a diminutive of smæccan, and the word—by dropping the guttural—is formed.
To smell, (see the quotation from Locke.)

To have or cause to have sensations or feelings by the nose, through the medium of air.

To have or cause to have an odour, a scent.

To scent, to savour,—to scent, to trace, discern by the scent.

Ge seggeth soth by my soule quath ich. ich have seyen hit ofte
Her smyt no thyng so smerte. ne smelleth so foule
As shame.
Piers Plouhman, p. 228.

And thei tooken the bodi of Jhesus and bounden it in lynnun clothis with swete smellynge oynementis, as it is the custom to iewis for to byrie.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 19.

There saw I eke the fresh hauthorne
In white motley, that so swote doth smell.
Chaucer. The Complaint of the Black Knight.

The flourie yere yeldeth swete smelles, in the first sommer season warmynge.—Id. Boecius, b. iv.

Toward the golde he [Fabricius] gan him drawe,
Wherof [golde] in all menes loke
Parte vp in his honde he toke,
Whiche to his mouth in all haste
He put it for to smelle and taste,
And to his eie, and to his ere:
But he ne founde no comforte there.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

And, all within, it full of wyndings is
And hidden wayes, that scarce an hound by smell
Can follow out those false footsteps of his.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 9.

— Such nasty smellers,
That if they'd been unfurnish'd of club-truncheons,
They might have cudgell'd me with their very stinks,
It was so strong and sturdy.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Nice Valour, Act v. sc. 1.

But the milde ayre with season moderate
Gently attempred, and disposd so well,
That still it breathed forth sweet spirit and holesom smell.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

Smelling is another sense, that seems to be wrought on by bodies at a distance; though that which immediately affects the organ, and produces in us the sensation of any smell, are effluvia, or invisible particles, that coming from bodies at a distance, immediately affect the olfactory nerves.

Locke. Elements of Natural Philosophy, c. 11.

All the smell of plants, and of other bodies, is caused by these volatile parts, and is smelled wherever they are scattered in the air; and the acuteness of smell in some animals, shews us, that these effluvia spread far, and must be incon-ceivably subtle.—Reid. On the Human Mind, c. 2. s. 1.

They could not be far off, as we smelled the smoke of fire, though we did not see it.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 4.

SMELT, v. } Dut. Schmelten; Ger. Schmel- SME'LT. } zen; Sw. Smelta; A. S. Melt-an, milt-an, to melt.

To reduce to a liquid or fluid state: usually applied to the melting of ores.

What tools are used in smelling, their figures, use, &c. and the whole manner of working?—Boyle. Works, vol. v. p. 741.

The smellers come up to the assayers.
Woodward. On Fossils.

Having too much water, many corns will smilt, or have their pulp turned into a substance like thick cream.

Mortimer.
The miner, the builder of the furnace for smelling the ore, the feller of the timber, the burner of the charcoal to be made use of in the smelting-house, the brick-maker, the brick-layer, the workmen who attend the furnace, the millwright, the forger, the smith, must all of them join their different arts in order to produce them.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 1.

SMERK, or } A. S. Smerc-ian, subridere,
SMIRK, v. } arridere,—to smile; to smerke,
SMIRK, n. } Somner. (See MERRY.) Sua-SMIRK, adj. } viter et cum leni susurro ridere,
(Junius),—

To smile sweetly, and with a gentle or slight murmur,—affectedly, conceitedly;—as if to gain or show favour or admiration.

Which granted so, and held deserued due,
I may full well on stage supplie the place a while,
Till I haue plainly laid before your view
That I haue cause, as these; to plaine of fortune's guile, Which smirking through at first, she seeme to smooth and smile.—Mirror for Magistrates, p. 477.

So thou maist, with thy past'rall minstralsy,
Beating the aire, atweene resounding hills,
Draw to thee bonibels as smirke, as hy,
And wrap hem in thy love begrey their wils.
Browne. Yonge Willie & Old Wernock.

Cud. Seest how brag yond bullocke beares,
So smirke, so smoothe, his pricked eares?
Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender. Februarie.

Gay rainbow silks her mellow charms infold,
And nought of Lyce but herself is old,
Her grizzled locks assume a smirking grace,
And art has leuell'd her deep furrow'd face.
Young. Love of Fame, Sat. 5.

Oh! torture me not, for love's sake,
With the smirk of those delicate lips,
With that head's dear significant shake,
And the toss of the hoop and the hips.—Jenyns. A Song.

SMICKER, adj. } A. S. Smicre, elegant, SMICKERING, n. } trimme, gallant, pretty, SMICKLY. } smugg; well or cunningly wrought or contrived, (Somner.) Mr. Gifford says, "smickly is—finically, effeminately." We should now perhaps say—smugly. Smickering (in Dryden) seems to be—a smack, or taste for.

Regardful of his honour he forsook
The smicker use of court humanity.
Ford. Fame's Memorial, v. 574.

Ray. Shall I be brave, then?
Hum. Golden as the sun.
Ray. What's he that looks so smickly.
Id. The Sun's Darling, Act ii. sc. 1.

We had a young doctour, who rode by our coach, and seem'd to have a smickering to our young lady of Pilton, and ever rode before to get dinner in a readiness.
Dryden. To Mrs. Steward, Let. 35.

SMI

SMIDDY, i. e. Smithy. See SMITH.

His pate is his anvil, the forge his study; so as I may properly apply those antient verses, upon this occasion, to our truant chanterman:

That scholar well deserves a widdie,
Who makes his study of a smiddie.

Comment. on Chaucer, (1665,) p. 50.

SMIGHT. See SMITE.

SMILE, v. } Dut. Smuylen; Ger. Schmol- SMILE, n. } len; Sw. Smäla. The origin SMILER. } of this word is perhaps the SMILINGLY. } A. S. Smæl, exilis, gracilis.
SMILINGNESS. } Smelt or smilt, (past part. of the lost verb,) tenuis, mitis, blandus, serenus.
Smylt or smolt wæder, (Dut. Smo'el weder.)
weather,—when the sky is clear and without wind, (Somner.) See the quotations from Chaucer, Phaer, and Dryden. To smile—

To move, to contract the features, about the mouth especially, from some feelings of pleasure or self-satisfaction; to look favourably or kindly, to favour, be favourable or propitious to.

This miller smiled at his nicetee,
And thought, all this n'is don but for a wile.
They wenen that no man may hem begile,
But by my thrift yet shal I blere his eie,
For all the sleighte in his philosophie.

Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 3974.

It is of Loue, as of Fortune,
That chaungeth oft, and nill contune,
Which whylome wolle of folke smile,
And glombe on hem another while.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

The smiler with the knif under the cloke.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2001.

For as I thought, that smiling sign
Was token, that the herte encline
Would to requests reasonable,
Because smiling is favorable
To euery thing that shall thriue.—Id. Dreame.

A softe paas thei daunce and trede,
And with the women otherwhile
With sobre chere awonge thei smile.
For laughter was there none on hie.—Gower. Con. A. b. viii.

The maker of the gods and men to her all sweetely
smiles,
With countenance such as from the skies ye stormes & clouds exiles. Phaer. Virgill. Aeneidos, b. i.

And eke the gentle shepheard swaynes, which sat
Keeping their fleecy flockes as they were hyr'd,
She sweetly heard complaine both how and what
Her sonne had to them doen; yet she did smile thereat.
Spenser. The Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 6.

And her against sweet Cherefulness was placed,
Whose eyes, like twinkling stars in evening cleare,
Were deckt with smiles that all sad humors chased,
And darted forth delights the which her goodly graced.
Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 10.

She seeing mine eyes still on her were,
Soon, smilingly, quoth she,
"Sirrah! look to your rudder there,
Why lookst thou thus at me?"

Drayton. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 7.

The philosopher [Socrates] having been silent all the while, smilingly said, I thought after so much thunder we should have rain.—Howell, b. i. Let. 9.

Begin auspicious boy, to cast about Thy infant eyes, and, with a smile, thy mother single out;
Thy mother well deserves that short delight,
The nauseous qualms of ten long months and travail to requite.

Then smile; the frowning infant's doom is read,
No god shall crown the board, nor goddess bless the bed.
Dryden. Virgil, Past. 4.

Thus pencils can with one slight touch restore Smiles to that changed face that wept before.
Id. Astræa Reduc.

Ev'n children follow'd, with endearing wile,
And pluck'd his gown, to share the good man's smile;
His ready smile a parent's warmth exprest,
Their welfare pleas'd him, and their cares distrest.
Goldsmith. The Deserted Village.

The very knowledge that he lived in vain,
That all was over on this side the tomb,
Had made despair a smilingness assume.
Byron. Child Harold's Pilgrimage, s. 16. c. 3.

SMILT. See SMELT.

SMIRCH is, perhaps, Smutch'd or Smudy'd.

Cel. I'll put my selfe in poore and meane attire,
And with a kinde of vंबर smirch my face.
Shakespeare. As You Like It, Act i. sc. 3.

SMI

Th' ascent is easy, and the prospect clear.
From the smirch'd scullion to th' embroider'd peer.

Smollett. Advice.

SMITE, v. } Dut. Smyten; Ger. Schmeissen; SMITER. } Sw. Smita; A. S. Smitan, ferire, SMITING, n. } percudere, (mitt-ere.)
To strike,—to beat, to give a blow; to afflict.

Myd god herte he wende forth to smyte this bataille.
R. Gloucester, p. 55.

Hii bysegede vaste the toun, so that the thrydde day
The Crystene ost smot hym.—Id. p. 403.

Thei com Philip so nere, that he cried, "tak the kyng," Bot non so hardi were, to smyte him for no thing.
R. Brunne, p. 203.

Edward did smyte rounde peny, halspeny, ferthyng,
The croice passed the bounde of alle thorghout the ryng.
Id. p. 238.

Batailles shulle never eft be. ne man bere eg tool
And yf eny man smythen hit. be smyte th' w' to dethe.
Piers Plouhman, p. 62.

And thei that weren aboute him, and sighen that was to come seiden to him, Lord wher we smytun with swerd?
And oon of hem smoot the seruauant of the prince of prestis and kittide of his right eere.—Wiclif. Luk. c. 22.

When they whiche were about him sawe what woulde folow, they said vnto him: Lorde, shall we smyte wyth swearde. And one of them smote a seruante of the hyst priest of all, & smote of his rygt eare.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And lo oon of hem that weren with Jhesus streyghte out of his honde and drough out his swerd and he smote the seruauant of the prince of prestis, and kitte of his eere.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 26.

And behold, one of them which were wyth Jesus, stretched out his hande and drewe his swerde, and stroke a ser-uauant of the hie priest, and smote of his eare.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

A techere, not ghoun mych to wyn, not a smyler but temperat.—Wiclif. 1 Tym. c. 3.

How gret a sorwe suffereth now Arcite?
The deth he feleth thurgh his herte smite;
He wepeth, wailleth, crieth pitously.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1151.

And on the nose he smote him with his fist;
Doun ran the bloody streme upon his brest.
Id. The Reves Tale, v. 4203.

For if the wolfe come in the waie
Their gostly staffe is then awaie,
Wherof thei shuld their flocke defende.
But if the poure shepe offende
In any thyng, though it be lite,
Thei ben all ready for to smite.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

And when I called, no man gaue me answere, was my nande clane smitten of, that it myghte not helpe? Or had I not power to delyuer.—Bible, 1551. Esaye, c. 50.

The Lorde God hathe opened myne eare, therefore can I not say nay: nor withdrawe my selfe, but I offer my back vnto the smiters, and my chekes to the nippers.—Id. Ib.

Suddeinly an innumerable flight
Of harmefull fowles about them fluttering cride,
And with their wicked winges them ofte did smight,
And sore annoyed, groping in that griesly night.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

— Till Satan, who that day
Prodigious power had shewn, and met in armes
No equal, rauning through the dire attack
Of fighting seraphim confus'd, at length
Saw where the sword of Michael smote, and fell'd Squadrons at once. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vi.

So the workeman comforted the founder, and hee that smote with the hammer, him that smote by course, saying,
It is readie for the sodering, and he fastened it with nailles that it should not be moued.—Bible, 1583. Isaiah, xli. 7.

— Yet not the more
Cease I to wander where the muses haunt
Cleer spring, or shady grove, or sunnie hill,
Smit with the love of sacred song.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

— And the torrid climate
Smote on him sore besides, vaulted with fire.—Id. Ib. b. i.

If, like Moses' rod, it turns us into serpents, and that we repent not, but grow more devils; yet then it turns into a rod again, and finishes up the smiting, or the first designed affliction.—Bp. Taylor, vol. ii. Ser. 12.

One hand her bosom smiles; in one appears
The lifted lawn, that drinks her falling tears.
Savage. The Wanderer, c. 2.

— Breath'd hot,
From all the boundless furnace of the sky,
And the wide glittering waste of burning sand,
A suffocating wind the pilgrim smiles
With instant death.
Thomson. Summer

SMO

All that secret regret, and those inward smilings, laniatus et ictus, which are so often felt in the minds of men, upon the commission of any great sin, do argue some common intimations, even in the light of nature, of another judgment after this life, wherein they shall be accountable for such actions as men do not punish or take notice of.
Wilkins. Of Natural Religion, b. i. c. 11.

Smit with the glorious avarice of fame,
He claims no less than an immortal name.

Mason. Art of Painting, v. 683.

SMITH, n. } A. S. Smith, smith-ian; Dut.
SMITH, v. } Smid; Ger. Schmid, schmid-en; SMITHERY. } Sw. Smed, smed-a,—one who SMITHY, or } smit-eth, (sc.) with a hammer, &c.
SMIDDY. } Tooke observes that this name was given to all who smote with the hammer.
(See CARPENTER, and Tooke, ii. 414, Svo. ed.
Note by the Editor.) In Isaiah, xli. 7, our version has—"The carpenter encouraged the goldsmith."
The Bible, 1551, reads—"The smythe confortd
the moulder."

[He] shal be demed to the deth. bote yf he do hit smythie
In to sykkel oth' into sithe. to shar oth' to culter.

Piers Plouhman, p. 61.

A softe pas he went him over the strete
Until a smith, men callen Dan Gerveis,
That in his forge smithed plow-harneis;
He sharpeth share and culter besily.

Chaucer. The Milleres Tale, v. 3687.

There were also of Martes division,
The armerer, and the bowyer, and the smith,
That forgeth sharpe swerdes on his stith.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 20,026.

The god of fire, whiche Vulcanus
It hote, and hath a crafte forth with Assigned for to be the smith
Of Jupiter.

Gower. Con. A. b. v.

Your borrowed meane to moue your mone, of fume with-outen flame,
Being fet from smithy smoaking coale, ye seeme so by the same
To shew is what such coals use, taught by such as have assayde.—Ans. to the Complaint of a Hot Woer, &c.

For as the smith with hammour beats
His forged mettall, so
He dubs his club about their pates
And sleas them on a row.

Warner. Albion's England, b. ii. c. 7.

His blazing locks sent forth a crackling sound,
And hiss'd like red hot ir'n within the smithy down'd.
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. xii.

It is impossible to separate so entirely the business of the grazier from that of the corn-farmer, as the trade of the carpenter is commonly separated from that of the smith.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 1.

The din of all this smithery may some time or other possibly wake this noble duke, and push him to an endeavour to save some little matter from their experimental philosophy.—Burke. A Letter to a Noble Lord.

SMOCK. } A. S. Smoc,—now applied SMOCKLESS. } (though not exclusively) to the simple under-dress of a female,—seems formerly to have been an article of more importance, and may be from the A. S. Smicre; Dut. Smuck; Ger. Schmuck; Sw. Smuck, ornatus, dressed, adorned. Piers Plouhman opposes it to hair,
(i. e. a hair-shirt.) Chaucer speaks of it as wrought with silk. See SMUG.

Hue sholde unsywe hure smok. and sette ther an heire
To afaiten hure flesch. that fers was to synne.

Piers Plouhman, p. 87.

For through her smocke wrought with silke,
The flesh was seene as white as milke.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

"Naked out of my fadres hous" (quod she)
"I came, and naked I mote turne againe.
All your plesance wolde I folwe fain:
But yet I hope it be not your entent,
That I smokles out of your paleis went."

Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8684.

Tho casten thei, that he and shee,
Footthe with their children on the morowe,
As thei that were full of sorowe,
All naked but of smocke and sherte,
To tendre with the kynges herte,
His grace shuld go to seche,
And pardon of the death beseche.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

On th' other side they saw the warlike mayd
Al in her snow-white smocke, with locks unboun'd, Threatning the point of her avenging blade.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 1.

In which house [Serrani] this order was precisely kept, That there was not a woman among them knowne to weare any linnen about her, not so much as in a smocke next her bare skin.—Holland. Plinie, b. xix. c. 1.

They [a pair of drawers] are of a thin rose-coloured damask, brocaded with silver flowers. My shoes are of white kid leather, embroidered with gold. Over this hangs my smocke of a fine white silk gauze, edged with embroidery. Lady Montague, Let. 29.

Old chiefs, reflecting on their former deeds,
Disdain to rust with batter'd invalids;
But active in the foremost ranks appear,
And leave young smock-fac'd beaux to guard the rear.
Fenton. Prologue to Southerne's Spartan Dame.

SMOKE, v. } Dut. Smooch, smuyck, smoken, SMOKE, n. } smook-en, smuycken; A. S. Smic- SMO'KER. } an, fum-are, evaporare;— SMO'KELESS. } To evaporate, to exhale, to SMO'KING, n. } reek; to cause an exhalation, a SMO'KY. } cloud, a fume; to fume, to fumigate; and, consequentially, applied to express a rapidity of motion; causing the exhalation of heat; a discovery, a perception of first symptoms, (as smoke of latent fire.)

To smoke a person,—is nearly equivalent to—
To roast him.

To see his hidden purposes; also to—
Smoker is a common word.

And sette agen the Cristenemen afure in ech ende,
That the smoke ther of hem ssold bothe stenche & blende.
R. Gloucester, p. 407.

A bresid reed he schal not breke, and he schal not quench smokyng flex til he caste out doom to victorie.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 12.

And a smoke of the pitt stighide up as the smoke of a greet furneis.—Id. Apocalips, c. 9.

And there arose the smok of a great fornace.
Bible, 1551. Id.

The vnstable mountaigne that hight Uesenus, writheth out through his broken chimeneis, smokyng fires.
Chaucer. Boecius, b. i.

The bente Mone with her hornes all pale,
Saturnus and Jove, in Cancro ioyned were,
That such a raine from Heven gan availe,
That every maner woman that was there,
Had of that smoky raine a very feere.
Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

He was first smoak'd by the old Lord Lafew,—when his disguise, and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall finde him.—Shakes. All's Well that ends Well, Act iii. sc. 6.

It was a vault ybuilt for great dispence,
With many raunges reard along the wall,
And one great chimney, whose long tonnell thence
The smoke forth threw.—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

This is that pernicious smoake which sullyes all her glory, superinducing a sooty crust or furr upon all that it lights, spoyling the moveables, tarnishing the plate, gildings, and furniture, and corroding the very iron bars and hardest stones with those piercing and acrimonious spirits which accompany its sulphure.—Evelyn. Fumifugium.

Thear, couring ore two sticks a-crosse,
Burnt at a smoakie stocke,
They chat how young-men them in youth,
And they did young-men mocke.
Warner. Albion's England, b. ix. c. 47.

I know not whether you took notice of the smoke-jack in my brother's kitchen-chimney, which has been there I have heard near a hundred years, and has seldom stood still from its first setting up, night or day; it makes very little noise, needs no winding up, and for that preferable to the more noisy inventions.—Evelyn. To Aubrey, Feb. 1675.

The Volcan may easily be known, because there is not any other so high a mountain near it, neither is there any that appears in the like form all along the coast; besides it smoaks all the day, and in the night it sometimes sends forth flames of fire.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1684.

The public scribe or registry of the university that now was, being given more to bibbing and smoaking than the duty of his office, many learned and valiant persons are omitted by him.—Wood. Fasti Oxon. vol. ii.

Tinsel. Thou'rt very smart, my dear. But see! Smoke
the Doctor.—Addison. The Drummer, Act iii. sc. 1.

Next Aventinus drives his chariot round
The Latian plains, with palms and laurels crown'd:
Proud of his steeds he smoaks along the field.
Dryden. Virgil. Æneid, b. vii.

No rafter'd roofs with dance and tabor sound,
No noontide bell invites the country round:
Tenants with sighs the smoakless towers survey,
And turn'd th' unwilling steeds another way.
Pope. To Lord Bathurst, Epis. 3.

We went by the way of one of those hot smoking places before mentioned, and dug a hole in the hottest part; and the mercury presently rose to 1000.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 9.

SMOOR, or } Dut. Smoooren; A. S. Smoran, SMORE. } to smother. See SMOULDER.

So he wrapped them and entangled them, keeping down by force the fetherbed and pillows hard vnto their mouthes, that within a while smored and stifled, theyr breath failing,
thei gaue vp to God their innocent soules into the ioyes of heauē.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 68.

SMOOT. See SMUT.

SMOOTH, v. } A. S. Smooth, from Smeth-ian, SMOOTH, n. } planare, æquare; to make SMOOTH, adj. } plain or even:—perhaps by SMO'OTHER, v. } smiting, or beating flat. See SMO'OTHER. } the quotation from Isaiah.
SMO'OTHLY. } To make plain or even, to SMO'OTHERNESS. } flatten, to level, to polish; to move evenly, to glide, to flow; to level or remove roughness, harshness, difficulty; to ease, to mitigate, to mollify.

The abbey of Redynges, & of Cyrencestre al so,
Hil rerde vorst of smethe grounde, & gut mo therto.
R. Gloucester, p. 424.

Her fleshe tender as is a chicke
With bente browes, smooth and sliche.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

Beholde, Esau my brother is roughe, and I am smooth.
Bible, 1551. Gen. c. 27.

And she put ye skynnes vpon his handes & upon the smothe of his neck.—Id. Ib.

Some other thinke, the mettall maketh all,
Which tempred is both rounde and smooth to see.
Gascoigne. Vpon the Fruite of Fetters.

The fore castel of my ship
Shall glide and smothely slip
Out of the waues wode
Of the stormye floude.
Skelton. Colin Clout's come Home again.

So the carpenter encouraged the goldsmith, and he that smootheth with the hammer, him that smote the anvil, saying, it is ready for the sodering; and he fastned it with nails, that it should not be moved.—[In Bible, 1551, "The ironsmyth confortd the hammerman." In 1583, "Hee that smote with the hammer, him that smote by course."] Bible. Isaiah, xli. 7.

For though we live amongst the tongues of praise,
And troops of smoothing people, that collaud
All that we do.—Daniel. To Lady Anne Clifford.

—Such smiling rogues as these,
Like rats oft bite the holy cords atwaine,
Which are t' intrince t' vnloose; smooth euery passion
That in the natures of their lords rebell.
Shakespeare. Lear, Act ii. sc. 2.

For in this smoothing age who durst indite
Hath made his pen an hired parasite,
To claw the back of him that beastly lives,
And pranck base men in proud superlatives.
Bp. Hall. Sat. Prol.

Come my fair girls, let's see, what will you buy?
Here be fine night-masks, plaster'd well within,
To supple wrinkles, and to smooth the skin.
Drayton. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 7.

How sweetly did they flote upon the wings
Of silence, through the empty-vaulted night,
At euery fall smoothing the raven down
Of darkness 'till it smiled. Milton. Comus.

And on the top of all, that passers by Might it behold, the toomb he did provide
Of smoothest marble stone in order set,
That never might his luckie scape forget.
Spenser. Virgil's Gnat.

The British language, which our vowels wants,
And jars so much upon harsh consonants,
Comes with such grace from thy mellifluous tongue,
As do the sweet notes of a well-set song,
And runs as smoothly from those lips of thine,
As the pure Tuscan from the Florentine.
Drayton. Q. Catharine to Owen Tudor.

Ne any lake, that seems most still and slowe,
Ne poole so small, that can his smoothnesse holde
When any winde doth under heaven blowe.
Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 7.

How soon a beauteous mind repairs
The loss of chang'd or falling hairs;
How wit and virtue from within
Send out a smoothness o'er the skin.
Swift. To Dr. Sheridan.

How many different trades are employed in each branch of the linen and woollen manufactures, from the growers of the flax and the wool, to the bleachers and smoothers of the linen or to the dyers and dressers of the cloth?
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 1.

Among these they were distinguished by the name of Scalds, a word which denotes " Smoothers, and polishers of language."—Percy. On Ancient Minstrels.

The ship is wafted on with gentle gales,
And o'er the calm Ionian smoothly sails.
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. xv.

The smoothness of the sea sufficiently convinced us that we were surrounded by them, [low overflowed isles,] and how necessary it was to proceed with the utmost caution, especially in the night.—Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 9.

SMO'THER, v. } Dut. Smoooren; A. S. Smor-
SMO'THER, n. } an, to smudder or smother.

To suffocate, to stifle; to choak; to keep or restrain from issuing forth, to suppress.

She smothered with so monstrous a weight, did sink down under it to the earth.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

They yeeld a distinction and varietie in our words, cutting and hewing them thicke and short, framing them pleasant, plaine, and readie, drawing them out at length, or smuddering and drowning them in the end.
Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 16.

Orl. I rest much bounden to you; fare you well.
Thus must I from the smoake into the smother,
From tyrant duke vnto a tyrant brother.
Shakespeare. As You Like It, Act i. sc. 2.

There is nothing makes a man suspect much, more than to know little; and therefore men should remedy suspicion, by procuring to know more, and not to keep their suspicions in smother.—Bacon. Ess. Of Suspicion.

But there is a more fiery sort of zeal, and more dangerous than this; which may lie smothering for a time till it meets with suitable matter and a freer vent, and then it breaks out into a dreadfull flame.—Stillington. vol. ii. Ser. 6.

SMO'ULDER, v. } Smoulder, smouder, smoo- SMO'ULDER, n. } der, smudder, smother, seem SMO'ULDRY. } to be merely different ways of writing the same word; from the A. S. Smoran, to smoor or smore, (qv.) Sir T. More writes Smowder; Jewell—Smooder; Holland—Smudder.
Smoulder seems now commonly applied to—

The smother of smoke arising from any thing heated or on fire.

Mine eyes can neyther quenche the cole,
which warmes my heart in all this haste.
Nor yet my fancie make such flame,
that I may smoulder in the same.
Gascoigne. Dan Bartholomew of Bathe.

And yt is yt thig yt Paule signifieth by the wood, hay, and strawe, of which the tone is a light flame sone ended, the tother smowdreth much lenger, and the third is hottest and endureth longest.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 321.

Now the sonne is vp; your smooder is scattered. God with his truthe wil haue the victorie.
Jewell. Answer to M. Hardinge.

The powder sendes his smoke into the cruddy skies,
The smoulder stops our nose with stench, the fume offends our eies.
Gascoigne. Deuise of a Maske for Viscount Mountacute.

They preassed forward vnder their ensignes, bearing downe such as stooode in their way, and with their owne fire smouldered and burnt them to ashes.
Holinshed. Historie of England, b. iv. c. 9.

A great number of them falling with their horssees and armour into a blind ditch (shadowed with reed and sedges which grew therein) were smouldered and pressed to death.
Id. Ib. b. viii. c. 11.

With such a horrid clang
As on mount Sinai rang,
While the red fire, and smouldring clouds out brake.
Milton. Ode 17.

—The heavens it doth fill
With thundering noyse, and all the ayre doth choke,
That none can breath, nor see, nor heare at will,
Through smouldry cloud of duskish stincking smoke.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 7.

Or, by the holy butcher if he fell,
Th' inspected entrails could no fates foretel:
Nor, laid on altars, did pure flames arise;
But clouds of smouldering smoke forbade the sacrifice.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iii.

—Such—but envious time
Forbids the muse to these fair scenes to rove,
Still minding her of her unfinish'd theme,
From russet heaths, and smould'ring furnaces,
To trace the progress of thy steely arts.
Jago. Edge-Hill, b. iii.

SMUDGE, v. } Formed upon the n. smut, SMUTCH, v. } (qv.) Smutchin, (in Howell),
SMUTCHIN. } so called from its dirtiness.
To smear or stain with dirt or filth.

But rather wish the beauty of the mind
Which neither time can alter, sickness change,
Violence deface, nor the blacke hand of envy
Smudge and disgrace, or spoile or make deformed.
A Pleasant Conceited Comedy, (1608.)

— What? has't smutch'd thy nose?
They say it is a copy out of mine.
Shakespeare. The Winter's Tale, Act i. sc. 2.

One shall commonly see the serving maid upon the washing-block, and the swain upon the plough-share, when they are tir'd with labour take out their boxes of smutchin and draw it into their nostrils with a quill, and it will beget new spirits in them with a fresh vigor to fall to their work again.
Howell, b. iii. Let. 7.

Praise from the rivell'd lips of toothless bald
Decrepitude, and in the looks of lean
And craving Poverty, and in the bow Respectful of the smutch'd artificer,
Is oft too welcome, and may much disturb
The bias of the purpose.
Cowper. Task, b. ii.

His milk white hand; the palm is hardly clean—
But here and there an ugly smutch appears.
Foh! 'twas a bribe that left it; he has touch'd Corruption.
Id. Ib. b. iv.

SMUG, n. } Dut. Smuck, smucken; Ger.
SMUG, v. } Schmuck, schmucken; Sw. Smuck, SMUGGLY. } smyka, ornatus, ornare. "Smug is the past part. of smag-an, smeag-an, deliberare, studere, considerare. Applied to the person or to dress, it means studied; that on which care and attention have been bestowed," (Tooke.)

Studiously nice or neat; studiously or carefully dressed.

I could have brought a noble regiment
Of smugskinnde nunnies into my country soyle.
Gascoigne. Voyage into Hollande, an. 1572.

Thus said he smugg'd his beard, and stroked up fair.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 21.

— But meane time, my men,
In Circes house, were all in seuerall baine
Studiously sweetn'd, smugd with oil, and deckt
With, in, and outweeds; and a feast secret Seru'd in before them.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. x.

No sooner doth a young man see his sweet-heart comming, but he smugges up himselfe, puls up his cloake, now false about his shoulders, ties his garters, points, sets his band, cuffs, sticks his haire, twines his beard, &c.
Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 530.

Stir her against ye in whose hand your life lies?
More than your life, your honour? what smug Amazon
Was that I brought you?
Beaum. & Fletch. The Lover's Progress, Act iii. sc. i.

Jul. Would I were nearer to him,
A young smug handsom holines has no fellow.
Id. The Pilgrim, Act i. sc. 2.

Lilies and roses will quickly appear,
And her face will look wond'rous smuggly.
Gay. Beggar's Opera, Act i. sc. i.

SMUGGLE, v. } Dut. Smokkelen, smokke- SMUGGLER. } laar, from A. S. Smug-an, SMUGGLING, n. } serpere; to creep by little and little, (Somner.)

To creep in, to steal in; to act by stealth; silly or insidiously, with a view to escape detection.

We might there find proofs of his perfidious behaviour, and perhaps at the same time discover the secret of his smuggling correspondence with his neighbouring governors, and the Spanyards of Buenos Ayres.
Anson. Voyages, b. i. c. 5.

In order to discourage the practice of smuggling, and prevent the desperadoes concerned therein from enlisting in the service of the enemy, a law was passed, enacting that every person who had been, before the first of May in the present year, guilty of illegal running, &c.
Smollett. History of England. Geo. II. (1757.) § 34.

Smuggling, or the offence of importing goods without paying the duties imposed thereon by the laws of the customs and excise, is an offence generally connected and carried on in hand with the former [Owling].
Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 12.

And I had the greatest reason to believe that not a single article was smuggled by any of our people who were admitted on shore, though many artful means were used to tempt them.—Cook. First Voyages, b. i. c. 2.

The most hazardous of all trades, that of a smuggler, though, when the adventure succeeds, it is likewise the most profitable, is the infallible road to bankruptcy.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 10.

SMUT, v. } Dut. Smetten, besmetten; Ger.
SMUT, n. } Schmitzen; Sw. Smitta; A. S.
SMUTTING, n. } Smittan, besmittan, polluere, SMUTTY. } maculare, inficere;—
SMUTTILY. } To defile, to dirty, to smear SMUTTINESS. } or stain with dirt or filth; to pollute, to contaminate.

Smut in corn,—a disease showing itself by a dirty blackness.

Ye Acherusian fens, to mine resign your glory,
Both that which lies within the goodly territory
Of Naples, as that fen Thesposia's earth upon,
Whence that infernal flood, the smutted Acheron
Shoves forth her sullen head.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 25.

I think Clotho had her fingers smutted in snuffing the candle, when she begun to spin the thread of her life, and Lachesis frown'd in twisting up.—Howell, b. ii. Let. 1.

Let me add, that, considering the sottishness of superstition in the age he [Henry of Huntington] lived in, he is less smoohted therewith than any of his contemporaries, and, being a secular priest, doth now and then abate the pride of monastical pretended perfection.
Fuller. Worthies. Huntingdonshire.

I am the rather confirmed in my hopes, because a help hath been found out against the smooting of wheat, at least wise in some good proportion; I say, the smooting of wheat which makes it a negro, as mildew makes it a dwarfe; viz.
by mingling the seeds with lyme, as your husbandmen will inform you.—Id. Ib. Middlesex.

Or at the ear of Eve, familiar toad,
Half froth, half venom, spits himself abroad,
In puns or politics, or tales, or lies,
Or spite, or smut, or rhymes, or blasphemies.
Pope. Prol. to Satires.

The steam of lamps still hanging on her cheeks,
In rosy smut.
Dryden. Juvenal, Sat. 6.

We only fear the beaux may think it hard,
To be to-night from smutty jests debar'd.
Congreve. Epilogue, p. 286.

It is the same poverty which makes men speak or write smuttily, that forces them to talk vexingly.—Tatler, No. 269.

I found my vines, peaches, apricots, and plums upon my best south-walls, and sometimes upon my west, apt for several years to a soot or smuttiness upon their leaves first, and then upon their fruits, which were good for nothing
the years they were so affected.
Sir W. Temple. On Gardening.

Let the grave sneer, sarcastic speak thee shrewd,
The smutty joke ridiculously lewd.—Smollett. Advice.

An untimely shower, or an unseasonable drought; a frost too long continued, or too suddenly broken up, with rain and tempest; the blight of the spring, or the smut of the harvest; will do more to cause the distress of the belly, than all the contrivances of all statesmen can do to relieve it.—Burke. On a Regicide Peace, Let. 3.

SNACK, i. e. Snatch; so much as is taken at a snatch,—a part or portion; a share.

Ask, for what price thy venal tongue was sold;
A rusty gammon of some sev'n years old:
Tough, wither'd treuffles: rosy wine, a dish
Of shotten herrings, or stale stinking fish.
For four times talking, if one piece thou take,
That must be cantled, and the judge go snack.
Dryden. Juvenal, Sat. 7.

Lintot, dull rogue! will think your price too much:
"Not, sir, if you revise it, and retouch."
All my demurs but double his attacks:
At last he whispers, "Do; and we go snacks."
Pope. Prol. to Satires, v. 63.

SNAFFLE, v. } Dut. Snavel; Ger. Schnebbe.
SNAFFLE, n. } The nose; that which sniffs or snaffles. Dryden renders the Lat. Capistrum, (a head stall,) by our English, snaffle.

A bridle, so called.
To snaffle,—(generally,) to bridle, to manage,
to guide.

The wordes of the prophete wel seruing for this purpose;
with a snaffle and a brydle hold harde my iaws O God, when I dooe not approche towards thee.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1366.

For hitherto slie writers willie wits
Which haue engrossed princes chiefe affaires, Haue been like horses snaffled with the bits
Of fancie, feare, or doubts.
Mirror for Magistrates, p. 395.

I [Makbeth] perceive this man [Makduffe] will neuer obeie
my commandements, 'till he be ridden with a snaffle.
Holinshed. Historie of Scotland. Duncane.

Lan. I may live to requite it, put a snaffle of sack in my mouth and then ride me very well.
Beaum. & Fletch. Wit without Money, Act v. sc. 1.

— As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit, in such another,
The third oth' world is yours, which with a snaffle,
You may pace easie, but not such a wife.
Shakespeare. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act ii. sc. 2.

Sooth him with praise, and make him understand
The loud applauses of his master's hand:
This from his weaning let him well be taught;
And then betimes in a soft snaffle wrought.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iii.

SNAG. } Perhaps snack, or snech; that SNA'GGY. } which we may snatch, catch or seize hold of; any thing jutting or projecting. Prior applies the word to the teeth.

Snaggy, in the North, Grose says, is tetchy, peevish. It is probably snatchy, apt to snatch or catch at. A snag,—
A short projection.

And yet the one her other legge had lame,
Which with a staffe all full of little snags
She did support, and Impotence her name.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 11.

— His stalking steps are stayde
Upon a snaggy oke, which he had torne
Out of his mothers bowelles, and it made
His mortall mace, wherewith his foemen he dismayde.
Id. Ib. b. i. c. 7.

In China none hold women sweet,
Except their snags are black as jett.—Prior. Alma, c. 2.

These plants [Ribes] produce their fruit upon the former year's wood, and also upon small snags which come out of the old wood, so that in pruning them, these snags should be preserved, and the young shoots shortened in proportion to their strength.—Miller. Gardener's Dictionary.

SNAIL, v. } A. S. Snæg-el, (or snakel), the SNAIL, n. } diminutive of snake, the past part.
of the A. S. Snic-an, to creep,— Met.—any creeping, slow, or sluggish being.

This [tobacco] lately grew in this county [Gloucestershire], but now may not. It was first planted about Wincheomb, and many got great estates thereby, notwithstanding the great care and cost in planting, re-planting, transplanting, watering, snailing.—Fuller. Worthies. Gloucestershire.

Bearing his pawn-laid hands upon his backe
As snails their shells, or pedlers do their packe.
Bp. Hall, b. iv. Sat. 2.

— Oh master Pompey, How is't man?
Clow. Snails, I'm almost starv'd with love, and cold and one thing or other.
Beaum. & Fletch. Wit at Several Weapons, Act v. sc. 1.

Yet when he had once enjoynd himself so hard a task,
he then considered the Greek proverb, that he must either eat the whole snail, or let it quite alone.
Dryden. Ded. to Juvenal.

It is a square place boarded in, and filled with a large quantity of large snails, that are esteemed excellent food when they are well dressed.—Addison. Italy. Switzerland.

SNAKE. } A. S. Snaca; Dut. Snake; from SNA'KY. } the A. S. Snic-an, serpere, to creep.
Snic-ende wyrme, reptile, a creeping worm, or the like, (Somner.)
It is equivalent to the Lat. Serpens, a serpent.

The throte of hem is an open sepulchre, with her tungls
thei didn gilefulli, the venym of snakis is under hir lippis.
Wiclif. Romaynes, c. 3.

All ye that ladies are of Lymbo Lake
With hissing haire, and snakie bush bedect,
Your beddes of steele and dankish dennes forsake.
Turberville. He sorrowes, &c.

Not sever'd from the shore, aloft where Chesil lifts
Her ridged snake-like sands, in wrecks and smould'ring drifts;
Which by the south-wind rais'd, are heav'd on little hills.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 2.

The crooked armes Meander bowd with his so snakie flood.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

Nor swelling streames of that God *snakie*paced,
Which hath so often with his overflowing Thee drenched.
Spenser. The Ruines of Rome.

Well, goe your way to her; (for I see loue hath made thee a tame snake.—Shakes. As You Like It, Act iv. sc. 3.

Thus, when Alcides rais'd his infant cry,
The snakes besieg'd his young divinity:
For vainly with their forked tongues they threat;
For opposition makes a hero great.

Dryden. Britannia Rediviva.

Wings on his heels were hung, and in his hand
He holds the virtue of the snake wand.

Addison. Ovid. Metam. b. i.

The ringed or common snake is the largest of the English serpents, sometimes exceeding four feet in length: the neck is slender; the middle of the body thickest; the back and sides covered with small scales, the belly with oblong, narrow, transverse plates.

Pennant. British Zoology. Reptiles.

SNAP, v. } Dut. Snappen; Ger. Schnappen; SNAP, n. } pen; Sw. Snappa, capture, SNA'PPER. } rapere, arripere, raptim pre-SNA'PPISH. } hendere. Wachter derives SNA'PPISHLY. } from Schnebbe, the beak of a SNA'PPISHNESS. } bird, with which it snaps or seizes its prey.

To catch or snatch at; to try to catch or seize;
to try or endeavour to bite; to be bitter or sharp.
To snap is also,—to make a sharp sound or noise.
To snap or knapp (qv.) asunder is,—to sunder sharply, shortly; to break sharply asunder.

Again, some of them promote false plaintes against honeste simple menne beefore their princes or capitaines, for none other purpose, sauing that a porcion of the parties goodes being seased as a forfaiture, may come to their snaphare in reward of their false accusation maliciously & slaundersouslye presented.—Udal. Luke, c. 3.

First, to make this realm a prey to all venturers, all spoiles, all snaphaunces, all forlorn hopes, all cormorants, all ravenors of the world, that will invade this realm.

Strype. Eccles. Memor. Hen. VIII. b. i. c. 44.

— And our tacklings

Snapping, like to too high-stretch'd treble strings.

Donne. The Storm.

As when a gentle greyhound set around

With little curs, which dare his way molest,

Snapping behind; soon as the angry hound,

Turning his course hath caught the busiest.

P. Fletcher. The Purple Island, c. 11.

Elder Lo. Come, come, you would know it; that's as good: but not a snap, never long for't, not a snap dear ladie.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Scornful Lady, Act iv. sc. 1.

Die. Take heed of a snap, sir, ha's a cozening countenance,

I do not like his way.

Id. The Spanish Curate, Act ii. sc. 1.

My father nam'd me Autolious, who being (as I am) lytter'd vnder Mercurie, was likewise a snapper-vp of vnconsidered trifles.

Shakespeare. The Winter's Tale, Act iv. sc. 2.

You charge me with malepertnes, in that I presume to chop logike with you being gouernour, by answering your snappish quid, with a knappish quo.

Holinshead. Description of Ireland, c. 6.

The companions that serued vnder the prince, had met with it by the way, and taken it from them that had the conueiance of it: he therefore required the prince to rid the realme of those snaphances.

Id. Historie of England. Edw. III. an. 1367.

Pen. Faith wholesome women will but spoil ye too,

For you are so us'd to snaphaunces.

Beaum. & Fletch. Women Pleas'd, Act iii. sc. 2.

Since the privateers and logwood-ships have sailed this way, these fisher-men are very shy, having been often snapp'd by them.—Dampier. Voyages, vol. ii. pt. ii. c. 1.

A village cur, of snappish race,

The pertest puppy of the place,

Imagin'd that his treble throat

Was blest with music's sweetest note.—Gay, Fab. 46.

Quoth Richard in jest, looking wistly at Nelly,

"Methinks, child, you seem something round in the belly."

Nell answer'd him snappishly, "How can that be,

When my husband has been more than two years at sea?"

Prior. A Sailor's Wife.

— For his [Adrastus] steeds,

Scouring the plain in terror, plung'd at length

Into a myrtle thicket, where detain'd

And struggling to escape, they snapp'd the pole

And with the splinter'd fragment flew to Troy.

Cowper. Homer. Iliad, b. vi.

Is Winter hideous in a garb like this?

Needs he the tragic fur, the smoke of lamps,

The pent-up breath of an unsav'ry throng,

To thaw him into feeling; or the smart

And snappish dialogue, that flippant wits

Call comedy, to prompt him with a smile?

Id. Task, b. iv.

He threatened with great snappishness, to flog me.

Wakefield. Mem. p. 23.

SNAR, i. e. SNARL, (qv.)

And some of tygres, that did seeme to gren
And snar at all that ever passed by.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 12.

SNARE, n. } Dut. Snoeren; Ger. Schnuren;
SNARE, v. } Sw. Snærja, vincire, legula vel SNA'RER. } laqueo constringere: and thus SNA'RY. } irretire, illaqueare,—

To catch or take by guile; to take in a net or noose; to allure, to seduce, to inveigle, to entrap, to surround or entangle by treachery or guile, by allurements or enticements.

And whanne he had cast forth the silver in the temple,
he passide forth and ghede and hangide himsilf with a snare.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 27.

The book sayth; 'While that thou kepest thy conseil in thin herte, thou kepest it in thy prison: and whan thou beureyest thy conseil to any wight, he holdeth thee in his snare?'—Chaucer. The Tale of Melibeus.

Also repent we neuer so much, be we neuer so well willyng vnto the law of God, yet are we so weake, and the *snar*es and occasiōs so innumerable, that we fall dayly and houerly.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 91.

The bodie's beauties that are thus expos'd,
Though both the sexes haunt together must,
(Nought can take fire, where fire is not enclos'd)
Shall neither snare, nor tempt the minde with lust.

Stirling. Domesday. The Twelfth Houe.

That had her eyes dispos'd their lookes to play,
The king had snared beene in loues strong lace,
But wayward beaultie doth not fancie moue,
A frowne forbids, a smile engendreth loue.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. ii. s. 20.

Into new woes unweeting I was cast
By this false faytor, who unworthie ware
His worthie shield, whom he with guilefull snare
Entrapped slew, and brought to shameful grave.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 4.

Never prate o'nt; nor, like a cunning snarer,
Make thy clipp'd name the bird to call it others.

Middleton's Witch, (before 1620.)

For I am young, a novice in the trade,
The fool of love, unpractic'd to persuade:
And want the soothing arts that catch the fair,
But, caught myself, lie struggling in the snare.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

Spiders in the vault their snary webs have spread.

Id. Ib.

But he, triumphant spirit! all things dar'd,
He poach'd the wood and on the warren snar'd;
'Twas his at cards, each novice to trepan,
And call the wants of rogues the right of man.

Crabbe. Parish Register.

SNARL, v. Spenser uses Ensnarle (qv.), to ensnare.

Snarle seems to be a diminutive of snar,—
To ensnare; to entangle.

You snarle yourself into so many and heynouse absurdities, as you shall never be able to wynde yourself oute.

Abp. Cranmer. Ans. to Bp. Gardner.

But fury was full ill appareild
In rags, that naked nigh she did appeare,
With ghastly looks and dreadfull drerihed;
And from her backe her garments she did teare,
And from her head ofte rent her snarled heare.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 12.

SNARL, v. } The Dut. Snarrer, is—premere, SNA'RLER. } murmurare, strepere. Snarl and Gnarr (Skinner thinks), are both formed from the sound, and are applied to—

The angry, nasal noise or sound of a dog.

Her brazen shield two sable dogs adorn,
Who each at other stare, and snarl, and swell.

P. Fletcher. The Purple Island, c. 8.

Do ye snarle, you black jill? she looks like the picture of America.—Beaum. & Fletch. Knight of Malta, Act v. sc. 1.

Merc. I shun in vain the importunity
With which this snarler vexeth all the gods:
Jove cannot 'scape him.—Cæw. Cælum Britannicum.

Like dogs that snarl about a bone
And play together when they've none.

Hudibras, pt. iii. c. 3.

Ev'n from the depths of hell the damn'd advance,
Th' infernal mansions nodding seem to dance:
The gaping three-mouth'd dog forgets to snarl,
The furies hearken, and their snakes uncurl.

Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iv.

1762

Should stupid libels grieve your mind,
You soon a remedy may find:
Lie down obscure like other folks
Below the lash of snarlers' jokes.—Swift. To Dr. Delany.

Sometimes, when we came suddenly upon them, or waked them out of their sleep (for they are a sluggish sleepy animal), they would raise up their heads, snort and snarl, and look as fierce as if they meant to devour us.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. iv. c. 4.

SNAST. The snout of a candle. Ger.
Schnautze, schneutze.

The swiftest in consuming was that with saw-dust; which first burned faire till some part of the candle was consumed, and the dust gathered about the snaste; but then it made the snaste big, and long, and to burn duskishly, and the candle wasted in half the time of wax pure.

Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 369.

And thus in our daies do men practise to make longlasting snasts for lampes, out of alumen plumosum; and by the same we read in Pausanias, that there alwaies burnt a lamp before the image of Minerva.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 14.

SNATCH, v. } Dut. Snacken, capture, capti-SNATCH, n. } tare,— SNA'TCHER. } To catch or take, or try or attempt to catch or take, by quick, sudden motion or action; hastily, sharply; eagerly.

A snatch,—a part or portion snatched, or caught or taken—hastily, sharply, eagerly; a catch.

His obseruaunces, nor his queynt aray,
His skalding sighes, nor yet his cooling care,
His wayting still to snatch himselfe in snare,
I can not write what was his sweetest soure,
For I my selfe was neuer Paramoure.

Gascoigne. Dan Bartholomew of Bathe.

When the boy saw that hys father was dead, and that the catch-poles began to snatch at him, he was sore dismayed, and thought that he should dye to.—Fryth. Workes, p. 57.

Before we enterprise hereunto [historye] we ought to haue a little snatche of ciuile pollicy.—Goldyng. Justine, Pref.

Out of her gored wound the cruell steel
He lightly snatcht, and did the floodgate stop
With his faire garment.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 1.

Like dastard cures, that, having at a bay
The salvage beast embost in wearie chace,
Dare not adventure on the stubborne pray,
Ne byte before, but rome from place to place
To get a snatch when turned is his face.—Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 1.

Aron. Why then it seemes some certaine snatch or so
Would serue your turnes.

Shakespeare. Titus Andronicus, Act ii. sc. 1.

— The snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking were as his: I am absolute
'Twas very Cloten.

Id. Cymbeline, Act iv. sc. 2.

For like as dropsie patients drinke and still be drie,
Whose vnstanch't greedie thirst no liquor can allay,
And drinke they nere so much, yet thirst they by and by;
So catchers and snatchers do toile both night and day,
Not needie, but greedie, still prolling for their prey.

Mirror for Magistrates, p. 278.

King. We do not meane the coursing snatchers onely,
But feare the maine intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to vs.

Shakespeare. Hen. V. Act i. sc. 2.

These are the agonies but of one single person whom death snatches away in the midst of his years, his pleasures and his hopes.—Stillington, vol. i. Ser. 11.

Thus Pegasus, a nearer way to take,
May boldly deviate from the common track;
From vulgar bounds with brave disorder part,
And snatch a grace beyond the reach of art.

Pope. Essay on Criticism, v. 150.

And this time we happened to have no victuals dressed, but I offered one of them some biscuit, which he snatched and threw overboard with great disdain.

Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 4.

There are, however, few charitable establishments that so immediately tend to snatch the lowest classes from wretchedness and ruin, as that of the Marine Society.

Know, Ess. 145.

SNATHE, or } A. S. Snæd, snide, snith-an;
SNEED. } Dut. Sneede, incisio, segmen-SNA'TTOCK. } tum; A. S. verb Snid-an, to hew, to polish, to make smooth, (Somner.)

A cutting,—a cutting of wood (formed into a hold or handle).

This is fixed on a long eneed, or strait handle.

Evelyn, b. ii. c. 6. § 2.

Snattocks of that very cross; of cedar some, some of juniper.—Gayton. On Don Quixote, p. 275.

When stormy days constrain to quit the field,
The house or barn may useful business yield;
There crooked snaths of flexile sallow make,
Or of tough ash the fork-stale and the rake.

Scott. Amœbean Eccl. 2.

SNEAK, v. } A. S. Snic-an, repere, to SNEAK, n. } creep, to go softly or easily.
SNE'AKER. } Hence, perhaps, (says Som-SNE'AKINGLY. } ner) our sneak. To sneak SNE'AKINGNESS. } out or away, i. clanculo pro-SNE'AKS BY, n. } ripere se. See SNAKE.

To creep—covertly, meanly, servilely; to move or act with creeping servility, covertly, concealedly.

Cre. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Pan. Where? Yonder? That's Dæphobus?—'Tis Troilus!
Shakespeare. Troil. & Cres. Act i. sc. 2.

There are they still poor rogues, shaking their chops,
And sneaking after cheeses.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Woman-Hater, Act v. sc. 1.

Falst. How? the prince is a jacke, a sneake-cuppe: and if hee were heere, I would cudgell him like a dogge, if hee would say so.—Shakespeare. 1 Pt. Hen. IV. Act iii. sc. 3.

At a time when many had abandoned the faith, and more had been sneakers and time servers, Athanasius, with a few adherents, had the courage to speak out the truth, boldly, without mincing it.—Waterland. Works, vol. iii. p. 420.

The fawning, sneaking and flattering hypocrite that will do or be any thing for his own advantage, is despised by those he courts, hated by good men, and at last tormented by his own conscience, for being false to God and religion.

Stillington. Works, vol. ii. Ser. 1.

'Tis to defie every man we meet (except the atheist and scoffer) and to pronounce all mankind besides to be a set of simpletons and superstitious sneaks.—Glanvill, Ser. 4.

—While you sneakingly submit,

And beg for pardon at our feet.

Butler. The Lady's Answer to the Knight.

Such persons are deeply accessory to their own and piety's disgrace, by a sneakingness, which so implies a guilt, that where it proceeds not from a fault, it is one.

Boyle. Works, vol. vi. p. 16.

Men not enduring to be termed a foppish simpleton, doting on speculations, and enslaved to rules; a fantastical humourist, a precise bigot, a rigid Stoick, a demure sneaksby,
a clownish singularist, or non-conformist to ordinary usage,
a stiff opiniatre.—Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 34.

There is a mean and sneaking kind of wisdom (I can allow it no better epithets) which marks the present times, and consists in a compliance with the inclinations, and an assent to the opinions, of those with whom we converse, however opposite they may be to our own, or to those we complied with, or assented to, in the last company in which we were engaged.—Knox, Ess. 12.

Vice has spread more generally, and has taken deeper root, than while it sneaked about in disguise; while it denied its parentage, and pretended to be related to virtue.

Warburton, vol. x. Ser. 33.

SNEAP, v. } To sneap is—to snap or sneb, SNEEP, n. } snib, or snub, (qqv.) Grose says, to sneap or sneap,—to check; as children easily sneaped. Herbs and fruits sneaped with cold weather. It is a general word used all over England.

That we do enough hate our corruptions; when, at our sharpest, we do but gently sneap them, as Eli did his sons;
or, as some indulgent parent doth an unthrifty darling, whom he chides, and yet feeds with the fuel of his excess.

Bp. Hall, vol. v. Ser. 9.

—But life that's here,

When into it the soul doth closely wind,

Is often sneep'd by anguish and by fear,

With vexing pain and rage that she no'te easily bear.

More. Song of the Soul, pt. iii. c. 3. s. 18.

Ferd. Berowne is like an envious sneaping frost,

That bites the first borne infants of the Spring.

Shakespeare. Loue's Labour Lost, Act i. sc. 1.

Fal. My Lord, I will not vndergo this sneape without reply.—Id. 2 Pt. Hen. IV. Act ii. sc. 1.

SNEB, or } Dut. Snabben, snappen, caplare, SNIB, v. } raptare, to catch or seize, to snap.
See SNUB.

To catch or snap at—angrily, chidingly; to check forbiddingly; to repress; to nip, to pinch.

But it were any persone obstinat,

What so he where of highe, or low estat,

Him wolde he snibben sharply for the nones.

Chaucer. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 523.

I have my sone snibbed, and yet shal,

For he to vertue listeth not to entend,

But for to play at dis. and to dispend.

Id. The Frankeleines Prologue, v. 11,000.

And in his small bushes used to shrowde
The sweete nightingale singing so lowde;
Which made this foolish brere wexe so bold,
That on a time hee cast him to scold
And snebbe the good oake, for hee was old.

Spenser. Shepherd's Calender. Februarie.

"Its an hard case, when men of good deserving Must either driven be perforce to sterving,
Or asked for their pas by everie squib,
That list at will them to revile or snib."

Id. Mother Hubbard's Tale.

Here percase some snappish carper will take me at rebound, and snuffingly snib me for debasing the Irish language: but trulie, whosoever shall be found so ouerthwartlie bent, he takes the matter farre awrie.

Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 1.

Hee [Octavius Cæsar Augustus] was a prince more respective of thrift and holesomenes, than desirous of popula-ritie, praise, and honour: when the people complained of the want and dearth of wine, he checked and snibbed the with this most severe speech, That his sonne in lawe Agrippa had taken order good enough that men should not be athirst, by conueighing so many waters into the cittle.

Holland. Suetonius, p. 57.

SNECK, or } A sneck or snick of a door is SNICK. } the catch or latch; that which snatches or catches hold. To sneek-up, or snick-up, is supposed to be equivalent to—"Go hang yourself:" (q.d.) Snick-up, catch-up, latch-up, the noose or cord.—Mr. Weber produced the quotation from Taylor in support of this explanation.

To. We did keepe time sir in our catches. Snecke vp.

Shakespeare. Twelfth Night, Act ii. sc. 3.

A Tiburne hempen caudell will e'en cure you;

It can cure traytors, but I hold it fit

T' apply't ere they treason do commit.

Wherefore in Sparta it cyleped was Snick-up, which is in English gallowgrass.

Taylor. Praise of Hempseed.

Mich. Shall not my father go with us too?

Mist. Mer. No Michael, let thy father go snick up, he shall never come between a pair of sheets with me again, while he lives.

Beaum. & Fletch. Knight of the Burning Pestle, Act ii. sc. 1.

Wife. Look George, did not I tell thee as much, the Knight of the Bell is in earnest, Rafe shall not be beholding to him, give him his money George, and let him go snick up.—Id. Ib. Act iii. sc. 1.

SNEED. See SNATHE.

SNEER, v. } This word does not appear to SNEER, n. } be of very long date in our lan-SNEER-ER. } guage. It is applied to a turn SNE'ERFUL. } of the nose similar to that of a snarling dog.

To turn up the nose contemptuously; scornfully, or scoffingly; to speak or act with a slight emotion of scorn or scoffing; of disparagement or derision.

Knowledge of books and men exalts their thoughts
In wit accomplish'd, though in wiles untaught,
Careless of whispers meant to wound their name,
Nor sneer'd nor brib'd from virtue into shame.

Savage. On Public Spirit.

Meantime it chane'd, that hard at hand

A one-horse chaise had took its stand;

When thus our vehicle begun

To sneer the luckless chaise and one.

Warton. The Phaeton and the One-horse Chaise.

That, from dependance and from pride secure,

I am not plac'd so high to scorn the poor,

Nor yet so low, that I my Lord should fear,

Or hesitate to give him sneer for sneer.

Churchill. The Conference.

Who can refute a sneer? Who can compute the number, much less, one by one, scrutinize the justice, of those disparaging insinuations which crowd the pages of this elaborate history?—Paley. Moral Philosophy, vol. ii. b. v. c. 9.

The buffoon and sneerer are still on the wrong side of the charter.—Warburton. On Prodiges.

Such, so adorn'd, the cell I mean to sing!

Cell ever squalid! where the sneerful maid

Will not fatigue her hand! broom never comes,

That comes to all.

Shenstone. Economy, pt. iii.

SNEEZE, v. } Dut. Niesen; Ger. Niessen; SNEEZE, n. } Sw. Nysa, nuisa; A. S. Nies-

SNEE'ZING, n. } an, sternutare, to neese or sneeze, (Somner;) A. S. Naese, the nose. See NEEZE, and the quotation from Bacon.

Sneeze'd in Pope, is neezing in Chapman.

For wer it win, or old or moistie ale,
That he hath dronke, he speketh in his nose,
And snezeeth fast. [In some editions sniveleth.]

Chaucer. The Manciples Tale, v. 17,041.

Looking against the sun, doth induce sneezing. The cause is, not the heating of the nostrils; for then the holding up of the nostrils against the sunne, though one winke, would do it, but the drawing downe the moisture of the brain: for it will make the eyes run with water; and the drawing of moisture to the eyes, doth draw it to the nostrils, by motion of consent; and so followeth sneezing.

Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 687.

If one chaunce to sneeze after repast, the order is for to call for a dish of meat and a trencher againe to be set upon the boud: and in case he tast not of somewhat afterward, it is thought a most fearefull and cursed presage on his behalfe.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxviii. c. 2.

—I heard the rack

As earth and sky would mingle; but my self
Was danger; and these flaws, though mortals feare them
As dangerous to the pillard frame of heaven,
Or to the earth's dark basis underneath,
Are to the main as inconsiderable,
And harmless, if not wholsom, as a sneeze
To man's less universe, and soon are gone.

Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

She spoke. Telemachus then sneeze'd aloud;

Constrain'd, his nostril echo'd through the crowd.

The smiling queen the happy omen bless'd:

"So may these impious fall, by fate oppress'd!"

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xviii.

We have often observed repeated sneezings to proceed from the invisible steams of spirit of sal armoniack.

Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 687.

SNICK AND SNEE. Snick is perhaps Sneck or snatch; and Snee, sneed,—a cutting. See SNATHE.

Among other customs they have in that town, one is,
That none must carry a pointed knife about him; which makes the Hollander, who is us'd to snik and snee, to leave his horn-sheath and knife a ship-board when he comes a shore.—Howell, b. i. Let. 41.

For, to proceed in the parallel; as comedy is a representation of human life in inferior persons, and low subjects, and by that means creeps into the nature of poetry, and is a kind of juniper, a shrub belonging to the species of cedar, so is the painting of clowns, the representation of a Dutch kermis, the brutal sport of snick-or-snee, and a thousand other things of this mean invention.

Dryden. A Parallel of Poetry & Painting.

SNIFF, v. } Dut. Snoffen, snuffen, snuyven, SNIFF, n. } snoffeten; Ger. Schnaufen, schnif- SNIFT, v. } feln; Sw. Snuf-wa. To Snuff, (qv.)

To draw the air or breath strongly up the nose.

(Ger. Schnebbe.)

The diminutive is—To snivel, (qv.)

Never since I was born did I hear so much wit,
And, madam, I laugh'd till I thought I should split.
So then you look'd scornful, and snift at the dean,
As you should say, Now, am I skinny and lean?

Swift. Hamilton's Bawn.

He, ent'ring at the study-door,

It's ample area 'gan explore;

And something in the wind

Conjectur'd, sniffing round and round,

Better then all the books he found,

Food chiefly for the mind.

Cowper. On the Death of Mrs. Throckmorton's Bulfinch.

She's gone! but there's another in her stead,

For of a princess Charlotte's brought to bed:—

Oh, could I but have had one single sup,

One single sniff at Charlotte's caudle-cup!

Warton. The Oxford Newsmen's Verses, 1767.

Snuff. Resentment expressed by sniffing; perverse resentment.—Dr. Johnson. Dictionary. In v. Snuff.

To snuff. To snift in contempt.—Id. Ib.

SN'GGLE. Skinner says—a word well known to anglers. It seems to be diminutive of sneak.
See the quotation from Walton.

Because you, that are but a young angler, know not what snigling is, I will now teach it you. Observing your time in a warm day, where the water is lowest, take a strong small hook tied to a strong line, or to a string about a yard long; and, then into one of these holes, (on the river banks) or between any boards about a mill, or under any great stone or plank, or any place where you may think an eel may hide or shelter herself—you may, with the help of a short stick, put in your bait, and as far as you may conveniently.

Walton. Angler, pt. i. c. 13.

Now Martell, have you remembered what we thought of?

Mart. Yes sir, I have snigled him.

Beaum. & Fletch. Thierry & Theodoret, Act ii. sc. 1.

SNIP, v. } Dut. Snippen; Ger. Schnippen.
 SNIP, n. } secure, to cut. Wachter derives SNIPPER. } from A. S. Cnif, a knife. It is, SNIPPER. } probably, the same word as snap,
 (to knap.) to break off, sever, separate shortly,
 (to nip;) and thus,—

To cut. To go snips, is to go shares; each to take his cut, or share, or division.

Taylor I take measure of your worth sir,
 And because I will not afflict you with any large bill
 Of circumstances, I will snip off particulars.

Beaum. & Fletcher. Fair Maid of the Inn, Act iv. sc. 1.

Lecu. If you are so resolv'd, I have provided
 A means to snip him hence.

Id. Thierry & Theodoret, Act iv. sc. 1.

The leaves grow disposed and distant by certain spaces
 asunder, much like unto those of cinquefoile or hempe, snipped and cut about the edges ordinarily in five parts.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxv. c. 6.

What's this? a sleeue? 'tis like demi-cannon,
 What, vp and downe caru'd like an apple tart?
 Heers snip, and nip, and cut, and slish and slash,
 Like to a censor in a barbers shoppe:
 Why what a deuils name tailor call'st thou this?

Shakespeare. The Taming of the Shrew, Act iv. sc. 3.

Mask. Pray, sir, let me go snip with you in this lye,
 And be not too covetous of honour?

Dryden. An Evening's Love, Act v.

Therefore I fitted it with a cannula, which I retained with a snip of plaister, and applied a thin piece of sponge press'd out of wine upon it, with compress and bandage over it, directing the dressing of it twice a day.

Wiseman. Surgery, b. ii. c. 12.

For some have doubted if [the beard] 'twere made of snips
 Of sables, glew'd and fitted to his lips.

Butler. Nye's Beard.

Or witches simpling, and on gibbets
 Cutting from malefactors snippets?—Hudibras, pt. ii. c. 3.

Dennis and dissonance, and captious art,
 And snip-snap short, and interruption smart.

Pope. The Dunciad, b. ii.

They must, like our taylors, have all their fashions from the French, and study the French league for every alteration, as our snippers go over once a year into France, to bring back the newest mode, and to learn to cut and shape
 it.—Id. Dryden. The History of the League, P. S.

SNITE, v. } Dut. Snuyten; Ger. Schneut.
 SNOT. } zen; Sw. Snyta; A. S. Snyt-an, to SNOTTY. } wipe. Candel-syntels,— To wipe; to wipe the nose; to cleanse it: and hence, to snite a candle; cleanse or clear away.

Snot,—that which is snited or wiped away.
 See SNOT.

Theodorus drew one snetting his noise.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxxv. c. 11.

Nor would any one be able to snite his nose, or to sneeze;
 in both which actions, the passage of the breath through the mouth, being intercepted by the tongue; 'tis forc'd, as it then ought to do, to go through the nose.

Grew. Cosmo. Sacra, b. i. c. 5.

Being thus put into the road to get beneficial places, and so consequently riches, which he [Lenthall] hungred after,
 by the continual importunities of his covetous and snotty wife, he became Master of the Rolls, 8 Nov. 1643.

Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. ii.

SNITE. A. S. Snite. A woodcock; snipe or snite, (Somner.) Perhaps so called from the peculiar length of its bill or snout.

The felde fare and the snyle.
Skelton. Philip Sparrow, p. 293.

The heron leaves watching at the river's brim,
 And brings the snyle and plover in with him.

Drayton. Noah's Flood.

SNIVEL, v. } The dim. of Sniff—as snuffle SNIVELLER. } is of snuff. See the first quotation in v. SNEEZE.

To make a sniffing or snuffing; to have a running at the nose; to cry, weep or fret as children do.

Let him cough, roughe, or sneuil.
Skelton. Colin Clout's come Home againe.

I left our young poet sniveling and sobbing behind the scenes, and cursing somebody that has deceived him.

Dryden. Prol. to the Mistakes, p. 625.

He'd more lament when I was dead,
 Than all the snivellers round my bed.

Swift. On the Death of Dr. Swift.

Sending old rakes to church in shoals,
 Like children, sniv'ling for their souls.

E. More. The Trial of Selim the Persian.

Ye writers of what none with safety reads;
 Footing it in the dance that Fancy leads;
 Ye novelists, who mar what ye would mend;
Sniv'ling and driv'ling folly without end.
Cowper. Progress of Errour.

SNORE, v. } Dut. Snorchen; Ger. Snorchen, SNORE, n. } snarchlen. In A. S. Snora, ster-SNO'RING, n. } nutatio; Snore, snored, snor'd, SNORT, v. } —snort.

SNO'RTING, n. } To snore,—to breathe loudly through the nose.

To snort,—to sound, or utter a strong sound
 (as horses do) through the nose.

He dranke, and wel his girdel underpight;
 He slepeth, and he snoreth in his gise
 All night, until the sonne gan arise.

Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 5209.

This miller hath so wisely bibbed ale,
 That as an hors he snorteth in his slepe.

Id. The Reves Tale, v. 4160.

Her nose snorted up for tene,
 Full hidous was she for to sene.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

Her lubber now was snorting ripe,
 And she meane while was glad,
 That for to serue her turne else-where
 So good a staile she had.

Warner. Albion's England, b. vi.

His horse (spoyld both of guide and king, thicke snoring,
 and amaz'd,
 And apt to flight) the myrmidons made nimbly to, and seiz'd.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xvi.

Seb. Thou do'st snore distinctly,
 There's meaning in thy snores.

Shakespeare. The Tempest, Act ii. sc. 1.

Come, my sweet Corrinna, come;
 Laugh, and leave thy late deploring:
 Sable midnight makes all dumbe,
 But thy jealous husband's snoring.

F. Beaumont. A Charme.

He chafes, he stamper, careers, and turnes about,
 He fomes, snorts, neighs, and fire and smoke breaths out.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xx. s. 29.

They fall soone asleepe above the water, and keepe such a snorting and routing in their sleepe, that they bewray where they be, and so are easily taken.

Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 10.

A pleasant beverage he prepar'd before
 Of wine and honey, mix'd with added store,
 Of opium; to his keeper this he brought,
 Who swallow'd unaware the sleepy draught,
 And snor'd secure till morn, his senses bound
 In slumber, and in long oblivion drown'd.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite.

— Quenchless his thirst;
 He takes the river at redoubled draughts,
 And with wide nostrils, snorting, skims the wave.

Thomson. Summer.

The nurse sleeps sweetly, hir'd to watch the sick,
 Whom snoring she disturbs.

Cowper. Task, b. i.

Oft will his snorting steed, with terrour struck,
 His wonted speed refuse, or start aside,
 With rising smoke, and ruddy flame annoy'd.

Jago. Edge-Hill, b. iii.

SNOUT, v. } Dut. Snuyte; Ger. Schnute.
 SNOUT, n. } Snout is the past part. of snite, SNO'UTY. } —that which is snited or wiped.
 The nose, or nosel.

Who that meteth hym first pay him on the snort.
The Pardonere & Tapstere.

A good father certes no,
 I had leauer by my trowth,
 Er I were sette on suche a slouth,
 And beare suche a slepye snoute,
 Bothe eien of my head were out.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

Their shoes and pattens are snouted and piked more then a finger long crooking vpwards.—Camden. Remaines.

Boots and shoos are so long snouted, that one can hardly kneel in God's house, where all genuflection and postures of devotion and decency are quite out of use.

Howell, b. iii. Let. 3.

Dio. Thou art like thy name,
 A cruel boar, whose snout hath rooted up
 The fruitfull vineyard of the common-wealth.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Prophetess, Act ii. sc. 3.

He [Fitzmoris] procured a young harlot, who was somewhat snoutfaire, to go to the castell.

Holinshed. Chronicles of Ireland.

But these are erroneous tenents; a modest virgin well conditioned, to such a faire snout peece, is much to be preferred.—Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 627.

The nose was ugly, long, and big,
 Broad, and snouty like a pig;
 Which show'd he would in dunghills love to dig.
Otway. The Poet's Complaint of his Muse.

SNOW, v. } A. S. Snaw, snaw-an; Dut.
 SNOW, n. } Sneeun, sneeuwen; Ger. Schnee, SNO'WY. } schneyen; Goth. Snawis. Junius, SNO'WISH. } —from the Gr. Νιφ-εω; Skinner,—from the It. Nève.

To snow, (met.)—to fall plenteously.
 See the quotation from Locke.

Her throte also white of hewe,
 As snowe on braunce snowed newe.

Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

Withouten bake mete never was his hous,
 Of fish, and flesh, and that so plenteous,
 It snewed in his hous of mete and drinke,
 Of alle deintees that men coud of thinke.

Id. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 344.

The golden tressed Phebus high on loft,
 Thrise had all with his beames clere
 The snowes molte, and zephyrus as oft
 I brought ayen the tender leaves grene.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. v.

This markis hath hire spoused with a ring
 Brought for the same cause, and than hire sette
 Upon an hors snow-white, and wel ambling.

Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8199.

Her snowisse throte.—Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

And ofte also the great shoure
 Out of suche place it maie be take,
 That it the forme shall forsake
 Of reyne, and in to snowe be turned.

Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

A lovely ladie rode him faire beside,
 Upon a lowly asse more white then snow;
 Yet she much whiter; but the same did hide
 Under a vele, that wimples was full low;
 And over all a blacke stole shee did throw.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

There they doe finde that godly aged sire,
 With snowy lockes adowne his shoulders shed;
 As hoary frost with spangles doth attire
 The mossy branches of an oke halfe ded.

Id. Ib. b. i. c. 10.

Her snowish necke with blewish vaines
 Stood bolt vpright vpon
 Her portly shoulders.—Warner. Albion's England, b. iv.

Snow is the small particles of water frozen before they unite into drops.—Locke. Elements of Nat. Phil. c. 6.

Ev'n when the vital sap retreats below,
 Ev'n when the hoary head is hid in snow;
 The life is in the leaf, and still between
 The fits of falling snow appears the streaky green.

Dryden. The Flower and the Leaf.

— The stately-sailing swan
 Gives out his snowy plumage to the gale;
 And, arching proud his neck, with oary feet
 Bears forward fierce, and guards his osier-isle,
 Protective of his young.

Thomson. Spring.

Thus a snow-ball having the power to produce in us the ideas of white, cold, and round, the powers to produce those ideas in us, as they are in the snow ball, I call qualities.—Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 8.

And in yon mingled wilderness of flowers,
 Fair-handed Spring unbosoms every grace;
 Throws out the snow-drop, and the crocus first.

Thomson. Spring.

The inhabitants of those places where the fields are continually white with snow, generally become blind long before the usual course of nature.

Goldsmith. Animated Nature, vol. i. c. 3.

The cold was now become more severe, and the snow- blasts more frequent.—Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 4.

SNUB, v. } See SNEAP, and SNEB.
 SNUB, n. } To check; to scold, to rebuke, to reprove, to chide—pettishly.

Therewith the gyaunt buckled him to fight,
 Inflam'd with scornfull wrath and high disdain,
 And lifting up his dreadfull club on high,
 All arm'd with ragged snubbes and knottie graine,
 Him thought at first encounter to have slaine.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 8

This appears from the trees which grow on and near the sea-shores all along the western coast of England, whose heads and boughs I have observ'd to run out far to landward, but toward the sea to be so snub'd by the winds, as if their boughs and leaves had been par'd or shaven off on that side.—Ray. On the Creation, pt. i.

We frequently see the child that has been beholden to neither of these impulses in their parents, in spite of being neglected, snubbed, and thwarted at home, acquire a behaviour which makes it as agreeable to all the rest of the world, as that of every one else of their family is to each other.—Tatler, No. 235.

SNUDGE. } i. e. Snug, or snuc, — one SNUGGING, adj. } who has sneaked, or who sneaks.

A sneaking, mean, miserly person.

Suffiseth this, that still he honors those Which wade in warres to get a woorthie name,
 And least esteemes the greedie snudge, which goes
 To gayne good golde, without respect of fame.

Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

And thus your husbandrye, me thincke, is more like the life of a covetous snudge that ofte very evill proves, then the labour of a good husbande that knoweth well what he doth.

Ascham. Toxophilus, b. i.

Some of his friends, that were snudging peniefathers, would take him vp verie roughlie for his laushing and his outrageous expenses, as they tearme it.

Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 3.

SNUFF, v.

SNUFF, n.

SNUFFER.

SNUFFINGLY.

SNUFFLE, v.

SNUFFLING, n.

SNUFFLINGLY.

Snuff is the past part. of
 To snuff, (qv.) that which is sniffed.

To snuff (the verb formed upon the past part.) is—

To draw the air or breath up the nose; to smell, by action of the nostrils; to move or turn up the nose, (sc.) in scorn, or derision; in anger, in indignation. Also, to take away or remove the snuff, or nose—of a candle.

To take a thing in snuff—was a common expression: in scorn, anger, indignation, affront.

Such enue boyles, such falshood fire doth blowe,
 That bountie burnes, and truth is called thief,
 And good desertes are brought into such brief,
 That slaunders snuffe which sweares the matter out,
 Brings oftentimes the noblest names in doubt.

Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

A water-spaniel came down the river, shewing that he hunted for a duck, and with a snuffing grace, disdain-ing that his smelling force could not as well prevail thorough the water, as thorough the air.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

And he made seven lampes therto, and the snuffers therof, and fyrepans of pure gold.—Bible, 1551. Exodus, c. 38.

And he made for it seven lampes with the snuffers, and snuffdishes thereof of pure gold.—Id. 1583. Id.

And a heifer, will put up his nose, and snuffe in the aire, against raine.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 826.

Ye said also, Behold, what a wearinesse is it, and ye have snuffed at it, saith the Lord of hosts.—Malachi, i. 13.

As a thrifty wench scrapes kitchen-stuff,
 And barrelling the droppings, and the snuff
 Of wasting candles, which in thirty year,
 Relicly kept, perchance buys wedding cheer.

Donne, Sat. 2.

The bride was praising sir Dauphine, and he went away in snuff, and I followed him.

B. Jonson. The Silent Woman, Act iv. sc. 2.

What hath bin scene.

Either in snuffes, and packings of the dukes,
 Or the hard reine which both of them hath borne Against the old kinde king; or something deeper,
 Whereof (perchance) these are but furnishings.

Shakespeare. K. Lear, Act iii. sc. 1.

Chloe. Marry, foh! you sell snuffers too, if you be remembered; but I pray you let me buy them out of your hand; for, I tell you true, I take it highly in snuff, to learn how to entertain gentlefolks of you, at these years, I faith.

B. Jonson. The Poetaster, Act ii. sc. 1.

Rut. Good gentlemen;

You seem to have a snuffing in your head Sir,
 A parlous snuffing, but this same dampish air—
 2. A dampish air indeed.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Custom of the Country, Act iv. sc. 1.

Here perchase some snappish carper will take me at rebound; and snuffinglie snub me for debasing the Irish language: but trulie, whosoever shall be found so ouerthwartlie bent, he takes the matter farr awrie.

Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 1.

He snuffs the wind, his heels the sands excite,
 But, when he stands collected in his might,
 He roars, and promises a more successful flight.

Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iii.

Snuff the candles at supper as they stand on the table, which is much the securest way; because, if the burning snuff happens to get out of the snuffers, you have a chance that it may fall into a dish of soup, sack-posset, rice-milk, or the like, where it will be immediately extinguished with very little stink.—Swift. Directions to the Butler.

Who, with high nostrils, snuffing up the wind,
 Now stood, the champion of the salvage kind.

Dryden. The Conquest of Granada.

One, clad in purple, not to lose his time,
 Eats, and recites some lamentable rhyme:
 Some senseless Phillis, in a broken note,
Snuffing at nose, and croaking in his throat.

Dryden. Persius, Sat. 1.

Here the yet rude unjointed snuff-box lies,
 Which serves the rallied fop for smart replies.

Gay. The Fan, b. i.

Virgil says, "as the young women are plying their evening tasks, they are sensible of the winter season, from the oil sparkling in the lamp, and the snuff hardening."

Cooke. A View of the Works & Days.

As forth he walk'd, in quest of prey,
 The hunters met him on the way;
 Fear wings his flight; the marsh he sought;
 The snuffing dogs are set at fault.

E. Moore. The Wolf, the Sheep and the Lamb.

Tom, a pert waiter, smart and clever,
 Adroit pretence who wanted never,
 Curious to see what caus'd this rout,
 And what the doctors were about,
 Slyly stepp'd in to snuff the candles,
 And ask'd whate'er they pleas'd to want else.

Cawthorne. The Antiquarians.

Quick to his side he flies amain,
 And peeps, and snuffs, and peeps again.—Id. Id.

Then came drum, trumpet, hautboy, fiddle, flute;
 Next snuffer, sweeper, shifter, soldier, mute.

Churchill. The Rosciad.

SNUG. } A. S. Snuc, the past part. of SNUGNESS. } snic-an, to sneak, to creep; a snug spot, a spot into which any one has sneaked, has gone, creepingly, covertly, closely.

And hence, snug,— Close, covert, sheltered, secreted—comfortably so.

Betwixt them two the peeper took his nest,
 Where snugging well he well appear'd content,
 So to have done amiss, so to be shent.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

Did I not see you rascal, did I not?

Where you lay snug to snap young Damon's goats?

Dryden. Virgil, Past. 3.

Ordered the carpenters to cut down our quarter-deck to make the ship snug, and the fitter for sailing.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1687.

This treasure will suffice, and more,
 To place me handsomely on shore.
 In some snug manor.

Wilkie. The Fishermen.

From me fair Health's fresh fountain springs,
 O'er me soft Snugness spreads her wings;
 And Innocence reflects her ray
 To gild my calm sequester'd way.

Warton. The Phaeton and the One-horse Chaise.

SO. Skinner says,—from A. S. Swa; Dut. Soo; Ger. So; and Junius thinks so is the Gr. Ως, reversed. Tooke affirms—that "the Ger. So, the Eng. So, (though in one language it is called an adverb or conjunction, and in the other an article or pronoun,) are yet both of them derived from the Goth. article Sa, so; and have in both languages retained their original meaning, viz. it or that." Tooke has shown that it (qv. or as it was anciently written hit,) means said, and that—taken.
 From the manner in which he has traced these words to their meaning it seemed pretty plain that he would conclude so (for sa) to be the past part. of the A. S. verb Sæg-an, to say; "so, in the said manner," and this is one of the additions from his papers. (See the 8vo. ed. vol. ii. p. 351. See As and Such.) It is worthy of remark, that in Ger. Es is also an article or pronoun, and in Eng.
As is an adverb or conjunction. The various usages of so, may be explained by substituting it or that, and supplying the ellipses, of cause or case, state or condition, sort or kind, &c.

For he was so god knygt, and also so noble kyng,
 He beod for to geue hym ys dogter in spousesyng.

R. Gloucester, p. 65.

It was in a thousand ger, & fourty & tuo,
 After that God anerthe com, that he was crouned so.

Id. p. 330.

The duke Roberd fulfilled, so did William the kyng.

R. Brunne, p. 86.

— So riche armes was neuer sene with sight.

Id. p. 54.

I praye God if it were so I strangle of this brede.
 & putte a morselle in his mouth with that ilk worde,
 Bifor the kyng & tham alle strangled at the borde.

Id. p. 55.

— So me God helpe.—Piers Plouhman, p. 38.

— And so dude ich nevere.—Id. p. 87.

And if it falle that he fynde it, treuly I seye to you, that he schal have joie therof more than on nynty and nyne that erriden not. So it is not the wille before youre fadir that is in hevenes, that oon of these litil perische.

Wiclif. Matthew, c. 18.

If it happen that he fynde hym, verelye I saye vnto you:
 he reloyseth more of that shepe, the of the nynty and nyne which wente not astraye. Euen so it is not the wyl of your fader in heauen, that one of these lytel ones shoulde perysh.

Bible, 1551. Id.

But Jhesus answerde no moore, so that Pilat wondride.

Wiclif. Mark, c. 15.

Jhesus yet answered neuer a worde, so that Pylate mer-ueled.—Bible, 1551. Id.

And shortly, whan the sonne was gone to reste,
 So hadde I spoken with hem everich on,
 That I was of hir felawship anon.

Chaucer. Prolog. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 30.

A yeman hadde he, and servantes no mo
 At that time, for him luste to ride so;
 And hei was cladde in cote and hode of grene.

Id. Id. v. 101.

The thyng so open is at the eie,
 That every man it maie beholde.—Gower. Con. A. Prolog.

I thynke for to touche also
 The worlde, whiche neweth every daie
 So as I can, so as I maie.

Id. Id.

Abdal. I must submit;
 On what hard terms soe'er my peace be bought.

Dryden. The Conquest of Granada.

For thus I speak, and what I speak shall stand;
 What power soe'er provokes our lifted hand,
 On this our hill no more shall hold his place;
 Cut off, and exil'd, from th' ethereal race.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. viii.

SOAK, or } A. S. Soc-ian, macerare, hu-
SOKE, v. } mectare,— SOAKER. } To wet or moisten thoroughly;
SOAKING, n. } to keep in any liquid till thoroughly wetted, or drenched.
 To drench, to drink, to imbibe copiously.

And by that breache, it soketh so,
 that all my face, it styll on flowe.

Gascoigne. Dan Batholomew of Bathe.

I pray let the Sydonian merchant J. Buckhurst be at the eating of them, and then I know they will be well soak'd.

Howell, b. i. Let. 2.

When they appear, it is not unlikely but that they soak their vehicles in some vaporous or glutinous moisture or other, that they may become visible to us at a more easy rate.—More. Immortality of the Soul, b. iii. c. 8.

This promontory: for it shoots out so far into the sea, and thereby lies so exposed to the sea-breezes and the currents, that soak down between Africa and Brazil, that it is quite contrary to reason to think there should not always be a strong current setting to the N.W.

Dampier. Voyages, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 8.

In the next place, by a good natur'd man, is usually meant, neither more nor less than a good fellow, a painful, able, and laborious soaker.—South, vol. vi. Ser. 3.

But Jove ordain'd that Boreas' blast should blow,
 While moist Arcturus soak'd the vales below.

Fawkes. Apollon. Rhodius. Argonautics, b. ii.

The wind, at the same time, was variable, and squally; which obliged the people to attend the decks, so that few in the ships escaped a good soaking.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 1.

SOAP, or } A. S. Sape, sap-an; Dut. Seepe, SOPE, n. & v. } seepen; Ger. Seiff, seiffen; Sw.
SO'APY. } Süpa; Lat. Sapo. Wachter derives from Ger. Suben, (still existing in Saubern, seubern,) to cleanse. Skinner,—from the A. S.
Sippan, to sop. Pliny says that Soap, Lat.
Sapo, was made ex sebo, (or sevo,) &c. See the first quotation from him, and that from Arbuthnot.

To soap—is in vulgar use.

At Herford schep & orf, & fruyt at Wircestre,
Sope a boutte couyntre, yrn at Gloucestre.

R. Gloucester, p. 6.

Some may present thee with a pounce or twaine
 Of Spanishe soape to washe thy lynnyn white.

Gascoigne. Councell to Master Withpoll.

There is much good done with sope; an invention derived by the French for to colour the haire of the head yellow; made it is of tallow and ashes; the best of all other is that which they make of beech-wood ashes, and goats sewet;
 and the same after two manner of wayes; either thicke and hard, or else liquid and soft; but the one as well as the other is verie much used in Germanie, and a great deale more indeed by men than women.

Holland. Plinie. b. xxviii. c. 13.

SOB

Any salt whatsoever it is, serveth well for those sope-bals which are to polish the skin and to rid it from wrinkles.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxxi. c. 9.

The same, [tar water] as a soapy medicine, dissolves the grumous concretions of the fibrous part.—Berkeley, Siris, § 96.

All soaps and soapy substances, and consequently ripe fruits, the juices of pungent and aromatic plants; all those substances resolve solids, and sometimes attenuate or thin the fluids.—Arbuthnot, On Diet, c. 1.

All these means, employed under the Messiah's covenant for the reformation of men, are expressed under the image of a fuller's soap, which restores a soiled garment to its original purity.—Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 32.

SOAR, v. } Fr. Essorer; It. Soràre, per SOAR, n. } auras volitare, (Menage.) Gr.
SO'ARING, n. } Sup-eiv, trahere, (Junius.) It is perhaps sur (sur) aire. Sor (sopra) aria; upon the air; mounting upon the air.

To mount, to rise, along or upon, the air; to rise on high, to reach or attain great height or elevation.

Or if you list to flee as high in the aire,
As doth an eagle, when him list to sore,
This same stede shal here you evermore
Withouten harme.—Chaucer, The Squires Tale, v. 10, 436.

— Repreue me no more,
I have no cause I wote well for to sore,
As doeth an hawke, that listeth for to play.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. i.

What he will make lesse, he lasseth.
What he will make more he moreth.
And as a gentill faucone soreth,
He fleeth, that no man hym reclaimeth.

Gower, Con. A. b. vii.

Thus to the fresh clarion, being readie dight,
Unto his journey did himselfe addresse,
And with good speed began to take his flight
Over the fields, in his franke lustinesse,
And all the champaine o're he soared light.

Spenser, Muipotmos.

Thy love's high soaring cannot be a crime;
Nor can we if a spinster loves a king,
Say that her love ambitiously does climbe:
Love seeks no honour, but does honour bring.

Davenant, Gondibert, b. iii. c. 5.

— With steddie wing
Now on the polar windes, then with quick fann
Winnows the buxom air; till within soare
Of towring eagles, to all the fowles he seems
A phoenix. Milton, Paradise Lost, b. v.
Warm'd with more particles of heavenly flame,
He wing'd his upright flight, and soar'd to fame.

Dryden, Sigismonda & Guiscardo.

It is not till the wings have acquired strength and agility that it leaves the branches or the ground and dares to soar undauntedly in the fields of air, unmindful of the nest and the fostering feathers, which lately supplied it with warmth and protection.—Knox, Winter Evenings, Even. 25.

Proverbs were ambitiously seized by the lyric and by the epic muse in their most rapid career, and their sublimest soarings.—Parr, On Education.

SOB, v. } Somner says, perhaps from SOB, n. } the A. S. Seof-ian, lugere, queri, SO'BING, n. } to mourn, to lament, to complain, to make moan: but sob seems to express a physical action, probably supping up strongly, convulsively, the breath. See the quotations from Bacon and Goldsmith.

To sob, is also to sop, to soak; a tree being sobbed and wet swells, (Mortimer.)

And thus she spake, sobbing in her complaint.
Chaucer, Troil. & Cres. b. iv.

The lasse wofull of hem bothe nist
Where that he was, ne might o word outbring,
As I said erst, for wo and for sobbing. Id. Ib.

In my right honde my penne I holde,
And in my leftte my swerde kepe,
And in my barme there lieth to wepe
Thy chylde and myn, whiche sobbeth fast.

Gower, Con. A. b. iii.

There heare hanged about their eares,
With sobbing, and with sorye teares
This lorde goth then an humble pas,
That whilom proude and noble was. Id. Ib. b. i.

Forthwith the scaling ladders come,
And to the walles are set,
Then sighs and sobbings begin to clime
But they are quickly met.

Turberville, Of the Louer's Estate.

Sighing is caused by the drawing in of a greater quantity of breath to refresh the heart that laboureth: like a great draught when one is thirsty. Sobbing is the same thing stronger.—Bacon, Natural Historie, § 714.

And all her sister nymphes with one consent
Supplide her sobbing breaches with sad complement.
Spenser, Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 4.

SOB

A wonderous bag with both her hands she binds,
Like that where once Ulysses held the winds,
There she collects the force of female lungs,
Sighs, sobs, and passions, and the war of tongues.

Pope, The Rape of the Lock, c. 4.

Her hand she shifted to her blubber'd face
With prudish modestie, and sob'd.

Mickle, Syr Martyn, c. 1.

This, [sigh] when the mind is strongly affected, is repeated; sorrow succeeds these first emotions; and tears are often seen to follow; sobbing is the sigh still more invigorated.—Goldsmith, Animated Nature, pt. ii. c. 5.

SO'BER, adj. } Fr. Sobre; It. Sòbrio; Sp.
SO'BER, v. } Sobrio; Lat. Sobrius, opposed SO'BERLY. } to ebrius, qui multas haurit SO'BERNESS. } brias, one who drinks many SOBRI'ETY. } cups. Bria, a kind of cup, SO'BERIZE, v. } from the Gr. Bpυ-eiv, scatere, abundare. Sobrius, i. se. i. e. sine briis. See ASSOBRE.

Abstinent, or abstaining from drunkenness or ebriety; from any thing intoxicating, any excess; temperate, moderate, well regulated; regular, steady, collected, unimpassioned, sedate, serious.

Thenne hadde Pacience as pilgrimes have. in here poke vitailes

Sobrete and symple speche.—Piers Plouhman, p. 252.

But we that ben of the dai ben sobre, clothid in the haburioun of feith & of charite.—Wiclif. 1 Tess. c. 5.

But let vs which are of the daye, be sobre, armed with the brest plate of fayth and loue.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

For I seie bi the grace that is ghoun to me to alle that ben among ghou, that ghe saure not more than it bihoueth to saure, but for to faure to sobrenesse, and to ech man as God hath departid the mesure of feith.

Wiclif, Romaynes, c. 12.

Men must enqueren (this is min assent)
Wheder she be wise and sobre, or dronkelewe,
Or proud, or elles other waies a shrew.

Chaucer, The Marchantes Tale, v. 9416.

And after diner Dan John sobberly
This chapman toke apart, and prively
He said him thus.—Id. The Shipmannes Tale, v. 13, 185.

Sobrenesse also, that restrineth the outrage of drinke.
Id. The Persones Tale.

He came, and did her reuerence.
And she hym asketh in silence.
From whens he cam, and what he wolde,
And he with sobre wordes tolde.—Gower, Con. A. b. vi.

Wherefore Pope July was wroth and cast how to bring the Frenchmen downe, yet sobberly lest while he brought him lower he should geue an occasion to lift vp y^e emperour higher.—Tyndall, Workes, p. 369.

With their fast, they destroy the fast which God commaundeth, that is a perpetuall sobrenesse to tame the fleshe.
Id. Ib. p. 244.

Of all Gods workes, which doe this worlde adorne,
There is no one more faire and excellent
Then is mans body, both for poure and forme,
Whiles it is kept in sobre government.

Spenser, Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

But, meant he well, or mus'd he yll,
My mother comming in,
Mends all amys, and sobberly
The fryer did thus begin.

Warner, Albion's England, b. ix.

Who therefore wisely did submit each birth
To knowing Beaumont e'r it did come forth, Working again, untill he said 'twas fit,
And made him the sobriety of his wit.

Cartwright, Upon the Dram. Poems of Mr. John Fletcher.

With Thracian wines recruit thy honour'd guests,
For happy counsels flow from sobre feasts.

Pope, Homer. Iliad, b. ix.

A little learning is a dangerous thing,
Drink deep or taste not the Pierian spring.
There shallow draughts intoxicate the brain
And drinking largely sobers us again.

Francis, Essay on Criticism.

They must first deny a God, and despise an immortal soul, they must conquer their own reason, and cancel the law written in their hearts, they must hate all that is serious, and yet sobberly believe themselves to be no better than the beasts that perish, before men can come to make a scoff at religion, and a mock at sin.—Stillingfleet, vol. i. Ser. 2.

Her with Egyptian wine inspir'd,
With the full draught to madness fir'd,
Augustus sobber'd into tears,
And turn'd her visions into real fears.

Francis, Horace, b. i. Ode 37.

Nature imparting her satiric gift,
Her serious mirth to Arbuthnot and Swift,
With droll sobriety they rais'd a smile
At Folly's cost, themselves unmov'd the while.

Couper, Table Talk

SOC

Sobriety is sometimes oppos'd in scripture to pride, and other disorders of the mind. And sometimes it is opposed to sensuality.—Gilpin, Hints for Sermons, § 20.

And when we met a shepherd old and lame,
Cold and diseased it seemed my blood to tame,
And I was thankful for the moral sight,
That sobberised the vast and wild delight.

Crabbe, Tales of the Hall, b. vi.

SOC. } A. S. Soc, soca; sequela, SO'CAGE. } secta, (sc.) Homagiorum, from SO'KEMAN. } the verb Soc-an, sec-an, adire, SO'KEMANRY. } sequi, to follow; to attend upon. Somner describes soc to be, the power, authority, or liberty to minister justice, and execute laws; (he should have added, among his followers or associates, vassals, tenants;) also the shire, circuit, or territory, wherein such power is exercised by him that is endued with such a privilege or liberty. Whence our Law Lat. word of soca, for a seignory or lordship enfranchised by the king with the liberty of holding or keeping a court of his socmen or socagers, i. e. his tenants, whose tenure is hence called socagium, in English socage.

I cannot but assent to Mr. Somner's etymology of the word; who derives it from the Saxon appellation soc, which signifies liberty or privilege, and, being joined to a usual termination, is called socage, in Latin socagium; signifying thereby a free or privileged tenure.

Blackstone, Commentaries, b. ii. c. 6.

Britton also, from such their freedom, calls them absolutely sokemans, and their tenure sokemanries.—Id. Ib.

SO'CIABLE, or } Fr. Sociable; It. Sociabile; SO'CIAL. } Sp. Sociable; Lat. Sociabi-
SO'CIABLY. } lis, from soc-iare, socius,
SO'CIABLENESS. } from sequi, to follow, to ac-SOCIAB'LITY. } company. See Soc.
SOCIA'LITY. } That may be followed,
SO'CIATE, adj. } accompanied; accessible,
SO'CIATE, v. } conversible; that seeks fol-SOCI'ETY. } lowers or companions; is desirous of them; friendly; seeking or pursuing, uniting for, the common weal or good, the weal of the community; the advantage, happiness, pleasures of others.

If ye would consider those things with pure simple mindes, it should come to passe that ye would geue fayth to my wordes too, and doubt no more, but that the father is in me, and I in y^e father, that both we, the one and the other, are sociate and adherent together naturally and vnseparably.—Udal, John, c. 10.

A common-wealth is called a society or common doing of a multitude of free men, collected together, and united by common accord and covenants among themselves, for the conseruation of themselves as well in peace as in war.

Smith, Commonwealth, b. i. c. 10

A mind that's honest, pure, and just,
A sociable life and free,
A friend that dares not break a trust,
Yet dares die if occasion be.—Brome, Satisfaction.

Thou in thy secrecie although alone,
Best with thyself accompani'd, seekst not Social communication.—Milton, Paradise Lost, b. viii.

— Yet not terrible,
That I should fear, nor sociably mild,
As Raphael, that I should much confide,
But solemn. Id. Ib. b. xi.

Had she persever'd just, there would have been
Some that would sin, mis-thinking she did sin.
Such as would call her friendship love, and feign
To sociableness a name profane.

Donne, On Mistress Boulstred.

And he still on was led, but with such thoughts
Accompanied of things past and to come Lodg'd in his brest, as well might recommend Such solitude before choicest society.

Milton, Paradise Regained, b. i.

There entertain him all the saints above,
In solemn troops, and sweet societies,
That sing, and singing in their glory move,
And wipe the tears for ever from his eyes.—Id. Lycidas.

God having designed man for a sociable creature, made him not only with an inclination, and under a necessity to have fellowship with those of his own kind: but furnished him also with language, which was to be the greater instrument and common tie of society.

Locke, Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 1.

We have implanted in our original constitution inclinations to love, pity, gratitude, sociableness, quiet, joy, reputation.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 9.

Rather he was a man of great benignity, and pleasanness, and sociableness in his conversation, witness his frequent vouchsafing his presence at feasts and entertainments.
Sharp, vol. vi. Ser. 13.

SOC

One sort will not sociate with the rest of their neighbours.
Shelford. Learned Discourses, p. 58.

Be delighted and satisfied with this one thing; in doing one action after another, tending to a common good, or the good of humane society; together with the remembrance of God.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 431.

Nor does there need much penetration to observe how sociably the two faculties lead one another as I may say hand in hand, not only in entering upon our works but through all the steps necessary to compleat them.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. i. c. 2.

Such then was the root and foundation of the sociability of religion in the ancient world, so much envied by modern Pagans.—Warburton. Divine Legation, b. ii. s. 1.

A scene of perfect easy sociability.

Boswell. Life of Johnson.

SOCK. } Dut. Soeke; Ger. Sock; Sw. So'ckless. } Socka; A. S. Soc; Fr. Socque; So'cking, n. } It. Sòcco; Lat. Soccus; which Vossius derives from the Hebrew, and Wachter from the Phrygians; σוקχοι, he observes—sunt calceamenta Phrygia apud Hesychium. See the quotation from Kennett.

For that low sock wherein she us'd to tread,
Marching in greaves, a helmet on her head.

Drayton. The Barons' Wars, b. ii.

— And be it said of thee,
Shakespeare, thou hadst as smooth a comic vein,
Fitting the sock, and in thy natural brain,
As strong conception, and as clear a rage,
As any one that traffic'd with the stage.

Id. To Henry Reynolds, Esq.

Then to the well-trod stage anon,
If Jonson's learned sock be on,
Or sweetest Shakespeare, Fancy's child,
Warble his native wood-notes wild.—Milton. L'Allegro.

Amongst the rest you shall behold one pair, the feet of which were, in times past, sockless, but are now through the change of time (that alters all things) very strangely become the legs of a knight and a courtier.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Woman Hater, Act i. sc. 3.

It was his [Borde's] custom to drinke water three days in a week, to wear constantly a shirt of hair, and every night to hang his shroud and socking or burial-sheet at his bed's-foot, according as he had done, as I conceive, while he was a Carthusian.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. pt. i.

Great Fletcher never treads in buskins here,
Nor greater Jonson dares in socks appear.

Dryden. Mac-Flecknoe.

The soccus was a slight kind of covering for the feet, whence the fashion and name of our socks are derived. The comedians wore these.

Kennett. Roman Antiquities, pt. ii. b. v. c. 6.

SOCKET. Fr. Souchette, dimin. of souche, the stock or trunk. See the first quotation from Plinie.

The stem or trunk; that (incision or hollow) in which any thing is set or fixed, ingrafted, or inserted.

Two goodly beacons, set in watches stead,
Therein gave light, and flam'd continually:
For they of living fire most subtilly
Were made, and set in silver sockets bright,
Cover'd with lids devis'd of substance sly,
That redily they shut and open might.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

And lastly, that the impe stand so close barke to barke in the socket, that a man may not see betweene it and the stocke.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 14.

And both of them (as well the blacke as the white) [elaborate] serve in a collution to strengthen and keepe them fast in their sockets, if they be boyled in vinegre.

Id. Ib. b. xxv. c. 13.

Besides these also he found sundrie pillers of brasse, and sockets of latton.—Holinshed. Descript. of England, b. ii. c. 13.

Dry sorrow in his stupid eyes appears,
For, wanting nourishment, he wanted tears:
His eye-balls in their hollow sockets sink.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. i.

When they change tacks they throw the vessel up in the wind, ease off the sheet, and bring the heel or tack-end of the yard to the other end of the boat, and the sheet in like manner: there are notches, or sockets, at each end of the vessel in which the end of the yard fixes.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 2.

SOCRATIC. adj. } For the application of SOCRATICAL. } these words to a mode of SOCRATICALLY. } discourse, commonly pur-SOCRATIST. } sued by Socrates, see the quotations from Watts.

SOF

There arose a great question between Pythagoras' disciples and the scholars of Socrates, for that the socratistes said it was better and more commodious that all things should be in commotion.—Martin. Marriage of Priestes. (1554.)

There are three sorts of disputation, in which there are some forms and orders observed, and which are distinguished by these three names, viz. Socratic, Forensic, and Academic, that is, the disputes of the schools.

Watts. On the Mind, pt. i. c. 10.

The socratical way is managed by questions and answers in such a manner as this, viz. If I would lead a person into the belief of a heaven and a hell, or a future state of rewards and punishments, I might begin in some such manner of inquiry, and suppose the most obvious and easy answers.

Q. Does not God govern the whole world? &c.

Id. Ib. c. 11.

Is it such a pleasure to be non-plus'd in mood and figure, that you had rather be snapped in the mouse-trap of a syllogism, than treated socratically and genteely?

Goodman. Winter Evenings, pt. iii.

It has been usual, among the admirers of Socratic morality, to compare it with the evangelical.

Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 17.

SOD. Sodden, past part. of Seethe.

And as a smith to harden any tooles,
(Broad axe, or mattocke) in his trough doth coole
The red-hot substance, that so feruent is,
It makes the cold waue strait to seethe and hisse:
So sod, and hizd his eye about the stake.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. ix.

2. Boy. All the rest,
Except the captain, are in limbo patrum,
Where they lye sod in sack.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Captain, Act iv. sc. 2.

The knight caused him to be kept certeine daies and nights from the sea, meat set afore him he greedilie deuoured, and did eat fish both raw and sod.

Holinshed. Chronicle. King John, an. 1204.

SOD. Dut. Sode, soode. It is perhaps Sod, the past part. of Seethe, to boil: and, consequently, wetted, soaked or steeped in water: and applied to—

Lumps of wet, or moist or damp turf.

She therefore to encourage hir people against the enimies mounted vp into an high place raised vp of turfes and sods made for the nonce, out of the which she made a long & verie pithie oration.

Holinshed. Historie of England, b. iv. c. 10.

He [Adrian] caused a great trench to be cast ouerthwart the land from the mouth of Tine to the riuer of Eske, and a wall to be made on the inner side of the same, of turfe and sods.—Id. Historie of Scotland. Mogall.

Yellow sheaves from rich Ceres her cottage had crown'd,
Green rushes were strew'd on her floor,
Her casement, sweet woodbines crept wantonly round,
And deck'd the sod seats at her door.

Cunningham. Content.

SODALITY. Fr. Sodalité; It. Sodalizio; Lat. Sodales, quasi sedales, quod una sedent essentque: because they sit and take meat together, (Festus.)

Companionship at meat, at the table: generally—companionship, fellowship, society.

Sodalities of all sorts and conditions whatsoever, either secular or ecclesiastical.—Parth. Sacra. 1633. p. 180.

A new confraternity was instituted in Spain, of the slaves of the blessed Virgin, and this sodality established with large indulgencies.—Stillingfleet. Ser.

SOEFUL. Fr. Seau; Scotch Say, saye; Ger. Sau, saw; Sw. Saa, vas.

A pail, a bucket. Ray calls a So or soa, a tub with two ears, to carry on a stang or wooden bar.

No more than a pump grown dry will yield any water unless you pour a little water into it first, and then for one bason-ful you may fetch up so many soe-fuls.

H. More. Antidote against Atheism, pt. i. b. ii. c. 6

SOFA. Persian Sofat. A sofah; a low seat, a small bank of earth, (Thomson.) The A. S. Swæf-an, (see SWEVEN), is dormire, to sleep, to lull to sleep.

The king seeing his brother enter the room with Belsora in his hand, he leaped off from the sofa on which he sat and cry'd out, 'Tis he! 'tis my Abdalla!—Guardian, No. 198.

Thus first Necessity invented stools,
Convenience next suggested elbow-chairs,
And Luxury th' accomplish'd sofa last.

Cowper. Task, b. i.

SOF

SOFT, adj. } Dut. Saest, saft; Ger. Sanft; So'FTEN, v. } A. S. Soft, perhaps from Swef- So'FTLY. } ed, swift, sopitus, past part.
So'FTNESS. } of Swef-ian, (see SWEVEN), So'FTENER. } sopire, lenire.
So'FTENING, n. } Gentle, quiet, placid, lulling, So'FTLING. } soothing; tender, delicate, effeminate; pliant or pliable (met. simple, silly.)

To soften,—to mollify, to soothe, to assuage, to relax, to melt.

We reverencede reson. and romed forth softeliche
And mette with a mayster.—Piers Plouhman, p. 243.

Or what thing wenten ye out to se, a man clothid with softe clothis? lo thei that ben clothid with softe clothis; ben in housis of kyngis.—Wiclif. Matt. c. 11.

Other what went ye oute for to se? a man clothed in softe rayment? Behold they that weare soft clothyng, are in kynges houses.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Britheren, if a man be occupied in ony gilt, ghe that ben spyrtual enforme ghe such oon in spyrt of sofnesse, biholdynge thisilf lest that thou be temptid.

Wiclif. Galathies, c. 6.

And I my silf poul biseche ghou bi the myldenesse and sofnesse of Crist, which in the face am meke amonge ghou, and I absent triste in ghou.—Id. 2 Corynth. c. 10.

I Paule my selfe besech you by the mekenes & sofnes of Chryste, whiche when I am presente amonge you, am of no reputacion, but am bolde towarde you beyng absent.

Bible, 1551. Ib.

Under a shepherd soft and negligent,
The wolf hath many a shepe and lambe to rent.

Chaucer. The Doctoures Tale, v. 11, 971

Fro Jerusalem vnto Burgoine
Ther nis a fairer necke iwis
To fele how smooth and soft it is.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

And soft unto himself he sayd: Fie
Upon a lord that wol have no mercie.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1724.

Out at the dore he goth ful prively,
Whan that he saw his time, softly.

Id. The Reves Tale, v. 4056.

Now were they easie, now were they wood,
In hem I felt both harme and good,
Now sore without alleggement,
Now softening with the ointement,
It softened here, and priked there,
Thus ease and anger together were.—Id. Rom. of the R.

In harde weyes men gone softe,
And er thei clombe aise them ofte.—Gower. Con. A. b. iii.

The waters fall with difference discreet,
Now soft; now loud, unto the wind did call:
The gentle warbling wind low answered to all.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

Whiles every sence the humour sweet embayd,
And slombring soft my hart did steale away,
Me seemed, by my side a royall mayd
Her daintie limbes full softly down did lay.

Id. Ib. b. i. c. 9.

We receive fashions of our companions: the drunkard leadeth his guest into drunkenness. Effeminate men and softlings cause the stoute man to waxe tender.

Wootton. Christ. Manual, (1576.)

— Because he mark'd and saw
The free spectators, subject to no law,
Having well eat and drunke, the rites being done,
Were to be staid with softnesses, and wonne
With something that was acceptably new.

B. Jonson. Horace.

The sirens will so soften with their song,
(Shrill, and in sensuall appetite so strong)
His loose affections, that he giues them head.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xii.

Asp. Thou art some prating fellow,
One that hath studyed out a trick to talk
And move soft-hearted people.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Maid's Tragedy, Act v.

The softest body in the world will as invincibly resist the coming together of any other two bodies, if it be not put out of the way, but remain between them, as the hardest that can be found or imagined.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 4.

A lady all in white, with laurel crown'd,
Who clos'd the rear, and softly pac'd along,
Repeating to herself the former song.

Dryden. The Flower and the Leaf.

There being only some few Ditheists to be excepted, (such as Plutarch and Atticus) who out of a certain softness and tenderness of nature, that they might free the one good God, from the imputation of evils, would needs set up besides him, an evil soul or daemon also in the world self-existent, to bear all the blame of them.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 369.

Those softners, and expedient-mongers, shake their heads so strongly, that we can hear their pockets jingle.—Swift.

I allow that elevations and softenings of the voice judiciously managed, are both ornamental and useful.
Abp. Hort. Charge to the Clergy, (1742.)

Upon more mature consideration, they came at last to this conclusion: to impose the Creed as before, and to qualify the seeming harshness of the damnatory clauses by a softening rubrick.—Waterland. Works, p. 306.

Some of them, now and then got up, and said something after the manner of their first harangues; and one sung a very agreeable air, with a degree of softness and melody which we could not have expected.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 13.

It [polite learning] has a secret, but powerful influence in softening and meliorating the disposition.

Knox. Liberal Education, Introd.

SO'GGY. Gifford had not met with the word elsewhere: "I have heard it applied," he adds, "to hay that has been cut too early, and sweats as it lies in heaps." Perhaps, from A. S. Suggan, to suck, to absorb.

Cor. How now, Mitis! what's that you consider so seriously?

Mit. Troth, that which doth essentially please me, the warping condition of this green and soggy multitude.

B. Jonson. Every Man out of his Humour, Act iii. sc. 2.

SOIL, (i. e. assoil, qv.)

But now because he speaketh of our sophystrie: let vs consider how substantiallye the man soyleth the first reason, that he woulde were rekened so lyghte.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 626.

SOIL. Fr. Sol; It. Suolo; Lat. Solum.

The earth, land, ground,—land, with reference to its produce.

I saw Troye fall down in burning gledes:

Neptunus town clene razed from the soil.

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

Whereof is some but simple seeme, consider well the soyle. They grew not all at home, some came from forreyne fieldes,

The which (per case) set here againe, no pleasant sauour yeeldes.

G. W. In Praise of Gascoigne.

'Twas said of old, a saint once curst the soil,
So barren and so hungry, that no toil
Could ever make it any thing to bear,
Nor would aught prosper that was planted there.

Drayton. The Moon-Calf.

Nor every plant on every soil will grow:
The swallow loves the watery ground, and low;
The marshes, alders; nature seems t' ordain
The rocky cliff for the wild ash's reign:
The baleful yew to northern blasts assigns;
To shores the myrtles, and to mounts the vines.

Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. ii.

The vine is more affected by the difference of soils than any other fruit-tree.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 11.

SOIL, v. } Goth. Sauljan; A. S. Syl-ian; SOIL, n. } Ger. Salen; Sw. Soola; Fr. Sou- SOI'LING, n. } iller; It. Sogliare. To soil, or SOI'LINESS. } sully, is—SOI'LURE. } To dirt, to file or defile; to pollute, to stain, to tarnish.

A soiled horse,—a horse cleansed or purged of his foulness by spring grass.

Besides them both upon the soiled gras
The dead corse of an armed knight was spread,
Whose armour all with blood besprinkled was.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 1.

The whiles my handes I [Pilate] washt in purity,
The whiles my soule was soyl'd with fowle iniquity.

Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 7.

Which fleshly accustoming without the soul's union and commixture of intellectual delight, is rather a soiling than a fulfilling of marriage-rites.

Milton. Doctrine of Divorce, b. ii. § 19.

Make proof of the incorporation of silver and tin, and observe, whether it yield no soiliness more than silver.

Bacon. Physiological Remains.

It will be sweeter and cleaner than brass alone, which yieldeth a soiliness.—Id. Ib.

He merits well to haue her, that doth seeke her,
Not making any scruple of her soylure.

Shakespeare. Troil. & Cress. Act iv. sc. 1.

The fitchew, nor the soyled horse goes to'ot with a more riotous appetite.—Id. Lear, Act iv. sc. 6.

The place which is shown for the haven, is on a level with the town, and has probably been stopped up by the great heaps of dirt that the sea has thrown into it; for all the soil on that side of Ravenna has been left there insensibly by the sea's discharging it self upon it for many ages.

Addison. Italy.

SO'JOURN, v. } Fr. Séjourner; It. Soggiorn- SO'JOURN, n. } nàre. Du Cange says,—Diur- SO'JOURNER. } nare, diem exigere, morari, SO'JOURNING, n. } nostris séjourner. Menage and Skinner suppose it to be sub-diurnare, q. d. ad tempus seu aliquot dies commorari,—to tarry or abide for a time, for some days.

To tarry, abide, stay, dwell, to remain, to reside,
(sc.) for a time, for days.

Ther held thei long soiour.

R. Brunne, p. 246.

The Englis kynges turned, thei mot do nomore,

But soiorned tham a while in rest a Bangore.—Id. p. 3.

Sothliche seide the frere. he sojorneth with ous freres.

Piers Ploukman, p. 167.

Sojourned han these marchants in that toun

A certain time, as fell to hir plesance.

Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 4568.

With delight she halt sojour,

For both they dwellen in o tour,

As long as youth is in season,

They dwellen in one mansion.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

And there he dwelte for a while,

Till afterwarde in to that yle,

Fro when he cam, ayene he tourneth,

Where all his life that he soiourneth

Amonge the Grekes, till that he dyde.—Gower. C. A. b. v.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedie hast you may.

Say, vncle Gloucester, if our brother come,

Where shall we soiourne, till our coronation?

Shakespeare. Rich. III. Act iii. sc. 1.

Thee, I re-visit now with bolder wing,

Escap't the Stygian pool, though long detain'd

In that obscure sojourn.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

Thy life hath yet been private, most part spent

At home, scarce view'd the Gallilean towns,

And once a year Jerusalem, few days

Short sojourn.—Id. Paradise Regained, b. iii.

For we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, like all our fathers: our dayes are like the shadowe vpon the earth, and there is none abiding.—Bible, 1583, 1 Chron. xxix. 15.

Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years.

Bible. Exodus, xii. 40.

Within the fane a stone of sable hue

Stood where the Amazons their victims slew;

Who held it lawless, when they sojourn'd here,

To slay the sheep, or sacrifice the steer;

Instead of these the full-fed, pamper'd steed

Was doom'd, a victim, at this fane, to bleed.

Fawkes. Apoll. Rhodius. Argonautics, b. ii.

Henry Byram was born near Dunster in Somersetshire on the last of Aug. 1580, and in Oct. term 1597 was sent to Exeter Coll. where he continued in the condition of a sojourner till he was elected a student of Ch. Ch. 21 Dec. 1599.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. pt. ii.

SO'KEN. A. S. Socne, (see Soc,) toll, (Tyr-whitt.)

Privilege assumed of taking toll.

Toll for grinding corn. Cowell says, "there is bond socome and love; socome-bond, where tenants are bound to grind at the lord's mill; love,—where they do it freely out of love to their lord." Perhaps where the lord allows it to be done freely or without paying toll.

Gret soken hath this miller out of doute

With whete and malt, of all the land aboute.

Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 3986.

SO'LACE, v. } Fr. Solacier; It. Sollazzare;

SO'LACE, n. } Sp. Solaza; Lat. Solatium,

SOLA'CIOUS. } from solatum, past part. of solari, i. e. ei, qui solus ac derelictus est, bonam spem facere,—to give hope, to encourage the solitary and forsaken. Generally—

To encourage, to cheer, to comfort, to soothe, to recreate, (to console, qv.)

Home forto wend to childe & to wife,

To visitte ther londes, to solace ther life.

R. Brunne, p. 4.

His solace was alle reft, that scho fro him was gon,

Ne no sonne him left, bot ging Edward alon.—Id. p. 252.

And synful ben solacede. and saved by that name

And ge callen hym Crist. Piers Ploukman, p. 367.

And britheren I preie ghous, that ghe suffre a word of solace.—Wiclif. Ebrewis, c. 13.

And thus he walketh to solace

Him and his folke, for sweeter place

To playen in, he may not finde.—Chaucer. Rom. of the R.

1768

For if your good will I lese,
I mote be dead, I may not chese,
And if that thou foryete me,
Mine herte shall neuer in liking be Nor elsewhere find sollace.—Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

For he kepte reuell, daunsyng, and solas, and euery day it was newe to begyn.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 160.

In Chaucer I am sped

His tales I have red

His mater is delectable

Solacious and commendable.—Skelton. Philip Sparow.

The Romysh clergy satled them selues all the worlde ouer, in the aboudaunt pleasures of Sodome, whych were (as the prophet reheareth) pryde, plenty of feadyng, solacyouse pastymes, ydelnesse, and crueltie.

Bale. English Volaries, pt. ii.

Thus they awhile with court and goodly game

Themselves did solace each one with his dame,

Till that great lady thence away them sought

To vew her castles other wondrous frame.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

Unkindnesse past, they gan of solace treat,

And bathie in pleasaunce of the ioyous shade,

Which shielded them against the boyling heat,

And, with greene boughes decking a gloomy glade,

About the fountaine like a girlond made.—Id. Ib. b. i. c. 7.

Did he open so to us this hazardous and accidental door of marriage, to shut upon us like the gate of death, without retracting or returning, without permitting to change the worst, most insupportable, most unchristian mischance of marriage for all the mischiefs and sorrows that can ensue, being an ordinance that was especially given as a cordial and exhilarating cup of solace, the better to bear our other crosses and afflictions?

Milton. The Doct. & Discipline of Divorce, b. ii. c. 9.

A cause supreme, that might all nature steer,

Avert our danger, and prevent our fear.

Who when implor'd, might timely succour give,

Solace our anguish, and our wants relieve.

Blackmore. Creation, b. v.

But the mind having a natural propensity to pleasure loves to solace herself in the contemplation of whatever belonging to her she conceives will do her honour.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. ii. c. 24.

The ingenious biographer of the poet Gray has informed us, that the most approved productions of his friend were brought forth soon after the death of one whom the poet loved. Sorrow led him to seek for solace of the muse.

Knor, Ess. 50.

SO'LAR. } Fr. Solaire; It. Solàre; Sp.

SO'LARY. } Solar; Lat. Solaris, from sol, the sun.

Sunny; of or pertaining to the sun. And see the quotation from Locke.

Ve Adar was an intercalary month, added, some years, unto the other twelve, to make the solar and lunary year agree.—Raleigh. History of the World, b. ii. c. 3.

Moneths are not onely lunary, and measured by the moon, but also solar, and determined by the motion of the sun; that is, the space wherein the sun doth pass 30 degrees of the ecliptic.—Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. iv. c. 12.

Our solar system consists of the sun, and the planets and comets moving about it.

Locke. Elements of Natural Philosophy, c. 3.

The corpuscles that make up the beams of light be solar effluuiums, or minute particles of some ethereal substance, thrusting on one another from the lucid body.—Boyle.

His soul proud science never taught to stray

Far as the solar walk, or milky way;

Yet simple Nature to his hope has given,

Behind the cloud-topt hill, an humbler heaven.

Pope. Essay on Man, Ep. 1.

Careless of earth, exulting lifts his eyes,

Spreads his firm wing,—and gains upon the skies!

By her instructed, meets the solar ray,

And grows familiar with the blaze of day!

Boyse. To the Duke of Gordon.

SOLD, n. Ger. Sold; It. Sòldo; Sp. Soldada; Fr. Sould. Souldier's lendings, entertainment, or pay, (an old word,) (Cotgrave.) See SOULDIER. Her solde to entertain, i. e. to take or receive her pay.

An he seide to hem, smyte ye no man wrongfully, nether make ye fals chalenge and be ye a payed with youre soudis.

Wiclif. Luk, c. 3.

Sayd Guyon, "Noble lord, what meed so great,

Or grace of earthly prince so soveraine,

But by your wondrous worth and warlike feat

So well may hope, and easely attaine?

But were your will her sold to entertaine,

And numbred be mongst knights of Maydenhed,

Great guerdon well I wote, should you remaine,

And in her favor high be reckoned.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

SO'LDAN, or } Gr. of the Lower Ages, SO'UDAN. } Σουλτανος; Lat. Soldanus;
 SO'UDANNESS. } Fr. Soldan, souldan, sultan; Sp. Soldan; It. Sultano. See SULTAN.
Soudan (in the Egyptian and Moorish tongues) doth signifie a king, prince, or sovereign, (Cot-grave.)

Now fell it, that these marchants stood in grace
 Of him that was the soudan of Surrie;
 For whan they came from any strange place
 He wold of his benigne curtesie
 Make hem good chere.

Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 4618.

This soudannesse, whom I thus blame and warrie,
 Let prively hire conseil gon hir way:
 What shuld I in this tale longer tarie?
 She rideth to the soudan on a day,
 And sayd him, that she wold reneie hire lay,
 And Cristendom of prestes hondes fong,
 Repenting hire she hethen was so long.—Id. Ib. v. 4729.

Though like a cover'd field, where champions bold Wont ride in arm'd, and at the soldans chair
 Defi'd the best of Panim chivalry
 To mortal combat or carrear with lance.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

— The soldan, as he fled,
 Oft call'd on Alla, gnashing with despite,
 And shame, and murmur'd many an empty curse.

J. Philips. Cider, b. ii.

SO'LDIER. } Fr. Souldoyer; It. Soldato; SO'LDIER. } Sp. Soldado; Dut. Soldaet; SO'LDIERSHIP. } Ger. Soldat; one who served SO'LDIERESS. } for pay; Ger. Sold, which Wachter derives from sel-en, to give, (to sell, qv.)

Others derive from the Lat. Soldurii, qui salario conducuntur, those who are hired for a salary.
 (See SALARY.) But the soldurii (Cæsar) do not appear to have served for pay. (See the quotation from Smith.) Others again derive the It.
Soldo, (the pay,) from soldo, the coin; Lat. Sol- lus, menstruum stipendium, their monthly pay;
 Low. Lat. Solidare, stipendium præbere; solidata, stipendium unius solidi, quod datur militi. See Du Cange, Vossius, (de Vitiis,) Wachter, Kilian, and Menage; and see the quotation from Smith.

Milites in the Vulg. New Test. is rendered knightis by Wiclif; soldiers, (soudiours), in Bible 1551.

Aniowe with ther souders was alle biseged & set.

R. Brunne, p. 109.

The worde souldier now seemeth rather to come of sould, a payment, and more to betoken a waged or hired man to fight, thā otherwise, yet Cæsar in his Cōmentaries called soldures in the tongue gallois, men who devoted & swore themselves in a certaine band or othe one to an other, and to the capitaine.—Smith. Commonwealthe, b. i. c. 18.

Which to expresse, who could refraine from teres?
 What Myrmidon? or yet what Dolopes?
 What stern Vlysses' waged soldiar?

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

He had been brought up in some soldiery, which he knew how to set out with more than deserved ostentation.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. iv.

But he was foyous and gladde of theyr cōmyng, for so moche as he had nede of suche sowdyours to defende hym and his lande agayne his enemies.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 82.

Hys apparell is souldier-lyke, better knowen by hys fearce doynges then by his gay goyng.

Ascham. A Report & Discourse of Germany.

For nothing deckes a souldier so, as doth an honour'd wound.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. iv.

— Soldieress

That equally canst poize sternness with pity,
 Whom now I know hast much more power on him,
 Than ever he had on thee, who ow'st his strength,
 And his love too.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Two Noble Kinsmen, Act i. sc. 1.

The ape clad souldierlike, fit for th' intent,
 In a blew iacket with a crosse of redd
 And manie slits, as if that he had shedd
 Much blood through many wounds therein received.

Spenser. Mother Hubbard's Tale.

Conclude we therefore souldior-like,
 And let a combate yeeld
 Vnto the hardier of vs twaine
 The honour of the field.

Warner. Albion's England, b. iii.

Where was your souldiership? why went not you out?
 And all your right honourable valour with ye?
 Why met ye not the Tartar, and defi'd him?
 Drew your dead-doing sword, and buckl'd with him?

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Loyal Subject, Act iv. sc. 5.

VOL. II.

And I perswade me God hath not permitted
 His strength again to grow up with his hair
 Garrison'd around about him like a camp
 Of faithful souldiery, were not his purpose
 To use him further yet in some great service.

Milton. Samson Agonistes, v. 506.

What kings decree, the souldier must obey,
 Wag'd against foes; and when the wars are o'er,
 Fit only to maintain despotic power;
 Dangerous to freedom, and desir'd alone
 By kings, who seek an arbitrary throne.

Dryden. Sigismunda & Guiscardo.

Be silent, or I shall no longer style you soldiers, but citizens, if those, indeed, who disclaim the laws of Rome, deserve to be ranked among the meanest of the people.

Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 6.

How, in the name of souldiership and sense,
 Should England prosper, when such things, as smooth
 And tender as a girl, all essenc'd o'er
 With odours, and as profligate as sweet;
 Who sell their laurel for a myrtle wreath,
 And love when they should fight; when such as these Presume to lay their hand upon the ark
 Of her magnificent and awful cause?—Cowper. Task, b. ii.

SOLE. Fr. Sole, soulier; It. Suola; Sp. Suela; Lat. Solea; Dut. Sole; A. S. Sol, sole; all manifestly (says Lye) from the Goth. Sulya, a sandal; from sulyan, ga-sulyan, fundare. See SILL.

Sole of the foot,—the bottom of it; that part upon which we move or tread; sole of the shoe,—
 the bottom of it.

Sole, It. Sògliola,—a fish, so called from its flat-ness, in which it resembles the sole of the foot.

Most vertuous virgin, borne of heavenly berth,
 That, to redeeme thy woeful parents head
 From tyrants rage and ever-dying dread,
 Hast wandered through the world now long a day,
 Yett ceassest not thy weary soles to lead.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

Dorida. Had I that foot hid in those shoes, (Proportion'd to my height)
 Short heel, thin instep, even toes,
 A sole so wond'rous strait.

Drayton. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 2.

Such be the dog, I charge, thou mean'st to train,
 His back is crook'd, and his belly plain,
 Of fillet stretch'd, and huge of haunch behind,
 A tapering tail, that nimble cuts the wind;
 Truss-thigh'd, straight-ham'd, and fox-like form'd his paw,
 Large leg'd, dry sol'd, and of protended claw.

Tickell. A Fragment on Hunting.

O patron of Socrates' high abodes,
 Phœbus, the ruling power among the gods;
 Whom first we serve, whole woods of unctuous pine
 Are fell'd for thee, and to thy glory shine;
 By thee protected, with our naked soles.
 Through flames unsing'd we march, and tread the kindled coals.—Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. xi.

The dresses for the feet and legs amongst the Greeks and Romans were nearly the same; they had both shoes and sandals, the former covered the whole foot, the last consisted of one or more soals, and were fastened with thongs above the foot.—Beloe. Herodotus, b. i. Note.

Here's the fattest of carp, shall we dress you a brace?
 Would you chuse any soals, or a mullet, or plaice?

Cambridge. The Fable of Jotham.

SOLE. } Fr. Seul; It. Sòlo; Sp. Solo; SO'LELY. } Lat. Solus, which (Vossius) may SO'LENESS. } be from the Gr. ὅλος, totus, (Oscan, SO'LESHIP. } sollus,) the whole, entire, the whole undivided into parts; or it may be Se, i. e. sine
aliis, and therefore, alone.

Alone, only, single; without any other.

Trewly she was to mine eye,
 The solein fenix of Arabie.

Chaucer. Dreame.

The aforesaid tenement standing in the parisshe of Seynt Mighell forsaide, (I will and bequeth) unto the said Elizabeth my wif, terme of her life, upon condition that she lyve soole and woute an husband.—Fabyan. Chronycle, Pref. p. xi.

To whom god Neptune, softly smyling, thus;
 "Daughter, me seemes of double wrong ye plaine,
 Gainst one that hath both wronged you and us;
 For death t' adward I ween'd did appertaine
 To none but to the seas sole souveraine.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 12.

Lord chief justices. This power was sometime sole in a single person, and sometimes equally in two together.

Fuller. Worthies. England.

— But of this be sure,
 To do ought good never will be our task,
 But ever to do ill our sole delight,
 As being the contrary to his high will Whom we resist.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

1769

Now all the youth of England are on fire,
 And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lyes;
 Now thrue the armorers, and honors thought
 Reignes solely in the breast of euery man.

Shakespeare. Hen. V. Second Chorus.

Lieu. Yet I wish sir,
 (I meane for your particular) you had not Joyn'd in commission with him; but either haue borne
 The action of your selfe, or else to him, had left it soly.

Id. Coriolanus, Act iv. sc. 7.

The laurel importing conquest and sovereignty, and so by consequence soleness in that faculty.

Fuller. Worthies. England.

God is the oldest of all things, because he is unmade.
 From whence it may be concluded, that all Thales his other gods were generated, and the off-spring of one sole unmade Deity.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 370.

Every state hath not only its inconveniences, but its consolations; and the discontented would see this, if they did not perversely look solely at the former in their own case, and the latter in that of others.—Secker, vol. iii. Ser. 10.

This ambition of a sole power—this dangerous soleship is a fault in our church indeed.—Sir E. Dering. Speeches, p. 134.

We enter not into the manner in which the death of Christ saves us from the effects of sin. This is a matter solely with God.—Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 17.

France has an advantage, over and above its abilities in the cabinet and the skill of its negotiators; which is (if I may use the expression) its soleness, continuity of riches and power within itself, and the nature of its government.

Chesterfield.

SO'LECISM. } Fr. Solécisme; It. Sole-
 SO'LECISE, v. } cismo; Sp. Solecismo; Lat.
 SO'LECIST. } Soloicismus; Gr. Σολοι-SOLECI'STICAL. } κισμος, so called from Soli, SOLECI'STICALLY. } a town of Cilicia, said to have been founded by Solon, and peopled by the Athenians, who were afterwards charged with corrupting the language of their parent state.

The word is not only applied to—
 A corruption or impropriety of speech; but to any impropriety or incongruity.

My mind lately prompted me, that I should commit a great solecism, if among the rest of my friends in England,
 I should leave you unsaluted.—Howell, b. i. Let. 40.

T. Ca. buzz'd me in the ear, that the Ben. had barrell'd up a great deal of knowledge, yet it seems he had not read the Ethicks, which among other precepts of morality forbid self-commendation, declaring it to be an ill-favour'd solecism in good manners.—Id. b. ii. Let. 13.

This being too loose a principle—to fancy the holy writers to solecize in their language, when we do not like the sense.

More. Mystery of Godliness, (1660,) b. i. c. 9.

The learned doctor represents it as a great solecism to speak of an ell, or a mile of consciousness.

Waterland. Works, vol. i. p. 209.

Shall a noble writer, and an inspired noble writer, be called a solecist, and barbarian, for giving a new turn to a word so agreeable to the analogy and genius of the Greek tongue?

Blackwall. Sacred Classics, i. 159.

According to this hypothesis, the use of these combinations, with respect to the pronouns, is almost always sole- cistical; but not more so than that of himself in the nominative case, which has long been authorised by constant custom.—Tyrwhitt. Gloss. to Chaucer, in v. Self.

I have attempted, by recollecting old meditations, and consulting a few scatterd papers, in which I had formerly for my own use set down some of them (briefly, and almost solecistically), to give an answer to the two first of your questions, together.—Wollaston. Religion of Nature, Introd.

SO'LEMN. } Fr. Solennel, solemnizer; SO'LEMNLY. } It. Solenne, solemnizzare; Sp.
 SO'LEMNESS. } Solenne, solemnizar; Lat.
 SOLEMNITY. } Solennis. Solenne dicitur
 SO'LEMNIZE, v. } quod sollis, hoc est, omnibus SO'LEMNIZATE, v. } singulisque annis fit: be-SOLEMNIZ'ATION. } cause it (sc. a solemne rite SO'LEMNIZING, n. } or ceremony is performed in all years, or in every year.) Sollus (an old Oscan word) means—totus, omnis. (See Vossius.) Solemn is now commonly applied to—

Ritual or ceremonial (observances), at stated times, regular periods; at any one time or more.

Ritual, formal, ceremonious, serious, grave;
 causing a feeling of seriousness, devotion, reverence, awe.

Whan William was coruned kyng so solemply,

& had taken homage of barons bi & bi,

He turned over the se vnto Normundi.—R. Brunne, p. 73.

10 Q

And his fadir and modir wenten ech yere into Jerusalem in the solempne day of pask.—Wiclif. Luk. c. 2.

While at the last vpon a solemne day,
As custome was, the people ferre and nere
Before the noone vnto the temple went,
With sacrifice devout in their manere.
Chaucer. The Testament of Creseide.

His resons spake he ful solempnely,
Souning alway the encrese of his winning.
Id. Prolog. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 257.

Duk Theseus, with all his compaignie,
Is comen home to Athenes his citee,
With alle blisse and gret solempnite.
Id. The Knights Tale, v. 2702.

If that ye liste to taken hede,
Therof a solemne tale I rede,
Whiche I shall tell in remembrance.
Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

And happeneth thilke tyme so,
The lordes both, and the commune
The high festes of Neptune
Upon the stronde at riunge,
As it was custome and vsage Solempneliche thei be sigh.—Id. Ib. b. viii.

So that in to the large strete
This horse with great solemnitee
Was brought within the citee.—Id. Ib. b. i.

Whether they, and every of them, have solemnized matrimony between his parishioners, or any other persons, the banes not before asked, three several Sundays, or holydays.
Burnet. Records, pt. ii. b. ii. No. 15.

That they, nor any of them from henceforth, do presume to solemnize matrimony in their churches, chappels, or elsewhere, between any persons, that have been married before.—Id. Ib. b. iii. No. 26.

And whether touching the solemnization and use of this sacrament of matrimony, and also of all other the sacraments of the church, they have kept and observed the old and laudable custom of the church, without any innovation or alteration in any of the same?—Id. Ib.

—Yield: and we will mediate such accord,
As shall dispense with rigour and the laws;
And interpose this solemn faith of our Betwixt your fault and the offended pou'r.
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. vi.

The ruin'd wals he did readifye
Of Troynovant, gainst force of enmy,
And built that gate which of his name is hight,
By which he lyes entombed solemnly.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 10.

A diligent decency in Polycletus above others; to whom though the highest praise be attributed by the most, yet lest he should go free from exception, some think he wanted solemnness.—Reliquiae Wottonianae, p. 55.

Then gan they sprinkle all the posts with wine,
And made great feast to solemnize that day:
They all perfumde with frankincense divine,
And precious odours fetech from far away.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 12.

And all these mighty wonders they solemnly did avow, they performed by the power of Jesus Christ, who was crucified at Jerusalem, and who was now alive at the right hand of God.—Sharp, vol. ii. Ser. 8.

Plutarch well condemns the vulgar both amongst the Egyptians and Greeks, for that in their mournful solemnities, they sottishly attributed to the gods, the passions belonging to the fruits of the earth.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 508.

As we have an instance in the feast of the dedication, for the solemnizing of which we find our Saviour making a journey to Jerusalem, tho' yet that festival was only of human appointment.—Sharp, vol. v. Dis. 9.

But they, who have the misfortune to be of this make, should by no means trust to their own most solemn purposes, or even vows. Their chief safety is in flight.
Secker, vol. i. Ser. 27.

In that trying hour, just before he retired to the garden, where the power of darkness was to be permitted to display on him its last and utmost effort, Jesus gave it solemnly in charge to the eleven apostles (the twelfth, the son of perdition, was already lost; he was gone to hasten the execution of his intended treason.)—to the eleven, whose loyalty remained as yet unshaken, Jesus in that awful hour gave it solemnly in charge, "to love one another, as he had loved them."—Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 12.

SO'LERT. Lat. Solers (soll-ers, sollus (see SOLEMN) et ars, qui totum artem callet,—Vossius.)
Crafty, subtle.

It was far more reasonable to think, that because man was the wisest (or most solert and active) of all animals, therefore he had hands given him.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 685.

SOLICIT, v. Fr. Soliciter; It. Sollecitare; Sp. Solicitar; Lat. Solicitare, sullicitare, (sub, and lactare, from lacere, to entice, to allure:) Nam solicitare dicuntur, qui alli-ciunt spe aliqua, aut metu, (Vossius.) See the quotations from Martin, and Holland.

To entice, to allure, to tempt; to draw, to attract, to entreat, to implore, to sue for; to tempt, to incite, to excite, to arouse; to try, to urge earnestly, importunately, anxiously. And hence—

Solicitude, is — earnestness, eagerness, careful-ness, anxiety.

He will send thither, with all speed, the Bishop of Bayton to further, solicite, and set forth the same.
Burnet. Records, b. ii. No. 22.

So as ye may be sure to have of him effectual concurrence and advise in the furtherance and solicitation of your charges, whether the pope's holiness amend, remain long sick, or (as God forbid) should fortune to die.—Id. Ib.

He became, of a solicitor to corrupt her, a most devout exhorter, and a most earnest persuader, that she should all her life-daies persiste in her most godlye profession of perpetuall virginity.—Martin. Marriage of Priestes, (1544.)

Solicitors ar such, as beeing learned in the lawes, and informed of their maisters cause, doe informe and instruct the counsellors in the same.
Smith. Commonwealth, b. ii. c. 1.

What diligence can here suffyse vs? What solicitude can we thynke here ynough? agaynste the cummyng of thys almightye king.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1266.

Who fail not to advise the duke with speed,
Soliciting to what he soon agreed.
Daniel. Civil Wars, b. i.

And not onely we men are solicited and moved by salt more than by any thing else to our meat; but muttons, beufes, and horses also have benefit therby in that respect.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxxi. c. 7.

Tha. Let me embrace thee with a sister's love,
A sister's love, Cleophila! for should
My brother henceforth study to forget
The vows that he hath made thee, I would ever Solicit thy deserts.—Ford. Lover's Melancholy, Act v. sc. 1.

—Must she
Who hath preserv'd her spotless chastity
From all solicitation, now at last
From agues and diseases be embrac'd?
Carew. Upon the Sickness of E. S.

And [this is that, if any thing, that has made] those that have been well, give a visit to their sick friends, of whose health they have been over-desirous and solicitous.
More. Immortality of the Soul, b. ii. c. 15.

Beauty is a good solicitress of an equal sute, especially where youth is to be the judge thereof.
Fuller. Worthies. Northamptonshire.

So long as men are perswaded, that there is an understanding Being infinitely powerful, having no law but his own will, (because he has no superiour) that may do whatever he pleases at any time to them, they can never securely enjoy themselves or any thing, nor be ever free from disquieting fear and solicitude.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 83.

With gentle touches he performs his part,
This way and that, soliciting the dart,
And exercises all his heavenly art.
Dryden. Virgil. Aeneis, b. xii.

We usually blame the body to an high degree, as the great clog and hindrance of the soul; the obstructer of its free and natural motions, the offerer of impious, of filthy, of vain images; the solicitor to every evil act, all that defiles the man.—Atterbury, vol. iv. Ser. 7.

The boat was sent away to examine the anchoring ground and the produce of the place; and we were not a little solicitous for her return, as we conceived our fate to depend upon the report we should receive.
Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 1.

The apostle doth most solicitously injoin that which is in all the churches most piously observed, that God should be implored for all men.—Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 39.

Let not the greater difficulty of another's cure lessen the solicitousness of thy care for thine, nor make thee less earnest in the imploring and labouring for relief.
Boyle. Works, vol. ii. p. 362.

And hence we are bid to work out our salvation with fear and trembling, Phil. ii. 12, i. e. with a holy solicitude and jealousy, lest one time or other we should be tempted and overcome, and at the last, finally miscarry.
Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 4.

My Lord Chamberlain himself, in restoring my play without any alteration, avow'd to me, that I had the most earnest solicitress, as well as the fairest; and that nothing cou'd be refus'd to my Lady Hyde.—Dryden. Cleomenes, Ep. Ded.

To solicit by labour what might be ravished by arms, was esteemed unworthy of the German spirit.
Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 9.

While the merchant and the mariner are solicitous in describing currents and soundings, the naturalist is employed in observing wonders, though not so beneficial, yet to him of a much more important nature. The saltiness of the sea seems to be the foremost.
Goldsmith. Animated Nature, pt. i. c. 15.

He who solicitously inquires what is said of him, will certainly hear something which will render him uneasy.
Knox, Ess. 25.

SO'LID, adj. Fr. Solide; It. Solido; Sp. Solido; Lat. Solidus, from sollus, SO'LID, n. Solido; i. e. totus; quæ nulla parte laxata
SO'LIDATE, v. cavaque sunt, solida nominan-SOLIDITY. tur, (Festus.) See Vossius; SO'LIDLY. see also the quotation from SO'LIDNESS. Locke.

Solid is opposed to—superficial; to—hollow, to—liquid or fluid. Generally, solid is,— Firm, strong; weighty, grave, important.

And vnderstande well, that euermore this cercle equinoctiall tourneth iustlie fro very easte, to very weste, as I haue shewed in the sphere solid.—Chaucer. Astrolabie.

—But the sword
Of Michael from the armorie of God
Was giv'n him tempred so, that neither keen Nor solid might resist that edge.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vi.

—The earth,
Though in comparison of heav'n so small,
Nor glistering, may of solid good containe,
More plenty then the sun that barren shines,
Whose vertue on it self workes no effect,
But in the fruitful earth. Id. Ib. b. viii.

This shining piece of ice,
Which melts so soon away
With the sun's ray,
Thy verse does solidate and crystallize.
Cowley. The Muse.

There was an oliue tree, that had his grought
Amidst a hedge; and was of shadow, proud;
Fresh, and the prime age of his verdure, show'd.
His leaves and armes so thicke, that to the eye
It shew'd a colunne for solidity.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxiii.

It is above the wit of a man to imitate our Homer's wit:
of Ajax for giving such a force to it, [the stone,] as could not spend it selfe upon Hector, but turne after upon the earth, in that whirlwinde like violence: of Hector, for standing it so solidly; for without that consideration, the stone could never have recoild so fiercely.—Id. Ib. Iliad, b. xiv. Com.

It [the oake] beareth also misseltot, though rarely. The cause of all these may be, the closeness and solidness of the wood, and pith of the oake; which maketh severall juyces find severall eruptions.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 635.

But had my wisdom reacht so farre, to know of this event,
When to the solid-ported depths of hell his sonne was sent.
To hale out hateful Plutoes dogge, from darksome Erebus.
He had not scapt the streames of Styx, so deepe and dangerous.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. ix.

An animal consists of solid and fluid parts, unless one should reckon some of an intermediate nature, as fat and phlegm.

The solids seem to be earth, bound together with some oil. For, if a bone be calcined so, as the least force will crumble it, being immersed in oil, it will grow firm again.
Arbuthnot. Nature of Aliments, c. 4.

The idea of solidity we receive by our touch; and it arises from the resistance which we find in body, to the entrance of any other body into the place it possesses, till it has left it.—Locke. Of Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 4.

Upon careful inquiry, this appears to be only a groundless surmise; as is largely and solidly proved by the judicious Bp. Bull.—Waterland. Works, vol. ii. p. 165. Ser. 7.

It is plainly set down by Aristotle, an horse and all solid-ungulous or whole hoofed animals have no gall; and the same is also delivered by Pliny; which notwithstanding we finde repugnant unto experience and reason.
Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. iii. c. 2.

How solid a science soever may be erected on ideal qualities it rests in speculation only, and contributes nothing to our better accommodation, unless relating to such qualities wherein mankind has some concern.
Search. Light of Nature, Introd. p. xxviii.

He [our adversary] has brought himself into a disgraceful and unpleasant situation for a man who asserts with confidence and would affect solidity of argument.
Bp. Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 18.

SOLIFIDIAN, adj. } Compounded of the SOLIFIDIAN, n. } Lat. Solus, alone, and SOLIFIDIANISM. } fides, faith. The quotations from Hammond and Tillotson explain the usage of the word.

A solifidean Christian is a nullifidean Pagan; and con-futes his tongue with his hand.—Feltham, pt. ii. Res. 47.

Such is first the persuasion of the solifidians, that all religion consists in believing aright, that the being of orthodox (as that is opposed to erroneous) opinions, is all that is on our part required, to render our condition safe, and our persons acceptable in the sight of God.

Hammond. Works, vol. i. p. 480.

That we may be able to answer the Papists, who charge us with solifidianism: as if we were of this opinion, that if a man do but trust in Christ, that is, be but confidently persuaded that he will save him, and pardon him, this is sufficient, and consequently, he that is thus persuaded, need not take any farther care of his salvation, but may live as he list.—Tillotson, vol. iii. Ser. 174.

SOLIFORM. Compounded of Lat. Solis, of the sun, and forma, form or shape.

Formed or otherwise similar to the sun.

For light, and sight and the seeing faculty, may both of them rightly be said to be soliform things, or of kin to the sun, but neither of them to be the sun it self.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 204.

SOLILOQUY. } Fr. Soliloque; It. Solilo- SOLILOQUIZE, v. } quio; Sp. Soliloquio; Lat.
Soliloquium, solus, and eloquium, a speech by one;
i.e. alone.

A speech alone; a speaking, or talking, a discourse, alone; or of any one to himself; a monologue.

Soliloquies; or holy self-conferences of the devout soul,
upon sundry choice occasions.

Bp. Hall. Soliloquies. The Title.

"Hold, mighty man," I cry, "all this we know
From the pathetic pen of Ingelo.

From Patrick's Pilgrim, Sibb's Soliloquies."

Rochester. Sat. against Mankind.

First a soliloquy is calmly made;
Where every reason is exactly weighed,
Where, once perform'd, most opportunely comes
Some hero frighted at the noise of drums.

Buckinghamshire. Essay on Poetry.

He could petition heaven for grace
With sanctimonious voice and eyes,
And at a proper time and place
Religiously soliloquize.

Cooper. Ver-Vert. c. 2.

SOLIPÉDE. Lat. Solidus, solid, and pes, a foot. See the quotation.

For solipeds or firm-hoofed animals, as horses, asses, mules, &c. they are also in mighty number, so is it delivered that Job had a thousand she-asses: that the Midianites lost sixty-one thousand asses.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. vi. c. 6.

SOLITARY. } Fr. Solitaire; It. Solitario; SOLITARY. } Sp. Solitario; Lat. Solitaris, SOLITARIAN, n. } from solus, alone, (sine aliis, SOLITARILY. } without others. See SOLE.) SOLITARINESS. } Being alone; or one, any SOLITUDE. } one, being all; single, se-SOLITARIETY. } cluded, retired; remote from SOLITARE. } publicity; private.

Holy writ whitneseth, ther were suche eremytes
Solitarie by hemself, and in here selles lyveden
Whith oute boruyng other begging.

Piers Ploughman, p. 285.

O thou maistresse of all vertues, descended from the souverain seate, why art thou comen into this solitarie place of myne exile.—Chaucer. Boecius, b. 1.

A man myght preach long inough without persecution, yea & get fauour to, if he would not medle with the pope, byshops, prelates, and holy ghostly people that lyue in contemplation and solitarines, not wyth great men of the worlde.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 196.

So choosing solitarie to abide
Far from all neighbours, that her diuylsh deedes
And hellish arts from people she might hide,
And hurt far off unknowne whomever she enuide.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 7.

Who out of smallest things could without end
Have rais'd incessant armies to defeat
Thy folly; or with solitarie hand
Reaching beyond all limit at one blow
Unaided could have finish't thee, and whelmd
Thy legions under darkness.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vi.

Feed thy people with thy rod, the flocke of thine heritage, which dwell solitarily in the wood, in the mount of Carmel.

Micah, vii. 14.

By these and many other advantages, he that holds his peace, and he that cannot speak, may please themselves;
and he may at least have the rewards and affects of solita- riness, if he misses some of the pleasures of society.

Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 22.

At which this honest man,
Finding that nought but hate and scorn he wan
Amongst these idiots and their beastly kind,
The poor small remnant of his life behind,
Determineth to solitude to give,
And a true hermit afterward to live.

Drayton. The Moon Calf.

Let but thy wicked men from out thee go,
And all the fools that crowd thee so,
Even thou who dost thy millions boast,
A village less than Islington wilt grow,
A solitude almost.

Cowley. On Solitude.

It hath been disputed, which is a state of great perfection, the social or the solitary: whereas, in truth, neither of these estates is compleat without the other; as the example of our blessed Lord (the unerring test and measure of perfection) informs us.—Atterbury, vol. i. Ser. 10.

You describe so well your hermitical state of life, that none of the ancient anchorites could go beyond you, for a cave in a rock, with a fine spring, or any of the accommodations that befit a solitary.—Pope. To E. Blount, Let. 11.

This man gathered together all the dispersed monks and other solitarians of Italy, so that in a short time he had no less than twelve monasteries about him.

Sir R. Twisden. Monastic Life.

According to the Egyptians, before all entities, and principles there is one God, who is in order of nature before (him that is commonly called) the first God and King; immoveable; and alway remaining in the solitarity of his own unity.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 336.

Along these lonely regions, where retir'd,
From little scenes of art, great Nature dwells
In awful solitude, and nought is seen
But the wild herds that own no master's stall,
Prodigious rivers roll their fattening sea.

Thomson. Summer.

Before, a solitaire; behind,
A twisted ribbon, like the track
Which Nature gives an ass's back.

Shenstone. The Progress of Taste.

As soon as a person was seized with the distemper [small-pox] he was removed to some solitary place, very remote from any habitation, where the disease was left to take its course, and the patient supplied with daily food by reaching it to him at the end of a long pole [at Sava].

Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 9.

SOLIVAGANT. Lat. Solus, alone, and vagus, wandering.

A solitary wanderer.

A description of the impure drudge;—that is to say, a solivagant or solitary vagrant.

Granger. On Eccles. (1621.) p. 99.

SOLLAR, n. Low Lat. Solarium; Ger. Soller; locus tabulatus in quacunq; aedium parte. Ab obsoleto, sul-en, tabulare, (Wachter.) See SILL.

A soler seems originally (says Tyrwhitt) to have signified an open gallery, or balcony at the top of the house; though latterly it has been used for any upper room, loft, or garret.

And whanne he was comen thei ledden hym into the soler.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 9.

Gamelyn sought his brother tho
Whither he was yflowe
And saugh where that he loked out
At a solere window.—The Cokes Tale of Gamelyn.

And lest that nyght myghte haue bene occasion to breake of this delectable and pleasaunt sermon, there were many candelles in the sollare [Ed. 1551, solar] wheras we were than assembled.—Udal. Actes, c. 20.

And ordeyned me to stâde in chambres and solers to throwe stonys & by their ordenaüces & pollycy to haue destroyed ye duke & his company.

Fabyan. Chronycle. Hen. VI. an. 1426.

Another thing there is in our markets worthie to be looked vnto, and that is the recariage of graine from the same into lofts and solars.—Holinshead. Descrip. of Eng. b. ii. c. 18.

SOLSTICE. } Fr. Solstice; It. Solstizio; SOLSTICIAL. } Sp. Solsticio; Lat. Solstitium; SOLSTEAD, n. } solis statio;—

The sun stead, or stay of the sun, (Cotgrave,) because the sun then appears to stay or stop.

About the summer solstice it sheweth a red floure.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxvi. c. 5.

If it be gathered about the summer solstead.—Id. Ib.

Now three circles there be enfolded within the zones afore-named, which distinguish the inequalities of the daies:
namely, the summer solstitial tropicke, from the highest part of the zodiacke in regard of us, toward the north clime.

Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 70.

—The sun
Had first his precept so to move, so shine,
As might affect the earth with cold and heat Scarce tollerable, and from the north to call Decrepid winter, from the south to bring Solstitial summers heat.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

—For now the fields
Labour'd with thirst; Aquarius had not shed
His wonted showers, and Sirius parch'd with heat Solstitial the green herb. J. Phillips. Cider, b. i.

Then, in exchange, a month or more
The sun with fierce solstitial gleams,
Darting o'er vales his raging pou'r,
Like ray collecting mirrors, beams.

Harte. Content, &c. under the Divine Will.

SOLVE, v. } Fr. Souldre; It. Solvere; SOLVABLE, or } Sp. Soltar; Lat. Solvere, to SOLVIBLE. } dis-join, to loosen. See Dis- SOLUBLE. } SOLVE.

SOLUBILITY. } To loosen, or release; to SOLVENT, adj. } relax, to disjoin, to disunite; SOLVENT, n. } to destroy the solidity; to SOLVENCY. } melt; to free from (sc.) re-SOLUTE, v. } straint, difficulty; to clear, SOLUTION. } to explain. And—

SOLUTIVE. } Solvent,—loosening the solidity; melting; releasing, (sc.) from debt; paying or able to pay.

Without the blynde bussings of a papist, may no sinne be soluted, for that is the vpholding of their kyngdome.

Bale. Image, pt. ii.

Here M. Harding taketh in hande to answere the authorities by mee alleged, and that with this special note of remembrance in the margin, M. Juel's allegation soluted.
It appeareth, his solutions be very shorte.

Jewell. Replie, p. 168.

Notwithstanding I will not thus leaue his booke, although I might full well, but I will declare vnto you what solutions he maketh to these seuē weake reasons which he hath propounded hym selfe.—Fryth. Workes, fol. 8.

Intellective memory, which I call an act of the intellective faculty because it is wrought by it, though I do not inquire how or where, because it is not soluble.

Hale. Origin. of Mankind, p. 56.

And as that Theban monster, that propos'd
Her riddle, and him, who solv'd it not, devour'd:
That once found out and solv'd, for grief and spight
Cast herself headlong from the Ismenian steep,
So strook with dread and anguish fell the fiend.

Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

As for the fruit called pompions or melons, being eaten as meat, they coole the bodie mightily and make it soluble.

Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 2.

Porridge is poison, they hate a kitchen as they hate a counter, and show 'em but a feather-bed they swoond. Ale is their eating and their drinking surely, which keeps their bodies clear, and soluble.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Scornful Lady, Act iv. sc. 1.

He put to study, and not knowing how
To giue fit answer; Hellen tooke on her
Th' ostents solution, and did this prefer.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xv.

A fourth sort therefore of speculators there is, who conceive that after this solution of the souls or spirits of wicked men and daemons from their vehicles,—That their pain is continued to them even in that separate state.

More. Immortality of the Soul, b. iii. c. 18.

Though it would not be abstersive, opening, and solutive as mead, yet it would be more lenitive in sharp diseases.

Bacon.

He [the good man] thinks God abundantly solvent, and himself never the poorer for laying out in his behalf.

Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 31.

Having joined the ideas of substance, yellow, malleable, most heavy, and fusible. It takes that complex idea to be the complete idea of gold, when yet its peculiar fixedness and solubility in aqua regia are as inseparable from those other ideas or qualities of that body, as they are from one another.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 32.

No one can show a reason why the word gold, signifying that sort of body the ring on his finger is made of, should determine that sort rather by its colour, weight, and fusibility, than by its colour, weight, and solubility in aq. regia.

Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 9.

On the first appearance of the Anna Pink, it seemed wonderful to us how the crew of a vessel, which came to this rendezvous two months after us, should be capable of working their ship in the manner they did, with so little appearance of debility and distress: But this difficulty was soon solved when she came to an anchor.

Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 3.

I commend the ancients for their way of solving the unity, as taking the best that human wit could invent or rest upon.—Waterland. Workes, vol. iv. p. 46.

I remember, that being in a place, where we could not procure good vitriol to make aqua fortis with, after the manner of our English refiners, by a substitution of burnt alum for vitriol, but in a far less proportion, we made solvents for silver, as good as theirs, if not much better.

Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 450.

Homer has divided each of his poems into two parts, and has put a particular intrigue, and the solution of it, into each part.—Pope. Homer. Of the Epic Poem.

What could induce the great Lord of heaven and earth, to create a world abounding with all these circumstances of imperfection, hath ever been one of the most difficult of all questions.—Nor could this difficulty have been solved, if the Scriptures had not solved it for us.—Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 24.

For solvable and colourable we might say solvent and apparent.—Tooke. Diversions of Purley, pt. ii. c. 8.

Why should these nations of commerce and œconomy enter into any pecuniary dealings with a people, who attempt to reverse the very nature of things; amongst whom they see the debtor prescribing at the point of the bayonet the medium of his solvency to the creditor, discharging one of his engagements with another; turning his very penury into his resource, and paying his interest with rags.

Burke. On the French Revolution.

So sung Philander, as his friend went round
In the rich ichor, in the generous blood
Of Bacchus, purple god of joyous wit,
A brow solute, and ever-laughing eye.

Young. Complaint, Night 2.

They contemplate nothing: two sentences, "It is very common," or "It is very strange," make at once the sum and the detail of their philosophy and of their belief, and are to them a solution of all difficulties.

Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 11.

SOMBRE. } Fr. Sombre; Sp. Sombra, a SOMBROUS. } shade or shadow; Lat. Umbra, a shade.

Shady, dark, gloomy.

And late in Hagley you were seen,
With blood-shed eyes, and sombre mien,
Hymen his yellow vestment tore,
And Dirge a wreath of cypress wore.—Grainger. Solitude.

That African torrent, arose from the fermented mixture of the dregs of Greece and Italy, and soon after overflowed the church with theological conceits in a sparkling luxuriance of thought, and a sombrous rankness of expression.

Warburton. Works, vol. viii. p. 293.

Poor Cowper had the misfortune to labour under a morbid melancholy, which, at certain intervals gave to all things around him a sombrous hue.—Knox. On Grammar Schools.

SOME. Goth. Sum; A. S. Sum, sume; Dut. Som, sommegh, aliquis, quidam; probably from the A. S. Sam-ian, to bring together, to assemble.

Some, always implies—more: from which one, a few, or many (of the same number or quantity) is or are taken.

All and some is equivalent to—one and all: what Chaucer elsewhere calls "the somme and singularities," summam et singula. See in v. SINGLE, the third quotation from him.

This kyng hadde eke Herfortschire, that on bischopriche

is;
Ac Schropshire nath haluendel to thilke bischopriche i wis.

And some of Gloucestre schire, and of Warwik schire al so.
R. Gloucester, p. 5.

From Douere in to Chestre tilleth Watlingestrete,
From south est in to north west, and that ys some del
grete.—Id. p. 8.

Somme of ows sothfast, and some variable
Some litel and some large. Piers Plouhman, p. 308.

Ac the kyng and somme of ys defendede hem so faste,
That heo for hem alle o liue a scapede atte last.
Id. p. 56.

So that vewe contreyes beth in Engeland,
That monekes nabbeþ of Normandy something in her honde.—Id. p. 368.

Ther where he was schotte a nother chapelle standes,
& *some*what of that tre, thei bond vntille his handes.
R. Brunne, p. 22.

And while he sowith, some seedis felden bisidis the weye, & briddis of the eyr camen and eeten hem.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 13.

And as he sowed, some fell by the wayes syde, and the fowles came and deuoured it vp.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Therefore dissencioun was maad among the puple for hem.
For summe of hem wolden haue taken him; but no man sette hondis on him.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 7.

So was there dyscencion amonge the people about him.
And some of theym woulde haue taken him: but no man layed handes on hym.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Looke that thou haue in custome ay,
First to salue hem if thou may:
And if it fall, that of hem somme
Salue the first, be not domme.—Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

God clepeth folk to him in sondry wise,
And everich hath of God a propre gift,
Som this, some that, as that him liketh shift.
Id. The Wif of Bathes Prologue.

This is all and some, he held virginitee
More parfit than wedding in freelte.—Id. Ib. v. 5683.

So farre folk and so fresh had he [Mirth]
That when I saw, I wondred me
Pro whenes such folke might come,
So faire they weren all and some.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

For thus ye faren well nigh all and some,
That he that most desireth you to serve,
Of him ye retch least where he become,
And whether that he live, or else sterve.
Id. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

Pro Boloigne is this erl of Pavie come,
Of which the fame up sprang to more and lesse:
And to the peples eres all and some
Was couth eke. Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8815.

And right as freely as he sent hire to me,
As freely sent I hire to him again:
This is all and some, ther ni's no more to sain.
Id. The Frankelaines Tale, v. 11,908.

No will had I fro thence yet go,
But *somede*le nere it went I tho
To take it, but mine hond for drede
Ne durst I to the rose bede. Id. Rom. of the Rose.

As king royall, he [Phebus] rode vpon a chare,
The which Phiton somtime gided vnright,
The brightnesse of his face whan it was bare,
Non might behold, for persing of his sight.
Id. The Test. of Creseide.

For possible is, sin thou hast hire presence,
And art a knight, a worthy and an able,
That by some cas, sin fortune is changeable,
Thou maiest to thy desir somtime atteine.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1172.

But certaine is, to purpose for to go,
That in this while, as written is in geste,
He saw his lady sometime, and also
She with him spake. Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

There heard I the nightingale say,
"Now good cuckow go somewhere away,
And let vs that can singen dwellen here,
For euery wight escheueth thee to here."
Id. Of the Cuckow and the Nightingale.

There bene also somme (as men saie)
That folowen Symon at heles,
Whose cart goth upon wheles,
Of couetise and worldes pride,
And holy church goth beside.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

For thei vs teche, and telle this,
Howe that this feuer of jelousie
Somdele it groweth of sotie
Of loue, and somdele of vntrust. Id. Ib. b. v.

But she, whiche might not do so,
The tide awaiteth euermo,
And caste hir ele vpon the sea,
Somtye naie, somtye yea,
Somtye he cam, somtye nought. Id. Ib. b. iv.

His spear, to equal which the tallest pine Hewn on Norwegian hills, to be the mast
Of some great ammiral, were but a wand,
He walkt with to support uneasie steps
Over the burning marle.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

—Yet haply of thy race
In future dayes, if malice should abound,
Some one intent on mischief, or inspir'd
With devilish machination might devise Like instrument to plague the sons of men
For sin, on warr and mutual slaughter bent.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

Then Brenne ouer came ye Macedoynes with theyr duke Sostene, and after spoyled goddes and theyr temples, & sayd in his game, ryche goddes must gyue to men *somede*le of theyr rychesse.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 31.

I would not (as they tearme it) praise it, but I wold some- body had heard her talke yesterday as I did.
Shakespeare. Troil. & Cres. Act i. sc. 1.

The serpent sutt'lst beast of all the field,
Of huge extent somtimes, with brazen eyes
And hairie main terrific.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vii.

—Yet for a dance they seemd
Somewhat extravagant and wilde, perhaps For joy of offerd peace. Id. Ib. b. vi.

—What malicious foe
Envyng our happiness, and of his own
Despairing, seeks to work us woe and shame
By sly assault; and somewhere nigh at hand
Watches no doubt, with greedy hope to find
His wish and best advantage, us asunder.—Id. Ib. b. ix.

SOME, term. Dut. Saem; Ger. Sam. It denotes (Skinner) the quality, aliquid, q. d. aliquid quantum tali qualitate imbutum. And Wachter,—
"In compositis adjectivatur a socio, similemque ei, cui annectitur, significat, sive substantivum sit, sive adjectivum;" and he instances,—Seltsam, insolitus, raro similis; heilsam, (wholesome,) salutaris, salutis similis.

SOMER. Fr. Sommier, a sumpter-horse.
See SUMPTER.

So thus after this the prouost two tymes a weke sende euer to saynte Denyce two somers, charged with floreynts to the kyng of Nauevr, who receyued the money with gladde chere.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 186.

Than the duke studyed a lytell, and sayd, I am content that ye bere with you as moche as ye may beare in males and somers, and none otherwise, and if ye haue any prisoners, that ye delyuer them to vs.—Id. Ib. vol. ii. c. 23.

Our land dooth yeeld no asses, and therefore we want the generation of mules and somers.
Holinshed. Description of England, b. iii. c. 1.

SOMERSET. Sopra salto, which the French have corrupted to soubresaut, and the English to somersault, somersalt, summersaut, and then to somerset, (Tooke.) Cotgrave (in v. sobressaut) writes it also sobressaut. In It. also called salto mortale.

A leap, (accompanied by a turn over of the body.)

—So doth the salmon vault,
And if at first he fall, his second summersaut
He instantly assays. Dryden. Poly-Olbion, s. 6.

First, that could make love faces, or could do
The vaulter's somersaults, or us'd to woo
With hoiting gambols, his own bones to break,
To make his mistress merry.
Donne. The Progress of the Soul.

Now I will only make him break his neck in doing a somerset, and that's all the revenge I mean to take of him.
Beaumont & Fletcher. Fair Maid of the Inn, Act iv.

As when some boy, trying the somersaut,
Stands on his head, and feete, as he did lie
To kicke against earth's spangled canopie.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. i. s. 3.

For which do the summer-sault,
And o'er the bar, like tumblers, vault.
Hudibras, pt. iii. c. 3.

SOMNOLENCE. } It. Sonnifero, sonno- SOMNI'FEROUS. } lenza; Lat. Somnifer; SOMNA'MBULISM. } and of the Lower Ages, SOMNA'MBULIST. } Somnolentia.
Somnolence,—sleepiness, disposition to sleep.
Somniferous,—bearing or bringing (ferens) sleep.

Somnambulist,—walking (ambulans) in the sleep,
a sleep-walker.

Than cometh somnolence, that is sluggish slumbring,
which maketh a man hevy, and dull in body and in soule,
and this sinne cometh of slouth.

Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

Towarde the slowe progenie
There is yet one of companie,
And he is cleped Somnolence,
Whiche dothe to slouth his reuerence,
As he whiche is his chamberlein,
That many an honderde tyme hath lein
To slepe, when he shulde wake.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

They ascribe all to this redundant melancholy, which domineers in them, to somniferous potions, and naturall causes.—Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 61.

The somnambulist directs himself with unerring certainty through the most intricate windings, and over the most dangerous precipices; and, without any apparent assistance from the organs of sense, has been known to read, write, and compose.—Bp. Porteus, Ser. (1789.)

The scarlet poppy, on thy painted fields,
Bows his somniferous head, inviting soon
To peaceful slumber the disorder'd mind.
Dodsley. Agriculture, c. 3.

Those persons who are subject to somnambulism seldom if ever retain any recollection of the objects of their perceptions, while under the influence of this disorder.
Stewart. On the Mind, vol. i. Note O.

SON. } Dut. Sone; Ger. Sone; Sw.
SONSHIP. } Son; A. S. Sunu; Goth. Sunus, derived, by Casaubon and others, from the Gr.
Tios; by Martinius, from the Ger. Sahen, seen;
A. S. Sawan; Goth. Saian, to sow; who adduces

the Lat. Satus, from serere, to sow, in confirmation, by analogy. It may be added, that seed is in common use for offspring, progeny, descendants.

An immediate male child or offspring; generally — progeny, offspring, descendant, issue; generation.

Brut this noble prince sones hadde thre
By hys wyf Innogen, noble men and fre.

R. Gloucester, p. 23.

Fourtene childre he gate opon tuo wives,
Sex sonnes & auht doughtres.

R. Brunne, p. 27.

I seye to you that God is myghti to reise up of these stones the sones of Abraham.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 3.

— Benedicite,
My sonne of the felicitie
Of loue, and eke of all the wo
Thou shalt be shrieve of bothe two,
Whan thou er this for lous sake
Haste felte, let nothyng be forsake:
Tell plainly, as it is befall.

Gower. Con. A. b. i.

Hor name was Belge; who in former age
A ladie of great worth and wealth had beene,
A mother of a frutefull heritage,
Even seventene goodly sonnes.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 10.

About him all the sanctities of heaven
Stood thick as starrs, and from his sight receiv'd
Beatitude past utterance; on his right
The radiant image of his glory sat,
His onely Son.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

Art thou that traitor angel, art thou hee,
Who first broke peace in heav'n and faith, till then Unbrok'n, and in proud rebellious arms
Drew after him the third part of heav'n's sons
Conjur'd against the highest?

Id. Ib. b. ii.

It is probable that they made the child's name, by adjoining the syllable son to the appellation of the father.

Fuller. General Worthies, c. 24.

Regeneration on the part of the grantor, God Almighty, means admission or adoption into sonship, or spiritual citizenship: and on the part of the grantee, viz. man, it means his birth, or entrance into that state of sonship, or citizenship.—Waterland. Works, vol. iii. p. 348.

SONG, SONNET, &c. See SING.

SONNISH. i.e. like the sun or beams of the sun. Mr. Tyrwhitt refers to the two following lines in illustration:—

And Phebus died hath her tresses grete
Like to the stremes of his burned hete.

Chaucer. The Doctoures Tale, v. 11, 971.

— With hir salte teres
Her breast and face ibathed was ful swete,
Her mightie tresses of hir sonnish heres
Unbroiden, hangen all about her eares.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iv.

SONOROUS. } Fr. Sonoreux; It. Sonoro; SONOROUSLY. } Sp. Sonoro; Lat. Sonorus, SONOROUSNESS. } from sonus, and this from SONORIFICK. } tonus; Gr. Tono-eiv, intendere; SONIFEROUS. } to stretch or draw out (especially) the voice or sound. See SOUND.

Sounding; full, high, loud—in sound.

— All the while
Sonorous mettall blowing martial sounds.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

Another time he came into her master's chamber, making a noise like a hog that eat grains, smacking and grunting very sonorously.—More. Antidote agst. Atheism, b. iii. c. 9.

His expressions are sonorous and more noble; his verse more numerous, and his words are suitable to his thoughts, sublime and lofty.—Dryden. Juvenal. Ded.

I remember the last maker of viols, lutes, &c. of whom I inquired of what age he thought such instruments, especially lutes, ought to be, to attain their full and best seasoning for sonorousness.—Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 450.

If he should ask me, Why a clock strikes, and points to the hour? and I should say, it is by an indicating form and sonorifick quality; whereas I ought to tell him what are the wheels and springs, the pointer, and hammer, and bell, whereby a clock gives notice of the time, both to the eye and the ear.—Watts. Logick, pt. i. c. 6. § 3.

And this will appear, let the subject matter of sounds be what it will, either the atmosphere in gross, or the æthereal part thereof, or soniferous particles of bodies, as some fancy, or whatever else the philosopher may think it.

Derham. Physico-Theology, b. iv. c. 3.

They have sonorous instruments, but they can be scarcely called instruments of music; one is the shell, called the Triton's trumpet, with which they make a noise not unlike that which our boys sometimes make with a cow's horns.

Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 10.

SOON, ad. } Goth. Suns; A. S. Sona; Dut.
SOON, adj. } Sean; in Ger. Schwind; which directs us to the Goth. Swinthnon; A. S. Swithian, (dropping the n) valere, whence swithe, valide, or valde, prompte, ocys, promptly, readily, quickly.
(See SWITHE.) Soonly, (see in Dr. J.) is a misprint for so only.

Readily, quickly, speedily, early, in a short time; without delay, without stop or stay.

So that heo hadde some gret power on honde,
And grot ost made and strong, and vp the kyng sette.

R. Gloucester, p. 26.

Sorow & site [sighs] he made, ther was non other rede,
For his sonne & heyre, that so some was dede.

R. Brunne, p. 5.

Apocalips of Ihesus Crist which God gaf to him to make open to hise seruautis, whiche thingis it bihoueth to be maad soone.—Wiclif. Apocalips, c. 1.

More ouer I beseche ghout to do, that I be restored the sunner to ghout.—Id. Ebrewis, c. 13.

For pitee renneth some in gentil herte.

Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1712.

So that it proueth well therfore,
The strength of man is some lore.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

But ah! who can conceive his destiny,
Or weene by warning to avoyd his fate?
That, when he sleepes in most security
And safest seemes, him soonest doth amate.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 4.

'Tis sooner past, 'tis sooner done
Than summer's rain, or winter's sun;
Most fleeting, when it is most dear;
'Tis gone, while we but say 'tis here.

Carew. Persuasions to Love.

— Make your soonest hast,

So your desires are yours.

Shakespeare. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act iii. sc. 4.

As to the second sense of the question, why the world, though it could not possibly be from eternity, yet was no sooner, but so lately made? we say, that this is an absurd question; both because time was made together with the world, and there was no sooner or later, before time.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 887.

They who are soonest in a condition to enjoy the sweets of it, [labour,] are likely soonest to conceive a relish for it, and to acquire the early habit of industry.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 10.

SOOP, v. A. S. Sweep-an, to swoop, or sweep, verrere, exhaurire.

To sweep off or away,—to clear out or away;
to move with full sweep or sway, like the train of stately robes,—like the course of wind or water.

— If it must off

Like a wild overflow, that soops before him
A golden stack, and with it shakes down bridges,
Cracks the strong hearts of pines, whose cable roots
Held out a thousand storms, a thousand thunders,
And so made mightier, takes whole villages
Upon his back, and in that heat of pride,
Charges strong towns, towers, castles, palaces,
And layes them desolate.

Beaum. & Fletch. Philaster, Act v. sc. 1.

Whenas generally we pronounce by the confession of strangers, as sweetly, smoothly, and moderately, as any of the northern nations of the world, who are noted to soupe their words out of the throate with fat and full spirits.

Camden. Rem. Languages.

Now souping in side robes of royalty,
That erst did skrub in lousy brokery.

Bp. Hall. Satires, b. i. Sat. 3.

SOOT. } Fr. Suye; Dut. Soet; A. S. Soot, SOOTY. } sooth, which Skinner derives from SOOTY. } the A. S. Seoth-an, Ger. and Dut.
Sied-en, to boil, to seethe; but his reason is too remote. Soot may be smoke, sod or sodden, together; condensed. See the quotation from Boyle.

Sooty is, consequentially, black.

I can no more but of these ilke tway,
(To whom this tale sugre be or sote)
Though I tary a yeere.—Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

For sooty was hire boure, and eke hire halle,
In which she ete many a slender mele.

Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 14, 848.

1772

But it is the prettiest spectacle to see her stroaking with her ivory hand his collied cheeks, and with her snowy fingers combing his sooty beard.

Carew. Cælum Britannicum.

Soot also, though thinne, spread in a field or garden, is tried to be a very good compost.

Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 597.

Then can he term his dirty ill-fac'd bride
Lady and queen, and virgin deify'd;
But she all sooty black, or berry brown,
She's white as morrow's milk, or flakes new blown.

Bp. Hall. Satires, b. i. Sat. 7.

Then (for his own weeds) shirt and coat all rent,
Tann'd and all sootied with noisome smoke,
She put him on; and over all a cloke.—Chapman.

When wood being burned in a chimney is dissipated by the fire into smoke and ashes, that smoke composes soot, which is so far from being any one of the principles of the wood, that you may by a further analysis separate five or six distinct substances from it.—Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 526.

But see the fading many-colour'd woods,
Shade deepening over-shade, the country round
Imbrown; a crowded umbrage, dusk, and dun,
Of every hue, from wan-declining green
To sooty dark.

Thomson. Autumn.

The distant Seres first behold thee flow;
Nor yet thy spring the distant Seres know.
'Midst sooty Ethiops, next, thy currant roams;
The sooty Ethiops wonder whence it comes.

Rowe. Lacan. Pharsalia, b. x.

With the dirt they appear nearly as black as a negroe;
and according to our best discoveries, the skin itself is of the colour of wood soot, or what is commonly called a chocolate colour.—Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 6.

SOOTE, i. e. Sweet, (qv.)

Whanne that April with his shoures sote
The droughte of March hath perced to the rote,
And bathed every veine in swiche licour,
Of whiche vertue engendred is the flour.

Chaucer. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 1.

A chambre had he in that hostellerie
Alone withouten any compaignie,
Ful fetisly ydight with herbes sote,
And he himself was swete as is the rote
Of licoris, or any setewale.

Id. The Milleres Tale, v. 3101.

But first he cheweth greine and licorise,
To smellen sote, or he had spoke with here.

Id. Ib. v. 3690.

The soote season, that bud and blome forth brings
With grene hath clad the hill, and eke the vale.

Surrey. Description of Spring.

Lo, how finely the graces can it foote
To the instrument:
They dauncen deffly, and singen soote,
In their meriment.

Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender. April.

SOOTH, or } A. S. Soth, true; ge-SOOTH, n. & v. } soth-ian, to affirm, to prove, SOOTHLY. } to verifie, or averre, (Som-SOOTH-FAST. } ner.)
SOOTH-FASTNESS. } Truth is that which a SOOTHNESS. } man troweth or thinketh; SOOTH. } and soth or sooth may be SOOTHSAW. } that which a man sayeth.
SOOTHSAW, n. } To sooth-say, is—to tell SOOTHSAYER. } or say the truth, to foretell SOOTHSAYING. } or predict, (the truth;) generally to foretell.

For, as me may the sothe segge, by fore hym no beter nas.

R. Gloucester, p. 73.

Vor the sothuast God, tho he yse, that we nolde, vor nothyng,
Fram oure synne vs wyth drawe, ne that non prince, ne [kyng]
Ne mygte brynge vs out of the lond.

Id. p. 253.

Mid wuche bodi dar y come in thi sigt ene,
That bi nom the myn frenschipe for thi sothnesse al clene?

Id. p. 35.

He ligges at Wynchestre, the soth it is to seie.

R. Brunne, p. 28.

Hit is no science sothlihe. both a sothfast by lyve.

Piers Plouhman, p. 190.

Gregore wist thist wel. and wilnde to my soule
Savacion for the sothness. that he seih in myn werkes.

Id. p. 205.

Sothely, sothely, I seye to you, he that bileueth in me, hath euerlastinge lyf.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 6.

Which camen and seyen to him maister we witen that thou art sothfast and reckist not of ony man for neither thou biholdist into the face of man but thou techist the wey of God in truthe.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 12.

Therefore stonde ghe and be ghe gird aboute ghoure leendis in sothfastnesse, and clothid with the haburion of rightwysnesse.—Id. Effesies, c. 6.

He was, I trow, a twenty winter old,
And I was fourty, if I shal say soth,
But yet I had alway a coltes toth.

Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 6182.

Some saiden, that we ben in herte most esed
Whan that we ben yflatered and ypreised.
He goth ful nigh the sothe, I wol not lie;
A man shal winne us best with flaterie.

Id. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6510.

Right as the Friday, sothly for to tell,
Now shineth it, and now it raineth fast,
Right so gan gery Venus overcast.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1536.

"Looke than" (quod she) "thou perseuer in my seruice, in whiche I haue thee grounded, that thilke skorne in thy enemies mowe this on thy person be not sothed."

Id. The Testament of Loue, b. i.

But now know I in very sothfastnesse,
That in gret lordship, if I me wel auise,
Ther is gret servitude in sondry wise.

Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8671.

Sothly, a man may change his purpos and his conseil, if the cause ceseth, or whan a newe cas betideth.

Id. The Tale of Melibeus.

Tiburce answered; "Saith thou this to me
In sothnesse, or in dreame herken I this?"

Id. The Second Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,738.

Thou must discouer all thy worching,
How thou seruest, and of what thing,
Though that thou shuldest for thy sothsaw
Ben all to beaten and to draw.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

Both sothsawes and lesings.—Id. House of Fame, b. ii.

And netheles to sey a sooth,
The cause why that he so dooth,
Is for to stele an herte or two
Out of the church e that he go.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

And all his wittes he foryete,
The whiche is to hym suche a lete,
That he wote neuer, what he dooth,
Ne whiche is fals, ne whiche is sooth. Id. Ib. b. vi.

For sotheliche I leue,
And durst setten it in preue,
Is none so wise, that shulde asterte
But he were lustles in his herte. Id. Ib. b. ii.

This paynim wote none other waie,
But on the grounde he kneleth euen,
His handes vp to the heuen,
And saide: O high sothfastnes,
That louest all rightwisenesse, Unto thy dome lorde I appele. Id. Ib. b. vii.

Thus manie yeares were spent with good and sothfast life, Twixt Arhundle that worthie knight and his approued wife.

Turberville. Vpon the Death of Elizabeth Arhundle.

Yea, and howe warneth he to beware of witchcraft, sorcerie, enchauntment, micromancie, and all craftes of the deuill, and of dreamers, sothsayers, and of miracle doers to destroy the word, and that they should suffer none such to lyue.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 8.

— Now I bethink me,
Some other means I haue which may be us'd,
Which once of Melibeus old I learnt,
The soothest shepherd that e'er pip'd on plains. Millon. Comus.

Ne soothliche it is easie for to read
Where now on earth, or how, he may be found;
For he ne wonneth in one certeine stead,
But restlesse walketh all the world around.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 2.

And it came to passe, as we went to prayer, a certain damosell possessed with a spirit of divination, met us:
which brought her masters much gain by sooth-saying.
Actes, xvi. 16.

All those were idle thoughtes and fantasies,
Devices, dreames, opinions unsound,
Shewes, visions, sooth-sayes, and prophesies;
And all that fained is, as leasings, tales, and lies.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 9.

As when a gryfon, seized of his pray,
A dragon fiers encountreth in his flight,
Through widest ayre making his ydle way,
That would his rightfull ravine rend away:
With hideous horror both together smight,
And souce so sore, that they the heavens affray;
The wise sothsayer, seeing so sad sight,
Th' amazed vulgar telles of warres and mortal fight.
Id. Ib. b. i. c. 5.

— Had any earthly spirit
Giuen this suggestion: if our priests, or sothsayers, challenging merit
Of prophets, I might hold it false; and be the rather mov'd
To keepe my pallace, but these eares, and these selfe eyes approv'd
It was a goddess.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xxiv.

Theophilus a learned bishop of Alexandria having fallen into their hands was so roughly used by them, that ere he could get out of their fingers, he was fain to use his wits and to crave aid of his equivocating sophistry and soothly to tell them, I have seen your face as the face of God.
Hale. Rem. Ser. Rom. xiv. 1.

Or what trueth can be spoken of a lyar? Sothsaying, witchcraft, sorcery and dreamynge is but vanyte.
Bible, 1551. Eccles. c. 34.

Many report that a certain sothsayer forewarned him of a great danger which threatened him on the ides of March, and that when the day was come, as he was going to the senate-house, he called to the sothsayer, and said, laughing,
"The ides of March are come;" to which he answered, softly, "Yes; but they are not gone."
Langhorne. Plutarch. Cesar.

Dear was the kindlie love which Kathrin bore
This crooked ronion, for in soothly guise
She was her genius and her counsellor.
Mickle. Syr Martyn, c. 1.

SOOTHE, v. } A. S. Ge-sothian, assentiri, SOOTH, n. } blandiri, Skinner thinks from SOOTHER. } the A. S. Soth, verus, true, SOOTHING, n. } (see SOOTH,) q. d.—to receive SOOTHINGLY. } as true; to assent to or approve as true, whatever another says. The Goth. Sothyan, ga-sothyan, saturare, satiare, to satisfy, may be the origin.

To assent to, to please, flatter by assenting;
to flatter; to please, to gratify; to assuage, to lull, to allay.

Words of sooth,—soothing words, (Shakespeare.)

The laughter-loving dame discern'd her mov'd mind, by her grace:

And (for her mirth sake) set a stoole full before Paris face, Where she would needs have Hellen sit: who (though she durst not chuse

But sit, yet) lookt away for all the goddesse poure could use,
And usde her tongue too, and to chide, whom Venus sooth'd so much,
And chid too, in this better kinde.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. iii.

Nor now no more smell-feast Vitellio
Smiles on his master for a meal or two,
And loves him in his maw, loaths in his heart,
Yet sooths, and yeas and nays on either part.
Bp. Hall, b. vi. Sat. 1.

But whilst we strive too suddenly to rise,
By flatt'ring princes with a servile tongue,
And being soothers to their tyrannies
Work our much woes by what doth many wrong,
And unto others tending injuries.
Drayton. Legion of Thomas Cromwell.

This affirmation of the archbishop being greatlie soothed out with his craftie vtterance (for he was lerned) confirmed by the French freends, &c.

Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 1.

Rich. Oh God, oh God, that ere this tongue of mine,
That layd the sentence of dread banishment
On yon proud man, should take it off againe
With words of sooth.—Shakes. Rich. II. Act iii. sc. 3.

Herewithal Anselmo rested the most soothingly and contentedly deceived that could be found in the world.
Shelton. Don Quixote, pt. iv. c. 7.

— The godlike man they found
Pleas'd with the solemn harp's harmonious sound:
(The well-wrought harp from conquer'd Thebæ came Of polish'd silver was its costly frame):
With this he sooths his angry soul, and sings
Th' immortal deeds of heroes and of kings.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ix.

The 3 Spanish Indians, who were very shy at first, began to be more bold, and drawing nearer, asked many silly questions; and our men did not stick to sooth them up with as many falsehoods, purposely to draw them into their clutches.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1684.

— Ideal sounds
Soft-wafted on the zephyr's fancy'd wing,
Steal tuneful soothings on the easy ear.
Thompson. Sickness, b. v.

Sacred history has acquainted us with the power of music over the passions, and there is little doubt but the verse as well as the lyre of David was able to soothe the troubled spirits to repose.—Knox. Ess. 51.

SOP, n. } Sop, the n. upon which the verb
SOP, v. } is formed, is (Tooke) the past part.
of A. S. verb, Sip-an, to sip. And the A. S.
"Sip-an, or syp-an, is to soften by steeping in liquor, to soke or wash in water or other liquor," (Somner.)

That which is soked, or steeped; (met.) a sweet or savoury morsel. See the quotation from Dryden for the origin of this latter application.

Jhesus answeride, he it is, to whom I schal areche a sop of breed. and whanne he had wett bred, he gaf to Judas Iscarioth Simon's sonne.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 13.

Jesus answered, he it is to whom I geue a soppe, when I haue dipt it. And he wet a soppe, and gaue it to Judas Iscarioth Simon's sonne.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Thus laboureth he, til that the day can dawe,
And than he taketh up a sop in fine clarre,
And upright in his bed than sitteth he.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9716.

O soppe of sorrowe sonken into care.
Id. The Complaint of Creseide.

A Frankelein was in this compaignie;
White was his berd, as is the dayesie.
Of his complexion he was sanguin,
Wel loved he by the morwe a sop in win.
Id. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 314.

The bathes weren than araied
With herbes tempred and assaied,
And Jason was vnarmed soone,
And did, as it befelle to doone.
Into his bathe he went anone,
And wisse hym cleane as any bone
He toke a soppe, and out he cam,
And on his best araye he nam. Gower. Con. A. b. v.

His cheeks, as snowy apples *sop*t in wine,
Had their red roses quencht with lilies white.
Fletcher. Christ's Triumph on Earth.

I Keep. Here comes my master; to the spit ye whore,
And stir no more abroad, but tend your business;
You shall have no more sops i' th' pan else, nor no porridge.

Besides, I'll whip your breech.
Beaum & Fletcher. The Pilgrim, Act iii. sc. 6.

The double daisy, thrift, the button-bachelor,
Sweet-william, sops-in-wine, the campion.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 15.

Even Cerberus, when he had received the sop, permitted
Æneas to pass freely to Elysium.
Dryden. Postscript to the Æneis.

There are however several kinds of fruit, besides those which have been already mentioned; particularly the sweet sop, which is well known to the West Indians.
Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 9.

SOPH. } Fr. Sophie, sophisme; SO'PHI. } It. Sofisma; Sp. Sophis-
SO'PHIC. } mer; Lat. Sophisma; Gr.
SO'PHISM. } Σοφισμα, from σοφία, wis-
SO'PHIST. } dom; σοφιστής, a teacher
SO'PHISTER. } of wisdom, a name arro-SO'PHISTER, v. } gated to themselves by a SO'PHISTICK. } sect of pretenders. (See SO'PHISTICAL. } the quotation from North, SO'PHISTICALLY. } and from Sydenham's
SO'PHISTICATE, v. } Plato, and a specimen SO'PHISTICATE, adj. } from Sir T. More:) and SO'PHISTICATION. } as these men supplied SO'PHISTICATOR. } their want of wisdom and SO'PHISTRY. } useful knowledge by subtlety of disputation, hence a sophism is,—

A subtle fallacy; a fallacy, a deception in argument. To sophisticate,—

To practise fallacy or deception; to counterfeit (the truth); to counterfeit, to falsify, to corrupt the purity or genuineness, to adulterate.

The foule chorle, that for his couetise,
Had him betraied, with his sophistrie.
Chaucer. Prol. to the Legend of Good Women.

First I say, that in their owne sophistry a similitude is the worst and feblest argument that can be and proueth lest and soonest deceaueth.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 171.

Although this argument be a very sophisme, yet is there neither one rule in sophistry that can proue this argument, nor yet one sophister so foolish as to graunt it.
Fryth. Workes, p. 44.

For lyke wyse as though a sophyster woulde with a fonde argumente, proue vnto a symple soule, that two egges wer thre, because that there is one, and there be twayne, and one and twayne make three: y^e simple vnlearned man, though he lacke learnyng to soyle hys fond argument: hathe yet wit ynough to laugh thereat, and to eat the two egges himself, and byd the sophyster take and eate the thyrd.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 475.

Unto whom the lord Cobham thus answered: It is well sophistred of you forsooth. Preposterous are your judgments euermore. For as the Prophet Esay saith, ye iudge euill good, and good euill.—Fox. Actes. Hen. V. p. 517.

By your workes we iudge you and your zeale to righteousness, and not by your sophisticall subtle reasons, with which we would claw our eares, bleare our eyes, and beguile our wittes, to take your tyrannous couetous crudelitie for the zeale of righteousness.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 193.

Howe be it, it were harde to construe this lecture, Sophisticated craftely is many a confecture.

Skelton. The Crowne of Laurell.

Come fight with me, that on my helmet weare Apolles laurell both for learnings laude, And eke for martiall praise; that in my shield The seuen fold sophie of Minerue containe, A match more mete, syr king, then any here.

Poems of Vncertaine Auctors. Death of Zoroas.

The angels caroll'd loud their song of peace, The cursed oracles were stricken dumb, To see their shepherd, the poor shepherds press, To see their king, the kingly sophies come.

G. Fletcher. Christ's Victory in Heaven.

So tickle be the termes of mortall state And full of subtle sophismes, which doe play With double senses, and with false debate, T' approve the unknown purpose of eternall fate.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 4.

Fourthly, That though necessary existence be included in the idea of God, yet our inferring from thence that he does exist, is but a sophism; because a being absolutely evil, as well as absolutely perfect, includes necessary existence in the idea thereof.

More. Antidote against Atheism, pt. i. c. 2. App.

But those that came sithence, having mingled it [philosophy] with art of speech, and by little have translated the exercise of deeds unto bare and curious words: whereupon they were called sophisters, as who would say, counterfeit wise men.—North. Plutarch, p. 96.

A mystery [the trinity] indeed in their sophistic subtilties, but in scripture a plain doctrine.

Milton. Of Toleration.

But oh! thy actions were too temporal, Thy knowledge had too much preeminence, Thy reason subtle, and sophistical.

Drayton. The Barons' Wars, b. iii.

Lastly, that these arguments whereby we prove the incorporeity of the soul of man, will also conclude the incorporeity of the soul of a beast, and that therefore they are sophistical.—More. Antidote against Atheism, pt. i. c. 2. App.

It is a crime of a high nature, to mingle or sophisticate any wine here.—Howell, b. i. Let. 33.

And now since a great part of our scientific treasure is most likely to be adulterate, though all bears the image and superscription of verity; the only way to know what is sophisticate, and what is not so, is to bring all to the examen of the touchstone.—Glanvill. Vanity of Dogmatizing, c. 8.

Our senses are here feasted with the clear and genuine taste of their objects; which are all sophisticated there, (in courts and cities,) and for the most part overwhelmed with their contraries.—Cowley. Essay on Agriculture.

All this while, we have no more of reason, then the εἰδωλον ψυχης (as Plotinus calls it) amounts to. And besides our easie submission to the sophistications of sense, and inability to prevent the miscarriages of our junior reasons; that which strikes the great stroke toward our after-deceptions, is the pertinacious adherence of many of these first impressions to our gaudiate understandings.

Glanvill. Vanity of Dogmatizing, c. 8.

I cordially commend, that the sophisticators of wine may suffer punishment above any ordinary thief.

Whitaker. Blood of the Grape, (1654,) p. 107.

This narrow search which all their soules must sift, No subtle wit by sophistry can shift.

Stirling. Domes-day. Seventh Hour.

All those books which are called sophical, such as the Wisdom of Sirach, &c. tend to teach the Jews the true spiritual meaning of God's economy.

Dr. Harris. On the Fifty-third Chapter of Isaiah, p. 256.

Reduce it to syllogism, and it will be found a sophism with four terms in it.—Waterland. Works, vol. iv. p. 46.

But since I recollect that Mr. Locke has insisted on a solution of the difficulty, which, I think, and am not afraid to call inconclusive and sophistical, it is worth my while to bestow a few words upon it.—Bolingbroke. Fragments, § 21.

A set of men, smitten, not with the love of wisdom, but of fame and glory, men of great natural abilities, notable industry and boldness, appeared in Greece; and assuming the name of sophists, a name hitherto highly honourable, and given only to those, by whom mankind in general were supposed to be made wiser, to their ancient poets, legislators, and the gods themselves, undertook to teach, by a few lessons and in a short time, all the parts of philosophy to any person, of whatever kind were his disposition or turn of mind, and of whatever degree the capacity of it, so that he was but able to pay largely for his teaching.

Sydenham. Plato. Dialogues, vol. i. p. 19. Note 6.

Tussis pro crepitu, an art Under a cough to slur a f—t, That would sophistically imply Both are unlawful, I deny.—Hudibras, pt. i. c. 1.

Duke. Speak plainly your intent. I love not a sophistical truth, With an allay of lye in't.

Dryden. The Assiguation, Act v. sc. 4.

Even when the materials employed about experiments are no way sophisticated, but genuine, and such as nature has produced them, or art ought to prepare them; even then, I say, there may be a very considerable disparity betwixt concretions of the same kind and name.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 321.

It is scarcely imaginable to him, that has not been very conversant with the drugs and simples sold in shops, how generally they are adulterated by the fraudulent avarice of the sellers, especially if they be such, whose preciousness may make their sophistication very beneficial to them, that practice it.—Id. Ib. vol. i. p. 319.

Last see him waging with the fools of rhyme A wanton, harmless war. Duncie after duncie, Beaux, doctors, templars, courtiers, sophs and cits, Condemn'd to suffer life.

Thompson. On Mr. Pope's Works.

When I was a soph at Cambridge, Pope was about his translation of Homers Ilias, and had published part of it.

Jortin. Adversaria.

We need not fear truth should lie long overwhelmed under the sophisms of falsehood; it will always rise at last triumphant over the strongest opposition.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. i. Introd.

This branch produced the sophists of Greece, the academies of after times who would maintain the pro and con upon any subject proposed, the schoolmen and popish doctors in the dark ages of Christianity.

Id. Ib. vol. ii. pt. ii.

If in the tent retir'd, or battle's rage, Britannia's sighs shall reach great Fred'ric's ear; He'll drop the sword, or shut the sophic page, And pensive pay the tributary tear.

Cunningham. On the Death of his late Majesty Geo. II.

The wicked man, who is resolved not to part with his vices, and yet finds himself crossed and disturbed by these opinions, which he had imbibed in his education, and afterwards approved in his judgment, by sophistical reasonings against the truth of his opinions.—Warburton, vol. x. Ser. 33.

He is rattling over the streets of London, and pursuing all the sophisticated joys which succeed to supply the place where nature is relinquished.—Knox, Ess. 7.

Gross sophistry has scarce ever had any influence upon the opinions of mankind, except in matters of philosophy and speculation; and in these it has frequently had the greatest.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 1.

SOPITE, v. } Fr. Soporal, soporifere; SOPORATED, adj. } It. Soporifero; Lat. Soporos, SOPOROUS. } soporiferus, from Sopor; Gr. SOPORIFEROUS. } ὑπν, visio vera, (either SOPORIFICK. } sleeping or waking;) Gr. ὑπνισθαι, subesse. } See Scaliger in Vossius.

Soporiferous,—bearing or bringing sleep, or sleepiness, drowsiness; sleepy, drowsy.

Sopite,—to lull to sleep; to still, to quiet, to set at rest.

It is more soporiferous than opium, and sooner casteth a man into a dead sleepe, that he shall never rise againe.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxi. c. 31.

But I suppose, that the soporiferous medicines are liket to do it; which are henbane, hemlock, mandrak, moonshade, tobacco, opium, saffron, poplar-leaves, &c.

Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 975.

Many differences and disputes arising concerning religion, which were not then quite sopited, our author Puccius, who was only a spectator, laid aside his trade, and totally applied himself to the study of sacred letters.

Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. i.

His grace [Abbot] hath formerly shewed his dislike of them both, and hearing that you [W. Page] take up the bucklers in a theam of so small necessity, and of so great heap and distemper, which will draw a new reply (for Prynne will not sit down as an idle spectator) and beget bitterness and intestine contestations at home among our selves, he is much offended that you do stickle and keep on foot such questions, which may be better sopited and silenced than maintained and drawn into sidings and partakings.

Id. Ib. vol. ii.

Of such a resurrection as this, Plotinus, (though perhaps mistaking it for the true Christian resurrection) might have some cause to affirm, that it would be but a resurrection to another sleep; the soul seeming not to be thoroughly awake here, but as it were soporated, with the dull steams and opiatick vapours of this gross body.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 795.

In small synopses it may perhaps rouse the spirits a little, but in soporos diseases it is commonly an uncertain and ineffectual remedy.

Greenhill. Art of Embalming, p. 58.

For the colour and taste of opium are, as well as its soporific or anodyne virtues, mere powers depending on its primary qualities, whereby it is fitted to produce different operations on different parts of our bodies.

Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 23.

Pleas'd if my rhyme just measure keeps, And stretch'd at ease my reader sleeps. Hibernian matrons thus of old, Their soporific stories told.

Somerville. The Fortune Hunter, c. 4.

The clear harangue, and cold as it is clear, Falls soporific on the listless ear.

Cowper. Progress of Error.

SORCERER. } Fr. Sorcier; Lat. Sortitor, SORCERESS. } a caster of lots, (sortes), soro, SORCEROUS. } from sup-ew, trahere, to draw, SORCERY. } Witches, in foretime called lot-tellers, now commonly called sorcerers. Catalogue of English printed books, 1595, (cited by Tooke.)

A teller of lots, of fortune, of fates; a witch or wizard; an enchanter.

And some Jewes seiden, whith sorcerie he wrouhte.

Piers Plouhman, p. 312.

The mother was on elfe by aventure Ycome, by charmes or by sorcerie, And everich man hateth hire compaignie.

Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 5174.

I sawe there some of other porte, And that was Circes, and Calypse, That couthen do the moone clypse, Of men and chaunge the liknesse, Of artmagike sorceresse.

Gower. Con. A. b. viii.

To wynde, to ayre, to sea, to londe She preide, and eke helde vp her honde To Echates, and gan to crie, Whiche is the goddesse of sorcerie.—Id. Ib. b. v.

She that was prompte & redy to all euill, cast in her mynde that this chylde was slayne by poyson, or by some other purposed malice, for the which lastly was accusyd a baylyfe, or lefe officer, callyd Monuole, with dyuerse witchis and sorseryes that shulde imagyn this childis deth.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 116.

This sorcerous worker to make hym pope, in the space of xiii. yeres, poysoned. vi. of his predecessours one after another.—Bale. English Votaries, pt. ii.

Warm ashes from the furnace Moses took; The sorcerers did with wonder on him look, And smil'd at th' unaccustom'd spell, Which no Egyptian rituals tell.

Cowley. The Plagues of Egypt.

O pardon me, my soveraine lord, to shew The secret treasons, which of late I know To have bene wrought by that false sorceresse: Shee, onely she, it is, that earst did throw This gentle knight into so great distresse, That death him did awaite in daily wretchednesse.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 12.

Whither, alone, by these hill-confines, goes Thy erring foote? Th' art entring Circes house, Where, (by her medicines, blacke, and sorcerous) Thy souldiers all are shut, in well-arm'd sties, And turnd to swine.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. x.

How unlikely is it that God should make use of this sorceress as a prophetess, and should give her the honour of revealing his counsels.—Waterland, vol. ix. Ser. 33.

The civil law punishes with death not only the sorcerers themselves, but also those who consult them, imitating in the former the express law of God, "thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." And our own laws, both before and since the conquest, have been equally penal; ranking the crime in the same class with heresy, and condemning both to the flames.—Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 4.

SORD, i. e. Sward, (qv.)

Pol. This is the prettiest low-borne lasse, that euer Ran on the greene-sord: nothing she do's, or seemes But smacks of something greater than her selfe, Too noble for this place.

Shakespeare. The Winter's Tale, Act iv. sc. 3.

I' th' midst an altar as the land-mark stood Rustic of grassie sord. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. xi.

SORDID. } Fr. Sordide; It. Sordido; Sp. SORDIDLY. } Sordido; Lat. Sordidus, from SORDIDNESS. } sordes, perhaps the Gr. Σωρος, a heap, (a mixen,) sc. of filth.

Filthy or foul, dirty, (met.) abject, mean, base; covetous of filthy lucre.

Amongst them all she placed him most low, And in his hand a distaffe to him gave, That he thereon should spin both flax and tow; A sordid office for a mind so brave: So hard it is to be a womans slave!

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 5.

Not vext and tost

'Twixt spring and frost,
Nor by alternate shreds of light

Sordidly shifting hands with shades and night.

Crashaw. The Glorious Epiphany of our Lord God.

There is a second sort of matter affecting ulcers, that is thick, generated of abundance of gross tough humours, and rendering the ulcer foul; whence it is called a sordid ulcer.

Wiseman. Surgery, b. ii. c. 1.

In the one may be seen an humble, pious, great, and generous soul, with some pitiable sallies of sudden passion: in the other you see nothing but what is mean, sordid, and brutal.—Waterland. Works, vol. vi. p. 145.

Two or three vol. were offered to him [Pelham] by such indigent persons for six pence a peice, such is the sordidness of ignorance and poverty.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. ii.

Motives of avarice had prevailed upon the sordid mind of Judas to conspire with his master's enemies against his life.

Bp. Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 19.

But he who reads and considers duly the very striking anecdotes and conversations in Lord Melcombe's Diary, will find, that, in order to see the venality in its full growth, and survey sordidness in its complete state of abomination, it will be necessary to turn from low to high life.

Knox. Spirit of Despotism.

SORE, adj.

SORE, ad.

SORE, n.

SO'RANCE, n.

SO'RED, adj.

SO'RELY.

SO'RENESS.

SO'RROW, n.

SO'RROW, v.

SO'RROWFUL.

SO'RROWFULLY.

SO'RROWFULNESS.

SO'RROWING, n.

SO'RRY.

SO'RRILY.

SO'RRINESS.

Skinner refers to the A. S. verbs Sarian, sargian, dolere, sorgian, curare, and to the Dut. and Ger. Synonyms, but concludes all to be from the adj. sore. Tooke thinks sorrow, sorry, sore, are one word, with one meaning, and by change of the characteristic y to o, are the past part. of the A. S. Syrw-an, syrewan, syre-wian, to vex, to molest, to cause mischief. In A. S. written Sorw, sorwe, sorh, sorhg, sare, sar; in Old Eng. Sorwe, sorewe, soor, &c. And the word was, and is, the general name for—

Any malady, or disease, or mischief, or suffering; any thing—generally—by which one is vexed, grieved or mischieved. Sore, the adj.—

Causing pain, anguish, or distress; painful, distressing, afflicting. Sore, the adv.—

Painfully, distressingly, excessively.

Sorrow,—painfulness of mental suffering; anguish, distress, affliction; vexation, painful regret. (See the quotation from Cogan.) Spenser forms upon the adj. or past part. the verb To sore,—

To cause to be sore; also, to vex, to trouble.

Sorry,—grievous, mischievous, causing grief or mischief; causing pain or regret; regretting; vexatious, troublesome; not worth the trouble, or pains; worthless, mean, poor.

His axe tho he to hym com, so grisliche he schok & faste,
That the kyng quakede & ys men, so sore heo were a gaste.

R. Gloucester, p. 24.

And God wole, that men ofte in wraththe & in sore,
That after here grete wraththe here loue be the more.

Id. p. 55.

This worde dude much sorwe this seli olde kyng.

Id. p. 33.

Tho this kyng hadde go a boutte in such sorwful cas,
At the last he com to Caric, there ys dogter was.

Id. p. 35.

The rede, as for sorinesse, by turnede hym atten ende,
And assailede the wyte, & made hym abac wende.

Id. p. 131.

That tyme at Westmynster Harald sore seke lay.

R. Brunne, p. 52.

Now of flue sorowes, that git not endid are,
Henry in his writyng telles what thei ware.—Id. p. 7.

The wiche is callid caritas. Cristes owen fode
And solaceth alle soules. sorghful in purgatorie.

Piers Plouhman, p. 305.

Sorrow, sorrowful, —
A. S. Sorge, sorgfull; Dut. Sorghe, sorghvuldigh; Ger. Sorg; Sw. Sorg. Skinner says of sore, adj.—from A. S. Swær, swar; Dan. Svar; Dut. Swaer; Ger. Schwer, gravis, molestus, difficilis. All, I believe, contracted from the Lat. Severus. Sore, the n. and sore, the adv. he refers to the adj. Junius has three Greek origins, σωπος, cumulus, ψωπα, scabies, or σπ-ειν, trahere. Under the words sorrow and sorry,

For what cause blame hem sore, that thei be hoole in feith.

Wiclif. Tyte, c. 1.

And thei ful sory bigunnen ech bi him self to seye, Lord wher I am?—Id. Matthew, c. 26.

And they were excedyng sorrowful, and beganne euerye one of them to saye vnto hym: Is it I maister?

Bible, 1551. Id.

For though I made you soori in a pistle, it rewit me not though it rewite. Seynge that though thilk pistle made ghou sori at an hour, now I haue ioie. not for ghe weren maad sorouful, but for ghe weren maad sorouful to penaunce.

Wiclif. 2 Corynth. c. 7.

Wherfor though I made you sory with a letter. I repent not: though I dyd repent. For I perceave that that same epystle made you sory though it were but for a season. But I nowe reioyce, not that ye were sory, but that ye so sorowed, that ye repented.—Bible, 1551. Id.

And greet wepyng of alle men was maad, and they felden on the necke of Poul and kissiden hym, and *sorewid*en moost in the word that he seide, for thei schulen no more se his face.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 20.

And they wepte all abundantlye and fell on Paul's necke and kyssed hym, sorowing mooste of all for the wordes whiche he spake, that they shoulde se his face no more.

Bible, 1551. Id.

The sorowe that is aftir god worchith penaunce into stidefast heelte, but sorowe of the world worchith deeth.

Wiclif. 2 Corynth. c. 7.

For godly sorow causeth repentaunce vnto saluacion not to bee repented of: when worldly sorow causeth death.

Bible, 1551. Id.

And whanne the younge man had herde these wordis he wente away sorrowful for he hadde many possessions.

Wiclif. Matthew, c. 19.

Only the intellect, withouten more,
That dwelled in his herte sike and sore,
Gan feillen, whan the herte felte deth;
Dusked his eyen two, and failled his breth.

Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 2805.

For certes the flesh coveiteth ayenst the spirite: and ever the more strong that the flesh is, the sorier may the soule be.—Id. The Persones Tale.

She said, certes, that she sorry was,
That he hath had such perill and such caas.

Id. The Legend of Dido.

For in swiche cas wimmen have swiche sorwe,
Whan that hir housbonds ben fro hem ago,
That for the more part they sorwen so
Or elles fallen in swiche maladie,
That atte laste certainly they die.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2824.

How gret a sorwe suffereth now Arcite
That deth he feleth thurgh his herte smite;
He wepeth, walleth, crieth pitously.—Id. Id. v. 1151.

"Hast thou not had thy lady as thee liketh?"
"No, no," quod he, and sorwefully he siketh.

Id. The Frankeleines Tale, v. 11,893.

This Hercules hym threwe to grounde
So sore, that thei haue hym founde
Lyggende there vpon the morowe.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

But were hem lief, or were hem loth
The women and the children both
In to the palais forth he brought,
With many a sorie hertes thought
Of hem whiche of her body bore
The children had.

Id. Id. b. ii.

She sawe hir father sorowe and sike,
And wist not the cause why.

Id. Id. b. i.

For though I be my seluen strange,
Eneie maketh myn hert change,
That I am sorowfully bestadde
Of that I see another gladde
With hir.

Id. Id. b. ii.

Wherefore the Scripture was geuen, that we may applye the medicine of the Scripture, euery man to his own sore.

Tyndall. Workes, p. 3.

And incontynēt he was taken, and his heed stryken off, wherof many folkes were sorie, and were sore dyspleased.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 30.

For with the soreness of the fall, if she had not had breath given her, she had delivered a foolish soul to Pluto.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. iv.

Amazed with this speech, he turned his eye full of humble sorrowfulness, to Philoclea.—Id. Id. b. iii.

The cruell steele, which thirld her dying hart,
Fell softly forth, as of his owne accorde;
And the wyde wound, which lately did dispart
Her bleeding brest and riven bowels god,
Was closed up, as it had not bene sor'd.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 12.

But she to none of them her love did cast,
Save to the noble knight, sir Scudamore,
To whom her loving hart she linked fast
In faithfull love, t' abide for evermore
And for his dearest sake endured sore,
Sore trouble of an hainous enmy.—Id. Id. b. iii. c. 6.

He now, to prove his late-renewed might,
High brandishing his bright deaw-burning blade,
Upon his crested scalp so sore did smite,
That to the scull a yawning wound it made:
The deadly dint his dulled senses all dismayd.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

He from that deadly throw made no defence,
But to the wound his weake heart opened wyde:
The wicked engine through false influence
Past through his eies, and secretly did gyde
Into his heart, which it did sorely gryde.

Id. Id. b. iii. c. 9.

There also those two Pandionian maides,
Calling on Itis, Itis evermore,
Whom, wretched boy, they slew with guiltie blades;
For whome the Thracian king lamenting sore,
Turn'd to a lapwing, fowlie them upbraydes,
And fluttering round about them still does sore.

Id. Virgil's Gnat.

Nay, this removing and replanting of them is the proper cure of many sorances, for from that time forward, subject they will not be to those injuries that use to infest them.

Holland. Plinie, b. xix. c. 12.

Wrath was the prince, and sory yet withall,
That he so wilfully refused grace.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 8.

When I awoke, and found her place devoyd,
And nought but pressed gras where she had lyen,
I sorrowed all so much as earst I ioyd,
And washed all her place with watry eyen.

Id. Id. b. i. c. 9.

Mourne not, except thou sorrow for my good.

Shakespeare. 1 Pt. Hen. VI. Act ii. sc. 5.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end,
Lament nor sorrow at: but please your thoughts
In feeding them with those my former fortunes
Wherein I liued.—Id. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act iv. sc. 13.

She heard with patience all unto the end;
And strove to maister sorrowful assay,
Which greater grew, the more she did contend,
And almost rent her tender hart in tway.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 7.

Such is the weakenesse of all mortall hope;
So tickle is the state of earthly things,
That, ere they come unto their aymed scope,
They fall too short of our fraile reckonings,
And bring us bale and bitter sorrowings.

Id. Id. b. vi. c. 3.

Why yeeld I thus to plaints and sorrowings,
As if all hope and helpe were perisht quite?

Fairstax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. vi. s. 86.

Sorrows are well allow'd, and sweeten nature,
Where they express no more than drops on lilies;
But when they fall in storms, they bruise our hopes;
Make us unable, though our comforts meet us,
To hold our heads up.

Massinger. A Very Woman, Act iii. sc. 4.

Who when he saw his sonne so ill bedight—
Was inly touched with compassion dreare,—
That he these words burst forth; "Ah! sory boy,
Is this the hope that to my hoary heare
Thou brings."—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 3.

Yet goodness, whose inclosure is but flesh,
Holds out oft times but sorribly.

Beaum. & Fletcher. The Nice Valour, Act ii. sc. 1.

But that which gladded all the warrior-train,
Though most were sorely wounded, none were slain.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

For do their very best, they cannot fly,
But often each way look, and often sorely sigh.

Thomson. Castle of Indolence, c. 1.

Grief seiz'd the thunderer, by his oath engag'd;
Stung to the soul, he sorrow'd, and he rag'd.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xix.

Sorrow is uneasiness in the mind, upon the thought of a good lost, which might have been enjoy'd longer; or the sense of a present evil.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 20.

We must also look to the undoing, as well as we can, our fore-past sins, in order to the obtaining God's forgiveness of them. But this is no way in the world to be done, but by meekly, and sorrowfully confessing them.

Sharp, vol. v. Dis. 6.

It may be a comfortable thought to us, that amidst our sorrowings for the ravages made by avarice at home, and our consternation at the advances of a pestilence abroad, there are yet many great and excellent designs on foot, many commendable charities going on, promoted and encouraged by some of all ranks and orders of men, through the whole nation.—Waterland. Works, vol. viii. p. 427.

This fort was but sorribly governed when I was there.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1690.

Nay indeed, under colour of relaxations, they [pleasures] are, to those who engage thoroughly in them, sore fatigues.

Secker, vol. i. Ser. 5.

Such is the good man's triumph over a calamity which, of all those which afflict poor mortals, is indeed the sorest, the most afflicting.—Knox, Ser. 2.

SOR

Sorrow is the direct opposite of joy. It expresses a mental suffering, under the privation of some good we actually possessed, or concerning which we entertained a pleasing expectation.—Cogan. On the Passions, c. 2.

In such a fine mould or soil as that of those more southern regions, agriculture is an easy art; and one man, with a couple of sorry horses, will be able, in a season, to cultivate as much land as will pay a pretty considerable rent to the proprietor.—Hume, pt. ii. Ess. 1.

SORE, or } Fr. Saur; It. Sàuro, which SOARE, n. } Ferrari derives from Subrufus; So'REL. } nearly or approaching to red.
Subrufo, sabro, savro, sæuro. (See Menage. Le Origini d'ella Ling. Ital.) A stag of four years old is called a sore, and of three a sorel; and so named (Skinner) from their colour; a saturò colore, a strong or deep colour.

Four yoked stedes full different of hewe;
The first was sord, with mane as reed as rose.
Chaucer. The Testament of Cresseide.

Of the soare falcon so I learne to flye,
That flags a while her fluttering wings beneath,
Till she her selfe for stronger flight can breath.
Spenser. Of Heavently Beautie.

Now, sir, a bucke the first yeare is a fawne, the second yeare a pricket, the third yeare a sorell, the fourth yeare a soare, the fift a buck of the first head, the sixt yeare a compleat buck.

Anonymous. The Returne from Pernassus, Act ii. sc. 5.

The young males which our fallow deere doo bring forth, are commonlie named according to their seuerall ages: for the first yeere it is a fawne, the second a pucket, the third a serell, the fourth a soare, the fift a bucke of the first head.
Holinshed. Description of England, b. iii. c. 4.

His horse was of fiery sorrel, with black feet.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

— Our prey was rich and great,
Twice five and twentie flocks of sheepe; as many herds of neat;
As many goats, and nastie swine; an hundred fiftie mares
All sorrell, most with sucking foals.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xi.

SORITES. Gr. Σωπειτης, from σωπος, a heap, which Cicero considered to be equivalent to the Lat. Acervalis, from acervus, a heap. See the quotation.

The word sortes denotes an heaping up together; the syllogism that bears this name contains, as it were, a heap of premisses, ranged in such a manner, that the attribute of the preceding becomes always the subject of the following, till the conclusion is formed, of the subject of the first of the premisses, and the attribute of the last of them reciprocally.
Crousaz. Art of Thinking, pt. iii. c. 9.

SORREL. Fr. Sorel, surette; A. S. Sure, sower, (Skinner.)

A herb, so called from the sourness of its taste.
Sorrel and white-wine, if you costive prove,
And muscels, all obstructions shall remove.
Francis. Horace, b. ii. Sat. 4.

SORT, v. Fr. Sortir, to issue, come or go forth. (See Menage.) It is probably not more than a consequential usage of sort, infra.

To issue, to come or bear to an issue or event; to the issue or event, aimed at or expected to succeed.

For where destruction I do once pretend,
All that man doth, still sorteth to that end.
Drayton. Legend of the Duke of Normandy.

I am sure sweet Kate this kindness merits thanks.
What not a word? Nay then thou lov'st it not:
And all my paines is sorted to no prove.
Shakespeare. The Taming of the Shrew, Act iv. sc. 3.

The opinions of some of the ancients, that blown aires do preserve bodies, longer than other aires, seemeth to me probable; for that the blown aires, being over-charged and compressed, will hardly receive the exhaling of any thing, but rather repulse it. It was tried in a blown bladder, whereinto flesh was put, and likewise a flower, and it sorted not.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 351.

John Cumin (after that he and Bruse were thus agreed vpon articles, and departed the one from the other) began to doubt, least this conspiracie devised betwixt them, would not sort to anie luckie conclusion for his purpose.

Holinshed. Historie of Scotland.

Princes, in regard of the distance of their fortune, from that of their subjects & servants, cannot gather this fruit, [friendship] (except to make themselves capable thereof) they raise some persons, to be as it were companions, and almost equals to themselves, which many times sorteth to inconvenience.—Bacon. Ess. Of Friendship.

VOL. II.

SOR

SORT, n. } Fr. Sort; It. Sòrte, lot; Fr.
SORT, v. } Sorte; It. Sòrta, kind, both So'RTABLE. } from the Lat. Sors, perhaps So'RTAL. } from Gr. Συρ-ειν, to draw,
So'RTANCE. } lot, luck; state or condition
So'RTER. } allotted. Sort, — used (lit.)
So'RTING, n. } from the Lat. Sors.
So'RTITION. } Lot, allotment, fortune, So'RTILE'GIOUS. } fate; state or condition, allotted or assigned; or to which any one, any thing, is assigned, apportioned or appropriated; or in which it is arranged, ranked, placed or classed;
class or kind; degree, manner, form, or fashion.

To sort,—to have or take or give by lot; to happen or befall.

To sort, or assort,—to arrange, separate, dispose, or distribute into destined classes or kinds, into orders; into their proper or peculiar kinds or species; to adapt, to accommodate, to suit.

And forth he went, shortly for to tell,
There as Mercurie sorted him to dwell.
Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. v.

Anon to drawn every wight began,
And shortly for to tellen as it was,
Were it by aventure, or sort, or cas,
The sothe is this, the cutte felle on the knight,
Of which ful blith and glad was every wight.
Id. The Knights Tale, v. 844.

That Paris now with his vnmanly sorte,
With mitred hats, with oynted bush and beard,
His rape enioyeth. Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. iv.

Why then, quoth she, vnwroken shal we die?
But let vs die: for this! and in this sort
It liketh vs to seeke the shadowes darck! Id. Ib.

A man cannot speake to his sonne but as a father, to his wife but as a husband, to his enemy but upon tearmes, whereas a friend may speake as the case requires, and not as it sorteth with the person.—Bacon. Ess. Of Friendship.

And when my careful eye I cast upon my sheep,
I sort them in my pens, and sorted so I keep.
Drayton. The Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 6.

— The world indifferently
Disposde betwixt us; every one his kingdome; I, the seas, Pluto the blacke lot; Jupiter the principalities
Of broad heaven, all the skie and clouds, was sorted out:
the earth
And high Olympus, common are, and due to eithers birth.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xv.

Lam. Where is he?
Charl. Receiving entertainment in your house
Sorting with his degree.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Honest Man's Fortune, Act iii. sc. 1.

Can the Gauls be sorted in the same ranage with the Egyptians?—Holland. Plinie, b. xix. c. 1.

There on a day, as he persew'd the chace,
He chaunst to spy a sort of shepherd groomes
Playing on pypes and caroling apace,
The whyles their beasts there in the budded broomes
Beside them fed, and nipt the tender bloomes.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 9.

Which when those knights beheld, with scornfull eye
They sdeigned such lascivious disport,
And loath'd the loose demeanure of that wanton sort.
Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 1.

— No, make a lott'ry,
And by deuce let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector.
Shakespeare. Troyl. & Cres. Act i. sc. 3.

A trim exploit, a manly enterprize,
To coniuere teares vp in a poore maids eyes,
With your derision; none of nobler sort,
Would so offend a virgin.
Id. Midsummer Night's Dreame, Act iii. sc. 2.

What good got you by wearing out your feet,
To run on scurvy errands to the poor,
And to bear money to a sort of rogues,
And lousy prisoners?
Massinger. The Virgin Martyr, Act iii. sc. 3.

Ber. I think, it be no other, but even so:
Well may it sort, that this portentous figure
Comes armed through our watch; so like the king
That was, and is, the question of these wars.
Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act i. sc. 1.

For if there be considered on the one side, the truth of religion established; the constant peace and security; the good administration of justice; the temperate use of the prerogative, not slackened, not much strained; the flourishing state of learning, sortable to so excellent a patroness; the convenient state of wealth and means, both of crown and subject; the habit of obedience, and the moderation of discontents.—Bacon. On the Advancement of Learning.

1777

SOT

If he were partaker of them, they would draw more inconveniences upon him than benefit, being nothing sortable either to his disposition or breeding.—Howell, b. ii. Let. 6.

Here doth hee wish his person, with such powers
As might hold sortance with his qualitie,
The which hee could not leue.
Shakespeare. Hen. IV. Act iv. sc. 1.

The remainders of thy sacred person are not yet free;
the souldiers have parted thy garments, and cast lots upon thy seamelesse coat (those poore spoiles cannot so much enrich them, as glorifie thee; whose Scriptures are fulfilled by their barbarous sortitions.)

Bp. Hall. Cont. The Crucifixion.

Horace makes the blood of frogs an ingredient in sortilegious charms.—Daubuz.

From whence it is easy to observe, that the essences of the sorts of things, and consequently the sorting of this, is the workmanship of the understanding, that abstracts and makes those general ideas.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 3.

But it being evident, that things are rank'd under names into sorts or species, only as they agree to certain abstract ideas, to which we have annex'd those names; the essence of each genus, or sort, comes to be nothing but that abstract idea, which the general, or sortal (if I may have leave so to call it from sort, as I do general from genus) name stands for.—Id. Ib.

The proportion of the average quantity of all sorts of grain imported into Great Britain to that of all sorts of grain consumed, it has been computed by the author of the Tracts upon the Corn Trade, does not exceed that of one to five hundred and seventy.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 5.

The shepherd, the sorter of the wool, the wool-comber or carder, the dyer, the scribbler, the spinner, the weaver, the fuller, the dresser, with many others, must all join their different arts in order to compleat even this homely production.—Id. Ib. b. i. c. 1.

SOSS. See SOUCE.

SOT, n. } The Goth. Sauhts; A. S.
SOT, v. } Suht; Dut. Sucht; Ger. Sucht, So'TTISH. } a disease, a sickness; and So'TTISHLY. } Wachter conceives the Ger.
So'TTISHNESS. } Sucht, to differ in nothing from So'TIE. } seuche, except in the manner of forming it from the verb siechen, ægrotare. (See SICK.) Lye cites from P. T. v. 493, "And therewith he caught a cardiacke and a cold sot." Sotie (Fr. Sotise) in Gower, soted priest, in Chaucer, &c., approach so close to a disease of the mind—a diseased or disabled state of mind—as to afford a conjecture that Eng. Sot, Fr. Sot, in their common application, have no other origin,—unless we owe them to the A. S. Seoth-ian, the past part. of which is sod (See Assor and Besor.) Menage derives from stolto, Skinner from exoticus, and Junius from the Hebrew.

A sot,—one in a state of mental disease or weakness, inertness, stupor, (with drink;) a senseless, stupid, infatuated person, or dolt; a dotard; or otherwise,—one sod or sodden with drink, drenched; an habitual drunkard.

The Scottis I telle for sottis. R. Brunne, p. 278.

The cause of al thys caitifte. cometh of meny bisshopes
That suffren suche sottes. Piers Plouhman, p. 160.

This soted preest, who was gladder than he?
Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16,740.

But he that can, ne neuer so wel him behaue, and hath vertue haboundaunte, in manyfolde maners, and be not wealthed with soche yearthlie goods, is holde for a foole, and saied his wit is but sotted.
Id. The Testament of Loue, b. i.

The nightingale with so mery a note,
Answered him that all the wood rang,
So sodeinly, that as it were a sote,
I stood astonished. Id. The Flower and the Leaf.

— And as he cast his loke
Into the well, and hede toke,
He sawe the like of his visage,
And wende there were an ymage
Of such a nympe, as tho was faye
Wherof that loue his herte assaye
Began, as it was after sene
Of his sotie, and made him wene
It were a woman, that he sighe.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

And hath with in hym selfe so tamed
His herte, that all the sotie
Of loue for chivalrie
He lefte, and be hym leef or loth,
To Troie forth with hem he goth. Id. Ib. b. iv.

10 R

To seen a man from his estate
Through his sotie effeminate,
And leue that a man shall dooe,
It is as hose about the shooe
To man, whiche oughte not to be vsed.

Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

The girl, thy well chosen mistress, perchance shall defend thee, when Basilius shall know how thou hast sotted his mind with falsehood, and falsly sought the dishonour of his house.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

The king and the queen will use so much the more hate against their daughter, as they had found themselves sotted by him in the pursuit of their love.—Id. Ib. b. iv.

What heare ye of the Scottes
They make vs all sottes.

Skelton. Why come ye not to Court?

— I am sotted,
Utterly lost: my virgin's faith has fled me.
Beaum. & Fletcher. Two Noble Kinsmen, Act iv. sc. 2.

When Jeremy his Lamentations writ,
They thought the wizard quite out of his wit,
Such sots they were, as worthily to lie
Lock'd in the chains of their captivity.
Drayton. To Mr. George Sandys.

Nor stirs it him to think on the impostor vile,
Who seeming what he's not, doth sensually beguile
The sottish purblind world. Id. Poly-Olbion, s. 13.

Menander the comical poet, bringeth in a husband upon the stage, who to reproach his wife for her sottishness and want of sense, giveth her the tearme of Bleet.

Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 22.

Like drunken sots about the streets we roam:
Well knows the sot he has a certain home;
Yet knows not how to find th' uncertain place,
And blunders on, and staggers every pace.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. i.

Nevertheless though these stoicks were such sottish corporealists, yet were they not for all that atheists.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 420.

Plutarch well condemns the vulgar both among the Egyptians and Greeks, for that in their mournful solemnities, they sottishly attributed to the gods, the passions belonging to the fruits of the earth.—Id. Ib. p. 508.

Though they plainly confute themselves in all this, by sometimes acknowledging matter and motion infinite and eternal, which argues either their extreme sottishness or impudence.—Id. Ib. p. 645.

It is an unquestioned fact, that the evangelic history of the demoniacs hath given occasion to the most scandalous frauds, and sottish superstitions, throughout almost every age of the church; the whole trade of exorcisms, accompanied with all the mummery of frantic and fanatic agitations, having arisen from thence.

Warburton, vol. x. Ser. 27.

SOVEREIGN, adj. } Fr. Souverain, one SO'VEREIGN, n. } who acknowledges no
SO'VEREIGNLY. } superior, (Cotgrave.)
SO'VEREIGNNESS. } It. Sovràno; Sp. Sove-
SO'VEREIGNTY. } rano; Lat. Supremus, SO'VEREIGNIZE, v. } supreme.

Being above all other; most powerful, most able, most efficacious; chief, principal, predominant.

Corineus hatte here souereyn, that so strong was of honde,
That hym ne mygte no mon ne geant at stonde.

R. Gloucester, p. 15.

And that fole of Est Angle vnderuouge there
Kyng Egbyrgt to her soueryn, & seruage hym bere.

Id. p. 258.

Ys no vertue so feyr. of value ne of profit
As ys suffraunce soueraynliche. so hit be for Godes loue.

Piers Plouhman, p. 225.

Obeie ghe to ghoure souereyns, and be ghe suget to hem, for thei parfytil waken as to gheldinge resoun for ghoure soulis, that thei do this thing with ioie and not forewyne.

Wiclif. Ebrewis, c. 13.

Eithir he that techith in techinge, he that styrith softli in monestinge, he that gyueth in symplenesse, he that is souereyn in bisynesse, he that hath mercy in gladnesse.

Id. Romaynes, c. 12.

Crist is soueraigne, and the preest mene and mediatour betwix Crist and the sinner.—Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

"Mercy," quod she, "my soueraigne lady quene,
Er that your court depart, as doth me right.
I taughte this answe unto this knight."

Id. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6630.

But soueraignes ayenward shulde thinke in this wise, I am seruauant of these creatures to me deliuered, not lord but defendour; not maister but infourmer, not possessor but in possession.—Id. The Testament of Loue, b. ii.

"My liege lady, generally," quod he,
"Women desiren to han soueraignete,
As well over hir husband, as hir love,
And for to ben in maistris him above."

Id. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6619.

But soueraignly dame Pertelote shrighit,
Ful louder than did Hasdruballes wif,
Whan that hire husband hadde ylost his lif.
Chaucer. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,368.

For thy if that thou wilt purchase,
Howe that thou might enuie flee,
Acqueint the with charitee,
Whiche is the vertue soueraigne.—Gower. Con. A. b. iii.

Then afterwards he in his stead did raigne;
But shortly was by Coyll in batteill slaine:
Who after long debate, since Lucies tyme,
Was of the Britons first crownd soueraigne.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 10.

— Be it so, since he
Who now is Sovran can dispose and bid
What shall be right.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

The fee of the duchy of Bretayne is of so noble a condycion, that soueraignly there ought none to enterprise any mater there, but al onely their owne naturall lorde.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 181.

The antique world, in his first flowring youth,
Found no defect in his Creator's grace;
But with glad thankes, and unreproued truth,
The guifts of soueraigne bounty did embrace.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

Yet rightfull kingdome she had none at all,
Ne heritage of native soueraignie;
But did usurpe with wrong and tyrannie
Upon the scepter, which she now did hold.

Id. Ib. b. i. c. 4.

Host. Your ladyship, and all your train are welcome;
Lady F. I thank my hearty host.
Host. So is your soueraignty,
Madam I wish you joy of your new gown.

B. Jonson. The New Inn, Act ii. sc. 1.

King Meleus, Theseus, Hispan, and Philoctes did no lesse:
But soueraignly the sonne of Joue
Bestird him in the presse.

Warner. Albion's England, b. ii.

Her royalties were spacious, as soueraignizing over many towns and provinces.—Sir T. Herbert. Travels, p. 81.

Nimrod was the first that soueraignized over men.

Id. Ib. p. 226.

"O, impudent, regardful of thy own,
Whose thoughts are center'd on thyself alone,
Advanc'd to soueraign sway, for better ends
Than thus like abject slaves to treat thy friends."

Dryden. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

— For Jove's own tree,
That holds the woods in awful soueraignty,
Requires a depth of lodging in the ground;
And, next the lower skies, a bed profound:
High as his topmast boughs to Heaven ascend,
So low his roots to Hell's dominion tend.

Id. Virgil. Geor. b. ii.

Mel. How does that laugh become my face?
Phil. Soueraignly well, Madam.
Mel. Soueraignly! Let me die, that's not amiss.
That word shall not be yours; I'll invent it, and bring it up my self.

Dryden. Marriage A-la-Mode, Act iii. sc. 1.

For the serious persuasion of a witness, who seeth in secret, of an omnipotent Soueraign, equally benevolent, wise, just, and holy, must inconceivably animate to every thing good, and deter from every thing evil.

Secker, vol. ii. Ser. 27.

They [the Israelites] would have a king who would determine soueraignly, and command their armies.

Warburton. Divine Legation, b. v. s. 3.

The parliaments ador'd on bended knees
The sou'raignty, they were conven'd to please;
Whate'er was ask'd, too timid to resist,
Complied with, and were graciously dismiss'd.

Cowper. Expostulation.

SOUGH, n. i. e. a sew or sewer.

But if there be, yet could not such mines, without great pains and charges, if at all, be wrought; the delfs would be so flown with waters, (it being impossible to make any addits or soughs to drain them) that no gins or machines could flie to lay and keep them dry.

Ray. On the Creation, pt. ii.

SOUL, n. } Chaucer writes also Saule;
SOUL, v. } Goth. Saiwala; A. S. Sawel, sawal, SO'ULLESS. } sawl, saul; Dut. Siele; Ger. Seele; Sw. Sial. Junius suspects it to be an elegant compound to denote the well of life, from Gr. Zaw, I live, and Wala, a well or fountain. Ihre suspected some etymological connexion between Sial, anima, and Sialf, ipse, self. We use soul as equivalent to—

The spirit, the breath of life; the animating or vital principle or power; an animated, intellectual or intelligent being.

Soul-scot (A. S. Sawel-sceat, sawl-sceat),—money paid at the opening of the grave to the parish priest, for the good of the deceased's soul, (Somner.)

The pope here of was glad, & twei holy men hym sende,
Fagan and Dimian, hys soule for to amende
That rygt bi leue hym tagte, and gef hym Cristendom.

R. Gloucester, p. 73.

Ge seggeth oth by my soule quath ich. ich have seyen hit ofte

Her smyt no thyng so smerte. ne smelleth so foule
As shame. Piers Plouhman, p. 228.

— Such a barn was ybore. in Bethleem the cyte
That mannes soule sholde save. and synne destruye.

Id. p. 352.

For what profitith it to a manne if he wynne al the world and suffre peyring of his soul? or what chaungyng schal a man give for his soule?—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 16.

What shall it profyt a man, thoughe he should wynne all the whole worlde yf he loose his owne soule? Or els what shall a man giue to redeme hys soule againe with all?
Bible, 1551. Ib.

And all that wrought is with a skilful thought,
The gost, that from the fader gan procede,
Hath souled hem withouten any drede.

Chaucer. The Second Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,795.

Who so can wel vnderstand, is shapen to be saued in souled blysse.—Id. The Testament of Loue, b. iii.

For thy good his whyle a man may Echone to sette peace with other
And louen as his owne brother
So maie he wynne worldes welthe
And aftirwarde his soule helthe.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

The perfitt forme, that God hathe geuen to other man,
Or other beast, dissolve it shall to earth wher it began;
And who can tell yf that the soule of man ascende,
Or with the body of it dye, and to the groun descende.
Surrey. Ecclesiastes, c. 3.

Pythagoras and Plato are of opinion, that the reasonable part of the soul is immortal and incorruptible; for that the soul, if it be not God, yet the work it is of eternal God: as for the unreasonable part, it is mortal and subject to corruption.—Holland. Plutarch, p. 683.

— Thou hast givn me to possess
Life in myself for ever, by thee I live,
Though now to death I yield, and am his due
All that of me can die, yet that debt paid,
Thou wilt not leave me in the loathsom grave
His prey, nor suffer my unspotted soule
For ever with corruption there to dwell.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

— Woman is her name, of man
Extracted; for this cause he shall forgo
Father and mother, and to his wife adhere;
And they shall be one flesh, one heart, one soule.

Id. Ib. b. viii.

But to guide nations in the way of truth
By saving doctrine, and from error lead
To know, and knowing worship God aright,
Is yet more kingly, this attracts the soul,
Governs the inner man, the nobler part.

Id. Paradise Regained, b. ii.

Unto the first of these [parts of human knowledge] the consideration of the original of the soul, whether it be native or adventive, and how far it is exempted from laws of matter and the immortality thereof, and many other points do appertain; which have been not more laboriously inquired than variously reported; so as the travel taken there, seemeth to have been rather in a maze than in a way.

Bacon. On the Advancement of Learning, pt. ii.

Who, comming to that soule-diseased knight,
Could hardly him intreat to tell his grief:
Which knowne, and all, that noyd his heavie spright,
Well searcht, eftsoones he gan apply relief
Of salves and med'cines, which had passing prief.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

By east and west let France and England mount,
Their battering canon charged to the mouthes,
Till their soule-fearing clamours haue braul'd downe
The flintie ribbes of this contemptuous citie.

Shakespeare. K. John, Act ii. sc. 2.

— Oh slaue, of no more trust
Then loue that's hyr'd? What goest thou backe,—y^a shalt Go backe I warrant thee: but Ile catch thine eyes
Though they had wings. Slaue, soule-lesse, villain, dog.

Id. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act v. sc. 2.

Yea, we are guilty of soul-murder, which is so much the more heinous by how much the soul is more precious than the body.—Hopkins, Ser. 4.

But taking, as we ordinarily now do, (in the dark concerning these matters) the soul of man, for an immaterial substance, independent from matter, and indifferent alike to it all, there can from the nature of things be no absurdity at all to suppose, that the same soul may, at different times, be united to different bodies, and with them make up, for that time, one man.—Locke. Of Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 27.

When we speak of the soul as created naturally immortal, we mean that it is by the divine pleasure created such a substance, as not having in it self any composition, or other particles of corruption, will naturally, or of it self continue for ever; that is, will not by any natural decay, or by any power of nature, be dissolved or destroyed; but yet nevertheless depends continually upon God, who has power to destroy or annihilate it, if he should so think fit.

Clarke. Letter to Mr. Dodwell.

My survey of man, I shall begin with the soul of man, by reason it is his most noble part, the copy of the divine image in us; in which we have enough to fill us with admiration of the munificence, power, and wisdom, of the infinite Creator, when we contemplate the noble faculties of this our superiour part.—Derham. Physico-Theology, b. v. c. 1.

Yet still you travel with unwearied toil,
And range around the realm without control,
Among my sons for proselytes to prowl,
And here and there you snap some silly soul.

Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

And sure, if aught below the seats divine
Can touch immortals, 'tis a soul like thine:
A soul supreme, in each hard instance try'd,
Above all pain, all anger, and all pride;
The rage of power, the blast of public breath,
The lust of lucre, and the dread of death.

Pope. To the Earl of Oxford.

In like manner he resolved that the soul of the world (for such a thing is always supposed by him) was not made by God out of nothing neither, nor out of any thing inanimate and soulless preexisting, but out of a preexisting disorderly soul, was brought into an orderly and regular frame.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 215.

To say, that though none of the parts alone have life in them, yet the conjunction of them altogether, maketh life, is absurd; it being impossible that life and soul should result from a congeries of lifeless and soul-less things; or that mindless things put together should beget mind.

Id. Ib. p. 823.

Four different opinions have been entertained concerning the origin of human souls.—1. That they are eternal and divine. 2. That they were created in a separate state of existence, before their union with the body. 3. That they have been propagated from the original stock of Adam, who contained in himself the mental as well as the corporeal seed of his posterity. 4. That each soul is occasionally created and embodied in the moment of conception.

Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 47.

The second best chattel was reserved to the church as a mortuary: and in the laws of King Canute this mortuary is called soul-scot (saw-l-sceat) or symbolum animæ.

Blackstone. Commentaries, vol. ii. b. ii. c. 28.

SOULDER, n. } Fr. Soulder; It. Saldare; SOULDER, v. } Sp. Soldar, (to soldar, metal, SOULDERING, n. } quasi solidar, to make solid.)
To consolidate; to unite, to close, or fasten;
confirm or amend.

And he [Petir] took hym bi the righthond and heuyde hym up; and anon hise leggis and hise feet were sowdid togidre, [confirmata sunt] and he leppide and stood and wandride.

Wiclif. Deeds, c. 3.

But to soder such gold, there is a proper glew or soder made, with an addition of gold and the seventh part of silver to the rest above named, and all the same stamped and united togidre.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiii. c. 5.

And since I am entred into the feat of sodring, it were verie meet and convenient to annex unto this present discourse, all things else concerning it, that wee may under one view behold the admirable works of Nature in this kind. The soder of gold then, is borax, which I have shewed already. Iron is sodred with the stiffe potters cley argilla, brasse ore, &c.—Id. Ib.

For trials inform us, that this will run with so moderate a heat, as often needs not endanger the melting of thin and delicate pieces of work, that are to be sodered; and if this silver-soder be so well made, as some I can shew, you may with it, soder even upon soder itself, made the ordinary way with brass and spelter, and so fill up those little holes or crannies that may have been left or made in the first sodring, and are not safely to be mended, but by a soder more easily fusible than the first.

Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 451.

SOUND, n. } Anciently written Soune.
SOUND, v. } Fr. Son, sonner; It. Suono, SOUNDING, n. } sonare; Sp. Son, sonar; Lat.
SOUNDLESS. } Sonus, from Tonus, Gr. Ton-eiv, to stretch or draw out, (sc. the voice. See the quotation from Locke.)

As far as souneth unto honestee,—as far as harmonizeth with, is in unison or concord with—honesty.

To sound, (sc.) as a signal or token,—to direct, to betoken, to tend.

I preve it thus, for in none other space
Of all this toun, save only in this place,
Feele I no wind, that souneth so like paine,
It saith, "Alas, why twined be we twaine."

Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. v.

O baggepipe wel coude he blowe and soune.

Chaucer. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 567.

This worthy monke toke all in patience,
And saide; I wol don all my diligence,
As fer as souneth into honestee,
To tellen you a tale, or two or three.

Id. The Monkes Prologue, v. 13,948.

— And of the harpe
The mery soune, whiche is to like,
That fonde Paulus forth with phisike,

Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

— The science of musike,
That teacheth vpon harmonie
A man to maken melodie
By voice and soune of instrument,
Through notes of accordement.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

No longer Fame could hold her peace, but blew a blaste
so highe

That made an eccho in the ayre, and souning through the skie.—Vncertaine Auctors. A Praise of Mistress R.

And euery man was warned to be redy, at the fyrst sounding of the trumpet.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 18.

Dismayed with so desperate deadly wound
And eke impatient of unwonted payne
He lowdly brayd with beastly yelling sound,
That all the fieldes rebellowed againe.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 8.

The league was in solemne wise confirmed, and such punished as had doone anie thing sounding to the breach of the same.—Holinshed. Historie of Scotland. Feritharis.

And what you know we take delight to hear,
That you are ever sounding in our ear:
And yet so shameless, when you tempt us thus,
To lay the fault on beauty and on us.

Drayton. Ep. of Mrs. Shore to Edw. IV.

The nature of sounds hath, in some sort, been inquired, as far as concerneth musick; but the nature of sounds in general hath been superficially observed. It is one of the subtillest pieces of nature.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 114.

But for your words, they rob the Hibla bees,
And leaue them hony-lesse.

Ant. Not stinglesse too.

Bru. O yes, and soundlesse too:

For you haue stolne their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.

Shakespeare. Julius Cæsar, Act v. sc. 1.

That which is conveyed into the brain by the ear is called sound; though, in truth, till it come to reach and affect the perceptive part, it be nothing but motion. The motion, which produces in us the perception of sound, is a vibration of the air, caused by an exceeding short, but quick, tremulous motion of the body, from which it is propagated; and therefore we consider and denominate them as bodies sounding.—Locke. Elements of Natural Philosophy, c. 11.

Every articulate word is a different modification of sound: By which we see, that from the sense of hearing by such modifications, the mind may be furnish'd with distinct ideas to almost an infinite number.—Id. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 18.

Our author seems to sound a charge, and begins like the clangor of a trumpet.—Dryden. Dedication to the Æneis.

Keep to your subject close in all you say;
Nor for a sounding sentence ever stray.

Id. Art of Poetry, c. 1.

Where each old poetic mountain Inspiration breath'd around:
Every shade and hallow'd fountain
Murmur'd deep a solemn sound.

Gray. Progress of Poesy.

SOUND, v. } A. S. Sund, mare, fretum,
SOUND, n. } vadium. Fr. Sonde, sonder;
SOUNDER. } Sp. Sondar. To prove, try,
SOUNDING, n. } feel, search the depth or SOUNDLESS. } bottom of. The A. S. Sund- drian, syndrian, (to sunder) is to separate, to divide, (to distinguish; and, consequentially, to discriminate, to investigate, to examine; and hence (as Cotgrave),—

To prove, try, feel, search—the depth or bottom of.

Sound, a bay or firth (sinus), the Gloss. to G. Douglas says, "is any great indraught of the sea betwixt two headlands, where there is no passage through, as the entrance into the Baltic between Denmark and Norway is eminently called." (Betwixt two head-lands, i. e. dividing, separating them.) Wachter rejects this etymology without reason.

Sound of a fish,—the swimming bladder. A. S. Sund, natatio, is probably from the A. S. verb Swimman. The pool of Siloa (natatoria) is in the Goth. version, Swumsa.

A sond (Fr. Sonde), is also—a probe.

And from alofte the stewarde of our state,
(The sounding plumbe) in haste poste hast must raunge,
To try the depth and goodnesse of our gate.
Gascoigne. Voyage into Hollande, an. 1572.

And whyles I hearken what the saylers saye,
The sounder sings, fadame two full no more.—Id. Ib.

Pem. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these
To sound the purposes of all their hearts.

Shakespeare. K. John, Act v. sc. 2.

Jam. Though there were an ambush
Laid for my life, I'll on and sound this secret.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Spanish Curate, Act iii. sc. 4.

Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride.

Shakespeare. son. 80.

Much like a man, who dreaming in his sleepe
That he is falling from some mountaine steepe
Into a soundlesse lake, about whose brim
A thousand crocodiles doe waite for him.

Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 2.

We continued this course till the following night, and then frequently brought to, to try if we were in soundings. But it was the 5th of November, at nine in the morning, before we struck ground, and then we had forty-two fathom, and a bottom of grey sand mixed with shells.

Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 6.

'Tis very probable that the great bending between New Holland and New Guinea, may have both rivers and lagunes, which may cause these great tides; or else there may be a passage of the sea between both places; as it is laid down in some draughts: Or if neither of these, there may be at least a large and deep sound.

Dampier. Voyages, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 8.

My orders to Mr. Burney were first to look well into East Bay, and then to proceed to Grass Cove, the place to which Mr. Rowe had been sent; and if he heard nothing of the boat there, to go farther up the sound, and come back along the west shore.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. iv. c. 8.

SOUND, adj. } A. S. Sund, gesund; Dut.
SOUNDLY. } Ghesond; Ger. Sund, gesund; SOUNDNESS. } Sw. Sund. Wachter refers to the Gr. Sws, and Lat. Sanus. Ihre to the Lat.
Sanus only. In A. S. it is also Sund-full, gesund- full, integer, sanus, prosperus. It may be from the A. S. Sunder, divisus, distinctus, divided, distinct or separate (sc.) from all other; and, consequentially, entire, whole.

Whole, wholesome; healed or healthy; robust, strong; fixed or fast. Sound is also used as equivalent to sane;—wise, judicious.

"Lo," he seide, "thei clepude me sam ded kyng some,
And get ich hadde leuer sam ded hem ouercome,
Than hol and sond be ouercome."—R. Gloucester, p. 163.

— So fareth hit by the ryghtful
Thauh he falle he falleth nat. bote as ho fulle in a bote
That ay is safand sounde. that suteth with ynnne the borde Sot hit fareth quath the frere. by ryghtful mannes fallynge.
Piers Plouhman, p. 168.

To Rome is come this holy creature,
And findeth ther hire frendes hole and sound.
Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 5569.

Now God that art of trouth soveraine,
And seest how I lie for trouth bound,
So sore knit in loues fyrie chaine,
Euen at the death through gyrt with many a wound,
That likely are neuer for to sound.

Id. The Complaint of the Black Knight.

And when she syth withouten drede
Hir lorde vpon his owne grounde,
That he was come safe and sounde,
In all this worlde ne might be
A gladder woman than was she.—Gower. Con. A. b. vi.

The cruell steele, which thrild her dying hart,
Fell softly forth, as of his owne accorde;
And the wyde wound, which lately did dispart
Her bleeding brest and riven bowels gor'd,
Was closed up, as it had not bene sor'd;
And every part to safety full sound,
As she were never hurt, was soone restord.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

— But if pride now
Should catch a fall in what I am attempting,
'Tis but a proverb sound and a neck broken.
Beaum. & Fletch. Woman Pleas'd, Act i. sc. 3.

Nor will it ought empaire a king to give a sound content
To any subject soundly wrong'd.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xix.

Hast thou a living soul, a human sense,
To like, dislike, prove, order, and dispense?
The depth of reason soundly to advise,
To love things good, things hurtful to despise?
Drayton. Black Prince to the Countess of Salisbury.

Ber. My thanks and dutie are your maiesties.
Kin. I would I had that corporall soundnesse now,
 As when thy father, and my selfe, in friendship
 First tride our souldiership.
Shakespeare. All's Well that Ends Well, Act i. sc. 2.
 So the French, when our generals soundly did pay'em,
 Went triumphant to church, and sang stoutly Te Deum.
Swift. A Left-handed Letter.
 I will not answer for the acuteness, much less for the soundness of his distinction.
Waterland. Works, vol. viii. p. 238.

Courteousness is the skin and outside of virtue, and though a man would wish in the first place to enjoy vigour of limbs and soundness of constitution, yet if he can have a good skin too it is no detriment to his person.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 34.

SOUP. See SUP.

SOUR, adj. } Sour is probably the same SOUR, v. } word as Sore. (See Tooke, 8vo.
 SO'URISH. } ed. vol. ii. p. 211.) A. S. Sorg- SO'URLY. } ian, tristare, constistare,— SO'URNESS. } To trouble, to distress; to be or cause to be—harsh, unpleasing, unkind; morose, severe.

Sour, applied to the taste, is equivalent to acid; and the Lat. Tristis is so used.

Be ye war of the sour dough of Farisees and of Saduceis: Thanne thei undirstonden that he seide not to be war of sour dough of loaves; but of the techyng of Pharisees and Saducees.—Wiclif. Matt. c. 16.

For wailed wine and meates thou had tho,
 Take moulded bread, pirate, and sider soure.
Chaucer. The Complaynte of Creseide.

Thus maie a mans wit be lerned
 Of hem, that so delites taken,—
 When thei with death ben ouertaken,
 That erst was swete is than soure.—Gower. Con. A. b. vi.

Why looke you so sowerly good brethren? why do you not rather giue hym great thanks.—Fryth. Workes, p. 79.

And as thou couldest not see leauen though thou brakest vp a loafe, except thou smelledst or tastedst the sourenes, euē so couldest thou neuer see true faith or loue, except thou sawest workes.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 225.

The tartnesse of his face, soures ripe grapes.
Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act v. sc. 4.

His lovely words her seemd due recompence
 Of all her passed paines; one loving howre
 For many yeares of sorrow can dispenge;
 A dram of sweete is worth a pound of soure.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 3.

Gom. Have you never Heard of a Roman lady (Oriana)
 Remembred as a president for matrons, (Chaste ones, I pray you understand) whose husband
 Tax'd for his soure breath by his enemy,
 Condemn'd his wife, for not acquainting him
 With his infirmity?
Beaum. & Fletch. The Knight of Malta, Act iii. sc. 2.

All greatest sweetes were sugred first with soures,
 The headlesse course of vncontrolled houres,
 To all difficulties a way vnlocks.—Stirling. Aurora, s. 79.

When pleasing Bourdeaux falls unto his lot,
 Some sow'rish Rochelle cuts thy thirsting throate.
Bp. Hall, b. v. Sat. 2.

As touching the nature of Levain, certain it is that it proceeded of sourenesse.—Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 11.

To torment and afflict ourselves needlessly, is not more unnatural in itself, than it is displeasing to God, who delights in the happiness of his creatures; and chooses rather an easy and cheerful, than an austere and sour obedience.
Waterland. Works, vol. ix. Ser. 3.

To this reply'd the stern Athenian prince,
 And sourly smil'd: "In owning your offence
 You judge yourself; and I but keep record
 In place of law, while you pronounce the word."
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. ii.

It takes off the sourness and moroseness of our spirits, and makes us affable and courteous, gentle and obliging,
 and willing to embrace with open arms, and an hearty love, all sorts and conditions of men.—Sharp, vol. i. Ser. 2.

They, who run into such extremities, make religion appear uninviting to others, and lay a heavier burthen on themselves, than they will be able to bear, at least without souring their tempers.—Secker, vol. ii. Ser. 23.

All hardships under which men put themselves of their own accord, not being enjoined in Scripture, nor evidently needful to preserve them from sin, and to raise their thoughts to a better world, (especially if they tend to promote rigour and sourness rather than mildness and humility) hurt instead of benefiting them, and discredit religion with others.—Id. Ser. 2.

SOURCE, n. Fr. Source, sourcer:—Menage thinks from Sourgir, Lat. Surgere, to arise. It has probably proceeded immediately from the
 It. Sòrsi or sùrsi, pret. per. of Sorgere, to arise, to spring.

That from which any thing rises or springs, takes its origin; the origin or beginning, the spring or fountain; the rise. See the quotation from Stewart; and see SOURDE, infra.

Therefore right as an hauke upon a sours
 Up springeth into the aire, right so praieres
 Of charitable and chaste besy freres,
 Maken hir sours to Goddes eres two.
Chaucer. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 7520.

Me fleyng at a swappe he hent,
 And with his sours againe vp went,
 Me caryng in his clawes starke.
Id. The House of Fame, b. ii.

Wher as the Poo out of a welle-smal
 Taketh his firste springing and his sours,
 That estward ay encreseth in his cours.
Id. The Clerkes Prologue, v. 7924.

The faded lockes fall from the loftie oke,
 The fouds doe gaspe, for dryed is their sourse,
 And fouds of teares flow in theyr stead perforce.
Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender. November.

This was to me that overflowing source,
 From whence his bounties plentifully spring,
 Whose speedy current with unusual force
 Bare me into the bosom of the king.
Drayton. The Legend of Thomas Cromwell.

The head or source therof ariseth at the foot of the utmost mountains of the Pelignians.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxxi. c. 3.

This source of ideas every man has wholly in himself;
 and though it be not sense, as having nothing to do with external objects, yet it is very like it, and might properly enough be called internal sense.
Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 1.

All rivers have their source either in mountains, or elevated lakes; and it is in their descent from these that they acquire that velocity which maintains their future current.—Goldsmith. Animated Nature, vol. i. c. 14.

If there is any one English word, which is now become virtually literal, in its metaphorical application, it is the word source. Who is it that ever thought of a spring or fountain of water, in speaking of God as the source of existence; of the sun as the source of light and heat, of land as one of the sources of national wealth; or of sensation and reflection, as the only sources (according to Locke) of human knowledge;—propositions which it would not be easy to enunciate with equal clearness and conciseness in any other manner?—Stewart. Philosophy, c. 4. p. 203. Ess. 5.

SOURDE, v. } Fr. Sourdre, from Sourgir, SO'RDEN, v. } Lat. Surgere, to arise.
 To arise, to raise; to spring, to issue; to have or take its source.

The spices that sourden of pride, sothly whan they sourden of malice imagined, avised, and forecaste, or elles of usage, ben dedly sinnes, it is no doute.
Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

Now sith that so is, that ye have understand what is pride, and which be the spices of it, and how mennes pride *sourde*th and springeth; now ye shul understand which is the remedie ayenst it.—Id. Ib.

But to all this was the towne of Gaunt repugnant in so moche y' mortall warre begāne to sourde atwene y'e sayd and the towne of Brugys and other.
Fabyan. Chronycle. Car. V. an. 3.

For the whiche murdre sourdyd great warre atwene kynge
 John [of France] and the sayde kynge of Nauerne, whiche contynued many yeres after.—Id. Ib. John, an. 3.

Thā the Cristen prynces seinge that they were thus deluded, toke theyr aduice how they myghte contynewe theyr pylgrymage vnto the holy cytie of Jerusalem; but, in this cousayll, sourdened & quykened so many opynyons, that eche was contrarious vnto other.—Id. Ib. c. 234.

SOUSE, v. } From the Lat. Salsum, as the SOUSE, n. } Dut. from Salitum; Dut. Soute, soute-bryn, soute, pekel; salt, salt-brine, salt-pickle.

To salt, or immerge, steep, sink, or soak in salt water; to immerge, plunge, throw into any liquid. It is also written Soss. See the quotation from Swift and also from Tusser, in v. Slab.

To souse, Ger. Saussen, strepitum edere, from the sound of wind, or of falling water, says Wachter: it may be of any thing falling, plunging, splashing, into water; and thus,—

To dash against, to plunge or make a plunge;
 to throw or fall precipitately.

Why doe not I my wery muses frame,
 (Although I bee well soused in this shoure,)
 To write some verse in honour of his name?
Gascoigne. Psalme of De profundis.

As when a griffon, seized of his pray,
 A dragon fiers encountreth in his flight,
 Through widest ayre making his ydle way,
 That would his rightfull ravine rend away:
 With hideous horror both together smight,
 And souce so sore, that they the Heavens affray.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 5.

In which his worke he had sixe servants prest,
 About the andvile standing evermore
 With huge great hammers, that did never rest
 From heaping stroakes which thereon soused sore.
Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 5.

Sending the king woord that he had prouided at his brothers manor, against his cōming, good plentie of souse & powdred meat, whatsoever he should find beside.
Holinshed. Historie of England, b. viii. c. 7.

But when the falconers take their hawking poles in hand,
 And crossing of the brook, do put it over land;
 The hawk gives it a souse, that makes it to rebound,
 Well near the hight of man, sometimes, above the ground.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 20.

Dio. But what shall we do the whilst?
Get. Kill swine, and souse 'em,
 And eat 'em when we have bread.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Propheless, Act i. sc. 3.

—How like a wildfire
 She'll leap into your bosom; then seeing me,
 Her conscience, and her fears creeping upon her,
 Dead as a fowle at souse, she'll sink.
Id. The Chances, Act iv. sc. 1.

I am of that opinion, and will dye in't,
 There is no understanding, nor can be
 In a soust souldier.
Id. The Captain, Act i. sc. 2.

Jag. I'll tell you in a word, I am sent to lay
 An imposition upon souse and puddings,
 Pasties, and penny custards.
Id. The Woman's Prize, Act i. sc. 3.

Get. Shall he be roasted whole,
 And serv'd up in a souce-tub?
Id. The Propheless, Act i. sc. 3.

Do you think, master, to be emperour
 With killing swine? you may be an honest butcher,
 Or allied to a seemly family of souce-wives.—Id. Ib.

Come on then, Satire! general, unconfin'd,
 Spread thy broad wing, and souse on all the kind.
Pope. Epilogue to Satires, Dial. 2.

From wholesome exercise and air,
 To sossing in an easy chair.—Swift. Stella at Wood-Park.

Between these two extendeth
 A slit from ear to ear,
 That every hour
 Gapes to devour
 The souce that grows so near.
Butler. Ballad on Oliver Cromwell.

These, Nature's commoners, who want a home,
 Claim the wide world for their majestic dome;
 They made a private study of the street;
 And, looking full on every man they meet,
 Run souse against his chaps.
Young. Epistle to Mr. Pope, Ep. 1.

SO'UTER. } A. S. Sutere, sutor, a shoe-SO'UTERLY. } maker. Lanc. Sowler, (Somner.)
 SO'UTAGE. } Still used in Scotland.

Soutage,—the material in which any thing is sowed up, packed up; applied to the material in which hops are packed up.

The diuel made a reve for to preche,
 Or of a souter a shipman, or a leche.
Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 3901.

Or being a simple sowler, will find fault at the shape of the legge: or if they be not there stopped, they will not spare to step up higher, and saie, that Apelles painted dame Venus verie deformed and euill faoured.
Gascoigne. To the Youth of England.

And as two the special bassawes of that proude souterly
Sowdan, may we well consider the worlde and the fleshe.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1296.

For else to wander up and downe awaited on
 And unregarded in my place and project,
 Is for a souters soule, not an old souldiers.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Mad Lover, Act ii. sc. 1.

Take soutage, or hair, that covers the kell.
Tusser. Husbandry. August.

Some close them up dry in a hogshedd or fat,
 Yet canvas or soutage is better than that.
Id. Ib.

SO'UTERRAINE. Fr. Souterrain, subter-rane.

Defences against extremities of heat, as shade, grottoes or souterrains, are necessary preservatives of health.
Arbuthnot.

SOW,

SOUTH, n. } A. S. Suth; Dut. Suyd;
SOUTH, adj. } Ger. Sud; Fr. Sud; It. Sud; So'UTHERN. } Sp. Sur. Wachter suggests So'UTHERLY, or } the Ger. Sieden, æstuary, fer-So'UTHERNLY. } vere; A. S. Seoth-an, to So'UTHLY. } seethe. This is adopted in So'UTHWARD. } the Dictionary of Menage; So'UTHING, n. } and Tooke considers south to be the past part. of the A. S. verb Seoth-an.

South, geographically,—the point at which the sun is seen by us at mid-day.

From south to north he ys long eigte hondred myle.
R. Gloucester, p. 1.

Hit was not longe ther aftur that this Picars ne come
 Out of Scotland southward, and townes faste nome.
Id. p. 113.

& cleymed him for ther chefe of west & of est,
 Of north and of south in length & in brede.
R. Brunne, p. 19.

And whanne the south blew thei gessiden hem to holde purpos.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 27.

When the south winde blew, they supposinge to obtayne their purpose lowsed vnto Asson.—Bible, 1551. Id.

And eke Nero gouerned all the peoples, that the violent wind Northus skorelith, and baketh the brennyng sandes by his drie heate, that is to saie, all the peoples in the south.
Chaucer. Boecius, b. ii.

But trusteth wel, I am a southerne man.
Id. The Persones Prologue, v. 17, 289.

And therefore vnderstande wel, than any two degrees that ben ylyke far from any of these two heades, trust wel that thilke two degrees ben lyke declination, be it south- ward or northward.—Id. Astrolabie.

He lyueth southly, for deth which he not drede,
 Hath hym hense tane, but yet he hoped sure.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 117.

And evidently it appeareth, that when she is northerly, and retired higher and farther from the earth, the tides are more gentle, than when shee is gone southerly: for then she worketh neerer hand, and putteth forth her full power.
Holland. Plinie, b. ii. c. 97.

It is the generall opinion of modern astronomers, that the sun in our time goeth not so farre southerly from vs in winter, as it did in the time of Ptolomy and Hipparchus, neither in summer commeth so much northerly towards vs as then.—Hakewill. Apologie, b. ii. c. 4. s. 4.

I will myself conduct thee on thy way,
 When next the southing sun inflames the day:
 When the dry herbage thirsts for dew in vain,
 And sheep, in shades, avoid the parching plain.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iv.

Here the warm planet ripens and sublimes,
 The well baked beauties of the southern climes.
Id. Don Sebastian, Act ii. sc. 2.

Not far from hence, if I observ'd aright
 The southing of the stars, and polar light,
 Sicilia lies; whose hospitable shores
 In safety we may reach with struggling oars.
Id. Virgil. Æneis, b. v.

SO'UVENANCE. Fr. Souvenir, souvenance;
 It. Souvenire, to remind or remember. Menage derives from sub-venire, to succour, to occur, to come into (sc.) the mind or memory.

They must provide for meanes of maintenaunce,
 And to continue their wont countenaunce;
 But shepheard must walke another way,
 Sike worldly souvenance he must for-say.
Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender. May.

Now somewhat sing, whose endlesse souvenance
 Among the shepherds swaines may aye remaine.
Id. Ib. November.

SOW. See SEW.

SOW, v. } Goth. Saian; A. S. Saw-an;
So'WER. } Ger. Saen; Dut. Saeyen; Sw.
So'WING, n. } Sao, serere, seminare. To sow, generally, is—

To set, to place, that which will grow, germinate, vegetate; that which will bear, propagate, or produce its like; any fruit; to spread or scatter.

Ne that bailif, ne forester, ne soffrede hom nower come,
 To sowe, ne to other thing, that hor bestes nere inome.
R. Gloucester, p. 499.

And he spak to hem many thingis in parabis and seide, lo he that sowith ghede out to sowe his seed.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 13.

And he spake many thinges to them in similitudes, saying: Beholde, the sower went forth to sowe.
Bible, 1551. Id.

SPA

And summe seiden what wole this sower of wordis seie?
Wiclif. Dedis, c. 17.

But Isis, as seith the cronike,
 Fro Greece in to Egypte cam,
 And she than vpon honde nam
 To teche hem for to sowe and ere, Whiche no man knewe tofore there.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

For he fonde of his owne wit
 The fyrst crafte of plough tillinge,
 Of earynge, and of corne sowynge,
 And how men shulde set vines,
 And of the grapes make wines.
Id. Ib.

This monster blithe with many a tale gan sow
 This rumor then into the common ears.
Surrey. Virgil. Æneis, b. iv.

O happy queene of faries, that hast fownd,
 Mongst many, one that with his prowess may Defend thine honour, and thy foes confownd!
 True loves are often sown, but seldom grow on grownd.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 9.

Well may overtinely and hastie sowing oftentimes faile, but late sowing shall ever misse and deceive the maister.
Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 20.

What makes a plenteous harvest, when to turn
 The fruitful soil, and when to sow the corn;
 The care of sheep, of oxen, and of kine;
 And how to raise on elms the teeming vine;
 The birth and genius of the frugal bee:
 I sing Mæcenas, and I sing to thee.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

An acre of potatoes is cultivated with less expense than an acre of wheat: the fallow, which generally precedes the sowing of wheat, more than compensating the hoeing and other extraordinary culture which is always given to potatoes.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 11.

SOWLE. To sowle one by the ears, (Lincolnshire)—to pull by the ears as dogs pull swine, (Grose.) The word is common in Nottingham, and other parts northerly, as well as in Suffolk, (See Moor's Suffolk Words.) I believe (says Skinner) from sow, to seize and pull by the ears as dogs do (sowen) swine. This Ray adopts.

He'el go he sayes, and sole the porter of Rome
 Gates by th' eares.—Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act iv. sc. 5.

SOY. See the quotation.

I have been told that soy is made partly with a fishy composition, and it seems most likely from the taste: tho' a gentleman of my acquaintance, who was very intimate with one that sailed often from Tonquin to Japan, from whence the true soy comes, told me, that it was made only with wheat, and a sort of beans mixt with water and salt.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

SPACE, n. } See EXPATiate. Fr. Espace, SPACE, v. } spacieux; It. Spazio; Sp. Es-
SPA'CEFUL. } pacio; Lat. Spatium; Æolic, SPA'CIOUS. } Σπαδιον, for σταδιον, απο της SPA'CIOUSLY. } σταγews, denoting the place or SPA'CIOUSNESS. } station for the spectators of SPA'TIATE, v. } athletic contests. Stadium was then applied generally—to any place; and hence, as we judge of size or magnitude from the place or room occupied, space was extended by usage to express—

Size, room, magnitude; a portion of, extent of place: it is also applied to time,—a portion of time; duration of time. See the quotation from Locke.

Spenser uses space as a verb.

About thei gan him chace, & hunted him als hayre,
 Long had he no space to duelle no wele fare.
R. Brunne, p. 210.

Grace God gaf him here, this lond to kepe long space.
Id. p. 213.

Vitailed was the ship, it is no drede,
 Habundantly for hire a ful long space.
Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 5226.

Howe can you be comfortlesse in anye tribulacyon, when Chryst and hys holye spirite, and with them theyr vnseparable father, (if you putte full truste and confidence in them) bee neuer neyther one finger breadth of space, nor one minute of time from you?

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1140.

So had his sword made him so spacious a room, that Amphialus had more cause to wonder at the finding, than labour for the seeking.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

But she, as fayeres are wont, in privie place
 Did spend her dayes, and lov'd in forests wyld to space.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 2.

Lo thus they rode, till at the last they spide
 Two armed knights that toward them did pace,
 And ech of them had ryding by his side
 A ladie, seeming in so farre a space;
 But ladies none they were.
Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 1.

SPA

By him I sweare (then whom none more in view)
 That what I now shall utter, is as true,
 As past belief. The ship in those profound
 And spacefull seas, so stuck as on dry ground.
Sandys. Ovid. Metam. b. iii.

But faire before the gate a spatious playne,
 Mantled with greene, itselife did spredden wyde.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 1.

Most spaciously we dwell, where we possess
 All sinless pleasures Nature did ordain;
 And who that all may have, yet will have less,
 Wiser than Nature, thinks her kindness vain.
Davenant. Gondibert, b. i. c. 6.

So I North-Riding am, for spaciousness renown'd,
 Our mother Yorkshire's eld'st, who worthily is crown'd
 The queen of all the shires, on this side Trent.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 28.

For astonishment, it is caused by the fixing of the minde upon one object of cogitation, whereby it doth not spatiate and transcur, as it useth.—Bacon. Naturall Hist. § 720.

This space consider'd barely in length between any two beings, without considering any thing else between them, is call'd distance; if consider'd in length, breadth and thickness, I think it may be call'd capacity. The term extension is usually apply'd to it in what manner soever consider'd.
Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 13.

From the upper part of the island to the town of Gulaguil, is almost a league, and near as much from one side of the river to the other. In that spacious place ships of the greatest burthen may ride afloat.
Dampier. Voyages, an. 1684.

Thus avarice and prodigality are at an immense distance;
 but there is a space marked out by virtue between them,
 where frugality and generosity reside together.
Bolingbroke. The Occasional Writer, No. 11.

Here Ouse, slow winding through a level plain
 Of spacious meads with cattle sprinkled o'er,
 Conducts the eye along his sinuous course
 Delighted.
Couper. Task, b. i.

SPADE. } A. S. Spadu, spada; Dut. Spade, SPA'DDLE. } spaye; Ger. Spate; Sw. Spada.
 Wachter,—from the Gr. Babus, others from σπᾶν, trahere. It appears to be merely the A. S. Spæt- an, to spit, i. e. to throw out, to throw up: a spade's depth thrown out in digging is still called a spit. (See SPIT.) A spade is,—

That which (a tool which) throws out, (sc.)
 earth, gravel, &c.

Spaddle, (i. e. spade-dæl)—the dim. of spade.
Spadille—the ace of spades; cards so called from the shape of the figure impressed.

Ech man to pleye w^t a plough. a pycosse othr a spade.
Piers Ploughman, p. 61.

His berd as any sowe or fox was rede,
 And therto brode, as though it were a spade.
Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 554.

They neither gaue vs meate to feede vpon,
 Nor drinke, nor powder, pickar, toole nor spade.
Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

Her dainty hands (not us'd to such a trade)
 She with a mattock toils, and with a weary spade.
Fletcher. The Purple Island, c. 9.

By th' shoulder of a ram from off the right side par'd
 Which usually they boil, the spade-bane being bar'd.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 5.

With his broad sabre next, a chief in years,
 The hoary majesty of spades appears,
 Puts forth one manly leg, to sight reveal'd,
 The rest, his many colour'd robe conceal'd.
Pope. Rape of the Lock, c. 3.

Others destroy moles with a spaddle, waiting in the mornings and evenings for them.—Mortimer. Husbandry.

Her happy lord is cucko'd by spadille:
 And if she's brought to bed, 'tis ten to one,
 He marks the forehead of her darling son.
Young. Love of Fame, Sat. 6.

So that a transverse section of it has somewhat the appearance of the mark upon cards called a spade, the whole being much wider in proportion to its length.
Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 18.

— And, where the peacock shews
 His azure eyes, is tinctur'd black and red
 With spots quadrangular of diamond form,
 Ensanguin'd hearts, clubs typical of strife,
 And spades, the emblem of untimely graves.
Couper. Task, b. iv.

SPADICEOUS. Low Lat. Spadiceus, from spadix, a branch torn from the palm tree (Gr.
Σπᾶν, trahere), and from the colour of the fruit:
 applied, generally, to—
 A light red; a bright bay colour.

SPA

Of these five [unicorns horn] which Scaliger beheld, though one spadiceous, or of a light red, and two inclining to red, yet was there not any of this complexion among them.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. ii. c. 23.

SPAGYRICK. } Fr. Spargirie, spargirique; SPAGYRICAL. } Low Lat. Spagirus, spagiri-
SPAGYRIST. } ricus; used, (says Vossius) for alchemista,—"Puto autem, spagiricos, dici a duobus artes officiis: quæ sunt resolvere composita, et resoluta componere. Nam σπάιν, trahere, extrahere; αγείν-ειν, congregare." A spagyrist is—

A chymist, or alchemist.

It was a huge diligence and care of the divine mercy, that discovered to man the secrets of spagyric medicines, of stones, of spirits.—Bp. Taylor, vol. ii. Ser. 26.

Those only know how to want, that have learnt to frame their mind to their estate; like to a skilful musitian, that can let down his strings a peg lower, when the tune requires it; or like to some cunning spagirick, that can intend or remit the heat of his furnace, according to occasion.

Bp. Hall. Of Contentation, § 4.

I have endeavoured to deliver matters of fact so faithfully, that I may as well assist the less skilful readers to examine the chymical hypothesis, as provoke the spagyric philosophers to illustrate it.—Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 463.

Most of those [philosophers and the chymists] (on the one hand) looking upon the *spagyrist*s as a company of mere irrational operators, whose experiments may indeed be serviceable to apothecaries, and perhaps to physicians, but are useless to a philosopher, that aims at curing no disease but that of ignorance; and most of the *spagyrist*s (on the other hand) looking upon the corpuscularians (if I may so call them) as a sort of empty and extravagant speculators, who pretend to explicate the great book of nature without having so much as looked upon the chiefest and difficultest part of it; namely, the phenomena, that their art has added to the former edition of this vast and obscure volume.

Id. Ib. vol. i. p. 358.

SPALL. Fr. Espaule; It. Spalla, a shoulder. See EPAULET.

Who, soone prepar'd to field, his sword forth drew,
 And him with equall vauw countervayld:
 Their mightie strokes their haberieons dismayld,
 And naked made each others manly spalles.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 6.

SPALT, adj. Spales, or spalls, are chips; and spalt, (Ger. Spalten), is split,—easily split, split, or severed, into small parts. See SPILT and SPILL.

Of all oke growing in England, the park oke is the softest, and far more spalt and brickle than the hedge oke.

Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 22.

SPAN, n. } Dut. Spanne, spannen; Ger. Span, v. } Spanne, spannen; Sw. Spann; Fr. SPANK, v. } Espan; It. Spànna; A.S. Span, SPA'NKER. } spannan, to measure by spans, i. e. by the hand extended from the thumb to the little finger, (Somner.) Also, he adds,—to stretch out, to knit or tie straight; whence our spanning of an house, as also of a cart wheel. Skinner suggests, doubtfully, the Ger. verb Spannen, tendere, extendere; and Tooke thinks a span is merely the past tense, and therefore the past part. of the A.S. Spin-an, to spin, to extend, or stretch out; to draw out.

To span, (formed upon the noun,) is to stretch or draw out, to extend, to expand; to measure—by extension, (sc.) of the hand; to mete or measure. A span is usually restricted to—

A short extent (of space or time).

Span-neve,—see SPICK and SPAN.

Spank, v., Spanker, n.,—common words in the north of England. To move with long spans or strides,—at a rapid pace.

This tale was aie span newe to begin,
 Til that the tale departed hem a twinne.

Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

My hande is the foundation of the earthe, and my right hande spanneth over the heuens.—Bible, 1551. Esaye, c. 48.

Who hath measured heauen with his spanne, and hath comprehended all the earth of the worlde in thre fyngers?

Id. Ib. c. 40.

Buck. My surueyor is false; the ore-great Cardinal Hath shew'd him gold; my life is *span*d already: I am the shadow of poore Buckingham.

Shakespeare. Hen. VIII. Act i. sc. 1.

Harry, whose tuneful and well measur'd song
 First taught our English music how to span
 Words with just note and accent, not to scan
 With Midas ears, committing short and long.

Milton, s. 13.

SPA

And if you would plant fig-sets or sions, they ought verily to be a span long, and then to be prickt into the ground.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 1.

There in the stocks of trees, white faies do dwell,
 And span-long elves that dance about a pool,
 With each a little changeling in their arms!

B. Jonson. Sad Shepherd, Act ii. sc. 2.

Am I not totally a span new gallant,
 Fit for the choicest eyes?

Beaum. & Fletch. The False One, Act iii. sc. 1.

Laza. Faith, you may intreat him to take notice of me for any thing; for being an excellent farrier, for playing well at span-counter or sticking knives in walls.

Id. The Woman Hater, Act i. sc. 3.

The officers all exceedingly well horsed, and every man, officer, and soldier having a pistol ready spann'd in one hand, that he resolv'd not to pursue that design.

Clarendon. Civil Wars, vol. iii. p. 248.

But still Avignon, and the pleasing coast
 That holds thee banish'd, claims my care the most:
 Oft on the well-known spot I fix my eyes,
 And span the distance that between us lies.

Tickell. An Epistle.

The mind having got the idea of the length of any part of expansion, let it be a span, or a space, or what length you will, can, as has been said, repeat that idea; and so, adding it to the former, enlarge its idea of length, and make it equal to two spans, or two paces, and so as often as it will, till it equals the distance of any parts of the earth one from another, and increase thus, till it amounts to the distance of the sun, or remotest star.

Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 15.

We are not told the year is coming—or the day is coming: but the hour is coming; which intimates to us, that we should accustom ourselves to measure our lives by the shortest span.—Gilpin, vol. i. Ser. 22.

SPANG, n. } A.S. Spange, ge-spong; Dut. SPA'NGLE, n. } Spanghe; Ger. Spange; Sw. SPA'NGLE, v. } Spann,—all explained to mean—fibula, a button (of metal). Dut. Spenghel, spanghe, emblema; and derived from span,—to stretch, to draw. But Tooke asserts spange to mean any thing shining, though he produces no authority; we certainly so use it.

Any thing shining, sparkling, glittering, (small bits of bright, shining, metal.)

Our bumbast hose, our treble double ruffles,
 Our sutes of silke, our comely garded capes,
 Our knit silke stockes, and Spanish lether shoes, (Yea veluet serues, oft times to trample in)
 Our plumes, our spangs, and al our quaint aray,
 Are pricking spurres, prouoking filthy pride.

Gascoigne. The Steele Glas.

The other knight was all in milk white, his attiring else all cut in stars, which made of cloth of silver, and silver spangles, each way seemed to cast many aspects.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

The colours, that shew best by candle-light, are; white, carnation, and a kinde of sea-water greene; and oes, or spangs as they are of no great cost, so they are of most glory.

Bacon. Ess. Of Masks & Triumphs.

A vesture—sprinkled here and there
 With glittering spangs that did like stars appear.

Spenser. Faerie Queene.

And when the golden glorious sun goes down,
 Would she put on her star-bestudded crown,
 And in her masking sute the spangled sky,
 Come forth to bride it in her revelry.

Drayton. King John to Matilda.

Ah! look if this be he, Almighty King,
 Before heav'n's spangled were with stars of gold,
 Ere world a center had it to uphold,
 Whom from eternity thou forth didst bring.

Drummond. On the Virgin Mary.

There they doe finde that godly aged sire,
 With snowy lockes adowne his shoulders shed;
 As hoary frost with spangles doth attire
 The mossy braunches of an oke halfe ded.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

And to the sun displays his plumes,
 Which, like the heaven's o'er-arching skies,
 Are spangled with a thousand eyes.

Gay. The Peacock, &c.

But his is a pleasure, that is not more great than unquiet, for it makes him querulous and unruly; and because he cannot by his struggling, and reaching forth his little hands, get possession of these shining spangles that look so finely, their fires produce waters in his eyes, and cries in his mouth, that are very little of kin to the musick the Platonists fancied in the spheres he looks at.

Boyle. Works, vol. ii. p. 443.

On the rude cliffs with frosty spangles gray,
 Weak as the twilight gleams the solar ray.

Mickle. Lusiad, b. iii.

SPANIEL, n. } It. Can di Spagna; Fr. Es- SPA'NIEL, v. } pagneul. See the quotation from Pennant.

SPA

A Spanish dog, or breed of dogs; very docile, and fond;—hence, spaniel is used for a fawning, obsequious person.

And if that she be foul, thou sayst, that she Coveteth every man that she may see;
 For as a spaniel, she wol on him lepe,
 Til she may finden som man hire to chepe.

Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 5177.

Then shall you see these slaves, aloof before that stood,
 And would have let him starve, like spaniels to him crouch,
 And with their glavering lips, his very feet to touch.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 28.

— All come to this?—The hearts
 That *spaniel*d me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, do discandy.

Shakespeare. Antony & Cleopatra, Act iv. sc. 10.

— Be not fond,
 To thinke that Cæsar beares such rebell blood
 That will be thaw'd from the true quality
 With that which melteth foolies, I meane sweet words,
 Low-crooked-curtsies, and base spaniel fawning.

Id. Julius Cæsar, Act iii. sc. 1.

During my stay at home, every body this cur chanced to meet, made so much of their landlord's spaniell, that they seemed to have added to oracles that proverb of Love me love my dog.—Boyle. Works, vol. ii. p. 384.

— The spaniel lover, like a sneaking fop,
 Lies at our feet: he's scarce worth taking up.

Dryden. Prol. to the Princess of Cleves.

The third division of the more generous dogs, comprehends those which were used in fowling; first, the Hispaniolus or Spaniel: from the name it may be supposed, that we were indebted to Spain for this breed.

Pennant. British Zoology. The Dog.

SPAR, n. } A.S. Sparran; Dut. Sparre; Ger. SPAR, v. } Sparr, sperren,—
 To stop, close or shut up, to make fast.
 A spar,—that which fastens; usually a bar, or beam.

Better were Roberd, in pes haf holden him stille,
 Than layn in prison sperd, & at his fomen wille.

R. Brunne, p. 91.

He tought it [my herte] so him for to obey
 That he it sparred with a key.—Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

And so befell, by aventure or cas,
 That thurgh a window thikke of many a barre
 Of yren gret, and square as any sparre,
 He cast his eyen upon Emelia.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1076.

And to Creseides house they gan wende,
 But lorde this sely Troilus was wo,
 Him thought his sorowful herte brast atwo,
 For when he saw her doores sparred all,
 Well nigh for sorow adoun he gan to fall.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. v.

The dore thereof oft tymes opened & spearred again.
Bale. English Notaries, pt. ii.

The gilt sparres, and the beames then threw they down,
 Of old fathers the proud and royal workes.

Surrey. Virgile. Eneis, b. ii.

And, if he chaunce come when I am abroade,
Sperre the yate first, for fear of fraude;
 Ne for all his worst, nor for his best,
 Open the dore at his request.

Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender. May.

When, chased home into his holdes,
 Theare sparred vp in gates,
 The valiant Thebane, all in vaine,
 A following fight awaites.

Warner. Albion's England, b. ii.

— Priam's six-gated city,
 Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilias, Chetas, Trojan,
 And Antenorides, with massy staples,
 And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr up the sons of Troy.

Shakespeare. Prol. to Troil. & Cres.

Mad. I've heard you have offer'd, sir, to lock up smoke,
 And calk your windows, spar up all your doors,
 Thinking to keep it a close prisoner with you,
 And wept when it went out, sir, at your chimney.

B. Jonson. The Staple of News, Act ii. sc. 1.

— But that which did the good,
 Was God's good inspiration, that gane
 A spirit beyond the spirit they vsde to haue:
 Who tooke the Oliue sparre, made keene before,
 And plung'd it in his eye.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. ix.

SPAR. } Skinner calls it the bark or coat of SPA'RRY. } rude metal or mineral; perhaps from sparran, to close or inclose, because the mineral is inclosed in it. See ante, To SPAR.

The clear spar, which in most of our lead mines in England is found next to the metalline veins, be at least semi-diaphanous, and be of so glassy a contexture, that it usually breaks into smooth and glossy superficies.

Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 538.

In which manner spar is usually found herein, and other minerals; or such as are of some observable figure; of which sort are the sparry striae, or icicles called stalactitæ.

Woodward.

Hence with th' ascending springs let me advance,
Thro' beds of magnets, minerals, and spar.

Smart. The Immensity of the Supreme Being.

SPARAGUS. } i.e. Asparagus, (qv.)
SPEARAGE. }

As touching sperages there is not an hearb in the garden, whereof there is so great care taken of them.

Holland. Plinie, b. xix. c. 8.

Next that, shall mountain sparagus be laid,
Pull'd by some plain, but cleanly country-maid.

Congreve. Juvenal, Sat. 11.

SPAR/BLED. See DISPERBLYD.

Wherefore the people of that cōtre sette vpon theym, and slewe theyr captayne and the more parte of theyr company, where thorough that symple feleshyp whiche named theym self shepherdes, was disseueryd and sparbelyd.

Fabyan. Chronycle. Lodouici IX. an. 1254.

But after longe fyght, the vycctory fell vnto the erle of Salesbury, and the other lordys vpon his partye, and the kynges hoost was sparbled and chasyd, and many of his noble men slayne.—Id. Ib. an. 1461.

SPARE, v. } A. S. Sparian; Dut. Spaer- SPARE, adj. } ren; Ger. Sparen; Sw.
SPARE, n. } Spara; Ihre and Skinner—SPA'REFULNESS. } from parcere; Wachter prefers SPA'RELY. } Waren, to guard. It is prob-SPA'RENESS. } ably a consequential appli-SPA'RING, n. } cation of spar-an, to shut up,
SPA'RINGLY. } to keep fast or safe.
SPA'RINGNESS. } To preserve, to reserve; to SPA'RY. } keep or withhold from, or from SPA'RER. } the use; to forbear; to abstain; to give, use, employ reservedly, abstinently; with parsimony, frugality, moderately, temperately, gently, leniently, kindly; to forbear or abstain, from punishment; to forbear; to punish, hurt, or injure; or from the severity of punishment; to forgive.

Spare, adj.—abstinent, scanty, lean, poor.

Spare time, &c.—time to spare; i.e. to withhold or withdraw from one purpose, and bestow upon another.

Sparye he wolde myld men, and harde chasty the proute.
R. Gloucester, p. 428.

Wat myd fure, wat myd suerd, hii destrude al that hii founde.
Hii ne sparde prest, ne chyrche, that hii ne brogte to grounde.
Id. p. 226.

For lefe ne for lothe, folc wild thei not spar.
R. Brunne, p. 220.

Thyng that al the worlde wot. wherefore sholdest thou spar
To rehercen hit by retoryk.—Piers Plouhman, p. 203.

Spiritus justicie. spareth nat to spille
Hem that beoth gulty.
Id. p. 381.

For if God sparide not the kyndeli braunchis, lest per-auenture he spar not thee.—Wiclif. Romaynes, c. 10.

Yt God spared not the naturall braunches, lest happlye he also spar not thee.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

"Pees, with mischance and with misaventure,"
Our hoste saide, "and let him tell his tale.
Now letteth forth, and let the Sompnour gale,
Ne spareth not, min owen maister dere."
Chaucer. The Freres Tale, v. 6916.

"Of this love heare what I saie:
The riche men are loved aie
And namely tho that sparand beene,
That woll not wash hir herthes cleene
Of the filth, nor of the vice
Of greedy brenning auarice."
Id. Rom. of the Rose.

For who that lawe hath vpon honde,
And spareth for to do iustice
For mercy: doth not his office,
That he is mercy so bewareth:
Whan for one shrewe, whiche he spareth,
A thousand good men he greueth.—Gower. Con. A. b. iii.

Largess his hands could never skill of sparfulness.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

O spar thy happy daies, and them apply
To better boot, but let me die that ought.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 11.

After whiche requeste thus to the mayre and to the cytezyns made, after aduyce & counceyll amonge them selfe takyn, desyred a sparynge of ye lordys till they myght speke wt the kyng, and knowe his pleasure in that behalfe; but fynallye no sparynge at that tyme myght be grauntyd.
Fabyan. Chronycle. Henry III. an. 1253.

—For life, I prize it
As I weigh griefe (which I would spar;) for honor,
'Tis a deriuatiue from me to mine,
And onely that I stand for.

Shakespeare. The Winter's Tale, Act iii. sc. 2.

—Or are they spar in diet,
Free from grosse passion, or of mirth, or anger.
Id. Henry V. Act ii. sc. 1.

—She, [Nature] good cateress,
Means her provision only to the good,
That live according to her sober laws,
And holy dictate of spar temperance.—Milton. Comus.

There arose strong and great winds from the south, with a point east; which carried us up, (for all that we could do) towards the north: by which time our victuals failed us, though we had made good spar of them.

Bacon. New Atlantis.

From the time that they begin to dismarch, their motion increaseth by little & little more *spar*ely.

Holland. Plinie, b. ii. c. 16.

[There is some pain] of returning the gross habit of sin to a *spar*eness and slenderness of stature.

Hammond, vol. iv. Ser. 2.

For otherwise they [bees] are very thriftie and overgreat sparers, and such, as at other times will drive out those that wast prodigally and be gluttinous, no lesse than such as be idle luskies, and slow at worke.—Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 19.

And justly, what unjustly they abuse,
Shall unto them more *spar*ingly be lent.

Stirling. Domes-day. Second Houre.

Homer, being otherwise *spar*ie ynough in speaking of pictures and colours, yet commendeth the ships painted ther-with.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiii. c. 7.

Be mindful of those limbes in russet clad Whose toil to yours is warmth, and graceful pride;
And, oh! be mindful of that *spar*ing board,
Which covers yours with luxury profuse,
Makes your glass sparkle, and your sense rejoice!

Thomson. Autumn.

Since no man is infallible, let him use this licence very *spar*ingly: for if too many foreign words are poured in upon us, it looks as if they were designed, not to assist the natives, but to conquer them.

Dryden. Dedication to the Æneis.

This opinion, I say, Mr. Hobbes mentions as possible:
But he does it with such hesitancy, diffidence and spar- iness, as shows plainly that he meant it only as a last subterfuge to recur to.—Clarke. On the Attributes, Prop. 10.

Irony is the keenest weapon of the orator. The moralists, those luminaries of the Gentile world, have made it the vehicle of their gravest lessons; and Christ, our Great Teacher, upon just occasions was not sparing in the use of it.—Bp. Horsley, vol. iii. Ser. 31.

And taught at schools much mythologic stuff
But sound religion *spar*ingly enough.

Cowper. Tirocinium.

SPARK, v. } A. S. Sparc, spear; Dut.
SPARK, n. } Sparcke, sparckelen, spar- SPA'RKISH. } gere, dispergere; to scatter, SPA'RKFUL. } to disperse. See SPEAK.
SPA'RKLE, v. } To scatter, to spread, to SPA'RKLE, n. } throw about; to throw out, SPA'RKLER. } to shoot out, to eject or SPA'RKLET. } emit, to disperse, (sc.)
SPA'RKLINESS. } small particles of light; any SPA'RKLINGLY. } bright particles, as of wine, SPA'RKLINGNESS. } &c. Hence, to glitter, to shine—brightly, brilliantly; in bright or brilliant lustre, (met.) with animation or vivacity.

Sparkle (spark-dæl), —the dim. of spark. See the quotations from Leland, Fabyan, and Beaum.
& Fletch.

A spark, (met.)—a glittering, showy, person.

As fire is wont to quicken and go
From a sparkle sprongen amis,
Till a citie brent vp is.

Chaucer. The Complaint of Mars & Venus.

A mantelet upon his shouldres hanging
Bret-ful of rubies red, as fire sparkling.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2231.

—Like the spark fired
Up in thy rooffe, whiche for a throwe
Lieth hid, til whan the windes blowe
It blaseth out on euery side.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

The liuely sparkes, that issue from those eyes,
Against the which there valletth no defence,
Have perst my hart, and done it none offence,
With quaking pleasure, more than once or twice.

Wyatt. The Louer describeth the Sight of his Loue.

1783

The Danes had preparid a navy to come to rob in England; but it was sparkelid, and greater ship of them taken by the English men.

Leland, vol. ii. Owe of a Booke of Chroniques, &c.

Serie, yoman of the robys to King Richard, sparkelid rumors, as he cam owte of Scotland, that King Richard was yet alyve. But at the last he was hangid at London.

Id. Ib.

The whiche [this Hengiste and all the other Saxons whiche ruled the vii. pryncipates of Brytayne, as after shall be shewed] when he had thus rule of the foresayd iii. pro-uynces, he sent for moo Saxons, and gaderid that were sparkled abrode; so that in thysse prouynces the faythe of Criste was all quenched and in slepe.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 91.

The philosophers to whome God had enspired certaine sparkles of truthe, knowledged that the cheefest poynte of wisdom and direction of a mannes lyfe, was to know hymselfe.—Fryth. Workes, p. 83.

Fayre is my love, when her fayre golden haire
With the loose wynd ye waving chance to marke;
Fayre, when the rose in her red cheekes appeares;
Or in her eyes the fyre of love does spark.

Spenser, son. 81.

Delight upon her face, and sweetnesse shin'd:
Her eyes do spark as starres, as starres do move.

P. Fletcher. Thomalin, Egl. 6. s. 19.

Who, thereat wondrous wroth, the sleeping spark
Of native vertue gan eftsoones revive.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 2.

Hitherto will our sparkesfull youth laugh at their great grandfather's English, who had more care to do wel, than to speake minion-like.—Camden. Remaines. Languages.

Whom when the prince, to batteill new address
And threatning high his dreadfull stroke, did see,
His sparkling blade about his head he blest,
And smote off quite his left leg by the knee,
That downe he tumbled.—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 8.

—What's become, Post,
Of my lieutenant?

Post. Beaten and't please your grace,
And all his forces sparkled.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Loyal Subject, Act i. sc. 5.

The sparkles seem'd vp to the skies to flie,
The horses ney, and clattring armours sowne,
Pursue the echo ouer dale and downe.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. i. s. 73.

I most humbly confess, that though my fortunes are poor, and my studies private, yet I cannot deny certain sparkles of honest ambition, remaining in me, whereby I desire the world should know, that my most vertuous, and most dear and royal master hath not utterly forgotten me.

Wotton. Letter to the King, an. 1637.

Spread o'er the earth thy sable veil,
Heaven's twinkling sparkles to conceal,
That darkness seems to day t' improve.

Cotton. The Night.

Desire of power, on earth a vicious weed,
Yet sprung from high, is of celestial seed:
In God 'tis glory; and when men aspire,
'Tis but a spark too much of heavenly fire.

Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel.

The florid fustian of a rhyming spark,
Whose random arrow ne'er comes near the mark,
Can't on her judgment be impos'd, and pass
For standard gold, when 'tis but gilded brass.

Pomfret. Strephon's Love for Delia justified.

A daw, to be sparkish, trick'd himself up with all the gay feathers he could muster.—L'Estrange.

Vouchsafe, illustrious Ormond, to behold
What power the charms of beauty had of old;
Nor wonder if such deeds of arms were done,
Inspir'd by two fair eyes, that sparkled like your own.

Dryden. To the Duchess of Ormond.

My thoughtless youth was wing'd with vain desires;
My manhood, long misled by wand'ring fires,
Follow'd false lights, and when their glims was gone,
My pride struck out new sparkles of her own.

Id. The Hind and the Panther.

The weighty shock his neck and shoulders feel;
His eyes flash sparkles, his stunn'd senses reel
In giddy darkness.—Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xvi.

But what wou'd you say, should you see the sparkler shaking her elbow for a whole night together, and thumping the table with a dice-box.—Guardian, No. 120.

Sir John [Suckling] threw his repartees about the table with much sparkliness and gentleness of wit to the admiration of them all.—Aubrey. Anecdotes, vol. ii. p. 551.

She affirmed to me, that she had divers times observed the like alterations in some diamonds of hers, which sometimes would look more sparklingly than they were wont, and sometimes far more dull than ordinary.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 452.

SPA

I have I know not how often, seemed to myself to observe a manifestly greater clearness and sparklingness at some times than at others.—Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 452.

Sir John [Suckling] threw his repartees about the table with much sparkliness, and gentleness of wit, to the admiration of them all.—Aubrey. Anecdotes, b. ii. p. 551.

For why should I the gallant spark command,
With clean white gloves to fit his ready hand?
Or in his fob enlivening spirits wear,
And pungent salts to raise the fainting fair?

Jenyns. The Art of Dancing, c. 1.

But their eyes, especially those of the women, are full of expression, sometimes sparkling with fire, and sometimes melting with softness.—Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 17.

SPARROW. Goth. Sparwa; A. S. Spearwa; Dut. Sparre; Ger. Spier; Sw. Sparf. In Fr. Esparvier; It. Sparviere; Low Lat. Sparvarius, is a spar-hawk, or sparrow-hawk. The Lat. (Vossius, de Vit. lib. ii.) derives from the Ger. Spariver, and this so called, as of Spar-var; that is, spreading its wings far,—procul spargens pennos. Sparrow, anciently written Sparwe, A. S. Spearwa, may be from the A. S. Spyr-ian, to search after, from the active disposition of the bird.

Whethir two sparrowis [A. S. twegen spearwan] ben not sold for an halpeny? and oon of hem schal not falle on the erthe withoute your fadir?—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 10.

Are not two sparrowes, solde for a farthyng? And none of them doth lyght on the ground, withoute your father.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

This frere ariseth up full curtisly,
And hire embraceth in his armes narwe,
And kisseth hire swete, and chirketh as a sparwe.
Chaucer. The Somnours Tale, v. 7384.

This haue I heard oft in saying,
That man may for no daunting
Make a sperhauke of a bosarde.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

The cocke sparrow (by report) liveth but one yeare: the reason why men so thinke, is, because in the spring, there is not one of them found with a blacke bill, and yet in summer before, it began to be blacke.—Holland. Plinie, b. x. c. 36.

Use exercise and keep a sparrow-hawk, you can shoot in a tiller.—Beaum. & Fletch. Philaster, Act ii. sc. 1.

Sparrows are proverbially salacious; they breed early in the spring, make their nests under the eaves of houses, in holes of walls, and very often in the nests of the martin, after expelling the owner.

Pennant. British Zoology. The Sparrow Finch.

SPARSE, v. } Fr. Espars; Lat. Sparsus, SPARSELY. } past part. of spargere, which SPARGEFACTIO. } Vossius derives from the Gr.
Εσπαρον, (with g inserted) σπειρ-ειν, to sow. It has probably the same Gothic origin as the English Spark, sparkle, (qv.) and to speak.

To scatter, to spread.

And I am assured, that the rumoure of this thing beeyng sparsed, (as it is) throughout all Jeurye, is heard among you also, howe that Jesus walked ouer all partes of Jewery, exhorting all men to repentance, bearing witness that the kyngdome of God is euen at hand.—Udal. Actes, c. 10.

He, making speedy way through spersed ayre,
And through the world of waters wide and deepe,
To Morpheus house doth hastily repaire.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

And like a raging flood they sparsed are,
And ouerflow each countrey, field and plaine.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. vi. s. 1.

There are doubtless many such soils sparsedly throughout this nation.—Evelyn. Pomona, Pref.

The operation was performed by spargefaction in a proper time of the moon.—Swift. Tale of a Tub, § 4.

SPASM. } Fr. Spasme, spasmatique; SPASMATICK. } It. Spasmo; Lat. Spasmus;
SPASMATICAL. } Gr. Σπασμος, nervorum contractio, from σπᾶν, trahere, contrahere, to draw together.

A contraction or drawing together; a convulsion, a convulsive contraction.

It cureth those who have their necks drawne backward to their shoulders with the spasme.

Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 5.

Being taken with salt and oile, it [roast garlick] is a soveraigne remedie for them that bee bursten or spasmatike, that is to say, vexed with the crampe.—Id. Ib. c. 6.

SPA

For my part, the ligaments and sinews of my love to you have been so strong, that they were never yet subject to such spasmatike shrinkings and convulsions.

Howell. Letters, b. ii. Let. 20.

Now in the guise of horrid spasms, they [worms] writhe
The tortur'd body, and all sense o'erpower.

Grainger. The Sugar-Cane, b. iv.

SPATIATE. See SPACE.

SPATTER, or } Formed upon spat or spate, SPUTTER, v. } the past tense of spit, to SPATTERDASH. } throw out.

To throw out; to throw out upon, (sc.) any dirt or filth; to besprinkle, to asperse.

Spatter-dash,—against which dirt thrown up in walking dashes, or strikes.

The noise he made, being a man of no few words, joined to the yelping sound of Miso, and his unpleasant inheretrix, brought together some number of the shepherds, to whom he without any regard of reserving it for the king's knowledge, spattered out the bottom of his stomach, swearing by him that he never knew that Zelmane, whom they had taken all to be a woman, was as arrant a man as himself was.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iv.

Sir Edw. told him, he fear'd that fort would be the cause of the loss of the town: the Grave spatter'd and shook his head, saying, 'twas the greatest error he had committed since he knew what belong'd to a soldier.

Howell, b. i. Let. 15.

— They fondly thinking to allay
Thir appetite with gust, instead of fruit
Chew'd bitter ashes, which th' offended taste
With spattering noise rejected.—Milton. Par. Lost, b. x.

Where famish'd dogs, late guardians of my door,
Shall lick their mangled master's spatter'd gore.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xxii.

He comes, the herald of a noisy world,
With spatter'd boots, strapp'd waist, and frozen locks;
News from all nations lumb'ring at his back.

Cowper. Task, b. iv.

Why now, here's a fellow made for a soldier: there's a leg for a spatterdash, with an eye like the king of Prussia.

Sheridan. The Camp, Act i. sc. 2.

SPATTLE. See SPIT.

SPATULA. Fr. Spatule; It. Spàtola; Sp. Espatula; Lat. Spathula, spatha; Gr. Σπαθῆ, from σπᾶν, trahere, to draw, (to draw off, to skim.) Now applied to—

An instrument with which surgeons or others draw out or spread out—salves, ointments, &c.

Some used to put thereunto, [the juice of mulberries,] myrrhe and cypresse, setting all to frie and take their fermentation in the sun, untill it grew to hardnesse in the foresaid vessell, stirring it thrice a day with a spatule.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxiii. c. 17.

SPAVIN, n. } Fr. Espavent, (éparvin;) It.
SPAVIN, v. } Spavènio, spavènto. Skinner thinks from the Lat. Spasmus. See SPASM.

Troubled with the lampasse, infected with the fashions,
full of windegalls, sped with the spavins.

Shakespeare. Taming of the Shrew, Act iii. sc. 2.

So when a jockey brings a mare,
Or horse, or gelding, to a fair,
Though she be spavin'd, old, and blind,
With founder'd feet, and broken wind.

Somerville. The Bald Batchelor.

For oft an eager chapman is betray'd
To buy a founder'd or a spavin'd jade,
While he admires a thin, light-shoulder'd chest,
A little head, broad back, and rising crest.

Francis. Horace, b. i. Sat. 2.

SPAW. A mineral water, so called from Spa, in Germany.

The first discovery of this water [Tunbridge water] (though variously reported) is believed from a footman to a Dutch lord, who passed this way, and, drinking thereof, found it in taste very like to that at the spaw in Germany.

Fuller. Worthies. Kent.

He is past cure of physick, spaw, or any diet.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Scornful Lady, Act iii. sc. 1.

SPAWL, v. } From the Dut. Speemven;
SPAWL, n. } Ger. Speyen, spuere, (Skinner); SPAWLING, n. } or from A. S. Spætljan, dim. of spæt-an, to spit. Where Dryden uses spawl, Beaumont has spittle. See SPIT.

To throw out (sc. the moisture of the mouth.)

How do the muses suffer every where?
Taken in such mouths, sensur'd in such eares;
That 'twixt a wiffe, a line or two rehearse,
And with their rheume together, spawle a verse.

F. Beaumont. Elegy upon Mr. Francis Beaumont.

1784

SPE

Let him such words and th' art of lust enjoy,
Whose pavement of round Spartan marbles grows
Slipp'ry with drunken spaulings.

Holyday. Juvenal, Sat. 11.

The new-born infant from the cradle takes
And first of spittle she lustration makes;
Then in the spawl her middle finger dips,
Anoints the temples, forehead and the lips.

Dryden. Persius, Sat. 2.

Let him who does on iv'ry tables dine
Whose marble floors, with drunken spawlings shine;
Let him lascivious songs and dances have.

Congreve. Juvenal, Sat. 11.

SPAWN, v. } The eggs (says Skinner) o.
SPAWN, n. } fishes: from the Dut. Spene, suc-SPA'WNER. } cus, lac muliebre. A. S. Spana, the teats or speanes of females, especially a cow, (Somner.) To spaw a child, (says Ray, sc.) to wean it; that is, keep it from the spean or breast.
Spawn is perhaps from A. S. Spiwan; Dut.
Speuwen; Ger. Speyen.

To throw forth, to eject.

Spean,—that which ejects or emits, (sc.) milk, nourishment.

Spawn,—that which is thrown forth, ejected or emitted. Applied (met.) contemptuously, re-vilingly.

All this was before the invention of printing, when books came but single into the publike, which, since that mistery is made common, come swimming into the world like shoals of fishes, and one edition spawneth another.

Fuller. Worthies General, c. 10.

And 'twas the plague of countries and of cities,
When that great belli'd house did spawn committees.

Brome. Speech to General Monk.

I think about that time [April] he spawns, and, as I have formerly told you, with the help of the melter, hides his spawn or eggs in holes, which they, both, dig in the gravel.

Walton. Angler, pt. i. c. 14.

The barbel, for the preservation of their seed, both the spawner and the melter, cover their spawn with sand.

Id. Ib.

Whose corage when the feend perceiv'd to shrinke,
She poured forth out of her heilish sinke
Her fruitfull cursed spawne of serpents small,
Deformed monsters, fowle, and black as inke.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

Barefoot may no neighbour wade
In thy cool streams, wife nor maid,
When the spawns on stones do lye
To wash their hemp, and spoil the fry.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Faithful Shepherdess, Act iii.

Fran. The night, and all the evil the night covers,
The goblins, hags, and the black spawn of darkness,
Cannot fright me. Id. The Night Walker, Act iii.

Virtue breedeth satisfaction and joy, vice spawneth displeasure and anguish of conscience.—Barrow, vol. ii. Ser. 8.

The naughtiness of infidelity will appear by considering its effects and consequences, which are plainly a spawn of all vices and villanies, a deluge of all mischiefs and outrages upon the earth.—Waterland. Works, vol. vi. p. 282.

So when the Jewish leader stretch'd his arm,
And wav'd his rod divine, a race obscene,
Spawn'd in the muddy beds of Nile, came forth,
Polluting Egypt.

Cowper. Task, b. ii.

Great quantities of the brown scum continued to appear upon the water, and the sailors having given up the notion of its being spawn, found a new name for it, and called it sea-saw-dust.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 7.

SPAY, v. } Castrare feminam (says Skinner), SPAY, n. } from the Lat. Spado; Gr. Σπαδων, from σπᾶν, trahere, extrahere, to extract or draw out. See TO SPLAY, and the quotation from Holland's Plinie.

In examining the condition of our red deere, I find that the young male is called in the first yeere a calfe, in the second a broket, the third a spacie, the fourth a stagon or stag, the fift a great stag, the sixt an hart, and so fourth vnto his death.—Holinshed. Desc. of England, b. iii. c. 4.

When sows and bitches may be spay'd,
And in what sign best cyder's made.—Hudibras, pt. ii. c. 3.

SPEAK, v. } A. S. Spæcan, and also,
SPEA'KER. } spæc-an; Dut. Sprek-en;
SPEA'KABLE. } Ger. Sprecken; Sw. Språka, SPEA'KING, n. } fare, dicere. Some ety-SPEECH. } mologists have supposed from brechen, rumpere, to SPE'CHLESS. } break or burst forth: it has, SPE'CHLESSNESS. } perhaps, the same origin as SPE'CHMAN. } the A. S. Spærc, speare, SPO'KESMAN. } a spark; Dut. Sparch-elen, to throw forth, and thus—

To utter (sc.) sounds; to utter, to enounce, or pronounce articulate sounds,—the tongue or language.

To talk, to discourse, to converse; to address in words or language, to accost; to announce, to make known, to declare, to proclaim, to pronounce.

First lord he [Bruyt] was in Engolond, of wham mē spekethe get. R. Gloucester, p. 11.

Now ne kouthe the Britones non Englisch y wys, Ac the Saxones speche it was, & thorw hem ycome y^t ys. Id. p. 125.

Now of Steuen to speke turne we eft ageyn, Our tale wille we no breke, bot telle forth the certeyn. R. Brunne, p. 111.

S. Dunstan tille him spak wrothfulle wordes.—Id. p. 37.

No non so faire of face, of speech so lufly.—Id. p. 30.

And when ich flee fro the body, and [in] feye leve the caroygne Them am ich a spirit specheles.—Piers Plouhman, p. 274.

And anon his mouth was openyd and his tunge, and he spak and blesside God.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 1.

And his mouthe was opened immediatly, and his tonge also, & he spake lawdyng God.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

But in priyng nyle ye speke myche, as hethene men don for thei gessen that thei ben herd in her myche speche. Wiclif. Matthew, c. 6.

But Jhesus seith to hem, if God were youre fadir, fortheli ye schulen loue me: for I passide forth of God, and cam; for neither I cam of my silf, but he sente me. Whi knowen ye not my speche? for ye moun not here my word. Id. Jon, c. 8.

Jesus sayde vnto them, yf God were youre fader, then woulde ye loue me. For I proceded forth, and come from God. Neyther came I of my selfe for he sente me. Why do ye not knowe my speche? Euen because ye can not abyde the hearynge of my wordes.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And whanne thei take you and leede you forth nyle ye bfore thinke what ye schulen speke, but speke ye that thing that schal be gyuen to you in that our, for ye ben not the spekeris but the holy goost.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 13.

Or what profyt of circumcisioun? mych bi al wise, first for the spekyngis of God weren bitaken to hem, and what yf summe of hem bileuyden not?—Id. Romaynes, c. 3.

"Lordinges," (quod she) "now herkeneth for the beste; But take it nat, I pray you, in disdain; This is the point, to speke it plat and plain, That eche of ye to shorten with youre way, In this viage, shal tellen tales tway." Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 790.

O goode God! how gentil and how kind Ye semed by your speche and your visage, To day that maked was oure marriage. Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8665.

And shortly, whan the sonne was gone to reste, So hadde I spoken with hem everich on That I was of hir felawship anon. Id. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 30.

Some menne there been, that no goodnesse spreken; [Ed. 1598, spoken] and wher euer your words been heard & your reasons been shewed soche euill speakers ladie, by auctorite of your excellence shallen been stopped and ashamed.—Id. Testament of Loue, b. ii.

Als for to speake of time ago The cause why it changeth so It nedeth nought to specifie, The thyng so open is at the eie That euery man it maie beholde.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

— And whan thei comen were, And sette at supper there, Amonge her other wordes glade Arrous a great spekyng made, Who had tho the best wife Of Rome, and thus began a strife. Id. Ib. b. vii.

— For certes sir, I trowe in all this worlde to seche Nis woman, than in dede and speche Woll bettir aise hir, what she dooth, Ne better, for to saie a soothe, Kepe hir honour at all tide. Id. Ib. b. ii.

And that was at midnight tide, The worlde was stille on euery side, With open head, and foote all bare, Hir heare to sprad, she gan to fare, Upon hir clothes gyrt she was, Al specheles vpon the gras She glode forth, as an adder doth, None other wise she ne goth. Id. Ib. b. v.

And then they are willed to choose an able and discreete man, to be as it were the mouth of them all, and to speake for & in the name of them, and to present him so chosen by them to the prince.—Smith. Commonwealth, b. ii. c. 3.

The speaker is he that dooth commend and preferre the bills exhibited into the parlement, and is the mouth of the parlement.—Smith. Commonwealth, b. ii. c. 3.

The speaker hath no voyce in the house, nor they will not suffer him to speake in anie bill to mooue or dissuade it. Id. Ib.

The other losinge his moneye, and heapinge othes upon othes one in anothers necke, most horrible, and not speakeable, was rebuked of an honest man which stode by for so doinge.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. i.

Lette all bytternes, fearsnes and wraethe, rorynge and cursed speakyng, be put awaye from you, with all maliciousnes.—Bible, 1551. Ephes. c. 4.

And [frere Barns] meaneth not to speake of them, onely whyle they lye a dying spechelesse, and geuyng vp the ghost. Sir T. More. Workes, p. 803.

Jam. This soul I speake of, Or rather salt to keep this heap of flesh From being a walking stench, like a large inn, Stands open for the entertainment of All impiety practices; but there's no corner An honest thought can take up. Beaum. & Fletcher. The Spanish Curate, Act v. sc. 1.

— I dare tell you, To your new cerus'd face, what I have spoken Freely behind your back, what I think of you, You are the proudest thing, and have the least Reason to be so that I ever read of.—Id. Ib.

— I, here thou spak'st, Knew it not good for man to be alone, And no such company as then thou saw'st Intended thee, for tryal onely brought, To see how thou couldst judg d of fit and meet. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. v.

Redouble then this miracle, and say How camst thou speakeable of mute, and how To me so friendly grown above the rest Of brutal kind, that daily are in sight?—Id. Ib. b. ix.

Upon his hasty knock the door was opened, and he commanding his attendants to stay without, himself entred into the House; at which the speaker rose out of his chair, and stood below, and the king stept up, and looked round about the House, to see if the five members, or any of them were there.—Whitelock. Memor. Charles I. p. 52.

It is not at all harsh, in the reading of Moses, to understand the *speaking*s of God according as the circumstances of the matter naturally apply. H. More. Defence of the Philosophic Cabbala, c. 3.

The last [Meneves] and most notable instance of those that entituled their laws divine, and made themselves spokesmen betwixt God and the people. Id. Defence of the Literal Cabbala, Introd.

Here is speech that Scultetus is to make the next Latin sermon; but when we know not. Hales. Remains. Mr. Hales to Sir D. Carlton, Nov. 1618.

Ne in her speech, ne in her haviour, Was lightnesse seene or looser vanitie, But gracious womanhood, and gravitie, Above the reason of her youthly yeares. Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 2.

From his slack hand the garland wreath'd for Eve Down drop'd, and all the faded roses shed: Speechless he stood and pale, till thus at length First to himself he inward silence broke. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ix.

Catching and grasping hard, gnashing with the teeth, speaking hollow, trembling of the neather lip, paleness of the face, the memory confused, speechesnesse, cold sweats. Bacon. Hist. of Life & Death.

The Muscouits doo write vnto S. Nicholas to be a speechman for him that is buried, in whose hand they bind a letter, and send him with a new paire of shooes on his feet into the graue.—Holinshed. Description of Britaine, c. 9.

— Laertes son Look'd down awhile, and paus'd e'er he begun; Then to th' expecting audience rais'd his look, And not without prepar'd attention spoke: Soft was his tone, and sober was his face; Action his words, and words his actions grace. Dryden. Ovid. Ajax & Ulysses.

Awhile your loud, untimely joy suspend, And let your rash, injurious clamours end: Unruly murmurs, or ill-tim'd applause, Wrong the best speaker, and the justest cause. Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xix.

It [discourse] wins and engages those, whom speechless or sententious gravity might not only displease, but prepossess against every thing good.—Secker, vol. i. Ser. 10.

These two ancient commentators have taken upon them to assert that St. Peter, upon this occasion, was but the spokesman of the company, and replied to our Lord's question, "Whom say ye that I am?" in the name of all. Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 13.

SPEAR, n. } A. S. Speare; Dut. Sparre, SPEAR, v. } sperre; Ger. Sper; Lat. Spa- SPEARER. } rus; Low Lat. Sparro, which SPEARING, n. } Festus calls—a javelin of a very SPE'ARY, adj. } small size, so named—quod spar- gatur. Servius describes it to be—telum rusticum in modo pedis recurvam. Roquefort has the Old Fr. Spare, a sort of dart. The A. S. Speare, Dut. Sparre, is a stake, sudes, and seems to be merely a spar, a stake or bar, first used to spar or shut up with, then formed into a weapon of defence or offence, and for that purpose sharpened at the point: sudes præacutæ.

To spear,—to pierce or strike with a spear, or lance.

Speares, i. e. spears-men, or men armed with spears.

Myd arwen & myd quareles so muche folk first me slow, And seththe with speres smyton a doun, that deol was ynow. R. Gloucester, p. 48.

But oon of the knyghtis openyde his side with a sperre, and anon blood and watir wente out.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 19.

But one of the soudiers with a speare, thruste him into the syde, and forthe with came there out bloude and water. Bible, 1551. Ib.

And he seide to hem, make ghe redi twei hundride knyghtis that thei go to Cesarie, and horse men seuenti, and sperre men twei hundride fro the thridde our of the nyght. Wiclif. Dedis, c. 23.

And he called vnto him two vnder captaynes saying: make redy two hundred soudiers to go to Cesarea, and horsmen threscore and ten, and speare men two hundred, at the thyrd houre of the nyght.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And fell in speche of Telephus the king, And of Achilles for his queinte sperre, For he coude with it bothe hele and dere. Chaucer. The Squires Tale, v. 10,552.

For longe tyme it so befelle, That with his swerd, and with his sperre, He might not the serpent dere.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

Than he toke four C. speares of the most speciallest and surest men of war of all his company. Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 304.

His spear, to equal which the tallest pine Hewn on Norwegian hills, to be the mast Of some great ammiral, were but a wand, He walkt with to support uneasie steps. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

A pensioner,—a gentleman about his prince alwaie redie, with his speare; a spearer.—Baret. Alvearis.

But where the blue claie aboundeth (which hardlie drinketh vp the winters water in long season) there the grass is spearie, rough, and verie apt for brushes. Holinshed. Description of Britaine, c. 18.

The expert speare-men; euery myrmidon, (Led by the braue heire of the mightie sould Vnpeerd Achilles) safe of home got hold. Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. iii.

The principal of their offensive weapon in later ages was the spear, or pike, the body of which was composed of wood, in the heroic times most commonly of ash. Potter. Antiquities of Greece, b. iii. c. 4.

Our diversion was therefore changed to *spear*ing of salmon, which we saw pushing in great numbers through the surf into a small river.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. v. c. 5.

Lo, while the moon through midnight azure rides, From the high wall adown his spear-staff glides, The dauntless Gerald. Mickle. Lusiad, b. viii.

SPE/CIES. } Fr. Spécial, spécifier, spé-
SPE/CIAL, adj. } cieux; It. Spèce; Sp. Espe- SPE/CIAL, n. } cie; Lat. Species, from the SPE/CIALIZE, v. } old specere, videre, to see;
SPE/CIALTY, or } derived by Scaliger from SPECIA/LITY. } Specus, whence the ancient SPE/CIFY, v. } Latins viewed or observed
SPEC'FICK, adj. } the motions of their enemies, SPEC'FICK, n. } (De Caus. c. 86.) and Species
SPEC'FICAL. } (which Lucretius uses pro SPEC'FICALLY. } aspectu) is any thing seen; SPEC'FICATE, v. } and then applied to any SPECIFICA/TION. } particular class of objects SPE/CIMEN. } causing the same or similar SPE/CIOUS. } sensations to the sight. Spe- SPE/CIOUSLY. } cies is declared by Cicero to be equivalent to the Gr.

idea. See IDEA.

That which, any thing which, is seen or is the object of sight; any sensible form, appearance, representation, image.

A class, order, division or disposition of things causing the same or similar sensations to the sight; having or showing particular or discriminating qualities—the same; having or showing the same form, or appearance.

To specify,—to name the particular or distinct thing or things; to particularize, to discriminate, to distinguish; to denote or signify particularly, or distinctly.

Speciousness is not an uncommon word.

The king of Alimayne sende specialliche inou
To king Jon. R. Gloucester, p. 497.

Thei praied God specially, that he wild tham saue.
R. Brunne, p. 23.

Absteyne ghou fro al yuel spice.—Wiclif. 1 Thess. c. 5.

And therfore of his wise purveyance
He hath so wel beset his ordinance,
That spices of thynges and progressions
Shullen endure by successions,
And not eterne, withouten any lie.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 3013.

But natheles, let us now descende to the special. Ye shul first proceden after the doctrine of Tullius.
Id. The Tale of Melibeus.

Certes than is envie the werst sinne that is; for sothly all other sinnes be somtime only ayenst on special vertue: but certes envie is ayenst al maner vertues and alle goodnesse.
Id. The Persones Tale.

And so befell that on a day this frere
Had preched at a chirche in his manere,
And specially aboven every thing
Excited he the peple in his preching.
Id. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 7295.

Which is a thing of poets told,
Neuer yseine nother of yong nor old,
But as Bocchas list to specifie,
Cleare expounding this dark poesie.
Id. Destruction of the City of Thebes.

I woll not saie in generall
For there be some in speciall,
In whom that all vertue dwelleth.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

Als for to speake of time ago
The cause why it chageth so
It nedeth nought to specifie,
The thyng so open is at the eie
That euery man it male beholde.—Id. Ib.

Than he toke four C. speares of the moost speciallest and surest men of war of all his company.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 304.

The specialtees wherof do so ferforth in the first chapter of this boke appere, that we shall here nede no rehersall therof.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 105.

Than to bryng this storye to effecte, whereof, if I shuld declare ye specyalties thereof, wolde aske a longe tyme.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 161.

From forests, fields, from rivers, and from ponds,
All that have webs, or cloven-footed ones;
To the grand ark together friendly came,
Whose several species were too long to name.
Drayton. Noah's Flood.

Those pretty mirrors, like a crevice in a wall, though a narrow perspective, transmit the species of a vast excellency.
Bp. Taylor, vol. ii. Ser. 5.

— By which [bridge] the spirits perverse
With easie intercourse pass to and fro
To tempt or punish mortals, except whom God and good angels guard by special grace.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

Special Providence in relation to the acts themselves, are those special actings of the Divine power and will, whereby he acts either in things natural or moral, not according to the rules of general Providence, but above, or besides, or against them: and these I call the imperate acts of Divine Providence.—Hale. Origin. of Mankind, p. 36.

[Christ] the Physician and the Saviour, that hath promises of long life annexed to some specials of his service.
Hammond, vol. iv. Ser. 3.

And therefore Tranio, for the time I studie,
Vertue and that part of philosophie
Will I applie, that treats of happinesse,
By vertue specially to be atchieu'd.
Shakespeare. Taming of the Shrew, Act i. sc. 1.

The specialty of rule hath beene neglected.
Id. Troyl. & Cress. Act i. sc. 3.

Our Saviour specialising and nominating the places.
Sheldon. Mir. of Antichrist, (1616,) p. 261.

Matter being of one simple homogeneous nature, and not distinguishable by specificall differences, as the schools speak, it must have every where the very same essentiall properties.—More. Immortality of the Soul, b. i. c. 11.

But it is rather manifest that the essence of spirits is a substance specifically distinct from all corporeal matter whatsoever.—More. Antidote against Atheism, b. iii. c. 12.

And hence it is that the will of man by the instituted law of his creation, and the common influence of the divine goodness and power is enabled to act as a reasonable creature, to determine it self, and to govern its proper actions according to the law of his creation, without any particular, specificating, concurrent, new imperate act of the Divine special Providence to every particular determination of his will.—Hale. Origin. of Mankind, p. 40.

In the mean time, that scion alters the nature of that stock; and, while the root gives fatness to the stock, and the stock yields juice to the scion, the scion gives goodness to the plant, and a specification to the fruit.
Bp. Hall. Christ Mystical.

Were these three supposed to be perfectly co-equal, and to have no essentiall dependence one upon another, they could not by these Platonists be concluded to be any other than three co-ordinate gods, having only a general or specific identity; and so no more one, than three men are one man.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 590.

This said, warr's cause these priests no more debate;
They knew, warr's justice none could ere decide;
At that more specious name they open strait,
And sacred rites of fun'ral they provide.
Davenant. Gondibert, b. ii. c. 1.

That the species of things to us are nothing but the ranking them under distinct names, according to the complex ideas in us; and not according to precise, distinct, real essences in them, is plain from hence, that we find many of the individuals that are rank'd into one sort, call'd by one common name, and so receiv'd as being of one species, have yet qualities depending on their real constitutions, as far different one from another, as from others, from which they are accounted to differ specifically.
Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 6.

This general rule of justice is always at hand, and we carry it about us in our own breasts: for this is the peculiar advantage of this rule, that by it we may very easily discern all the specialities of our duty, without looking abroad, or having recourse to external instructions.
Scott. Christian Life, pt. iii. c. 9.

The περιχωρησις, and interior generation, are two specialities taught by the Catholics, and heavily complain'd of by your friend Dr. Whitby, as unscriptural definitions.
Waterland. Works, vol. i. p. 228.

What assistance I received from them, was made known in general to the public in the original proposals for this work, and the particulars are specified at the conclusion of it.—Pope. Homer. Odyssey, Postscript.

And to talk of specifick differences in nature, without reference to general ideas and names, is to talk unintelligibly.
Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 6.

He assured the lady that if she would drink a good de-coction of sarsa, with the specificks, usually prescribed in such cases, she might enjoy good health.
Wiseman. Surgery, b. i. c. 5.

In short, the specification of our worship, and the right direction of it, are nearly concerned in this doctrine.
Waterland. Works, vol. v. p. 27.

Though the divine nature abounds with innumerable virtues and perfections, yet 'tis impossible for us, by our own natural light, to discover any other of them than those of which he himself hath imprinted some specimens upon created beings.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 6.

Who truth from specious falsehood can divide,
Has all the gowmsmen's skill without their pride.
Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel.

To these considerations may be added, that we are commanded to walk decently, or speciously, which implies a regard to men's opinion.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 4.

I know what may be said speciously enough to persuade,
that such an increase of dominion would not have augmented, but would rather have weakened the power of France.—Bolingbroke. On History, Let. 8.

After he [Gainsborough] had invented a new species of dramatic painting, in which probably he will never be equalled, and had stored his mind with infinite materials to explain and illustrate the domestic and familiar scenes of common life, which were generally, and ought to have been always, the subject of his pencil: he very imprudently, or rather presumptuously, attempted the great historical style, for which his previous habits had by no means prepared him.—Reynolds, Dis. 14.

The non-payment of these is an injury, for which the proper remedy is by action of debt, to compel the performance of the contract and recover the specific sum due.
Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iii. c. 9.

Here, the intended punishment is explained specifically,
that is, with its circumstances.
Warburton. Divine Legation, b. iv. s. 6.

A specification of a few improvements will add but little to the sum of my transgressions.
Knox. On the University of Oxford.

We are thankful to the adversary that he hath invited us to meet him on such advantageous ground, by comparing what may justly be deemed the most indefinite of the scripture prophecies, with the best specimen of the power of accident for the completion of prophecy which his extensive reading could produce.—Bp. Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 17.

I propose next to describe, the specious or decent man.
By the decent man, I mean him, who governs all his actions by appearances.—Gilpin, vol. i. Ser. 5.

SPECK, n. } A. S. Specce, macula, labes, SPECK, v. } nota; a spot, a blot, a blemish, a SPECKLE, n. } mark; Dut. Spickelen, maculis SPECKLE, v. } distinguere, variegare; to distinguish, to diversify or variegate with spots.
Spot is that which is spit or thrown out, and speck
may have the same meaning. See SPEAK.

A small spot, (distinguished by colour from the surface it is upon.)

Speckle,—the dim. of speck.

Like him that wandering in the bushes thick,
Tredes on the adder with his rechesse foote,
Rered for wrath swelling her speckled neck,
Dismayd, geues back all sodenly for fere.
Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

But in these so little bodies, (nay prickes and specks rather than bodies indeed) how can one comprehend the reason, the power, and the inexplicable perfection that nature had therein shewed? How hath she bestowed all the five senses in a gnat?—Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 2.

— Oft stooping to support
Each flour of slender stalk, whose head though gay
Carnation, purple, azure, or spect with gold, Hung drooping unsustain'd.—Milton. Par. Lost, b. ix.

With vinegre alone, it [cumin] cureth the blacke spots and speckles appearing in any part of the bodie, if the place be bathed therewith.—Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 15.

For at his wonted time in that same place
An huge great serpent, all with speckles pide,
To drench himselfe in moorish slime did trace,
There from the boyling heate himselfe to hide.
Spenser. Virgil's Gnat.

Therewith enrag'd she loudly gan to bray,
And turning fierce her speckled taile advaunst,
Threatning her angrie sting, him to dismay.
Id. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

When I some antique jar behold,
Or white, or blue, or speck'd with gold;
Vessels so pure, and so refin'd,
Appear the types of woman-kind.—Gay. To a Lady, Ep. 13.

Here we struck ground with sixty-five fathom of line, the bottom consisting of grey sand, with black specks.
Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 7.

This probability is increased by the hills that bounded it toward the land, being covered with thick snow when those toward the sea, or where we lay, had not a speck remaining on them.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iv. c. 2.

The bushes toward the sea, were frequented by infinite numbers of a sort of moth, elegantly speckled with red, black, and white.—Id. Third Voyage, b. ii. c. 3.

SPE/CTACLE. } Fr. Spectacle, spectateur;
SPE/CTACLED. } It. Spettacolo, spettatore; SPECTA/CULAR. } Sp. Espectaculo, espectador; SPECTA/TOR. } Lat. Spectaculum; from SPECTATO/RIAL. } Species,—any thing seen.
SPECTA/TORSHIP. } Any thing that may be SPECTA/TRESS. } seen, or viewed, looked at, or beheld; a sight, a show; an exhibition to the sight.

Glasses to aid the sight are called spectacles.

For we ben maad a spectacle to the world and to aungelis and to men.—Wiclif. 1 Corynth. c. 4.

Povert a spectakel is, as thinketh me,
Thurgh which he may his very frendes see.
Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6786.

Such is a kynges power
To make within an hower
And worke such a miracle
That shalbe a spectacle
Of renowne and worldly fame.
Skelton. Why come ye not to Court?

And [he] thought no eyes of sufficient credit in such a matter, but his own, and therefore came himselfe to be actor and spectator.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Pitfull spectacle of deadly smart,
Beside a bubling fountaine low she lay,
Which shee increased with her bleeding hart
And the cleane waves with purple gore did ray.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 1.

Bru. All tongues speake of him, and the bleared sights
Are spectacled to see him.
Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act ii. sc. 1.

The whiles to me the treachour did remove
His craftie engin; and, as he had sayd,
Me leading, in a secret corner layd,
The sad spectatour of my tragedie.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 4.

It hath been said of old, that plays are feasts,
Poets the cooks, and the spectators guests;
The actors, waiters.

Carew. Of Mr. William Davenant's Play.

If thou stand'st not i' th' state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueller in suffering, behold now presently, and swoond for what's to come vpon thee.—Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act v. sc. 2.

The spectacular sports were concluded.

Hickes. Ser. 30 Jan. 1681-2.

Have ye no griefs at home to fix you there;
Am I the only object of despair?
Am I become my people's common-show,
Set up by Jove your spectacle of woe?

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xxiv.

Two powers divine the son of Atreus aid,
Imperial Juno, and the martial maid;
But high in heaven they sit, and gaze from far,
The tame spectators of his deeds of war.—Id. Id. b. iv.

I mean the fraternity of spectators who live in the world without having any thing to do in it; and either by the affluence of their fortunes, or laziness of their dispositions, have no other business with the rest of mankind but to look above them.—Spectator, No. 10.

But I must appeal to your spectatorial wisdom, who, I find, have passed very much of your time in the study of women, whether this is not a most unreasonable proceeding.
Id. No. 492.

I am afraid the most charitable will hardly think it possible for me to be a daily spectatress of his vices without tacitly allowing them, and at last consenting to them.

Idler, No. 42.

The paralytic, who can hold her cards,
But cannot play them, borrows a friend's hand,
To deal and shuffle, to divide and sort
Her mingled suits and sequences; and sits Spectatress both and spectacle, a sad
And silent cipher, while her proxy plays.

Cowper. Task, b. i.

SPE/CTRE. Fr. Spectre; It. Spéttro; Sp.
Espectro; Lat. Spectrum, from Specere, to see.
See SPECIES.

Any thing seen; a vision, an apparition; a fantasm, a ghost or spirit.

Thus pass'd the night so foul, till morning fair
Came forth with pilgrim steps in amice gray;
Who with her radiant finger still'd the roar
Of thunder, chas'd the clouds, and laid the winds,
And grisly spectres, which the fiend had rais'd
To tempt the Son of God with terrors dire.

Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

The ghosts of traitors from the bridge descend,
With bold fanatic spectres to rejoice:
About the fire into a dance they bend,
And sing their sabbath notes with feeble voice.

Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Com'st thou alive to view the Stygian bounds,
Where the wan spectres walk eternal rounds;
Nor fear'st the dark and dismal way to tread,
Throng'd with pale ghosts, familiar with the dead?

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xi.

— Rous'd from their slumbers,
In grim array the grisly spectres rise,
Grin horrible, and, obstinately sullen,
Pass and repass, hush'd at the foot of night.

Blair. The Grave.

SPE/CULATE, v.
SPECULA'TION.
SPE/CULATIST.
SPE/CULATIVE.
SPE/CULATIVELY.
SPE/CULAR.
SPE/CULATOR.
SPE/CULATORY.
SPE/CULUM.

Fr. Spéculer, spéculaire;
It. Specolare; Sp. Specular;
Lat. Speculari, to see,
to view. See SPECIES.

To see, to view, to look out or about; to observe, to consider, to contemplate; to look, or search or examine into;

to form or frame theories; to look forward to consequences; to try, venture, risk or hazard, to form or frame schemes, upon a view or prospect, (sc.) of beneficial or profitable results.

Lat. Specularis, Fr. Spéculaire,—that may be seen into or through, transparent; aiding or helping the sight.

Such wisdom, that in her lives speculation;
Such goodness that in her simplicity triumphs.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

[They] understood not Plato when he said that man doth sursum aspicere; for thereby was not meant to gape, or look upward with the eye, but to have his thoughts sublime; and not only to behold, but speculate their nature, with the eye of the understanding.

Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. iv. c. 1.

But now to goe on still with our astrologie and specula- tion of heaven as wee have begun.

Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 28.

For speculation turns not to it selfe,
Till it hath trauail'd, and is married there
Where it may see it selfe: this is not strange at all.

Shakespeare. Troyl. & Cres. Act iii. sc. 3.

— No, when light wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid, seele with wanton dulnesse
My speculative, and offic'd instrument:
That my disports corrupt, and taint my businesse:
Let house-wiues make a skillett of my helme,
And all indigne, and base aduersities,
Make head against my estimation.

Id. Othello, Act i. sc. 3.

You teach (though we learn not) a thing unknown
To our late times, the use of specular stone,
Though which all things within without were shown.

Donne. To the Countess of Bedford.

Look once more ere we leave this specular mount Westward much nearer by southwest.

Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

[For who would not more readily learn] to draw, by setting a good picture before him, than by merely speculating upon the laws of perspective.—Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 2.

Furthermore Aristotle declares, that this speculation concerning the Deity, does constitute a particular science by it self, distinct from those other speculative sciences of physiology, and the pure mathematicks, so that there are all in all, three speculative sciences, distinguished by their several objects, physiology, the pure mathematicks, and theology or metaphysicks.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 416.

Divers other instances might be produced, to manifest the requisiteness and advantage of some knowledge in mathematicks to a speculative naturalist.

Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 431.

For if the light of reason may it self be extinguished, much more may the voice of conscience be drowned; which being a practical principle, is perpetually warred upon by our lusts, and passions, and sinful habits; whereas the other being a more speculative power, hath no contrary in the mind of man to struggle with.—Atterbury, vol. iv. Ser. 4.

It may be thought that in the three first chapters, I have discours'd more speculatively than 'tis fit, in a book that is design'd for common use and edification.

Scott. Christian Life, Pref.

— Thy specular orb
Apply to well-dissected kernels; lo!
Strange forms arise, in each a little plant
Unfolds its boughs: observe the slender threads
Of first beginning trees, their roots, their leaves,
In narrow seeds describ'd.

J. Philips. Cider, b. i.

Although lapidaries and questuary enquirers affirm it, yet the writers of minerals, and natural speculators are of another belief, conceiving the stones which bear this name [toad stone] to be a mineral concretion.

Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. iii. c. 13.

My privileges are an ubiquitary, or circumambulatory, speculatory, interrogatory, redargutory immunity over all the privy lodgings.—Carew. Caelum Britannicum.

The object in our case served for a specular body, to reflect that colour to the eye: and you [must] not be startled, Pyrophilus, that I should venture to say, that a rough and coloured object may serve for a speculum to reflect, &c.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 693.

Whatever preference therefore, in speculation, he might give to the republican form, he could not, with these principles, be practically an enemy to the government of kings.

Sp. Horsley, vol. iii. Ser. 44. App.

Sudden fortunes, indeed, are sometimes made in such places, by what is called the trade of speculation. The spec- ulative merchant exercises no one regular, established, or well-known branch of business.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 10.

The very ingenious speculatist, Mr. Hume, seems to wish as well as think, that as death is unavoidable by the political as well as the animal body, the British constitution may die in the arms of despotism.—Knox. The Spirit of Despotism.

Fresh confidence the speculatist takes
From ev'ry hair-brain'd proselyte he makes;
And therefore prints.—Cowper. Progress of Error.

— Now roves the eye;
And, posted on this speculative height,
Exults in its command.

Id. The Task, b. i.

For conscience either signifies, speculatively, the judgment we pass of things upon whatever principles we chance to have: and then it is only opinion, a very unable judge and divider.

Warburton. Commentary on Mr. Pope's Essay on Man.

SPEED, v.
SPEED, n.
SPE/EDER, n.
SPE/EDFUL.
SPE/EDFULLY.
SPE/EDLESS.
SPE/EDY.
SPE/EDILY.
SPE/EDINESS.

Dut. Speed, spoeden, festinatio, festinare; (derived by Kilian from the Gr. ἵστρον, haste.) A. S. Sped, a progress or proceeding, good speed or success, the event, an effect or bringing a thing to pass. Sped- an, spedian, to go forward or proceed, to have good speed or success, to prosper. (See Sommer.) Skinner says,—perhaps from the It. Spedire; Lat. Ex- pedire.

To go forward, to move, to come to an issue or event, to fare; to proceed, to advance; to get an advantage; to cause to succeed, to aid or assist;
to proceed to the desired event, to a prosperous issue, without hinderance or opposition, easily, swiftly, quickly, expeditiously, hastily,—with quick, swift or fast motion; to hasten, to dispatch.

The Cristyne were of the Saracens anonywar byset,
And vor the Saracens were ywar, hem spedde wel the bet.

R. Gloucester, p. 396.

When Robert sauh & wist, how the conseile gede,
To the holy land him list, & thider gan him spede.

R. Brunne, p. 87.

Also the duke Henry with his fadere gede,
With help of Normundie, the better mot he spede.

Id. p. 109.

Spar hit nat and thou shalt. spede the betere.

Piers Plouhman, p. 59.

If it bihoueth to haue glorie it spedith not, but I schal come to the vislous and to the reuelaciouns of the lord.

Wiclif. 2 Cor. c. 12.

Alle thingis ben lefful to me, but not alle thingis ben spedeful.—Id. 1 Cor. c. 6.

And biseche if in ony maner sum tyme I haue a spedi
weie in the wille of God to come to ghou.—Id. Rom. c. 1.

The single man which is yet to wedde,
And not the wedded man, thus I rede,
To warne him now he is too farre spedde,
It is too late him to forbedde.

Chaucer. The Remedie of Loue.

I shall assaie at last to shewe and to speden, when I haue firste spended, and answered to thy reasons by whiche thou art moued, for I aske why thou wenest, that thilke reasons of hem that assolien this question, ne bee not spedful inough ne sufficient.—Id. Boecius, b. v.

Moche more than the thynges been absolute, and quicke fro all talentes, or affections of bodies, as God or his angels, ne folowen not in discernyng thynges object fro withoutforth, but thei accomplishen and speden, the deedes of hir thought.

Id. Id.

This ilke servant anon right out yede,
And his maister shette the dore anon,
And to hir labour spedily they gon.

Id. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16,609

And netheles great diligence
Thei setten vp thilke dede,
And spillen more than thei spede.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

For I was further fro my loue
Than erthe is from the heauen aboue,
And for to speake of any spede
So wiste I me none other rede,
But as it were a man forsake.—Id. Id. b. i.

Which Constancius, after he had in due maner spede the nedys of the empyre, as in subduyng this lande of Brytayne, as before is sayde, he retourned agayn to Rome.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 67.

And I [Thorpe] said, Sir, syns I may not nowe otherwyse be beleued but by swearynge, I perceyue (as Augustine saith) that it is not spedefull that ye that shold be my brothern sholde not beleue me: therefore I am redy by the worde of God, (as the Lorde commaunded me by his worde) to sweare.—State Trials. Hen. VIII. an. 4.

Sythe wee are in al these wretchednesses the more nede-full and necessary for vs is the spedeful helpe of almyghtye God.—Fisher. Penitential Psalms, Ps. 143.

This holye sacrafyce may spedefully moue the goodnes of almyghty God to mercy forgiuenes, and is the very strength of oure penance.—Id. De Profundis.

That dreadfull sound the bosters hart did thrill
With such amazment, that in hast he fledd,
Ne ever looked back for good or ill;
And after him eke fearefull Trompart spedd.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 10.

Great Pan for Syrinx sake bid speed our plow.

Beaum. & Fletcher. Faithful Shepherdess, Act ii. sc. 1.

— Speeder of nights spies
And guide of all her dreames obscurities.

Chapman. Homer. A Hymne to Hermes.

It obeys thy powers
And in their ship returne the speedlesse wowers.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. v.

The medley ended, Hercules
Did bring the Centaure bound
To prison; whereas Megara
In miserie he found:
(For Lycus, speedeles in his lust.
Warner. Albion's England, b. i. c. 6.

He, making speedy way through spersed ayre,
And through the world of waters wide and deepe,
To Morpheus house doth hastily repaire.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

For which his faith with her he fast engaged,
And thousand voves from bottome of his hart,
That, all so soone as he by wit or art
Could that atchieve whereto he did aspire,
He unto her would speedily revert.—Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 6.

The sinew forged string
Did give a mighty twang; and forth the eager shaft did sing, (Affecting speedinesse of flight) amongst the achive throng.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. iv.

All understanding Homers intent was (as by the speedi-nesse of a mans thought or minde) to illustrate Junos swiftness in hasting about the commandement of Jupiter which was utterly otherwise.—Id. Ib. b. xv. Comment.

Ulysses hastens with a trembling heart,
Before him steps, and bending draws the dart:
Forth flows the blood; an eager pang succeeds;
Tydides mounts, and to the navy speeds.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xi.

He saw a young Indian, whom he judged to be about nineteen or twenty years old, come down from a tree, and he also ran away with such speed as made it hopeless to follow him.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 1.

All was now fulfilled: and the world was speedily to see that grea personage, who had been, more or less, expected through every age since the fall of man.
Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 15.

SPEET. See SPIT.

SPELL, n. } Fr. Espellier, to join letters or SPELL, v. } syllables together, (Cotgrave;) SPE'LFUL. } Dut. Spellen, explanare, (Ki-SPE'LLING, n. } lian;) Ger. Spel, spil, sermo.
Spellen, to divide a word into letters and syllables, (Wachter, who derives the verb from spalten, findere, and the noun from the Gr. Πελειν, fieri.)

A. S. Spellian,—to declare, to tell an history or tale; whence (by way of metaphor) our spelling of syllables or words: also, to teach, instruct, train up; whence our setting of one a spell, or lesson.

"Spel,—a story or history, a speech, a rumour, a fable, a tale, discourse. Also, learning, doctrine, knowledge, teaching. And hence our spell, for a kind of incantation per sermones vel verba," (Somner.) See GOSPEL.

To tell, to teach, to relate; to declare, to explain, to interpret; to learn, to read; to speak or utter words or their separate and distinct syllables; to utter words of charm or incantment (incantare carmen); to charm, to enchant.

A spell,—a tale, &c. a charm; a spell or lesson,
(as Somner calls it,) i. e. a task to be performed;
a task, a set portion of work; a turn, or share of work.

Mr. Tyrwhitt says,—Quad spel is ill play.

Bot that thise lowed men vpon English tellis,
Right story can me not ken, the certeynte what spellis.
R. Brunne, p. 25.

Now hold your mouth pour charite,
Bothe knight and lady fre,
And herkeneth to my spell,
Of bataille and chevalrie,
Of ladies love and druerie,
Anon I woll you tell.—Chaucer. Rime of Sire Thopas.

A man may say ful soth in game and play
"Thou sayst ful soth," quod Roger, "by my fay;
But soth play quade spel, as the Fleming saith."
Id. The Cokes Prologue, v. 4353.

Fri. O she knew well,
Thy loue did read by rote, that could not spell.
Shakespeare. Romeo & Juliet, Act ii. sc. 3.

— If I read aught in heaven,
Or heav'n write aught of fate, by what the stars
Voluminous, or single characters,
In their conjunction met, give me to spell,
Sorrow, and labours, opposition, hate,
Attend thee.—Milton. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

And may at last my weary age
Find out thy peaceful hermitage,
The hairy gown and mossie cell,
Where I may sit and rightly spell
Of every star that heav'n doth shew,
And every herb that sips the dew;
Till old Experience do attain
To something like prophetic strain.—Milton. Il Penseroso.

— A better senator ne'er held
The helm of Rome, when gowns not arms repell'd
The fierce Epirot and the African bold,
Whether to settle peace, or to unfold
The drift of hollow states hard to be spell'd.
Id. To Sir Henry Vane.

Cries the stall-reader, Bless me! what a word on
A title page is this! and some in file
Stand spelling false, while one might walk to Mile End Green. Id.

And, as the old swain said, she can unlock
The clasping charm, and thaw the numming spell,
If she be right invok'd in warbled song.—Id. Comus.

Which doen, he balmes and herbes thereto applyde,
And evermore with mightie spells them charmd;
That in short space he has them qualifyde,
And him restord to helth, that would have algates dyde.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 6.

Al. Nothing Madam,
But only thinking what strange spells these rings have,
And how they work with some.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Loyal Subject, Act ii. sc. 2.

[He] has made this a play for his children, that he shall win, who, at one cast, throws most words on these four dice; whereby his eldest son, yet in coats, has play'd himself into spelling, with great eagerness, and without once having been chid for it, or forced to it.
Locke. Of Education, § 151.

— Yet not all it's pride secures
The grand retreat from injuries impress'd
By rural carvers, who with knives deface
The pannels, leaving an obscure, rude name,
In characters uncouth, and spelt amiss.
Cowper. Task, b. i.

Books are not seldom talismans and spells,
By which the magic art of shrewder wits
Holds an unthinking multitude enthral'd.—Id. Ib. b. vi.

Here, while his eyes the learned leaves peruse,
Each spellful mystery explain'd he views.
Hooie. Orlando Furioso, b. xv.

SPELT. } Fr. Espeaultre; It. Spèlda or SPE'LTED. } spèlta; Sp. Spelta; Dut. Spelte; SPE'LTED. } Ger. Spelt. Wachter says, the word to him denotes—granum fissum, a split grain, from spa ten, to split.

Spelted beans are splitted or split beans.
Spelter, Thomson calls—a demi-metal. See PEWTER.

They that use zea or spelt, have not the fine red wheat far.—Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 8.

Feed geese with oats, spelted beans, barley meal, or ground malt mixed with beer.—Mortimer.

I have sometimes made even these fall to the bottom of the vessel, by leaving a lump or two of spelter there for two or three days: for, not only those metalline corpuscles, that were just over or near to the determinate place, where I put the spelter, but also all the rest, into how remote parts soever of the liquor they were diffused, did settle upon the spelter, as appeared both by its increase of bulk, and by their leaving the water clear and colourless.
Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 394.

SPEND, v. } It. Spèndere; Fr. Despendre; SPE'NDER. } Sp. Despender; Dut. Spenden; SPE'NDING, n. } Ger. Spenden; Sw. Spendera; SPE'NDTHRIFT. } A. S. Spend-an, aspendan.
SPENCE, n. } Junius suggests the Gr. Σπενδειν, to pour, to offer a libation, (sc. to the gods) and thence extended to any offering. Wachter has no doubt that all are from the Lat. Pendere (prefix S), to weigh. See EXPEND.

To weigh out, to deal, distribute, dispose of (in weighed portions); to disburse, to part with; to bestow, employ or lay out; to part with (wholly), to waste, to exhaust, to consume; to waste, to wear out; to wear away.

Spence, is expense; also as Fr. Despence, despencerie,—a store room, from which the various articles in store were dispensed or distributed.
Spenser,—one who dispenses. See DISPENSE and DISPENCE, and Spens, in Jamieson.

Spendthrift,—a spendthrift heir, (Locke.) One who spends, (lavishly, wastefully, prodigally,) the earnings, the savings—of thriftiness.

The foure & twenty houres he spended in holy life.
R. Brunne, p. 23.

The poraille that went thider, that had no spendyng,
Thei suore ther oth togider, to lette for no thing.
Id. p. 125.

— For an hydel man thow semest
A spendour that spende mot.—Piers Plouhman, p. 76.

And a womman hadde ben in the blodi flixe twelue yeer, and hadde resseyved many thingis of ful many lechis, and hadde spendid al hir good, and was nothing amendid, but was rather the worse.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 5.

And there was a certayne woman, which was diseased of an yssue of blood xii. yeares, & had suffered many thynges of many phisicians, and had spent al y^t she had, and felt none amèdement at al, but waxed worse and worse.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

For who of you willinge to bilde a tour; wher he first sitte not and kountith the spencis that ben nedeful, if he haue to performe?—Wiclif. Luk, c. 14.

Not auarice the foule caitife
Was halfe to gripe so ententife
As largesse is, to yeue and spend.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

Fat as a whale, and walken as a swan;
Al vinolent as botel in the spence;
Hir praier is of ful gret reverence.
Id. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 7512.

And netheles me semeth so,
For ought that thou hast yet misdo
Of tyme, whiche thou hast spended,
It maie with grace ben amended.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

But the verye grounde
Was for to compounde
With Elynour in the spence
To paye for her expence.—Skelton. Elynour Rumming.

Yf that be trew, who may him selfe so happy call,
As I, whose free and sumptius [uous] spence doth shyne beyonde them all?—Surrey. Ecclesiastes, c. 3.

For better is coste upon somewhat worth, than spence upon nothinge worth.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. ii.

But if they wolde go forth with hym, and to take suche fortune as falleth, other good or yuell, if good fortune and wynnyng fall, they to haue their part, so that they demaunde no wages, nor for losse of horse nor spence, nor damage that they maye happen to haue.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 206.

But I in armes, and in atchievements brave,
Do rather choose my flitting houres to spend,
And to be lord of those that riches haue,
Then them to have my selfe, and be their servile slave.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

For he had touched an article in the instructions to the commissioners, who were to leuie the beneuolence; that if they met with any that were sparing, they should tell them, that they must needs haue, because they laid vp; and if they were spenders, they must needs haue, because it was seene in their port, and manner of liuing.
Bacon. Hist. of Hen. VII.

Oh what a price would he [a Barbell] have borne among our gluttons here with us! what would he have cost our prodigall spendthrifts, if hee had been taken upon our coasts neere Rome?—Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 18.

The Trojans, worn with toils, and spent with woes,
Leap on the welcome land, and seek their wish'd repose.
Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. i.

Most men, like spendthrift heirs, are apt to judge a little in hand better than a great deal to come; and so, for small matters in possession, part with greater ones in reversion.
Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 21.

That portion of his revenue which a rich man annually spends is, in most cases, consumed by idle guests and menial servants, who leave nothing behind them in return for their consumption.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. ii. c. 3.

This complaint, however, of the scarcity of money, is not always confined to improvident spendthrifts.
Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 1.

The Great Mogul's wealth, and revenues, treasure or spendings.—Whitelock. Manners of the English, p. 404.

SPE'ABLE. } See DESPERATE. Lat. Spe-
SPE'RATE. } rare, to hope.
That may be hoped.

We may cast it away, if it be found but a bladder, and discharge it of so much as is vain and not sperable.—Bacon.

We have spent much time in distinguishing between the sperate and desperate debts of the clergy.
Repr. to Q. Anne, in Ecton's St. of Q. A.'s Bounty, (1721.)

SPE'RAGE. See SPARAGUS.

SPE'RE. Dut. Speuren; Ger. Spuren; A. S.
Spyr-ian, to search out by the track or trace, to inquire and make diligent search. Lanc.—To Spirre, (Somner.) See Spere in Jamieson.

To search or seek, to inquire, to ask, to request, to desire.

Edward told William of Alfred alle the case,
& praied him of help, for he dred harder pase,
& if he myght conquere Ingland, that was his speyre.
R. Brunne, p. 53.

Of Robert is no speyre to mak of parlement.—Id. p. 104.

In Huntynghonschire the kyng in that forest
A moneth lay, to spire for wod & wilde beste.—Id. p. 112.

For certes whan that betitte,
My wyll, myn herte, and all my witte
Ben fully sette to herken and sper
What any man woll speke of her.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

SPERM. } Fr. Sperme; It. Spërma; SPERMA'TICK. } spërmo; Sp. Esperma; Lat.
SPERMA'TICAL. } Sperma; Gr. Σπέρμα, from SPE'RMATIZE, v. } σπερμ-ειν, to sow.
The seed.

Lo Adam, in the feld of Damascene
With Goddes owen finger wrought was he,
And not begeten of mannes sperme unclene.
Chaucer. The Monkes Tale, v. 14,015.

There passeth from them in steed a sperme a certain whitish humor like milke.—Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 51.

There in soft down the liquorous sparrow sat,
Pamper'd with meats, full spermatie and fat.
Drayton. The Owl.

A nerve is a spermatie part rising from the brain and the pith of the back-bone.
P. Fletcher. The Purple Island, c. 1. Note.

Yet all this being only in the way of natural and not animal perception, is indeed nothing but a dull and drowsie, plastick and spermatie life, devoid of all consciousness and self-enjoyment.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 106.

Now if the first principle and original of all things in the universe, be thus supposed to be body or matter, devoid of all animality, sense, and consciousness, then it must of necessary be either perfectly dead and stupid, and without all manner of life, or else endued with such a kind of life only, as is by some called plastick, spermatie and vegetative, by others the life of nature, or natural perception.
Id. Ib. p. 136.

The opinion of Aristotle extendeth further, from whose assertion all men should be hermaphrodites; for affirming that women do not spermatize, and confer a place or receptacle rather than essential principles of generation, he de-ductively includes both sexes in mankind.
Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 17.

"You have hitherto existed as a part (or have had a particular existence); you will hereafter be absorbed and lost in the substance which produced you: or rather, you will be assumed into the Divine nature, or the spermatie reasons."
Warburton. Divine Legation, vol. iii. p. 168.

SPEW, v. } Dut. Spouwen; Ger. Speyen; SPE'WING, n. } A. S. Spiwan; Goth. Speiwan, SPE'WY. } to spit or throw out. (Lat.
Spuere.)

To throw out, to eject, to expel, to vomit, (usually what comes from the stomach, as spit, from the mouth.)

And Solomon sayth: 'If thou hast founden hony, etc of it that sufficeth; for if thou etc of it out of mesure, thou shalt spewe, and be nedy and poure.'
Chaucer. The Tale of Melibeus.

And (I wyl as I say leaue) all hys deuelyshe lies which he spetteth and speweth oute vpon honest men.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 736.

For the cuppe of the Lordes ryghte hande shall compasse thee aboute, and shamful spewing in steade of thy wurshyppe.—Bible, 1551. Abacuck, c. 2.

Therewith she spewd out of her filthie maw
A flood of poyson horrible and blacke;
Full of great lumps of flesh and gobbets raw,
Which stunk so vildly, that it forst him slacke
His grasping hold, and from her turne him backe.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

The soil exhaling clouds of subtle dews,
Imbibing moisture which with ease she spews,
Which rusts not iron, and whose mould is clean,
Well cloth'd with cheerful grass, and ever green,
Is good for olives.—Dryden. Virgil. Geor. b. ii.

The lower vallies in wet winters are so spewy, that they know not how to feed them.—Mortimer.

SPHERE, n. } Fr. Sphère; It. Sfèra; SPHERE, v. } Sp. Sfera; Lat. Sphæra; SPHE'RICK. } Gr. Σφαῖρα,— SPHE'RICAL. } A globe or circle; any SPHE'RICALITY. } round figure or thing.
SPHE'RICALNESS. } To sphere, (see ENSPHERE,) SPHE'RICALITY. } —to be or cause to be, to SPHE'RY. } stand or be placed in a globe
SPHE'RULE. } or sphere; to circle or encircle.

Spheroid, spheroidal, &c.—are common words
in mathematical books.

And by his eighte speres in his werking,
He knew ful wel how fer Alnath was shove
Fro the hed of thilke fix Aries above
That in the ninthe sphere considered is.
Chaucer. The Frankelaines Tale, v. 11,592.

Whereat he wondred much, and gan enquire,
What stately building durst so high extend
Her lofty toures unto the starry sphere,
And what unknown nation there empeopled were.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

— And as a voice is heard
With emulous affection, when any towne is spher'd
With siege of such a foe, as kills mens mindes, and for the towne
Makes sound his trumpet: so the voyce, from Thetis issue
throwne,
Won emulously th' eares of all.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xviii.

— Would Diana pleas'd
To shoot me with a death no more diseases'd,
As soone as might be: that no more my mone
Might waste my blood, in weepings neuer done;
For want of that accomplisht vertue spher'd
In my lou'd Lord, to all the Greekes prefer'd.
Id. Ib. Odyssey, b. xviii.

And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
In noble eminence, enthron'd and spher'd
Amidst the other.—Shakes. Troyl. & Cress. Act iv. sc. 5.

— And [light] from her native east
To journie through the airie gloom began,
Sphear'd in a radiant cloud, for yet the sun
Was not; shee in a cloudie tabernacle Sojourn'd the while. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vii.

What wicked and dissembling glasse of mine,
Made me compare with Hermia's sphery eyne?
Shakespeare. Midsummer Night's Dreame, Act ii. sc. 3.

Mortals, that would follow me,
Love Virtue, she alone is free,
She can teach ye how to clime
Higher than the sphery chime. Milton. Comus.

And upon Huntclapnab, you every where may find
(As though nice nature lov'd to vary in this kind)
Stones of a spheric form of sundry mickles fram'd.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 27.

We think the heav'n's enjoy their spherical,
Their round proportion embracing all.
Donne. Anatomy of the World, p. 178.

And it [circle] seems beside, to have the approbation of nature, when she worketh by instinct which is her secret school: for birds do build their nests spherically.
Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 14.

Suppose a man born blind, and now adult, and taught by his touch to distinguish between a cube and a sphere of the same metal, and nighly of the same bigness, so as to tell, when he felt one and the other, which is the cube, which is the sphere.—Locke. Hum. Und. b. ii. c. 9.

Neither can we conceive every thought to be of some certain determinate figure, either round or angular, spherical, cubical, or cylindrical, or the like.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 858.

And consequently all verities in us (they being but complex axiomatical thoughts) must of necessity be long, broad,
and thick, and either spherically or angularly figurate.
Id. Ib.

Such bodies receive their figure and limits from such lets as hinder them from attaining to that sphericalness they aim at.—Digby. On Bodies.

And now we understand, that Aristotle dealt not ingeniously with Xenophanes, when from that expression of his,
that God was σφαῖροειδης, or spheryform, he would infer that Xenophanes made God to be a body, and nothing else but the round corporeal world animated.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 378.

Upon the taking the lead from off the fire, it is wont to be educed to most of its former qualities (for it will not of itself recover its sphericity).—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 44.

There is but little variety of other vegetable productions, though, doubtless, several had not yet sprung up at the early season when we visited the place, and many more might be hid from the narrow sphere of our researches.
Cook. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 2.

More vapours still gathering as they are obstructed, their parts, or little spherules, become more neighbourly, or contiguous, than when they had a freedom of ranging wide from each other.—Brooke. Universal Beauty, b. ii. Note.

SPIAL. See SPY.

SPICE, v. } Fr. Espice; It. Spèzie; Sp.
SPICE, n. } Especia; Dut. Specerye; Low SPICER. } Lat. Species aromatum, aroma-
SPICERY. } suis speciebus, distincta. Arom-SPICY. } atics, distinguished into their sorts or kinds. See Du Cange, and see SPECIES.

A spice, (met.) is,—a small portion or quantity; sufficient to season or savour; to give a taste or flavour; and hence,—

Spiced,—having a taste or flavour, a relish; and (met.) nice, delicate, dainty, tender.

And nom with hym spicery, that to fysik drow,
And wende hym to Wynchestre quoyntoliche ynow,
And seyde the kynges, that he wolde hym to hele brynge.
R. Gloucester, p. 151.

What havest thou quath he. eny hote spices.
Piers Plouhman, p. 105.

And thei turneden agen and maden redi swete smellynge spicis and oynementis.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 23.

Ne how the fire was couched first with stre,
And than with drie stickes cloven a-thre,
And than with grene wood and spycerie.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 2935.

He waited after no pompe ne reverence,
Ne maked him no spiced conscience,
But Cristes lore, and his apostles twelve,
He taught, but first he folwed it himselfe.
Id. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 527.

Ye shulden be al patient and meke,
And han a swete spiced conscience,
Sith ye so preche of Jobes patience.
Id. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 6015.

Tho thought him cold gras goode,
That whilome ete the hot spices:
Thus was he torned from delices.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

In which meane tyme a spycer or grocer namyd Petyr Gylle, of Paris, with one John Vayllaunt, prouoste of the kynges money, with a compagne of viii. C. men in harnesse, rode vnto the cytie of Meaux.
Fabyan. Chronycle. K. John of France, an. 8.

Fresh cheese, and dowsets, curds, and clouded cream,
Spic'd syllibubs, and cyder of the best.
Drayton. Pastorals, Ecl. 9.

At ewle we wonten gambole, daunce,
To carrole, and to sing,
To haue gud spiced sewe, and roste,
And plum-pies for a king.
Warner. Albion's England, b. v. c. 24.

Pri. Fye, no corruption.
Cle. Take it; 'tis yours.
Be not so spiced, it is good gold
I know ye have ways to vent it; ye may hold it.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Mad Lover, Act iii.

And eke the fayrest Alma mett him there
With balme, and wine, and costly spicery,
To comfort him in his infirmity.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 11.

Here stands a bak'd meat, he wants a little seasoning,
A foolish mistake; my spice-box, gentlemen,
And put in some of this, the matter's ended.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Bloody Brother, Act ii. sc. 2.

They [the Dutch] are so careful to preserve it in their own hands, that they will not suffer the spice to grow in the uninhabited islands, but send soldiers to cut the trees down.
Captain Rofy told me, that while he lived with the Dutch,
he was sent with other men to cut down the spice-trees;
and that he himself did at several times cut down 7 or 800 trees.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1686.

Too busy senates, with an over-care
To make us better than our kind can bear,
Have dash'd a spice of envy in the laws,
And straining up too high, have spoil'd the cause.
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. x.

Now lay fresh honey near their empty rooms,
In troughs of hollow reeds, whilst frying gums
Cast round a fragrant mist of spicy fumes.
Thus kindly tempt the famish'd swarm to eat,
And gently reconcile them to their meat.
Addison. Virgil, Georg. 4.

So when a ship well freighted with the stores,
The sun matures on India's spicy shores,
Has dropp'd her anchor, and her canvass furl'd,
In some safe haven of our western world,
'Twere vain inquiry to what port she went,
The gale informs us, laden with the scent.
Cowper. Charity.

The Venetians, during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, carried on a very advantageous commerce in spiceries and other East India goods, which they distributed among the other nations of Europe.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 7.

SPICK AND SPAN NEW. "In Dut. they say,—spickspelder nieuw. And spyker means a warehouse or magazine. Spil or spel means a spindle; schiet-spoel, the weaver's shuttle, and spoelder, the shuttle thrower. In Dut. therefore spickspelder-nieuw, means new from the warehouse, and the loom. In Ger. they say,—Span-new, and funckel new. Spange means any thing shining; as funckel means, to glitter or sparkle. In Dan. Funckelnye; in Sw. Spitt, spangande ny; In Eng. we say,—spick and span new, fire new, brand new. The two last speak for themselves; spick and span new meaning, shining new from the warehouse." So far Tooke. They also say brand-nieu and vier neuw in Dutch. The German etymologists, Wachter, and the Swedish Ihre, give a different account. Wachter is fanciful enough; he says—span means novus, and deriving it from spenen, to milk; he thinks span-new, may be, new, like the first milk after calving. Ihre,—that spangande is from spoon, a segment; and that the expression means—as new as a chip just cut. Junius thought the expression borrowed from the fuller's art, unfolding, extending, and smoothing his clothes on a machine.

This tale was aie span newe to begin,
Til that the tale departed hem a twinne.

Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. iv.

Among other things, Black friars will entertain you with a play spick and span new, and the Cock-pit with another.

Howell, b. i. s. 4. Let. 2.

And they [Macedonians] were all in goodly gilt armours, and brave purple cassocks upon them, spick and span new.

North. Plutarch, p. 213.

Sep. And they will not know me now, they'l never know me.

Who now dare blush at my acquaintance? ha?
Am I not totally a span-new gallant,
Fit for the choicest eyes?

Beaum. & Fletch. The False One, Act iii. sc. 2.

Then, while the honour thou hast got
Is spick and span new, piping hot,
Strike her up bravely thou hadst best,
And trust thy fortune with the rest.—Hudibras, pt. i. c. 3.

SPI'LATED. See SPIKE.

SPIDER. Dut. Spinne; Ger. Spume; Sw. Spindel; Dut. and Ger. Spinner; Sw. Spinna; A. S. Spin-an, to spin. Spider, (qd.)

Spinder or spinner, (Skinner,) so named from spinning his web.

Nature, that gaue the bee so feate a grace,
To finde hony of so wondrous fashion,
Hath taught the spider out of the same place
To fetch poyson by straunge alteration.

Wyatt. How by a Kisse, &c.

I loy to see how, in your drawn work,
Your selfe unto the bee ye doe compare;
And me unto the spyder, that doth lurke
In close awayt, to catch her unaware.—Spenser, Son. 71.

The third kind of spiders, be they which are so wonderfull in their fine spinning and skilfull workmanship: these weave the great and large cobwebs that we see; and yet their verie wombe yeeldeth all the matter and stuffe whereof they be made.—Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 24.

— Spider-like

Out of his selfe-drawing web.

Shakespeare. Hen. VIII. Act i. sc. 1.

Scaliger relates, that in Gascony, his country, there are spiders of that virulency, that if a man treads upon them, to crush them, their poyson will pass through the very soles of his shooes.—Derham. Phys. Theol. b. iv. c. 13. Note.

To turn purveyor to an overgorg'd
And bloated spider, till the pamp'rd pest
Is made familiar, watches his approach,
Comes at his call, and serves him for a friend.

Cowper. Task, b. v.

SPI'GOT. Dut. Spycker, spieker, clavus in modum spicae vel spiculi acutus, (Kilian.)
A spike or spiked peg.

Pist. O base Hungarian wight: wilt yu the spigot wield.
Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor, Act i. sc. 3.

Then take out the spigot with your left hand, and clap the point of it in your mouth, and keep your left hand to watch accidents.—Swift. Directions to the Butler.

SPIKE, n. } Fr. Spique, spiquenard; It.
SPIKE, v. } Spiga, spiganardo; Sp. Espiga, SPI'KY. } espia nardi; Dut. Spijck, spijck
SPI'KENARD. } narde.

SPI'LATED. } Large iron nails, called by seamen speeks, perhaps (says Skinner) from the Lat. Spica, from Æol. Σπῆκος, for σπῆκος, (see Vossius) and this perhaps from the old verb σπῶ, Lat. Sto.

Spike of corn, will then be so called from the erect position in which it stands, and the modern spike, a nail, from its resemblance.

Spike-nard, (nardi spica,)—see the second quotation from Holland's Plinie.

Bote yf that sed that sowen is. in the sloh sterve
Shal nevere spir springen up. ne spik on strawe curne.
Piers Plouhman, p. 211.

A womman cam that hadde a boxe of alabastre of preciouse oynement spikenard.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 14.

Another broughte a spycke
Of a bacon flicke. Skelton. Elinour Rummung.

In spiked corne, the leafe resembleth that which groweth to reedes.—Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 7.

The head of Nardus spreadeth into certaine spikes or eares, whereby it hath a twofold use, both of spike and also of leafe; in which regard it is so famous.

Id. Ib. b. xii. c. 12.

For the body of the ships, no nation of the world doth equal England for the oaken timber wherewith to build them; and we need not borrow of any other iron for spikes, or nails to fasten them together.

Bacon. Advice to Sir George Villiers.

The gleaners spread around, and here and there,
Spike after spike, their scanty harvest pick.

Thomson. Autumn.

A youth about ten years of age, one day in the sessions yard leaning over the spiked pales to see the malefactors, was suddenly frighted down by the marshal's men: in his falling he was catch'd by one of those spikes in the middle of his wrist, it passing between the bone and tendons; he hung thereby till he was taken down.

Wiseman. Treatises, b. v. c. 2.

Dash'd from their hoofs, while o'er the dead they fly,
Black, bloody drops the smoaking chariot dye:
The spiky wheels through heaps of carnage tore;
And thick the groaning axles dropp'd with gore.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xx.

Sometimes, however, nails much smaller than a spike would still be taken in exchange for fruit.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 8.

— Whether you choose

The vernal blades that rise with seeded stem
Of hue purpleal; or the cloven white,
That in a spiked ball collects its sweets.

Mason. The English Garden, b. ii.

The weedy farrows let the plough pervade,
Till on the top th' inverted roots are laid;
There left to wither in the noon-tide ray,
Or by the spiky harrow clear'd away.

Scott. Amœbean Egl. 2.

Next morning I made the natives another visit, accompanied by Mr. Forster and Mr. Hodges, carrying with me various articles which I presented them with, and which they received with a great deal of indifference, except hatchets and spike-nails; these they most esteemed.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 4.

Extend a rail of elm, securely arm'd
With spiculated paling. Mason. English Garden, b. ii.

SPILT, v. } Dut. Spillen; A. S. Spillan;
SPILL, n. } private, consumere, corrupere, SPI'LLING, n. } vitiare; to deprive, to destroy,
to waste, to spoil, to perish.

To destroy, to waste, to perish; to throw away,
to scatter, to effuse, to pour out, to shed.

Spill, the noun, seems to be a piece spilt or split away, taken off. (See SPALT.) And—Spilt, in Spenser, seems to be—pieced; diversified with pieces.

& gaf tham sonde at wille in Ingland forto fare,
Man & beste to spille, non ne suld thei spare.

R. Brunne, p. 114.

Withouten mo stours or blode spillyng of men.—Id. p. 184.

And as an hounde that ete gras. so gan ich to brake
And spile that ich spelide myghte.—Piers Plouhman, p. 109.

O mighty God, if that it be thy will Sin thou art rightful juge how may it be
That thou wolt soffren innocence to spill,
And wicked folke regne in prosperitee?

Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 5234.

— The quene and other ladies mo
So long praieden the king of grace,
Til he his lif him granted in the place,
And yaf him to the quene, all at hire will
To chese whether she wold him save or spill.

Id. The Wif of Bathes Tale, v. 6477.

1700

— O thou vnkynde,
Here shalt thou through thy slouth finde,
(If that the liste to come and see)
A lady dede for loue of thee,
So as I shall my selue spill
Whom, if it had been thy will,
Thou mightest saue well enough.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

If thou wilt go, quod she, and spill thy self
Take vs with thee in all that may betide.

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

From thence he shootes his arrowes every where Into the world, at randon as he will,
On us fraile men, his wretched vassals here,
Like as himselfe us pleaseth save or spill.

Spenser. Colin Clout's come home againe.

Much more then that which was in Paphos built,
Or that in Cyprus, both long since this same,
Though all the pillours of the one were guilt,
And all the others pavement were with yvory spilt.

Id. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 10.

For the flower of the rosin is taken greene and fresh, as it distilleth from the tree, together with a good quantitie of small, thinne, and short spils or chips of the tree plucked away with the same.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvi. c. 11.

But lay it to a sore with pitch, you shall see it fetch out spils and ends of broken arrowes sticking still within the flesh.—Id. Ib. b. xx. c. 6.

The same meale draweth forth spils of broken and shivered bones.—Id. Ib. b. xxii. c. 25.

They seek to spill my blood; 'tis that alone
Must for the nation's crying sins atone.

Dryden. Soliloquy of a Royal Exile.

He who would have shuddered to spill a drop of blood, in a hostile contest, as a private man, shall deluge whole provinces, as an absolute prince, and laugh over the subjugated plains which he has fertilized with human gore.

Knox. Spirit of Despotism.

SPIN, v. } Dut. Spinnen; Ger. Spinnen; SPI'NNER. } Sw. Spinne; Goth. and A. S.
SPI'NNING, n. } Spinnan, to draw out. See SPI'NNY. } WIFE, and WOMAN.
SPI'NSTER. } To draw out or produce,
SPI'NSTRY. } to extend or stretch out, to SPI'NDLE, v. } lengthen or prolong; to move SPI'NDLE, n. } or run round as a spinning- wheel; to run out in length or in a long line or course.

Spinster, (Skinner says,) is the name given to unmarried females, because they are presumed to be occupied in spinning. In Du Cange,—Fusus, mulier vel muliebris sexus, cui fusus, ut viro gladius et arma, competit; and Spelman (Gloss.
in v. Spinster,) mentions one who upon his tomb had eleven sons pourtrayed girt with swords, and as many daughters with spindles (fusis). And Alfred in his will calls the female part of his family
the spindle-side, (Turner, b. vii. c. 11.)

To Spindle, diminutive of Spin, i. e. Spin-dael,— to spin or draw out thinly, slenderly; to run out into length.

Spindle, the noun,—that on which the thread is spun; any thing drawn out as thread; thin, spare, as a thread.

Hue spak to the spynnesters. to spynnen hit oute.
Piers Plouhman, p. 98.

Biholde ye the lilies of the feeld hou thei wexen; thei trauelen not, nether spynnen.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 12.

Consydre ye lylies howe they grow: They laboure not;
they spin not.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Deceite, weping, spinning, God hath yeven
To woman kindly, while that they may liven.

Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 5980.

Or I was borne, my desteny was sponne
By Parcas sisterne.—Id. Complaint of the Black Knight.

And some went so narrow
They laid to pledge their wharrow
Their ribskin and their spindell
Theyr nedel and their thimbell.

Skelton. Elinour Rummung.

And this effeminate love of a woman, doth so womanize a man, that, if he yield to it, it will not only make him an Amazon, but a launder, a distaff, a spinner, or whatsoever other vile occupation their idle heads can imagine, and their weak hands perform.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

She, them saluting there, by them sate still Beholding how the thrids of life they span.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 2.

Howbeit no sooner commeth the spring, but they [corne] begin to grow up into straw, and to spindle upward point-wise.—Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 7.

O friends,
Some one abides within here, that commends
The place to vs; and breathes a voice diuine;
As she some web wrought; or her spindles twine
She cherisht with her song.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. x.

It frets me too,
I am fall'n away to nothing, to a spindle,
Grown a meer man of mat.
Beaum. & Fletch. Woman Pleas'd, Act iv. sc. 3.

Closter the sonne of Arachne taught the first making of the spindle for woollen yearne; and Arachne her selfe was the first spinner of flax thred, the weaver of linnen, and of nets.—Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 56.

The picture of a companie of spinsters, so lively, that one would imagine he saw every woman making hast to spin off her distaffe, striving avie who shall have done her taske first.
Id. Ib. b. xxxv. c. 11.

But as a spinster poore and juste, ye sometimes see strait lac't

About the weighing of her web, who (carefull) hauing charge,
For which she would prouide some meanes, is loth to be too large
In giuing, or in taking weight; but euer with her hand,
Is doing with the weights and wool, till both in just poise stand.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xii.

How beautiful, saith Isaiah, are the feet of him that bringeth good tydings, that publisheth salvation! Are the feet so beautiful, and is the very bringing of these tydings so decent of itself? What new decency can be added to this your spinstry?
Milton. Reason of Church Government, b. ii. c. 2.

So long as we could busy ourselves in working out our salvation, and furthering the salvation of others, we should think it but a mean employment to spend our time in spinning fine nets, for the catching of flies.
Sharp, vol. i. Ser. 1.

Quick and more quick he spins in giddy gyres,
Then falls, and in much foam his soul expires.
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. viii.

Unbred to spinning, in the loom unskill'd,
She [Camilla] chose the nobler Pallas of the field.
Id. Virgil. Aeneis, b. vii.

As closely following as the running thread
The spindle follows, and displays the charms
Of the fair spinster's breast, and moving arms.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xxiii.

Ab. Cry out with a hollow voice, what dost thou do in bed with this spindle-shanked fellow?
Addison. The Drummer, Act i. sc. 1.

The spinner is almost always a distinct person from the weaver; but the ploughman, the harrower, the sower of the seed, and the reaper of the corns, are often the same.
Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 1.

The spinning of linnen yarn is carried on in Scotland nearly in the same way as the knitting of stockings by servants who are chiefly hired for other purposes.
Id. Ib. b. i. c. 10.

A long short-pointed prick has pierc'd my leg:
How high these thorns and spindling brambles grow!
Fawkes. Theocritus, Idyl. 4.

Full many Grecian maids, for charms renown'd,
While merrily they twirl the spindle round,
Till day's decline thy praises shall proclaim,
And Grecian matrons celebrate thy fame.—Id. Ib. Idyl. 24.

The prejudices and pride of man have long presumed the sword and spindle made for different hands, and denied the other sex to partake the grandeur of military glory.
Idler, No. 5.

I should indeed be unwilling to find that, for the sake of corresponding with the Idler, the smith's iron had cooled on the anvil, or the spinster's distaff stood unemployed.
Id. No. 2.

The race of formal spintexts and solemn saygraces is nearly extinct.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 9.

SPINE, n. Fr. Espine; It. Spina; Sp. Espina; Lat. Spina, which (Vossius thinks) may be from the Gr. Σπίς-ειν, extendere, to stretch or draw out, quia in acumen extenditur, because it is drawn out to a point. The A. S. Spin-an is probably the origin. Applied to—

A thorn; to the bone extending the whole length of the back.

Spinale medulle,—the spinal marrow; the marrow of the back bone, derived from the brain, and like a main stock, from which all the sinews under the head do grow, (Cotgrave.) See the quotations from Paley.

Spinous, spiny,—long, thin, as a spine or thorn; prickly, piercing, tearing, vexing, or vexatious, troublesome.

Spinet, Lat. Spinetum,—where spiny or thorny bushes grow.

Roses their sharp spines being gone,
Not royal in their smells alone,
But in their hew.

Beaum. & Fletch. Two Noble Kinsmen, Act i. sc. 1.

The amplitude of that place where the nerves meet in the spinal marrow is not large enough to receive the distinct impresses of all the objects the mind retains in memory.
More. Immortality of the Soul, b. ii. c. 7.

A satyr, lodged in a little spinet, by which her majesty and the prince were to come, at the report of certain cornets that were divided in several places of the park, to signify her approach, advanced his head above the top of the wood.
B. Jonson. The Satyr.

This I take to be the true and genuine meaning of this passage, upon which no charge of Pelagianisme can be fastened; nor needeth it any spinous criticisms for its explanation.—Mede. Works, Disc. 4.

And, as in well growne woods, on trees, cold spinie grasshoppers
Sit chirping, and send voyces out, that scarce can pierce our eares,
For softnesse, and their weake faint sounds: (so talking on the toure)
These seniors of the people sate.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. iii.

Wi. No, no, farewell Toby,
Farewell spiny Nicholas, no such thing.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Night-Walker, Act iii.

The simile Spondanus highly commends, as most apt and expressive: but his application in one part doth abuse it, in the other right it: and that is, to make the old men resemble grasshoppers for their cold, and bloudlesse spininess. Tython being for age turned to a grasshopper.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. iii. Comment.

Some years since a young gentleman was wounded in a duel; the rapier entred into his right side, slanting by his short ribs under the muscles, reaching within a finger's breadth of the spine, with a redoubled thrust.
Wiseman. Treatises, b. v. c. 1.

Full on his neck the falling falchion sped,
From his broad shoulders hew'd his crested head:
Forth from the bone the spinal marrow flies,
And sunk in dust the corpse extended lies.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xx.

He [Jeremy Taylor] could bear with the harshness and roughness of the schools, and was not unseen in their subtilties and spinousities.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. ii.

Durion. A fruit that in shape resembles a small melon, but the skin is covered with sharp conical spines, whence its names; for dure in the Malay language, signifies prickle.
Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 11.

—Ast. with five rays of almost equal thickness, beset with numerous spines.—Pennant. British Zoology. Asterias.

The spine, or back-bone, is a chain of joints of very wonderful construction. Various, difficult, and almost inconsistent offices were to be executed by the same instrument. It was to be firm, yet flexible; firm, to support the erect position of body; flexible, to allow of the bending of the trunk in all degrees of curvature.
Paley. Natural Theology, c. 8.

It was further also (which is another, and quite a distinct purpose from the rest) to become a pipe or conduit for the same conveyance from the brain, of the most important fluid of the animal frame, that, namely, upon which all voluntary motion depends, the spinal marrow.—Id. Ib.

Ast. stellated with four or six, but generally with five lanceolate convex spiny rays; varies infinitely in color.
Pennant. British Zoology. Asterias.

SPINNET. The Fr. Espinette, (Cotgrave says,) is a pair of virginals.

When Miss delights in her spinnet,
A fiddler may a fortune get.—Swift. Cadmus & Vanessa.

SPIRE, n. Fr. Spire, spiral; It. Spira, Spira, v. spirale; Sp. Espira, espiral; Lat. Spira; Gr. Σπειρα, linea flexuosa faciens orbes non redeuntes in se: circulus non ad eundem punctum reductus.

A circular line circumvolving a circular line;—then applied to a continuance or repetition of folds, twists or wreaths, rising, and gradually decreasing as they rise to a point, at the summit or top, and thus forming a column or pillar diminishing towards the top. Hence, to Spire is,—

To rise, spring up, shoot up or forth conically, pyramidically;—in a tapering form, or form diminishing or lessening towards the top.

Bote yf that sed that sowen is. in the sloh sterve
Shal nevere spir springen up. ne spik on strawe curne.
Piers Plouhman, p. 211.

Out of this ground muste come the spire, that by processe of tyme, shall in greatnesse sprede, to haue branches and blosomes.—Chaucer. The Testament of Loue, b. iii.

In gentle ladies breste and bounteous race
Of woman-kind it [the rose] fayrest flowre doth spyre,
And beareth fruit of honour and all chaste desyre.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 5.

Thou saw'st great burden'd ships through these thy vallis pass,
Where now the sharp-edg'd scythe shears up the spiring
grass.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 16.

When Thames his either banks adorn'd with buildings fair,
The city to salute doth bid the Muse prepare;
Whose turrets, fanes, and spires, when wistly she beholds,
Her wonder at the site thus strangely she unfolds.
Id. Ib. s. 16.

The Egyptians (among many other memorable and wonderful workes wrought by their princes) speake much of these two pyramides, the mightie spires and steeples whereof (by their saying) doe arise out of the verie water.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxxvi. c. 12.

If you say it consists of points, from this position I can necessarily demonstrate, that every spear or spire-steeple, or what long body you will, is as thick as it is long.
H. More. Antidote against Atheism, b. i. c. 4.

But when the blue clale aboundeth (which hardlie drinketh vp the winter's waters in long season) there the grasse is spearie, rough, and verie apt for brushes.
Holinshed. Description of Britaine, c. 18.

As for the leaves, their density appeareth, in that either they are smooth and shining, as in bayes, holly, ivy, box, &c. Or in that they are hard and spirie, as in the rest.
Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 592.

Then cast a languishing regard around,
And saw with hateful eyes the temples crown'd
With golden spires, and all the hostile ground.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. i.

Some [watches] have strings and physies, and others none; some have the balance loose, and others regulated by a spiral spring, and others by hogs' bristles.
Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 6.

The sides are composed of two orders of fibres running circularly or spirally from base to tip.—Ray. On the Creation.

Around our pole the spiry Dragon glides,
And like a winding stream the Bears divides.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

— Or the patch'd disjointed choir,
Of some old fane, whose steeple's Gothic pride
Or pinnacled, or spir'd, would boldly rise
"In tufted trees high bosom'd."
Mason. English Garden, b. iii.

Something, perhaps, like the organization of reptiles, might have been hit upon by the ingenuity of the artist; or might have been exhibited in an automaton, by the combination of spring, spiral wires, and ringlets.
Paley. Natural Theology, c. 16. p. 314.

From this a tube, or round body, was formed, by which the water, or air, or both, was carried in a spiral stream up to the clouds.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 6.

The marks upon the face in general are spirals, which are drawn with great nicety, and even elegance, those on one side exactly corresponding with those on the other.
Id. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 9.

Close to the beach it was covered with high spiry trees, which he [Dampier] mentions as having the appearance of pines.—Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 8.

SPIRIT, n.

SPIRIT, v.

SPIRITALLY.

SPIRITEDLY.

SPIRITEDNESS.

SPIRITFUL.

SPIRITLESS.

SPIRITLESSLY.

SPIRITOUS.

SPIRITUAL, n.

SPIRITUAL, adj.

SPIRITUALLY.

SPIRITUALITY.

SPIRITUALTY.

SPIRITUALIST.

SPIRITUALIZE, v.

SPIRITUALIZER.

SPIRITUOUS.

SPIRITUOUSNESS.

SPIRITUOSITY.

SPIRA'TION.

the A. S. version Gast, (Ghost.)

Fr. Esprit, spiritueux;

It. Spirito, spirito; Sp.

Espirita, espiritoso; Lat.

Spiritus, from Spirare, to breathe. Martinus derives from σπω αερα, traho aera to draw in the air. Vossius suspects it to be formed from the sound. Tooke,— that it is one of those Lat.

verbs which are evidently from our own northern language: Lat. Spir-are; A. S.

Spir-ian, to search, seek,

look after, to investigate, to examine. (See To ASPIRE.)

But the A. S. verb never was applied to the act of breathing, nor the Latin to that of searching.—In the passages quoted below from the Gospels—Spirit is in

The Lat. Spiritus, from which our word immediately comes, is (as Animus and the Gr. Πνευμα, also are)—

The breath,—that which breathes, has or gives breath or animation, life or vitality, to material bodies; the soul, the mind; also ghost, spectre: it is also applied to the more active qualities of animated, intelligent beings; emphatically,—

Life, animation, vivacity; and hence, courage, energy, ardour, eagerness, vigour;—to the mind, the general or characteristic feelings or qualities of the mind, the temper, the disposition. Further, it is opposed to matter or body, or any gross qualities of body; and thence applied—

To any thing pure or purified, refined, æthereal; a pure, refined, immaterial being. See SPRITE.

Spirituos, as now usually, was also formerly, written, spiritous. Spiritedly is not uncommon.

And whanne it was evyn thei broughten to him many that hadden develis, and He castide out spiritis bi word. Wiclif. Matthew, c. 8.

When the euen was come, they brought vnto him many that were possessed with deuyls. And he cast oute the spiritis with a word.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

He gaf to hem power of unclene spiritis to cast hem out of men, & to heele every languor & sykenesse. Wiclif. Matthew, c. 10.

[He] gaue them power ouer vnclene sprites, to cast them out, & to heale al maner of sicknesses.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And Marye seyde; my soul magnifieth the Lord. And my spyr hath gladdid in God myn helthe.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 1.

And Mary sayde: My soule magnifieth ye Lord. And my spirite reioyseth in God my Sauour.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

But whanne the coumfortour schal come which I schal sende to ghoul fro the fadir, a spyr of treuthe which cometh of the fadir, he schal bere witnessyng of me. Wiclif. Jon, c. 15.

But when the comforter is come, whome I wyll sende vnto you from ye father, whiche is the spirite of truthe, which proceadeth of the father, he shall testifie of me. Bible, 1551. Ib.

For a beestli [animalis] man parseyueh not tho thingis that ben of the spyr of God, for it is foli to him. And he mai not undirstonde, for it is examyned goostli, but a *spyr*itual man demeth alle thingis.—Wiclif. 1 Cor. c. 2.

For the naturall man perceaueth not the thinges of the spirite of God. For they are but folyshnes vnto hym. Neither can he perceaueth them, because he is spiritually examined. But he that is spiritually, discusseh all thynges. Bible, 1551. Ib.

It is sowun a beestli bodi, it shal rise a spiritual bodi. if ther is a beestli bodi, ther is also a spiritual bodi. Wiclif. 1 Cor. c. 15.

It is sowen a naturall body, and ryseth a spirituall bodye. There is a naturall bodye and there is a spirituall bodye. Bible, 1551. Ib.

So feble were his spiritis, and so low, And changed so, that no man coude know His speche ne his vois, though men it herd. Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1372.

And trust wel, that in the name of thy neighbour thou shalt vnderstande the name of thy brother; for certes all we have on fader fleshy, and on moder; that is to say, Adam and Eve; and also our fader spirituel, that is to say, God of Heven.—Id. The Persones Tale.

Of euery wisdom the parfite The highe god of his spirite Yafe to men in erth here, Upon the forme and the matere, Of that he wolde make hem wise.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

And said, this daie venim is shadde In holy churche of temporall, Whiche medleth with the spirituall.—Id. Ib. b. iii.

Whither the party be poore spirited or proud, wyl somewhat appeare by hys delyte in hys own prayse. Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1190.

[Foure or fyue fonde freres] take vpon them selfe to preache and saye to the people of themselves, we bee the spiritualles, we seache the bottome of Goddes commaundement, we vnderstande the scripture in hys right sense. Id. Ib. p. 399.

Then if any ther be Of high or low degree Of the spiritually Or of the temporaltye. Skelton. Colin Clout's come home again.

So that vyce was accompted for small or none offence, the whiche reigned nat only in the temporaltye, but also in the spirituallye and hedes of the same. Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 82.

To the which [baby] she was moder bothe naturally, and spiritually, & welcōmed ye kinge hir lorde in right humble maner.—Id. Ib. c. 113.

When therefore the gracious spirations of the Holy Ghost are within thee, be thankful to the infinite munificence of that blessed spirit.—Bp. Hall. The Balm of Gilead.

Their fiery spirits, making th' ayre so fine, That they in flood were there, as well as wine. Chapman. Homer. Bacchus.

— On thee Impresst the effulgence of his glorie abides, Transfus'd on thee his ample Spirit rests. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

He ceas'd, and next him Moloc, scepter'd king Stood up, the strongest and the fiercest spirit That fought in heav'n; now fiercer by despair. Id. Ib. b. ii.

Thou Spirit who ledst this glorious Eremite Into the desert, his victorious field Against the spiritual foe, and broughtst him thence By proof of the undoubted Son of God, inspire, As thou art wont, my prompted song else mute. Id. Paradise Regained, b. i.

And as I wake, sweet music breathe Above, about, or underneath, Sent by some spirit to mortals good, Or th' unseen genius of the wood. Id. Il Penseroso, v. 151.

Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise (The last infirmity of noble mind) To scorn delights, and live laborious days. Id. Lycidas, v. 70.

— Or unsphere The spirit of Plato, to unfold What worlds, or what vast regions hold The immortal mind that hath forsook Her mansion in this fleshy nook.—Id. Il Penseroso, v. 88.

— The sum of all is this You have been unthankfull to him; and I crave The rigor of the law against you all. Cas. My royal spirited daughter! Beaum. & Fletch. The Lawes of Candy, Act v. sc. 1.

— For then did Polepat passe A lance at Damasus, whose helme, was made with cheeks of brasse, Yet had not proof enough; the pyle, drave through it, and his skulle; His braine in blood drown'd; and the man, so late so spiritfull, Fell now quite spirit-lesse to earth. Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xii.

The same [external profession] will this church of Laodicea hold on spiritlessly and lazily, with little life or zeal. More. On the Seven Churches, c. 9.

This is not a loving agreement, arising from oneness of spirit, but a dead stupidity, arguing a total spiritlessness. Leighton. Comment. on 1 Peter, c. 3.

— They grow Deep under ground, materials dark and crude, Of spiritous and fierie spume, till toucht With heav'n's ray, and temperd they shoot forth So beauteous, op'ning to the ambient light. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vi.

Each bone might through his body well be red, And every sinew seene, through his long fast: For nought he car'd his carcas long unfed; His mind was full of spirituall repast, And pyn'd his flesh to keep his body low and chaste. Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

We are commanded to fast, that we may pray with more spirituality, and with repentance.—Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 4.

For in the same degree that virgins live more spiritually than other persons, in the same degree is their virginity a more excellent state.—Id. Holy Living, p. 71.

That it may appear aiery and spirituous, & fit for the welcome of chearful guests: the principal difficulty will be in contriving the lights and stair-cases. Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 42.

Spirit in its primary signification, is breath: angel a messenger: and I doubt not, but if we could trace them to their sources, we should find, in all languages, the names, which stand for things that fall not under our senses, to have had their first rise from sensible ideas. Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 1.

Conceive one of each pronounced spiritally, the other vocally.—Holder. Elements of Speech.

In the intervals of my fits, I both began and made some progress in the promised discourse of Public *Spirit*edness. Boyle. Works, vol. vi. p. 48.

And yet our high-flown enthusiasts generally, (however calling themselves Christians) are such great spiritualists, and so much for the inward resurrection, as that they quite allegorize away, together with other parts of Christianity, the outward resurrection of the body; and indeed will scarcely acknowledge any future immortality, or life to come after death; their spirituality thus ending in Sadducism, and infidelity, if not at length in down-right atheism, and sensuality.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 795.

By thus spiritualizing (if I may so speak) the corporeal works of God, there may accrue to the pious soul uses far more valuable than they can afford the body. Boyle. Works, vol. v. p. 416.

These ancients say, that impure souls after their departure out of this body, wander here up and down, for a certain space, in their spirituous, vaporous, and airy body, appearing about sepulchres, and haunting their former habitations. Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 786.

The operation was not always, especially at first, so early manifest, as the spirituousness of the liquor made some expect.—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 379.

For it is not plain, that we derive the moisture and fluidity of our bodies, from the water that is in the universe, their consistency and solidity from the earth, their heat and activity from the fire, and their spiritosity from the air. Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 421.

And to God indeed this name is attributed to signifie his most simple nature, and his most powerfull energy; but to other substances of this kind it seemeth also assigned to imply the manner of their origine; because God did by a kind of spiration produce them.—Barrow, vol. ii. Ser. 34.

With all the warmth of a zealot in the cause of virtue, he [Juvenal] pours his majestic verse, and, amid the most spirited invective and the finest morality, emits many a luminous irradiation of poetry beautifully descriptive. Knox. Ess. 137.

Whether they are not growing vain and thoughtless, languid in their sentiments of true honour and virtue, infrequent or spiritless in their devotions, unmindful of past sins and future improvements, forgetful of their latter end. Secker, vol. ii. Ser. 23.

Nothing contributes more to prove the spirituality of man, than the exalted delight which he is able to derive from the operations of his intellect or his fancy. Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 61.

It seems, however, to be the decisive doctrine of scripture, that whatever may be the immediate state of our souls, our bodies, in some spiritualized form which we understand not, shall be again united to them.—Gilpin, vol. i. Ser. 22.

The Socinians, who boast to have interpreted scripture on the severest and justest laws of logic and criticism, have in this instance, as well as in many others, deviated more from these laws than the most licentious of the allegorists, or the wildest of the spiritualizers. Warburton. Divine Legation, b. ix. s. 2.

Fermented liquors brewed, and spirituous liquors distilled, not for sale, but for private use, are not in Great Britain liable to any duties of excise. Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 2.

SPIRT, or } With a slight variation of SPURT, v. } meaning from the Dut. Spruyten.
SPURT, n. } Surgere in altum, (Skinner.)
SPURTING, n. } Spurt, by a customary meta-SPURTL, v. } thesis, is the same word as sprout, the past part. of the A. S. Spryt-an, germinare, to shoot out, to cast forth, (Tooke.) To spurt,—
To shoot out, to eject or cast or throw forth.

If a man have a desire that both garlicke and onions may be kept long for his provision, their heads must be dipped and well plunged in salt water, warme: by this meanes indeed last they will longer without spurling. Holland. Plinie, b. xix. c. 6.

These nuts also are parched for to be ea'en: and within their belly they have in the mids a little chit or spurt, as if it were a navill.—Id. Ib. b. xv. c. 22.

Toads are sometimes observed to exclude or spurt out a dark and liquid matter behinde: which we have observed to be true, and a venemous condition there may be perhaps therein.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 13.

The brains and mingled blood were spirtled on the wall. Drayton.

When we come abreast of the head-lands, we find it calm; yet see the breeze curling on the water on both sides of us, and sometimes get a spurt of it to help us forward.—Dampier. Voyages, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 4.

At last I perceived two white specks in the middle of the boil, and squeezing it, two small white worms spurted out. Id. Ib. an. 1676.

The terraqueous globe particularly, which circumsolves at the rate of about 1000 miles an hour, would by the centrifugal force of that motion, be soon dissipated, and spirtled into the circumambient space, was it not kept together by this noble contrivance of the Creator, this natural inherent power; namely, the power of attraction, or gravity. Derham. Physico-Theology, b. i. c. 5. p. 34.

SPISS. } Fr. Epais; It. Spesso; Lat. Spissatus. } Spissus, which Vossius derives from Gr. Σπιδος, densus, obscurus.

Dense, thick, muddy, gross.

From his modest and humble charity, virtues which rarely cohabit with the swelling windiness of much knowledge, issued this spiss and dense, yet polish'd; this copious, yet concise treatise of the variety of languages.—Brerewood.

Neither sunne nor shade, ne yet the light of candle, causeth them [Emeraude] to change and loose their lustre: but contrariwise, as they ever send out their owne raies by little and little, so they entertaine reciprocally the visuall beames of our eyes; and for all the spissitude and thicknesse that they seeme to have, they admit gently our sight to pierce into their bottome.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxvii. c. 5.

The heaven here has always some cloud in his countenance, and from this grossness and spissitude of air proceeds the slow nature of the inhabitants.—Howell, b. i. s. 1. Let. 8.

Spissitude, attended with heat, grows inflammatory. Arbuthnot. Nature of Aliments, c. 6.

Without doubt, the images, which the spissated juice of poppy presents to the fancy, was one reason why this drug had a place in the ceremonial of the shows.

Warburton. Divine Legation, b. ii. s. 4.

SPLIT, v. } Also written Spet. A. S. Spit. SPLIT, n. } tan, spæt-an, spiwan; Dut. Speeu. SPLIT, n. } nien; Ger. Speyen; Sw. Spy. SPLIT, n. } See SPEW and SPADE.

To throw out, or cast out, to eject, to emit.

Whanne he hadde seid these thingis, he spette into the eerthe, and made clay of the spitel, and anointide the clay on his yghen.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 9.

As sone as he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground and made claye of the spette, and rubbed the claye on the eies of the blynde.—Bible, 1551. ib.

But it [flees] was kept alway with a dragoun, And many other marvailles vp and down, And with two buls maked all of bras, That spitten fire.

Chaucer. The Legend of Hipsiphile & Medea.

Their whole knowledge, by learning without the booke, was tied only to their tongue and lips, and never ascended up to the brain and head; and therefore was sone spittle out of the mouth againe.—Ascham. The Schole-master, b. ii.

The spattle of their tongues, their idle praiynges. Bale. Image, pt. iii.

And (I wyl as I say leaue) all hys deuelyshe lies which he spetteth and speweth oute vpon honest men. Sir T. More. Workes, p. 736.

And whether the head of a deer, that by age is more spitted, may be brought again to be more branched. Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 757.

Great Hector put downe quite, Laid flat in field, and with a crowne, of princes compassed; So stopt up, that he scarce could breathe; his minds sound habit fled, And he still spitting blood.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xv.

Some grandame, or religious aunt, whose joy Is from the cradle to take out the boy, In lustrall spittle her long finger dips, And exiates his forehead and his lips.

Beaumont. Persius, Sat. 2.

Cherry trees yeeld a glutinous and gummie humor, but elmes a thin liquor in manner of spittle. Holland. Plinie, b. xvi. c. 38.

Let there bee then either a small furrow rased along just through the midst of the shaddow with a spittle spade, or the point of some hooke.—Id. ib. b. xviii. c. 33.

No man could spit from him, without it [the tongue]; but would be forced to drivle, like some paraliticks or a fool: the tongue being as a stopcock to the air, till upon its sudain removal, the spittle is thereby driven away before it. Grew. Cosmo. Sacra, b. i. c. 5.

Mænas and Atys in the mouth were bred; And never hatch'd within the lab'ring head. No blood, from bitten nails, those poems drew, But churn'd, like spittle, from the lips they flew.

Dryden. Persius, Sat. 1.

After making a few boards to weather a spit that run out from an island on our lee, Captain Clerke made the signal for having discovered an harbour.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. i. c. 5.

On the west side of the cape there appeared to be a lagoon, and on the two spits which formed the entrance we saw an incredible number of the large birds that resemble the pelican.—Id. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 2.

VOL. II.

SPLIT, n. } A. S. Spitu; Dut. Spet, spit; Ger. Spit, v. } Spiss, which Wachter derives from spaden, fodere, fodicare, transfigere, (see SPADE,) to dig, to transpierce. It. Spiedo.

To pierce, to transpierce, to penetrate (with any thing sharp-edged or pointed.)

And *spyt*ed hym thorou out myd an yrene spyte.

R. Gloucester, p. 207.

Chat. Yes, by the masse; and if he came, bad me not sticke to spet hym.

Gammer Gurton's Needle, Act v. sc. 2.

Many a gossip's cup in my tyme have I tasted, And many a broche and spyt have I both turned and basted.—Id. Act i. sc. 1.

Such are not to bee liked that giue a man a shoulder of mutton, and breake his head with the spitte when they haue done.—Wilson. Arte of Rhetorique, p. 133.

Automedon, held, while he pieces cut To roast and boyle, right cunningly: then of a well fed swine,

A huge fat shoulder he cuts out, and spits it wondrous fine;

His good friend made a goodly fire: of which the force once past,

He laid the spit low, neare the coales, to make it browne at last.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. ix.

Who home strait led A five-yeares-old-male oxe; feld, slew, and flead: Gather'd about him; cut him vp with art; Spitted, and roasted; and his euery part Diuided orderly. Id. Ib. Odyssey, b. xix.

A spit he seiz'd, Just reeking from the fat surloin.

Somerville. Hobbinol, c. 2.

SPI TAL, or } Fr. Hospital, a hospital, a SPI TLE. } spittle; It. Spedale. Manifestly corrupted (say Junius and Skinner) from hospitale. See HOSPITAL.

A place for the reception and entertainment of strangers (hospites); for the care of the poor and needy, aged or infirm; for the care or cure of the sick or diseased.

Hospital and spittle are sometimes discriminated in their application.

He opened a secrete gate and out thereat Conueied her, that no man should espie, There to a village halfe a mile thereby, Delivered her in at the spittell hous, And daily sent her part of his almous.

Chaucer. Testament of Creseide.

At Pauls crosse or els where Openly at Westminster And saynt Mary spittel They set not by us a whistel.

Skelton. The Boke of Colin Clout.

The most part of those left-hand rascals, The very vomit, sir, of hospitals, Bridewels, and spittle-houses.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Nice Valour, Act iv. sc. 1.

She felt, or fancy'd in her fluttering mood, All the diseases which the spittles know, And sought all phisic which the shops bestow.

Thomson. Castle of Indolence, c. 1.

SPI TE, n. } Fr. Despit; It. Despetto; SPI TE, v. } Sp. Despecho; manifestly SPI TEFUL. } (says Junius) from despectus; SPI TEFULLY. } yet is inclined to derive our SPI TEFULNESS. } Eng. Spite from the Ger. SPI TOUS. } Spitten. (See DESPITE.) G. SPI TOUSLY. } Douglas says,—“I spitte for disspite to se thame spylt,” (i. e. the verses of Virgil spoil.) Spite, (met.) is—

Contempt, malignity; malign or malicious will or inclination; malicious mischief.

The first of hem is called Pride That other arrow next him beside, It was cleped Villanie, That arrow was with felonie Envenimed, and with spitous blame.

Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

This carpenter wend he were in despeire, And hent him by the sholders mightily, And shoke him hard, and cried spitously; “What Nicholas? what how man? loke adoun.”

Id. The Millers Tale, v. 3469.

Dame Nature hir had framde so perfite in hir kinde As not the spiteful man himself one fault in hir could finde.—Turberville. The Complaint.

But thus with ireful eyes, and face that shook with spite, Diana did begin.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

Consider eke, that spite aualleth naught.

Wyatt. To his Ladie.

Tyll at the length when Cupide spiede My scornfull wyll and spitefull vse, And how I past not who was tyed So that my self myght still liue lose.

The Louer that once disdained Loue, &c.

If the deuill shoulde himself sit and deuise to speke spightfully, what could he say more like hymself against this part of the holy sacramēt of penauce, thē he now speketh by ye mouth of this his holy spiritual mā.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 380.

When Perpenna Vento, being of the same faction, arrived in Spain full of money, and with a good number of souldiers, intending to make war in his behalf against Metellus, his souldiers fell out with him, and had none other talk in his camp but of Sertorius: the which spighted Perpenna to the heart, being proud and stately by means of his wealth and estate, coming of a noble house.—North. Plutarch, p. 492.

Cleo. I have found out a way shall bring me to him,

Spight of Photinus watches.

Beaum. & Fletch. The False One, Act ii. sc. 2.

And eke the verse of famous poets witt He does backbite, and spightfull poison spues From leprous mouth on all that ever writt: Such one vile Envy was.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 4.

A rude disorder'd rout he did espy Of men and women, that most spitefully Did one another throng.—Davies. On Dancing.

We did not question but we should either get a good commerce with the Indians, by such toys as we had purposely brought with us, or else force our way though their country, in spight of all their opposition.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1681.

What concord can there be between a spiteful and devilish spirit, and the foundation of all love and goodness? Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 2.

Now all the doctor's money's spent, His tenants wrong him in his rent; The farmers, spitefully combin'd, Force him to take his tithes in kind.—Swift. Horace, b. i.

It looks more like spitefulness and ill-nature than a diligent search after truth.—Keil. Against Burnet.

You will say, bad thoughts enter your mind, in spite of your best endeavour; they may: but if they are not entertained, with other guests, they are received coldly, they will never stay long.—Gilpin, vol. ii. Ser. 42.

But they plead, that avoiding censure is impossible; people will say ill-natured things, and make spiteful constructions; some will always be raising stories, and others believing them; and why should one give one's self trouble to prevent what after all cannot be prevented? Secker, vol. iii. Ser. 15.

SPLASH, v. } The English Splash (says Ihre) SPLASH, n. } is—to sprinkle or spatter with water or mud; the Sw. Plaska, to move the water noisily while washing. See TO PLASH.

Then answered 'squire Morley, “Pray get a calash, That in summer may burn, and in winter may splash; I love dirt and dust; and 'tis always my pleasure, To take with me much of the soil that I measure.”

Prior. Down-Hall.

They dance in a round, cutting capers and ramping; A mercy the ground did not burst with their stamping. The floor is all wet with leaps and with jumps, While the water and sweat spish-splash in their pumps.

Swift. Description of an Irish Feast.

Where the mock female shrew and hen-peck'd male Scoop'd rich contents from either copious pail, Call'd bursts of laughter from the roaring rout And dash'd and splash'd the filthy grains about.

Lloyd. Epistle to C. Churchill.

SPLAY, v. } i. e. To display; to unfold, SPLAY, n. } to expand, to extend, to spread SPLA'YING, n. } or stretch out, to open widely. As in the extracts from Pliny and Chapman; to open the parts which enclose.

The floures of many diuers hew, Upon hir stalkes gon for to splaye, And for to splay out hir leues in brede Againe the sunne.

Chaucer. The Complaint of the Black Knight.

The queen the peeping day Espied, and navy with splay'd sails depart The shore, and eke the port of vessels void.

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. iv.

And vntill the grayne of mustard seed beyng digged into the yearthe, did ferre and wyde spleygh his boughes abroode ouer Asia, ouer Afrike, & Europe.—Udall. Preface to Luke.

And the casting abroad of his hands, the splaying of Christ vpon the crosse.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 277.

Miso his wife [was] so handsom a beldam, that only her face and her splay-foot have made her accused for a witch.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

Unlesse you will take it for a splayed or gelded sow; as if Agammemnon would innuate, that as this sow [being splayed] is free from Venus, so had he never attempted the dishonour of Briseis.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xix. Comment.

Sowes also are splayed as well as camels, but two daies before, they be kept from meat: then hang they them by the forelegs for to make incision into their matrice, and to take forth their stones; and by this means they will sooner grow to be fat.—Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 51.

The doublers of a hare, or in a morning Salutes from a splay-footed witch, to drop Three drops of blood at th' nose just, and no more, Croaking of ravens, or the screech of owls Are not so boding mischief as thy crossing My private meditations.
Ford. The Broken Heart, Act v. sc. 1.

He [J. Evans] was the most perfect saturnine person that ever was beheld—he was of a middle stature, broad-forehead, beetle-brow'd, thick shouldered, flat-nos'd, full lips, down-look'd, of black curling stiff hair, and splay-footed.
Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. i.

Hadst thou but, Janus like, a face behind,
To see the people, what splay-mouths they make;
To mark their fingers, pointed at thy back.
Dryden. Persius, Sat. 1.

SPLEEN. Fr. Splénique, splénitique; SPLE'ENED. It. Splenético; Lat. Splen; Gr. Σπλην.
SPLE'ENFUL.
SPLE'ENLESS. The spleen is the supposed SPLE'ENY. seat of whims, humours, or un-SPLE'ENISH. certain tempers; of melan-SPLE'NETIC. choly, fretfulness, peevishness, SPLENE'TICAL. angriness.
SPLE'NICK. See the quotation from SPLE'NITIVE. Paley.
Spleenless is used by Chapman, (met.)—
Free from uncertainty or change; even, equal, steady.

Spleened, (Arbuthnot,) deprived of the spleen.

Nowe ouer this for to wite,
As it is in phisike write,
Of liuer, of longe, of galle, of splene,
Thei all vnto the herte bene Seruantes.
Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Vnto this cawle, is fastned the splene on the left side of the belly just over-against the liver.
Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 25.

Duke. Pry'thee, no more, Ferentes: by the faith
I owe to honour, thou hast made me laugh
Beside my spleen.—Ford. Love's Sacrifice, Act i. sc. 2.

Now will I hence to seeke my lonely Moore,
And let my spleenful sonnes this Trull defloure.
Shakespeare. Titus Andronicus, Act ii. sc. 3.

In meane time, flew our ships; and straight we fetcht
The Sirens Ile; a spleenelesse wind, so stretcht
Her wings to waft vs, and so vrg'd our keele.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xii.

— I know her for
A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to Our cause, that she should lye i' th' bosome of Our hard-rul'd king.—Shakes. Hen. VIII. Act iii. sc. 2.

But here yourselves you must engage,
Somewhat to cool your spleenish rage,
Your grievous thirst and to assuage,
That first you drink this liquor.—Drayton. Nymphidia.

A lawlesse paunch! the cause of much despight,
Through raunging of a currish appetite,
When spleenish morsels cram the gaping maw,
Withouten diets care or trencher law.
Bp. Hall. Satires, b. iv. Sat. 4.

I have received much benefit by yours [advice], touching my splenetical infirmity.—Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 368.

Egre. Some splenitive youths now, that had never seen more than the country smoak, will grow in choler; it would shew fine in us.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Elder Brother, Act iv. sc. 1.

Spleen to mankind his envious heart possest,
And much he hated all, but most the best.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ii.

Animals spleened grow salacious.—Arbuthnot.

The spleenful pigeons never could create
A prince more proper to revenge their hate.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

And Horace seems to have purged himself from those splenetic reflections in those odes and epodes, before he undertook the noble work of satires, which were properly so called.—Dryden. Juvenal, Ded.

If highly born, intolerably vain,
Vapours and pride by turns possess her brain,
Now gayly mad, now sourly splenetic;
Freakish when well, and fretful when she's sick.
Pope. The Wife of Bath.

This daughter silently lours; the other steals a kind look at you; a third is exactly well behaved; and a fourth a splenetic.—Tatler.

The splenick vein has divers cells opening into it near its extremities in humane bodies, but in quadrupeds the cells open into the trunks of the splenick veins.
Ray. On the Creation, pt. ii.

The famous Burleigh used to say, that "he never cared to see the treasury swell like a disordered spleen, when the other parts of the commonwealth were in a consumption."
Bolingbroke. History of England, Let. 14.

It is possible in my opinion, that the spleen may be merely a stuffing, a soft cushion to fill up a vacancy or hollow, which, unless occupied, would leave the package loose and unsteady; for, supposing that it answers no other purpose than this, it must be vascular, and admit of a circulation through it, in order to be kept alive, or be part of a living body.—Paley. Natural Theology, c. 11.

But wayward Fortune takes a spleenful joy
The wisest schemes of mortals to destroy.
Cambridge. The Scribleriad, b. vi.

I think I can confidently declare, that I was not influenced by splenetic or envious motives, when I attacked the pride, folly, and wickedness of some among the nominal great, who justify every enormity, under the name of fashionable indulgence.—Knox. Ess. 175.

SPLE'NDENT. Fr. Splendeur; It. Splen-
SPLE'NDID. dere, splendido; Sp. Esplen-
SPLE'NDIDLY. dente; Lat. Splendens, past SPLE'NDIDNESS. part. of splendere, to shine.
SPLE'NDOUR. See RESPLENDENT.
SPLE'NDOROUS. Shining, bright, brilliant, SPLE'NDIDIOUS. glittering; illustrious, conspicuous; magnificent.

Splendrous and splendidious rest upon the authority of Drayton.

A full moone having about her a round circle, sheweth that there will bee wind from that part, where the said circle is most splendant.—Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 35.

Fame is a winged warrior they beheld,
With semblant fierce and furious looke that stood,
And in his left hand had a splendant sheild,
Wherewith he couered safe their chieftain good.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. viii. s. 84.

So as those chanteresses, unless they be such as perhaps delight as much in their wing, as in their voice, may live long among so good provisions, and room, before they know that they are prisoners; reducing often to my memory that conceit of the Roman stoick, who in comparison of his own free contemplations, did think divers great and splendent fortunes of his time, little more than commodious captivi-ties.—Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 66.

— Let us not then pursue
By force impossible, by leave obtain'd
Unacceptable, though in heav'n, our state
Of splendid vassalage, but rather seek
Our own good from ourselves.—Milton. Par. Lost, b. ii.

— We may admire
The blaze and splendour, but not handle fire
B. Jonson. Elegy on Lady Anne Pawlet.

Millions of spirits for his fault amerc't
Of heav'n, and from eternal splendors flung
For his revolt.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

Before him as in splend'rous arms he rode,
Whilst his courveting courser seem'd to scorn
To touch the earth whereon he proudly trod.
Drayton. The Battle of Agincourt.

Thunder and lightning let him down the air,
Trumpets celestial sounding as he came,
Which struck the people with astounding fear,
Himself invested in a splendorous flame.
Id. Moses his Birth & Miracles, b. iii.

Celestial brightness seized on his face,
That did the wond'ring Israelites amaze,
When he returned from that sovereign place,
His brows encircled with splendidious rays.
Id. Id.

The question is not put, how far extends
His piety, but what he yearly spends:
Quick to the business; how he lives, and eats;
How largely gives; how splendidly he treats.
Dryden. Juvenal, Sat. 3.

Their liveries, whose gaudiness evinces not the footman's deserts, but his lord's splendidness, and in men's esteem entitles the lacquey to nothing but a good master.
Boyle. Works, vol. vi. p. 18.

The Pelian javelin, in his better hand,
Shot trembling rays, that glitter'd o'er the land;
And on his breast the beamy splendours shone
Like Jove's own lightning, or the rising sun.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xxii.

— Th' Iberian realm
Could boast no purer breast, no sprightlier mind,
No race more splendent, and no form so fair.
Shenstone. Love & Honour.

All the women appeared very splendidly dressed after the Kamschadale fashion.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. vi. c. 2.

We see through all this splendid obscurity, that something grand is approaching. The several shades of darkness by degrees give way. Day comes on more and more—till at length the sun rises in all its glory; and opening into its fullest splendor, surrounds the earth from one end of it to the other.—Gilpin, vol. i. Ser. 1.

SPLENT, or } Dut. Splenter, splinter, splet-
SPLINT, n. } ter; Ger. Splitter; Sw. Splitter; SPLINT, v. } Dut. Splyten, splinteren; Ger.
SPL'INTER, n. } Spleissen, to split.
SPL'INTER, v. } A splint,—a part severed or broken off, a fragment; a piece or part; a segment or section, a cutting.

To splint or splinter,—to sever into broken pieces or fragments; also to support or secure by pieces affixed; to prop or support.

Splint, (in a horse,)—a swelling hard as a splint of wood.

Splinter'd, in Shakespeare, is by more editors altered to splinted.

When the wood is cut into many clefts and splents, fresh and green, they are heaped up on high, and hollow, in manner of a furnace or chimney.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvi. c. 6.

Touching Epaminondas, he was brought yet alive into his tent: howbeit the physitians and surgeons being called together to dress him; they all agreed, that so soon as ever they pulled out the head and splint of the dart out of his body, he must needs die.—North. Plutarch, p. 931.

So many intire tenements, like splinters, have flown out of the materials thereof. [Theobalds.]
Fuller. Worthies. Hertfordshire.

The broken rancour of your high-swolne hates,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and ioyn'd together,
Must gently be preseru'd, cherisht, and kept.
Shakespeare. Rich. III. Act ii. sc. 2.

No vow, dear sir, tie not my fair belief
To such strict terms: those men have broken credits,
Loose and dismemb'red faiths (my dear Antonio)
That splinter em with vows: am I not too bold?
Beaum. & Fletch. The Maid in the Mill, Act i. sc. 3.

— And with the fearful shock,
Their spears in splinters flew, their beavers both unlock.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 12.

A man may be in the regions of death, before he perceives his head to ache; and instead of a staff in his hand, may have a splinter in his elbow.
Bp. Taylor, vol. iii. Ser. 1.

It, even when crush'd, a number did confound;
To venge the whole, each splinter gave a wound.
Stirling. Jonathan.

But all the ancients, after the seventh day, did use splints;
and so have I where they might safely be used: for they not only keep the member steady, but streight.
Wiseman. Surgery, b. vii. c. 1.

Therefore be not disturbed in your thoughts, but, having taken out the bullet, or pieces of splinters, dress it up as a contused wound.—Id. Ib. b. vi. c. 3.

From worldly hopes and false dependance freed,
I'll seek no safety from a splinter'd reed.
Harte. The Courtier & Prince.

Loud shrieks of horror through the fleet rescound,
Bursts the torn cordage, rattle far around
The splinter'd yard-arms.
Mickle. Lusiad, b. vi.

SPLIT, v. } See SPLENT. Dut. Splyten; SPL'ITTER. } Ger. Spleissen, spalten.
SPLU'TTER, v. } To sever, or separate into parts; to part, to divide, to break, to burst, to cleave, to rive asunder.

Splutter (not an uncommon word in vulgar speech) may be,—to split or splitter; otherwise, to splutter.

& if a clerke men founde in his londe that reft,
Thorgh slauhter or wounde, or thorgh other theft,
Men suld schewe his guilt in the courte of lay,
& ther be saued or splite, bot Thomas said him nay.
R. Brunne, p. 129

— He strait inform'd a lute,
Put neck, and frets to it; of which a sute
He made of split quills; in equall space
Impos'd vpon the neck; and did embrace
Both backe, and bosome.

Chapman. Homer. Hymne to Hermes.

This once resolv'd, the peasants were enjoin'd
Sere-wood, and firs, and dodder'd oaks to find.
With sounding axes to the grove they go,
Fell, split, and lay the fuel on a row.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

And when cold winter split the rocks in twain,
And ice the running rivers did restrain,
He stripp'd the bears-foot of its leafy growth,
And, calling western winds, accus'd the spring of sloth.

Id. Virgil. Georgics, b. iv.

How should we rejoice, if, like Judas the first,
Those *split*ters of parsons in sunder should burst!—Swift.

Shem being yet alive, and his family not split into its branches, it was natural, and agreeable to the usage of the prophetic style, that the future blessings of the offspring should be referred to the ancestor.

Bp. Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 17.

SPLUTTER. See SPLIT.

SPOIL, n. } See DESPOIL. Fr. Spolier;
SPOIL, v. } It. Spogliare; Lat. Spolium, SPOILER. } from the A. S. verb Spillan, pri-SPOILFUL. } vare, (Tooke.) See TO SPILL.
SPOILATION. } Vossius derives the Lat. Spolium

either from σπολη, Æolic for στολη, amictus, since spoliare is vestem detrahere, to draw off the clothing; or from σπυλαειν, to plunder.

Spoil, n.—that which is taken away; plundered, or pillaged; the prize, pillage, plunder, booty. To spoil,—

To seize or take, to deprive or bereave, to destroy, to waste, to perish; to deprive or bereave (sc.) of its use or usefulness; to harm, to injure, to mar, to corrupt.

No man may go into a strong mannes hous and take away his vessels, but he bynde first the stronge man and thanne he schal spoil his hous.—Wiclif. Mark, c. 3.

No man can enter into a stronge mannes house, and take away his goodes, excepte he first bynde that stronge man, and then spoyl his house.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

If netheles we ben foundun clothid and not nakid, for whi
we that ben in this tabernacle sorowen withynne, and ben huyed for that that we wolen not be spoilid, but be clothid aboue, that thilk thing that is deedli be sopun up of lyf.

Wiclif. 2 Corynth, c. 5.

Ay me, what one? that Hector how vnlike,
Which erst return'd clad with Achilles spoiles?

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

He entred the terytory of seynt Edmund, and wasted and spoyled the countree.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 200.

He, like an adder lurking in the weedes,
His wandring thought in deepe desire does sleepe,
And his frayle eye with spoyl of beauty feedes.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. b. 5.

He that lost all shall find a treasure, and he that spoiled him shall be found naked and spoiled by the destroyer.

Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 2.

There are many good things which are wholly spoiled if they do but touch the tongue; they are spoiled with speaking; such as is, the sweetest of all christian graces, humility, and the noblest actions of humanity, the doing favours, and acts of kindness.—Id. vol. i. Ser. 24.

There the sad mother with her tender childe
Doth teare her tresses loose, complaine, and fie,
And there the spoiler (by her amber haire)
Drawes to his lust the virgin chaste and faire.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xix. s. 30.

But thou [my sonne] too long, by no meanes erre,
Thy goods left free for many a spoilfull guest;
Lest they consume some, and diuide the rest.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. iii.

The spoils were distinguished by two names, being either taken from the dead, and termed σκυλαα, or from the living, which they called λαφυρα; they consisted of whatever moveables belonged to the conquered, whose whole right and title, by the law of arms, passed to the conquerors.

Potter. Antiquities of Greece, vol. ii. b. iii. c. 12.

He combated this strong one, (this mighty and dreadful foe of ours,) and baffled him, and bound him, and disarmed him, (taking away, the whole armour in which he trusted) and spoiled him, (rifled all his baggage, bare away all his instruments of mischief.—Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 42.

From a principle of gratitude I adhered to the coalition:
my vote was counted in the day of battle, but I was overlooked in the division of the spoil.

Gibbon. Memoirs of his own Life, p. 164.

By the slow-dripping urn of Styx she swore,
The prophet's peaceful mansions evermore
From those rapacious spoilers should be free.

West. The Story of Phineus.

Spoilation is an injury done by one clerk or incumbent to another, in taking the fruits of his benefice without any right thereunto, but under a pretended title.

Blackstone. Commentaries, vol. iii. b. iii. c. 7.

SPOKE. See SPEAK.

SPOKE. Ger. Speichen, radii rotæ, (Wachter.)
The radii of a wheel; the steps of a ladder;
formed, fixed, like spikes.

The beam and axletree of massie gold:
On silver spokes the golden fellies rold.

Sandys. Ovid, b. ii.

Thus do your airs echo o'er

The notes and anthems of the spheres,

And then whole concert back restore,

As if earth too would bless heav'n's ears:

But yet the spokes by which they scal'd so high,

Gamble hath wisely laid of ut re mi.

Lovelace. On Lyric Poems. Set by Gamble.

SPONDEE. } Lat. Spondeus; Gr. Σπον- SPONDA'ICK. } δαος, in metre, a foot of two SPONDA'ICAL. } syllables, from σπονδη, libatio, because used in making libations.

Spondiasm is used by Holland in his translation of Plutarch, of music.

Nor is't long since, they [iambicks] did with patience take

Into their birth-right, and for fitness sake,

The steadie spondees; so themselves doe beare

More slow, and come more weightie to the eare.

B. Jonson. Horace. Art of Poetrie.

The nimble dactyl striving to out-go

The drawling spondees pacing it below.

The lingring spondees labouring to delay

The breathless dactyls with a sudden stay.

Bp. Hall. Satires, b. i. Sat. 6.

Yet all the feet whereon these measures go,

Are only spondees, solemn, grave, and slow.

Davies. On Dancing.

Pythagoras caused the musician to change the tones;
and so by a heavy, grave, spondaical music he presently appeased their fury.—Ferrand. On Love, Melancholy, p. 315.

The learned languages have certainly a great advantage of us, in not being tied to the slavery of any rhyme; and were less constrained in the quantity of every syllable, which they might vary with spondees or dactyls.

Dryden. Letter to Sir R. Howard.

This at least was the power of the spondaick and dactyl-lick harmony, but our language can reach no eminent diversity of sound.—Rambler, No. 94.

SPO'NDYLE, n. Lat. Spondylus; Gr. Σπον- δυλος; Fr. Spondilles,—

The knuckles or turning joints of the chine, back or neck bone, (Cotgrave.)

The first spondyle or turning joint in the chine of a dragon doth promise an easie and favourable accesse unto the presence of princes and great states.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxix. c. 4.

— All his joints

Do crack, as if his limbs were hid with points:

His whole frame slackens; and a kind of rack

Runs down along the spondils of his back.

B. Jonson. The Sad Shepherd, Act ii. sc. 2.

SPONGE, or

SPUNGE, n.

SPONGE, v.

SPO'NGY.

SPO'NGIOUS.

SPO'NGINESS.

SPO'NGER.

Fr. Esponge, espongieux, or spongieux; It. Spugna; Sp.
Esponja; Dut. Spongie; Lat.
Spongia; Gr. Σπογγια, σπογγ- γος.

To sponge, (met.)—to draw or drain; to absorb or sup up;

to extract, to exhaust.

And oon ran and fullide a sponge with vynegre and puttide about a reed and gaf to him to drinke.

Wiclif. Mark, c. 15.

And one ran & fylled a sponge ful of vineger, and put it on a rede, and gaue him to dryncke.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Of sponges, we find three sorts: the first thicke, exceeding hard, and rough; and this is called tragos: a second not all so thick, and somewhat softer; and that is named manon: the third is fine and yet compact, wherewith they make sponges to cleanse and scoure withall, and this is tearmed achilleum.—Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 15.

— Then with a sponge he drest

His face all over, necke and hands, and all his hairie breast.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xviii.

So that, except betweene the words of translation and the minde of scripture it selfe, there bee contradiction, euery little difference should not seeme an intolerable blemish necessarily to be sponged out.

Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. v. § 19.

1795

Old Proteus hath been known to leave his finny herd,
And in their sight to sponge his foam-bespawled beard.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 2.

I saw Joues bird, the Roman eagle wing'd
From the spongy south, to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sun-beames.

Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act ii. sc. 4.

For which purpose, spongeous it [the lights] is and full of hollow pipes within.—Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 25.

Paper participates in some sort of the characters of the countrymen which make it: the Venetian being neat, subtile, and courtlike; the French light, slight and slender;
the Dutch thick, corpulent, and gross; not to say sometimes also charta bibula, sucking up the ink with the sponginess thereof.—Fuller. Worthies. Cambridgeshire.

Consider the sponginess and laxness of the brain, and thinness of the tunicles in the little arteries that are there.

More. Immortality of the Soul, pt. iii. b. ii. c. 9.

How came such multitudes of our own nation at the beginning of that monstrous (but still surviving and successful) rebellion, in the year 1641, to be sponged of their plate and money, their rings and jewels, for the carrying on of the schismatical, dissenting, king-killing cause?

South, vol. i. Ser. 12.

Now what man in his wits would keep such a company of devouring lusts about him, that are perpetually sponging upon his estate, and eating the bread out of his children's mouths.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. iii. c. 2.

So saying, with a sudden blow
He laid the noxious vagrant low.

Crush'd in his luxury and pride,

The sponger on the public dy'd.

Gay. The Man, the Cat, &c.

The cod it self or shell is almost half an inch thick;
neither spongy nor woody, but of a substance between both,
brittle, yet harder than the rind of a lemon.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1682.

Colbert made the most of all these advantageous circumstances, and while he filled the national sponge, he taught his successors how to squeeze it.

Bolingbroke. On History, Let. 7.

Some of the smaller boats are made of the bread-fruit tree, which is a light spongy wood, and easily wrought.

Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 18.

SPO'NSOR. } Fr. Sponseur; Lat. Sponsor.
SPO'NSIONAL. } See SPONTANEOUS.

One who gages or pledges himself, promises or gives surety for another. See the quotations.

And hence, Heb. vii. 22, our mediator is called the sponsor, or surety of a better covenant.

Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 4.

It is evident that he is righteous, even in that representative and sponsional person he put on.—Leighton, Ser. 5.

The church demands the security of sponsors, who are intended, if the infant should be left an orphan, or neglected by its parents, to see it properly instructed in the advantages promised, and the conditions required.

Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 23.

SPONTANEOUS. } Fr. Spontane; It.
SPONTANEOUSLY. } Spontanea; Lat. Spon-

SPONTANEOUSNESS. } taneus; from sponte, SPONTANE'ITY. } voluntarily, willingly, of free will; from the Gr. Σπονδη, libatio; a voluntary offering, sanctioned by a libation.

Voluntary, willing, of free will or accord; self-willing, self-moving, self-acting.

Hence this divine matter will appear to our mind as un-capable of spontaneous motion and of free cogitations and perceptions unimpressed from corporeal motion as the pig of lead and wedge of gold there mentioned.

More. Immortality of the Soul, b. ii. c. 1.

It is certain likewise, that matter or body as such, hath no power of moving it self freely or spontaneously neither, by will or appetite.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 667.

It is impossible to resolve perception, phantasie, memory, the sagacities and instincts of brutes, the spontaneousness of many of their animal motions into those principles, [the modification of matter, or the natural motion thereof.]

Hale. Origin of Mankind, p. 49.

By spontaneity is meant inconsiderate action (or else nothing is meant by it).—Hobbs. Of Liberty & Necessity.

Where ever-during snows, perpetual shades
Of darkness, would congeal their livid blood,

Did not the Arctic tract spontaneously yield

A cheering purple berry, big with wine,

Intensely fervent.

J. Philips. Cider, b. ii.

The soil of the island is truly luxuriant, producing fruits of many kinds spontaneously.—Anson. Voyages, b. i. c. 5.

The first so binds the will, that things foreknown
By spontaneity, not choice, are done.
Dryden. The Cock and the Fox.

As the inquiry is of the highest importance, and spontaneity presents itself, it is to this that I shall devote the remainder of the present discourse.
Bp. Horsley, vol. ii. Ser. 17.

SPONTOON. Fr. Esponton; It. Spontone; Sp. Espontone.

A sharp pointed (ponto or punto) instrument.
A large bodkin was called—pontone.

They have no defensive armour; but, besides their weapons, the chiefs carried a staff of distinction, in the same manner as our officers do the spontoon.
Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 10.

About thirty or forty men, each armed with a spontoon, a bow, and arrows, stood drawn up on a rising ground close by the village.—Id. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 9.

SPOOM. See SPUME.

SPOON, n. Dut. Spaen. The A. S. Spon,
SPOON, v. Somner calls—a chip or splinter SPOONAGE. of wood; and a spoon may have SPOONFUL. been a broad splint used for lading; now improved by scooping or hollowing out the end.

Therefore behoveth him a ful long spone,
That shal ete with a fend.
Chaucer. The Squieres Tale, v. 10,846.

Being shot past the cape, we presently tooke in our sayles, which only God had preserved unto vs; and when we were shot in betweene the high lands, the wind blowing trade, without any inch of sayle, we spooned before the sea.
Hackluyt. Voyages, vol. iii. p. 349.

[I would wene] y^t one sponeful of good workes should no more kill y^e soule, thē a potager of good wurts shuld kill & destroy y^e bodi.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 617.

Ser. Faith sir, here are no oats to be got, unless you'll have 'em in porridge: the people are so mainly given to spoon-meat.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Scornful Lady, Act ii. sc. 1.

Her toothlesse chappes disgrac't her tongue
In telling of a tale,
And sucke she might a teat for teeth,
And spoonage too did faile.
Warner. Albion's England, b. ii. c. 10.

One peculiar propertie hath the wild olive, that a spooneful of the decoction of their leaves with honey, is given with successe to them that spit and reach up blood.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxiii. c. 4.

Because our pease were all eaten, and our flour almost spent, we cut our beef in small bits after 'twas boild, and boiled it again in water, thicken'd with a little flour, and so eat it altogether with spoons.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1675.

Captain Swan, though with much reluctance, gave way to a small enlargement of our commons, for now we had not about 10 spoonfuls of boild maiz a man, once a day.
Id. Ib. an. 1686.

SPORADICAL. Gr. Σποραδικος, from σπειρειν, spargere, dispergere, to spread, to disperse.

For the application to disease, see the quotations.

These I call intercurrent or sporadick, because they happen at any time, when epidemics rage.
Sydenham. Works, c. 1. p. 3.

A sporadical disease is—what in a particular season affects but few people.—Arbuthnot.

SPORT, n. SPORT, v. SPO'RTFUL. SPO'RTFULLY. SPO'RTFULNESS. SPO'RTINGLY. SPO'RTIVE. SPO'RTIVELY. SPO'RTIVENESS. SPO'RTLESS. SPO'RTLING, n. SPO'RTSMAN. Hickes, (Dict. Islandicum, p. 88.) Isl. Spott, ludibrium; A. Sport, ludibrium; Dut. Spot; Ger. Spott, ludus, lus; Fr. Déport, disport, sport, pastime, recreation, pleasure, (Cotgrave;) It. Disporto. Skinner suggests —jucunde se portare; i. e. gerere, "to bear himself pleasantly;" or—se a laboribus deportare, (i. e.) subducere, labores intermittere, interquiescere, to forbear, to withdraw from, to intermit labour or toilsome occupations;—becoming, according to this latter suggestion, nearly equivalent to the verb To Divert; to turn away, to withdraw from severe study, from painful or unpleasing subjects; and then—

To amuse, to cheer, to please, (sc.) with play, or playful games or occupations; to play, to frolic, to joke or jest; to be playfully gay, joyous or mirthful.

Of slouth, there is no man ashamed but we take it as for a laughynge matter and a sporte.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 102.

And [this] unfathered lady [Iole] could sportfully put on the lion's skin upon her own fair shoulders, and play with the club with her own delicate hands.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

He got out of the river and shaking off the water (as great men do their friends) now he had no farther cause to use it, inweeded himself so, as the ladies lost the farther marking his sportfulness.—Id. Ib. b. ii.

And upon garlands we are set,
With wreaths and posies sporting.
Drayton. Muses' Elysium, Nymph. 6.

Bids thee leaue these, and with her soueraigne grace,
Here on this grasse-plot, in this very place
To come and sport.
Shakespeare. The Tempest, Act iv. sc. 1.

Sporting the lion ramp'd, and in his paw
Dandl'd the kid.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

And, them before, the fry of children yong
Their wanton sportes and childish mirth did play,
And to the maydens sounding tymbrels song
In well attuned notes a ioyous lay.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 12.

Who says these Romish pageants been to high
To be the scorne of sportful poesy?
Bp. Hall. Satires, b. iv. Sat. 7.

When sadnesse dejects me, either I countermeine it with another sadnesse, or I kindle squibbs about me again, and flie into sportfulness and company.
Donne. Letter to Sir H. G. p. 288.

For the question you there put, you do it I suppose but sportingly.—Hammond. Works, vol. i. p. 193.

Sad language fits sad lookes; stuff'd menacings,
The angry brow; the sportive, wanton things;
And the severe, speech ever serious.
B. Jonson. Horace. Art of Poetrie.

One of thy tressed curls there falling down,
As loth to be imprison'd in thy crown,
I saw the soft air sportively to take it,
And into strange and sundry forms to make it.
Drayton. The Duke of Suffolk to the French Queen.

Shall I conclude her to be simple, that has her time to begin, or refuse sportiveness as freely as I have?
Walton. Angler.

Out of her window close she blushing peeps;
Her weeping eyes in pearled dew she steeps;
Casting what sportless nights she ever led.
P. Fletcher. Piscatory Eglogues, Egl. 7.

And, while the robes imbibe the solar ray,
O'er the green mead the sporting virgins play (Their shining veils unbound.) Along the skies
Tost, and relost, the ball incessant flies.
They sport, they feast; Nausicaa lifts her voice,
And, warbling sweet, makes earth and heaven rejoice.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. vi.

In areas vary'd with mosaic art,
Some whirl the disk, and some the javelin dart,
Aside, sequester'd from the vast resort,
Antinous sate spectator of the sport.—Id. Ib. b. iv.

When sportful coots run skipping o'er the strand.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

Now there is nothing more surprizing in its own nature than to see or hear a serious thing sportfully represented, and dress'd up in an antick and ridiculous disguise.
Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 3.

If a history so circumstantiated as that is, shall be resolved into fable or parable, no history whatever can stand secure, but a wide door will be opened to the roving of sportive wit, or wanton fancy.
Waterland. Works, vol. vi. p. 16.

Where the linnets sit and sing,
Little sportlings of the spring.
Swift. On a Lady's Spaniel.

Ye days, that balmy influence shed,
When sweet childhood, ever brightly,
In paths of pleasure sported lightly,
Whither, ah whither are ye fled!—Beattie. Ode to Hope.

We had a pleasant day, and the evening brought us all on board; myself and party met with good sport.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 4.

—So sportive is the light
Shot through the boughs, it dances as they dance,
Shadow and sunshine intermingling quick,
And dark'ning and enlight'ning, as the leaves
Play wanton, ev'ry moment, ev'ry spot.
Cowper. Task, b. i.

When again the lambkins play,
Pretty sportlings full of May.—Philips. To Miss Carteret.

Gray dawn appears; the sportsman and his train
Speckle the bosom of the distant plain.
Cowper. Progress of Error.

SPORTULE. } Fr. Sportule; It. Spòrtula; SPO'RTULARY. } Sp. Esportula; Lat. Sportula, sporta; Gr. Σπυρίς, a basket; applied to the dole or alms carried away in the basket. Generally—Sportule,—alms; sportulary, eleemosynary.

The bishops, who consecrated the ground, had a spill or sportule from the credulous laity.—Ayliffe. Parergon.

Hereupon it is, that these sportulary preachers are fain to sooth up their many masters, and are so gaged with the fear of a starving displeasure, that they dare not be free in the reprehension of the daring sins of their uncertain benefactors; as being charmed to speak either placentia or nothing.
Bp. Hall. Cases of Conscience, Dis. 3. c. 7.

SPOT, n. Dut. Spotte. Junius says,— SPOT, v. perhaps from to spatter, con-SPO'TLESS. spurcare, to be foul, (see SPO'TLESSNESS. SPATTER.) Tooke affirms SPO'TTY. spot to be the past part. of spit; A. S. Spittan, to throw out; spot—the matter spitten, spate or spitted. And see SPOUT, and SPECK.

A speck,—a blot, a stain; (met.)—a mark of impurity; surface marked or denoted; a specific place.

Her gite was gray and ful of spotles blake.
Chaucer. The Test. of Creseide.

Syth that al the iustice of man is as the scripture sayeth like a fowle spotted clowte, and that y^e sterres are not clene in the syght of God.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 740.

This your sedition is not onely most odious, but also most horrible, that hath spotted the whole countrie with such a staine of ydlennesse.—Sir John Cheeke. Hurt of Sedition.

A hill most fit for such a master,
A spotless mind of alabaster.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Wyld beastes in yron yokes he would compell;
The spotted panther, and the tusked bore,
The pardale swift.—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 6.

Through cruell knife that her deare heart did kerve:
And now she is with her upon the way
Marching in lovely wise, that could deserve
No spot of blame, though spite did oft assay
To blot her with dishonor of so faire a prey.
Id. Ib. b. iv. c. 1.

Sweete Love devoyd of villanie or ill,
But pure and spotles, as at first he sprong
Out of th' Almightyes bosome, where he nests.
Id. The Teares of the Muses.

Lord, if thou look for a spotlessness, whom wilt thou look upon!—Donne. Devotions.

—The broad circumference
Hung on his shoulders like the moon, whose orb
Through optic glass the Tuscan artist views
At ev'ning from the top of Pesole,
Or in Valdarno, to descry new lands,
Rivers or mountains in her spotty globe.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

Thus he that has an idea made up of barely the simple ones of a beast with spots, has but a confused idea of a leopard; it not being thereby sufficiently distinguished from a lynx, and several other sorts of beasts that are spotted.
Locke. Of Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 29.

This brilliant is so spotless, and so bright,
He needs no foil, but shines by his own proper light.
Dryden. The Character of a Good Parson.

Yet cherish'd there, beneath the shining waste,
The furry nations harbour: tipt with jet,
Fair ermines, spotless as the snows they press.
Thomson. Winter.

Two water snakes swam by the ship: they were beautifully spotted, and in every respect like land snakes, except that their tails were broad and flat.
Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 2.

Few men are so spotless in their characters as not to afford some scope for evil report among those who examine their actions and characters with the searching and unwinking eye of envy.—Knox. Ser. 17.

SPOUSE, n. See ESPOUSE.
SPOUSE, v. Fr. Espouse; It. Spòso; SPOU'SAGE. Sp. Esposo, esposa; Lat. Sponsus, from spondere, and SPOU'SAL, adj. this from the Gr. Σπενδευ, SPOU'SAL, n. to make libations; and thus SPOU'SESS. —spondere, to pledge, or SPOU'SING, n. sanction a pledge or secu-SPOU'SELESS. rity (by making libations).
SPOUSE-BREACH. Spouse,— SPOUSE-HEAD.

One joined to another under certain pledges or sureties—man and woman to each other, joined or united in marriage or wedlock; married, wedded.

Spouse-breach,—(a compound of a foreign with a native word) has given place to—adultery. And see WED-LOCK.

And this mayde y spoused was of so riche blode.
R. Gloucester, p. 13.

Endleue hondred ger and fifti and tuo,
After that God on erthe com, this spousing was ido.
Id. p. 466.

— He the emperoure's dogter in spoused thus nome.
Id. p. 66.

And y crowned hym sulue kyng thoru the quene rede,
And huld hyre in spousbruche in vyl fiesse's dede.
Id. p. 220.

A fol womman in spousbreche he huld vnder ys wyf.
Id. p. 279.

& led hir vnto France, spoused forto be.—R. Brunne, p. 30.

Kyng William of Scotland did his douhter spouse
To the erle of Boloyne.—Id. p. 210.

Whan thei were trouth plight, & purueied the spousage,
Helianore forth hir dight to Rouhan hir menage.
Id. p. 153.

And Abraam nat hardy. ones to letten hym
Ne for brightnesse of here beaute. here spouse to be by knowe.
Piers Plouhman, p. 215.

The architriclyn clepith the spouse, and seith to him, ech man settith first good wyn; and whanne men ben filled, than that that is worse; but thou hast kept the good wyn into this tyme.—Wiclif. Jon. c. 2.

And Jhesus seide to hem whether the sones of spousaylis moun faste as long as the spouse is with hem? as longe tyme as thei han the spouse with hem thei moun not faste.
Id. Mark, c. 2.

Come thou and I schal schewe to thee the spousesse the wyf of the Lombe.—Id. Apocalips, c. 21.

"Sire clerk of Oxenforde," our hoste said,
"Ye ride as stille and coy, as doth a maid,
Were newe spoused, sitting at the bord.
Chaucer. The Clerkes Prologue, v. 7877.

This markis hath hire spoused with a ring
Brought for the same cause, and than hire sette
Upon an hors-snow-white, and wel ambling.
Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8262.

O swete and wel beloved spouse dere
Ther is a conseil, and ye wol it here,
Which that right fayn I wold unto you saie,
So that ye swere, ye wol it not bewraie.
Id. The Second Nonnes Tale, v. 15,612.

Boweth your nekke under the blisful yok
Of soveraintee, and not of servise,
Which that men clepen spousaile or wedlok.
Id. Ib. v. 17,989.

This wife was fro the well come,
Where that a pot with water nome
She hath, and brought it in to house,
And sawe howe that hir sole spouse
Was set, and loked on a boke
Nigh to the fyre.
Gower. Con. A. b. iii.

But whanne the wodde is woxen grene,
And comen is the sommer tide,
Than fleeth she forth, and ginneth to chide,
And chetereth out in hir langage,
What falsehede is in mariage,
And telleth in a maner speche
Of Thereus the spouse-breche.
Id. Ib. b. v.

At whiche mariage was no persones present but the spouse,
the spousesse, the duches of Bedforde her moder, ye preest, two gentywomen, and a yong man to helpe the preest syng.
Fabyan. Chronycle, an. 1664.

Not the spousage of their soules haue they broken by no filthy traditions of men.—Bale. Image, c. 14.

What joy or honours can compare
With holy nuptials?
When in the happie choyce,
The spouse and spoused have the formost voyce!
B. Jonson. Epithalamion.

At last such grace I found, and meanes I wrought,
That I that lady to my spouse had wonne;
Accord of friendes, consent of parents sought.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 4.

He left two sonnes, of which faire Elferon,
The eldest brother, did untimely dy;
Whose emptie place the mightie Oberon
Doubly supplide, in spousall and dominion.—Id. Ib. c. 10.

Where Phœbus self, that god of poets hight,
They say, did sing the spousall hymne full cleere,
That all the gods were ravisht with delight
Of his celestiaall song and musicks wondrous might.
Id. Ib. c. 7.

Oh indolent! to waste thy hours away!
And sleep'st thou careless of the bridal day?
Thy spousal ornament neglected lies;
Arise, prepare the bridal train, arise!
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. vi.

Nor for a dear, lost father only flow
The filial tears, but woe succeeds to woe:
To tempt the spouseless queen with amorous wiles,
Resort the nobles from the neighbouring isles.—Id. Ib. b. i.

No; never shall my conscious lips betray
Such innocence, such sacred spousal love.
Mickle. The Siege of Marseilles, Act i. sc. 2.

SPOUT, n. } Spout, to spoute out water.
SPOUT, v. } Dut. Spuyten, to spit. Junius SPOUTER. } and Tooke affirm it to be the SPOUTLESS. } past part. of Spitt-an, to spit, to throw out.

The place whence, that from or by which any thing is spitten or thrown out, ejected or emitted, from which any liquid is poured: also,—a mass of water falling, not in drops, but in a continuous stream, like liquor from the spout of a vessel.

To spout, (met.)—to throw out, utter or pour forth, (sc.) words.

Spouter,—an utterer of words, an abundant or copious talker.

Who kepte Jonas in the fishes mawe,
Til he was spouted up at Ninivee?
Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 5007.

This signe is veraily resembled Liche to a man, whiche halte assembled
In either honde a water spout, Wherof the stremes rennen out.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

They themselves laid them down hard by the murmuring musick of certain waters, which spouted out of the side of the hills, and in the bottom of the valley made of many springs a pretty brook, like a common-wealth of many families.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

And one of them I saw my selfe sunke downe right with the abundance of water that this monstrous fish spouted and filled it withall.—Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 6.

— From his throte brake out
My wine, with mans flesh gobbets, like a spout.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. ix.

No hands could force it thence, so fixt it stood,
Till out it rush'd, expell'd by streams of spouting blood.
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. xii.

They are likewise very full of blood, for if they are deeply wounded in a dozen places, there will instantly gush out as many fountains of blood, spouting to a considerable distance.
Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. i.

So the good man doth not plant his bounty in one small hole, or spout it on one narrow spot, but with an open hand disseminates it, with an impartial regard distills it all about.
Barrow. vol. i. Ser. 31.

Neither is it desirable, that a boy should acquire that love and habit of declaiming, which may introduce him to spouting clubs or disputing societies.
Knox. Liberal Education, § 20.

The diameter of the base of this spout I judged to be about fifty or sixty feet; that is, the sea within this space was much agitated, and foamed up to a great height.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 6.

The quaters imitate parrots or professed spouters, in committing words only to memory, purposely for the sake of ostentation.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 32.

— There the pitcher stands
A fragment, and the spoutless tea-pot there;
Sad witnesses how close-pent man regrets
The country, with what ardour he contrives
A peep at Nature, when he can no more.
Cowper. Task, b. iv.

SPRACK. Sprag, (Grose says,) is—lively, active; but he does not subjoin where it is used. Steevens mentions the neighbourhood of Bath. Malone supplies an example from The Supplement to Cibber's Life,—"Mr. Dogget was a little lively sprack man." It may be spræc, from A. S. Spræc-an, to talk. Spræc-ol, is a chatterer or great talker.

Eu. He is a good sprag-memory.
Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor, Act iv. sc. 1.

SPRAIN, n. } Lye and Skinner agree that SPRAIN, v. } sprain is corrupted from strain.
Perhaps from spray, qv. (spray-en, sprayn, sprain),—a solution of continuity, by spreading.

I confessed I was in pain, and thought it was with some sprain at tennis.—Temple. Of the Cure of the Gout.

The sudden turn may stretch the swelling vein,
The cracking joint unhinge, or ankle sprain.
Gay. Trivia, b. i.

SPRAT. Dut. Sprot, halecis pullus, the young or sprout of the herring, (as some think, Killian,) from sproten, to sprout.

— Before that, a plump vintner
Kneeling, and offering incense to his deitie,
Which shall be only this, red sprats and pilchers.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Bloody Brother, Act ii. sc. 2.

SPRAWL, v. } Sprawl is the dim. of spread,
SPRA'WLING, n. } spreaddle, spraddle, sprawl.
To spread about; to move with the limbs spreading, or thrown out; to throw or toss about, widely.

As kyng Menander in a laye
The sooth hath fonde, where she laye
Sprawlend with hir wynges twey,
As she whiche shulde than deye
For loue of hym, whiche was hir make.
Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

I haue seene it, saith Cambrensis, experimented, that a toad being incompassed with a thong of Irish leather, and creeping thitherward, endeavouring to haue skipt over it, suddenly, reculed backe, as though it had bene rapt in the head: whereupon he began to sprall to the other side.
Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 2.

As if you put the haire of an horse taile in mire, puddle, or in a doonghill for a certeine space, it will turne to a little thin spralling worme, which I haue often seene and experimented.—Id. Ib.

And often with his sprawlins, came aloft;
Yet no way kept down death's relentless force:
But (full of water) made an heauie corse.
Chapman. Homer. Batpaxomyomaxia.

The tumbling goblet the wide floor o'erflows,
A stream of gore burst spouting from his nose;
Grim in convulsive agonies he sprawls;
Before him spurn'd the loaded table falls.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxii.

I mean all such as can, for some
This hand hath sent to their long home;
And some lie sprawling on the ground,
With many a gash and bloody wound.
Hudibras, pt. i. c. 3.

— Oft I've seen,
Evn at her frown the bolst'rous uproar cease,
And the mad pickers, tam'd to diligence,
Cull from the bin the sprawling sprigs, and leaves,
That stain the sample, and its worth debase.
Smart. The Hop Garden.

SPRAY. As stray and straggle (corrupted into stroll), are of the same origin with straw or strew, so spray and sprall, (corrupted from spraddle), may have one origin, viz. the verb sprædan, to spread. Spray is applied to—

The little twigs or shoots at the extent of a branch or bow; also to small drops of water scattered or dispersed, by the wind or the dashing of the waves.

The wode dove upon the spray
He sang ful loude and clere.
Chaucer. The Rime of Sire Thopas.

That spray to fame so fertile,
The lover-crowning myrtle,
In wreaths of mixed bows,
Within whose shades are dwelling
Those beauties most exelling
Enthron'd upon her brows.
Drayton. Ode to the New Year.

Cloris. Nay that those sweet harmonious strains we hear,
Amongst the lively birds' melodious lays,
As they recording sit upon the sprays,
Were hovering still for music at thine ears.
Id. The Muses' Elysium, Nymphal 4.

The painted birds, companions of the spring,
Hopping from spray to spray, were heard to sing.
Dryden. The Flower and the Leaf.

It being so very hazy and thick in the horizon, that we could not see a mile round us, occasioned by the spray of the sea being lifted up to a greater height by the force of the wind.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. ii. c. 4.

SPREAD, v. } Dut. Speaden, spreyden;
SPREAD, n. } Ger. Spreiten; Sw. Sprida; SPREA'DER. } A. S. Spredan, extendere, ex-SPREA'DING, n. } pandere.
SPREA'DINGLY. } To extend or stretch out, to expand or lay open; to broaden or widen; to lay over, stretch over, a wider or broader space; to pass or move over, a wide or extended surface; to dilate, to diffuse; to divulge, to publish.

Tho the Romeyns were wyth out chef, dyscomfordd hii were
And to spradde hem her & ther, & the othere after vaste,
And slowe & despoylede, and to grounde hem caste.
R. Gloucester, p. 212.

— Holyness and honestete. out of holy churche
Spryngeth and *sprede*th. and enspireth the people.
Piers Plouhman, p. 276.

Was neuer in alle his lyue ther fadere ore so glad,
Als whan he sauh his sons tuo, the paiens force to sprad.
R. Brunne, p. 18.

Almerie his banere sprad, & other barons mo,
Mikelle blood thei schad of folk that thei gon slo.
Id. p. 117.

Lord Y woot that thou art an harde man, thou repist where thou hast not sowe and thou gederist togidere where thou hast not sprad abroad.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 25.

For the charite of God is sprad abroad in oure hertis bi the Hooli Goost that is ghoun to us.—Id. Romayns, c. 5.

And Zephirus, and Flora gentelly, Yave to the floures soft and tenderly,
Hir swote breth, and made hem forto sprede.
Chaucer. Prof. to the Legende of Good Women.

Of plate of golde a berde he had,
The whiche his brest all ouer spradde.
Gower. Con. A. b. v.

All in a woodmans iacket he was clad
Of Lincolne greene, belayd with silver lace;
And on his head an hood with aglets sprad,
And by his side his hunters horne he hanging had.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 2.

A multitude, like which the populous north Pour'd never from her frozen loyns, to pass
Rhene or the Danaw, when her barbarous sons Came like a deluge on the south, and spread Beneath Gibralter to the Lybian sands.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. i.

Betwixt them lawns, or level downs, and flocks
Grasing the tender herb, were interpos'd,
Or palmie hilloc, or the flourie lap
Of som irriguous valley sprad her store,
Flours of all hue, and without thorn the rose.
Id. Ib. b. iv.

— The gates wide op'n stood
That with extended wings a bannerd host Under spread ensigns marching might pass through
With horse and chariots rankt in loose array.
Id. Ib. b. ii.

Satan with less toll, and now with ease
Wafts on the calmer wave by dubious light
And like a weather-beaten vessel holds Gladly the port, through shrouds and tackle torn;
Or in the emptier waste, resembling air,
Weighs his spread wings, at lisure to behold
Farr off th' empyreal heav'n.
Id. Ib.

No flower hath that kind of spread that the woodbine hath.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 676.

If their child be not such a speedy spreader and brancher, like the vine, yet perchance he may prove proles tardè cres- centis olivæ; and yield, though with a little longer expectation, as useful, and more sober fruit than the other.
Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 77.

Also can any understand the spreading of the clouds, or the noise of his tabernacle?—Job, xxxvi. 29.

As touching the spreading of mucke, and mingling it with the mould of a land, it is exceeding good to do it when the wind setteth full west.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 9.

Why we ought not to stand to their arbitrement, shall now appear by a threefold corruption which will be found upon them. 1. The best times were spreadingly infected, &c.—Milton. Of Reformation in England, b. i.

For when the favouring shades of night arise,
And peaceful slumbers close my mother's eyes,
Me from our coast shall spreading sails convey,
To seek Ulysses through the watery way.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. ii.

He chuses a company of very ordinary unlettered men, but very honest men, to be the witnesses of his conversation and doctrine; and these he designs for the spreaders of his religion throughout the world.—Sharp, vol. ii. Ser. 3.

The spreading of the coral bank, or reef, into the sea, in my opinion is continually, though imperceptibly, effected.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. ii. c. 3.

SPRENT. Sprenged, sprengd, spreynd, sprent.
See SPRING, and SPRINKLE, and BESPRENT.
Sprinkled; scattered.

For if the blood of goot buckis and of bolis and the ausche [cenis, ashes] of a cow calff spreynd hallowith uncleane men to the clensyng of fleische, hou mych more the blood of Crist which bi the Hooli Goost offride himsilff unwemmed to God schal clense oure conscience fro deede werkis to serue God that lyueth!—Wiclif. Ebrewis, c. 9.

O soden wo, that ever art successour
To worldly blis, spreint is with bitternesse
Th' ende of the joye of our worldly labour.
Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 4842.

So furiously each other did assaile,
As if their soules they would attonet have rent
Out of their brests, that streames of bloud did rayle Adowne, as if their springs of life were spent;
That all the ground with purple bloud was sprent.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 2.

SPRIG. A. S. Sprec, a twig, a branch, a sprig, (Somner.) Sprec seems clearly from the
A. S. Sprec-an, to utter or put out. See the quotation from Plinie in v. Sprout.

A small shoot, (sc.) of a tree: it is also used as the Lat. Stolo, (see STOLIDITY), and as the English Imp.

With this he hung them up aloft, upon a Tamricke bow,
As eyefull trophies: and the sprigs that did about it grow,
He proined from the leavie armes, to make it easier viewd.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. ix.

So Philomel, perch'd on an aspin sprig,
Weeps all the night her lost virginity,
And sings her sad tale to the merry twig,
That dances at such joyful misery.
G. Fletcher. Christ's Triumph over Death.

Thus fades the oak i' th' sprig, i' th' blade the corn;
Thus without young, this phenix dies, new-born.
Dryden. Upon the Death of Lord Hastings.

Let it be deemed by Christians a greater honour to pluck one sprig of olive, than to bring home whole loads of laurel.
Knox. Ser. 25.

SPRIGHT. See SPRITE.

SPRING, n. } Dut. Springhen; Ger. Spring-
SPRING, v. } en; Sw. Springa; A. S.
SPRING'NGER. } Spryngan,— SPRING'NGING, n. } To rise, or arise, or raise; to SPRING'NGALL. } come forth, as water or seed
SPRING'NGY. } from the ground; to proceed SPRING'NGINESS. } or cause to proceed, to pro-SPRINGE, n. } duce; to have or give their SPRINGE, v. } source, origin or beginning; to SPRING'NGLE. } issue or shoot forth, as water from a fountain or jet; to start, to leap.

Spring, n. (as the verb;) also—the time or season when general vegetation begins; the vernal season; each shoot of vegetation, a plant shooting or germinating.

Springe,—a springing snare or gin; a snare.
Sprenging, Wiclif, is in the Vulgate aspersio.
See SPRINKLE.

A spring is also applied to any thing elastic,
i. e. to any thing which, when stretched or pressed, rises or returns again; to an elastic body, an elastic force or power.

Springal, (met.)—a shoot; a youth. Also an engine of war for shooting by force of a spring.
Fr. Espringalle.

— Ther schul kynges come and springe of thi blod.
R. Gloucester, p. 15.

— Holynes and honestete. out of holy churche
Spryngeth and *sprede*th. and enspireth the people.
Piers Plouhman, p. 276.

— And flod have wasshe
Clene away the cursed blod. that of Cayne ys spronge.
Id. p. 177.

But the water that I chal gyue him, schal be maad in him a welle of water spryngynge vp into everlastinge lyf.
Wiclif. Jon. c. 4.

But the water that I shal geue hym, shall be in hym a well of water, spryngynge vp into everlastynge lyfe.
Bible, 1551. Ib.

But othire seedis felden in to stony placis where thei hadden not myche erthe, and anon thei sprungen up, for thei hadden not depnesse of erthe.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 13.

Some fell vpon stonye grounde where it had not much earth, and anon it spronge vp, because it had not depth of earth.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Biobedience and sprenging of the blood of Jesus Crist, grace and pees be multiplied to you.—Wiclif. 1 Petir, c. 1.

Also it is necessarie to understande whennes that sinnes springen, and how they encresen, and which they ben.
Chaucer. The Personnes Tale.

Certaine I am full like indeede
To him that cast in earth his seed,
And hath ioy of the new springing
Whan it greeneth in the ginning,
And is also faire and fresh of flour,
Lustie to seene, swote of odour,
But ere he it in his sheues shere,
May fall a weather that shall it dere,
And make it to fade and fall,
The stalke, the greine, and floures all.
Chaucer. R. of the R.

Than shal she ben even at ful alway,
And spring-flood lasten bothe night and day.
Id. The Frankeleines Tale, v. 11,378.

And eke within the castle were Springolds, gounes, bowes & archers.—Id. Rom. of the R.

In a foreste alone he was
He sawe vpon the grene gras
The faire floures fresshe springe.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

Upon the sprynge of fresshe welles,
She shope to dwelle, and no where elles.—Id. Ib. b. v.

And whan the spryngynge tyme began, than syr William Duglas purueied hym of that whiche aparteyne for his entreprise.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 29.

And this castell was set bytwene the toune and the se,
and was well fortyfied with springalles, bombardes, boues, and other artillery.—Id. Ib. c. 144.

The lorde of Bauceen pycarde went vpon the se, aprochyng the castell, the better to aduyce it, and ther he was stryken with a springall and slayne.—Id. Ib. c. 193.

Thus posies of the spring-flowers were wrapt up in a little green-silk, and dedicated to Kala.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

Woodcocks arriue first on the north coast, where almost euerie hedge serueth for a roade and euerie plashoote for springles to take them.—Carew. Suruey of Cornwall, fol. 25.

"Faire virgin," said the prince, "yee me require
A thing without the compas of my witt:
For both the lignage, and the certein sire,
From which I sprong, from me are hidden yitt."
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 9.

The one his bowe and shafts, the other spring
A burning teade about his head did move,
As in their syres new love both triumphing.
Id. Muioptimos.

Nor shall the rain of your good counsel fall
Upon the barren sands, but spring up fruit,
Such as you long have wish'd for.
Massinger. The Unnatural Combat, Act iii. sc. 3.

Now these oilets are properly [in twigs or sets of trees]
those buds called, where the new spring first shooteth forth.
Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 21.

Amongst the rest, which in that space befell,
There came two springals of full tender yeares,
Farr thence from forrein land where they did dwell,
To seeke for succour of her and her peares,
With humble prayers and intreatfull teares.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 10.

Gas. Why, my lord—
Cas. Nay, nay, you are too wise now; good, observe me.
I do not rail against the hopeful springall,
That builds up monuments in brass; rears trophies
With mottoes and inscriptions, quaint devices
Of poetry and fiction.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Lawes of Candy, Act iii. sc. 1.

Euph. Come hither springall.
On. That in the Almain tongue signifies a gentleman.
Id. The Queen of Corinth, Act ii. sc. 4.

Mischief 'gainst goodness aim'd, is like a stone,
Unnaturally forc'd up an eminent hill
Whose weight falls on our heads and buries us,
We springe our selves, we sink in our own bogs.
Id. Ib. Act iv. sc. 3.

Looke how a mauis, or a pygeon
In any groue, caught with a sprindge, or net;
With struggling pinions 'gainst the ground doth beat
Her tender body; and that then-streight bed
Is sowre to that swindge, in which she was bred.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxii.

The young men and maidens go out into the woods and coppices, cut down and spoil young springers to dress up their May-booths.—Evelyn, b. iv. § 4.

The sundry germinations and springing up of the works of righteousness in him are a delectable paradise in him.
More. Moral Cabbala, pt. iv. c. 2.

L. San. They haue all new legs,
And lame ones; one would take it,
That neuer see 'em pace before, the spauen
A spring-halt rain'd among 'em.
Shakespeare. Hen. VIII. Act i. sc. 3.

All dreadfull pourtraicts of deformitee:
Spring-headed hydres; and sea-shouldring whales;
Great whirlpooles, which all fishes make to flee.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 12.

The sea rose with such high spring tides, that overflowing the countries next adjoining, divers villages with the inhabitants were drowned and destroyed.

Holinshead. Historie of England, b. vii. c. 8.

As through his chanell crookt Meander glides
With turnes and twines, and roubles now to now fro,
Whose streames run forth there to the salt sea sides,
Here backe returne, and to their springward goe.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xvi.

'Twas ebbing darkness, past the noon of night,
And Phosphor, on the confines of the light,
Promis'd the sun, ere day began to spring.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

Along these blushing borders, bright with dew,
And in yon mingled wilderness of flowers,
Fair-handed spring unbosoms every grace;
Throws out the snow-drop, and the crocus first;
The daisy, primrose, violet darkly blue,
And polyanthus of unnumber'd dyes.—Thomson. Spring.

Isa. Alas, poor woodcock, dost thou go a birding! thou hast e'en set a spring to catch thy own neck.
Dryden. The Wild Gallant, Act iii.

The exterior part of this our habitable world is the air or atmosphere; a light, thin fluid, or springy body, that encompasses the solid earth on all sides.
Locke. Elements of Natural Philosophy, c. 5.

This undestroyed springiness of the air seems to make the necessity of fresh air to the life of hot animals, (few of which, as far as I can guess after many trials, would be able to live two minutes of an hour, if they were totally and all at once deprived of air) suggest, &c.
Boyle. Works, vol. iv. p. 91.

Yet the ends and uses of respiration are not served by that springiness, but by some other unknown and singular quality.—Bentley, Ser. 8.

Indeed love (the spring-head of charity) as it is the sweetest of all passions, so it is one of the strongest too.
Atterbury, vol. i. Ser. 2.

— These assiduously,
But gently, in their proper arts employ'd,
Acquire a vigour and springy activity,
To which they were not born.
Armstrong. Art of Preserving Health, b. iii.

This was very conspicuous during the spring-tide of the full moon, which happened soon after our arrival.
Cook. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 3.

SPRINKLE, v. } Dut. Sprengken, sprenghe;
SPRINKLE, n. } len, sprengalen; Ger. Spreng;
SPRINKLING, n. } en, sprengken; Sw. Sprenga;
A. S. Spræng-an, besprængan, spargere, spræng-an, minutatim spargere;—merely a consequential usage of Spræng-an, to spring, to throw or shoot forth; to throw or cast upon, to spurt forth upon.

To throw forth in small particles, in drops; to cover with small particles or drops; to scatter, to asperse.

"Wad segge ge," quoth Merlyn, "of this newe thinge?
"Radde ge, that me by sprengede that mortar mid my blod."—R. Gloucester, p. 130.

They burn sweet gums and spices or perfumes, and pleasant smells, and sprinkle about sweet ointments and waters.—More. Utopia, b. ii. c. 5.

There Hecuba I saw with a hundred moe
Of her sons wyues, and Priam at the altar,
Sprinkling with blood his flame of sacrifice.
Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

The seate of Muses nine where fiftene welles doe flowe, Whose sprinkling springs and golden streames ere this thou well didst knowe.
Turberville. Upon the Death of Mayster Richard Edwards.

She [Hope] alway smyle, and in her hand did hold
An holy water sprinkle, dipt in dew,
With which she sprinkled favours manifold
On whom she list, and did great liking sheowe,
Great liking unto many, but true love to fewe.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 12.

How long might an indifferent eye looke upon the comick and mimick actions in those your misteries that should be sacred, (your magical exorcismes, your clerical shavings;
your uncleanly unctions, your crossings, creepings, censings, sprinklings, &c.—Bp. Hall, Decad. 1. Ep. 1.

Him his swift coursers, on his splendid car,
Rapt from the lessening thunder of the war;
To Troy they drove him, groaning from the shore,
And sprinkling, as he pass'd, the sands with gore.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xlii.

As signs of friendship they present a green branch, and sprinkle water with the hand over the head.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 3.

[A stranger] had come upon the recommendation of Socrates the son of Sophroniscus with an earnest and humble desire to receive some sprinklings of his wisdom.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. ii. c. 23.

SPRIT, i. e. Spirit, to sprout, to throw out.

Toads are sometimes observed to exclude and spirit out a dark and liquid matter behind; which we have observed to be true, and a venomous condition there may be perhaps therein.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 13.

The barley, after it has been couched four days, will sweat a little, and shew the chit or sprit at the root-end of the corn.—Mortimer. Husbandry.

Soon after the wind moderated, and we let all the reefs out of the top-sails, got the sprit-sail-yard out, and top-gallant-mast up.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 2.

SPRITE, n. } Also written Spright, SPRITE, v. } sprightful, &c. Sprite is—SPRIT'EFUL. } A contraction of Spirit.
SPRIT'EFULLY. } It has been common to SPRIT'EFULNESS. } write sprightful and not spirit- SPRIT'ING, n. } ful.—
SPRIT'LESS. } Full of spirit, life, anima-SPRIT'ELY. } tion, vivacity, ardour, vigour.
SPRIT'ELINESS. } Sprightly also belongs to this contracted form.

Lively, animated, brisk, active, ardent, vigorous.

Sprited,—haunted as by a sprite, (Steevens.)

— Where with came to my mind
The image eke of my dere father, when I thus beheld the king of equal age
Yeld up the sprite with wounds so cruelly.
Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

Her sister Anne, spritelesse for dread to heare
This fearefull sturre, with nailes gan teare her face,
She smote her brest, and rushed through the rout.
Id. Ib. b. iv.

Yet died not his [Arundell's] prodigious tyrannye with him, but succeeded with his office in Henry Chicheley, and in a great sort more of the sprightly spirituality.
State Trials. Hen. V. an. 1. Sir J. Oldcastle.

And forth be cald out of deepe darknes dredd
Legions of sprights, the which, like little flies,
Fluttring about his ever-damned hedd,
Awaite whereto their service he applyes,
To aide his friendes, or fray his enimies.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 1.

Satyr. See he gathers up his spright
And begins to hunt for life.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Faithful Shepherdess, Act iv. sc. 1.

Imo. I am sprighted with a foole,
Frighted, and angered worse.
Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act ii. sc. 3.

Ar. Pardon, Master,
I will be correspondent to command
And doe my spryting, gently.
Id. The Tempest, Act i. sc. 2.

Fair Colona, young and sprightly lady, do not let me, in the best of my youth, languish in my most earnest affections.—Ford. Love's Sacrifice, Act i. sc. 2.

This said, his readie charioteere, did scourge his sprightfull horse,
That freely to the sable fleet, perform'd their fierie course.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xi.

Then on the shore, the Worthy hid, and left his horrid lance Amids the Tamariskes, the sprite-like, did with his sword advance
Vp to the river.
Id. Ib. b. xxi.

If his [Jonson] later be not so sprightful and vigorous as his first pieces, all that are old will, and all that desire to be old should excuse him therein.—Fuller. Worthies. Westminster.

No organs, no harp, no lute can sound out the praises of the Almighty Father so sprightfully, as the man that rises from his bed of sorrows, and considers what an excellent difference he feels from the groans and intolerable accents of yesterday.—Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 15.

Levity and rashness have in it some sprightfulness, and greatness of action.—Id. Ser. 9.

For after death, we sprights have just such natures,
We had for all the world, when human creatures.
Dryden. Epilogue to Tyrannick Love.

In short therefore, the proper heaven and happiness of a man, considered as a rational being, consists in the constant, free, and sprightly exercise of his faculties, about such objects as are most convenient to his rational nature.
Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 1.

Wak'd as her custom was, before the day,
To do th' observance due to sprightly May:
For sprightly May commands our youth to keep
The vigils of her night, and breaks their sluggard sleep.
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. i.

Meantime the lyre rejoins the sprightly lay;
Love-dittied airs, and dance, conclude the day.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. i.

Then the faculties are most pleas'd and delighted too, when they are most vigorously exercised about that which is most suitable to them; when they are not only determined to such objects as are most agreeable to their natures, but do also act upon and exert themselves towards them with the greatest sprightliness and vigour.
Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 1.

A leaf he'd scarce perus'd, when to their sight,
In likeness of a page, appear'd a spright.
Hoole. Orlando Furioso, b. ii.

So when Saul's weary'd son his fasting broke
With honey dropping from Philistian oak,
Returning strength and sprightliness arise,
Glow on his cheeks, and sparkle in his eyes.
Harte. Thomas A Kempis: a Vision.

Parents and school-masters may not be displeased at unlucky tricks played by their lads, as showing a sagacity and sprightliness they delight to behold; yet they will not suffer them to pass with impunity, least it should generate idleness and other mischiefs.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. ii. c. 26.

SPROUT, n. } Dut. Spruyte, spruyten; Ger.
SPROUT, v. } Spross, sprossen; A. S. Sprout, spraut, past part. of Spryt-an.—
To shoot out, to cast forth.

Sprouts, in gardening, are the shoots from the stem of the vegetable after the head is cut off; then applied to—Young plants before they have headed.

— The bough, the branch, the tree,
From which do spring and sproute such fleshlie seedes,
As nothing else but moane and myschiefe breedes.
Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

These sprouts when they are come once to some bignesse, and do branch there, bee called of the Latines by a prettie name, gemmae, as it were precious stones; but so long, as they are no other than buds sprouting forth under the concavities or pit-hole of the foresaid joints, they tearme them Oculos, (i. oilets, or eies:) marie in the very top they be named by them germina, (i. sprigs or burgeons.)
Holland. Plinie, b. xvii. c. 21.

— But a whole Hydra more
Remains of sprouting heads too long to score.
Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel.

Upon our complaining of the want of bread-fruit, we were told, that the produce of the last season was nearly exhausted; and that what was seen sprouting upon the trees, would not be fit to use in less than three months.
Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 15.

Thus the heartiest gratitude, as I have shown in the proper place concerning the purest love, though bearing the fragrantest flowers, sprouts originally from the earthy principle of self-interest.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 23.

SPRUCE, adj. } Skinner derives from the SPRUCE, v. } Fr. Preux, and preux from SPRU'CELY. } the Lat. Probus, or probatus.
SPRU'CENESS. } Junius says, the well-fed and strong are called—spruze and lustie young fellows, from the A. S. verb Sprytan, to grow, to spread. Minshew,—from the Lat. Purus.

Perhaps the quotation from Hall will shew the true origin of the word. It was the custom of our ancestors, on especial occasions, to dress after the manner of particular countries. The gentlemen, who adopted that of Prussia or Spruce, seem, from the description of it, to have been arrayed in a style, to which the epithet spruce, according to our modern usage, might have been applied with perfect propriety. Prussian leather, (corium Prusianum,) is called, in Barett, by the familiar name of spruce.

And after them came syr Edward Hayward, than Admirall, and wyth hym syr Thomas Parre, in dobles of crimosin veluet, voyded lowe on the backe, and before to the cannell bone, lased on the breastes with chaynes of silver, and ouer that shorte cokes of crimosyn satyne, on their heades hattes after dauncers fashion, with feasautes fethers in them: They were appereyld after the fashion of Prussia or Spruce.—Hall. Hen. VIII. an. 1.

Earth too, will be a Lemnia; and the tree,
That wraps that crystal in a wooden tomb,
Shall be took up spruce, fill'd with diamond.
Donne. Elegy on Death.

Alas! the niceties of a spruce understanding, and the curious nothings of useless speculation, and all the opinions of men that make the divisions of heart, and do nothing else, cannot bring us one drop of comfort in the day of tribulation, and therefore are no parts of the strength of faith.
Bp. Taylor, vol. iii. Ser. 3.

1800

The old kindnesse of the father cannot lette the good chylde vttrely dyspayre, for all that he hath played at spurne poynte by the waye in goynge at scholewarde.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 576.

But all in vain against her will they spurn,
Persuasion, threat, nor curse with her prevails.

Drayton. The Barons' Wars, b. iii.

The fir and larch have one tap root and no more: for upon that one maine master-root they rest and are founded: howbeit, many small strings and petie spurns shoot out of the sides.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvi. c. 31.

The insolence of office, and the spurnes
That patient merit of the vnworthy takes.

Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act iii. sc. 1.

And what defence can properly be used in such a despicable encounter as this, but either the slap or the spurn?

Milton. Colasterion.

Now they who reach Parnassus' lofty crown,
Employ their pains to spurn some others down.

Pope. Ess. on Criticism.

Then why this fastus academicus, this local insolence, this pomp of pretension, which spurns at the idea of reform; as if Oxford and Cambridge alone possessed all learning, all science, all philosophy, all divinity, all excellence?

Knox. Liberal Education, App.

SPUTATION. } Lat. Sputum, spit, or SPUTATIVE. } spittle. See SPIT.

Sputative,—that can or may spit; disposed or inclined to spit.

It was my intention to see whether I could pick out any counsel to allay that sputative symptom which yet remaineth upon me from my obstruction of the spleen.

Reliquia Wottoniana, p. 370.

A moist consumption receives its nomenclature from a moist sputation, or expectoration, a dry one is known by its dry cough.—Harvey. On Consumptions.

SPUTTER, or } Are the same word.
SPATTER, v. } To sputter, is to throw as if spitting. See SPATTER.

And now thou dost with lies the throne invade,
By practice harden'd in thy slandering trade
Obtending heaven, for whate'er ills befall,
And sputtering under specious names thy gall.

Dryden. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

And now the strand, and now the plain they held,
Their ardent eyes with bloody streaks were fill'd:
Their nimble tongues they brandish'd as they came,
And lick'd their hissing jaws that sputter'd flame.

Id. Virgil. Aeneis, b. ii.

While N—and M—sputter there
Thou'lt ne'er prevent with all thy care,
The melting of the suet.

Mason. Ode.

SPY, v. } See ESPY. Dut. Spie, speuren; SPY, n. } Ger. Spacher, spueren; A. S. Spyr- SPIAL. } ian, to search or seek.

To search; to look, to keep a look out, to observe; to see, to discover, to detect.

Eilred gede thorgh his lond, priuely to spie
Euerilkon the Danes, & smertly bounde
Or smyte of ther hedes, ay as men tham founde.

R. Brunne, p. 40.

Had thei had a spie among the Walssh oste, & warned them priuely, that thei were bi that coste, Thei had bien men lyuand, that ther to dede went,
That folie tok on hand withouten avisement.—Id. p. 241.

And for to do hem more greuaunce
Which hath ordained jelousie,
An olde vecke for to spie
The manner of his gouernaunce.

Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

So that Rastell speaketh and seyeth all in diminutives, for where he should of truth spye hell, there espyeth he but purgatory.—Fryth. Workes, p. 16.

As if a souldier of our aduersaries part shoulde come in among vs with our Lordes badge, hauyng not that hart fayth and loue to our capitaine that we haue, we would, (if we espyed it by any token) take him for a spye and betrayer rather then one of vs.—Tyndal. Workes, p. 472.

The Jewes marked hym, & laied spial for him, whether he went to ye keeping of the holy day or no, & forasmuch as thei desired to se him, thei equired one of another where he was.

Udal. John, c. 7.

And all the hinder partes, that few could spie,
Were ruinous and old, but painted cunningly.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 4.

The Sarazin, sore daunted with the buffe,
Snatcheth his sword, and fiercely to him flies;
Who well it wards, and quyteth cuff with cuff:
Each others equall puissance enuies,
And through their iron sides with cruell spies
Does seeke to perce.

Id. Ib. c. 2.

VOL. II.

When he came unto the city of Cuma, he perceived that all the coasts by the sea were layed for him to apprehend him, and that he had many spials upon him.

North. Plutarch, p. 110.

Achilles, starting, as the chiefs he spy'd,
Leap'd from his seat, and laid the harp aside.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. ix.

Joyful they met; the Spartan thus began:
"Why puts my brother his bright armour on?
Sends he some spy, amidst these silent hours,
To try yon camp, and watch the Trojan powers?"

Id. Ib. b. x.

As each is known to be a spy upon the rest, they all live in continual restraint; and having but a narrow range for censure, they gratify its cravings by preying on one another.

Idler, No. 78.

Amongst other things which, at different times, I had given to this chief, [Otoo] was a spying-glass.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 4.

SQUAB. Squab or quab, (qv.) is an unfledged bird, a nestling; and may be so called from their quavering action, when fed by the parent. The application, then, appears to be—Any thing full fed, unwieldy, inert, as a quab, or squab.

Solo. No truly, Sir, I should be loath to see ye Come fluttering down like a young rook, cry squab,
And take ye up with your brains, beaten into your buttocks.

Beaum. & Fletcher. Women Pleas'd, Act i. sc. 1.

Diet makes them of a squabbish or lardy habit of body.

Harvey.

On her large squab you find her spread,
Like a fat corpse upon a bed.

Pope. Imitations. Earl of Dorset.

Cornwal squab pie, and Devon whitepot brings,
And Leister beans and bacon, food for kings.

King. Art of Cookery.

Gorgonius sits abdominous, and wan,
Like a fat squab upon a Chinese fan:
He snuffs far off th' anticipated joy;
Turtle and ven'son all his thoughts employ.

Couper. Progress of Errour.

SQUABBLE, n. } See SQUALL. A squab-
SQUABBLE, v. } ble seems to be a noisy, clamorous, squalling, strife or contention; a contentious, quarrelsome wrangle, brawl or brabble.

So indiscreet an officer, drunke? and speake parrot? and squabble? swagger? sweare? and discourse fustian with ones owne shadow?—Shakespeare. Othello, Act ii. sc. 3.

These follies had such influence on the rabble,
As to engage them in perpetual squabble.

Butler. Upon Human Learning.

She blunts the point of care, alleviates woes,
And pours the balm of comfort and repose;
Bids the heart yield to virtue's silent call,
And shows ambition's sons mere children all;
Who hunt for toys which please with tinsel shine;
For which they squabble, and for which they pine.

Savage. The Volunteer Laureat, No. 3.

The officer, perceiving what he was about, immediately ordered him to desist, thinking it more prudent to submit to the present violence, than to embroil his commander in an inextricable squabble with the Chinese government, by the death of their subjects.

Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 9. p. 520.

They had no conception that the reign of the Messiah could be any other than a temporal dominion; as appears by their addresses to their master for preferment, and by their squabbles amongst themselves for superiority.

Warburton, vol. x. Dis. 29.

SQUADRON, n. } Fr. Esquadre, esquadron; SQUADRON, v. } It. Squadron; Sp. Esquadra. All (Skinner) from the Lat. Acies quadrata, a square troop.

A number of men, ships, &c. arranged in a square. Now applied to—

A number, a division of men or ships, without reference to the form.

Palladius made such an impression into the squadron of the Helots, that at first the great body of them began to shake and stagger.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

They for us fight, they watch and dewly ward,
And their bright squadrons round about us plant;
And all for love and nothing for reward:
O, why should heavenly God to men have such regard!

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 8.

His place of birth a solemn angel tells
To simple shepherds, keeping watch by night;
They gladly hither haste, and by a quire
Of squadron angels hear his carol sung.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. xii.

1801

Whate'er this heart can prompt, or hand obey;
All, all, Achilles, Greeks! is yours to-day.
Through your wide host this arm shall scatter fear,
And thin the squadrons with my single spear.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xx.

"Great is thy skill, O father! great thy toil,
Thy careful hand is stamp'd on all the soil,
The squadron'd vineyards well thy art declare,
The olive-green, blue fig, and pendant pear."

Id. Ib. Odyssey, b. xxiv.

The mountain echoes with the wild affright
Of flying squadrons; down their arms they throw,
And dash from rock to rock to shun the foe.

Mickle. Lusiad, b. iii.

SQUA'LID. } It. Squallido, squallidore; Lat.
SQUA'LOR. } Squalidus, squalor; squalus, either from the Gr. Κηλῖς, macula, or from σκελλος, dry, because (Vossius) dryness causes roughness.
Covered, overspread, overgrown, with filth or dirt; with foulness; filthy, dirty; foul.

And now together on their way they bin,
Whenas they saw a squire in squallid weed
Lamenting sore his sorrowfull sad tyne
With many bitter teares shed from his blubbred eyne.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 1.

In level race [Diana] outstrips the jumping deer,
With nimble feet; or with a mighty spear
Flings down a bristled boar, or else a squalid beare.

P. Fletcher. Piscatory Eclogues, Ecl. 5.

Yet euen himsele (although a god he were Clad in a squallid sheepskinn) gouern'd there
A mortalls sheepe.—Chapman. Homer. Hymne to Pan.

When their judgements are firme, and out of danger, let them reade both, the old and the new: but no lesse take heed, that their new flowers and sweetnesse doe not as much corrupt, as the others drinesse and squalor, if they choose not carefully.—B. Jonson. Discoveries.

Next came Ulysses lowly at the door,
A figure despicable, old, and poor,
In squallid vests, with many a gaping rent,
Propp'd on a staff, and trembling as he went.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xvii.

Nor everlasting rain deforms
The squallid fields; nor endless storms, Inconstant, vex the Caspian main.

Francis. Ode to Valcius.

SQUALL, v. } Dut. Schelle; Ger. Schall, SQUALL, n. } schallen; Sw. Squala; from SQUALLY. } the A. S. Giellan, to yell, ululare, stridere, fremere. See SQUEAL.

To utter a harsh, shrill noise, clamour or cry.
A squall of wind,—a howling, roaring, (rush or gust of) wind. See GALE; from which a squall differs in the suddenness of its beginning and shortness of its continuance.

A squall seems to be a cry at full stretch; and squalling out (in Fuller)—stretching or sprawling out.

Such walk with a black, or a red little cur,
That open will, quickly, if any thing stir:
Then squalleth the master, or trudgeth away,
And after dog runneth, as fast as he may.

Tusser. September's Husbandry.

The raven croaks, the carrion crow doth squall,
The pye doth chatter, and the partridge call.

Drayton. Noah's Flood.

He [William Evans] was not onely what the Latines call compennis, knocking his knees together, and going out squalling with his feet, but also haulted a little.

Fuller. Worthies. Monmouthshire.

Betty distorts her face with hideous squall,
And mouth of a foot wide begins to bawl.

King. Little Mouths.

Presently the wind shifted to the southward, and blew in such violent squalls, that we were obliged to hand our top-sails, and reef our main-sail.—Anson. Voyages, b. i. c. 8.

The wind proved squally, and blew so strong off shore, that we were driven too far to the southward, to venture to send off our boat.—Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 1.

A lowering squall obscures the southern sky,
Before whose sweeping breath the waters fly;
Its weight the top-sails can no more sustain.

Falconer. The Shipwreck, c. 2.

At noon the gale was somewhat abated, but we had still heavy squalls.—Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 5.

SQUAME. } It. Squama, squamoso; Lat.
SQUA'MOUS. } Squama.
Scaly; or covered with scales.

And besie me to tellen you the names,
As orpiment, brent bones, yren squames,
That into poude grounden ben ful smal?
Chaucer. The Chanones Yemanes Tale, v. 16, 226.

As to the method how those galls and balls are produced, the most simple, and consequently the most easy to be accounted for, is that in the gems of oak, which may be called squamous-oak-cones, capitula squamata in Malpighi.
Derham. Physico-Theology, b. viii. c. 6. Note.

SQUANDER, v. } Skinner suggests the SQUANDERER. } Ger. Verschwenden, dissipare. Schwenden, schwinden, deficere, perdere, may be from the A. S. Wan-ian, to diminish, be or cause to be less, to wane.

To dissipate or disperse; to scatter, to spend.
To diminish wastefully, profusely; to lavish.

The Duke of Savoy, tho he pass for one of the princes of Italy, yet the least part of his territories lie there, being squander'd up and down amongst the Alps.
Howell, b. i. Let. 42.

This once select nation of God, and the inhabitants of the land flowing with milk and honey, is become now a scorned squandered people all the earth over, being ever since incapable of any coalition or reducement into one body politick.
Id. Let. 8.

'Tis madness, not frugality, prepares
A vast excess of wealth for squandering heirs.
King. Art of Cookery, Let. 4

A sight of horror to the cruel wretch,
Who, all day long in sordid pleasure roll'd,
Himself an useless load, has squander'd vile,
Upon his scoundrel train, what might have cheer'd
A drooping family of modest worth.—Thomson. Summer.

Whereas plenty and variety [of play-things] in their own keeping, makes them wanton and careless, and teaches them from the beginning to be squanderers and wasters.
Locke. Of Education, § 130.

But the reign of false and squandering policy has lasted long, it lasts still, and will finally compleat our ruin.
Bolingbroke. On History, Let. 8.

And such expense, as pinches parents blue,
And mortifies the lib'ral hand of love,
Is squander'd in pursuit of idle sports
And vicious pleasures.
Cowper. Task, b. ii.

SQUARE, v. } Sometimes written Squire.
SQUARE, n. } Fr. Esquierre, a square mile; Fr.
SQUA'RENESS. } Esquarre, esquarrer; It. Squà- SQUA'RER. } dro, squadrare; Sp. Esquadra, esquadrar; Lat. Quadrare, from Quatuor, i. e. Karepa for kai-ερεπα, (without the aspirate among the Æolians,) when they had said or counted,— Unum, alterum, tria; pro quarto dixere, et alterum, (Scal. de Caus. c. 28.) Square is—

A space enclosed within four sides; four equal sides at right angles to each other: then applied to—equality; equal portion or proportion, equal measurement; regularity, rule, conformity or adaptation to rule. To square, (met.)—

To admeasure, to apportion, to regulate; to conform, to adapt, to accommodate, to suit.

To square is also, consequentially, to broaden; to set out broadly, in a position or attitude of offence or defence, (se quarrer,) of defiance; to put on, to take or assume a hostile position or appearance; to confront hostilely; to oppose, resist, withstand.

— And contrived the compass
And cast out by squire. bothe lyne and levell.
Piers Plouhman, p. 190.

Tho gan I go full great pass
Enuiron, euen in compass,
The closing of the square wall.—Chaucer. Rom. of the R.

— The prentise that hewyth the rowgh stone,
And bryngeth it to square, with harde strokes and many.
Fabyan. Chronycle, p. 3. Prol.

And when he gave me the bishopric of Winchester, he said he had often squared with me, but he loved me never the worse; and for a token thereof gave me the bishopric.
State Trials. Gardiner. 5 Edw. VI. an. 1551.

She increased thorough their friendship in power and wealth, whereof followed riotous lust to satisfie hir wanton appetite, so as she falling at square with hir husband, &c.
Holinshed. Historie of England, b. iv. c. 8.

By that same river lurking under greene,
Eftsoones he gins to fashion forth a place;
And, squaring it in compasse well bescene,
There plotteth out a tombe by measured space.
Spenser. Virgil. Gnat.

And now they neuer meete in groue, or greene,
By fountaine cleere, or spangled star-light-sheene,
But they do square, that all their elues for feare
Creepe into acorne cups and hide them there.
Shakespeare. Midsummer Night's Dreame, Act ii. sc. 1.

Such as at feasts, the first flow'r'd spirits of boies Poure out in mutuall contumelies still;
As little squaring with his curious will;
Or was as wanton, and vntaught a store.
Chapman. Homer. A Hymne to Hermes.

Then did a sharped spyre of diamond bright,
Ten feete each way in square, appeare to mee,
Justly proportion'd up unto his hight,
So far as archer might his level see.
Spenser. Visions of Bellay.

— I professe
My selfe an enemy to all other loyes,
Which the most precious square of sense possesses,
And finde I am alone felicitate
In your deere highnesse loue.
Shakespeare. Lear, Act i. sc. 1.

I hope, I say, both being put together, may square out the most eminent of the ancient gentry, in some tolerable proportion.—Fuller. Worthies of England, vol. i. c. 15.

Foretell our sport, to make vs thus vnture?
Do not you know my ladies foot by th' squiere?
Shakespeare. Loue's Labour Lost, Act v. sc. 2.

Pan. Why you can tell us by the squire, neighbour,
Whence he is call'd a constable.
B. Jonson. A Tale of a Tub, Act iv. sc. 2.

A man groweth in height and length untill he be one and twentie yeares of age; then beginneth he to spread and burnish in squareness.—Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 37.

But I pray you, who is his companion? is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the diuell?—Shakespeare. Much Adoe about Nothing, Act i. sc. 1.

Politicians inculcate much, that to the well governing of a people, squaring fit laws for it, and keeping it in good order, the nature and humour of that people should be chiefly heeded and well understood.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 18.

If I mistake not it follows, from what I have said, that the question it self is altogether improper; and it is as insignificant to ask, whether man's will be free, as to ask whether his sleep be swift, or his vertue square; liberty being as little applicable to the will, as swiftness of motion is to sleep, or squareness to vertue.
Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 21.

Lo; an astrologer, with filth besmeard,
Rough and neglected, with a length of beard,
Pores round his cell for undiscover'd stars,
And decks the wall with triangles and squares.
Fawkes. A Voyage to the Planets.

It [common-place wit] is as obsolete as fardingales, ruffs, and square-toed shoes.—Knox. Winter Evenings, Even. 9.

SQUASH, n. } i. e. Quash, (qv.) Fr. Quas-
SQUASH, v. } seur, a squasher. See SQUEEZE.
SQUA'SHER. } Squash, in Shakespeare, is applied (met.) to a soft, infirm being, easily squeezed, compressed, crushed: in Boyle—to a bumpkin of the same nature: in Swift—to the noise made by falling into water; the dash or splash.

"Escraseur, a crusher, squasher, or beater of things flat by hard pressing them," (Cotgrave.)

There is an unhappie bird called Æsalon, and but little withall; yet will she squash and breake the raven's egges.
Holland. Plinie, b. x. c. 74.

How like (me thought) I then was to this kernell,
This squash, this gentleman.
Shakespeare. The Winter's Tale, Act i. sc. 2.

I caused my gardener to dig out a convenient quantity of good earth, and dry it well in an oven, to weigh it, to put it in an earthen pot almost level with the surface of the ground, and to set in it a selected seed, he had before received from me, for that purpose, of squash, which is an Indian kind of pompion that grows apace; this seed I ordered him to water only with rain or spring water.—Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 494.

My fall was stopped by a terrible squash that sounded louder to my ears than the cataract of Niagara.
Swift. Gulliver. Brobdignag, c. 8.

SQUAT, v. } It. Quatto, squatte,—husht, close,
SQUAT, n. } still, lurking. Acquattare, to hide or squat as a hare doth, (Florio.) Perhaps, says Skinner, from the Lat. Quietus. Menage,—from the Lat. Captare, borrowed from the cowering posture of bird-catchers.

Skinner thinks squat, applied to any thing short, broad, sturdy, is squared, from quadratus. There seems little occasion for two words.

Cowering, stooping; generally applied to the posture described by Dampier and Cooke.
Consequentially,—short, broad.

King Edward the second gaue strict commandement to the citizens to build the abbeie they razed; saieng, that although lawes were squatted in warre, yet notwithstanding they ought to be reuiued in peace.
Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 3.

Therefore I do not like those squatting unseemly bold postures upon ones tail, or muffling the face in the hat, or thrusting it in some hole, or covering it with one's hand; but with bended knee, and in open confident face, I fix my eyes on the east part of the church, and heaven.
Howell, b. i. Let. 32.

He [the ram-fish] squatteth close under the shade of bigge ships that ride at anker in the bay, where he lieth in ambush to wait when any man for his pleasure would swim and bath himselfe, that so he might surprise them.
Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 44.

— Him there they found
Squat like a toad, close at the eare of Eve;
Assaying by his devilish art to reach
The organs of her fancie, and with them forge Illusions as he list, phantasms and dreams.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

By this unreasonable custom they do in a manner lose the use of their feet, and instead of going they only stumble about their houses, and presently squat down on their breeches again, being, as it were, confined to sitting all days of their lives.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1687.

Such wrinkles, as a skilful hand would draw
For an old grandam ape, when, with a grace,
She sits at squat, and scrubs her leathern face.
Dryden. Juvenal, Sat. 10.

She placed them in a heap, laid over them a handful of green celery, and over that a coarse mat, and then squatted herself down, on her heels, on the top of all.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 11.

SQUEAK, v. } To squeak, and to quake,
SQUEAK, n. } (like a duck,) and also the It.
SQUE'AKING, n. } Squittire, to squeak or cry as a parrot, Skinner thinks are all formed from the sound. The Sw. Sqwaka, Ihre suggests may be from the A. S. Swæg-an, sonare, tinnire,—
To utter a sharp, shrill sound.

And thus I sing, when pleasant spring begins,
Like Philomene, since euery tangling byrd,
Which squeaketh loude, shall neuer triumph so,
As though my muze were mute and durst not sing.
Gascoigne. The Steele Glas.

And be content, that some lewd squeaking crier,
Well pleas'd with one lean thread-bare goat for hire;
May like a devil roar through every street,
And gall the finder's conscience, if they meet.
Donne. Elegy upon the Loss of his Mistress's Chain.

The howling of a wolf in the fields in the night, or the squeaking and roaring of tortured beasts, do not so certainly call to them those of their own kind, as this powerful magick of a pensive and complaining soul in the bitterness of its affliction attracts the aid of these over-officious spirits.
More. Antidote against Atheism. b. iii. c. 14.

Pies, crows, and daws, poetick presents bring;
You say they squeak, but they will swear they sing.
Dryden. Persius, Sat. 1. Prol.

Bartering his venal wit for sums of gold,
He cast himself into the saint-like mould;
Groan'd, sigh'd, and pray'd, while godliness was gain,
The loudest bagpipe of the squeaking train.
Id. The Medal.

Ran cow and calf, and family of hogs,
In panic horror of pursuing dogs;
With many a deadly grunt and doleful squeak,
Poor swine, as if their pretty hearts would break.
Id. The Cock and the Fox.

The mimic took his usual station,
And squeak'd with general admiration.—Smart. The Pig.

SQUEAL. See SQUALL. Squeal seems applied to a noise or cry less loud than squall.

Horses do neigh, and dying men did grone,
And ghosts did shriek and squeale about the streets.
O Cæsar, these things are beyond all vse,
And I do feare them.—Shakes. Julius Cæsar, Act ii. sc. 2.

Hark, from aloft his tortur'd cat-gut squeals.
Somerville. Hobbino.

She pinch'd me, and call'd me squealing chit, and threw me into a girl's arms that was taken in to tend me.
Tatler, No. 15.

SQUE'AMISH. }
SQUE'AMISHLY. } i. e. qualmish, (qv.)
SQUE'AMISHNESS. }
SQUE'AMOUS. }

The fifth statute, not to be dangerous,
If that a thought would reue me of my slepe:
Nor of a sight to be ouer squeamous.
Chaucer. The Court of Lone.

Yet for countenance sake, he seemed very squeamish, in respect of the charge he had of the princess Pamela.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

Fast by her side a listless maiden pin'd,
With aching head, and squeamish heart-burnings;
Pale, bloated, cold, she seem'd to hate mankind,
Yet lov'd in secret all forbidden things.

Thomson. Castle of Indolence, c. 1.

During the time you eat observe some grace,
Nor let your unwip'd hands besmear your face;
Nor yet too squeamishly your meat avoid,
Lest we suspect you were in private cloy'd.

Congreve. Ovid Imitated.

If I durst think my actions fit to be examples, I should tell you, that I have been so far from that effeminate squeamishness, that one of the philosophical treatises, for which I have been gathering experiments, is of the nature and use of dungs.—Boyle. Works, vol. ii. p. 14.

This poor fellow must have suffered far greater distress than the other straggler; not only as having been lost a longer time, but as we found he was too squeamish to drink turtle's blood.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 10.

And [he] would likewise, where it were necessary, bear any filthy discourse, noisome smell, or nastiness besmearing him, without squeamishness or offence to his delicacy.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 31.

SQUEASY. } i.e. queasy, (qv.)
SQUEASINESS. }

A squeasiness and rising up of the heart against any mean, vulgar or mechanical condition of men; abhorring the foul clothes and rags of a beggar, as of some venomous beast.—Hammond. Works, vol. iv. p. 614.

In squeasy stomachs honey turns to gall.—Dryden.

SQUEEZE, v. } A.S. Cwysan, terere, con-
SQUEEZE, n. } terere, contundere, premere, SQUEEZING, n. } elidere,—to crush, to bruise, to squise, to burst asunder, (Somner.)

To press, to compress; to oppress, to bear heavily or oppressively upon.

On a certain night he [Richard de Hauering] imagined that he had seen an ugly monster standing on his breast, who to his thinking was more weighty than the whole world, in so much as being as he thought in manner squised or prest to death with the heft of this huge monster, he would have departed with the whole substance of the world, if he were thereof possessed, to be disburdened of so heauie a load.—Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 5.

Now when they purposed to squize out the grapes, they laid certain lids or planks thereupon.

Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 31.

—A watry verse

Will serve the turn to cast upon his herse
If any cannot weep amongst us here,
Take off his cup, and so squeeze out a tear.

Corbet. On John Dawson.

Which similitude of theirs notwithstanding, they would not have to be squeezed or pressed hard.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 581.

Refresh'd with heat, the ladies sought around
For virtuous herbs, which gather'd from the ground
They squeez'd the juice, and cooling ointment made,
Which on their sun-burnt cheeks and their chapt skins
they laid.

Dryden. The Flower and the Leaf.

It [the screw] is chiefly applied to the squeezing or pressing of things downwards, as in the presses for printing, for wine, oil, &c.—Wilkins. Archimedes, c. 9.

—These among,

A subtil artist stands, with wondrous bag
That bears imprison'd winds, (of gentler sort Than those, which erst Laertes' son enclos'd.)
Peaceful they sleep; but let the tuneful squeeze
Of labouring elbow rouse them, out they fly
Melodious, and with sprightly accents charm.

J. Philips. Cider, b. ii.

While we lay in the calms we caught several great sharks, sometimes 2 or 3 in a day, and eat them all, boyling and squeezing them dry, and then stewing them with vinegar, pepper, &c. for we had but little flesh aboard.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1683.

They agreed also to suppress the mention of those [loyal songs or toasts, or] speeches, in favour of the emperor, which the dread of impending evil squeezed out of many against their will and better judgment.

Knox. The Spirit of Despotism, Note.

Here Flatt'ry, eldest-born of guile,
Weaves with rare skill the silken smile,
The courtly cringe, the supple bow,
The private squeeze, the levee vow.]

Churchill. The Duellist, b. iii.

SQUELCH, v. } Perhaps formed upon the SQUELCH, n. } A.S. Cwell-an, to quell,—
To subdue, to beat down, to crush.

Clo. Oh 'twas your luck and mine to be squelch'd, Mr. Has stamp'd my very puddings into pancakes.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Nice Valour, Act v. sc. 1.

He tore the earth, which he had sav'd
From squelch of knight, and storm'd and rav'd,
And vex'd the more, because the harms
He felt were 'gainst the law of arms.

Hudibras, pt. iii. c. 2.

But Ralpho (who had now begun
T' adventure resurrection
From heavy squelch, and had got up Upon his legs, with sprained cup.)

Id. Id.

SQUENCH. i.e. Quench, a common corruption to this day.

Di. Why sir: they'll flea him, and make church buckets on's skin to squench rebellion, then clap a rivet in's scone, and hang him for a sign.

Beaum. & Fletch. Philaster, Act v. sc. 1.

SQUIB. Squibs, ignes missiles, from the Ger. Schieben, to shove, to thrust or force forward, to propel, to project, (Skinner.) See SHAFT. Wachter says—the n. Scheibe is applied to various things that may be easily moved.

Any thing thrown; a missile firework; any thing emitted or projected, a flash, a spark; (met.) a flash of humour; a lampoon, a slight satire; a flashy person, one of mere noise.

It's an hard case, when men of good deserving
Must either driven be perforce to starving,
Or asked for their pas by everie squib,
That list at will them to revile or snib.

Spenser. Mother Hubbard's Tale.

John. They say he can raise devils,—

Can he make 'em

Tell truth too, when he has rais'd 'em? for believe it,
These devils are the lyingst rascals.

Fred. He can compel 'em.

John. With what? can he

Tye squibs in their tails, and fire the truth out?

Beaum. & Fletch. The Chances, Act v. sc. 2.

— I never did so stoutly

I'll assure you, neighbours, since I was a man:

I have been burnt at both ends like a squib.

Id. The Island Princes, Act ii. sc. 1.

It is easy to conceive that the activity of the spirits in the mechanical conformation of the pieces of that insect, till motion has dissipated them, will as necessarily make them run up and down, as gunpowder in a squib will cause its motion.—More. Immortality of the Soul, b. iii. c. 15.

The squibs are those who in the common phrase of the world are call'd libellers, lampooners, and pamphleteers.

Tatler, No. 88.

Knows every prince in Europe's face,
Flies like a squib from place to place,
And travels not, but runs a race.

Swift. To the Earl of Peterborough.

The making and selling of fire-works, and squibs, or throwing them about in any street, is, on account of the danger that may ensue to any thatched or timber buildings, declared to be a common nuisance, by statute 9 and 10 W. III. c. 7. and therefore is punishable by fine.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 13.

SQUILL. } Fr. Squille; It. Squilla; Lat.
SQUILLITICK. } Scilla; Gr. Σκίλλα.

These squilles or sea-onions grow in exceeding great abundance within the Belear Islands and Ebusus, as also throughout all Spaine.—Holland. Plinie, b. xix. c. 5.

A decoction of this kind of worms sodden in squillitick vinegar.—Id. Id. b. xxx. c. 3.

Others give the spleene of a young whelpe but two daies old, in squillitick vinegar, to the patient.—Id. Id. c. 6.

SQUINANCY. } Fr. Squinance; It. Squi- SQUINANCE. } nanzia; Sp. Esquinancia; SQUINANCIE. } Lat. Synanche; Gr. Συν- αγχη, (συν, and αγχω, to strangle.) Also written Quinsy, (qv.)

Being tempered with honie and old oile, and so reduced into a thin ointment or liniment, it cureth the squinancie, and such diseases incident to the windpipes.

Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 1.

But wise men laughing at his fine excuse, told him, that it was no squinance that had stopp'd his wesell that night, as he would make them believe.—North. Plutarch, p. 708.

But some men will never be cured without a cancer or a squinsie.—Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 23.

SQUINT, v. } And Asquint, are perhaps SQUINT, adj. } the same word as Askant, SQUINTER. } askaunce, of which Tooke says,
SQUINTING, n. } —“probably the participles SQUINNY. } Aschuined, aschuins; in Dut.

Schun,—wry, oblique. Schuinen,—to cut awry. Schuins,—sloping, wry, not strait.” The A.S. Scunian, ascunian, to shun, is probably the root of all.

Looking in one line of direction, and going in another, as if wishing to shun; looking indirectly, awry, obliquely

Squint, n. is in common use.

Her face most fowle and filthy was to see,
With squinted eyes contrarie wayes intended,
And loathly mouth, unmeet a mouth to bee,
That nought but gall and venom comprehended,
And wicked wordes that God and man offended.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 1.

Wil. Heardgrome, I fear me thou have a squint eye,
Areede uprightly, who has the victorie.

Id. The Shepheard's Calender. August.

But as although a squint left-handedness
B' ungracious, yet we cannot want that hand.

Donne. Letter to the Countess of Bedford.

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough: dost thou squiny at me?—Shakespeare. Lear, Act iv. sc. 6.

“My household curse, my lawful plague, the spy
Of Jove's designs, his other squinting eye!
Why this vain prying, and for what avail?”

Dryden. Homer. Iliad, b. i.

You tell me that you apprehend
My verse may touchy folks offend.
In prudence, too, you think my rhymes
Should never squint at courtier's crimes.

Gay. The Ant in Office.

The timbrel, and the squintifego maid
Of Isis, awe thee.

Dryden. Persius, Sat. 5.

This is such a false and squinteyed praise
Which seeming to look upwards on his glories,
Looks down upon my fears.

Denham.

Under the law, they that were squint-eyed were incapable of the priesthood, Lev. xxi. 20; truly this squinting out to our own interest, looking aside to that, (in God's affairs especially) so deforms the face of the soul, that it makes it altogether unworthy the honour of this spiritual priesthood.

Leighton. Commentary on First Epistle of Peter, ii. 9.

They will go a text-hunting, lie at catch for an ambiguity, divorce the sentence from its context, strip it naked; and if, after all this violence, it does but squint their way,—See here, say they, as clear a proof of it as from the preaching of Jesus.—Warburton. Rem. on Occasional Reflections, App.

We have many instances of squinting in the father, which he received from fright, or habit, communicated to the offspring.—Goldsmith. Animated Nature, pt. ii. c. 11.

Nor more, through many a tedious winter
The triumphs of the patriot squinter,
The ins and outs, with cant eternal,
Shall crowd each column of our journal.

Warton. The Oxford Newsman's Verses, 1771.

SQUIRE, n. } See ESQUIRE. Fr. Escuyer; SQUIRE, v. } It. Scudiere; Sp. Escudero; Lat.
SQUIRY. } Scutiger or scutifer, from scu- SQUIERLY. } tum, a shield, and gerere, or ferre, to wear or bear.

Aniowe & Normundie alle holy he held,
Of Gascoyne the seignorie bowed vnto his scheld.
Ik a knyght & squiere, clerkes wro to him sworn.

R. Brunne, p. 128.

Ne erle, ne baron, ne knyght, ne squiere.—Id. p. 261.

William of Lyndeseie & Ion le fitz Roberd,
Sir Lucas of Tame, thise grete ther misferd, & alle ther squiere, & other that with tham nam,
Alle drenkled thorgh folie, & faut of wisdom.—Id. p. 241.

Ther nys squier ne hyght, in contreye a bonte
That he nel bowe to that bonde.—Piers Ploughman, p. 180.

Upon this dance, amanges other men
Danced a squier before Dorigen,
That fresher was and jolier of array,
As to my dome, than is the month of May.

Chaucer. The Frankelynes Tale, v. 11, 237.

And yet also of our prentis Jankin,
For his criske here, shining as gold so fin,
And for he squiereth me both up and down,
Yet hast thou caught a false suspection.

Id. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 5885

The ushers and the squiere ben gon,
The spices and the win is come anon.

Id. The Squieres Tale, v. 10, 607.

About his necke he bare a Bible,
And squierly forth gan he gon,
And for to rest his limmes vpon,
He had of treason a portent.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

It was nedeful for them within to make good defeece, for against them was the floure of chyvalry and squyry.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 171.

He by the authority which he hath, as king of heraulds and armes: giueth to him his heires these and these armes: which being done, I think he may be called a squire, for he beareth euer after those armes.

Smith. Commonwealth, b. i. c. 20.

Amo. From squiring to tilt-yards, play-houses, pageants, and all such publique places.

Chorus. Good Mercury defend us.

B. Jonson. Cynthia's Revels, Act v. sc. 11.

Nathlesse some hungry squire for hope of good Matches the churl's sonne into gentle blood.

Bp. Hall, Sat. 2.

Fred. Has your young sanctity done railing, Madam, Against your innocent squire? do you see this sonnet, This loving-script? do you know from whence it came too?

Beaum. & Fletcher. A Wife for a Month, Act i. sc. 1.

The squire, who saw expiring on the ground His prostrate master, rein'd the steeds around: His back scarce turn'd, the Pelian javelin gor'd, And stretch'd the servant o'er his dying lord.

Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xx.

SQUIRR, v. } The origin of this word must SQUIRT, n. } be the A. S. Scyr-an, to cut, to SQUIRT, v. } divide. See SHIRE, SHEER.
SQUIRTER. } To squir, is to scur,—to cut along, to cause to cut along; to move as any thing cutting through the air; (to shoot, sheer away.)

Squirt (squirred, squir'd, squirt)—is that which is scurred or sent cutting along. To squirt, (formed upon the n.)—

To send, to cast, to eject,—(cutting through, dividing the air.)

A squirt, (the instrument)—that which casts, ejects, &c.

If a man be never so apt to shoote, nor never so well taughte in his youth to shoote, yet if he geve it over, and not use to shoote, truly when he shall be eyther compelled in warre time for his countrys sake, or else provoked at home for his pleasure sake, to faule to his bowe: he shall become of a fayre archer, a starke squyrter and dribber.

Ascham. Toxophilus, b. i.

And [I judge therefore the likeliest way to be] the watring of those lumps of dung, with squirts of an infusion of the medicine in duned water, once in three or four dayes.

Bacon. Naturall Hist. § 500.

Quoth warlike Warwickshire, 'I'll bind the sturdy bear.'
Quoth Worstershire again, 'And I will squirt the pear.'

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 23.

The like devise to this, namely of clystres, we learned first of a foule in the same Ægypt, which is called Ibis (or the black storke.) This bird having a crooked and hooked bill, useth it in stead of a syringe or pipe, to squirt water into that part, whereby it is most kind and holosome to void the dounge and excrements of meat, and so purgeth and cleanseth her bodie.—Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 27.

Yet stay, I think that I to mind recal,
For once a squirt was rais'd by Windsor wall.

Duke. Ep. to Mr. Otway.

The squirters were at it with their kennel water, for they were mad for the loss of their bubble.—Arbuthnot.

One single red coat centinel
Outcharm'd the magic of the spell,
And, with his squirt-fire, could disperse
Whole troops with chapter rais'd and verse.

Hudibras, pt. iii. c. 2.

But when they have bespatter'd all they may,
The statesman throws his filthy squirts away!

Young. To Mr. Pope, Ep. 1.

We took a turn or two more, when, to my great surprize, I saw him squirr away his watch a considerable way into the Thames, and with great sedateness in his looks put up the pebble, he had before found, in his fob.

Spectator, No. 77.

SQUIRREL. Fr. Escureiu, écureuil, from Lat. Sciuriolus, dim. of sciurus; Gr. Σκουρος, from σκια, a shade, and ουρα, the tail. See the quotation from Plinie.

There might menne does and roes isee
And of squirrels full great plentee,
From bough to bough alway leping.—Chaucer. R. of the R.

Coridon unto her brought
Or little sparrows stolen from their nest,
Or wanton squirrels in the woods farre sought.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 9.

The squirrels also foresee a tempest comming, and where the wind will blow: for looke in what corner the wind is like to stand, on that side they stop up the mouth of their holes, & make an overture on the other side against it. Moreover a goodly broad busht taile they have, where with they cover their whole bodie.—Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 38.

There are few readers that are not as well acquainted with the figure of a squirrel as that of the rabbit; but supposing it unknown to any, we might give them some idea of its form, by comparing it to a rabbit, with shorter ears, and a longer tail.—Goldsmith. Animated Nature, b. v. c. 1.

The morning came when neighbour Hodge,
Who long had mark'd her airy lodge,
And destin'd all the treasure there
A gift to his expecting fair,
Climb'd like a squirrel to his dray,
And bore the worthless prize away.—Cowper. A Fable.

SQUITTER-BREACH. A dim. formed from the A. S. Scyt-an, to shoot, to throw.

How now, Goodman squitter-breech, why do you lean on me?—Beaum. & Fletcher. A King & No King, Act ii.

STAB, v. } Skinner says,—perhaps from the STAB, n. } Dut. Staven, to fix, or from the STA'BER. } Ger. Stab, baculus, (a stave or staff.) The A. S. Staf-sword; Dut. Staf-sweerd, sica-dolon, a staffe with a sword within it. A staff-sword, (as Verstegan renders it,) saying, that it was a short spear or javelin, the iron whereof was long, and somewhat after the manner of a blade, (Somner.)

A stab, seems to be—

The wound inflicted (by a staffsword, or) by a short, piercing, weapon or instrument; a keen, piercing, blow or wound.

Clarence is come, false, fleeting, periur'd Clarence,
That stab'd me in the field by Tewkesbury:
Seize on him furies, take him vnto torment.

Shakespeare. Rich. III. Act i. sc. 4.

Whit. Speak Capitaine, shall I stab the forlorn swain.
Lieu. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.
Suf. Base slaue, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.

Id. 2 Pt. Hen. VI. Act iv. sc. 1.

— So a daggers stab,
A tragedie did make.—Warner. Albion's England, b. ii.

But yet you see, how soone the day o're-cast.
This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt:
Pray God (I say) I proue a needlesse coward.

Shakespeare. Rich. III. Act iii. sc. 1.

— Here lay Duncan,
His siluer skinne, lac'd with his golden blood,
And his gash'd stabs, look'd like a breach in nature,
For ruines wastfull entrance.—Id. Macbeth, Act ii. sc. 3.

But issues, ere the fight, his dread command,
That slings afar, and poinards hand to hand,
Be banish'd from the field; that none shall dare
With shortned sword to stab in closer war.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

The Indians, placed on purpose, stabbed the greatest part of them, as they attempted to pass by, or forced them off the gangways into the waste.

Anson. Voyages, b. i. c. 3. p. 41.

And [Pope] is called "a lurking waylaying coward; and a stabber in the dark."—Pope. Dunciad, b. i. Note.

Critics of old, a manly liberal race,
Approv'd or censur'd with an open face:
Boldly pursu'd the free decisive task,
Nor stab'd, conceal'd beneath a ruffian's mask.

Lloyd. Epistle to C. Churchill.

But there is one species of manslaughter which is punished as murder, the benefit of clergy being taken away from it by statute; namely, the offence of mortally stabbing another, though done upon sudden provocation.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 14.

STABLE, adj. } Fr. Stable; It. Stabile; Sp.
STA'BLE, n. } Estable; Lat. Stabilis, from STA'BLENESS. } stare, to stand, (the passive STA'BLISH, v. } termination used actively.) STA'BLISHMENT. } That can or may stand, or STABI'LIMENT. } stay; steady or steadfast; STABI'LITY. } strong to stand; standing,
holding, keeping fast or firmly; confirmed, fixed, settled.

And as he and ys conseil stable conseil nome,
Thes letres sende to July the emperour of Rome.

R. Gloucester, p. 54.

And bad hem for the loue of God, that heo hem vnder-stode,

And stabelle holde to gedere, to saue that lond.

Id. p. 123.

And gyf ge abbeth herte god, thys noble nede to do,
Gour rygt honden holdeth up to God, & goure thoght,
And byhoteth hym to be stable, & that ge ne ssolde fle noght.

Id. p. 455.

In the forest of Dene to gadere sone hii come,
He & Sire Ion Giffard, & stable conseil nome,
To holde aze Sir Simond stabelle, hii were at on.

Id. p. 551.

Whan this thing was grant, Henry dred disceite,
He wild, that his conant were holden stable & streite.

R. Brunne, p. 139.

Whan this was set & stabbed, & pes cried on hil,
Henry the gong kyng gede to Normundie.

R. Brunne, p. 139.

Therfor rightfulness is of the feith, that bi grace biheest be stable to ech seed.—Wiclif. Romayns, c. 4.

And ech dai thei dwelliden stabli with oo wille in the temple, & braken breed aboute housis, and tooken mete with ful out ioie [exultatio] and symplenesse of herte.

Id. Dedis, c. 2.

That in ther constance, that is stablesse of corage, and this shuld be in herte by stedfast feith, and in mouth, and in bering, in chere, and in dede.

Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

"The same prince and mover eke" (quod he)
"Hath stablisht, in this wretched world adoun, Certain of dayes and duration
To all that are engendred in this place."

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2997.

Wiste thou not well that all the lawe of kinde is my lawe, and by God ordeined and stablisht to dure by kinde reasoun.

Id. The Testament of Loue.

If it [pitee] be medled with iustice,
Thei two remeuen all vice,
And ben of vertue most available
To make a kinges roylme stable.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

— Such is thy hande on me,
That in my fleshe, for terrour of thy yre,
Is not one poynt of ferme stabilityte.—Wyatt, Ps. 38.

The greateste compforte that I can pretende,
Is that the children of thy seruantes deare,
That in thie word are gotte, shall wythout ende
Before thy face be stabliste all in fere.—Id. Ps. 102.

And all this he teacheth hys church by himself and hys owne spirite, accordyng to hys owne promise euermore abiding therein to leade it into al necessary truth, to thētent that his catholike church may be to euery man that will learne therof & giue credence therunto as himself commaūdeth eueri mā to do, a very sure stablishment and a stronge pyller of trouthe, as wel in perceiuing which is ye true scripture, as the necessary learnyng of ye true vnderstandyng of the scripture.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 665.

But nowe what great cause should moue mee to beare that great affection to the pope, as to faime al these thinges for stablishment of his kyngdome.—Id. p. 1120.

My nature, is subiect vnto corruption and voide of all stablesse.—Fryth. Workes, p. 83.

This is a doubtie kind of accusation, which they vrge against me, wherein they are stabbed and mired at my first deniall.—Holinshed. Chronicles of Ireland, an. 1524.

Thinking this [the bare title of Christians] sufficient for their soules health, and the stablishment of his monachisme, of which kind of profession, the holie scriptures of God can in no wise like or allow.—Id. Description of Britaine, c. 9.

First hauing followed ore the stable ground,
Vnto the deepe profound,
My course I next did hold,
In hope the truth t'vnfold.—Stirling. Aurora. Son. 3.

But lightly treading thereupon, doth shift,
Out of the bog his cumber'd feet to lift,
When they the peril that do not forecast,
In the stiff mud are quickly stabbed fast.

Drayton. The Moon-Calf.

My weake estate to stablish come thou art,
And maist thine owne againe in time renew,
If heau'ns consent.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. x. s. 53.

Imparting to each part due strength and stablishment.
P. Fletcher. The Purple Island, c. 2.

God (saith he) is the prince and ruler over all, alwayes one, stable, immovable, like to himself, but unlike to every thing else.—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 393.

And this very observation will give good light in our questions and disputes: and I give my instance in episcopal government, which hath been of so lasting an abode, of so long a blessing, hath its firmament by the principles of Christianity, hath been blessed by the issues of that stabilityment.—Bp. Taylor, vol. iii. Ser. 6.

Which number [eight] being the first cube, is a fit hieroglyphick of the stability of that government made with the Jews in circumcision.

More. Defence of the Philos. Cabbala, App.

— The king-becoming graces,
As iustice, verity, temp'rance, stablesse,
Bounty, perséuerance, mercy, lowliness,
Deuotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I haue no relish of them.

Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act iv. sc. 3.

He perfect, stable; but imperfect we,
Subject to change, and different in degree.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

The highest possible stability is to be absolutely independent, absolutely uncaused: this is the strongest security against all possible chances or failures.

Waterland. Works, vol. iv. p. 448.

The church, to which our Lord promises stability and a final conquest over the power of the grave, is the building raised by himself, as the master-builder.

Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 13.

STABLE, n. } Fr. Etable; It. Stalla; Sp. Establia; Lat. Stabulum, a stando.
STABLE, v. }
STABLING, n. }
STABLERESS. } A standing or station for cattle, &c., or a place where cattle stand. See STALL.

And that hous of Malmesbury, that an old hous was tho, Of tuo hundred ger and seuentie yerd ther byuore, He made yt stable to ys hors, at yt were alle vorlore.

R. Gloucester, p. 280.

Ful many a deinte hors hadde he in stable.
Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 168.

For whan the great stede Is stole, than he taketh hede, And maketh the stable dore fast.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

And so alyghted and entred into ye village, and were about to stable their horses.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 208.

Wheresoever they [asses] bee stabled, they love to lie at large and have roume ynough.

Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 43.

Whence night by night,
 He and his monstrous rout are heard to howl,
 Like stabled wolves, or tigers at their prey,
 Doing abhorred rites to Hecate,
 In their obscured haunts of inmost bowers.

Milton. Comus.

A scandal is raised on her name, that she was Stabularia, "a stableress," whereof one rendreth this witty reason, because her father was Comes Stabuli.

Fuller. Worthies. Essex.

As soon as you alight at the inn, deliver your horses to the stable-boy, and let him gallop them to the next pond.

Swift. Directions to Servants.

— Smit with the calm,
 The dead serene of prosperous fortune, pin'd.
 Nought now her weighty legions could oppose;
 Her terror once on Afric's tawny shore,
 Now smok'd in dust, a stabling now for wolves.

Thomson. Liberty.

— With rapid speed
 Back to his lord return'd the faithfull steed,
 Wondrous to see! and stabled there remain'd,
 Till the strong spell no more its power retain'd.

Hoole. Orlando Furioso, b. xxii.

STACK, past part. of Stick.

STACK, n. } From the Dut. and Ger.
STACK, v. } Stecken, to stick, (Skinner.)
STACKAGE, n. } Tooke thinks it the past part.
STACKING, n. } of the verb Stig-an, to raise.
 Any thing or things raised or set up, heaped or piled up; e.g. stack of hay, wood, chimnies.

She rusheth in, and clam vp, as distraught,
 The burial stack, and drew the Trojan sword,
 Her gift sometime, but meant to no such vse.

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. iv.

Stack pease upon hovell, abroad in the yard,
 To cover it quickly let owner regard.

Tusser. Husbandry. August.

In stacking of bavin, and piling of logs,
 Make under thy bavin, a hovel for hogs.—Id. Ib.

And though in winter we to moisture much incline,
 Yet those that be our own, and dwell upon our land,
 When twixt their burly stacks and full-stuff barns they stand.—Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 14.

The Indians (I meane the sect of their wise men) lay themselves quietly upon a stack of wood, and so sacrifice themselves by fire.—Bacon. Ess. Of Custom & Education.

While the marquess [Buckingham] and his servant (being both on foot) were chasing the kid about the stack, the prince from horseback killed him in the head with a Scottish pistol.

Reliquiæ Wotton. p. 216.

His prædia in like maner were tributes, tolles, portage, hankage, stackage, coinage, profits by salt-pits, milles, water courses (and whatsoever emoluments grew by them) and such like.—Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii.

By being obliged to sell his corn by retail, he was obliged to keep a great part of his capital in his granaries and stack-yard through the year, and could not therefore cultivate so well as with the same capital he might otherwise have done.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 5.

STADDLE, n. } A. S. Stæth-ol, (stad-dæl), STADDLE, v. } stede, a place, a standing place.

That on which any thing stands or has stood; the bottom, the foundation; any thing that remains standing, as young trees left uncut, and (as in Spenser) a staff cut from such trees.

First see it well fenced, ere hewers begin,
 Then see it well stabled, without and within.

Tusser. Husbandry. April.

Leave growing for stables, the likeest and best,
 Though seller and buyer dispatched the rest. Id. Ib.

For it is commonlie seene that those young staddles which we leaue standing at one & twentie yeeres fall, are vsuallie at the next sale cut downe.

Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 22.

Like to coppice-woods, that if you leaue in them staddles too thicke, they will runne to bushes and briars, and haue little cleane vnder-wood.—Bacon. Hen. VII. p. 74.

So towards old Sylvanus they her bring;
 Who, with the noyse awaked, commeth out
 To weete the cause, his weake steps governing
 And aged limbs on cypresse stadle stout;
 And with an yvie twyne his waste is girt about.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 6.

Inwardly smiling, the proud farmer views
 The rising pyramids that grace his yard,
 And counts his large increase; his barns are stor'd
 And groaning staddles bend beneath their load.

Somerville. The Chace, b. ii.

STAD-HOLDER. } Dut. Stad-houder, lo-
STA'DHOLDERSHIP. } cum tenens, one holding the stead or place (sc. of another).

The stadholders were stewards, or vicegerents to the various princes who possessed the sovereignty.

Neither stadholder or governor, or any person in military charge, has session in the States-general.

Sir W. Temple. Works, vol. i. p. 107.

In Holland, soon after the exaltation of the late prince of Orange to the stadholdership, a tax of two per cent. or the fiftieth penny, as it was called, was imposed upon the whole substance of every citizen.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 2.

STAFF. } Written in the plural staves.
STAVE, n. } Dut. Staf, stave; Ger. Stab; Sw.
STAVE, v. } Staf; A. S. Stæfe. Wachter STA'FFER. } thinks they may be formed from STA'FFISH. } batten, to beat, or from stappen, to step, to go. It may be from the A. S. Stiff-an, rigere, to be or cause to be stiff. Stef-nian, instituer, to institute, to ordain, to establish, to set, or fix. A staff is,—

Any thing stiff, strong or firm—a prop or support; a stick used to walk with; used as a badge of office. See TIP-STAFF.

A staff of officers,—a set or established number.

A staff or stave, in poetry or musick,—a set, established, regular series or succession of verse or lines.

To stave,—to do any thing with staves; to make with staves, to part or fence off (with staves); to strike with, to break or separate, to burst through—the staves.

And mid staves of hegges, defondede hem a boutte,
 And slow of this luther men monyon in the route.

R. Gloucester, p. 126.

He taughte Thomme Stone. to take two staves
 And fetche Felice home.

Piers Plouhman, p. 82.

And Jhesus answerde and seide to hem; as to a thief ye han gon out with swerdis and staves to take me.

Wiclif. Mark, c. 14.

And Jesus answered and sayd vnto them: ye bee come out as vnto a thefe with swerdes & with staves, for to take me.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Ful longe were his legges, and ful lene,
 Ylike a staff, ther was no calf ysene.

Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 573.

Sire Thopas drow abak ful fast;
 This geaunt at him stones cast
 Out of a fel staffe sling.—Id. The Rime of Sire Thopas.

For if the wolfe come in the waie
 Their gostly staffe is then awaie,
 Wherof thei shuld their flokke defende.

Gower. Con. A. Prol.

The hunting staves with their brod heads of steele.

Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. iv.

A witte in youth, that is not over dulle, heaue, knottie, and lumpishe, but hard, tough, though somewhat staffishe.

Ascham. The Schole-master, b. i.

At last, with creeping crooked pace forth came
 An old old man, with beard as white as snow;
 That on a staffe his feeble steps did frame,
 And guyde his wearie gate both too and fro.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 8.

There is no staff more reuerend than one tipt with horn.
Shakespeare. Much Adoe about Nothing, Act v. sc. 4.

Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.
Id. Rich. III. Act v. sc. 3.

He delighteth to go betweene the streights and narrow passages of the staves and windings, whereof the said cages are made.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxx. c. 10.

In classick authors we have relations of a staff or pike made of a durable wood, that many years after the tree had been cut down, being casually struck into the ground took root there.—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 124.

Before the dame, and round about,
 March'd whifflers and staffers on foot,
 With lackies, grooms, valets, and pages,
 In fit and proper equipages.

Hudibras, pt. ii. c. 2.

Mr. Cowley had found out, that no kind of staff is proper for an heroic poem, as being all too lyrical.

Dryden. Discourse on Epic Poetry.

If the searchers find any [irreverent expressions] in the cargo, let them be staved or forfeited like contraband goods.

Id. Preface to the Fables.

A cask in one place and a cask in another; some on the shore, and some half a mile in the woods; and some staved against the trees and leek'd out.

Dampier. Voyages, vol. ii. pt. iii. c. 6.

But it is high time now to come to antiquity; which has been so long staved off.—Waterland. Works, vol. iii. p. 67.

"The fox, the wicked fox!" was all the cry;
 Out from his house ran every neighbour nigh;
 The vicar first, and after him the crew
 With forks and staves, the felon to pursue.

Dryden. The Cock and the Fox.

But I saw, with regret, that the attempt could not be made at either place, unless at the risk of having our boats filled with water, or even staved to pieces.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. ii. c. 1.

Seems now the sad requiem, loads the gale;
 Last, o'er the warrior's closing grave,
 Rung the full choir in choral stave.

Scott. Lay of the Last Minstrel, c. 5.

STAG. Skinner suggests Stig-an, to stick, pungere, from the sharp horns. Junius,—the Gr. Στεγ-ειν, to go in order. Tooke believes it to be "the past part. of the A. S. Stig-an, to raise; the raised and lofty head of the animal being the most striking circumstance at the first sight of him." See STAGE; and see the quotation from Drayton and Milton.

The bucke or stag, albeit that he be the most gentle and mild beast in the world, yet is he as envious as the rest, and loth to part with that which is good for others.

Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 32.

When as those fallow deer, and huge-haunch'd stags that graz'd
 Upon her shaggy heaths, the passenger amaz'd
 To see their mighty herds, with high palm'd heads to threat
 The woods of o'ergrown oaks; as though they meant to set
 Their horns to th' other's heights.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 12.

In examining the condition of our red deere, I find that the young male is called in the first yeere a calfe, in the second a brocket, the third a spae, the fourth a stagon or stag, the fift a great stag.

Holinshed. Description of England, b. iii. c. 4.

— The swift stag from under ground Bore up his branching head.—Milton. Par. Lost, b. vii.

Now the blown stag, through woods, bogs, roads, and streams
 Has measur'd half the forest; but alas!
 He flies in vain, he flies not from his fears.

Somerville. The Chace, b. iii.

The stag is become less common than it was formerly; its excessive viciousness during the rutting season, and the badness of its flesh, induce most people to part with the species.—Pennant. British Zoology. The Deer.

STAGE, n. } Stage, scena, Skinner thinks STA'GED, adj. } may be from A. S. Stig-an, STA'GELY. } ascendere, to climb, to rise or STA'GER. } raise. Stage, in travelling, from STA'GERY. } Lat. Statio. And Tooke thinks both are the past part. of Stig-an; and observes, that—

We apply stage—1. To any elevated place; to scaffoldings or buildings raised for various purposes: 2. To corporeal progress, as, at this stage of my journey; at this stage of the business; at this stage of life: 3. To degrees of mental advancement in or toward any knowledge, talent, or excellence; and formerly also as we now use story (of a house.) See SRV.

Stager,—one accustomed to act a part on the stage; an experienced performer or person.

Staged man, (Holinshed),—a performer on a stage.

And a ghouting man Euticus bi name sat on the wyndowe whanne he was fallun into an heuy sleep while Poul dispuide longe, al slepyng he fel doun fro the thridde stage.

Wiclif. Dedus, c. 20.

Than syr Henry, and iiii. with hym, issued out and came to syr Bartilmewe, and to John de Guystelles, and they brought hym to the myne, and there shewed hym how the great toure stode but on stages of tymbre.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 208.

But yet as a staged man can not alwaies dissemble and cloke himselfe, so this man, who to haue his will ouer me & to deprauie me, inueigheth against the second point, thinking and meaning by reproouing me to be a lier therein, to condemne all the rest.

Holinshed. The Conquest of Ireland, Pref.

— A bedde where I laie,
Me thought I seighe vpon a stage,
Where stode a wonder strange image.

Gower. Con. A. Prol.

Aloft if thou do liue, as one appointed here
A stately part on stage of worldly state to bere,
Thy freind, as only free from fraude, wil thee aduise,
To rest within the rule of meane, as do the wise.

Vncertaine Auctors. The Praise of a True Frende.

O if my temples were distain'd with wine,
And girt in girlonds of wilde yvie twine,
How I could reare the muse on stately stage,
And teach her tread aloft in buskin fine,
With queint Bellona in her equipage!

Spenser. The Shepherd's Calender, October.

This world they'd think a fable, e'en as we Do think the story of the golden age;
Or as some sensual spirits 'mongst us be,
Which hold the world to come, a feigned stage.

Davies. Immortality of the Soul, s. 32.

Your prince, I say, may beat you, so far forth as his dominion reacheth, that's for the distance, the time, ten miles a day, I take it.

2. Brother, you err, 'tis fifteen miles a day,
His stage is ten, his beatings are fifteen.

Beaum. & Fletcher. A King and no King, Act iv.

Nor may this be called an histrionick parada, or stagely visard and hypocrysy, while women seek to appear advanced in stature, or in beauty.

Bp. Taylor. Artificial Handsomeness, p. 168.

— And safe in your stage-cloaths
Dare quit upon your oaths,
The stagers, and the stage-wrights too (your peers)
Of larding your large ears
With their soul comic socks.

B. Jonson. The just Indignation of the Author.

While he is so over-greedy to fix a name of ill sound upon another, note how stupid he is to expose himself or his own friends to the same ignominy; likening those grave controversies to a piece of stagery, or scene-work.

Milton. An Apology for Smectymnus.

'Tis true, some stagers of the wiser sort
Made all these idle wonderments their sport.

Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

The clause in the beginning of it ("without a series of action") distinguishes satire properly from stage-plays, which are all of one action, and one continued series of action.—Id. Juvenal, Ded.

To pay my duty to sweet Mrs. Page,
A place was taken in the Stamford stage.
Our coachman Dick, the shades of night to shun,
Had yok'd his horses long before the sun.

Fawkes. The Stage Coach.

O sweet retirement, who would balk the thought,
That could afford retirement, or could not?
'Tis such an easy walk, so smooth and straight,
The second milestone fronts the garden gate;
A step, if fair, and, if a show'r approach,
You find safe shelter in the next stage-coach.

Cowper. Retirement.

The bank is so steep for near a quarter of a mile, that a ship may lie afloat at low water, so near the shore as to reach it with a stage, and the situation is extremely convenient for heaving down.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 5.

STA'GGER, v. } Dut. Staggeren, to stagger, STA'GGERING, n. } or, as written in Chaucer STA'GGERS, n. } and Froissart, to stakker, may be formed from stack, the past part. of stick,
hætere, hæsitare,—

To stick, or cause to stick or hesitate—in the progress; to stay or stop; to shock, to shake the firmness of the step or standing; to interrupt, to break; to destroy the steadiness, constancy, uprightness, confidence; to move unsteadily, incon-stantly; uncertainly, totteringly.

She riste her vp, and stakkereth here & there.
Chaucer. Legende of Hypermetre.

Than sir Bouciquant, to acöplisse sir Peters desire, came forthe, and ran and met eche other in ye myddes of their sheldes so rudely, yt both their horses stakered in the place.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 168.

Then the disciples and apostles (because they were yet but fiele in the faythe) must nedes haue woondered, stoned, and staggered, and haue been more inquisitiue therin then they were.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1112.

My writhled cheekes beauraye, that pride of heate is past,
My staging steppes eke tell the trueth, that nature fadeth fast.

Gascoigne. Diuorce of a Louer.

If sundrie of our predecessours, or elders haue donne certaine thinges, which at that time might wel be donne without hurte, and afterwarde are turned into error, and superstition, withoute any staggeringe, and with greate au-thoritie let them be destroyed, and abolished by the successours.—Jewell. Defence of the Apologie, p. 309.

"Thrise happy man," said then the father grave,
"Whose staggering steps thy steady hand doth lead,
And shewes the way his sinfull soule to save!"

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

— Tydides rais'd a stone,
With his one hand, of wondrous weight, and pour'd it manly on
The hip of Anchisiades, wherein the ioynt doth moue
The thigh, tis cald the huckle bone, which all in sherds it drove;
Brake both the nerves, and with the edge, cut all the flesh away:
It staggered him upon his knees, and made th' Heroe stay
His strooke-blind temples on his hand, his elbow on the earth.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. v.

Cym. Does the world go round?
Posth. How comes these stagers on mee?

Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act v. sc. 5.

While we are but staggeringly evil, we are not left without parentheses of consideration, thoughtful rebukes, and merciful interventions to recall us to ourselves.

Brown. Christian Morals, vol. i. p. 30.

The immediate forerunners of an apoplexy are commonly a vertigo, staggering, loss of memory, stupor, &c.

Arbuthnot. On Diet, c. 5.

At this they were so much staggered, that they plainly discovered their ignorance of the effect of fire arms.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 3.

To fly for refuge from distracting thought
To such amusements, as ingenious woe
Contrives, hard-shifting, and without her tools—
To read engraven on the mouldy walls,
In stagg'ring types, his predecessor's tale,
A sad memorial, and subjoin his own.

Cowper. Task, b. v.

STA'GNANT. } Fr. Stagnant; It. Stagnante; STA'GNANCY. } Lat. Stagnans, from Stag- STA'GNANTLY. } num, which Vossius derives STA'GNATE, v. } from the Gr. στεγνόν, and STAGNA'TION. } this from στέγειν, continere, non sinere elabi, to hold or keep in; to stay, to prevent from flowing or moving.

Held or retained from motion; still, calm, motionless, inert.

I am fifty winters old,
Blood then stagnates and grows cold.—Cotton. Anacreontic.

Though the country people are so wise
To call these rivers, they're but stagnancies, Left by the flood.—Id. Wonders of the Peake, (1681,) p. 55.

They run, they fly, till flying on obscure,
Night-founder'd in town-ditches stagnant gurge, Soph rowls on Soph promiscuous.—J. Philips. Cerealia.

They remain here till the water drains off from the land;
and then confine themselves to the stagnant ponds; and when they are dry, they ramble away to some creek or river.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1676.

Unexercised reason will melt away in sloth and idleness, and all its vital powers freeze for want of motion, and, like standing water, stagnate and gather mire, and by degrees corrupt and putrify.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. i. c. 3

If the water runneth, it holdeth clear, sweet, and fresh;
but stagnation turneth it into a noisome puddle.

Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 18.

The divers affirmed to him, that sometimes at the bottom of the deep waters, there seemed to be a stagnation of the sea for a great depth.—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 354.

All but Tupia fell a sacrifice to the unwholesome, stag- nant, putrid air of the country.

Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 10.

— It sleeps; and th' icy touch
Of unprolific winter has impress'd
A cold stagnation on th' intestine tide.

Cowper. Task, b. vi.

STAIN, v. } 'Stain is formed from distain, STAIN, n. } as 'sdain from disdain, (see Dis-STA'INER. } TAIN,) from the Fr. Des-teindre, STA'INLESS. } —to dead or take away the colour of. Fr. Teindre, from Lat. Tingere.

To tinge, to dye, to sully; (met.) to sully with disgrace, dishonour, infamy; to disgrace, to dishonour.

So that w^t the goldsmithes toke partie the felysshep or craft of —, and with the tayllours helde y^e craft of stainers.—Fabyan. Chronycle, an. 1270.

— My Tirians eke for thee
Ar wroth; by thee my shamefastnes eke stained,
And good renoume, wherby vp to the starres
Perelesse I clame.

Surrey. Virgile. Eneis, b. iv.

With which infami he wold not haue his honoure staynd
for any crowne.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 65.

The phoenix wings are not so rare
For faultless length, and stainless heu.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

" ' But if she had her least helpe to thee lent,
'T adorne thy forme according thy desert,
Their blazing pride thou wouldest soone have blent,
And staynd their prayes with thy least good part."

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 4.

For from thy wombe a famous progenee
Shall spring out of the auncient Trojan blood,
Which shall revive the sleeping memoree
Of those same antique peres, the Hevens brood,
Which Greeke and Asian rivers staynd with their blood.

Id. Id. b. iii. c. 3.

The hare-belle for her stainlesse azur'd hue,
Claimes to be worne of none but those are true.

Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 3.

See what reward the grateful senate yield,
For the lost blood which stains your northern field;
For wounds, for winter camps, for Alpine snow,
And all the deaths the brave can undergo.

Rowe. Lucan's Pharsalia, b. i.

Hirco, who knows not Hirco? stains the bed
Of that kind master who first gave him bread.

Churchill. The Conference.

— How wishfully she looks
On all she's leaving, now no longer her's!
A little longer, and yet a little longer,
Oh! might she stay to wash away her stains,
And fit her for her passage.

Blair. The Grave.

The town has ting'd the country; and the stain
Appears a spot upon a vestal's robe,
The worse for what it soils.

Cowper. Task, b. iv.

Yet not entirely from their censure free,
Who judge our failings with severity:
The very care he took to keep his name
Stainless, with some was evidence of shame.

Crabbe. Tales of the Hall, b. viii.

STAIR, n. Dut. Steghe, stegher; Ger. Steg;
Sw. Steg; A. S. Stag-er; from Dut. Steghen;
Ger. Stegen; A. S. Stig-an, to go up, to ascend, (Skinner.) And see Tooke, and STIE. Stair,
(or as Chaucer and Fabyan write, steyer.) means—An ascender, — that which or that by which we ascend, go or come up, climb, mount.

But by a venturous grace,
I rise and walkt, sought pace and pace,
Till I a winding staire found.

Chaucer. Dreame.

It is so hie from thens I lie, and the common yerth, there ne is cable in no land maked, that might stretche to me, to drawe me into blisse, ne steyers to steye on is none, so that without recouer endlesse, here to endure I wote well I pur-ueide.—Id. The Testament of Love, b. i.

At Bedforde this yere at the keping of a shire daie by the falling of a steyer, were xviii murdered and slaine.

Fabyan. Chronycle, vol. ii. p. 434.

But, ere my hoped day of spousall shone,
My dearest lord fell from high honors staire
Into the hands of hys accursed fone,
And cruelly was slaine.—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 2.

The Thames, by water when I took the air,
That danc'd my barge, in laneking from the stair?

Drayton. Elenor Cobham to Duke Humphry.

To make a compleat stair-case, is a curious piece of architecture; the vulgar cautions are these: that it have a very liberal light; that the space above the head be large and aery; that the half paces be well distributed; that the whole stair-case have no nigard latitude.

Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 35.

The troop retires, the lovers close the rear,
With forward faces not confessing fear:
Backward they move, but scorn their pace to mend,
Then seek the stairs, and with slow haste descend.
Dryden. Cymon & Iphigenia.

STAKE, n. } Stake, sudes, and stake, pignus STAKE, v. } depositum, are both derived by Skinner, from the verb to stick;—Dut. Steken, Ger. Stehen; A. S. Stican; and of this verb Tooke considers stake to be the past participle. See STEAK.

A stake in a hedge; stack or stuck there,—to which beasts are fastened to be baited; i. e. any thing stuck or fixed in the ground for that purpose;
a deposit, paid down or fixed to answer the event; (met.) a risk,—any thing fixed or engaged to answer an event. To stake, formed upon the noun,—

To do any thing with stakes; to pledge, to risk.

First the nemnid alle the, the purale suld make,
That thogh the reame suld go, the boundes forto stake.
R. Brunne, p. 309.

After many examinations, at the last they condemned him by virtue of the emperours decree made in the assembly at Ausbrough, and shortly after brought him forth to the place of execution, and there tyed him to a stake, where with a ferent zeale, and a loud voyce hee cried, Lord open the eyes of the king of Englande.—Fox. Life of Tyndali, p. 10.

Thou weart that only stake, whereby I ment to stay.
Gascoigne. In Trust is Treason.

The mines the duke of Gloucester doth guide:
Then caus'd his ships the river up to stake,
That none with victual should the town relieve,
Should the sword fail, with famine them to grieve.
Drayton. Battle of Agincourt.

Do so; and I shall praise thee all the while,
So be, thou stake not up the common style.
Bp. Hall, b. v. Sat. 3.

— In his eye,
A burning furnace glowes; all bent to prey
On sheepe, or oxen; or the vpland hart;
His belly charging him, and he must part Stakes with the heards-man, in his beasts attempt,
Euen where from rape, their strengths are most exempt.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. vi.

Gom. My life and honor
At stake I laid.
Mir. My care; and truth lay by it Least that stake might be lost.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Knight of Malta, Act ii. sc. 5.

But what's so tender as a tyrant's ear;
With whom whoever, though a favorite, spake,
At every sentence set his life at stake,
Though the discourse were of no weightier things,
Than sultry summers, or unhealthful springs?
Duke. Juvenal, Sat. 4.

Th' increasing sound is borne to either shore,
And for their stakes the throwing nations fear
Their passions double with the cannon's roar,
And with warm wishes each man combats there.
Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Dam. To bring it to the trial, will you dare
Our pipes, our skill, our voices, to compare?
My brinded heifer to the stake I lay;
Two thriving calves she suckles twice a day.
Id. Virgil, Past. 3.

The desperate gamester, who had staked his person and liberty on a last throw of the dice, patiently submitted to the decision of fortune, and suffered himself to be bound, chastised, and sold into remote slavery, by his weaker but more lucky antagonist.—Gibbon. Decline & Fall, c. 9.

STALACTICAL. Gr. σταλακτικός, from σταλαξ-ειν, stillare, to drop. Applied to—Dropping or dripping water—congealed; an icicle.

Hard by the cave is one or more vast stones, which (if I mistake not) are incrustrated with this sparry, stalactical substance, if not wholly made of it.
Derham. Physico-Theology, b. iii. c. 1.

STALE. Dut. Stallen; Ger. Stallen; It.
Stallare, from stabulum, quia quum recenter veniunt in stabulum, quod stallam vocant Germani, tunc fere urinam solent emittere, (Scaliger.) Junius thinks Dut. Stel beer, vetus cerevisia et defecata; Eng. Stale beer, originates from this source.

Their [mares] staling is no hinderance to their pace in running their carriere, as it doth the horse, who must needs then stand still.—Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 42.

— Thou did'st drinke
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at.
Shakespeare. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act i. sc. 4.

STALE, adj. } Dut. Stal; Ger. Stal; A. S.
STALE, n. } Stal, steal, is a place,—a place STALE, v. } in which things are exposed for STA'LELY. } sale. The Dut. Stullen, staell- STA'LENESS. } len; Fr. Estaller, is—to set upon a stall, to expose unto the view (as Cotgrave expresses) of all passengers, comers, or customers.
Stale then is,— Exposed (sc.) till seen by every one; till become a common sight or spectacle; till it has lost its youth, novelty or freshness; and hence, old or aged, obsolete.

Stale, n.—any thing exposed, held out or offered, (sc. as a lure or enticement; a decoy, Fr.
Estalon,) any thing much used or worn.

To stale,—to expose, to make public or common, old or obsolete; to wear out.

No, this thrise worthy and right valiant Lord,
Must not so stale his palme, nobly acquir'd,
Not by my will assubingate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is.
Shakespeare. Troyl. & Cres. Act ii. sc. 3.

Age cannot wither her, nor custome stale
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feede, but she makes hungry,
Where most she satisfies.
Id. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act ii. sc. 2.

He's grown a stranger to all due respect,
Forgetful of his friends; and not content
To stale himself in all societies,
He makes my house here common as a mart,
A theatre, a public receptacle
For giddy humour, and diseased riot.
B. Jonson. Every Man in his Humour, Act ii. sc. 1.

I'll go tell all the argument of his play afore-hand, and so stale his invention to the auditory, before it come forth.
Id. Cynthia's Revels, Induction.

The lard of Drumlanrig lieng all this while in ambush with seuen hundred men, forbore to breake out to glue anie charge vpon his enemies, least the earle of Lennox had kept a stale behind.—Holinshed. Hist. of Scotland, an. 1547.

Still, as he went, he craftie stales did lay,
With cunning traynes him to entrap unwares,
And privy spyals plast in all the way,
To weete what course he takes, and how he fares;
To ketch him at a vantage in his snares.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 1.

— Do you bring me liveries?
Stales to catch kites?
Beaum. & Fletcher. Humorous Lieutenant, Act iii. sc. 2.

Kate. I pray your sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?
Shakespeare. Taming of the Shrew, Act i. sc. 1.

Was this your drift, to use Ferneze's name,
Was he your fittest stale?
B. Jonson. The Case is altered, Act v. sc. 3.

In bashfulnesse the spirits do a little go and come; but with bold men, upon like occasion, they stand at a stay;
like a stale at chesse, where it is no mate, but yet the game cannot stir.—Bacon. Ess. Of Boldness.

So Fabius thought, that putting these fellows out for a prey to Hannibal (as a stale to draw him from those quarters) he should pluck him by this means from Tarentum;
and so it came to pass.—North. Plutarch, p. 160.

Nappy ale, good and stale, in a browne bowle,
Which did about the board merrilye trowle.
Percy. Ancient Poems.

I stink like a stal-fish shambles, or an oyle-shop.
Beaum. & Fletcher. Rule a Wife & have a Wife, Act iii. sc. 1.

The proof hath been, that both the beer, and the wine, (as well within water, as above,) have not been palled or deaded at all; but as good or somewhat better than bottles of the same drinks, and staleness, kept in a cellar.
Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 385.

So that more than necessitie compelled him he could not eat, by reason that the staleness tooke awaie the pleasant tast thereof, and lesse prouoked his appetite.
Holinshed. Historie of England, b. iv. c. 20.

— All your promis'd mountains
And seas I am so stalely acquainted with.—B. Jonson.

This easie fool must be my stale, set up
To catch the people's eyes; he's tame and merciful,
Him I can manage, till I make him odious
By some unpopular act, and then dethrone him.
Dryden. Don Sebastian, Act i. sc. 1.

I'd rather read Orlando's comic tale,
Than a dull author always stiff, and stale,
Who thinks himself dishonour'd in his style,
If on his works the Graces do but smile.
Id. Art of Poetry.

Here wont the dean, when he's to seek,
To sponge a breakfast once a week;
To cry the bread was stale, and mutter
Complaints against the royal butter.
Swift. Past. Dialogue.

STALK, v. } A. S. Stalc-an, to go warily, STALK, n. } fairly, and softly; to stalke as STA'LVY. } fowlers do: also,—to go on stilts, (Somner.) See the quotation from Drayton; whence it appears that walking on stilts over ditches was the common practice in pursuit of moor-fowl. G. Douglas uses stalker for pastor agens telis, (Æn. 4.) The A. S. verb Stalc-an seems to have been formed upon the verb stal-an, (stal-ig-an, stal-g- or stalc-an,) to steal or creep upon; and the modern application to—lofty, stately walking, to have been derived from walking upon stilts.

Stalk, the noun,—Tooke thinks should be written stawk, and that the l may have been introduced (see the quotations from Chaucer) for the sake of the rhyme to balke; he concludes it to be the past part. of Stig-an, to ascend, to climb.
We now apply it only to plants; Chaucer,—to the rounds, steps or stairs of a ladder.

To move or go warily, or creepingly; to go with or behind (a horse painted on cloth, used to conceal and deceive, and called) a stalking horse;
to walk as if on stilts, with lofty, stately steps.

Stalk, n.—the rising (stem of plants).

The night was short, and faste by the day,
That nedes cost he moste himselfen hide.
And to a grove faste ther beside
With dredful foot than stalketh Palamon.
Chaucer. The Knights Tale, v. 1478.

His owen hond than made he ladders three,
To climben by the renges and the stalkes
Unto the tubbes honging in the baulkes.
Id. The Milleres Tale, v. 3624.

He can wel in min eye seen a stalk
But in his owen he cannot seen a balk.
Id. The Reves Tale, v. 3917.

And to the bedde he stalketh stille,
Where that he wist was the wife,
And in his hande a rasour knife
He bare, with whiche hir throte he cut.
Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

But ere he could his armour on him dight,
Or gett his shield, his monstrous enemy
With sturdie steps came stalking in his sight.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 7.

Come hither Leonato, what was it you told me of to day, that your niece Beatrice was in loue with signior Benedicke?
Cl. O I, stalke on, stalke on, the foule sits. I did neuer thinke that lady would haue loued any man.
Shakespeare. Much Adoe about Nothing, Act ii. sc. 3.

— His frank tongue
Being lent the reins, would take away all thought
Of malice, in your course against the rest;
We must keep him to stalk with.
B. Jonson. Sejanus, Act iii. sc. 2.

Like as the seeded field greene grasse first showes,
Then from greene grasse into a stalke doth spring,
And from a stalke into an eare forth-growes,
Which eare the frutefull graine doth shortly bring.
Spenser. The Ruines of Rome.

These cranes if they be made tame and gentle, are very playfull and wanton birds; and they will one by one dance (as it were) and run the round with their long shankes stalking full untowardly.—Holland. Plinie, b. x. c. 23.

The fowler is employed his limed twigs to set.
One underneath his horse, to get a shoot doth stalk;
Another over dykes upon his stilts doth walk.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 25.

Let the counsellour shew that hee beleeuces it, by giuing counsell rather wholesome then pleasing, not for faction but for conscience, and by forbearing to make the good of the state the stalking horse of his private ends.
Hakewell. Apologie, b. iv. c. 14.

At least where vetches, pulse and tares have stood,
And stalks of lupines grew, (a stubborn wood)
Th' ensuing season, in return, may bear
The bearded product of the golden year.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

It grows upon a round stalk, and at the top bears a great stalky head.—Mortimer.

Protestant dissenters were therefore to serve as stalking horses, that papists might creep behind them, and have hopes of being some time or other admitted with them.
Bolingbroke. Dissert. upon Parties Let. 2.

STALL, v. } The A. S. Stall, stæl, appears STALL, n. } to be the diminutive of Goth.
STALLAGE. } Stads; A. S. Sted, (stad-dæl), STALLATION. } and to be applied generally to STALLING, n. } any place; so are the Dut. and STALLON. } Ger. Stal, including the Lat.

Stabulum, a stable, (qv.) The Fr. Estal is the stall of a shop or booth. Dut. and Ger. Stallen; A. S. Styll-an, stabulare, in stabulo locare, to stall or stable, to stall oxen, or put them into a stall or stable; to feed, to fatten them.

Place, station; the place in which any thing stands, (horses, cattle;) any thing on or in which wares are placed, laid, spread for sale.

A stall is part of the stable—each division in which an animal may stand: also—the seat appropriated in the choir to certain ranks of the clergy.

To stall, (generally,) is—to place, to station, to stand. (See INSTALE.) And—

To stall, in Lincolnshire, (says Skinner,) and in other northern parts of England, is—to satiate, a met. from cattle fed in a stall.

Stallion, (Holinshed) seems to be—a scion, a cutting, to be grafted or planted.

It is not alle brought to stalle for no powere.

R. Brunne, p. 282.

The plough oxe in winter stalleth.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

So that if any of our batayls breke, or dis-aray by any aduerture, than if ye se any suche nede, drawe thyder and confort them, and whan ye haue done, kepe agayne your stall and ye can, for this day ye can nat do better seruyce. Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 225.

In heuen to be stallyd with moost felicity.

Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 140.

The munkys of ye house of Crystys Church of Caubery chas hym to the archebyssshopys see, & had ye palle, & was stallyd soone after.—Id. Ib. an. 1597.

Their peeces then are called Petronels,
 And they themselves by sundrie names are calld;
 As Bandolliers, for who in mountaynes dwels,
 In trowpes and bandes, ofte times is stoutly stallyd.

Gascoigne. Vpon the Fruite of Fetters.

He came of the sanke roiall

That was cast out of a bouchers stall.

Skelton. Why come ye not to Court?

And now his stallation grew near, when the earl of Northumberland, warden of the marches, with one Sir Walter Welsh, gentleman of the king's privy chamber, came by the king's command to Cawood, to arrest the cardinall, [Wolsey].—State Trials. 20 Hen. VIII. an. 1529.

The fat oxe, that wont ligge in the stall,

Is nowe fast stallyd in her crumenall.

Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender. September.

All these together in one heape were throwne,

Like carkases of beastes in butchers stall.

Id. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 5.

Howbeit such a one [rose] was to be seene in Antwarpe 1585, as I haue heard, and I know who might haue had a slip or stallon thereof, if he would haue ventured ten pounds vpon the growth of the same, which should haue been but a tickle hazard.—Holinshed. Desc. of England, b. ii. c. 19.

—We could not stall together

In the whole world.

Shakespeare. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act v. sc. 1.

Praie you leaue mee, stall this in your bosome, and I thanke you for your honest care.

Id. All's Well that Ends Well, Act i. sc. 3.

Long mayst thou liue, to wayle thy childrens death,

And see another, as I see thee now,

Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine.

Id. Rich. III. Act i. sc. 3.

Call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an oxe?

Id. As You Like It, Act i. sc. 1.

Each stall, his herdsman hath: an honest swaine,

Yet every one, must every day sustaine

The load of one beast, (the most fat, and best

Of all the stall-fed) to the woers feast.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xiv.

Cries the stall-reader, bless us! what a word on

A title page is this! and some in file

Stand spelling false, while one might walk to Mile

End Green.

Milton, Son. 11.

Here you a muckworm of the town might see,

At his dull desk, amid his legers stall'd,

Eat up with carking care and penurie.

Thomson. Castle of Indolence, c. 1.

Coming nearer still, I saw a great deal of meat on the stalls, that were plac'd at a small distance from the tower.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

But if I gain the maid, three victims are decreed;
 A stall-fed lamb, a goat, and heifer fair.

Fawkes. Theocritus. A Vow to Priapus.

[Taxes used to be levied upon the persons and goods of travellers] when they erected in it a booth or stall to sell them in. These different taxes were known in England by the names of passage, pontage, lastage, and stallage.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iii. c. 3.

STALLION. Fr. Estalone; It. Stallone, quasi stabuli dominus, lord of the stable or stall, says Skinner; but Junius and Ihre derive from the A. S. Stæl-an, salire, saltare, (Ihre in v. Be-springa.)

A great sort of the quenes true harted subiectes in England, thincke it more mete for wanton Weston to be turned out for a stalaunt, and to kepe company and race among the courtesens of Colmā hedge, than to vse anie kinde communication among worthi ladies or honest gētel-women.—Bp. Gardner. True Obedience, To the Reader.

Commonly the stallion and the mare are put together, when both of them are full two yeares old: and that about the spring æquinoctiall, that is to say, in mid-march: but if they be kept asunder untill they are full three yeares of age, they breed stronger colts.—Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 42.

—Staked up like to some stallion steed.

Bp. Hall, b. iv. Sat. 1.

—Here she comes

And yonder walks the stallion to discover.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Woman's Prize, Act i. sc. 4.

The colt that for a stallion is design'd,

By sure presages shows his generous kind,

Of able body, sound of limb and wind.

Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. iii.

STALWORTH. } Scotch Stahwart. (See STALWORTHHOOD. } Jamieson.) A. S. Stæl- weorthe, or wyrthe, captu dignus; worth the taking (stealing) or seizing, (Somner;) and conse-quentially,—

Redoubted, brave or bold, strong, daring, violent, vehement.

For ther nas knygt in monylonde, ny stallewarde man,
 That in the o syde ther was; & al for a womman.

R. Gloucester, p. 9.

For Gode's loue, stalleworthe men, armeth gou faste,

To sle these homlynges, and here casteles a doun caste.

Id. p. 18.

The kyng adde by hys vorste wyf one stallewarde sone,

That, vor hys stalwardhed, longe worth in mone [mind].

Id. p. 293.

Hii bygonne an holy Thore's ene then toun asaly there

Stalwardlyche & vaste ynou, noblemen as y^t were.

Id. p. 395.

After this Alfride hom Edward the olde,

Faire man he was & wis, stalworth & bolde.

R. Brunne, p. 26.

Whan thei were alle dight, stalworthely & fast

Bothe day & nyght vnto the toure he hast.

Id. p. 165.

This in the Englysshe booke is named Maximian, the whiche, as testyfyeth Gaufride and other, was stalworth and mighty of his handes.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 72.

O frendship, flour of flowers, O liuely sprite of lyfe,

O sacred bond of blissful peace, the stalworth stanch of strife.—Poems of Vncertaine Auctors. Of Frendship.

STAMINA. } Lat. Stamen, a stando, quod
STAMINATED. } eo stat omne in tela velamen-

STAMINEOUS. } tum, (Varro.) Applied to—

The thread spun by the Fates; the thread of life; and hence perhaps our application—to the first principles of life; the threads or filaments of plants.

Some few of the main stamina, or chief lines, were taken care of from the first, and made up the first creeds; particularly the doctrine of the Trinity briefly hinted, and scarce any thing more, because the form of baptism led to it.

Waterland. Works, vol. iv. p. 309.

The persons who, Moses tells us, lived to so great an age, were the special favourites of God, and formed and staminated by the immediate hand of God with peculiar principles of vitality.—Biblioth. Bibl. i. 258.

Stamina or chives, are the small threads which encompass the style in the centre of flowers, upon the tops of which the apices or summits, which contain the male dust, hang. Stamineous flowers, are such as have a number of stamina or chives, but are destitute of the fine-colour'd leaves, which are called petalia, the stamina being only encompassed by the flower-cup.

Miller. Gardener's Dictionary.

STAMMEL. Whalley says, — "Stamel is a kind of red, inferior both in quality and price to scarlet,"—an interpretation evidently constructed to suit the passage in Jonson.

1808

It may be stamin, Fr. Estamine, from stamen, (qv.),—a kind of woollen stuff.

Is't not a misery, and the greatest of our age, to see a handsome, young, fair enough, and well mounted wench, humble her self, in an old stammel petticoat, standing posset of no more fringe, than the street can allow her.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Woman Hater, Act iv. sc. 2.

Red-hood, the first that doth appear

In stamel.—Scarlet is too dear.

B. Jonson. Love's Welcome.

STAMMER, v. } Dut. Stamelen, stamern;
STAMMERER, n. } Ger. Stammeln, stammern; STAMMERING, n. } Goth. Stamms, balbus, balbutiens; A. S. Stamer, stomore, stomettan—balbutire, titubare, vacillare lingua; also mutire,—to speak imperfectly, mutteringly. To stammer is—

To stumble, (sc. in speech,)—to speak lamely, with hindered or obstructed utterance or articulation.

Parrot is no stamring stare, that men call a starling.

Skelton. Speake Parrot.

Her tongue was verye quicke

But she spake somewhat thicke

Her felowe did stammer and stut.—Id. Elinour Rumming

Writ in the characters of another age,

That Plowdon selfe might stammer to rehearse.

Bp. Hall, b. v. Sat. 1.

A stammerer cannot with moderation hope for the gift of tongues, or a peasant to become learned as Origen.

Bp. Taylor.

Their childishness, their stammering, their little angers, their innocence, their imperfections, their necessities are so many little emanations of joy and comfort to him that delights in their persons and society.—Id. vol. i. Ser. 18.

And stammering babes are taught to lisp thy name.

Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel.

The Psythian grape we dry: Lagean juice

Will stammering tongues and staggering feet produce.

Id. Virgil. Georgics, b. ii.

When children first begin to spell,

And stammer out a syllable,

We think them tedious creatures.—Cowper. The Parrot.

STAMP, v. } Fr. Estampe; It. Stampa; Sp.
STAMP, n. } Stampa; Dut. Stampen; Ger.
STAMPER. } Stampfen; Sw. Stampa. Benson

STAMPING, n. } has A. S. Stampe, pilum. Ihre suggests from the A. S. Stæpp-an, to step; to fix or set down the step; firmly, strongly, so as to impress or make an impression.

To strike down firmly with the foot, to impress or mark; to make or fix a mark, sign or impression; to press, force or beat down, to imprint; to form or fashion, (as metal stamp,) to designate or denote (a value—as to coin—for currency.)

Thise cokes how they stamp, and strein, and grind,

And turnen substance into accident,

To fulfill all thy likerous talent!

Chaucer. The Pardoner's Tale, v. 12, 472.

I happened upon the side of it, in a little falling of the ground which was a rampier against the sun's rage, to perceive a young maid, truly of the finest stamp of beauty.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

The lords at London having tried all kinds of stamping, both of the fineness of 9, 8, 6, 4, and 3, proved that without any loss, but sufferable, the coin might be brought to eleven ounces fine.—Burnet. Records, pt. ii. b. 2.

Her twyfold teme (of which two blacke as pitch,

And two were browne, yet each to each unlich)

Did softly swim away, ne ever stamp

Unlesse she chaunst their stubborne mouths to twich.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 5.

—He smote the upper part

Of all his skull, even where the haire, that made his foretop, sprung;

The hurt was deadly, and the paine, so sore the courser

stung,

(Pierc't to the braine) he stamp and plung'd.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. viii.

Concerning gold coined into money, it came up threescore and two years after the stamping of silver peeces: and a scripture of gold was taxed and valued at twentie sesterces, which ariseth in every pound according to the worth of sesterces as they were rated in those daies, to nine hundred sesterces.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiii. c. 3.

It is an established opinion amongst some men, that there are in the understanding certain innate principles; some primary notions, κοιναι εννοιαι, characters; as it were stamp upon the mind of man, which the soule receives in its very first being; and brings into the world with it.

Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. i. c. 2.

To make nature and the material forms of bodies to be one and the self-same thing, is all one as if one should make the seal (with the stamper too) to be one and the same thing, with the signature upon the wax.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, b. i. c. 3.

It must be written on stamped paper, for instance; it must be signed and sealed, and executed before witnesses.

Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 23.

Hence the origin of coined money, and of those public offices called mints; institutions of exactly the same nature with those of the aulnagers and stamp-masters of woolen and linen cloth.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 4.

STANCH, or STAUNCH, v.
STANCH, adj.
STANCH, n.
STA'NCHING, n.
STA'NCHION.
STA'NCHLESS.
STA'NCHNESS.

Fr. Estancher; It. Stagnare; Sp. Estancar, from the Lat. Stagnare, to stay or stop from flowing, (sc. the blood, instar stagni.)
To stay or stop—the current; to cease—from flowing: generally,—to stay, to stop: and hence the adj.—Stopped or stayed; steady, steadfast; firm, fixed, inflexible.

Stanchion.—Fr. Estanson, a prop or stay.

Fr. Estancher,—to stop or stay, to prop or uphold.

His herte gaf tille dame Blanche, if hir wille wer therto, & holy kirke wild stanche sibred bituex tham tuo,
Hire than wild he wedde. R. Brunne, p. 253.

But couetise of men, that may not be *stanch*ed, shall it binde me to be stedfaste, sythen that stedfastnesse is vn-couthe to my maners.—Chaucer. Boecius, b. ii.

Who shall than yeue me a contrarious drinke, to staunch the thrust of my blisfull bitternes?
Id. The Testament of Loue, b. i.

And downe he light, and by the brinke
He tide his hors vnto a branche
And laide him lowe for to stanche
His thrust. Gower. Con. A. b. i.

O frendship, flour of flowers, O liuely sprite of lyfe,
O sacred bond of blissful peace, the stalworth stanch of strife.—Poems of Vncertaine Auctors. On Frendship.

I wil stanche his floudes, and the great waters shal be restrayned.—Bible, 1551. Ezechiel, c. 31.

The foresayde erle sette fyre vpon a syde of the cytie and brent a great parte thereof, as well churchys as other, whiche fyre was scanty stanchyd in viii. dayes after.

Fabyan. Chronycle, an. 8. John (of France.)

When he hath thus done, he stoppeth the orifice again with mud, and so stancheth the blood, and healeth up the wound.—Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 26.

For the staunching of blood, they use also the ashes of frogs.—Id. Ib. b. xxxii. c. 10.

Mal. With this, there growes

In my most ill-compos'd affection, such
A stanchlesse auarice, that were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands.

Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act iv. sc. 3.

It should make us staunch and cautious of grounding judgment or censure upon present events about any cause, or any person.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 22.

If some staunch hound, with his authentic voice,
Avow the recent trail, the justling tribe
Attend his call, then with one mutual cry
The welcome news confirm, and echoing hills
Repeat the pleasing tale.—Somerville. The Chase.

Having once, to try the stanchness of the phial, blown in so much air (without taking out any thing as we use to do in the like case) that the air in the cavity of the phial raised and kept the quick-silver three inches high in the pipe.

Boyle. Workes, vol. iii. p. 184.

Some of the stanchest friends of the people, men brought into the country at the revolution, owing all their honours and emoluments to it, and hitherto professed and zealous Whigs, deserted the standard of liberty, and took distinguished posts under the banners of the enemy.

Knox. The Spirit of Despotism.

When all the parts are prepared, the keel is laid upon blocks, and the planks being supported by stanchions, are sewed or clamped together with strong thongs of plaiting.

Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 18.

STAND, v.
STA'NDARD.
STA'NDEL.
STA'NDER.
STA'NDING, n.
STA'NDISH.

Goth. and A. S. Stand-an; Dut. Standen, staen; Ger. Stehen; Sw. Staa; Lat. Stare; Gr. ἵστημι; A. S. Standard; Dut. Standaard; Ger. Standart; Sw. Standar; Fr. Estandart; It. Stendardo; Sp. Estandarte.

Applied to the position of the human body,—

To stand,—to be, to rest upon the feet in an

VOL. II.

erect position; distinguished from—to lie, to sit, to kneel.

To be, or cause to be or become, in an erect, upright posture; to rest, to remain, to abide, to continue erect, firm, fixed; motionless;—firm, secure;—to stop, stay, cease, or cause to stop or stay, or cease from motion, from falling; to halt; to be or cause to be, to put or place, to stay, remain in hold or keep any place, position, state, or condition; any way or path—course or direction.

Stand,—used with prepositions,—has various consequential applications; as to stand by, or stand up; as assistant, friend, advocate, defender, coadjutor;—to assist, to befriend, to aid or abet.

To stand out, (sc.)—in opposition or resistance, to persist. It is also thus used as equivalent to other compounds of the Lat. Sistere.

To assist, to consist, to insist, to persist, to resist.

Standard,—a standard tree, (distinguished from a dwarf,) one that stands—upon a tall trunk.

A standard,—around which soldiers or others stand or place themselves.

A standard,—(of measure, of fineness, &c.)—that by which quantity or quality is fixed or regulated, rated, estimated, valued.

Standish,—for pens to stand in.

— He gedere ys ost anon

To werre, & to stonde a geyn the Romaynes ys fon.

R. Gloucester, p. 80.

And Edmond ydygt hys standard, were he ssolde hym suif abyde.

Id. p. 303.

Thise men lift ther standard, that stoute was & grim.

R. Brunne, p. 115.

He asayed tham bi and bi, & retreied tham ilkone, & stoned tham alle wery, standand stille as stone.

Id. p. 219.

And Jhesus stood and clepide hem and seide, what wolen ye that I do to you? Thei seyen to him, Lord that oure yghen be opened.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 20.

Then Jesus stode styll, and called the, and sayde: what wyll ye that I shoulde do to you; they sayde to hym: Lorde that our eyes maye be opened.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And he gede out aboute the thridde houre and sigh othere standynge ydel in the chepyng: and he seide to hem go ye also in to my vyneyerd.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 20.

And he wēt out about the third houre, & sawe other standynge ydel in the market place, and sayde vnto them, go ye also in to my vyneyarde.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Ye shul understond also, that fasting stont in three thinges: in forbering of bodily mete and drinke, in forbering of worldly jolitee, and in forbering of dedly sinne; this is to say, that a man shall kepe him fro dedly sinne with all his might.—Chaucer. The Persones Tale.

The people stode in obeisance

Under the rule of gouernance

And peace with vnrightewisenesse keste

With charitee tho stode in reste.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

But the yong spring there, and everie where else, was pitifullie nipt and over-troden by very beastes; and also the fairest standers of all were rooted up, and cast into the fire.

Ascham. Schole-master, b. ii.

Wise men do know, that meane lookers on may trowle say, for a well made picture; "This face had been more comlie, if that hie redde in the cheeke were somewhat more pure sanguin than it is:" and yet the stander by cannot amend it himselfe by any way.—Id. Ib.

Some that were heretikes in dede, would for the great estimacyō y^t Origene was in through al y^t church, auance their owne heresies forwarde vnder the name and standerd of hys famous authoritie.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 410.

Knights bānerets are made in the field, with the ceremonie of cutting of the point of his standert, & making it as it were a banner.—Smith. Commonwealth, b. i. c. 18.

But those two other, which beside them stode,
Were, Britomart and gentle Scudamour;
Who all the while beheld their wrathfull moode,
And wondred at their implacable stoure,
Whose like they never saw till that same houre.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 9.

Prodigious wits! that study to confound
The life of wit, to seem to know aright;
As if themselves had fortunately found
Some stand from off the earth beyond our sight;
Whence overlooking all as from above,
Their grace is not to work, but to reprove.

Id. Musophilus.

— She tooke her horrid stand
Vpon Vlysses huge blacke barke, that did at anchor ride, Amidst the fleet.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xi.

Look how you see a field of standing corn,
When some strong wind in summer haps to blow,
At the full height, and ready to be shorn,
Rising in waves, how it doth come and go Forward and backward.

Drayton. The Battle of Agincourt.

In warlike state the royal standard borne
Before him, as in splend'rous arms he rode,
Whilst his courveting courser seem'd in scorn
To touch the earth whereon he proudly trod.—Id. Ib.

The fickleness and fugitiveness of such servants justly addeth a valuation to their constancy who are standards in a family, and know when they haue met with a good master.

Fuller. General Worthies, c. 11.

He said; and swiftly through the troupes, a mortall lance did send,

That reft a standard-bearer's life, renownd Æneas friend.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. v.

The commissioners of this county did not over-weary themselves in working, when they returned these persons; presenting no under-wood, yea, no standels, but only tumber oaks, men of great wealth and worship in this shire.

Fuller. Worthies. Northumberland.

Care was taken in the reign of king Henry the eighth (when woods were in a far better condition than now adays) for the preserving of the standells of beech.

Id. Ib. Buckinghamshire.

The law was given with terrors and noises, with amazements of the standers by, and Moses himself the minister did exceedingly quake and fear.—Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 7.

I have newly made, at least an essay of my invention, at least in the structure of a little poor standish, of so contemptible value, as I dare offer it to your Lordship without offence of your integrity.—Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 339

The French have set up purity for the standard of their language; and a masculine vigour is that of ours.

Dryden. Æneis, Ded.

Your cavalcade the fair spectators view,
From their high standings, yet look up to you.

Id. To his Sacred Majesty.

"Take your desert, the death you have decreed;
I seal your doom, and ratify the deed:
By Mars, the patron of my arms, you die."
He said; dumb sorrow seiz'd the standers-by.

Id. Palamon & Arcite.

"What well? what weapon?" (Flavia cries)

"A standish, steel and golden pen!
It came from Bertrand's, not the skies;
I gave it you to write again.

Pope. On receiving from Lady Shirley a Standish and two Pens.

It is therefore necessary to have recourse to some visible, palpable, material standard; by forming a comparison with which, all weights and measures may be reduced to one uniform size: and the prerogative of fixing this standard our antient law vested in the crown.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. i. c. 7.

Labour alone, therefore, never varying in its own value, is alone the ultimate and real standard by which the value of all commodities can at all times and places be estimated and compared.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 5.

STANG. A. S. Stang, steng; Dut. Stanghe; Ger. Stang, a pole. It. Stanga, a bar or post, from the A. S. Sting-an, to push into, to sting, (pungere), and as the Lat. Contus, from Gr. Κεῖρεν, (pungere).—

A pole, a long bar, post, shaft of cart, &c.; and (as pole also is) applied to a measure of length.

These fields were intermingled with woods of half a stang, and the tallest trees, as I could judge, appeared to be 7 feet high.—Swift. Voyage to Lilliput, c. 2.

STANK, adj. is probably a consequential usage of stanch, as the Fr. Estanche,—stanch, slaked, quenched, quailed, (Cotgrave.)

Hob. Diggon I am so stiffe and so stank,

That uneth may I stand any more.

Spenser. The Shepherd's Calender. September.

STANK. Fr. Etang, a great pond, pool or standing water, (Cotgrave.) G. Douglas also uses this word, and the Gloss. derives it from the Lat. Stagnum. It has probably no other origin than the preceding stank. See STANCH.

Ray calls it—"a dam, or bank to stop water."

When thei had wele reden, that tham thocht righe lang
They lighted and abiden beside a water stank.

R. Brunne, p. 68.

And fand æne stank that florirt from a well.

G. Douglas. Æneados, b. vii.

STANNARY. Lat. Stannum; Fr. Estain, tin, (qv.) See the quotations from Carew, and Holinshed.

To each of these [quarters] is assigned by the Lord Warden, a steward, who keepeth his court once in every three weekes: they are termed stannary courts, of the Latine stannum, in Englishe Tynne, and hold plea of whatsoever action of debt or trespass whereto any one dealing with blacke or white tynne either as plaintife or defendant, is a party.—Carew. Survey of Cornwall, fol. 18.

She hath also laid vpon you the charge of a gouvernement in your owne countrie, where you are to command manie people by your honourable office of the stannarie, and where you are both a iudge and chancellor, to rule in iustice and to iudge in equitie.—Holinshed. Chronycle, Ep. Ded.

If by publick law the mint were ordained to be onely supplied by our stannaries, how currantly would they pass for more precious than silver mines?

Bp. Hall. Select Thoughts.

The stannary courts in Devonshire and Cornwall, for the administration of justice among the tanners therein, are also courts of record, but of the same private and exclusive nature.—Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iii. c. 6.

STANYEL. The first folio of Shakespeare reads stallion; Hammer changed it into stanyel, the common stone-hawk, which inhabits old buildings and rocks. In the North called stanchil, (Steevens.)

To. And with what wing the stallion checkes at it?
Shakespeare. Twelfth Night, Act ii. sc. 5.

To prevent this daunger therefore, the doves need to have with them the bird which is called Tinnunculus, i. a kestrell, or stannell: for she defendeth them, and (by a certaine naturall power that she hath) skareth and terrifieth all other hawkes: insomuch, as they cannot abide either to see her, or to heare her crie.—Holland. Plinie, b. x. c. 37.

STANZA. Fr. Stance, a staff of verses, (Cotgrave;) It. Stanza; Sp. Estancia; a staying place, dwelling place. Also,—

A pause or stay; a staff or stave, or set number of lines; at the end of which the metrical versification stays or stops—and resumes or recurs again.

Therefore (but not without new-fashioning the whole frame) I chose Ariosto's stanza, of all other the most compleat and best proportioned, consisting of eight; six interwoven or alternate, and a couplet in base.

Drayton. Barons' Wars, Pref.

I have chosen to write my poem in quatrains, or stanzas of four alternate rhyme, because I have ever judged them more noble and of greater dignity, both for the sound and number, than any other verse in use amongst us.

Dryden. Let. to Sir R. Howard.

The poet having made choice of a certain number of verses to constitute his strophe, or first stanza, was obliged to observe the same in his antistrophe, or second stanza.

Congreve. Disc. on the Pindaric Ode.

STAPLE, adj. } Fr. Estape; Dut. Stapel; STA'PLE, n. } Ger. Stapel; Sw. Stapel;
STA'PLER. } the staple of a door, &c. a staple mart or market. A. S. Stapel, stapol, stapul, the staple of a door, &c., so called (says Skinner) quia ostium stabilit et fulcit, because it props the door, and renders it stable, fixed, firm. Staple in all its other applications seems to have the same origin, i. e. stable, established. (Dut. Stapelen, stabilire.)

A staple market,—an established market or port; a market or port established by law or ordinance; generally,—a mart or market, an emporium, a place of resort.

A staple commodity,—a commodity, the trade in, or manufacture of which, is in any place (more than other) established, settled, regular, and, consequentially, there the principal or chief. Also, a commodity subject to the king's staple or place established for paying imports.

From the old statute it appears that staple was applied to a district,—as the staple of Westminster, extending from Temple Bar to Tothill. (See Rastell.) Hence the staple granted to the Abbies.

And he an axe before the foremost rought
Wherewith he gan the strong gates hew and break:
From whence he bet the staples out of brass.
Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

Whan kyng Edward was thus stablyssed in this realme, great sute and labour was made to hym for the repayment of the foresayd. xviii. M. li. to hym and other dyleueryd by stapelers.—Fabyan. Chronycle. Edw. III. an. 1463.

Also they haue a maior and officers of the staple yearelie to be chosen, who haue the liberties for taking of statutes and recognisances staple, within their owne towne & concerning themselves.

Holinshed. Chronicles of Irelande, an. 1576.

Merch. Sirrah, I'll make you know you are my prentice, And whom my charitable love redeem'd
Even from the fall of fortune; gave the heat
And growth, to be what now thou art, new cast thee,
Adding the trust of all I have at home,
In foreigne staples, or upon the sea
To thy direction.

Beaum. & Fletcher. Knight of the Burning Pestle, Act i. sc. 1.

The Spaniards notwithstanding they are the masters of the staple of jewels, stood astonished at the beauty of these, and confessed themselves to be put down.

Howell, b. i. Let. 1.

I have now made a resolution to plant a staple whensoever we shall be separated, to venture my whole poor stock in traffique with you, finding the return so ganeful unto me.

Reliquie Wottonianæ, p. 414.

I say had this vineyard been there, it had disinherited Tempe of its honour; and hence the poets would have dated all their delights as from a little paradise, and staple-place of earthly pleasure.—Fuller. Worthies. Hartfordshire.

He also graunted libertie of coyning to certaine cities and abbeies, allowing them one staple, and two puncheons at a rate, with certaine restrictions.—Camden. Remaines. Money.

This city of Amsterdam, tho she be a great staple of news, yet I can impart none unto you at this time, and I will defer that till I come to the Hague.—Howell, b. i. Let. 5.

The kingdom abounds in rich staple commodities, as silks, cottons, and wine, and there is a mighty revenue comes to the crown.—Id. Let. 39.

They [the English] throve so well, that they took the whole trade into their own hands, and so divided themselves (tho they be now but one) to staplers and merchant-adventurers, the one residing constant in one place, where they kept their magazine of wool, the other stirring, and adventuring to divers places abroad with cloth, and other manufactures.—Id. Let. 3.

The silver ring she pull'd, the door reclos'd,
The bolt, obedient to the silken cord,
To the strong staple's inmost depth restor'd,
Secur'd the valves.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. i.

The staple of this commerce to and from Manila, was removed from Callao on the coast of Peru, to the port of Acapulco on the coast of Mexico.—Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 10.

And while each little author struts
In calves-skin gilt, adorn'd with cuts;
I, vouching, pass 'em off as dear
As any staple-classic ware.

Fenton. Knight of the Sable Shield.

These [customs on wool, skins, and leather,] were formerly called the hereditary customs of the crown; and were due on the exportation only of the said three commodities, and of none other: which were styled the staple commodities of the kingdom, because they were obliged to be brought to these ports where the king's staple was established, in order to be there first rated, and then exported.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. i. c. 8.

STAR.
STARRED.
STARLESS.
STARLIKE.
STARLIGHT, adj.
STARLIGHT, n.
STARLIT, adj.
STARRY.
Goth. Stairn; A. S. Steorra;
Dut. Sterre; Ger. Stern;
Sw. Stiern; Gr. Ἀστὴρ.
Wachter supposes from the Ger. Steuren, to rule, (to steer,) from the influence attributed to the stars in the government of human affairs. The A. S. Stir-an, to steer, to stir, to move, (Ger. Steuren,) is probably the origin of our word star; and the name may have been given to the glittering luminaries of the sky from their apparent perpetual motion or twinkling. Kilian says (upon the authority of Becan), that starre is the continual, the perpetual quivering (vibratio) which is peculiar to the stars, especially to those which, on account of their remote distance, are perceived continually to glitter.

Instead of starlight and moonlight, adj. modern refinement is attempting to introduce the past part. star-lit and moon-lit;—there is no reason for an entire change.

Rigte aboute the kynges deth, in the firmament an hey
A sterre, gret and fayr ynow, and swythe cler, me sey.
R. Gloucester, p. 151.

The tethe ger a sterre, that comete ycluped ys,
At Alle Halwyn tyd hym ssewede vyftene nygt ywys,
That the taylede sterre men cluped hym myd rygte,
Vor ther come frame hyre a leme suythe cler & brygte,
As a tayl, other a lance, as me may y se.

R. Gloucester, p. 416.

Kynde wol gow telle
That in mesure God made. alle manere thynges
And sette hit at sertayn. and at a syker nambre
And nempede hem names. and nombrede the sterres.
Piers Plouhman, p. 405.

And seiden, where is he that is borun kyng of Jewis? for we han seen his sterre in the cest: and we comen for to worschipe him.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 2.

Saying where is he that is borne kyng of Jewes? We haue sene his starre in the east, and are come to worshyp him.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Thus hath this pitous day a blisful end;
For every man, and woman, doth his might
This day in mirth and revel to dispend,
Til on the welkin shone the sterres bright.
Chaucer. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8934.

In goodnes of gentil manlich spech, without any maner of nicite of starieres imaginacion, in wit and in good reason of sentence, he passeth al other makers.

Id. The Testament of Loue, b. iii.

Like to the crabbe [Cancer] hath semblance,
And hath vnto his retinance
Xvi. sterres, wherof ten,
So as these olde wise men
Discriue, he bereth on him tofore,
And in the middell two before,
And. iiii. he hath vpon his ende:
Thus goeth he sterred in his kende.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

So is he [Taurus] not there sterreles.
Upon his brest eke eightene
He hath, and eke as it is sene,
Upon his taile stand other two.

Id. Ib.

But for all that yet nethelesse
Is Scorpio not sterlesse.
For Libra graunteth him his ende,
Of viii. sterres, where he wende,
The whiche vpon his head assised
He beareth, and eke there ben deuised
Upon his wombe sterres thre.

Id. Ib.

Ossa was layde on Pindus backe,
and Pelion on hie:
And thus they thought to bring to sack
in time the starrie skie.
Turberville. Myrrour of the Fall of Pride.

If Mars mooue warre, as starcoonnors can tel,
And poets eke in fables use to faine.
Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

Let now the astrologers, the starre gasers, and prognosticators stand vp, & saue thee from these things, that shal come vpon thee.—Bible, 1583. Isa. xlvii. 13.

And though also that al the ceremonies, & sacrifices haue as it were a starrelight of Christ, yet some there be that haue as it were the lyght of the broad day, a little before the sonne rising.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 12.

The which, more eath it were for mortall wight
To tell the sands, or count the starres on hie,
Or ought more hard, than thinke to reckon right.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 11.

Then form'd the moon
Globose, and every magnitude of starres,
And sowd with starres the heav'n thick as a field.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vii.

My third comfort
(Star'd most vnluckily) is from my breast
(The innocent milke in it's most innocent mouth)
Hal'd out to murder.
Shakespeare. The Winter's Tale, Act iii. sc. 2.

Or that starr'd Ethiop queen that strove
To set her beauty's praise above
The sea-nymphs, and their pow'rs offended.
Milton. Il Penseroso.

For not beneath the ample sunne, and heavens starre-bearing hill,
There is a towne of earthly men, so honour'd in my minde,
As sacred Troy.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. iv.

A globe farr off
It seem'd, now seems a boundless continent
Dark, waste, and wild, under the frown of night
Starless expos'd, and ever-threatening storms
Of Chaos blustering round.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iii.

Nor silent night
With this her solemn bird, nor walk by moon,
Or glittering starr-light without thee is sweet.
Id. Ib. b. iv.

Yet well I wot where to recover mine, [wit,]
Tho not in Paradise, nor Cynthia's spheare,
Yet doubtless in a place no less diuine,
In that sweet face of yours, in that fair hair,
That ruby lip, in those two star-like eyne,
There is my wit—I know it wanders there.
P. Fletcher. Eclogues, Ecl. 7.

Whereat he wondred much, and gan enquire,
What stately building durst so high extend
Her lofty towres unto the starry sphere,
And what unknown nation there empeopled were.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

— Jupiter, with a contracted brow
Thus answerd Mars: thou many minds, inconstant changing thou,
Sit not complaining thus by me; whom most of all the gods
(Inhabiting the starrie hill) I hate.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. v.

— Egyptian wisards old,
Which in star-read were wont have best insight.
Spenser. Faerie Queene.

As when the stars in their ethereal race,
At length have roll'd around the liquid space,
At certain periods they resume their place,
From the same point of heaven their course advance,
And move in measures of their former dance.
Dryden. To her Grace the Duchess of Ormond.

And owls, that mark the setting sun, declare
A star-light evening, and a morning fair.
Id. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

Thy gloomy grandeurs (nature's most august, Inspiring aspect!) claim a grateful verse;
And, like a sable curtain starr'd with gold,
Drawn o'er my labours past, shall close the scene.
Young. The Complaint, Night 9.

Here, night by night, beneath the starless dusk,
The secret hag and sorcerer unblest
Their sabbath hold, and potent spells compose, Spoils of the violated grave.—Mallet. The Excursion.

Dark in comparison, when this was done,
As moon, or starlight to meridian sun.
Byrom. A Memorial Abstract.

STAR-BOARD. A. S. Steorbord; Dut. Stierboord, stuyr-boord. Somner calls it—

The right hand or side of the ship. Kilian adds to this—quod naulerus occupat, locus naucleri,—which the steersman occupies; the place or station of the steers-man or sterns-man.

1 Sail. Stand in, stand in, we are all lost else, lost and perish'd.
Mast. Steer her a star-board there.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Sea-Voyage, Act i. sc. 1.

The fury of the wind still lasted, and took the ship on the starboard-bow with such violence, that it snapt off the boltsprit and fore-mast both at once, and blew the ship all along, ready to over-set it.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1687.

"Starboard again!" the watchful pilot cries,
"Starboard!" th' obedient timoneer replies;
Then back to port, revolving at command,
The wheel rolls swiftly through each glowing hand.
Falconer. The Shipwreck, c. 3.

STARCH, adj. } Starch, adj. is stark, (qv.)
STARCH, n. } by the common change of k
STARCH, v. } into ch; and means—STAR'CHEDNESS. } Strong; firm, stiff. Starch,
STAR'CHER. } the noun—
STAR'CHLY. } That which strengthens, STAR'CHNESS. } or stiffens; (met.) starch is—stiff, formal, precise.

Starchness is not an uncommon word.

Touching starch-flower called Amylum, it may be made of all kinds of wheat, and of the fine corne siligo, i. winter wheat; but the principall is that which they make of the three-month or summer wheat. Wee are beholden to the Island Chios for the invention of starch; and even at this day, the very best is that which cometh from thence; called it is in Greeke Amylum, because it never came into the mill, nor was ground upon stones.
Holland. Plinie, b. xviii. c. 8.

— I'm but froth;
Much like a new thing calv'd, or come more nearer Sir,
Y'ave seen a cluster of frog spawns in April,
E'en such a starch am I, as weak and tender
As a green woman yet.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Nice Valour, Act iii. sc. 1.

Mistriss Turner, the first inventress of yellow starch, was executed in a cobweb lawn ruff of that colour at Tyburn.
Howell, b. i. Let. 2.

Maci. Nay, prithee leave; what's he there?
Car. Who? this in the starched beard? it's the dull stiff knight Puntarvolo, man.
B. Jonson. Every Man out of his Humour, Act iv. sc. 4.

"Ten thousand furies on his steps awaited,
Some sear'd his harden'd soul with Stygian brand:
Some with black terrors his faint conscience baited,
That wide he star'd, and starched hair did stand."
P. Fletcher. The Purple Island, c. 7.

The taylor, starchers, semsters.
Marston. Com. of What You Will.

When Phillips came forth, as starch as a Quaker,
Whose simple profession's a pastoral-maker;
Apollo advis'd him from playhouse to keep,
And pipe to nought else but his dog and his sheep.
Buckinghamshire. Election of a Poet Laureat.

In answer to all this, I might with good pretence enough talk starchly, and affect ignorance of what you would be at.
Swift. Lett. in Sheridan's Life, 1704.

Chancing to smile at the moor's deportment, as not answering to the starchedness of his own nation.
L. Addison. West Barbary, p. 105.

STAR-CHAMBER. A chamber commonly so called for one of the reasons mentioned in the quotation from Smith. But Blackstone suggests that starr in our ancient records is a corruption of the Hebrew word Shetar, a covenant, and that this chamber was appointed for the registry spoken of in the second quotation below from his Commentaries. See also the quotation from Pennant.

[They] doe sit in a place which is called the starre-chamber, eyther because it is full of windowes, or because at the first all the rooffe thereof was decked with images of starres gilted.
Smith. Commonwealth, b. iii. c. 4.

He [the king's attorney, Heath] preferred another information against Chambers in the star-chamber, setting forth the king's gracious government, the great privileges of the merchants, and the small duties they paid.
Whitelock. Memor. of English Affairs, p. 13.

Into this court of king's bench hath reverted all that was good and salutary of the jurisdiction of the court of star- chamber, which was a court of very antient original, but new modelled by statutes 3 Hen. VII. c. 1. and 21 Hen. VIII.
c. 20. consisting of divers lords spiritual and temporal, being privy counsellors, together with two judges of the courts of common law, without the intervention of any jury.
Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 19.

The failure of the general register established by king
Richard the first, for the starres or mortgages made to Jews, in the capitula de Judacis, of which Hoveden has preserved a copy.—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 20.

That court of justice, so tremendous in the Tudor and part of the Stuart reign, the star-chamber, still keeps its name; which was not taken from the stars with which its roof is said to have been painted, (which were obliterated even before the reign of queen Elizabeth) but from the starra (Hebrew shetar) or Jewish covenants, which were deposited there by order of Richard I. in chests under three locks. No starr was allowed to be valid except found in those repositories: here they remained till the banishment of the Jews by Edward I.—Pennant. London, p. 122.

STARE, n. } Goth. Staurran; A. S. Star-
STARE, v. } ian; Dut. Sterrende ooghen, STAR'ER. } oculi regentes. Sterren, Ger.
Starren, regere, dirigere, fixis oculis intueri.
Sw. Stirra, stirna. Sterrende ooghen, are probably stern eyes; i.e. moved, eyes moved or thrown open, or thrown earnestly upon the object. See STERN.

To look or gaze eagerly or earnestly; with eyes thrown out or projected; consequentially, to throw out or up, to project; stand forth promi-nently to view, before the eye.

Hue was wonderliche wroth, that Wit so me tauhte
Al staryenge Dame Studie sturneliche seide.
Piers Ploughman, p. 183.

He cast on me a staring loke, with colour pale as death.
Surrey. Complaint of a dying Lover, &c.

Standing upon his tiptoes, and staring, as if he would have had a mote pulled out of his eye.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

So ran the geauntesse unto the sight;
Her fyrie eyes with furious sparkes did stare,
And with blasphemous bannes High God in peeces tare.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 7.

Their staring eyes sparckling with feruent fyre
And ugly shapes did nigh the man dismay,
That, were it not for shame, he would retyre.
Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 7.

Gon. I' th' name of something holy, sir, why stand you in this strange stare?—Shakespeare. Tempest, Act iii. sc. 3.

Art thou of Bethlem's noble college free?
Stark, staring mad, that thou would'st tempt the sea.
Dryden. Persius, Sat. 5.

The pale assistants on each other star'd,
With gaping mouths for issuing words prepar'd;
The still-born sounds upon the palate hung,
And dy'd imperfect on the faultering tongue.
Id. Theodore & Honoria.

A starer is not usually a person to be convinced by the reason of the thing; and a fellow that is capable of shewing an impudent front before a whole congregation, and can bear being a publick spectacle, is not so easily rebuked as to amend by admonitions.—Spectator, No. 20.

This terrible object stares our speculative inquirer in the face, and disturbs his head.
Bolingbroke. The Occasional Writer.

When the performers all the while Mechanically frown or smile,
Or, with a dull and stupid stare,
A vacancy of sense declare.—Churchill. The Ghost, b. iv.

STARE, n. } A. S. Star; Dut. Sterre, starre; STAR'LING. } Ger. Staar; Fr. Estorneau; It.
Stornello; Sp. Estornino; Lat. Sturnus, from the Gr. Στροπ-ειν, sternere, quia se magna vi sternat humi ex alto.

And he that hath nothing but langage only, maye be no more prayd than a popiniay, a pye or a stare, when they speak fealtly.—Sir T. Elgot. Governour, b. i. c. 13.

The two Cæsars also, the young princes, (to wit, Germa-nicus and Drusus) had one stare, and sundrie nightingales, taught to parle Greeke and Latine. Moreover, they would studie upon their lessons, and meditate all day long: and from day to day come out with new words still, yea, and were able to continue a long speech and discourse.
Holland. Plinie, b. x. c. 42.

Puffins (as thicke as starlings in a fen)
Were fetcht from thence.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 1.

The stare distinguishable from the rest of this tribe [the sparrow] by the glossy green of its feathers, in some lights, and the purple in others, breeds in hollow trees, eaves of houses, towers, ruins, cliffs, and often in high rocks over the sea.—Goldsmith. Animated Nature, b. v. c. 2.

The starling visits Italy in February, migrates in October.
Pennant. British Zoology. The Stare.

STARK. } A. S. Starc, stearc; Ger.
STAR'KLY. } Starck; Dut. Sterk; Sw. Stark.
STAR'KNESS. } Wachter thinks the Ger. Stark is from starren, rigere, to stiffen, (q.d. starr-ig, starck.) Ihre and Kilian consider the Dut. and Sw. to be equivalent to the English.

Strong; firm, confirmed, established,—to the utmost degree.

Thise monkes stoute & stark, to spede wele thei wend,
The kyng thre hundreth mark gaf tham forto spend.
R. Brunne, p. 208.

And she that helmed was in starke stoures,
And wan by force tounes stronge and toures,
Shal on hire hed now were a vitremitte.
Chaucer. The Monkes Tale, v. 14, 376.

He is a starke heretike, it wer even almous to burne hym.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 381.

But Tyndal as soone as he heard of my name, without any respect of honestye fell in a rage with me and all to rated me, and called me starke heretike, and that ye starkest that euer was.—Id. Ib. p. 410.

These men had naturally that in their owne bodies, which like a deadly bane and poyson would kill all serpents: for the very aire and sent that breathed from them, was able to stupifie and strike them starke dead.
Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 2.

Amint. This earth of mine doth tremble, and I feel
A stark affrighted motion in my blood;
My soul grows weary of her house, and I
All over am a trouble to my self.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Maid's Tragedy, Act v.

2. Boor. Stark beer, boy, stout and strong beer.
Id. Beggar's Bush, Act iii. sc. 1.

Thou dy'edst a most rare body, of melancholly.
How found you him?
Arui. Starke, as you see.
Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act iv. sc. 4.

Cla. As fast lock'd vp in sleepe, as guiltesse labour,
When it lies starkely in the travellers bones,—
He will not wake.—Id. Meas. for Meas. Act iv. sc. 2.

For the stiffnesse and starkenesse of the lims, the grievance also of the sinews, it [nitre] serveth verie wel.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxxi. c. 10.

— Either he, or you, or both
Were stark mad, else he might have liv'd
To have given a stronger testimony to th' world
Of what he might have been.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Scornful Lady, Act ii. sc. 1.

A discarded statesman, that at his first landing appeared stark staring mad, would become calm in a week's time.
Tatler, No. 125.

STAR'LING. See STERLING.

START, n. } Skinner thinks it may be START, v. } derived from the A. S. Styr-an, STAR'TER. } movere, commovere, (to stir,)
STAR'TING, n. } to move; and of this verb, STAR'TINGLY. } Tooke considers it to be the STAR'TLE, v. } past part. Stirred, stir'd, stirt, STAR'TLE, n. } stert, sturt, or start. G. Douglas writes Sturt; our old authors, Stert.

A start,—a motion or emotion; usually applied to a short, sudden motion, or emotion; short, sudden, actions; interrupted, returning at intervals;—contraction, convulsion. See the quotation from Bacon.

To get the start,—the first motion; to gain an advance or advantage.

To start,—to move or cause to move; to rouse, raise, or excite; to move suddenly, (with contraction, convulsion, agitation, alarm.)

Startle, the dim. of start, is commonly used when the motion arises from surprise, alarm, affright.

He was first that stirte to lond out of the boote,
Armed & suerd girte, bot an axe he smote.

R. Brunne, p. 159.

As three thynges ther beoth. that doth a man to sterte
Out of is owene hove.

Piers Plouhman, p. 336.

And for to don his observance to May,
Remembring on the point of his desire
He on his courser, sterting as the fire,
Is ridden to the felde him to pley,
Out of the court, were it a mile or tway.

Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1503.

Upon a courser, startling as the fire,
Men might tourne him with a little wire.

Id. The Legende of Dido.

Upon the morowe and vp she sterte
And to the sea (where as she mette
The bodie laie) without lette
She drough.

Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

But one Lilla y^e kynges trusty seruaunt, disgarnysshed of shylde or other wepyn, to defende his mayster, start betwene ye kyng & the swerde, and was stryken thorough y^e body & dyed.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 130.

Longe tyme after y^e deth of the sayd: Rosamonde, in the sayd abbey was shewed a cofer of the sayd wenches, of y^e lēghth of ii fote, i the which apered feyghtyng geauntes, stertlyng of beestys, swymyng of fysshes & fleyng of fowlys.—Id. Ib. c. 238.

And skornefully he cast
At hir a frowning glaunce,
Which made the mayde to striue for spech,
And stirtiling from hir traunce.

Gascoigne. The Complaynt of Phylomene.

Men report, that at the last convocation, ye spake many things which ye could not well defend; and therefore it is not greatly feared what ye can say or write in that matter, howsoever ye be quykned and startled.

Burnet. Records, vol. i. b. ii. p. 199. No. 49.

Which when the wakeful Elfe perceiv'd, streight way
He started up, and did him selfe prepayre
In sunbriht armes, and battailous array;
For with that Pagan proud he combatt will that day.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 5.

The Welchmen were not so discouraged herewith, but that they brake vpon him out of their starting holes and places of refuge through the marishes, and slaieng their enimies horsse, put them backe to their power.

Holinshed. Hen. III. an. 1257.

And whilst the eager dogs upon the start do draw,
She riseth from her seat, as though on earth she flew,
Forc'd by some yelping cūte [cur] to give the greyhounds view.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 23.

Starting is both an apprehension of the thing feared;
(and, in that kind, it is a motion of shrinking;) and likewise an inquisition, in the beginning, what the matter should be; (and in that kind it is a motion of erection;) and therefore, when a man would listen suddenly to any thing, he starteth; for the starting is an erection of the spirits to attend.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 713.

Thy lustful thoughts and treacherous designs, thy falsehoods to God and startings from thy holy promises, thy follies and impieties shall be laid open before the world.

Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 1.

Some men are wise and know their weaknesses, and to prevent their startings back, will make fierce and strong resolutions, and bind up their gaps with thorns, and make a new hedge about their spirits.—Id. Ser. 10.

Des. Why do you speake so startingly, and rash?
Shakespeare. Othello, Act iii. sc. 4.

Soph. Let me see your work:
Fie upon't, what a thread's here! a poor cobbler's wife
Would make a finer to sew a clown's rent startup.

Ford. The Picture, Act v. sc. 1.

Mast. We'll spare her our main top-sail,
He shall not look us long, we are no starters.
Down with the foresail too, we'll spoon before her.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Double Marriage, Act ii. sc. 1.

When (after this) another flew; the same hand giving wing
To martiall Phorcis startled soule, that was the after spring
Of Phænops seed.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xvii.

He [Clemens] must be a very orthodox writer indeed, when in so large a volume, and wrote before the Arian controversy was started, he appears to have been so well guarded as to leave room only for very frivolous exceptions.

Waterland. Works, vol. iii. p. 93.

Harm. Hang'em, base English starts, let'em e'en take their part of their own old proverb, save a thief from the gallows.

Dryden. Amboyne, Act i. sc. 1.

— I'll sooner

Stand to it boldly, and take quarter,
To let them see I am no starter.—Hudibras, pt. i. c. 3.

The supposition at least, that angels do sometimes assume bodies, needs nor startle us; since some of the most ancient and most learned fathers of the church seemed to believe that they had bodies.—Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 23.

The startling steed was seiz'd with sudden fright,
And, bounding, o'er the pummel cast the knight.

Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

After having recovered from my first startle, I was very well pleased at the accident.—Spectator.

I have been credibly informed of a man so lame with the gout that he could stir neither hand nor foot, who on hearing a sudden outcry of fire in the next house, started up out of bed and ran to the window; but upon finding the danger over, his strength immediately left him, and he was forced to be carried back again.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 21.

There were two varieties of this kind, the first used in hawking, to spring the game, which are the same with our starters.—Pennant. British Zoology. The Dog.

It may now perhaps be a startling thought, that they are just upon the edge of eternity—their consciences may begin to take an alarm in earnest—their fears proportionably to rise.—Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 22.

STARVE, v. } Dut. Sterven; Ger. Ster-
STARVELING, n. } ben; A. S. Steorf-an, to die, STARVELING, adj. } or cause to die; to kill, to slay; to perish.

To kill, to slay, to destroy: it is now commonly restricted to—to destroy, to perish, with hunger or cold; to withhold or refuse nourishment or support.

Alle ere we hider comen, Jhesu Criste seruisse,
The way for him we nomen, for him to lyue & sterue.

R. Brunne, p. 184.

— And myne herte hit wiste
That thou were such as thou seist. ich sholde rather sterue.

Piers Plouhman, p. 102.

Alas! Custance, thou hast no champion,
Ne fighten canst thou not, so wala wa!
But he that starf for his redemption.

Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 4988.

Creseide, which that well nigh starf for feare.

Id. Troil. & Cres. b. ii.

Thei that ben hardie soone assemblen,
Wherof the dredfull hertes tremblen.
That one sleeth, and that other sterueth,
But abouen all his price deserueth
This knightly Romain.

Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

Thus wolde I for my last worde beseche,
That thou my loue acquite, as I deserue:
Or elles to me playnly for to sterue.

Id. Ib. b. viii.

And where the riche wanteth, what can the pore find, who in a common scarcitie, lyueth most scarcely, and feeleth quickest the sharpnesse of starueng, when euery man for lack is hungerbitten.—Sir J. Cheeke. The Hurt of Sedition.

"But if for me ye fight, or me will serue,
Not this rude kynd of battaill, nor these armes
Are meet, the which doe men in bale to sterue,
And doolefull sorrowe heape with deadly harmes:
Such cruell game my scarmoges disarmes."

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 6.

And now thy arms is giv'n, the letter's read,
The body risen again, the which was dead,
And thy poor starveling bountifully fed.

Donne. To Mr. T. W.

So lavish ope-tyde causeth fasting lents,
And starveling famine comes of large expense.

Bp. Hall. Satires, b. ii. Sat. 1.

But the base miser starves amidst his store,
Broods on his gold, and, griping still at more,
Sits sadly pining, and believes he's poor.

Dryden. The Wife of Bath's Tale.

In this wet starveling plight we spent the tedious night.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

Honour thy father and mother, says the law. But, said the Pharisee, if you tell your poor father you intended to dedicate your money to holy uses, you may let him starve.
Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 6.

STATARY. } Lat. Statarius, stationary,
STATARIAN. } having or keeping their sta-STATARIANLY. } tion or standing place; and,
thus,—

Steady, regular or well regulated; keeping rank; well disciplined.

The set and statary times of pairing of nails, and cutting of hair, is thought by many a point of consideration; which is perhaps but the continuation of an ancient superstition.

Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. v. c. 21.

I have made bold to bring a new adopted son of mine to beg a detachment of your statarian soldiers to escort him into the regions of physiology and pathology.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. ii. c. 23.

Your skirmishing parties, call them co-horts or cow-hearts, shall never drive my statarianly disciplined battallion from its ground.—Id. Ib.

STATE, v. } Fr. Estat; It. Stato; Sp.
STATE, n. } Stado, from the Lat. Statum, STA'TEDLY. } past part. of stare, to stand.
STA'TELY. } (See ESTATE.) Applied STA'TELINESS. } to—

All or any circumstances under which any thing stands, exists or subsists, or by which it may be affected;
more especially to—the rank or condition; the possessions or property; also to the general establishment of government; to persons of rank, of noble rank;
the place or station, the seat; the dress or ornament; the canopy.

Stately,—according to state or condition, rank or quality; to high rank, nobility or majesty;
hence—grand, pompous, majestic, magnificent.

To state,—to set forth the condition or circumstances under which any thing stands, exists or subsists; to set or place in order, to settle, arrange, regulate.

Statistick, (Fr. Statistique), is a word for which we are said to be indebted to a living writer. Sta- tisticks is applied to every thing that pertains to a state,—its population, soil, produce, &c.

So that at the laste, tho he in stat was,
And them thought, that ys pere in the world nas.

R. Gloucester, p. 11.

Sir Hugh was man of state, he said as I salle rede.

R. Brunne, p. 258.

For no man may be amiable,
But if he be so firme and stable,
That fortune change him not ne blinde,
But that his friend alway him finde,
Both poore and riche in a state.

Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

For which the joy throughout the town,
So great was that the bells sown
Afraid the people, a journey,
About the city every way,
And come and asked cause and why
They rongen were so stately?

Id. Dreame.

God hathe here ordayned for the meanes towarde it, conuenient for the state of this presēt life, and sufficiente for the iuste cause of damnacion.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 720.

It pleased the princess, in whom indeed stateliness shines through courtesy, to let fall some gracious look upon me.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Many other inconveniences there are consequent to this stating of this question (and particularly that of which our experience hath given us evident demonstration,) that by those which thus state it, there hath never yet been assigned any definite number, or catalogue of fundamentals in this sence.—Hammond. Works, vol. i. p. 462.

In a fayre playne upon an equall hill
She placed was in a pavilion;
Not such as craftsmen by their idle skill
Are wont for princes states to fashion;
But th' earth herself.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, c. 7. Of Mutabilitie.

— And from the dore
Of that Plutonian Hall, invisible
Ascended his [Satan] high throne, which under state
Of richest texture spread, at th' upper end
Was plac'd in regal lustre.—Milton. Paradise Lost, b. x.

Mach. Our selfe will mingle with society,
And play the humble host:
Our hostesse keeps her state; but in best time
We will require her welcome.

Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act i. sc. 4.

It was an hill plaste in an open plaine,
That round about was bordered with a wood
Of matchlesse hight, that seem'd th' earth to disdain;
In which all trees of honour statelily stood.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 10.

Yee that in waters glide, and yee that walk
The earth, and statelily tread, or lowly creep.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. v.

Fount. Sirra, we have so lookt for thee, and long'd for thee;
this widow is the strangest thing, the stateliest, and stands so much upon her excellencies.

Beaum. & Fletch. Without Money, Act ii. sc. 1.

If my strict face and counterfeited stateliness
Could have won on ye, I had caught ye that way;
And you should never have come to have known who hurt ye.

Id. The Maid in the Mill, Act v. sc. 2.

To the said dukes [of Lancaster] house of the Sauoie, in beauteie and stateliness of building, with all maner of princelie furniture, there was not any other in the realme comparable.—Holinshed. Rich. II. an. 1381.

In a dark text, these states-men left their mindes;
For well they knew, that monarch's ministry
(Like that of priests) but little rev'rence findes,
When they the curtain ope to ev'ry eye.

Davenant. Gondibert, b. ii. c. 5.

The word statesmen, is of great latitude, sometimes signifying such who are able to manage offices of state, though never actually called thereunto.

Fuller. General Worthies, c. 6.

It differed from a colony, most of all in that a colony was a progeny of the city, and this of such as were received into state-favour and friendship by the Roman.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 16. Illustrations.

She tooke her state-chair; and a foot-stooles stay
Had for her feete; and of her husband, thus Askt to know all things.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. iv.

The actions of the prince, while they succeed,
Should be made good, and glorified; not question'd.
Men do but shew their all affections, that—

Aub. What? speak out.

Lat. Do, murmur against their masters.

Aub. Is this to me?

Lat. It is to whosoever mislikes of the dukes courses.

Aub. I! is't so? at your stateward, Sir?

Beaum. & Fletch. The Bloody Brother, Act iv. sc. 1.

I would therefore see the most subtile state-monger in the world chalk out a way for his maiestie to meditate for grace, and favour for the protestants, by executing at this time the severity of the lawes upon the papists.

Cabbala. The Lord Keeper to Lord Visc. Anan, p. 111.

The greatest politician is the greatest fool; for he turns all his religion into hypocrisy, into statisme, yea into atheisme; making Christianity a very foot-stool to policy.

Junius. Sin Stigmat. (1639) p. 613.

Gonz. And besides them I keep a noble train,
Statists, and men of action.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Laws of Candy, Act ii. sc. 1.

You are an eminent statist, be a father
To such unfriended virgins, as your bounty Hath drawn into a scandal.

Ford. The Fancies Chaste & Noble, Act iii. sc. 2.

Therefore Cicero, not in his Tusculan or companion retirements among the learned wits of that age, but even in the senate to a mixt auditory (though he were sparing otherwise to broach his phylosophy among statists and lawyers) yet as to this point both in his oration against Piso, and in that which is about the answers of the sooth-sayers against Clodius, he declares it publicly as no paradox to common ears, that God cannot punish man more, nor make him more miserable, than still by making him more sinful.

Milton. Doct. & Disc. of Divorce, b. ii. c. 3.

The people looking one while on the statists, whom they beheld without constancy or firmness, labouring doubtfully beneath the weight of their own too high undertakings, busiest in petty things, trifling in the main, deluded and quite alienated, expressed divers ways their disaffection; some despising whom before they honoured, some deserting, some inveighing, some conspiring against them.

Id. History of England, b. ii.

Neither indeed are there any publick monuments at all extant, in which it [Hylozoick atheism] is avowedly maintained, stated and reduced into any system.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 145.

As she affected not the grandeur of a state with a canopy, she thought there was no offence in an elbow-chair.

Swift. History of John Bull.

How can he well satisfy himself to dwell statelily, to feed daintily, to be finely clad.—Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 21.

Hence, it is that the enemies of God take occasion to blaspheme, and call our religion statism.

South, vol. i. Ser. 4.

He [Gardiner] was a learned man and of excellent parts, a great statist, and a writer of many books.

Wood. Fasti Oxon. vol. i.

That men should assemble at stated seasons for the public worship of God, all must perceive to be a duty who acknowledge that a creature endowed with the high faculties of reason and intelligence owes to his Maker public expressions of homage and adoration.—Bp. Horsley, vol. i. Ser. 21.

Among the first, it [a state of trial] teaches us to be satisfied with our different stations in this world. The very nature of a state of trial shews us the necessity of being satisfied with God's appointment of it.

Gilpin, vol. ii. Ser. 33.

Make it not a time of acting contrary to religion, but statedly use the opportunities it gives you, of learning and being reminded of your several duties, which you must be sensible you need.—Secker, vol. ii. Ser. 11.

Obliging such to an unreasonable attendance, making them wait long, and it may be, return often, (when perhaps only idleness, or caprice, or occupations that might well be interrupted, prevent their being dispatched immediately) is a very provoking and a very injurious kind of stateliness.

Id. Ser. 7.

When, like a Mars (fear order'd to retreat)
We saw thee nimble vault into his seat,
Into the seat of pow'r, at one bold leap,
A perfect connoisseur in statesmanship,

Churchill. The Candidate.

It is scarcely worth while to discuss all the objections which the narrow views of cold-hearted statistical writers have suggested against the charity-schools of this benevolent country.—Knox, Ser. 28.

STA'TICK. } Gr. Στατικός, (from στατίξ-ειν.
STA'TICKS. } sistere,) sistendi vim habens. Gr.
STA'TICAL. } Στατική επιστήμη, scientia librandi.

The science of balancing, poising or weighing.

But we may be easily delivered of this solicitude, if we consider the nature of the windes, the nature of these vehicles, and the statick power of the soul.

More. Immortality of the Soul, b. iii. c. 159.

They still retain the same laws and characters, which are the statick principles or forms that individuate them, and keep them still the same.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 7.

I had oftentimes the satisfaction, by looking first upon the statical baroscope (as for distinction's sake it may be called) to foretel, whether in the mercurial baroscope the liquor were high or low.—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 140.

Little accurateness [is] wont to be employed in weighing things, by those that are not versed in statical affairs.

Id. Ib. p. 285.

The approach of a fit of the gout is easily known by the inward disorders, as wind, sickness, crudities in the stomach, a drowsiness, these joined with the season or weather, if such a one by a statical engine could regulate his insensible perspiration, he might often, by restoring of that, foresee, prevent, or shorten his fit.—Arbuthnot. On Diet, c. 4.

Now this is a catholic rule of staticks; that if any body be bulk for bulk heavier than a fluid, it will sink to the bottom of that fluid; and if lighter, it will float upon it; having part of it self extant, and part immersed to such a determinate depth, as that so much of the fluid as is equal in bulk to the immersed part, be equal in gravity to the whole.—Bentley. Confutation of Atheism, Ser. 4.

STA'TION, n. } Fr. Station; It. Staziòne; STA'TION, v. } Sp. Estacion; Lat. Statio, a STA'TIONARY. } station, a place to stand in.
STA'TIONARY, n. } A stand or standing, a STA'TIONER. } place, or position, situation, condition; stated place, or position.

Stationary,—pertaining to place or station; remaining, abiding, continuing in a place or station. Also pertaining to a stationer.

Stationer, Delpino says, (Sp. Estacionero,) is the old name for a bookseller. Skinner thinks stationers are so called because they had their shops in one station or place; and cites Saint Paul's Church-yard as an instance confirming his conjecture. It is not improbable that the name may have been given to the sellers of books, paper, &c. from the stalls or stations kept by them, especially at fairs, as is still the case at Leipsic, Francfort, and other towns in Germany. Sheldon speaks of—standing stationers and assistants at miracle markets, and miracle forges, (Miracles of Antichrist, p. 175.) And see Pegge's Anecdotes of the English Language; and see also the quotation from Hooker.

Tofore the creacion
Of any worldes station,
Of heuen, of erthe, or eke of hell,
So as these olde bokes tell,
As sounne to fore the songe is set,
And yet thei ben to gether knet.—Gower. Con. A. b. vii.

Besides, it were a coward's part to fly
Now from my hold, that have let out so well;
It b'ing the station of my life, where I Am set to serve, and stand as sentinel.

Daniel. Civil Wars, b. viii.

The ancient vse of the church throughout all Christendom was, for fiftie dayes after Easter (which fiftie dayes were called Pentecost, though most commonly the last day of them which is Whitsunday bee so called) in like sort all the Sundayes throughout the whole yeere their manner was to stand at prayer: whereupon their meetings vnto that purpose on those dayes, had the name of stations giuen them.

Hooker. Ecclesiasticall Politie, b. iv. § 13.

Then they are stationaries in their houses, which be in the middle points of the latitudes, which they call eclipticks.

Holland. Plinie, b. ii. c. 16.

The sun, the moon, the stars, do alway vary;
The times turn round still, nothing stationary.

Brome. On the turn-coat Clergy.

Lap. 'Twill much enrich the company of stationers,
'Tis thought 'twill prove a lasting benefit,
Like the wise masters, and the almanacks.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Nice Valour, Act v. sc. 3.

I will not add that I have passed my promise (and that is an honest man's bond) to my former stationer, that I will write nothing for the future, which was in my former books so considerable as may make them interfere one with another to his prejudice.—Fuller. General Worthies, c. 25.

—Let tyrants fierce

Lay waste the world; his the more glorious part
To check their pride; and when the brazen voice
Of war is hush'd (as erst victorious Rome)
To employ his station'd legions in the works Of peace.

Somerville. The Chace.

—This youth had station'd many a warlike band
Of horse and foot, which, at the king's command,
He lately rais'd from all the neighbouring land.

Hoole. Orlando Furioso, b. xxiii.

No powder'd pert, proficient in the art
Of sounding an alarm, assaults these doors
Till the street rings; no stationary steeds
Cough their own knell, while, heedless of the sound,
The silent circle fan themselves, and quake.

Cowper. Task, b. iv.

Though the wealth of a country should be very great, yet if it has been long stationary, we must not expect to find the wages of labour very high in it.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 8.

To finish the anti-climax, it [the ancient house of the dukes of Bretagne] was finally possessed by the company of stationers, who rebuilt it of wood and made it their hall.

Pennant. London.

STA'TISM. See STATE.

STA'TUE, n. } Fr. Statue, stature; It.
STA'TUED. } Stàtua, statūra; Sp. Estatua, STA'TUARY, adj. } estatura; Lat. Statua, sta-STA'TUARY, n. } tura, from statuere, and that STA'TURE, n. } from statum, past part. of STA'TURED. } stare, to stand.

Statue, formerly also written statua, is applied to an image, form or figure (of metal, stone, &c.) set up.

Stature,—to the height of any one standing.

And he soughte to se Jhesus who he was: and he myght not for the puple, for he was litil in stature.

Wiclif. Luk, c. 19.

And he made meanes to se Jesus, what he shuld be: and could not for the preace, because he was of a lo stature.

Bible, 1551. Ib.

This proude king let make a statue of gold
Sixty cubites long, and seven in brede,
To which image bothe yonge and old
Commanded he to loute, and have in drede.

Chaucer. The Monkes Tale, v. 14, 165.

Young was this queene, of twenty yere old,
Of middle stature, and of such fairnesse,
That Nature had a ioy her to behold,
And to speaken of her stedfastnesse,
She passed hath Penelope and Lucresse.

Id. Of Queen Annelida & false Arcite.

The yongest of them had of age
Fourtene yere, and of visage
She was right faire, and of stature
Liche to an heuently figure.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

This Ebranke was also a man of fayre stature & of great strength, and by his power and myght he enlarged his domynion.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 9.

For if thou behold the proportion of thy body, stature or beauty, thou shalt easily perceiue that it cometh of God, euen by the words of Christe which exhorteth vs not to be carefull.—Fryth. Workes, p. 84.

And let there be a fountaine, or some faire worke of statua's in the middest of this court.

Bacon. Ess. On Building.

Buck. No so helpe me God, they spake not a word,
But like dumbe statues, or breathing stones.
Shakespeare. Rich. III. Act iii. sc. 7.

— O thou sencelesse forme,
Thou shalt be worship'd, kiss'd, lou'd, and ador'd;
And were there sence in his idolatry,
My substance should be statue in thy stead.
Id. Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act iv. sc. 4.

The eye is dim, in the discoloured face; and the whole man becomes as if statued into stone and earth.
Feltham, pt. i. Res. 36.

An hideous geaunt, horrible and hye,
That with his tallnesse seemd to threat the skye;
The ground eke groned under him for dreed:
His liuing like saw never liuing eye,
Ne durst behold; his stature did exceed
The hight of three the tallest sonnes of mortal seed.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 7.

I match him [Tusser] with Thomas Churchyard; they being mark'd alike in their poetical parts, living in the same time, and statur'd alike in their estates; both low enough, I assure you.—Fuller. Worthies. Essex.

How doth the giant honour seeme
Well statur'd in my fond esteeme.

J. Hall. Poems, (1646.)

And therefore Plato banished poets from his commonwealth, and Moses, (as Plato in his booke of gyants witnesseth) both painting and the statuary art.

Hakewell. Apology, b. iii. c. 5.

— Yet (as the statuary,
That by the large size of Alcides's foot, Guess'd at his whole proportion) so we hope
Your apprehensive judgments will conceive
Out of the shadow we can only shew,
How fair the body was.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Prophetess, Act iv. sc. 1.

The word statue may be explained to a blind man by other words, when picture cannot; his senses having giving him the idea of figure, but not of colours, which therefore words cannot excite in him. This gained the prize to the painter against the statuary.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 4.

This is that idea of perfection in an epic poem, which painters and statuary have only in their minds; and which no hands are able to express.—Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, Ded.

Whether because the image and statue-worshippers among the pagans (whom the apostle there principally regards) did direct all their external devotion to sensible objects, and creaturely forms?—Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 73.

"Oh why! my son, why now no more appears
That warmth of soul that urg'd thy younger years?
Thy riper days no growing worth impart,
A man in stature, still a boy in heart!"

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xviii.

In this town may be seen an equestrian statue in a modern dress, which may be sufficient to deter future artists from any such attempt; even supposing no other objection, the familiarity of the modern dress by no means agrees with the dignity and gravity of sculpture.

Reynolds, vol. ii. Disc. 10.

The vulgar eye gazes with equal satisfaction on the canvass of a Titian, and the daubings of a sign-post, and discovers no more ingenuity in the works of the statuary than in the rude image of the mere mechanic.

Knox. Essays, No. 68.

STATUMINATE, v. Lat. Statuminare, (from statuere, to set up.)

To set up, (sc.) as a support, a prop; to support, to establish.

I will statuminate and under-prop thee.
If they scorn us, let us scorn them.

B. Jonson. The New Inn, Act ii. sc. 2.

This, which we call the law of instituted and statuminated nature, is his law and his institution, and the connexion of natural effects to their natural causes is his institution, his law, his order.—Hale. Origin. of Mankind, p. 346.

STATUTE. } Fr. Statut; It. Statuto; Sp.
STATUTABLE. } Estatuto; Lat. Statutum, from STATUTABLY. } statuere, to set up, fix, esta-STATUTORY. } blish.

A fixed or established—law, decree, judgment.
In England the written or statute law, is distinguished from the unwritten or common law.

The first statute that on the booke was spread,
Was to be true in thought and deeds all Unto the king of loue the lord ryall,
And to the quene as faithfull and as kind,
As I could thinke with herte, will and mind.

Chaucer. The Court of Loue.

For the other partie was so strange,
That for the lawe of no statute
There maie no right be execute.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

In many thinges forbidden by sondry statutes for the comon weale, as against ye great excesse of apparell and some suche other thinges: the law doth inuente and hyre euery man to the accusing of the breakers of the same by giuing them the tone half of the forfeiture.

Sir T. More. Workes, p. 993.

Yet such as these laws, that men argue yet,
Whether a man those statutes can fulfill;
None doth; by thy all-healing grace and spirit Revive again, what law and letter kill.—Donne, Son. 16.

This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines.

Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act v. sc. 1.

But hops have since out-grown and over-topped all these accusations, being adjudged wholesome, if statutable and "unmixed with any powder, dust, dross, sand, or other soyl whatsoever."—Fuller. Worthies. Essex.

He was statutably admitted into Saint Johns Colledge in Cambridge, as many years after incorporated an honorary member of Christ Church in Oxford.—Id. Ib. Westminster.

Fops in the town more easily will pass,
One story makes a statutable ass:
But such in plays must be much thicker sown,
Like yolks of eggs, a dozen beat to one.

Dryden. Prol. to Sir Martin Marr-all.

Ben [Jonson] went to Cambridge, and was, as 'tis said, statutably elected into St. John's Coll. but what continuance he made there I find not.—Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. i.

The oldest of these [statutes, acts, or edicts] now extant, and printed in our statute books, is the famous magna charta, as confirmed in parliament 9 Hen. III.

Blackstone. Commentaries, Introd.

They barely keep the term; that is, they spend no more time in the university than is necessary to give them a sta-tutable claim to graduation.—Knox. Liberal Education.

All these different statutory regulations seem to have been made with great propriety.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 9.

STAVE. See STAFF.

STAUNCH. See STANCH.

STAY, v. } Fr. Estayer, estayer; Dut.
STAY, n. } Staen; Ger. Stehen, to stand
STAYEDNESS. } or cause to stand.
STAY'ER. } To stand, to keep or remain STAY'LESS. } standing,—to remain, to continue, to abide, to dwell, to stop, to wait; to stop or keep, to cease, from motion; to obstruct or hinder, to withhold, to delay, to retard.
To stand or cause to stand; to keep or hold or retain standing; to uphold, to maintain, to support, to prop.

Stayed, adj. (met.)—constant, sedate, composed, steady; self-possessed, self-commanding.

Stays, n., for the body—in the tackling of a ship,—to support, to keep firm or steady.

Thy holye worde of eterne excellence,
Thy merces promyse, that is all-waye iuste,
Haue ben my staye, my piller, and defence.

Wyat. Psalm 130.

And in meane while it hopeth to aduance
His staylesse state, by sworde, by speare, by shielde.
Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

Zelmane, who had already in her mind both what and how to say, stept out unto him, and with a resolute stayd-ness, void either of anger, kindness, disdain or humbleness, spoke in this sort.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. iii.

Eftsoones his warlike courser, which was strayed
Farre in the woodes whiles that he lay in swound,
So made those damzels search; which being stayd,
They did him set thereon, and forth with them conuayd.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 8.

For nothing would she lenger there be stayd,
Where so loose life, and so ungentle trade,
Was usd of knightes and ladies seeming gent.—Id. Ib. c. 1.

Religious Alred so, from Rydal we receiue,
The abbot, who to all posterity did leave
The fruits of his stay'd faith, delivered by his pen.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 24.

Our whole fleete, in we got; in whole receipt Our ships lay anchor'd close: nor needed we Feare harme on any staies.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. x.

They come up many times of their owne accorde, in some low grounds where there is a settling or stay of raine water fallen from higher places.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxi. c. 3.

A base spirit has this vantage of a brave one, it keeps always at a stay, nothing brings it down, not beating.

Beaum. & Fletch. A King & No King, Act iii.

The loue of things doth argue staydnesse; but leuitie and want of experience maketh apt vnto innouations.

Hooker. Ecclesiastical Politie, b. v. § 7.

And when the Picts did see their king depriu'd
Of vitall life, Lord, how they fled the field!
They made me muse, to see how fast they striu'd,
With staillesse steppes, eche one his life to shield.
Mirroure for Magistrates, p. 187.

Our stay-ship Echeneis, Trebius Niger saith is a foot long,
and five fingers thick, and that oftentimes it staith a ship.
Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 25.

So Moses when the pest on legions prey'd
Advanc'd his signal, and the plague was stay'd.
Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel.

Who can believe what varies every day,
Nor ever was, nor will be, at a stay?
Id. The Hind and the Panther.

When the Manila ship first puts to sea, she takes on board a much greater quantity of water than can be stowed between decks, and the jars which contain it are hung all about the shrouds and stays, so as to exhibit at a distance a very odd appearance.—Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 10.

I own, her taper shape is form'd to please:
Yet, if you saw her unconfin'd by stays!
She doubly to fifteen may make pretence;
Alike we read it in her face and sense.—Gay. The Toilette.

May Jove the guardian of the capitol,
He, the great stayer of our troops in rout,
Fulfil your hopes, and animate the cohorts.—A. Phillips.

We affirm on the contrary, that their supposed courage, staydness and sobriety, is really nothing else but the dull and sottish stupidity of their minds; dead and heavy incredulity, and earthly diffidence or distrust.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 658.

After a stay of more than two months at Concordia, their number was diminished nearly one half by sickness, in consequence of the fatigue and hardship which they had suffered by the shipwreck, and the survivors were sent in a small vessel to Europe.—Cook. First Voyage, b. iii. c. 9.

Neither our sails nor rigging could withstand it, several of the sails being split, and a middle stay-sail being wholly lost.—Id. Second Voyage, b. iv. c. 7.

— She springs aloof once more
While the fore stay-sail balances before.
Falconer. Shipwreck.

STEAD, n. } Goth. Studs; A. S. Stede;
STEAD, v. } Dut. Stede; Ger. Statt; Sw.
STEADFAST. } Stad. Tooke says, — Our STEADFASTLY. } oldest English writers more STEADFASTNESS. } rarely used the French word STEADY, adj. } place, but most commonly STEADY, v. } the Goth. and A. S. Studs, STEADILY. } sted, stede. — Wiclif, how-STEADINESS. } ever, commonly uses place.
STEADSHIP. } Stads, stede, stead is place,
(of standing,) place stood or staid in.

Dut. Stede-vast,—steadfast, placed fast, fast in place; keeping, holding fast, firm, fixed; established, determined, resolute.

Stead, v.—to hold, keep, or take place; to stand to;—to assist, to aid, to support.

Steady is much used in composition; affixed, as,—

Bed-stead, home-stead, &c. i. e. place for bed, of home, &c.

To steady is in common use.

An hey duk of al that stude, he clepede that toun y wys
After ys name Gloucestre, as he gut y clepud ys.
R. Gloucester, p. 67.

Alas! alas! thou wrecche mon, wuch mys auenture
Hathe the ybrogt in to thys stede.—Id. p. 205.

The erles & the barons were wel studeuaste,
Vor to amende that lond.—Id. p. 533.

Be ghe wrothe and nyle ghe do synne, the sunne fall not doun on ghoure wraththe, nyle ghe gyue stide [locum] to the deuel.—Wiclif. Effesies, c. 4.

Fro Gork vnto Durhem no wonyng stede was.
R. Brunne, p. 76.

We say with word stedfaste, we chefe Bailiol Jon.
Id. p. 250.

And heng his hoper on hus hals, in stede of a scrippe.
Piers Plouhman, p. 131.

Therefore my dereworthe bitheren, be ghe stidefast, and unmouable, beyng plenteouse in werk of the Lord, euermore witynge that ghoure traueil is not idil in the Lord.
Wiclif. 1 Cor. c. 15.

Therefore my deare brethren be ye stedfast & unmouable, alwayes rych in ye workes of the Lorde, for as muche that ye knowe howe that your labour is not in wayne in the Lorde.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Effesians ben of asie. these whanne thei hadden resseyed
the word of treuthe abiden stidefastli in the feith.
Wiclif. Effesies, Prol.

Geffray, thou wotest well this,
That every kindly thyng that is Hath a kindly stede there he May best in it conserved be.

Chaucer. House of Fame, b. ii.

Right so dothe Stelthe in every stede
Where as hym list his preie take.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

But take this lore into thy wit
That all thyng hath tyme & stede.—Id. Ib.

I find daunger in her stede
And myn answer of hym I haue.—Id. Ib. b. iii.

"For though I had you to morow agayne,
I might as well hold Aprill from rayne,
As holde you to maken stedfast."

Id. Queen Annelida & false Arcite.

"O tendre, o dere, o yonge children mine,
Your woful mother wened stedfastly,
That cruel houndes, or som foul vermine
Had eten you.

Id. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8969.

Yong was this queene, of twenty yere old,
Of middle stature, and of soch fairnesse,
That nature had a loy her to behold,
And for to speaken of her stedfastnesse,
She passed hath Penelope and Lucesse.

Id. Queen Annelida & false Arcite.

In vaine trauaile men to catch anye stedshyp, but if ye lady firste the Locke vnshet, ye lady lerne vs the waies and the bypathes to heauen.—Id. The Testament of Loue, b. i.

Therefore commaundeth he that chrysten men which be in chrystendome wylling to reserue the stedfastnesse of true faith, should fle vnto no other thing but vnto scriptures.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 782.

Himself, which methinks is strange, shewing at one instant both steadiness and nimbleness; sometimes making him turn close to the ground, like a cat, when scratchingly
she wheels about after a mouse.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Flie therefore, flie this fearefull stead anon,
Least thy foolhardize worke thy sad confusion.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 4.

His hornes bent so inward with their tips toward his head, that they serve him in no stead at all for fight, either to offend or defend himselfe.—Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 15.

I could neuer better steed thee then now.—Put money in thy purse.—Shakespeare. Othello, Act i. sc. 3.

And now followes all: we shall aduise this wronged maid to steed vp your appointment, goe in your place.

Id. Meas. for Meas. Act iii. sc. 1.

This ring was mine, and when I gaue it Hellen,
I bad her if her fortunes euer stode
Necessitied to helpe, that by this token
I would releue her. Had you that craft to reane her
Of what should steed her most?

Id. All's Well that Ends Well, Act v. sc. 3.

I pray'd for children, and thought barrenness
In wedlock a reproach; I gain'd a son,
Such a son as all men hail'd me happy;
Who would be now a father in my stead?

Milton. Samson Agonistes.

And, strongly wading through the waves unused,
With speare in th' one hand stayd himselfe upright,
With th' other staide his lady up with stedy might.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 3.

When presently a parliament is call'd,
To set things steady that stood not so right.

Drayton. The Battle of Agincourt.

Otherwise it [aire] would be no better figured nor more steddily kept together then the fume of tobacco or the reek of chimneys.—More. Antidote against Atheism, App.

Which word μενειν he often uses in setting out the steddi-ness and immutableness of the matter, in that sense that Plato uses it in speaking of the stability of the earth.

Id. Defence of the Philosophic Cabbala, App.

"So likewise are all watry living wights
Still tost and turned with continuall change,
Never abiding in their stedfast plights."

Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 7.

The youth with pleasure on the flood doth gaze,
And in their watery glass his face surveys,
Admiring with a look stedfastly set,
His real beauty in his counterfeit.—Sherburne. Salmacis.

But when strong passion, or weake fleshlinesse,
Would from the right way seeke to draw him wide,
He would, through temperance and stedfastnesse, Teach him the weake to strengthen, and the strong sup-presse.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 4.

Gonzalo, appointed master of that black design, gave us rich garments, and all necessaries, which since have steeded much.—Dryden. The Tempest, Act i.

Our brethren of New-England use
Choice malefactors to excuse,
And hang the guiltless in their stead,
Of whom the churches have less need.

Hudibras, pt. ii. c. 2.

Few men have such steady heads as to be able to stand upon the spires and pinnacles of glory without giddiness.
Bp. Bull, vol. i. Ser. 5.

He may have in his mind a determined idea, which he makes it the sign of, and to which he should keep it steadily annexed, during that present discorse.

Locke. On Hum. Underst. To the Reader, p. xvi.

To loll on couches, rich with Cytron steds,
And lay their guilty limbs on Tyrian beds,
This wretch in earth intombs his golden ore,
Hovering and brooding on his buried store.

Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. ii.

The wind did not only continue in the same quarter, but blew with so much briskness and steadiness, that we no longer doubted of it's being the true trade-wind.

Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 9.

Hushai, the friend of David in distress;
In public storms of manly stedfastness.

Dryden. Abalom & Achitophel.

Affection, like the stedy beating of the pulse, actuates and invigorates and keeps the mind continually alive.

Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 21.

On the 14th and 15th, the wind blowing steadily and fresh from the westward, we were obliged to stand to the southward.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. vi. c. 8.

The durableness of metals is the foundation of this extraordinary steadiness of price.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 11.

STEAK. A. S. Sticce, a morsell, a mouthfull, a part, portion, or piece,—a steake, (Somner.)
Dut. Stick, stock, stuck; Ger. Stuck, frustum.

"A piece or portion of flesh so small as that it may be taken up and carried, stuck upon a fork, or any slender sticking instrument. Hence, I believe, the Ger. and Dutch Stick, stuck, to have been transferred to mean any small piece of any thing." (Tooke.)

Bust. Safe? do you hear? take notice what plight you find me in, if there want but a collop or steak o'me, look to't.
Beaum. & Fletch. The Maid in the Mill, Act iv. sc. 2.

He, that of honour, wit, and mirth, partakes,

May be a fit companion o'er beef-steaks;

His name may be to future times enroll'd

In Estcourt's book, whose gridiron's fram'd of gold.

King. Art of Cookery.

STEAL, v.

STEALER.

STEALING, n.

STEALINGLY.

STEALTH.

STEALTHFUL.

STEALTHY.

Dut. Stelen; Ger. Stelen;

Sw. Steala; A. S. Stal-an;

Goth. Stil-an, which (Junius thinks) may be referred to Stille, stillice, Tacitus, tacite; as if

to steal meant—

To do any thing silently, secretly; to come silently; to go, to take away, silently, secretly, clandestinely, privily. See the quotation from Locke.

The Normans did it alle in the guyse of theft,

The godes therof stal, no thing thei ne left.

R. Brunne, p. 77.

But gadir ye to you tresouris in hevene, where neither rust ne mought distrieth and where thetis deluen not out;
ne stelen.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 6.

Se y^e ye gather you not treasure vp on ye earth, where rust and mothes corrupt, & where theues breake thorowe & steale.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

He that staal now stole he not, but more trauelle he in worhyng with hise hondis that that is good, that he haue wherof he schal ghyue to the nedi.—Wiclif. Effesies, c. 4.

Let him that stole, steale no more, but let hym rather laboure wyth hys handes some good thyng, that he may haue to geue vnto hym that nedeth.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

A thefe he was forsoth, of corn and mele,

And that a slie, and usant for to stele.

Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 3937.

For which this miller stale both mele and corn

An hundred times more than befor.

For therbefore he stale but curteisly,

But now he was a thefe outrageously.—Id. Ib. v. 3994.

He stale the cove, whiche Argus kepte,

And all this fell for that he slepte.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

Right so doth stelthe in euery stede,

Where as hym list his preie take,

He can so well his cause make,

And so well feigne, and so well glose,

That there ne shall no man suppose,

But that he were an innocent. Id. Ib. b. v.

If they were divers motions, they did so stealingly slip one into another, as the latter part was ever in hand, before the eye could discern the former was ended.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Then rise, yee blessed flocks! and home apace,
Lest night with stealing steppes do you foresloe,
And wett your tender lambs that by you trace.

Spenser. The Shepheard's Calender, June.

—Gold makes

Diana's rangers false themselves, yield vp

Their deere to th' stand o' th' stealer.

Shakespeare. Cymbeline, Act ii. sc. 3.

For on his backe a heavy load he bare

Of nightly stelhth. Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 3.

—And wither'd murther,

Alarum'd by his centinell, the wolfe,

Whose howle's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,

With Tarquins rauishing sides, towards his designe

Moues like a ghost.—Shakespeare. Macbeth, Act ii. sc. 1.

—To me then declare;

(O ould man, long since borne) if thy graue raie

Hath any man seene, making stealthfull waie

With all these oxen!

Chapman. Homer. A Hymne to Hermes.

Well she looks, I am sure, and in my fancy draws towards the countenance of her sister Stanhop more and more, but stealingly.—Reliquiae Wottonianæ, p. 462.

Thus the taking from another what is his, without his knowledge or allowance, is properly called stealing; but that name being commonly understood to signify also the moral pravity of the action, and to denote its contrariety to the law, men are apt to condemn whatever they hear called stealing as an ill action, disagreeing with the rule of right.

Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 29.

For rolling years, like stealing waters, glide;

Nor hope to stop their ever-ebbing tide.

Congreve. Ovid Imitated.

A disease neglected at first, that stealingly slips into the habit of the body, and gradually weakens nature, becomes at last incontrollable and incurable.—Bates, vol. iv. Ser. 8.

The second offence, more immediately affecting the personal security of individuals, relates to the female part of his majesty's subjects; being that of their forcible abduction and marriage; which is vulgarly called stealing an heiress.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iv. c. 15.

We landed in a district, which was the dominion of a chief called Maraitata, the burying-place of men, whose father's name was Pahairedo, the stealer of boats.

Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 15.

—My tongue

Scarce nam'd Arviragus, ere the false stranger

(As I bethink me since) with stealthy pace

Fled to the cavern's mouth.

Mason. Caractacus.

STEAM, v. } A. S. Stym-an, to steame or

STEAM, n. } perfume a place; stem-an, steme, to smell, to breath, to smoke, to steme or send forth vapours, (Somner.)

To send forth or emit, a reek or vapour; to reek, to evaporate, to exhale; usually applied to moisture.

Steamer,—a carriage, a ship, &c. acted upon,
propelled, forced, conveyed along by steam.

And, shaking off his drowzy dreriment

Gan him avize, howe ill did him beseme

In slouthfull sleepe his molten hart to steme,

And quench the brond of his conceived yre.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 6.

The inward smoke, that did before but steeme,

Broke into open fire and rage extreme.—Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 8.

By the fume or vapour thereof steeming through the same linnen clout, they be choked and killed.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxix. c. 4.

The wealthy household swarme of bondmen met,

And 'bout the steeming chimney set!

B. Jonson. The Praises of a Country Life.

So forcible it [brimstone] is, that if it bee cast into the fire, the verie smell and steeme thereof will drive those in the place into a fit of the falling sicknesse, if they bee subject thereunto.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxv. c. 15.

The greater part of the towne [Rosse] is steepe and steam- ing vpward.—Holinshead. Description of Ireland, c. 3.

But wandering oft, with brute unconscious gaze,

Man marks not thee, marks not the mighty hand,

That, ever-busy, wheels the silent spheres;

Works in the secret deep; shoots, steaming, thence

The fair profusion that o'erspreads the spring.

Thomson. A Hymn.

Besides the springy particles of pure air, the atmosphere is made up of several steams or minute particles of several sorts, rising from the earth and the waters, and floating in the air, which is a fluid body, and, though much finer and thinner, may be considered in respect of its fluidity to be like water, and, so, capable, like other liquors, of having heterogeneous particles floating in it.

Locke. Elements of Natural Philosophy, c. 6.

A pestilent and most corrosive steam,

Like a gross fog Boeotian, rising fast,

And fast condens'd upon the dewy sash,

Asks egress.

Cowper. Task, b. iii.

STEAN, or } The Dut. Steen-put, is—puteus
STERN. } sive fons lapide constructus.
A pit, well or fountain, surrounded with stone.

Upon an huge great earth-pot steane he stood,
From whose wide mouth there flowed forth the Romane flood. Spenser. Faerie Queene, c. 7.

STEED. A. S. Steda. The A. S. Stod-myra, was a mare for breed; a stod-horse, was probably a horse for the same purpose.

A horse or mare of the stud, or standing. Steed is usually applied to—

A horse conspicuous for its form or make, and high mettle.

And lepte on ys stede, and siwede and slog fast ys fon.
R. Gloucester, p. 63.

His stede ouer him ran, he lay vnder his fete.
R. Brunne, p. 298.

This golden carte with firy beames bright,
Foure yoked stedes full different of hewe,
Bout bait or tiring, through the spheres drewe.
Chaucer. The Testament of Cresseide.

For steed once stolne, we shut the doore too late.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. ii. st. 77.

Epirus for th' Elean chariot breeds
(in hopes of palms) a race of running steeds.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

STEEL, n. } A. S. Style, styled; Dut. Stael; STEEL, v. } Ger. Stal, stahel; Sw. Stål.
STEEL'LY. } Wachter thinks—from stechen, STEEL-YARD. } pungere, to stick. Serenius,— from Sw. Stel, stiff, hard; steel being iron hardened in the furnace. And see the quotation from Plinie.

Steelyard, or as sometimes written and pronounced, stiliarde,—a steel rod or bar prepared as a balance for weighing goods. See YARD.

Steel, v. (met.)—to harden; to render hard,
obdurate, or impenetrable.

Stilyard,—see the quotation from Pennant.

Of stel, of yrn and of bras, of god corn gret won.
R. Gloucester, p. 2.

He chaseth so my thought aie,
And holdeth mine herte under his sele,
As trustie and true as any steele.—Chaucer. Rom. of the R.
Tuball in yron and in steele
Fonde first the forge, and wrought it wele.
Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

He had in his hande a great glaue, sharpe and well stelyd, and aboue the blade, ther was a sharpe hoke of steele,
y^t whan he gaue his stroke, the hoke shulde take holde.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 59.

O tough & stely hertes, o herte more herd than flynte or other stone.—Fisher. Seuen Psalmes, Ps. 143. pt. ii.

I kneeled down to the princess, and humbly besought her to move Mopsa in my behalf, that she would unarm her noble heart of that steely resistance against the sweet blows of love.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Wheat sometime is steely, or burnt as it grows.
Tusser. October's Husbandry.

This yere corn was verie dere, & had be dearer if mar-chutes of ye stiliarde had not been & Dutche shippes restrained, & an abstinence of warre betwene Englade & Flaunders.—Fabyan. Chronycle, an. 1529.

It were good the stiliard-men were for this time gently answered, and that it were seen, whether by any gentle offer of some part of their liberties, again they might be brought to ship their wares to the mart.

Burnet. Records. K. Edw. Remaines, vol. ii. pt. ii. b. ii.

Steele is eldest brother of iron, extracted from the same ore, differing from it not in kind but degree of purity, as being the first running thereof. It is more hard and brittle (whilest iron is softer and tougher), useful for the making of English knives, sithes, shears, &c. but fine edges cannot be made thereof, as lancets for letting of blood, inci-sion knives, razors, &c.—Fuller. Worthies. Gloucestershire.

1 Daugh. Where eternal
Our youths are, and our beauties; where no wars come,
Nor lustful slaves to ravish us.

2 Daugh. That steels me:
A long farewell to this world.
Beaum. & Fletch. Bonduca, Act iv. sc. 4.

God speaks from heaven with his loudest voice, and draws aside his curtain, and shows his arsenal and his armoury, full of arrows steeled with wrath, headed, and pointed, and hardened with vengeance.

Bp. Taylor, vol. ii. Ser. 19.

The discoverie of the yron and steale mines, as also the working in them, was the invention (as Hesiodus saith) of those in Creet, who were called Dactyli Idæi.

Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 56.

But the furnace it selfe, where the ore or yron stone is tried, maketh the greatest difference that is: for therein you shall have to arise by much burning and fining, the purest part thereof, which in Latine is called Nucleus ferri,
i. the kernell or heart of the yron (and it is that which we call steale).—Holland. Plinie b. iii. c. 14.

The steely head stuck fast still in his flesh,
Till with his cruell claws he snatcht the wood,
And quite asunder broke.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

And, fayrly couching his steeleheaded speare,
Him first saluted with a sturdy stroke.—Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 5.

The steel-hed speares they strongly coucht, and met Together with impetuous rage and forse.
Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 9.

In such a method as this may the minds of children be formed up to virtue, and steeled against ill impressions;
which is the principal end and aim of a religious education.
Waterland. Works, vol. viii. p. 472.

Such thoughts revolving in his careful breast,
Near, and more near, the shady cohorts prest;
These in the warrior, their own fate enclose
And round him deep the steely circle grows.
Pope. Homer. Iliad, b. xi.

It is usual with butchers and other tradesmen, to weigh in the staters, commonly called the stiliards, 10 or 20 pounds weight, for instance, hung near the fulcrum, with one pound weight placed on the other side of the beam, at 10 or 20 times distance from it.—Boyle. Works, vol. iii. p. 431.

The steel must be struck in a proper manner, and with proper materials, before the latent spark can be elicited.
Knox. Ess. 70.

It is something operating in the mind in a similar manner, which most easily bows the stubborn knee of the harden'd offender, and subdues to softness the steely heart, on which no force of argument could of itself stamp an impression.
Id. Ess. 149.

Hither your steelyards, butchers, bring, to weigh
The pound of flesh, Anthonio's bond must pay!
Warton. Proh. on the Old Wynchester Playhouse.

The name of this wharf [the Steel-yard] is not taken from steel the metal, which was only a single article, but from stapel-hoff, or the general house of trade of the German nation.—Pennant. London. The Steel-Yard.

Steel through opposing plates the magnet draws,
And steely atoms calls from dust and straws.
Crabbe. Parish Register.

STEEP, adj. } Sw. Stupa, precepts, steipa, STEEP, n. } præcipitem dare, (Ihre.) A. S.
STEEPY. } Steap; perhaps from the verb STEEPINESS. } Stap-ian, to stoop, (sc.) from STEEPNESS. } an upright or perpendicular.
(See STROOP.) Or from A. S. Stepp-an, to step.

Bending, inclining, leaning, from an upright or perpendicular; rising, approaching nearly to an upright; precipitous.

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, fleeing, pent to linger
But with a graine a day, I would not buy
Their mercie, at the price of one faire word.
Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act iii. sc. 3.

— Why art thou heere
Come from the farthest steep of India?
Id. Midsummer Night's Dreame, Act ii. sc. 2.

— But when he wonnes
On craggy rocks, or steepy hills, we see None runnes more swift, nor easier, than he.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. i. s. 4.

Nor made they any faire retreat; Hectors unruly horse Would needs retire him; and he left engag'd his Trojan force, Forc't by the steepenesse of the dike, that in ill place they tooke.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xvi.

— You shall then soone end
Your way to towne; whose toures you see ascend
To such a steepnesse.
Id. Ib. Odyssey, b. vi.

The cragginess and steepiness of places up and down is a great advantage to the dwellers, and makes them inaccessible.—Howell. Instructions for Travellers, p. 132.

Like him, in caves they shut their wooly sheep;
Like him, their herds on tops of mountains keep;
Like him, with mighty strides, they stalk from steep to steep.
Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. iv.

While Turnus urges thus his enterprise,
The Stygian fury to the Trojans flies:
New frauds invent, and takes a steepy stand,
Which overlooks the vale with wide command.
Id. Ib. b. vii.

Invited from the cliff, to whose dark brow
He clings, the steep-ascending eagle soars,
With upward pinions through the flood of day.
Thomson. Summer.

Aloof she climbs her steepy seat,
Where nor the grave nor giddy feet,
Of the learn'd vulgar or the rude,
Have e'er a passage worn.
Watts. The Way of the Multitude.

We could judge of its steepness from this circumstance, that the sea, which now run very high, broke no where but against it.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. iv. c. 12.

STEEP, v. } Dut. Stippen; Ger. Stippen; STEE'PING, n. } Sw. Stöpa, to dip, to immerge.
Wachter thinks it is the same word as dippen, with s prefixed. It is perhaps the same word as the above.

To drop, to plunge, to immerge, to submerge;
to dip, to drench, to soak.

Now gan the golden Phœbus for to steep
His fierie face in billowes of the west,
And his faint steedes watred in ocean deepe,
Whiles from their journall labours they did rest.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

Instead thereof sad sighes and sorrowes deepe
Kept watch and ward about her warily;
That nought she did but wayle, and often steep
Her dainty couch with teares which closely she did weepe.
Id. Ib. b. iii. c. 2.

And yet when you have made all the steeping you can,
you must have many a blow at the diamant with hammer upon the anvill.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxvii. c. 4.

The third is, the steeping of the seed or kernell in some liquor, wherein the medicine is infused.
Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 500.

As for the steeping of the seeds, in severall mixtures with water, to give them vigour; or watering grounds with compost-water; we have spoken of them before.—Id. Ib. § 597.

The prudent Sybil had before prepar'd
A sop in honey steep'd to charm the guard.
Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. vi.

Strait, to the house she hasted; and sweete sleepe
Pour'd on each wooer; which so laid in steep
Their drowsie temples, that each brow did nod,
As all were drinking.—Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. ii.

STEE'PLE, n. } A. S. Stepl, steopul, a tower, STEE'PLED. } a steeple; Sw. Stapel: perhaps from A. S. Steap, præceps; Sw. Steipa, præ-cipitem dare.

Like as the lightning-brond from riven skie,
Throwne out by angry Jove in his vengeance,
With dreadfull force fallies on some *steep*le hie.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 6.

Yet as in great clocks, which in steeples chime,
Plac'd to inform whole towns, t'employ their time,
An errour doth more harm, being general,
When small clock's faults only on th' wearer fall.
Donne. On Lord Harrington.

A steepled turbant on her head she [Alecto] wore.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. ix. st. 8.

Some sons of mine, who bear upon their shield
Three steeples argent in a sable field,
Have sharply tax'd your converts, who, unfed,
Have follow'd you for miracles of bread.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

But how the new appearance of a star should make men suppose the soul of a dead ancestor was got into it, and so become a God, is as hard to conceive as how Tenterden *steep*le should be the cause of Good-win Sands.
Warburton. The Divine Legation, b. iv. s. 4.

He erected a seemly water-work, built *steep*le-wise, at the bridge-gate, by his own ingenious industry and charge.
Fuller. Worthies. Chester.

STEER. Goth. Stuirs; A. S. Styrc, styre, a young ox or steere, a young cow or heifer. Lanc.
a sterke, (Somner.) Dut. Stier-varre, taurus, stier kalf, vitulus; Ger. Stier. The Ger. Stier, is fierce, stern, (qv.) and the epithet may have been added to the name of the animal from the fierce-ness or strength, to which it approaches at the age when it is now usually so called. In Lancashire, and other counties, it is spoken stirke. See STARK.

About his char ther wenten white alauns,
Twenty and mo, as gret as any stere,
To huntten at the leon or the dere,
And folwed him, with mosel fast ybound.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 2150.

Stood all astonied; like sort of steeres,
Mongst whom some beast of strange and foraine race
Unwares is chaunct, far straying from his peeres:
So did their ghastly gaze bewray their hidden feares.
Spenser. Faerie Queene. Of Mutabilitie, c. 6.

With hope to raise thy wealth, thou kill'st an ox,
Inuoking Hermes: "Blesse my house and flockes."
How can it be (vaine foole!) when in the fires
The melted fat of many steeres expires?

Beaumont. Persius, Sat. 2.

STEER, v. } Dut. Stieren, stueren; Ger.
STEE'RAGE. } Steuren; Sw. Styra; A. S.
STEE'RER. } Steor-an, to direct, to guide; from STE'ERING, n. } the verb Stir-an, to move, to STEE'RLESS. } stir.
STEE'RSMAN. } To move, to guide or direct the motion; to guide, to direct, to conduct.

Chaucer and Gower use steer, the n. for that which, or that by which (gubernaculum) a vessel is steered. See STERN, STERNSMAN.

Stonde he nevere so styfliche thorgh sterynge of the bote
Maketh the man meny tyme. to stoble yf he stande.

Piers Ploughman, p. 167.

And Custance han they taken anon fote-hot,
And in a ship all stereles (God wot)
They han hire set, and bidden hire lerne sayle
Out of Surrie againward to Itaille.

Chaucer. The Man of Lawes Tale, v. 4859.

And he is a key and a steire [gubernaculum] by whiche the edifice of this worlde is kepte stable, and without corrumpynge.—Id. Boecius, b. iii.

But yet the barge Enue stereth,
And halt it euer fro the londe,
Whiche fals semblant with ore in honde
It roweth.

Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

This olde fende, this Sarazyn,
Let take anone this Constantyn,
With all the good she theder brought,
And hath ordeined as she thought
A naked ship without stere.

Id. Ib.

And tho began he to deuise
How the childes mother fonde,
Upon the sea from eueri londe
Within a ship was sterles.

Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

The stiresman so well him ladde,
That thei becomen saufe to londe,
Where thei gone out vpon the stronde
In to the burgh, where that thei fonde
The kyng.

Id. Ib. b. v.

By the mysgydnye of the sterysman, he was set vpon the pylys of the brydge, and the barge whelmyd, so that all were drowned.—Fabyan. Chronycle. Henry VI. an. 1430.

Who when those pittifull outeries he heard
Through all the seas so ruefully resownd,
His charett swifte in hast he thether steard.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 8.

A daring pilot in extremity;
Pleas'd with the danger when the wave went high,
He sought the storms; but, for a calm unfit,
Would steer too nigh the sands to boast his wit.

Dryden. Abalom & Achitophel, pt. i.

I was much surprized, and ran into the steeridge to look on the compass, and found that we were steering S.S.E.
instead of E.S.W.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

There might I sail delighted, smooth and safe,
Beneath the conduct of my good sir Ralph;
There's not a better steerer in the realm:
I hope, my lord, you'll call him to the helm.

Swift. An Epistle to Lord John Carteret.

The proa generally carries six or seven Indians; two of which are placed in the head and stern, who steer the vessel alternately with a paddle according to the tack she goes on,
he in the stern being the steersman.

Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 5.

We suddenly lost sight of the land, and making sail again, before the line was well hauled in, we steered by the sound of the breakers, which were distinctly heard till we got clear off the coast.—Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 7.

In this manner we went on, all three making one compact body with two legs only for steerage of the whole.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. ii. c. 23.

Some youths sat high up in the curved stern, above the steersman, with white wands in their hands.

Cook. Second Voyage, b. ii. c. 12.

STEGANOGRAPHY. Gr. Στεγανογραφία, comp. of στεγανος, tectus; from στεγ-ειν, to cover, to conceal; and γραφία, writing, from γραφ-ειν, to write.

Writing in concealed or private characters or signs.

Concerning the steganography, I can by none of those means that I advertis'd last week of, pass further than I have, and I am afraid I have gon too far, because in your last letters I find some displeasure.

Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 647.

But neither Baptista Porta, de furtivis literarum notis; Trithemius in his steganography, Selenus in his cryptography, or Nuncius inanimatus, make any consideration hereof; although they deliver many waies to communicate thoughts at distance.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. ii. c. 3.

VOL. II.

STE/LE. A. S. Stele, "a stalk, a stock or stump of a tree; Chaucer, Somner adds, uses stete for an handle, in which sense we yet retain it." It is in common use in different parts of England.
See Ray, Wilbraham, and Moor.

And caught the cutter by the colde stete.

Chaucer. The Milleres Tale, v. 3783.

A stete must be well seasoned for castinge, and it must be made as the graine lyeth, and as it groweth, or els it will never flye cleane.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. ii.

This plant putteth forth leaves like to the elme, but that they be somewhat longer, and full of haire, and evermore
the steles of the leaves grow contrarie one against the other.
Holland. Plinie, b. xiii. c. 6.

The best kind of them are they that have soft and tender leaves about their steles whereby they hang.

Id. Ib. b. xv. c. 21.

There breed in the hollow arme-pits (as it were) of the boughs, other small pills settled or sticking close to the wood, and not hanging by any steles, which toward the navill or bottom thereof are whitish.—Id. Ib. b. xvi. c. 7.

Lik'st a strawne scare-crow in the new-sowne field,
Rear'd on some sticke, the tender corne to shield.
Or if that semblance suit not everie deale,
Like a broad shak-forke with a slender steel.

Bp. Hall, b. iii. Sat. 7.

STE'LLAR, v. } Lat. Stella, stellatus, a star;
STE'LLATE. } studded with stars.
STE'LLATED. } To stellify,—to form, to STE'LLIED. } transform into a star.
STE'LLIFY, v. }

No wonder is though Jove her stellife,
As telleth Agaton, for her great goodnesse,
Her white crowne beareth of it witness.

Chaucer. The Legend of good Women.

"O God," quod I, "that madest all kind,
Shall I none otherwise die,
Whether Jove will me stellife,
Or what thing may this signifie,
I am neither Enocke, ne Helie.—Id. House of Fame, b. ii.

Which these soft fires
Not only enlighten, but with kindly heate
Of various influence foment and warme,
Temper or nourish, or in part shed down
Thir stellar vertue on all kinds that grow
On earth.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

And when she landeth on thy blessed shores,
And the vast navy doth at anchor ride,
For her departure when the wild sea roars,
Ship, mount to heaven, and there be stellify'd.

Drayton. The Barons' Wars, b. iii.

Stars, whose names did first begin

By those wise ancients, not to stellify
The first world's heroes only, but imply
To teach their courses, for distinguished
In constellations, a delight first bred
In slothful man, into the same to look.

Id. The Man in the Moon.

"And therefore now the Thracian Orpheus lyre
And Hercules himself are stellify'd;
And in high heaven, amidst the starry quire,
Dancing their parts continually do slide."

Davies. On Dancing.

The sea, with such a storme as his bare head,
In hell-blacke-night, indur'd, would haue buoy'd vp
And quench'd the stelled fires.

Shakespeare. Lear, Act iii. sc. 7.

He found to his wonder, and shewed me his regulus adorned with a more conspicuous star than I have seen in several stellate reguluses of both antimony and Mars.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 325.

My own laboratory has afforded me divers such parcels of regulus without Mars, (some of which I have yet by me very fairly stellated.)—Id. Ib.

[When he] sees that, as the earth is but a point compared to the orb of Saturn, so the orb of Saturn itself grows dimensionless when compared to that vast extent of space which the stellar-solar systems possess and occupy.

Warburton, vol. ix. Ser. 2.

STE'LLIONATE. Fr. Stellionat; Lat. Stel-lionatus, from stellio, which Holland calls the star-lizard; and Plinie (b. xxx. c. 10) says there is not a beast more spiteful to mankind, and envious of our commodity, insomuch as the word stellio is growne to be a reprochfull tearme among us.

A cousening or counterfeiting of merchandise;
an unjust or deceitful gaining; a malicious or fraudulent bereaving another of his money, wares, due provision, or bargain, (Cotgrave;) and see Du Cange.

This court of star-chamber is compounded of good elements, for it consisteth of foure kinds of persons, counsellors, peeres, prelates, and chiefe-judges. It discerneth also principally of foure kinds of causes;—forces, frauds, crimes various of stellionate, and the incohoations or middle acts towards crimes capital or hainous, not actually committed or perpetrated.—Bacon. Hen. VII. p. 64.

STEO/GRAPHY. Gr. Στηλο-γραφία, inscriptio columna.

Writing on a pillar.

This pillar [of Jacob] thus engraved gave probably the origin to the invention of stelography.

Stackhouse. History of the Bible.

STEM, v. } A. S. Stemme, a stump, stemme, STEM, n. } stock or body of a tree without the boughes, (Somner.) Dut. Stam; Ger. Stamm; Sw. Stamm.

Stem of a tree,—Wachter derives from the verb stan, to stand, because it stands upright and immovable.

Stem of a family,—the trunk or stirps from which the family branches out, expands, or extends; from which it depends or descends; is borne or generated.

Stem of a ship,—stirps arboris excisæ,—applied to the fore part of the ship, forcing its way, keeping its course through, against, or in opposition to the waves, the tide, the current, or stream.
And hence, To stem,—

To stand firmly against; to keep way steadily against; to stay or stop, or bear up against.

All they without were raunged in a ring,
And daunced round; but in the midst of them
Three other ladies did both daunce and sing,
The whilst the rest them round about did hemme,
And like a girlond did in compasse stemme.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. vi. c. 10.

They on the trading flood
Through the wide Ethiopian to the Cape
Ply stemming nightly toward the pole.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. ii.

Therefore I leave it to it self, and pray
Like a good bark, it may work out to day,
And stem all doubts.

Beaumont & Fletch. Prod. to the Spanish Curate.

Then came Piseus the Tyrrhene, and armed the stemme and beake-head of the ship with sharpe tines and pikes of brasse.—Holland. Plinie, b. vii. c. 56.

This year did Ziloah rule Jerusalem,
And boldly all sedition's syrtis stem.

Dryden. Abalom & Achitophel.

Then, when the fiery suns too fiercely play,
And shrivell'd herbs on withering stems decay,
The wary ploughman, on the mountain's brow, Undams his watery stores.—Id. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

Orontes barque that bore the Lycian crew,
(A horrid sight) ev'n in the hero's view,
From stem to stern, by waves was overborn.

Id. Ib. Aeneis, b. i.

Clos'd within his grasp
Was clench'd a broken oar, as one who long
Had stem'd the flood with agonizing breast,
And struggled strong for life.

Mallet. Amyntor & Theodora, c. i.

STENCH, n. } It is sometimes written STENCH, v. } Stinch. The A. S. Stenc, Tooke STE'NCHY. } calls the past part. of Stinc-an,
to stink, (k changed into ch.) Somner says stenc—
"Sent, savour, smell, whether evill or good:
whereof our stinke, now used onely for an ill savour."

Dryden uses the word for scent or smell, generally.

With wymmen of paynyme hii dude her foule hunde,
War of the stench com in to heuene an hey

R. Gloucester, p. 105.

And sette agen the Cristenemen afure in ech ende,
That the smoke there of hem ssolede bothe stenche & blende.

Id. p. 407.

Lurke thou all day, and flye when thou shouldst slepe,
And neuer light where living thing hath life,
But eat and drinke, where stinche and filth is rife.

Uncertaine Auctors. Against Him that had slaundersed, &c.

Which to increase, and all at once to kill,
A cloud of smothering smoke and sulphure seare,
Out of his stinking gorge forth steamed still.
That all the ayre about with smoke and stenc did fill.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

And now your victor, all the hall (deside
With stinch of hot death) is perfuming round;
And with a mighty fire the harth hath crown'd.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxiii.

Our sailing ships like common-sewers we use,
And through our distant colonies diffuse
The draught of dungeons, and the stench of stews.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

The living, and the dead, at his command
Were coupled, face to face, and hand to hand:
Till, chok'd with stench, in loath'd embraces ty'd,
The lingering wretches pin'd away, and dy'd.
Id. Virgil. Æneis, b. viii.

How proud the poet's billow swells!
The God! the God! his boast:
A boast how vain! What wrecks abound!
Dead bards stench every coast.
Young. Resignation, pt. i.

— Far nobler prospects these,
Than gardens black with smoke in dusty towns,
Where stenchy vapours often blot the sun.
Dyer. The Fleece, b. i.

STENOGRAPHY. Gr. στενος, arctus, angustus; narrow, close; and γραφία, writing. Applied to the modern—

Art of writing in short-hand.

I have more thanks to give you than can be folded up in this narrow paper, tho it were all writ in the closest kind of stenography, for the rich and accurate account you please to give me of that renowned city wherein you now sojourn.
Howell, b. ii. Let. 5.

STENT. See STINT.

STENTORIAN. } Fr. Voix stentorée;
STENTOROPHONICK. } a huge voice, — such a STENTORONIC. } one as the Grecian Stentor had, (Cotgrave.)

They echo forth in stentorian clamours.
Sir T. Herbert. Travels, p. 326.

Of this stentorophonic horn of Alexander, there is a figure preserved in the Vatican; Kircher saith its diameter was five cubits, and that it was suspended on a supporter.
Derham. Physico-Theology, b. iv. c. 3. Note.

A stentorophonic voice is the fundamental excellence of your fine man, and a powerful excellence it is.
Knox, Ess. 158.

For thus he measures out his own stentoronic voice.—
“Observing that several sat on the side of the opposite hill, “I afterwards desired one to measure the ground; and we “found it was seven score yards from the place where I had “stood. Yet the people there heard perfectly well. I did “not think any human voice could have reached so far.
Warburton. Doctrine of Grace, b. ii. c. 5.

STEP, v. } A. S. Steppan, steppan; Dut. Stappen, stippen; Ger. Stap-
STEP, n. } pen, stapfen, gradi.
STEPPING, n. }

Step, the motion in walking, is—

The motion of one foot to pass before the other, over or above the other, backward or forward. Generally (the verb)—

To move, to walk, to go; to ascend, to descend.

And the noun,—

Motion, path or passage; that upon which we step or set the foot; the distance moved at one time by stepping; gradation or degree; progress.

— Ac gyf heo quaketh out,
Other stepth bysyde, other hyre vet in eny wemme be ybrogt, Holdeth hem guilty of the dede.—R. Gloucester, p. 336.
He myghte noth stappe no stound. tyl he a staf hadde.
Piers Plouhman, p. 108.

For which thing reise ghe slow houndis and knees unboundun, and make ghe rightful steppis to ghoure feet, that no man haltynge erre, but more be heeled.—Wiclif. Eb. c. 12.

Stretch forth therefore agayne ye handes which were let downe, and the weake knees, and se yt ye haue straight steppes vnto your fete, least any haltinge turne you out of the way:
vea, let it rather be healed.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And trewely it is an high corage
Of any man that stopen is in age,
To take a young wif.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9387.

As from the shot of a gonne a man were metely safe, that had ere the gunne wer losed, made a step asyde, fyftene hundred myle from it: so syth I am stepped now fyftene hundred yere from the Apostles dayes.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 427.

— But Neptune stepping in,
With ease stird up the able troopes.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xiii.

So started up in his own shape the fiend.
Back stept those two faire angels half amaz'd
So sudden to behold the grieslie king.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

So saying, by the hand he took me rais'd,
And over fields and waters, as in aire Smooth sliding without step, last led me up A woodie mountain. Id. Ib. b. viii.

— For within him hell
He brings, and round about him, nor from hell
One step no more then from himself can fly
By change of place. Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

And his deep thoughts, the better to converse
With solitude, till far from track of men, Thought following thought, and step by step led on
He entred now the bordering desert wild.
Id. Paradise Regained, b. i.

But still the flood crept by little steppings, and invaded more by his progressions than he lost by his retreat.
Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 8.

“Or if my heedless youth has step'd astray,
Too soon forgetful of thy gracious hand;
On me alone thy just displeasure lay,
But take thy judgments from this mourning land.
Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

How, as it were in an instant, do our minds with one glance see all the parts of a demonstration, which may very well be called a long one, if we consider the time it will require to put it into words, and step by step show it another.
Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 9.

Home from his morning task, the swain retreats;
His flock before him stepping to the fold.
Thomson. Summer.

There is another set of men, who have more religion than any of the former—for they have religion enough to be afraid of damnation; though not enough to take the proper steps to avoid it.—Gilpin. Hints for Sermons, § 4.

STEP. } Tooke considers Step to be STEPSON. } a corruption of sted, when pre-STEPMOTHER. } fixed to a child, mother, &c.
In Danish are still written—“Sted-fader, sted- moder, sted-broder, sted-soster, sted-barn, sted-son, sted-dotter;—i. e. vice, loco, in the place of, in stead of a father, a mother, a brother,” &c. The
A. S. Steop-cild, Somner calls a fatherless child, an orphan; and Lye adduces various instances of steop-cild, which he interprets—orbatus parente; and hence, it seems to have been inferred, that the A. S. Step-an signified—orbare; but a child must be orphaned or deprived of one parent before it can be in stead or in place of a child to another person. In Danish, it also written Stif- moder, fader, &c.; and in Dut. it is Stief-moder; Ger. Stieff-mutter; Sw. Styf-moder, which the etymologists have in general considered to be a stiff or harsh mother, father, &c.; and to meet the objection that a stepson cannot be so called for the same reason, Ihre supposes Staf to have been first applied to the mother, &c. and thence transferred to the children. Wachter thinks the Ger.
Stief and A. S. Steop to be both formed from A. S. Stow, locus:—and adds,—“Vide annon Stief- vater, sit vice-pater; stief-mater, vice-mater.
Stief-son, vice-filius, (sc.) representatione aut
substitutione. And so far he anticipates Tooke.
And see Jamieson, in v. Gudsonne.

Tyberi, ye stepsone, aftur hym com,
That nobliche huld ys power, & eke ys kyndom.
R. Gloucester, p. 61.

The Deuel hadde enuy ther to, that he susteynede Cristendam,
And in ys stepmoder herte ys woniung he nom.
Id. p. 122.

Of him in holy kirke men said euelle sawe,
His stepmoder Juwet he weddid agayn the lawe.
R. Brunne, p. 20.

And [Fortune] from her riches doth hem fle,
And plungeth hem in povertie,
As a stepmother envious.—Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

His cruell step-dame, seeing what was donne,
Her wicked daies with wretched knife did end,
In death avowing th' innocence of her sonne.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 5.

King Edward (the sonne of Edgar) after through treason of his stepmother Esculda, was made a martyr.
Holinshed. Historie of Scotland. Kenneth.

STER, the term. — “Ster, unless I mistake, (says Somner,) in our words—Webster, Maultster, Seamster, Spinster, Gamester, Brewster, Drug-ster, plainly denotes (magisterium) mastery;” and he derives from the A. S. Steor-an, to rule, to govern, to order, to direct. But the manner in which Somner has written these words, is a contracted form:—e. g. Webster for Webbester;
spinster for spinnester; drugster for druggster, (now druggist), whence it may be suggested, that ster is—ester or ister, and that it is compounded of—es, ed, or et, and er, (es-et-er, contr. ester.)

STERCORATION. } Fr. Stercorin; Lat.
STERCORACEOUS. } Stercoreus, stercoratio; from stercus, dung, manure. See the quotation from Bacon.

The first and most ordinary help is stercoration. The sheeps-dung is one of the best; and next the dung of kine;
and thirdly that of horses, which is held to be somewhat too hot, unlesse it be mingled. That of pigeons for a garden, or a small quantity of ground, excelleth.
Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 595.

Neither yet doth the exterior pulp of the fruit or peri-carpium serve only for the defence and security of the seed, whilst it hangs upon the plant; but after it is mature and fallen upon the earth, for the stercoration of the soil, and promotion of the growth.—Ray. On the Creation, pt. i.

Vegetable putrefaction is produced by throwing green succulent vegetables in a heap in open warm air, and pressing them together, by which all vegetables acquire, first, a heat equal to that of a human body; secondly, a putrid stercoraceous taste and odour, in taste resembling putrid flesh, and in smell human faeces.
Arbuthnot. Nature of Aliments, p. 9.

The stable yields a stercoraceous heap,
Impregnated with quick fermenting salts,
And potent to resist the freezing blast.
Cowper. Task, b. iii.

STERILE. } Fr. Stérile; It. Stérile, steri-
STERILITY. } lità; Sp. Esteril; Lat. Saterilis, STERILIZE, v. } or sterilus. Vossius suggests that the ancient Latins may have had the verb stereo from the Gr. στερεω, privare, and that thence sterilis may have been formed. It may have come from the Gr. στερεος, solidus, hard, solid, and thus be equivalent to the English—Barren; that cannot bear or bring forth;
opposed to fertile.

Also he assygned vnto them suche guydys as brought them into places & coutreys of sterilitie and other daunger.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 234.

It is certaine, that in sterile years, corne sowne will grow to an other kinde.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 525.

As they from Syria passe to Egypt land,
The sterill coasts of barren Rinoceere
They past, and seas where Casius hill doth stand.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xv. s. 15.

For the soil of Spain, the fruitfulness of their vallies recompenses the sterility of their hills.—Howell, b. i. Let. 32.

They affirming that though Christians did not acknowledge such a multitude of gods, as the pagans, yet did they not therefore make God a solitary and steril being, before the creation neither, as the Jews did.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 546.

Varro, the great Roman antiquary, tells us how to do it by burning of their spurs; which occasioning their sterility, makes them capons in effect.—King. Art of Cookery, Let. 9.

It is not through any sterility in the soyl, for that is very fat, and fruitful.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

No, no—such wars do thou, Ambition, wage!
Go, sterilize, the fertile with thy rage,
Whole nations, to depopulate is thine.
Savage. Of Public Spirit.

With nice incision of her guided steel
She ploughs a brazen field, and clothes a soil
So sterile with what charms soe'er she will,
The richest scen'ry and the loveliest forms.
Cowper. Task, b. i.

In all of them is fresh water, and wood for fuel; but except these little tufts of bushes the whole country is a barren rock, doomed by nature to everlasting sterility.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. iv. c. 2.

STERLING, adj. } Somner derives from the STERLING, n. } A. S. Steor-an, regere, gre-bemare, dirigere. Sterling money,—nostratium in- tellectu,—he asserts, is nummus probus, et legalis;
good and legal; according to law, as fixed by law.
Camden assigns a very different origin. See the quotations from him, and Blackstone. Sterling, (met.) is—

Of genuine standard; pure, unadulterated, unalloyed; of pure intrinsic goodness or value.

The sterlings of London bridge may owe their name to the source ascribed to the word by Somner. Pennant says—they were “designed for the preservation of the foundation pile;” i. e.
to guide, direct, or steer the force of the current or other damage from them.

— Vor he gef hem atten ende
Four thousand pound of sterlynges, hem agen to wende.
R. Gloucester, p. 294.

— Thus heard I crien all,
And fast comen out of the hall,
And shoke nobles and starlings.
Chaucer. House of Fame, b. iii.

In the time of his sonne king Richard the first, monie coined in the east parts of Germanie began to be of especial request in England for the puritie thereof, and was called Easterling monie, as all the inhabitants of those parts were called Easterlings, and shortly after some of that countrie, skillfull in mint matters and allaies, were sent for into this realme to bring the coine to perfection; which since that time was called of them sterling, for Easterling.

Camden. Remaines. Money.

Before the radiant sun, a glimmering lamp,
Adulterate metals to the sterling stamp,
Appear not meaner, than mere human lines,
Compar'd with those whose inspiration shines.
Roscommon. Essay on Translated Verse.

When a given weight of gold or silver is of a given fineness, it is then of the true standard, and called esterling or sterling metal; a name for which there are various reasons given, but none of them entirely satisfactory.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. i. c. 7.

Then decent pleasantry and sterling sense,
That neither gave nor would endure offence,
Whipp'd out of sight, with satire just and keen,
The puppy pack, that had defil'd the scene.
Couper. Table Talk.

True faith, like gold into the furnace cast,
Maintains its sterling pureness to the last.
Harte. Thomas à Kempis.

This great work [London Bridge 1176] was founded on enormous piles, driven as closely as possible together: on their tops were laid long planks ten inches thick, strongly batted; and on them was placed the base of the pier, the lower most stones of which were bedded in pitch, to prevent the water from damaging the work; round all were the piles which are called the sterlings, designed for the preservation of the foundation piles.—Pennant. London.

STERN, n. } A. S. Stearn, steor-ræther; STERNAGE. } Dut. Stier, stier-roer; Ger.
STERNSMAN. } Steur, steur-ruder.

"That which is ster-en, ster'n, stirred, i.e. the moved part of the ship, or that by which the ship is moved" (Tooke) or steered. (See STEER, and STERN, infra.) Also applied to—

The hinder part of any thing; the tail.
Holinshed uses sterne as a verb.

And kyng Cadwal to hym to sturne vorst was.
R. Gloucester, p. 247.

Tho yt was ney to hym ycome, baldelyche spae
An sturnelyche to thys water, tho yt alles out brac.
Id. p. 321.

Ac wile Hunger was here mayster. wolde non chide
Ne stryve agens the statute. he lokod so sturne.
Piers Plouhman, p. 146.

Hue was wonderliche wroth. that Wit some tauhte,—
Al staryenge Dame Studie. sturneliche seide.—Id. p. 183.

Tho saw I graue how to Itaille
Dan Eneas gan for to saile,
And how the tempest all began,
And how he lost his steresman,
Which that the sterne, or he tooke keepe,
Smote ouer the bord as he sleepe.
Chaucer. House of Fame, b. ii.

But it was too late, for already it [fire] did embrace and devour from the stern to the waste of the ship.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

Whom so dismayd when that his foe beheld,
He cast to suffer him no more respite,
But gan his sturdy sterne about to weld,
And him so strongly stroke, that to the ground him feld.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

Off from the sterne, the steresman, diving fell,
And from his sinews, flew his soule to hell.
Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. 12.

Hulke tower, is a notable marke for pilots, in directing them which waie to sterne their ships, and to eschew the danger of the craggie rocks there on euerie side of the shore peking.—Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 3.

A woman did neuer before this time [1552] (especiallie one within age) challenge that kingdom vnto them, although the male line (as appeared from the Bruses to the Stewards) descended from the women, haue sometime possessed the sterne of Scotland.

Id. Historie of Scotland, an. 1553.

Grapple your minds to sternage of this naue.
Shakespeare. Henry V. Ch. 3.

But take me to thy blacke sternd ship, save me, and from my thigh Cut out this arrow.—Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xi.

Πρωμνη, the hind-deck or stern, sometimes called oupa, the tail, because the hindmost part of the ship. It was of a figure more inclining to round than the prow, the extremity of which was sharp that it might cut the waters; it was also built higher than the prow, and was the place where the pilot sat to steer.

Potter. Antiquities of Greece, vol. ii. b. iii. c. 15.

The proa generally carries six or seven Indians; two of which are placed in the head and stern, who steer the vessel alternately with a paddle according to the tack she goes on, he in the stern being the steersman.

Anson. Voyages, b. iii. c. 5.

The ornament at the stern was fixed upon that end, as the stern-post of a ship is upon her keel.

Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 10.

STERN, adj. } A. S. Sterne, sharp, severe, STERNLY. } austere, cruell, sterne, fierce, STERNNESS. } (Somner.) Skinner derives from To Stare; Junius,—from the Greek; Sere-nius also refers to the verb, To Stare, (qv.) Tooke, that—

A stern countenance is a moved countenance; moved by some passion. (See STERN, ante.) Wiclif renders the Lat. Austerus, (see AUSTERE), a stern man: it may be explained,—

Moved, excited, roused, from a calm or placid state; and, consequentially, fixed into a severe, harsh, forbidding aspect.

For I dreede thee: for thou art a sterne man, thou takist away that that thou settidist not; and thou repist that that thou hast not sown.—Wiclif. Luk, c. 19.

The sterne wynde so loud gan to route
That no wight other noyse might here.
Chaucer. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

For sternely on me he gan behold,
So that his loking doeth mine herte cold.
Id. Prolog. to the Legende of Good Women.

The kyng knowend his hie linage,
And drad also his mightes sterne,
To hym ne durst his daughter werne.
Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

But he, by whom thou fainst thy self begot,
Achilles was to Priam not so stern.
Surrey. Virgile. Æneis, b. ii.

Wherefore, after punysshment done vpon some of his en-mies, he ferynge ye sequell and reuengement of the same, laft that countree and retourned vnto Rome; where, after he hadde a season restyd, he was, by the Senate of Rome, assygned for his sterne vnto the rule of Brytayne, with the ayde of iii. legions of knyghtes.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 63.

Him when the spightfull breere had espyed,
Causelesse complainyd, and lowdly cryed
Unto his lord, stirring up sterne strife.
Spenser. Shepheard's Calender. Februarie.

But, more enfierecd through his currish play,
Him sternly grypt, and hailing to and fro,
To overthrow him strongly did assay.
Id. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 4.

Of stature huge, and eke of corage bold,
That sonnes of men amazd their *sterne*se to behold.
Id. Ib. c. 10.

— Thou sure-steel'd sternness
Give us this day good hearts, good enemies,
Good blowes o' both sides, wounds that fear or fight
Can claim no share in; steel us both with angers,
And warlike executions fit thy viewing.
Beaum. & Fletcher. Bonduca, Act iii. sc. 1.

But when the stern conditions were declar'd,
A mournful whisper through the host was heard
And the whole hierarchy, with heads hung down,
Submissively declin'd the ponderous proffer'd crown.
Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

Then the great consuls venerable rise:
The public father who the private quell'd,
As on the dread tribunal sternly sad.—Thomson. Winter.

— Sternly in his wounded soul
The late disgrace of Xerxes he revolves,
Yet soothes his anguish by enliv'ning hope
Of glory.
Glover. The Athenaid b. vi.

STERNUTATION. } Lat. Sternutare, to STERNUTATORY. } sneeze; Fr. Sternuta- toire, a sneezing medicine, or powder, (Cotgrave.)

Concerning sternutation or sneezing, and the custome of saluting or blessing upon that motion, it is pretended, and generally believed to derive its original from disease, wherein sternutation proved mortal, and such as sneezed died.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. iv. c. 9.

This he illustrates from the practice of physitions, who in persons near death, do use sternutatories, or such medicines as provoke unto sneezing; when if the faculty arise, and sternutation ensueth, they conceive hopes of life, and with gratulation receive the signs of safety.—Id. Ib.

STERQUILINOUS. Lat. Sterquilinum, from Stercus. See STERCORATION.

Any sterquilinous rascal, is licens'd to throw dirt in the faces of sovereign princes in open printed language.
Howell, b. ii. Let. 48.

STERT. } See START, STARVE.
STERVE. }

STEVEN. Lye says,—A. S. Stefn, or Stemn, signifies—institutum tempus; it appears to signify aliquid institutum; from stefn-ian, instituere, indicare, edicere, mandare; to any thing instituted, declared, announced, commanded, proclaimed, (any thing fixed.)

Instituted, announced or appointed time; hence appointment; — unset steven—appointment not being made or set. Steven, (in singing,) is probably the more modern stave or staff; applied, generally, to sound, musical or otherwise; (in Spenser) noise, cry, clamour.

The A. S. Stef-nian seems to be formed upon the verb stif-ian. See STAFF.

It is ful faire a man to bere him even,
For al day meten men at unset steven.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1526.

And ther they setten steven for to mete
To plaien at the dis in swiche a strete.
Id. The Cokes Tale, v. 4381.

The vois of the peple touched to the heven,
So loude crieden they with mery steven.
Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 2564.

But trewely the cause of my coming
Was only to herken how ye sing;
For trewely ye han as mery a steven
As any angel hath, that is in heven.
Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,297.

And ouer this of suche nature
Thei ben, that with so sweete a steuen
Like to the melodie of heuen
In womens voice thei singe.—Gower. Con. A. b. i.

No sooner was out, but swifter then thought,
Fast by the hyde the wolfe Lowder caught;
And, had not Roffy renne to the steven,
Lowder had bene slaine thilke same even.
Spenser. Shepheard's Calender. September.

STEW, v. } Fr. Estuver, to stew, soake,
STEW, n. } bathe; also, to warm: s'estuver,
STEWISH. } to sweat in a hot-house, to wash himself in hot waters: estuves, stews; also, stoves or hot-houses, (Cotgrave.) It. Stufa, stuf-are; Sp. Estufa, estufar. In A. S. Stof-a, a bath, a baine, a stove; Dut. Stove; Ger. Stube; Sw. Stuf-wa; Low. Lat. Stuba. Etymologists have various opinions on the origin of this word; they may be used as aids though not as guides. See Menage, Wachter, Ihre, Vossius, (de Vitiis, lib. ii. c. 7.)

The A. S. Stow is,—a place; emphatically (perhaps) a fire place; the importance of which in northern regions is recorded by Tacitus: the Germans, he tells us, lie whole days before the fire; juxta focum atque ignem. From focus it was extended to hypo-caustum,—the stove (ignis sub-accensus) in baths for heating the water; the hot or warm water baths themselves; the vapour baths (vaporaria). Hence, to stew, (see Cotgrave, above),—

To warm or heat, to seethe,—in water, in vapour; to put into, to keep,—in a moist heat, in a state of evaporation or steam. To be in a stew, (met.)—to be in a heat, warmer, hotter than need be.

A stew,—a stove, a hot or heated place; a bagnio, a brothel; one who frequents brothels.

— And Jonette of the styves.
Piers Plouhman, p. 131.

A straw for the stywes. hy stod nat ful longe,—
And thay hadde non other haunt. bote of poure peple.
Id. p. 267.

In Flandres whilom was a compaignie
Of yonge folk, that haunteden folie,
As hasard, riot, stewes, and tavernes.
Chaucer. The Pardoner's Tale, v. 12,335.

In deadly clothes thei hem clothe,
The bathes and the stewes bothe
Thei shit in by euery way.
There was no life whiche lust pley,
Ne take of any joye keepe.—Gower. Con. A. b. viii.

There be neither wine-taverns, nor ale-houses, nor stews, nor any occasion of vice or wickedness, no lurking corners, no places of wicked counsels or unlawful assemblies, but they be in the present sight, and under the eyes of every man.—Sir T. More. Utopia, b. ii. c. 6.

One thing I must here desire you to reforme my lords; you have put downe the stews: but I pray you what is the matter amended? what availeth that? ye have but changed the place.—Latimer. Third Sermon before K. Edward.

And here as in a tavern or a stews,
He and his wild associates spend their hours,
In repetition of lascivious jests.

B. Jonson. Every Man in his Humour, Act ii. sc. 1.

What, he, that erst to gain the rhyming goal,
The worn recital-post of capitol,
Rhymed in rules of stewish ribaldry.—Bp. Hall, b. i. Sat. 9.

Or Roman vice in coarsest habits shews,
And paints an empress reeking from the stews.
Dryden. Art of Poetry.

It was so plotted betwixt her husband, and Bristoll, that instead of that beauty he had a notorious stew sent to him.
Sir A. Weldon. Court of K. James, p. 146.

Stew'd shrimps and Afric cockles shall excite
A jaded drinker's languid appetite;
But lettuce after wine is cold and crude,
Yet ham or sausage is provoking food.
Francis. Horace, b. ii. Sat. 4.

We met with no utensil there that could be applied to the purpose of stewing or boiling.
Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 12.

Not far from these scenes of cruel pastime was the Bordello, or stews, permitted, and openly licensed by government, under certain laws or regulations. They were farmed out.—Pennant. London.

Among other regulations, no steward was to admit married women; nor, like pious Calvinists, in Holland, to this present day, were they to keep open their houses on Sundays; nor were they to admit any women who had on them the perilous infirmity of burning, &c. &c.—Id. Ib.

STEW. A stew, or stowing place (from A. S. Stow. See STEW, ante.) Chaucer applies it to—
A pond, or store-pond for fish; a cupboard, or closet.

Ful many a fat partrich hadde in mewe,
And many a breme, and many a luce in stewe.
Chaucer. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 351.

But Troilus, that stode and might it see Throughout a litel window in a stewe,
Ther he beshet, sith midnight, was in mewe,
Unwist of every wight, but of Pandare.
Id. Troil. & Cres. b. iii.

He thought he wold vpon his werke begin:
And gan the stewe dore al soft unpin.
Id. Ib.

They take a milter out of their stews or pooles where they use to keepe them.—Holland. Plinie, b. ix. c. 17.

STEWARD. } Steward, anciently stede-
STEWDRY. } ward, as in our ancient language stow, is our word for place, so is also stede and stede-ward, which for easinesse of sound, the first d being omitted, is become stew-ard, is as much to say, as—the keeper of the place, which in the moderne Teutonicke is called star-hower, that is, stede-holder, or place keeper; the same that lieutenant is in French, which, corruptly, in English we call lifenant, (Verstegan.)

Britrih had a stivard, his name was Herman.
R. Brunne, p. 10.

But yet in haste netheles
Upon the tale, whiche he herde
His steward in to Perse ferde,
With many a worthy Romaine eke,
His liege traitor for to seke.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

In theyse dayes was a great ruler in Fraunce, namyd Guyllyam, and stuarde or costable of that londe.
Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 160.

The first of them, that eldest was and best
Of all the house had charge and government,
As guardian and steward of the rest.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

There are I believe, two hundred persons now living, who have gone before you in the stewardship.
Atterbury. Sermon to the Sons of the Clergy, Ded.

Next; that you have them, not as things your own,
Tho' for your use, yet not for yours alone;
But as an human stewartry, or trust,
Of which account is to be giv'n, and just.
Byrom. Poetical Version of a Letter.

STICK, n. } Dut. Stiken, steken; Ger.
STICK, v. } Steiken; Sw. Sticka; A. S. Stic-
STICKY. } an; pungere, infigere, transfigere, STUCK, n. } to pierce, to infix, to transfix;
and, consequentially, to fix, or set fast. See STOCK.

To pierce, to transpierce, to penetrate, or transfix; to fix or set, to stay or remain fixed or fast; to fasten, to adhere; to be or remain fixed, at a stand; to hesitate.

Stick (formerly written stock),—carried in the hand, or otherwise, but sufficiently slender to be stuck or thrust into the ground or other soft substance. Stick, a thrust, (Tooke.) The latter, Shakespeare writes stuck.

And with a face ded as ashen cold,
Upon hire humble face he gan behold,
With fadres pitee stiking thurgh his herte,
Al wold he from his purpos not converte.
Chaucer. The Doctoures Tale, v. 12, 143.

She cried, "O turne againe for routhe and sinne, Thy barge hath nat all his meine in,"
Her kercheffe on a pole sticked she.
Id. The Legende of Ariadne of Athens.

And of his slouthe he dremeth ofte,
How that he sticketh in the mire.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

So ben my wittes ouerladde,
That what as euer I thought haue spoken
It is out of myn herte stoken
And stonde, as who saith, dombe and defe,
That all nis worth an iuye lefe,
Of that I wende well haue saide. Id. Ib.

A poure man, whiche Bardus hight,
Come forth walkende with his asse,
And had gethered hyme a tasse
Of grene stickes and of drie. Id. Ib. b. v.

They have anone the coffre stoke.—Id. Ib. b. viii.

And if thy will sticke vnto mine, I shall
In wedlocke sure knit, and make her his own:
Thus shall the maryage be.—Surrey. Virgile. Aeneis, b. iv.

Macb. If we should faile?
Lady. We faile?
But screw your courage to the sticking place,
And we'e le not faile.—Shakes. Macbeth, Act i. sc. 7.

And yet at this day there is neither sticke nor stone to be found of any of them in a manner, on neither side.
Holland. Plinie, b. vi. c. 29.

And when Harpalus king Alexander's lieutenant of the province of Babylon, fled out of Asia, and came to Attica with a great sum of gold and silver, straight these men that sold their tongue to the people for money, flocked about him like a sight of swallows. And he stuck not to give every one of them a piece of money to baste them with: for it was a trifle to him, considering the great sums of money he brought.—North. Plutarch, p. 630.

I had a passe with him, rapier, scabberd, and all: and he giues me the stucke in with such a mortall motion that it is ineuitable.—Shakespeare. Twelfth Night, Act iii. sc. 4.

—He haue prepar'd him
A chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there.—Id. Hamlet, Act iv. sc. 7.

But herbs draw a weak juyce; and have a soft stalk; and therefore those amongst them which last longest, are herbs of strong smell, and with a stickie stalke.
Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 583.

That two bodies cannot be in the same place, is a truth, that nobody any more sticks at, than at these maxims, "that it is impossible for the same thing to be and not to be; that white is not black; that a square is not a circle; that yellowness is not sweetness."
Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iv. c. 2.

There was no other way of bringing them into the plains but by beating them from the hills. And there they must have stuck, till famine and desertion had ended the quarrel.
Warburton. The Divine Legation, b. i. § 5.

A vagabond and useless tribe there eat
Their miserable meal. A kettle, slung Between two poles upon a stick transverse, Receives the morsel. Cowper. Task, b. i.

STICKLE, v. } A stickler, was one who STICKLER. } stood by to part the comba-STICKLEBAG. } tants when victory could be determined without bloodshed. "They were called sticklers, from carrying sticks or staves in their hands, with which they interposed between the duellists."—See the commentators on Shakespeare, and B. Jonson.

To stickle may thus be,—to interpose, to place himself on the side or party of; to stand up for, contend or contest. Dryden seems to mean—

To hesitate; to stand hesitatingly; to act indecisively.

To stickle, now appears to be generally used as the dim. of—

To stick,—to adhere to adhere to the side or cause, or defence of; to contend pertinaciously.

But Basilius rising himself came to part them, the sticklers authority scarcely able to persuade choleric hearers; and part them he did.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

Here Weever, as a flood affecting goodly peace,
His place of speech resigns; and to the Muse refers
The hearing of the cause, to stickle at these stirs.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 11.

So, Bernwood did bequeath his satyrs to the Thame,
For sticklers in those stirs that at the feast should be.
Id. Ib. s. 15.

Achi. The dragon wing of night ore-spreads the earth
And stickler-like the armies seperates.
Shakespeare. Troyl. & Cres. Act v. sc. 9.

Amo. I will win them for you, be patient. Lady, vouchsafe the tenure of this ensigne. Who shall be your stickler?
B. Jonson. Cynthia's Revels, Act v. sc. 4.

And you are yet to know, that in case you want a minnow,—then a small loach, or a stickle-bag, or any other small fish that will turn quick, will serve as well.
Walton. Angler, pt. i. c. 5.

No prize between those combatants
O' th' times, the land and water saints,
Where thou might'st stickle, without hazard
Of outrage to thy hide. Hudibras, pt. i. c. 2.

'Tis true the cause is in the lurch,
Between a right and mongrel-church,
The presbyter and independent,
That stickle which shall make an end on't.
Id. pt. iii. c. 2.

Symachus, who was a zealous stickler for the restitution of paganism, declared the pagans to worship one and the same God with the Christians, but in several ways.
Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 441.

But while mitres and stalls may be made highly subservient to the views of a minister, and the promoters of arbitrary power and principles, they honour the church, though they know nothing of Christ, they stickle for the bench, though they abandon the creed.
Knox. The Spirit of Despotism.

The moralist, tho' he always prefers substantials before forms, yet where the latter affect the former he will stickle as earnestly for them.
Search. Light of Nature, vol. i. pt. ii. c. 35.

There are people, namely, your sticklers for indifference of will, who pretend that nature has left some of her vehicles empty, indifferent to receive either satisfaction or uneasiness.—Id. Ib. pt. i. c. 6.

No sycophant or slave, that dar'd oppose
Her sacred cause, but trembled when he rose;
And ev'ry venal stickler for the yoke
Felt himself crush'd at the first word he spoke.
Cowper. Table Talk.

STIFF. } A. S. Stif-ian; Dut. Styven;
STIFFEN, v. } Sw. Styf, styfna, rigere, riges-STIFFLY. } cere, rigidum aut firmum fa-
STIFFNESS. } cere, to be or become rigid.
STIFFENING, n. } Stark, strong, rigid; hard or hardy, opposed to soft, pliant, flexible; hard, inflexible, unpliant, unyielding; rigorous, stubborn, obstinate:—harsh, constrained.

Hyt byleuede amydde hys throte, astrangled he was rygt there,
And deyde atte borde al styf, wyth ssendnesse enou.
R. Gloucester, p. 342.

The Saracens in the batayle neuere gut so vaste
Fogte, ne so styfliche.—Id. p. 398.

The paiens ageyn tham fulle stifely thei stode.
R. Brunne, p. 17.

With the Scottis gan he minge, & stify stode in stoure.
Id. p. 298.

Stonde he nevere so styfliche. thorgh sterynge of the bole,
He bendeth and boweth.—Piers Plouhman, p. 167.

Stiffe, straight, and stout, which though they be not long, Yet spit they forth their pellets such a pace,
And with such force, as seemes a woondrous case.
Gascoigne. Vpon the Fruite of Fetters.

We drawe styll stubberne backward, and cleane contrarye to Goddes gracious pleasure, and contrarye to our owne wealthe cōtynue yet vnreasonably styffe necked.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 1366.

How darcke is the doctrine of them that say stify that the worke of the sacramentes in it selfe (not referring it to styrre vp the faith of the promises annexed to the) doth iustifie.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 232.

You may know it afore it be pared, by a bought which is in it, and againe when it is couled, by the thickness above, and the thiknesse at the grounde, and also by the stiffness and finesse which will carry a shaft better, faster and further, even as a fine sayle cloth doth a shippe.
Ascham. Toxophilus, b. ii.

Nevertheless, hear what Christ saith to such obstinate and stiffnecked people in the parable of the supper.
State Trials. Mary, an. 1553. Cranmer.

The gate was open; but therein did wayt
A sturdie villein, stryding stiffe and bold,
As if the highest God defy he would.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

This said, another arrow forth from his stiffe string he sent
At Hector, whom he long'd to wound, but still amisse it went.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. viii.

What, men religious, was the fault in you?
Which, resty grown with your much pow'r, withdraw
Your stiffen'd necks from th' yoke of civil awe?

Drayton. The Barons' Wars, b. iv.

For nothing deckes a souldier so, as doth an honour'd wound,
Yet (fearing he had far'd much worse) the haire stood up on end
On Agamemnon, when he saw so much black blood descend,
And stifned with the like dismay was Menelaus to.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. iv.

But as two men, about the limits striue
Of land that toucheth in the field; their measures in their hands,
They mete their parts out curiously, and either stiffly stands,
That so farre is his right in law, both hugely set on fire
About a passing little ground.—Id. Ib. b. xii.

It mollifieth the stiffnesse and hardnesse of the sinewes.
Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 20.

All those parts of easiness which invite us to do the duty, are become like the joints of a bulrush, not bendings, but consolidations and stifnings.—Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 4.

Her distance from the shore, the course begun
At dawn, and ending with the setting sun,
A galley measures; when the stiffer gales
Rise on the poop, and fully stretch the sails.

Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. iv.

He [George Abbot] was stiffly principled in the doctrine of S. Augustine, which they who understand it not call Calvinism, and therefore disrelsh'd by them who incline to the Massilian and Arminian tenets.

Wood. Athenæ Oxon. vol. i.

Yet you would think me very ridiculous, if I should accuse the stubbornness of blank verse for this, and not rather the stiffness of the poet.

Dryden. Essay on Dramatick Poesie.

As a stick, when once it is dry and stiff, you may break it, but you can never bend it into a straighter posture; so doth the man become incorrigible, who is settled and stifened in vice.—Barrow, vol. iii. Ser. 16.

The Dutch too well his mighty conduct knew,
And matchless courage, since the former fight:
Whose navy like a stiff-stretch'd cord did show
Till he bore in and bent them into flight.

Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

Your composition needs not be at all the stiffer, but may be the freer, for the pains thus employed upon it.

Secker. A Charge to the Clergy of Canterbury.

STIFFLE, v. The Fr. Estoffer is to stuff, and estouffer is to stifle. Our Eng. word stifle is a dim. of stuff.

To stuff, to stop up by stuffing; to suppress,
to smother, to suffocate, to choak.

The edition of Brewer's Lingua, 1657, reads stiflements; the edition of the Ancient British Drama adopts stiflements, Fr. i. e. whistlings.

So he wrapped them and entangled them keping down by force the fetherbed and pillows hard vnto their mouths,
that within a while smored and stifled, theyr breath failing,
thei gaue vp to God their innocent soules into the ioyes of
heauē.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 68.

His [Plunket] workes shall take the aire, that now by reason of bashful modestie, or modest bashfulness are wrongfullie imprisoned, and in manner stieft in shadowed couches.—Holinshed. Description of Ireland, c. 7.

I hate a secret stifled flame,
Let yours and mine have voice, and name;
Who censure what twixt us they see Condemn not you, but envy me.—Cartwright. To Lydia.

Like to the winged chanters of the wood,
Uttering nought else but idle sifflements,
Tunes without sense, words inarticulate.

Brewer. Lingua, Act i. sc. 1.

Sometimes she softly sigh'd, then roar'd aloud;
But sighs were stifled in the cries of blood.

Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. viii.

I desire only to have things fairly represented, as they really are; no evidence smothered or stifled on either side.

Waterland. Works, vol. i. p. 94.

STIGMATIZE, v. Fr. Stigmatizer; It. Stigmattizzare; Lat. Stigma; STIGMA'TICK, adj. Gr. Στίγμα, from στιγναι, STIGMA'TIC, n. pungere, to pierce.
STIGMA'TICAL. To pierce, to stamp, STIGMA'TICALLY. to brand; to fix or set a mark (sc. of infamy, or disgrace.)

[They had more need some of them] have their cheeks stigmatised with a hot iron, I say, some of our Jesabells, instead of painting, if they were well served.

Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 470.

Yet stick not to commit actions, by which they are more shamefully and more lastingly stigmatised!

Cowley. Essay on Liberty.

D'ost thou not think our ancestors were wise,
That these religious cells did first devise,
As hospitals were for the sore and sick,
These for the crook'd, the halt, the stigmatic.

Drayton. K. John to Matilda.

Yo. Clif. Foule stygmatike that's more then thou canst tell.—Shakespeare. 2 Pt. Hen. VI. Act v. sc. 1.

He is deformed, crooked, old, and sere,
Ill fac'd, worse bodied, shapelesse euery where:
Vicious, vngentle, foolish, blunt, vnkinde,
Stigmaticall in making, worse in minde.

Id. Comedie of Errors, Act iv. sc. 2.

If you spy any man that hath a look,
Stigmatically drawn, like to a fury.

Wonder of a Kingdom, (1635.)

But what disgrac'd and disavow'd the rest,
Was Calvin's brand, that stigmatiz'd the beast.

Dryden. The Hind and the Panther.

The common brand by which hypocrites and false pre-tenders to religion are stigmatiz'd, is, their being zealous for the positives, and cold and indifferent as to the morals of religion.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 1.

Was there a villain, who might justly claim
A better right of being damn'd to fame,
Rake, cut-throat, thief, whatever was his crime,
They freely stigmatiz'd the wretch in rhyme.

Francis. Horace, b. i. Sat. 4.

STILE'TTO, n. It. Stilet, pugionis genus; STILLE'TTO, v. dim. of stile, a little stick;
Lat. Stylus.

A small, round, pointed dagger.

— And for that she will be Like him in all, her congies she will make
With the man's court'sy, and her hat off take,
Of the French fashion; and wear by her side
Her sharp stiletto in a riband ty'd.

Drayton. The Moon-Calf.

Dua. Out with your bodkin,
Your pocket-dagger, your stiletto, out with it,
Or by this hand I'll kill you.

Beaum. & Fletch. Custom of the Country, Act ii. sc. 1.

At a time when he was as it were to mount on horseback for the commanding of the greatest forces that of long time had been levied in France, this king likewise was stillettoed by a rascal votary which had been enchanted and conjured for the purpose.—Bacon. Charge against Wm. Talbot.

Simulation is a stiletto, not only an offensive, but an unlawful weapon: and the use of it may be rarely, very rarely, excused, but never justified.

Bolingbroke. Idea of a Patriot King.

Whoever thought any thing fairly managed to be dangerous! the danger is in the abuse or unfair management.
The use of stilletos and poisons, fairly managed, can never be dangerous.

Warburton. Ded. to the Free-Thinkers, Postscript.

STILL, v. See DISTILL, and INSTILL.
STILL, n. It. Stillare; Lat. Stillare; STILLATORY, n. to drop or drip.
STILLICIDE. To fall in drops; to sepa-STILLICIDIOUS. rate drop by drop; to fall or descend in small portions or particles, by slow degrees; to fall, come down or come forth, as in liquid drops.

Jesus Christ woulde that all mennes myndes shoulde be prepared, and made in a redines by his usher and messenger John the sonne of Zacharie a man knowen and allowed of the Jewes themselues: to thentent that the thyng whiche euer should be beleued, might by lytle and lytle be stilled and put into the hartes of men.—Udal. Matthew, c. 3.

The knowledge of stilling is one pretty feat
The waters be wholesome, the charges not great.

Tusser. Husbandry. May.

There she him found by that new lovely mate,
Who lay the whiles in swoune, full sadly set,
From her faire eyes wiping the dewy wet
Which softly stild, and kissing them atweene,
And handling soft the hurts which she did get.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 7.

The same pitch-rozin, if it be boiled more lightly with water, & be let to run through a strainer, commeth to a reddish colour, and is glewie: and thereupon it is called stilled pitch.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvi. c. 11.

Then starts she suddenly into a throng
Of short thick sobs, whose thund'ring volleys float,
And rout themselves over her lubric throat
In panting murmurs, stild out of her breast,
That ever-bubbling spring, the sugar'd nest
Of her delicious soul, that there does lie
Bathing in streams of liquid melody.

Crashaw. Musick's Duel.

The manna on each leafe did pearled lie,
The hony stilled from the tender rinde.

Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. xviii. s. 24.

Put water into the bottome of a stillatory, with the neb stopped; weigh the water first; hang in the middle of the stillatory a large sponge; and see what quantity of water you can crush out of it.—Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 27.

For these are nature's stillatories, in whose hollow caverns
the ascending vapours are congealed to that universal aqua vitæ, that good fresh water, the liquor of life, that sustains all the living creatures in the world.

More. Antidote against Atheism, b. ii. c. 3.

We see it also in the stillicides of water, which if there be water enough to follow, will draw themselves into a small thred, because they will discontinue; but if there be no remedy, then they cast themselves into round drops.

Bacon. Naturall Historie, § 24.

Chrystal is found sometimes in rocks, and in some places not much unlike the stirrious or stillicidious dependencies of ice.—Brown. Vulgar Errours, b. ii. c. 1.

This fragrant spirit is obtained from all plants which are in the least aromatick, by a cold still, with a heat not exceeding that of summer.—Arbuthnot. On Aliments, c. 3.

On the 21st I ordered the still to be fitted to the largest copper, which held about sixty-four gallons. The fire was lighted at four o'clock in the morning, and at six the still began to run.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. iv. c. 10.

STILL, v. A. S. Stil-an; Dut. Stillen; Ger.
STILL, n. Stillen; Sw. Stilla; seem the same STILL, adj. words differently written, as the STILL, ad. A. S. Stell-an, or Steall-ian; Ger.
ST'LLY. and Dut. Stellen; Sw. Ställa, ST'LLNESS. ponere; and to mean, — conse-quentially, — componere, compescere, sedare, quietum reddere, quiescere, —

To compose, to calm, to appease, to tranquillize, to quiet, to set or put at rest; to be or cause to be low or gentle in sound; to be silent, to silence.

Still, the ad.—Skinner knows not whether from til, with the mere prefix s. Tooke considers it to be the imperative of Stell-an, ponere, to put or place; and to be in effect equivalent to yet.
(See YET.) Still, then, must, upon this etymology, be explained to mean—Pone, put or place,— or hoc posito,—this being put, placed, supposed, proposed, assumed, granted.

And natheles Cradok hym held al euene and stille,
And the kyng stilleliche brogte al to hys wille.

R. Gloucester, p. 90.

The maistres sete stille ynow, rygt as heo doumbe were.

Id. p. 131.

Edmunde & the erle Uctred that tyme held tham stille.

R. Brunne, p. 47.

Now is Scotland hole at our kynges wille, & Jon the Baliol at London leues stille.—Id. p. 279.

And the peple blamyde hem that thei schulden be stille:
and thei crieden more and seiden, Lord the sone of Davith, have mercy on us.—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 20.

And the same Soloman saith: 'the angrie and wrathful man maketh noises, and the patient man attempreth and stilleth hem.'—Chaucer. The Tale of Melibeus.

And whan he saw how stille that I lay,
He was agast, and wold have fled away.

Id. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 6309.

After this she stinte a little, and after that she had gadered by a temper stylness myne attencion, as who so might sayn thus.—Id. Boecius, b. ii.

The colde wyndes ouerblowe,
And stilled ben the sharpe shoures.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

The softe worde the loude stilleth.—Id. Ib. b. vii.

And as he cast his eie about,
He sigh this tonne: and what it ment
He wolde witte, and thither sent
A knight, by whom he might it know.
And he hym selfe that ilke throwe
Abode, and houeth there stille.—Id. Ib. b. iii.

Wherefore this freedom is a spirituall freedom, which destroyeth not the lawe, but ministreth that which the law requireth, and wherewith the law is fulfilled, that is to vnderstand, luste and loue, wherewith the law is stilled, and accuseth vs no more, compelleth vs no more, neither hath ought to craue of vs any more.—Tyndall. Workes, p. 46.

Verges. If you heare a child crie in the night you must call to the nurse, and bid her still it.

Shakespeare. Much Adoe about Nothing, Act iii. sc. 3.

Be not disturb'd with my infirmities,
If you be pleas'd, retire into my cell,
And there repose, a turne or two, Ile walke
To still my beating minde.—Id. Tempest, Act iv. sc. 1.

Thus pass'd the night so foul till morning fair
Came forth with pilgrim steps in amice gray;
Who with her radiant finger still'd the roar
Of thunder, chas'd the clouds, and laid the winds,
And grisly spectres, which the fiend had rais'd
To tempt the son of God with terrors dire.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. iv.

He [Hen. VIII.] had never any the least pique, difference, or jealousy, with the king his father, which might give any occasion of altering court or council upon the change; but all things passed in a still.—Bacon. History of Hen. VIII.

Griefe and despiht, and gealosy, and scorne,
Did all the way him follow hard behynd;
And he himselfe, himselfe loath'd so forlorne,
So shamefully forlorne of womankynd:
That, as a snake, still lurked in his wounded mynd.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 10.

But, of Vlysses (where the Thesprots dwell,
A wealthy people) fame, he saies, did tell
The still suruual: who his natue light
Was bound for now; with treasure infinite.

Chapman. Homer. Odyssey, b. xvii.

Or in the stilnesse of a moone-shine eauen,
A falling star so glideth downe from heauen.

Fairstax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. ix. s. 62.

Which his religious confessor (who best
Could cast, with what a violent access
This fever of ambition did molest His still-sick mind) takes hold on.

Daniel. Civil Wars, b. viii.

From camp to camp, through the foule womb of night
The humme of eyther army stilly sounds;
That the fixt centinels almost receiue
The secret whispers of each other's watch.

Shakespeare. Henry V. Ch. 4.

Thus mindless of what idle men will say,
He takes his own, and stilly goes his way.

More. Philosophical Poems, (1647.)

The subtle spoiler, of the beaver kind,
Far off perhaps, where ancient alders shade
The deep still pool, within some hollow trunk Contrives his wicker couch.—Somerville. The Chase, b. ix.

Still, as you rise, the state, exalted too,
Finds no distemper while 'tis chang'd by you;
Chang'd like the world's great scene! when without noise,
The rising sun night's vulgar lights destroy.

Waller. To the Lord Protector.

The still-born sounds upon the palate hung
And dy'd imperfect on the faultering tongue.

Dryden. Theodore & Honoria.

We afterward saw the natives flying, the boats retire from the shore, and passing and repassing, in great stillness between the ships.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. v. c. 4.

Hence, history informs us of several successful impostors who set out in all the blaze of fanaticism, and ended their career in all the depth and stillness of politics.

Warburton. Works, vol. ix. Ser. 6.

STILT, n. } Dut. Stelten; Ger. Stelize; Sw. Stilt, v. } Stylta, Wachter derives from the verb Stellen, ponere. See STILL.

Any thing put or placed, (sc.) to uphold, support, raise, elevate.

The stilts or rising roots, in Dampier, are compared by him to artificial stakes, supporting one trunk.

And tread on corked stilts a prisoner's pace.

Bp. Hall, b. iv. Sat. 6.

Neither the black nor white mangrove grow towering up from stilts or rising root, as the red doth; but the body immediately under the ground, like other trees.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1682.

And laugh at this fantastic mummery,
This antic prelude of grotesque events,
Where dwarfs are often stilled, and betray
A littleness of soul by worlds o'er-run,
And nations laid in blood.—Young. Complaint, Night 6.

Others affect the stiff and swelling phrase;
Their muse must walk in stilts, and strut in stays.

Churchill. The Apology.

STIMULATE, v. } Fr. Stimuler; It. Sti-
STIMULATION. } molare; Sp. Estimular;
STIMULANT, adj. } Lat. Stimulus, from Gr.
STIMULANT, n. } Στιγ-ειν, to prick.

To prick, to instigate, to goad, to incite, to excite, to spur.

The nature of imperfect animals is such, that they are apt to have but a dull and sluggish sense, a flat and insipid taste of good, unless it be quickned and stimulated, heightened and invigorated, by being compared to the contrary evil.

Cudworth. Intellectual System, p. 220.

Since therefore the devil's tempting us is used by Christ as a motive to excite our activity, it is evident that Christ's intention in permitting him to tempt us is to excite and stimulate us thereunto.—Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 7.

Urg'd by the stimulating goad,
I drag the cumbrous waggon's load.—Gay. To a Poor Man.

There is yet another mischievous principle which prevails among some persons in passing a judgment on the writings of others, and that is, when, from the secret stimulation of vanity, pride, or envy they despise a valuable book, and throw contempt upon it by wholesale.

Watts. On the Mind, pt. i. c. 5.

The solution of copper in the nitrous acid is the most acrid and stimulant of any with which we are acquainted.

Falconer.

Stimulants produce pain, heat, redness.—Chambers.

Th' ethereal glow that stimulates thy frame,
When all th' according powers harmonious move,
And wake to energy each social aim,
Attuned spontaneous to the will of Jove.

Beattie. Judgment of Paris.

STING, v. } A. S. Styng-an; Sw. Stinga,
STING, n. } pungere, to prick or pierce.
STINGING, n. } To prick or penetrate, to STINGINGLY. } pierce (with pain); to pain.
STINGLESS. } A stinger (in common speech)
STINGO. } is one who, that which, stings or pierces, (acutely, deeply.)

Stingo,—a strong beer, pungent to the palate, or stomach.

O soden hap, o thou fortune unstable,
Like to the scorpion so deceivable,
That flatrest with thy hed when thou wilt sting.

Chaucer. The Merchant's Tale, v. 9932.

And therewithal he blent and cried A!
As though he stongen were unto the herte.

Id. The Knight's Tale, v. 1080.

Anone the neders gonne her for to sting,
And she her death receiue with good chere,
For love of Antony that was to her so dere.

Id. Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt.

Let crabbed fortune now expresse hir might,
And doe thy worst to mee thou stinging spite.

Turberville. The Louer hoping assuredly, &c.

And though at first it seeme a pleasant thing,
At last (sayeth he) it striketh with a sting.

Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

"And when he was bereaved of his ease,
With the remembrance of so heinous wrong,
Upon his breast so strongly that did seize,
And his sad heart so violently stung."

Drayton. Legende of Robert, Duke of Normandy.

The same advauncing high above his head,
With sharpe intended sting so rude him smott,
That to the earth him drove, as stricken dead.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 11.

Teach me to hear mermaids singing:
Or to keep off envy's stinging,
And find,
What wind
Serves to advance an honest mind.—Donne. Song.

It consisting of more subtile particles than those of water, and therefore more fit to insinuate, and more accurately and stingingly to affect and touch the nerves.

More. Antidote against Atheism, b. iii. c. 12.

It [aire] will then seem not only cold as congealed water does, but more piercingly and stingingly cold, by reason of the subtilty of the parts.—Id. Ib. App. c. 12.

Thou abhorrest death, and fleest from it as from a serpent: but dost thou know that his sting is gone? what harm can there be in a stinglesse snake.—Bp. Hall. Balm of Gilead.

—The whisper'd tale

That like the fabling Nile, no fountain knows.
Fair fac'd deceit, whose wily conscious eye
Ne'er looks direct. The tongue that licks the dust,
But, when it safely dares, as prompt to sting.

Thomson. Liberty, pt. iv.

Dam. Ye boys, who pluck the flowers, and spoil the spring,
Beware the secret snake that shoots a sting.

Dryden. Virgil, Past. 3.

Not soon provok'd, however stung and teas'd,
And, if perhaps made angry, soon appeas'd:
She rather waves than will dispute her right,
And injur'd, makes forgiveness her delight.

Cowper. Charity.

It chanc'd in [the] dog-days he sat at his ease
In his flow'r-woven arbour as gay as you please,
With a friend and a pipe puffing sorrows away,
And with honest old stingo was soaking his clay,
His breath doors of life on a sudden were shut,
And he died full as big as a Dorchester butt.

Faulkes. The Brown Jug

The misery and mischief introduced by sin are also as naturally represented by stinging serpents; to which sin is often compared in scripture.—Gilpin, vol. i. Ser. 2.

They weep impetuous, as the summer storm,
And full as short! The cruel grief soon tam'd,
They make a pastime of the stingless tale.

Young. The Complaint, Night 5.

The sharpness to which the point [of the sting] in all of them is wrought; the temper and firmness of the substance of which it is composed; the strength of the muscles by which it is darted out, compared with the smallness and weakness of the insect, and with the soft and friable texture of the rest of the body; are properties of the sting to be noticed, and not a little to be admired.

Paley. Natural Theology, c. 19.

STINGY, adj. } Not a very old verb. It STINGINESS. } may have been formed from the A. S. Stingan, reponere, to lay up; and, consequently, to hoard.

A stingy fellow is—one who lays up (sc.) in store, hoards, fears to use; and hence—Sparing, covetous, niggardly.

God can easily accomplish whatsoever he promises or threatens; he can be straitened in nothing, nor need any thing, having all things in himself; and, consequently of that, it is impossible to conceive of him as a narrow-hearted, stingy being, that can envy or malign his creatures; but contrariwise, he must be unspeakably good, and take delight in nothing more than in communicating of his own fulness to them.—Goodman. Winter Ev. Conf. pt. iii.

Here our author, in pure good nature, to make amends for his stinginess in the matter we last remarked, gives us three rules, where not one is needed.

Johnson. Noctes Nottinghamicæ, p. 19.

No little art is made use of to persuade them (my servants) that I am stingy, and that my place is the worst in the town.—Knox. Ess. 166.

STINK, n. } See STENCH. A. S. Stenc-an,
STINK, v. } or stinc-an; Dut. Stincken,— STINK-ARD. } To smell, or cause a smell
STINKER. } or odour (good or bad),—now
STINKINGLY. } an offensive, an ill smell.

Richard was hastif, & ansuerd that stund,
Certes thou lies cheitif, & as a stinkand hund.

R. Brunne, p. 177.

Sodom & Gomor fulle vile synne that stank,
Bothe for euer more doun tille helle thei sank.—Id. p. 289.

Martha, the sister of him that was deed, seith to him,
Lord, he stinketh now: for he leyen four dayes.

Wiclif. Jon. c. 11.

Martha, the systre of him that was dead, sayd vnto him: Lord by this time he stincheth. For he hath bene dead four dayes.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Ful soth it is that swiche profered service
Stinketh, as witnesseth thise olde wise.

Chaucer. The Chanones Yemannes Tale, v. 16,464.

And ye shall seen, up peril of my lif,
By veray preef that is demonstratif,
That equally the soun of it wol wende,
And eke the stinke, unto the spokes ende.

Id. The Sompnoures Tale, v. 7853.

The thirde stone in speciall
By name is cleped Minerall,
Whiche the mettals of every myne
Attempreth, till that thei ben fyne,
And pureth hem by suche a wey
Of rust, of stynke, and of hardnes.—Gower. Con. A. b. iv.

As frozen dung-hills in a winter's morn,
That void of vapour seemed all beforen,
Soon as the sun sends out his piercing beams
Exhale our filthy smoak and stinking steams.

Bp. Hall, b. i. Sat. 3.

—And poyson therewith rusht,
That him nigh choked with the deadly stinke:
Such loathly matter were small lust to speake or thinke.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 11.

They are the most contemptible people, and have a kind of fulsom scent, no better than a stink, that distinguisheth them from others.—Howell, b. i. Let. 14.

Row, close then, slaves. Alas, they will beshite us.
No matter, stinkards, row.

B. Jonson. Voyage.

Canst thou beleue thy liuing is a life,
So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Shakespeare. Measure for Measure, Act iii. sc. 2.

The air may be purified by burning of stink-pots or stinkers in contagious lanes.—Harvey.

So poor, that when our choosing-tribes were met,
Ev'n for his stinking votes he ran in debt.
Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel, pt. ii.

STINT, or } A. S. Stint-an, hebetare, to STENT, v. } make dull or blunt; to quail STINT, n. } or assuage, (Somner.) See STINTER. } STUNT.
STINTING, n. } To blunt; to stop, to restrain, to confine, to limit, to apportion; to stop, or cause to stop; to cease, to desist.

Had thei no stintyng, but thogh alle thei ran,
Unto Wynchestre, alle the loud thei wan.—R. Brunne, p. 1.

Sir Gilbert herd say of ther dedes ille,
Of non the had ay to stint ne hold tham stille.—Id. p. 220.

— Stint thow nouht there.

Piers Plouhman, p. 122.

But swiche a crie and swiche a wo they make,
That in this world n'is creature living,
That ever herd swiche another waimenting.
And of this crie ne wolde they never stenten,
Till they the reines of his bridel henten.

Chaucer. The Knights Tale, v. 901.

The Reve answerd and saide, "Stint thy clappe."
Id. The Milleres Tale, v. 3144.

But I will never stint, nor rest, until I have got the ful and exact knowledge hereof.

Sir T. More. Utopia. Giles to Buslide.

And yet alwayes, in euery sighe and sobbe,
She shewed great skil, for times of vnisone,
Hir jug, jug, jug, (in grieve) had such a grace.
Then stinted she, as if her song were done.

Gascoigne. Complaynt of Phylomene.

They then for their foresight
Thought meete to stinte the strife,
And so restrained the murdering king,
From sister and from wife.

Id. Ib. p. 566.

— Yet n'ould she stent
Her bitter rayling and foule revilement.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 4.

And now, amongst thy people, and thy goods,
Against the woosers base and petulant bloods,
Stint'st thou thy valour?—Chapman. Homer. Odys. b. xxii.

Yea quoth my husband, fall'st vpon thy face, thou wilt fall backward when thou comest to age: wilt thou not Jule? It stinted, and said I.

Jule. And stint thou too, I pray thee nurse, say I.
Shakespeare. Romeo & Juliet, Act i. sc. 3.

The liquor or decoction of the gourd, sodden all whole as it is, with rind, seed, and pulpe, doth strengthen the loose teeth, and stinteth their ache.—Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 3.

"Cease, daughter, to complain, and stint the strife."
Dryden. Palamon & Arcite, b. iii.

But let them read, and solve me, if they can,
The words address'd to the Samaritan:
Five times in lawful wedlock she was join'd;
And sure the certain stint was ne'er defin'd.

Pope. The Wife of Bath.

The power of repeating, or doubling any idea we have of any distance, and adding it to the former as often as we will, without being ever able to come to any stop or stint, let us enlarge it as much as we will, is that which gives us the idea of immensity.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 13.

Let us now see whether a set form, or this extemporary way, be the greater hinderer, and stinter of it.

South, vol. ii. Ser. 3.

Namely, that the praying by a set-form, is not a stinting of the spirit; and the praying extempore truly and properly is so.—Id. Ib.

All these species of pasturable common, may be and usually are limited as to number and time; but there are also commons without stint, and which last all the year.

Blackstone. Commentaries, b. ii. c. 3.

STIPEND. } Fr. Stipendier; It. Sti-
STIPE'NDIARY, adj. } pèndio, stipendiare; Sp.
STIPE'NDIARY, n. } Estipendio; Lat. Stipen- dium, from stips, a piece of money; from stipare, to store or pack up.

See the quotation from Plinie.

[The Romaynes] did make a golden goose, and set her in the toppe of the Capitolium, and appointed also the censors to allow out of the common butche yearlyly stipendes, for the findinge of certaine geese.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. ii.

By the which I might be abled, by the portion of that stipend, in this my impoverishment, to wear out my life tolerably.—Burnet. Records, vol. ii. pt. ii. b. iii. Letter from Parker, No. 8.

Ye shall make diligent search and inquiry, how many chauntries, hospitals, and colleges, free chappels, fraternities, brotherhoods, guilds and salaries, or wages of stipen- diary priests.—Id. Ib. pt. ii. b. i. No. 27.

For Cynthia doth in sciences abound,
And gives to their professors stipends large.
Spenser. Colin Clouts come Heme again.

Moreover the under-treasurers of warre, or paymasters in the campe, were in auncient time named Libripendes, for weighing out unto the souldiours their wages; and their verie pay therefore was called stipendium, from whence commeth stipend, a word commonly received.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiii. c. 3.

It is the gift of God; a donative beyond the military sti- pend.—Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 3.

Supply, by stipendiary preachers, to be rewarded with some liberal stipends, to supply as they may, such places which are unfurnished of sufficient pastors.

Bacon. The Pacification of the Church.

Such stipends those vile hirelings best befit,
Priests without grace, and poets without wit.

Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel, pt. ii.

The stipends of the most useful part of the clergy, those who officiate, are often not greater than the earnings of a hireling mechanic.—Knox. Ess. 53.

Till after the middle of the fourteenth century, five merks, containing about as much silver as ten pounds of our present money, was in England the usual pay of a curate or a stipendiary parish priest, as we find it regulated by the decrees of several different national councils.

Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. i. c. 10.

O if thou be'st some fugitive, who, lost
To liberty and virtue, art become A tyrant's vile stipendiary, that arm,
That valour, thus triumphant I deplore.

Glover. Leonidas, b. viii.

STIPULATE, v. } Fr. Stipuler; It. Stipulare; STIPULA'TION. } Sp. Estipular; Lat. Stipu- lare, from stipula, a reed or straw; because, in contracts or bargains respecting land, the parties held a straw in their hands, which represented the whole land, (Vossius.)

To contract, to bargain; to ask or require—terms or conditions; to covenant or agree.

Therefore he desir'd a valuable caution for the performance of those articles which were stipulated in their favour.

Howell, b. i. Let. 20.

The covenant, or rather the covenant charter, was given soon after the fall to mankind in general, and has been carried on through successive generations by new stipulating acts in every age.—Waterland. Works, vol. vii. p. 78.

Could he present a sacrifice, or disburse a satisfaction to his own justice? Could God alone contract and stipulate with God in our behalf? No.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 32.

That which unites them is not their being together in the same place, but their being obliged together under the same laws and stipulations, and communicating with one another in the duties and privileges of one and the same charter.

Scott. Christian Life, pt. ii. c. 8.

Hence we may understand upon what ground and with what equity and reason salvation is promised in scripture to faith, without the express stipulation of any other condition.—Bp. Horsley, vol. iii. Ser. 42.

In all stipulations, whether they be expressed or implied, private or public, formal or constructive, the parties stipu- lating must both possess the liberty of assent and refusal,
and also be conscious of that liberty.

Paley. Moral Philosophy, b. iv. c. 3.

STIR, v. } Dut. Stoor-en; Ger. Stewren;
STIR, n. } A. S. Stir-ian, to move. See STIR'RRER. } To STEER, STERN, &c.
STIR'RRING, n. } To move, to cause motion or STIR'RRAGE. } emotion; to rouse, to excite;
to put into commotion, confusion, disturbance, tumult.

Corineus thur with harde smot & stured hym a boutte,
And made his wey bi either syde, and percede the route.

R. Gloucester, p. 17.

Thou may not ligge & slepe as monke in his dortoure,
Thou salle rise vp and lepe, & stirre vnto the stoure.

R. Brunne, p. 256.

For he ne myghte steppe ne stand, ne stere for ne hondes
For helpe hym selve sothliche.—Piers Plouhman, p. 324.

And whanne he was entred into Jerusalem all the citee was stirid and seide, who is this?—Wiclif. Matthew, c. 21.

His fadir sigh him, and was stirid by mersy, and he ran:
and fel on his necke, and kyside him.—Id. Luk. c. 15.

And lo a greet stirryng was maad in the see so that the schip was hildid with wawis, but he slept.—Id. Matt. c. 8.

— Thou thy selfe all holy Foryetten shalt so utterly,
That many times thou shalt bee,
Still as an image of tree,
Domme as a stone, without stirring
Of foote or honde, without speaking.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

Enule hath kynde put a waie.
And of malice hath his sturryng,
Wherof he maketh his bakbityng,
And is him selfe therof diseased.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

And we say also that God hath dayly styred vp and dayly doth styrre vp newe prophetes in sundry partes of hys catholike church.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 501.

Than this foresayde Charlemayne (steryd by dyuine in-spiracion, or as some auctoures meane, as he before tyme hadde auowyd) sodeynlye renouncyd & gaue ouer all worldly prosperyte and domynyon.—Fabyan. Chronycle, c. 149.

Her sister Anne, spritelesse for drede to heare
This fearefull sturre, with nailles gan teare her face,
She smote her brest, and rushed through the rout.

Surrey. Virgile. Ensis, b. iv.

[Cursed be the] stirrers vp of princes to bataille and warre.

Tyndall. Workes, p. 194.

What should I speake of others in the same case dyuers and notable, whose death for manhood and seruice, can want no worthie prayse, so long as these vglie stirrers of rebellion can be had in minde.

Sir J. Cheke. Hurt of Sedition.

For all in blood and spoile is his delight—
His am JAtin, his in wrong and right,
That matter make for him to worke upon,
And stirre him up to strife and cruell fight.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 4.

And there arose such rut th' unruly rout among,
That soon the noise thereof through all the ocean rung.
When Portsey, weighing well the ill to her might grow,
In that their mighty stirs might be her overthrow,
She strongly strengthneth-in the entrance to her bay.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 2.

They cannot sleep soundly, but the crowing of the cock,
the noise of little birds,—every small stirrage waketh them.

Granger. On Eccles. (1621), p. 320.

— But I see
My admiration has drawn night upon me,
And longer to expect my friend may pull me
Into suspicion of too late a stirrer
Which all good governments are jealous of.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Chances, Act i. sc. 3.

— How is thy mind
Affected since the vintage? dost thou find
New thoughts and stirrings in thee? and, as steel Touch'd with a load-stone, dost new motions feel.

Donne. To Mr. Tilman.

All those sublime thoughts which tower above the clouds, and reach as high as heaven itself, take their rise and footing here: in all that real extent wherein the mind wanders, in those remote speculations, it may seem to be elevated with, it stirs not one jot beyond those ideas which sense or reflection have offered for its contemplation.

Locke. On Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. i.

Let us remember, that in this state of imperfection, there is scarce any truth so bright and clear, but that an indistrious stirrer up of doubts may do somewhat towards clouding and darkening it.—Atterbury, vol. iii. Ser. 8.

Now stir the fire and close the shutters fast,
Let fall the curtains, wheel the sofa round,
And while the bubbling and loud hissing urn
Throws up a steamy column, and the cups,
That cheer but not inebriate, wait on each,
So let us welcome peaceful ev'ning in.

Cowper. Task, b. iv.

'Tis pleasant, through the loopholes of retreat,
To peep at such a world; to see the stir
Of the great Babel, and not feel the crowd.—Id. Ib.

— How well her looks express
For this world's good a cherish'd hopelessness!
A resignation that is so entire,
It feels not now the stirrings of desire,
What now to her is all the world esteems.

Crabbe. Tales of the Hall, b. viii.

STIRIOUS. Lat. Stiria, a drop.
A drop or globule—of frozen water.

Chrystal is found sometimes in rocks, and in some places not much unlike the stirrious or stillicious dependencies of ice.—Brown. Vulgar Errors, b. ii. c. 1.

STIRPS. Lat. Stirps, which Scaliger derives from σπειρονος, as if spoken de solidioribus.
The trunk or stock, of a family or race; a family or race.

No tearmes digne vnto her excellence,
So is she sprong of noble stirpe and high.

Chaucer. The Court of Loue.

But for Democracies, they need it [nobilitie] not; and they are commonly, more quiet, and lesse subject to sedition, than where there are stirps of nobles.

Bacon. Ess. On Nobilitie.

STIRRUP. A.S. Stige-rapa, sti-rap; Dut. Steegh-reep; Ger. Steg-reiff, funis ascensorius, from A.S. Stig-an; Dut. Steeghen; Ger. Steigen, ascendere, to sty, to ascend; and A.S. Rapa; Dut. Reep; Ger. Reif, a rope.

A mounting rope; a rope, a strap, with footing of iron or other substance, by which to mount.

Their speares brake nat, nor the knightes lost no styropes.
Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. ii. c. 168.

Some cunning man maye teache thee for to ryde,
And stuffe thy saddle all with Spanishe wooll,
Or in thy stirrops haue a toye so tyde,
As both thy legges may swell thy buskins full.
Gascoigne. Councell to Master Withipoll.

Phalantus (in the fall having gotten his feet free off the stirrup) could, though something bruised, arise.
Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

I surely thought that the manner had bene Irish, for it is farre differing from that we have now, as also all the furniture of his horse, his strong brasse bit, his slyding reynes, his shanke pillion without stirrupes, &c.
Spenser. View of the State of Ireland.

[Menage] reports, that St. Jerom is the first author who makes mention of stirrups, and quotes his very words upon the occasion. He says, "that at the time of his receiving certain letters, he was mounting his horse, and had his foot in the stirrup [bistapia]."

Berenger. History of Horsemanship.

The stapia, or more properly sub ex pedaneus, or stirrup, does not appear to have been used till these latter ages; there being no notice taken of any such thing in any author, that I know of, before Eustathius.

Potter. Antiquities of Greece, vol. ii. b. iii. c. 3.

However, we exerted ourselves the best we could to stirrup our shrouds, to reeve new lanyards, and to mend our sails.—Anson. Voyages, b. i. c. 10.

STITCH, n. } A.S. Stice, punctio, a stitch
STITCH, v. } or pricking, a stitch in the side, STITCHERY. } (Somner.) Dut. Steke; Ger.
STITCHING, n. } Stich; from the V. Stic-an, pungere, to stick, (qv.)

"Stitch, in needle-work, (ch instead of k),—a thrust or push with the needle; also that which is performed by a thrust or push of the needle." In Chapman,—that which is effected by sticking, piercing or pushing; and consequentially, turning up, (sc.) by the plough-share.

Stitch, (met.)—"A pain, resembling the sensation produced by being stuck or pierced by any pointed instrument," (Tooke.)

Stitched and pranked with pletes.

Skelton. Elinour Rumming.

It is in your hand as well to stitch up his life again, as it was before to rent it.—Sidney. Arcadia, b. ii.

In grave beginnings and great things profest,
Ye have oft-times, that may ore-shine the rest,
A scarlet peece, or two, stitch'd in.—B. Jonson. Horace.

Land. A civil gentleman?

A stranger? one the town holds a good regard of?

John. Nay I will silence thee.

Land. One that should weigh his fair name? oh, a stitch!—Beaum. & Fletcher. The Chances, Act i. sc. 9.

And many men at plow he made, that drave earth here and there,
And turnd up stitches orderly; at whose end when they were,
A fellow ever gave their hands full cups of luscious wine.

Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xviii.

It [bacchar] taketh away the stitches in the side.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxi. c. 19.

Val. Come lay aside your stitchery, I must haue you play the idle huswife with me this afternoone.

Shakespeare. Coriolanus, Act i. sc. 3.

— Full many a feather

With twine of thread he stitch'd together.

King. Art of Love.

A ropy chain of rhumes; a visage rough,
Deform'd, unfeatur'd, and a skin of buff.
A stitch-fal'n cheek, that hangs below the jaw.

Dryden. Juvenal, Sat. 10.

There are four sorts of stitches, mention'd by the ancients, for the wounds of the belly, whereof I shall take notice only of one, which I have made use of myself in the stitching of wounds.—Wiseman. Surgery, b. v. c. 1.

STITH. } A.S. Stith, stiff, hard, severe, STITHY, n. } violent, great, difficult, strong,
STITHY, v. } (Somner.) "Stithe cheese, i. e. strong cheese. Stithy, an anvil, from the foregoing: quid enim incude durius," (Ray, North Country Words.)

Stith is from A.S. Sted; Goth. Stads,—

That which standeth—firmly, fixedly, steadily.

Ther were also of Martes division,

Th' armerer, and the bowyer, and the smith,

That forgeth sharpe swerdes on his stith.

Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 2026.

Thanne he rode a lytell forthe thyderwarde, and anone he sawe where his mayster lay vpon the erthe, bytwene foure men, layeng on him strokes as they wolde haue stryken on a stethy.—Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 281.

There is of it [steele] which serveth better for stithie or anvil heads, the faces of hammers, bits of mattookes, and yron crowes.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxiv. c. 14.

— If his occulted guilt,

Do not it selfe vnkenell in one speech,

It is a damned ghost that we haue seene:

And my imaginations are as foule

As Vulcan's stythe.—Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act iii. sc. 2.

But by the forge that stythied Mars his helme,

He kill thee euery where, yea, ore and ore.

Id. Troyl. & Cres. Act iv. sc. 5.

STIVED, i. e. stuffed, stow'd or stew'd: to stive or stew meat,—to cook it by a gentle fire; to stive one,—almost to smother with heat, (Lye.)

His [Essex] chamber being commonly stived with friends or suiters of one kind or other, when he was up, he gave his legs, arms, and brest to his ordinary servants to button and dress him.—Reliquiae Wottonianae, p. 172.

STIVER. Dut. Stuyver, from stuyven, pulverare, and so called, a pulueria leuitate (Kilian); the new coin being much lighter than the old, and of less value.

If between meals the Dutch people have any occasion for them, to go on errands, or the like, they are ready at command; expecting little for their pains; but for a stranger they will not budge under a stiver.

Dampier. Voyages, an. 1693.

STOCCADE. } Fr. Estocade; It. Stoccata,
STOCCA'DO. } a thrust or push; Sp. Estoquear, to strike with the point of a sword.

Stoccado,—a thrust; stoccade,—a fence of sharp stakes.

Shal. Tut sir; I could haue told you more: in these times you stand on distance: your passes, stoccado's, and I know not what.

Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor, Act ii. sc. 1.

— To defend

Their infant shoots, beneath, on oaken stakes,

Extend a rail of elm, securely arm'd

With spiculating pailing, in such sort

As, round some citadel, the engineer

Directs his sharp stoccade.

Mason. The English Garden, b. ii.

STOCK, n. } Stock, truncus; A.S. Stocce;
STOCK, v. } Dut. Stock; Ger. Stock; Fr.
STOCKING, n. } Estoc; from the Ger. Stocken,
STOCKING, v. } to fix, to stick. Stock, stirps, STOCKISH. } Dut. Stæck, stock; Ger. Stock; STOCKS. } Fr. Estoc; It. Stocco; from STOCKY. } stock, truncus. See STICK.

Stock, (a merchant's,)—from which profit is expected, as branches, fruit, &c. from the stock of a tree.

Stockings,—because they stick to the legs.

Stocks, for culprits' legs,—because made of wood (from the stock or trunk of a tree), with holes in them. So far Skinner.

Tooke is of opinion that stock, however differently applied, is the past tense and past part. of the A.S. verb Stic-an, stician, to stick; and he adds,—We have in modern use (considered as words of different meaning)—

Stock,—truncus, stipes, i. e. stuck; as log, and post, and block, before explained,—“to stand like a stock.”

Stock, (met.)—a stupid or blockish person.

Stock of a tree,—itself stuck in the ground, from which branches proceed.

Stock, (met.)—stirps; family, race.

Ony man born of the stoke of Adam.

Declaracion of Christe. By Iohan Hoper, cap. 7.

1824

Stock,—fixed quantity, or store of any thing.
Stock,—in trade,—fixed sum of money or goods, capital, funds.

Stock-lock,—not affixed, but stuck in.

The chambre dore anone was stoke

Er thei haue ought unto hir spoke.

Gower, lib. vii. fol. 171.

Stock of a gun,—that in which the barrel is fixed, or stuck.

Stock-handle,—that in which any tool or instrument is fixed.

Stock,—article of dress for the neck or legs. See STOCKING.

Stocks,—a place of punishment, in which the hands or legs are stuck or fixed.

There to abyde stocked in pryson.—Lyfe of our Lady, p. 35.

Stocks,—in which ships are stuck or fixed.

Stocks,—the public funds, where the money of (unhappy) persons is now fixed—(thence never to return.)

Stocking,—for the leg, corruptly written for stocken, (i. e. stok, with the addition of the participle en),—because it was stuck, or made with sticking pins, (now called knitting needles.)

And formerly, Stock, for the leg, instead of stocken, (stocking.)

What for ire & tene, & alle in euell wille,

Scho stocked kyng Steuen, & ther did scho ille.

R. Brunne, p. 121.

Oth' ich shal bete ye by the lawe, and brynge ye in stockes.

Piers Plouhman, p. 136.

For God seith hit hym self. shal nereve good appel Thorw no sotel science. on sour stocke growe.—Id. p. 176.

— And here whit ich kepe

The fruit of this faire tree. fro thre wykke wyndes

And fro fallyng of stok.

Id. p. 305.

For ofte tymes he was bounden in stockis and cheynes and he hadde broke the cheynes and hadde broke the stockis to smale gobetis, and no man myghte make him tame.

Wiclif. Mark, c. 5.

"That rather die I would, and determine

As thinketh me now, stocked in prison,

In wretchednesse, in filth, and in vermine,

Captive to cruell king Agamemnon."

Chaucer. Troyl. & Cres. b. iii.

Of his linage am I, and his offspring

By veray line, as of the stok real.

Id. The Knightes Tale, v. 1552.

I said therefore thy stocke must be strong, and in greatnes wel herted, the tre is ful feble that at the first dent failleth.

Id. The Testament of Loue, b. iii.

For there abideth, & remaineth in vs yet of the olde Adam, as it were the stocke of the crabe tree, and euer among when occasion is geuen hym, shoteth forth his braunches and leues, budde, blossome, and fruit.

Tyndall. Workes, p. 90.

He that hath his feete in fetters, giues, or stockes must first be loosed, or he can go, walke or runne.—Id. Ib. p. 63.

In Adam are we all as it were wilde crab trees, of which God chuseth whom he will, and plucketh them out of Adam, and planteth them in the garden of his mercy, and stocketh the and grafteth the spirite of Christ in them.—Id. Ib.

Our bumbast hose, our treble double ruffles,
Our sutes of silke, our comely garded capes,
Our knit silke stockes, and Spanish lether shoes.

Gascoigne. The Steele Glas.

Amonge ye which Robert Horne, stokfyschmonger, than beyng an aldermā, spake sore agayne theym that wold haue hym entre.—Fabyan. Chronycle. Hen. VI. an. 1451.

[A gentleman] tooke vp his lodging with the priest, and sought in the morning when he rose for some paper, to draw on his strait stockings; and as the deuill would, he hit vpon the letter, bare it awaie in the heele of his stocke, no earthlie thing misdeeming.

Holinshed. Chronycles of Ireland, an. 1532.

As the souldiers were busie at worke in stocking vp the wood, there came vpon them an ambushment of Welchmen.

Id. Chronycles of England. Hen. III. an. 1228.

Rogues and vagabonds are often stocked and whipped.

Id. Description of England, b. ii.

The time shall quickly come, thy groves and pleasant springs,

Where to the mirthful merle the warbling mavis sings,

The painful labourers hand shall stock the roofs to burn;

The branch and body spent, yet could not serve his turne.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 14.

We are but farmers of ourselves; yet may,

If we can stock ourselves and thrive, uplay

Much, much good treasure for the great rent day.

Donne. To Mr. Rowland Woodward.

Well worthe stock, from which the branches sprong
That in late yeares so faire a blossome bare,
As thee, O queene, the matter of my song.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 4.

Nay, I am assured that I make my self a laughing stocke, and am condemned of them for spending and loosing my time in such a frivolous peece of worke as this is.
Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 6.

Lap. 'Twill much enrich the company of stationers,
'Tis thought 'twill prove a lasting benefit.
Like the wise masters, and the almanacks.
The hundred novels, and the book of cookery,
For they begin all ready to engross it,
And make it a stock-book, thinking indeed
'Twill prove too great a benefit, and help,
For one that's new set up.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Nice Valour, Act v. sc. 3.

Some authors we have, who affirme that stockdoves live ordinarily thirtie yeeres, and some untill they be fortie yeeres olde.—Holland. Plinie, b. x. c. 35.

His bonnet neatly on his head,
With button on the top,
His shoes with strings of leather red,
And stocking to his slop.
Browne. The Shepheard's Pipe, Ecl. 2.

[It] is as rash as if they should say that boots and shoes and stockings, and pyes and peels and ovens, have been altogether with all eternity.
More. Antidote against Atheism, b. iii. c. 15.

Whereas those scatter'd trees, which naturally partake
The fatness of the soil (in many a slimy lake,)
Their roots so deeply soak'd send from their stocky bough
A soft and sappy gum, from which those tree-geese grow.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 27.

They had no titles of honour among them, but such as denoted some bodily strength or perfection, as such an one the tall, such an one the stocky, such an one the gruff.
Spectator, No. 433.

Stockin'd with loads of fat town-dirt, he goes.
And some rogue-souldier, with his hob-nail'd shoes
Indents his legs behind in bloody rows.
Dryden. Juvenal, Sat. 3.

These are spices, all sorts of Chinese silks and manufactures; particularly silk stockings, of which I have heard that no less than fifty thousand pair were the usual number shipped in each cargo.—Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 10.

They hold their cabals in the night, and know how to raise their cash as well as the cunningest stock-jobber in London.—Dampier. Voyages, an. 1688.

Did God create evil? did he make a bad world, and stock
it with bad inhabitants, for no purpose but to make them miserable?—Gilpin, vol. iii. Ser. 13.

Consanguinity, or kindred, is defined by the writers on these subjects to be the connection or relation of persons descended from the same stock or common ancestor.
Blackstone. Commentaries, b. ii. c. 14.

The revenue or profit arising from stock naturally divides itself into two parts; that which pays the interest, and which belongs to the owner of the stock; and that surplus part which is over and above what is necessary for paying the interest.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. v. c. 2.

Stockings in many parts of Scotland, are knit much cheaper than they can any where be wrought upon the loom.
Ib. Ib. b. i. c. 10.

The knavery and extravagance of their stock-jobbing projects are sufficiently known, and the explication of them would be foreign to the present subject.—Id. Ib. b. v. c. 1.

The first person that wore stockings in England is said to have been Queen Elizabeth. She received them as a present from the Spanish ambassador.—Id. Ib. b. i. c. 11.

STO'ICK, adj. } Fr. Stoïque, stoïcien; It. Stoico, stoichezza; Sp. Estoi- STO'ICK, n. } co; Lat. Stoicus; Gr. Στωικός, STO'ICAL. } from στοα, a porch.
STO'ICALLY. } This sect of philosophers STO'ICISM. } was so called because their founder Zeno taught under a porch (στοα) or portico at Athens. See the quotation from Carter.

And summe epicureis and stoisens and filosofris dispu-tiden with hym.—Wiclif. Dedis, c. 17.

Certaine philosophers of the Epicures, and of the Stoicks, disputed wyth hym.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

But when a certain sect of philosophers called stoicks, contented in their learning stoutly the grief and disease of the body, they were fain a little to shrink, when the gout or any disease nipped them, and now my stomach nippeth me.
State Trials. Edw. VI. an. 1551.

Com. O foolishness of men! that lend their ears
To those budge doctors of the stoic fur,
And fetch their precepts from the Cynic tub,
Praising the lean and sallow abstinence.—Milton. Comus.
VOL. II.

So the epicures say to the stoicks felicity placed in virtue that it is like the felicity of a player, who if he were left of his auditors and their applause, he would straight be out of heart and countenance.—Bacon. Colours of Good & Evil.

Generally the whole set of stoicks, held that the sunne and starres were fed with watery vapours, which they drew vp for their nourishment, and that when these vapours should cease and faile the whole world should be in danger of combustion.—Hakewill. Apologie, b. ii. c. 4. § 1.

The Scythian was indeed poor, yet voluntarily, not through want, living commonly in field-tents; and (as our Germans in Tacitus) so stoical, as not to care for the future, having provision for the present, from nature's liberality.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 9. Note.

Be not stoically mistaken in the equality of sins.
Brown. Christian Morals, b. iii. c. 12.

'Tis true staidness of mind, to look with an equal regard in all things, and this unmoved apathy in opinionative uncertainties, is a warrantable piece of stoicism.
Glanvill. Vanity of Dogmatizing, c. 23.

Stoicism, which was the pedantry of virtue, ascribes all good qualifications of what kind soever to the virtuous man.
Spectator, No. 243.

The stoic sect was founded by Zeno, about three hundred years before the Christian æra: and flourished in great reputation, till the declension of the Roman empire.
Carter. Epictetus, Introd.

From this theory, some philosophers, and the ancient stoicks among the rest, derived a topic of consolation under all afflictions, while they taught their pupils, that those ills under which they laboured, were, in reality, goods to the universe; and that to an enlarged view, which could comprehend the whole system of nature, every event became the object of joy and exultation.
Hume. On Human Understanding, s. 8.

Notwithstanding all that has been said on the happiness of a stoical disposition, every one who has formed a true estimate of things will deprecate it as a curse that degrades his nature.—Knox. Ess. 39.

STO'KER, is merely sticker, one who sticks, that which pushes, and consequentially stirs, (the fire;) a poker is sometimes so called.

Hence, as the plague of happy life,
I run away from party strife.
A prince's cause, a church's claim,
I've known to raise a mighty flame,
And priest, as stoker, very free
To throw in peace and charity.—Green. The Spleen.

STOLE. } Fr. Stole; It. Stola; Sp. Estola; STO'LED. } Lat. Stola; Gr. Στολα, a vest or garment, from στέλλειν, induere, to invest, to clothe. It is generally applied to—
A long robe or garment.

And the fadir seide to his seruantis, swithe brynge ye forth the first stole: and clothe ye hym, and gyue ye a ryng in his hond: and schoon on hise feet.—Wiclif. Luk. c. 15.

Forth commeth the preest, with stole about his nekke.
Chaucer. The Marchantes Tale, v. 9507.

So faire and fresh, as freshest floure in May;
For she had layd her mournfull stole aside,
And widow-like sad wimple throwne away,
Wherewith her heavenly beauty she did hide.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 12.

Cle. Do ye shrink now,
Did ye not promise faithfully, and told me
Through any danger—
Pri. Any I can wade through.

Cle. Ye shall and easily, the sin not seen neither,
Here's for a better stole and a new vail, mother.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Mad Lover, Act iii. sc. 1.

Nought but profoundest hell can be his shroud;
In vain with timbreld anthems dark
The sable-stoled sorcerers bear his worshipt ark.
Milton. On the Morning of Christ's Nativity.

After them flew the prophets, brightly stol'd
In shining lawn.—G. Fletcher. Christ's Victory.

Why then thy flowing sable stoiles,
Deep pendant cypress, mourning poles.
Parnell. Night-piece on Death.

But when mild morn in saffron stole
First issues from her eastern goal,
Let not my due feet fail to climb
Some breezy summit's brow sublime.
Warton. Ode on the Approach of Summer.

STOLIDITY. It. Stolidità, stolidità; Sp. Es- tolido; Lat. Stolidus, (stoldus, stultus), from Stolo, a shoot; Gr. Στελλειν, to put forth; a useless shoot, rubbed or cut off; (met.) a worthless, silly, foolish person (see Vossius); and hence stolidus,— Silly, senseless, foolish, stupid.

But the A.S. Stylt-an, obstupescere, is considered by Tooke to be root: — Stylt-an is itself formed upon the past part. of Stillan, to still.

These certainly are the fools in the text, indocile intractable fools, whose stolidity can baffle all arguments, and be proof against demonstration it self.—Bentley, Ser. 1.

STO'MACH, n. } Fr. Estomac; It. Stò- STO'MACH, v. } maco; Sp. Estomaco; Lat.
STO'MACHER. } Stomachus; Gr. Στομαχος, STO'MACHFUL. } from στομα, a mouth.
STO'MACHFULNESS. } First applied to the pipe
STO'MACHLESS. } by which the meat is con-STO'MACHOUS. } veyed; then—to the ven-
STO'MACHICK, adj. } tricle in which it is received STOMA'CHICAL. } and digested. (Met.)— STO'MACHING, n. } Various affections of the mind, appetites, desires, wishes; humour;
ill humour, dislike; temper, sullenness, angriness, resentment; haughtiness, pride.

To stomach,—
To receive, hold or retain, or bear (in the stomach, lit. and met.); to anger, or be angry; to resent, or be resentful.

Stomachick, n., is in common use.
At this the archbishop and hys companye were not a lytle blemyshed; notwithstanding he toke stomack vnto hym agayn, after certain wordes had in excuse of theyr tyrannye.
State Trials. Hen. V. an. 1413. Lord Cobham.

In secret so, my stomach will I sterue.
Gascoigne. Farewel with a Mischiefe.

And than the head aketh, & the stomake knoweth, and the next meale is eaten w^t out appetite.
Sir T. More. Workes, p. 99.

Disobedience is thought stoutnesse, and sullennesse is counted manhood, and stomaking is courage.
Sir J. Cheke. Hurte of Sedition.

This bragge the Grecians stomackt much, but Telamonius most
Who stood most neare Prothenors fall; and out he sent a lance,
Which Panthus sonne (declining) scap't.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xiv.

Sylla on the other side stomached Marius, and would not suffer him to take them [images] out of the place where they were.—North. Plutarch, p. 363.

Let him take stomacke to repell Troyes fierie threatnings.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. ix.

The upper part of the wezand is called the gorge, or the gullet; the nether part or the extremitie thereof is the stomacke. Under the arterie or wind-pipe, is the mouth of the stomacke; of a callous or gristly substance, thicke toothed, with prickles in manner of a bramble, for the better dispatching of the meate: and these notches or plaits grow smaller and smaller, as they approach nearer to the bellie;
so as the utmost roughnesse thereof in the end is like unto a smith's file.—Holland. Plinie, b. xi. c. 37.

For ye must understand, that there was great stomaching betwixt the clergie of the two prouinces, Canturburie and Yorke, about the metropolitane prerogative.
Holinshed. Chronicles of England. Hen. I. an. 1108.

I must condemne him of secret grudge, not so much to the person of Lhoid, as to the whole nation, against which the chiefest part of his booke seemeth to be a stomaching inuetue.—Id. Historie of Scotland, an. 1424.

[The Anthropophagi about the North Pole] use to drinke
out of the skulls of mens heads, and to weare the scalpes, haire, and all, in steed of mandellions or stomachers before their breasts, according as Isogonus the Nicean witnesseth.
Holland. Plinie, b. vi. c. 2.

Pri. Out beast:
How you talk?
Chi. I am old, wench,
And talking to an old man is like a stomacher,
It keeps his blood warm.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Mad Lover, Act iii. sc. 1.

A stomachfull Esaw knows that his good father cannot but be displeased with his Pagan matches.
Bp. Hall. Remaines, p. 138.

Pride, stomachfulness, headiness—avail but little.
Granger. On Eccles. (1621), p. 248.

Why else is thy countenance so dejected, thy cheeks pale, and watered so oft with thy teares, thy sleeps broken, thy meals stomacklesse?—Bp. Hall. The Balm of Gilead.

By this that straunger knight in presence came,
And goodly salued them; who nought againe Him answered, as courtesie became;
But with sterne lookes, and stomachous disdain,
Gave signes of grudge and discontentment vaine.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 8.

[Dieneches used] to give also the seed beaten to powder with mints in wine, for the dropsie and the defluxion sto- machicall.—Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 17.

Lep. 'Tis not a time for priuate stomacking.
Eno. Every time serues for the matter that is then borne in't.—Shakespeare. Anthony & Cleopatra, Act ii. sc. 2.

Consider that wonderful faculty of the stomachs of all creatures, to dissolve all the several sorts of food appropriated to their species; even sometimes things of that consistency as seem insoluble, especially by such seemingly simple and weak menstrua, as we find in their stomach.
Derham. Physico-Theology, b. iv. c. 11.

[It] is occasioned by an obstruction of the stomachick vessels through melancholy humours.—Harvey.

You are also to have regard to the weakness of the stomach, and endeavour the strengthening it, not only by outward application, as fomentations of absinth. &c. but also with stomachical unguents and emplasters, of which you may find sufficient set down in the London Dispensatory.
Wiseman. Surgery, b. i. c. 18.

The figure and position of the stomach (I speak all along with a reference to the human organ) are calculated for detaining the food long enough for the action of its digestive juice. It has the shape of the pouch of a bagpipe; lies across the body; and the pylorus, or passage by which the food leaves it, is somewhat higher in the body, than the cardia or orifice by which it enters; so that it is by the contraction of the muscular coat of the stomach, that the contents, after having undergone the application of the gastric menstruum, are gradually pressed out.
Paley. Natural Theology, c. 10.

STOND, n. i. e. Stand, standing-place or station; stay, stop.

Overt, and apparent virtues bring forth praise; but there be secret and hidden virtues, that bring forth fortune. Certain deliveries of a mans selfe, which have no name. The Spanishe name, desemboltura, partly expreseth them: when there be not stonds, nor restiveness in a mans nature; but that the wheels of his minde keep way, with the wheelies of his fortune.—Bacon. Essay on Fortune.

Yet notwithstanding every man attempteth to be of the first trade, of carpenters, and few bind themselves to the second; whereas nevertheless the rising in fortune seldom amendeth the mind; but on the other side, the removing of the stonds and impediments of the mind, doth often clear the passage, and current to a mans fortune.
Id. Letter to Sir Henry Saville.

STONE, n. Dut. Steen; Ger. Stein; Sw. Sten; A. S. Stan, stæn; Goth. Staina. All (says Wachter) from stan, stare, quia vi sua stat. Sto'ny. Skinner,—from the Gr. ἰσθναί, to stand, propter stabilitatem. To stone,—

To do any thing with stones; to throw, to throw aside, extract; (met.) to harden.

The stones stonde the so grete, no more ne mowe be Eue ne vp rygt & swythe hye, that wonder it is to se.
R. Gloucester, p. 7.

Hii ladde hym in an place
Wythoute the toun Greneswyke, & stenede hym wyth stones
As me stenede Seynt Steuene, & debrusede ys bones.
Id. p. 298.

It was on a day Edward thouht a wile,
He said he wild asay ther hors alle in a mile.
He asayed tham bi & bi, & retreied tham ilkone, & stoned tham alle wery, standand stille as stone.
R. Brunne, p. 219.

And the erthe tyleris token his servauntis, & thei beeten
the ton, thei slown an other, and stonyden an other.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 21.

And ye husbandmen caught his servautes, and bet one,
kylled another, and stoned another.—Bible, 1551. Id.

Therefore sithen we ben the kynde of God we schulen not deme that godly thing is lyk gold and siluer either stoon, either to grauyng of crafte and thought of man.
Wiclif. Dedis, c. 17.

Other felde down on stony places where it hadde not myche erthe, and anon it sprong up: for it hadde not dep-nesse of erthe.—Id. Mark, c. 4.

Some fell on the stony ground where it had not mucche earth; & by and by sprāge vp, because it had not depth of earth.—Bible, 1551. Id.

The circuite a mile was aboute,
Walled of stone, and diked all withoute.
Round was the shape in manere of a compas.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1899.

And tho me thought, that I sighe
A great stone from an hille on highe
Fell downe of sodeine aventure
Upon the feete of this figure.—Gower. Con. A. Prol.

And so thorow fleshly interpretyng the law, and false imagined righteousness, their hartes were hardened, and made as stony as clay, in an whot furnace of fire.
Tyndall. Workes, p. 30.

And hail stones full of wrath shall be cast as out of a stone- bowe, and the water of the sea shall rage against them, and the floods shall cruelly drown them.—Wisdom, v. 22.

Oth. By heauen I saw my handkerchiefe in's hand,
O perit'd woman, thou do'st stone my heart,
And make me call, what I intend to do,
A murther, which I thought a sacrifice.
Shakespeare. Othello, Act v. sc. 2.

— The way
Sharpe ston'd and thorny, where he pass'd of late,
Had cut his cloven foot.
Browne. Britannia's Pastorals, b. ii. s. 3.

And there beside of marble stone was built
An altare, carv'd with cunning ymagery;
On which trow Christians blood was often spilt,
And holy martyres often doen to dye,
With cruell malice and strong tyranny.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 8.

That cruell word her tender hart so thrild,
That suddain cold did ronne through every vaine,
And stony horreur all her scenes filld
With dying fitt, that downe she fell for paine.
Id. Ib. c. 6.

At last as marble rocke he standeth still,
Stone-cold without; within, burnt with loues flame.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. vi. s. 27.

As when Jones harness-bearing bird from hye
Stoupe at a flying heron with proud disdayne,
The stone-dead quarry falls so forcibly,
That it rebownds against the lowly playne,
A second fall redoubling backe agayne.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 11.

To. O for a stone-bow to hit him in the eye.
Shakespeare. Twelfth Night, Act ii. sc. 5.

The Scythians chuse rather to use their mares in warreservice than their stone-horses: the reason is this, that their staling is no hindrance to their pace in running their cari-ere, as it doth the horse, who must needs then stand still.
Holland. Plinie, b. viii. c. 42.

It was the character of Jerusalem to be the killer of the prophets, and the stoner of them who were sent unto her.
Barrow. On the Creed.

In stones, which one would think were a neglected genus, what variety? what beauty and elegance? what constancy in their temper and consistency, in their figures and colours?
Ray. On the Creation, pt. i.

After all, I should rather think that the name [Hexton] really owes its original to the natural stoniness of the place, which lies low at the bottom of very flinty hills; especially since I find, that hexstones signifies very stony, as well as highest or chief stones.
Hearne. Glossary to R. Gloucester, p. 657.

The little [water] we took on board, could not be made use of; it being only salt-water which had filtered through a stony beach into a stone well.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. ii. c. 8.

STOOL. A. S. Stole; Dut. Stoel; Ger. Stoll;
Sw. Stol, from A. S. Stell-an; Ger. Stellen; Sw.
Stela, ponere, statuere, to put, to set.

Any thing set, or on which any one sits or may sit.

A seat; a settle.

To punyshen on pillories. and on pynyng stoels.
Piers Plouhman, p. 43.

Ich may nouht stounde ne stoupe. ne whit oute stoule
knele.
Id. p. 110.

The Lord seide to my lord, sitte on my right half, til I putte thin enemyes a stool of thy feet.
Wiclif. Matthew, c. 22.

The Lord sayde to my Lord, syt on my right hāde tyl I make thine enemyes thy fote stole.—Bible, 1551. Id.

Basins, lavoures, or that men hem bie,
Spoues, stooles, and all swiche husbandrie.
Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Prol. v. 5869.

But it is saide, and euer shall,
Betwene two stooles is the fall,
Whan that men wenen best to sitte.
Gower. Con. A. Prol.

— "Thou fearefull foole,
Why takest not of that same fruite of gold?
Ne sittest downe on that same silver stoole,
To rest thy weary person in the shadow coole?"
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

And [the root of wild cucumber] reduceth the stooles or skars left after any sore.—Holland. Plinie, b. xx. c. 1.

Daugh. Will you go with me?
Woo. What shall we do there wench?
Daugh. Why play at stool-ball,
What is there else to do?
Beaum. & Fletch. Two Noble Kinsmen, Act v. sc. 2.

When a grene tree is cut in sunder in the middle, and the part cut off is caried three acres bredth from the stocke, and returning againe to the stoale, shall ioine therewith, & begin to bud and beare fruit after the former maner, by reason of the sap renewing the accustomed nourishment:

then (I say) may there be hope that such euils shall cease and diminish.—Hollinshead. Historie of England, b. vii. c. 7.

While Betty dances on the green,
And Susan is at stoolball seen.—Prior. Alma, c. 1.

I found him [Waheatoua] seated upon a stool, with a circle of people round him, and knew him at first sight, and he me; having seen each other several times in 1769.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. i. c. 10.

STOOM. See STUM.

STOOP, v. Dut. Stuypen; Sp. Stupa;
STOOP, n. } A. S. Stup-ian, inclinare,— STO'OPING, n. } To lean or bend, (down-STO'OPINGLY. } ward;) to incline, to decline, to descend; to make a descent; to condescend,
to submit.

He [William] stode all dismaied, than said tille him a knyght,
"Discomfirt no thing the, so faire happe neuer thou fond,
"Stoupe & thou may se, thi helm has wonne lond.
R. Brunne, p. 70.

A man may stoupe tyme ynowe. wen he shal tyne the corone.—Piers Plouhman, p. 193.

And whanne he stoupide he sigh the scheetis liggyng, nethes he entride not.—Wiclif. Jon, c. 20.

And he stouped doune and saw ye linnen clothes lying,
yet went he not in.—Bible, 1551. Id.

He stoupeth down, and on his back she stood,
And caught hire by a twist, and up she goth.
Chaucer. The Marchante Tale, v. 10,222.

I was reported unto him that I stooped not and was stubborn.—State Trials. Edw. VI. an. 1551. Gardiner.

I wishe thee thys for woonted olde good will
To flie more high, for feare the stooping will Breed him that now doth keepe thee out of loue
But thinke his fawleon will a bussard proue.
Turberville. To a fickle and vnconstant Dame.

— For he would learne
The lyon stoup to him in lowly wise,
A lesson hard) and make the libbard sterne
Leave roaring, when in rage he for revenge did earne.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 6.

Here stands my dove: stoop at her, if you dare.
B. Jonson. The Alchemist, Act v. sc. 3.

Nani the youngest of the four, was noted by some vacant searching wits, to tread softly, to walk stoopingly, and to raise himself from benches where he sate, with laborious and painful gesture.—Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 260.

"Depart and with your vestments veil your head:
And stooping lowly down, with loosened zones, Throw each behind your backs your mighty mother's bones."
Dryden. Ovid. Metam. b. i.

Now I will wander through the air,
Mount, make a stoop at every fair;
And, with a fancy unconfin'd,
(As lawless as the sea or wind
Pursue you wheresoe'er you fly,
And with your various thoughts comply.
Waller. To the Mutable Fair.

Whether the priest had stooped at the lure of a cardinal's hat, or whether he acted the second part by the same orders that he acted the first, I know not.
Bolingbroke. Let. to Sir W. Windham.

STOOP. A. S. Stoppa, a pot or flaggon of wine. Whence, probably, a stoop or flaggon of beer or ale, (Somner.) Dut. Stoop; Ger. Stauf; Sw. Stop. Stoup is a common Scotch word, and is applied to vessels of various sorts and sizes.

King. Set me the stopes of wine upon that table.
Shakespeare. Hamlet, Act v. sc. 2.

STOP, v. Dut. Stoppen, ver-stoppen;
STOP, n. } Ger. Stopfen; Sw. Stoppa; A. S.
STO'PPAGE. } Stoppan. For Stoppan, Fr. Es-
STO'PPER. } touper; It. Stoppare, obturare, STO'PPING, n. } obstruere, opplere, implere;
STO'PLESS. } to block, to fill up; to stay, to STO'PPLE. } hinder.

To block, or close up; to fill up (so as to hinder passage), to hinder, to stay; to cease, to desist:
to hold, retain, or withhold.

Stop, in music or speech,—a breach or cessation in the continuity of the same sound.

Whan Isaac herd seie, what help R. was comen,
& how to stop his weie parties had thei nomen,
Of his men most worthi, at tham conseille gan take,
The best he mot go bi, a cord with R. make.
R. Brunne, p. 162.

& slayn alle may thou se, that thi way stopped.—Id. p. 179.

And ich shal lette this lorde. and hus light stoppe
Ar we thorw bryghtnesse be blent.—P. Plouhman, p. 354.

And whanne he seyde these thingis to hem, the farisees and wise men of lawe bigunnen greuously to agenstonde, & stoppe his mouth of many thingis.—Wiclif. Luk., c. 11.

Whē he thus spake vnto theym, the laweares and the Pharisies began to wexe busye about hym, and to stop his mouth with many questions.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

Thei stoppiden the mouthis of lyouns, thei quenchiden the feernesse of fier.—Wiclif. Ebrewis, c. 11.

The eldest and wysest at Geball were they, that mended and stopped thy shippes.—Bible, 1551. Ezechiel, c. 27.

And all the oste shulde remoue at mydnyght, and make haste in the mornyng, to the entent to stoppe the passage of the ryuer from the Scottis.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 18.

But she had lost the stoppel—

She cut of her sho sole

And stoppēd therewith the hole.

Skelton. Elinour Rumming.

The bankes are overflowne when stopped is the flood.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 4.

Pollio. No! what say you to the extirpation of the Moors of Valentia?—at which sudden question, Martius was a little at a stop.—Bacon. Of an Holy War.

— An unusual stop of sudden silence

Gave respite to the drousy-flighted steeds,

That draw the litter of close-curtain'd sleep.

Milton. Comus.

Nymphs. Euterpe, next to thee we will proceed,

That first found'st out the music on the reed,

With breath and fingers giving life

To the shrill cornet and the fife,

Teaching every stop and key

To those upon the pipe that play.

Drayton. The Muses' Elysium, Nymphal 4.

— Might we but hear

The folded flocks penn'd in their watled cotes,

Or sound of past'ral reed with oaten stops.

Milton. Comus.

Thus sang the uncouth swain to th' oaks and rills,

While the still morn went out with sandels gray;

He touch'd the tender stops of various quills.

Id. Lycidas.

For if a man would endeavour to raise or fall his voice, still by half notes, like the stops of a lute; or by whole notes alone, without halves, as farre as an eighth; he will not be able to frame his voice unto it. Which sheweth, that after every three whole notes nature requireth, for all harmoni-call use, one half note to be interposed.

Bacon. Natural History, § 105.

It is given to drinke with vinegre for the difficultie of urine and the stoppage of the bladder.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxiv. c. 16.

If we would be effective in the stopping of a plague, or in the success of armies.—Bp. Taylor, vol. i. Ser. 6.

Making a civil and staid senate rude,

And stopless as a running multitude.

Davenant. On K. Charles the Second's Return.

Here is an hearbe, with which a kind of foule (wherof I have made mention before) is able to make the wedge or stopple to flie out of the hole of her neast, into which the sheepeheards had driven it fast.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxv. c. 2.

In the first of those experiments, the brass key or stopple of the cover of the receiver, after the receiver is emptied well of aire, is with much difficulty lifted up; and in the other if you apply a tapering valve of brass to the lower branch of the stop-cock of the receiver well emptied of aire, as before, and turn the key of the stop-cock, the external aire beating like a forcible stream upon the valve to get in there, will suddenly both shut the valve, and keep it shut so strongly, that it will beare up with it a ten-pound weight.

More. Antidote against Atheism, b. ii. c. 2.

I went; but sad Creusa stopp'd my way,

And, cross the threshold, in my passage lay;

Embrac'd my knees; and when I would have gone,

Shew'd me my feeble sire, and tender son.

Dryden. Virgil. Æneis, b. ii.

A skilful ear in numbers should preside,

And all disputes without appeal decide.

This ancient Rome and elder Athens found,

Before mistaken stops debauch'd the sound.

Roscommon. Essay on Translated Verse.

By the pity of some fair ladies, related to your lordship, who made me hastily let in some air at the stop-cock, the gasping animal was presently recovered.

Boyle. Works, vol. i. p. 106.

He doth now make exactly the stopples of glass, to stop bottles withal instead of corks.—Id. Ib. vol. vi. p. 109.

First, "but to say no more:" here it intimates a stop of the mind in the course it was going, before it came quite to the end of it.—Locke. Hum. Underst. b. iii. c. 7.

This stoppage of a favourite article, without assigning some reason, might have occasioned a general murmur.

Cook. Third Voyage, b. iii. c. 1.

If the plaintiff sues for ten pounds due on a note of hand, the defendant may set off nine pounds due to himself for merchandise sold to the plaintiff, and, in case he pleads such set off, must pay the remaining balance into court.
This answers very nearly the compensatio, or stoppage, of the civil law.—Blackstone. Commentaries, b. iii. c. 20.

Volition forbearing to act—the penetrability returns, the fibre no longer pressed falls back to its former station, the stopper following closes the passage, and muscular motion ceases.—Search. Light of Nature, vol. ii. pt. i. c. 5.

STORE, n.

STORE, v.

STO'RAGE.

STO'RER.

STO'RING, n.

The Dut. have Stuyren, con-tribueren, (Kilian.) The Ger.
Steuren, servare, (Wachter.)
The Sw. Be-styra, curare, (Ihre.) all which are evidently the same word as—Stuyren, steuren, styra, to steer, (qv.)
And Tooke considers our substantive Store to be a past part. from the A. S. verb Stir-an, to stir, to steer, to move; and to be—

"The collective term for any quantity or number of things stirred or moved into some one place together." To store, (Fr. Estorer),—

To move, or put, or bring together; to amass, to accumulate; to supply.

Store, the noun, is also used consequentially:—
Estimation, value.

So that the Cristynemen adde there the maystrye,
And tresour founde & stor ynou, & astored hem wel there,
And reste her gode bodyes, that so wery were.

R. Gloucester, p. 395.

Vitaile inouh at weld, thei fond of corn and hay.

Isaac did it store, to hold for tuo gere.—R. Brunne, p. 160.

Sore thei were trauailed, & socour com tham non,

& alle ther store failed, ther mete was nere gon.

Id. p. 326.

But by may fay, I tolde of it no store.

Chaucer. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 5784.

I wolde prayen you for to lene me

An hundred frankes for weke or tweye,

For certain bestes that I muste beye,

To storen with a place that is oures.

Id. The Shipmannes Tale, v. 13,200.

— And I say furthermore,

That I ne tell of laxatives no store,

For they ben venomous, I wot it wel.

Id. The Nonnes Preestes Tale, v. 15,158.

Contrarywise, there where all things be common to every man, it is not to be doubted that any man shall lack any thing necessary for his private uses, so that the common storehouses and barns be sufficiently stored.

More. Utopia, b. ii. c. 2.

You want cloaths; is it such a hainous sin I beseech ye,

To see you stor'd.

Beaum. & Fletch. Humorous Lieutenant, Act iii. sc. 2.

The grace of God he layd up still in store,

Which as a stocke he left unto his seede;

He had enough; what need him care for more?

And had he lesse, yet some he would give to the pore.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

Of this treasure, it is true, the gold was accumulate, and store treasure, for the most part; but the silver is still growing.—Bacon. Of an Holy War.

Sil. Faith they'll venture further for their lading, than a merchant, and through as many storms, but they'll be fraughted, they are mad like Carrecks, only strength and storage.—Beaum. & Fletch. The Coxcombe, Act i. sc. 1.

— Your host's daughter,

In garrison, a wench of a storer!

B. Jonson. The Divelle is an Asse, Act iii. sc. 3.

Having by sensation and reflection stored our minds with simple ideas, and by use got the names that stand for them, we can by those means represent to another any complex idea we would have him conceive.

Locke. Hum. Underst. b. ii. c. 22.

Whence comes it by that vast store which the busy and boundless fancy of man has painted on it with an almost endless variety?—Id. Ib. c. 1.

Increase thy wealth, and double all thy store;

'Tis done; now double that, and swell the score;

To every thousand add ten thousand more.

Dryden. Persius, Sat. 6.

He not only uses the whole profit of the stock which he employs in this manner, but a part of the stock itself, by the expense and loss which necessarily attend the storing and keeping of corn.—Smith. Wealth of Nations, b. iv. c. 5.

Whether they have any means of getting it from this place during the siege, or whether they have any method of storing it within the gourd or other vessels, we could not learn.—Cook. First Voyage, b. ii. c. 3.

STORK. Dut. Stork; Ger. Storch; Sw.
Stork; A. S. Storc. Though the Lat. name of this bird is Ciconia, and the Gr. Πελαργος, the etymologists are almost unanimous in deriving our northern word from the Gr. Στοργη, because of the noted piety of this bird towards its aged parents.

The storke, wreker of aduoutrie.

Chaucer. The Assembly of Fowles.

Storkes keepe one nest still from yeare to yeare, and never chaunge: and of this kind nature they are, that the young will keepe and feed their parents when they be old, as they themselves were by them nourished in the beginning.

Holland. Plinie, b. x. c. 23.

We have alreadie seene the storke and swallows as also the summer birds are come, and with the westerlie winds are gone againe.—Holinshed. Conquest of Ireland, c. 12.

Sometimes it meets with a kind retaliation: some stork- like disposition repays the loving offices done by the parents, in a dutiful retribution to their age or necessity.

Bp. Hall. The Balm of Gilead.

The Dutch are very solicitous for the preservation of the stork in every part of the republic. This bird seems to have taken refuge among their towns; and builds on the tops of their houses without molestation.

Goldsmith. Animated Nature, b. vi. c. 1.

STORM, v.

STORM, n.

STO'RM.

STO'RMING, n.

A. S. Storm; Dut. Stormen;
Ger. Sturmen; Sw. Storma;
It. Stormire, stôrmo; A. S.
Styrm-ian, agitare, furere,
sævire, procellosum esse:

To throw into commotion, or tumult; to rage or rave; to move about with violence or vehemence, rage or fury; to be or cause to be, tempestuous; to seize by violence, by violent assault or onset.

To storme and to scolde. sclauders to make.

Piers Plouhman, p. 28.

For naked as a worme was she,

And if the weather stormie were,

For cold she shuld haue died there.

Chaucer. Rem. of the Rose.

— And Hercules,

Whiche full was of chivalrie,

With Jason wente in companie:

And that was in the moneth of Maie,

Whan colde stormes were awaie.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

For it was wynter tyme tho,

And wynter, as by weie of kinde,

Whiche stormie is, as men it finde,

First maketh the windes for to blowe.—Id. Ib. b. iii.

As this grewe on, the priestes of the countrey clustering together, beganne to grudge and storme against Tyndall, rayling at him, in houses, and other meeting places.

Fox. Life of Tyndall, p. 6.

From Shetland straddling wide, his foot on Thuly sets:

Whence storming, all the vast Deucalidon he threats,

And bears his boisterous waves into the narrower mouth

Of the Vergivian sea.—Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 10.

Sooner than you read this line, did the gale,

Like shot not fear'd till felt, our sails assail;

And what at first was call'd a gust, the same

Hath now a storm's, anon a tempest's name.

Donne. Let. to Mr. Christ. Brook.

— For this day will pour down,

If I conjecture aught, no drizzling shour,

But ratling storms of arrows barbd with fire.

Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vi.

— The birds

Who all things now behold more fresh and green,

After a night of storm so ruinous,

Clear'd up their choicest notes in bush and spray

To gratulate the sweet return of morn.

Id. Paradise Regained, b. iv.

For th' ayre was milde and cleared was the skie,

And all his windes dan Aeolus did keepe

From stirring up their stormy enmity.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 8.

At Athens the great and famous fountaine named Enneacrunos, in a rainie and stormie summer, is colder than the pit-water or well in Jupiter's garden, within that citie; and yet the said well-water, if it bee a drie season, will stand with an yce at midsummer.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxxi. c. 3.

Though there the fair Egyptian helper fed,

And there deluded Argus slept, and bled;

Though there the brazen tower was storm'd of old,

When Jove descended in almighty gold.

Pope. Statius. Thebaid, b. i.

A daring pilot in extremity;

Pleas'd with the danger when the waves went high,

He sought the storms; but, for a calm unfit,

Would steer too nigh the sands to boast his wit.

Dryden. Absalom & Achitophel, pt. i.

Now sing we stormy stars, when autumn weighs
The year, and adds to nights, and shortens days;
And suns declining shine with feeble rays.
Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

For here, for all my master's storming,
I'm sure we strangely want reforming.
Whitehead. An Epistle.

Bartholomew Diaz, in 1486, reached the river, which he named del Infante, on the eastern side of Africa; but deterred by the storms of that region proceeding further, on his return he had the happiness to be discoverer of the promontory, unknown for many ages, which bounds the south of Afric. This, from the storms he there encountered, he named the Cape of Tempests; but John, elated with the promise of India, which this discovery, as he justly deemed, included, gave it the name of the Cape of Good Hope.
Mickle. Discovery of India.

STORY, n. } "Story, which the French de-STORY, v. } nominate estage, étage, and which was formerly in England also called a stage, is merely stagery, stayerie, (the a broad) stawry, or story, i.e. a set of stairs," (Tooke.) To story— To build in stories; to place or arrange (as a building in successive stories.)

Hii bygonne her heye tounes strengthy vaste aboute,
Her castles & storys, that hii mygte be ynne in doute.
R. Gloucester, p. 181.

When more of these orders than one, shall be set in several stories or contignations, there must be an exquisite care to place the columnes precisely one over another, that so the solid may answer to the solid, and the vacuities to the vacuities, as well for beauty as strength of the fabrick.
Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 26.

When we speak of the intercolumniation or distance which is due to each order, we mean in a dorique, ionic, corinthian porch, or cloister, or the like of one contignation, and not in storied buildings.—Id. Ib.

All the parts of an undisturb'd fluid are either of equal gravity, or gradually placed and storied together according to the differences of it.—Bentley, Ser. 4.

Thy neighbour has remov'd his wretched store (Few hands will rid the lumber of the poor).
Thy own third story smokes, while thou, supine,
Art drench'd in fumes of undigested wine.
Dryden. Juvenal, Sat. 5.

STORY, n. } See HISTORY. Fr. Histoire; STORY, v. } It. Istoria, stòria; Sp. Historia; STORIAL. } Lat. Historia; Gr. ἱστορία, STORIER. } from ἵστωρ, science, knowledge,
from ἵστασθαι, to know.

The tale or narration of things known; the record, the relation of them: it is also applied to fictitious tales; and, in common speech, to false tales; falsehood.

In Saynt Bede bokes writen er stories olde.
R. Brunne, p. 1.

A thousand was the date & sex & thrifty,
Whan Knoute kyng died, so sais the story.—Id. p. 51.

So wel they loved, as olde bokes sain,
That whan that on was ded, sothly to telle,
His felaw wente and sought him down in helle:
But of that storie list me not to write.
Chaucer. The Knightes Tale, v. 1203.

Anone the neders gonne her for to sting,
And she her death receiueh with good chere,
For love of Antony that was so dere:
And this is storiail, sooth it is no fable.
Id. Cleopatras, Queen of Egypt.

Now have I of this nightyngale,
Whiche erst was cleped Philomene,
Tolde all that euer wolde mene,
Both of hir forme, and of hir note,
Wherof men maie the storie note.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

Now aske I therfor Tindal, which kinde of faith is this?
the historycal fayth or the feling fayth? not ye historicall I trow. For the childe haue not yet neyther redde nor heard manye stories.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 731.

He belueth it no lenger now for the teachyng of the catholike church, of whom he lerned it fyrst with a story fayth.—Id. Ib. p. 733.

It is storied of Diogenes, that he was wont to supplicate to the statues, and to hold out his hands and beg of them, that so he might learn to brook and devour denial, and tediousness of suit.—Hale. Remaines. Ser. Luke, xviii. 1.

The storie—made of three most famese and credible stories in Greek Lond.—Bp. Pecock. Life by Lewis, p. 117.

—He with his consorted Eve
The storie heard attentive, and was fill'd
With admiration, and deep muse to heare
Of things so high and strange.
Milton. Paradise Lost, b. vii.

Thus have I told thee all my state, and brought My story to the sum of earthly bliss
Which I enjoy.
Id. Ib. b. viii.

As for our churches themselves,—belles, and times of morning and evening praiser, remaine as in times past, sawing that all images, shrines, tabernacles, roodlofts, and monuments of idolatrie are remoued, taken downe, and defaced; onelie the stories in glasse windowes excepted, which for want of sufficient store of new stuffe, and by reason of extreame charge that should grow by the alteration of the same into white panes throughout the realme, are not altogether abolished in most places at once, but by little and little suffered to decaie, that white glasse may be prouided and set vp in their roomes.
Holinshed. Description of England, b. ii. c. 1.

Spir. I'll tell ye; 'tis not vain or fabulous,
Though so esteem'd by shallow ignorance,
What the sage poets, taught by th' heavenly muse,
Story'd of old in high immortal verse,
Of dire chimeras, and enchanted isles,
And rifted rocks whose entrance leads to hell;
For such there be, but unbelief is blind.—Milton. Comus.

As for other storied works upon walls, I doubt our clime be too yielding and moist for such garnishment; therefore leaving it to the dwellers discretion, according to the quality of his seat, I will only add a caution or two about the disposing of pictures within.
Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 58.

Which conceit, once taken, he seems to have further imprinted, by marking in certain storied sculptures of old time, how precisely the parts and lines of the figures, that pass from one stone to another, do meet.—Id. p. 60.

Intent he hears Penelope disclose
A mournful story of domestic woes,
His servants insults, his invaded bed,
How his whole flocks and herds exhausted bled,
His generous wines dishonour'd shed in vain,
And the wild riots of the suitor train.
Pope. Homer. Odyssey, b. xxiii.

It is storied of a priest of Neptune, the reputed god of the sea among the heathens, that when he shewed to one of Neptune's votaries the many offerings hung up in his temple, of those that by their devotions to him had been saved from shipwreck; the votary answered, "But where are the offerings of the many more worshippers of Neptune, that have perished in the waves of the sea and been lost in the deep?" But in the present case we may reverse the story.—Bp. Bull, vol. ii. Ser. 17.

Ye Naiads! blue-ey'd sisters of the wood!
Who by old oak, or story'd stream,
Nightly tread your mystic maze,
And charm the wand'ring moon.
Logan. Ode to a Fountain.

A story in which native humour reigns,
'Tis often useful, always entertains:
A graver fact, enlisted on your side,
May furnish illustration, well applied;
But sedentary weavers of long tales
Give me the fidgets, and my patience fails.
Cowper. Conversation.

STOT. A.S. Stod-hors, a steed, (qv.) Also applied to oxen. Sw. Stut; Dan. Stud.
A steer.

—Grace of hus goodnesse. gaf peers foure stottes.
Piers Plouhman, p. 380.

This Reve sate upon a right good stot,
That was all pomelee grey, and hight Scot.
Chaucer. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 617.

STOVE. See STEW. A.S. Stofa; Dut.
Stoue; Ger. Stube; Sw. Stufwa; Fr. Estuve.

A place, (sc.) for a fire; a fire-place; a place, heated, warmed.

For December, January, and the latter part of November, take such things as are greene all winter; holly, &c. orange-trees, limon-trees, and mirtles, if they be stowed; and sweet marjoram warme set.—Bacon. Ess. Of Gardens.

The Pentecosts prepar'd at Carleon in his court,
That table's ancient seat; her temples and her groves,
Her palaces, her walks, baths, theatres, and stoves.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 4.

He commanded the very walls of his baines and stouves
to be perfumed with pretious ointments.
Holland. Plinie, b. xiii. c. 3.

Hee followed mens humors in approving the artificiall baines and vaulted stouves and hote-houses, which then were newly come up and used excessively in everie place by his approbation.—Id. Ib. b. xxvi. c. 3.

Stoves are contrivances for the preserving such tender exotick plants, which will not live in these northern countries without artificial warmth in winter.
Miller. Gardener's Dictionary.

It is certain that a naked or stow'd fire, pent up within the house without any exit or succession of external fresh and unexhausted vital air must needs be noxious and pernicious to these delicate and tender plants.
Evelyn. Advertisement to Quintenye.

STOVER. See ESTOVER. And see the commentators on Shakespeare; and Sturra, in Moor's Suffolk Words.

Ray calls it—fodder for cattle; as nay, straw, or the like. The word is not uncommon in Tusser and Drayton.

The haie of our low medowes is not so profitable for stouer and forrage as the higher meads be.

Holinshed. Description of Britaine, c. 18.

Thy turfy mountains, where live nibbling sheep,
And flat meads thatch'd with stouer them to keep.
Shakespeare. Tempest, Act iv. sc. 1.

STOUND. Dut. Stond; Ger. Stund; Sw.
Stund. The A.S. Stond or stund, seems equivalent to the common word Instant; applied—to time, and to be part of the verb stand-an or stond-an, stare, to stand.

An instant, present, minute or portion of time;
an immediate portion or space of time; time, generally; state or situation or condition of the time.

Tho eode he to me olde werche, to endy ys floule cas,
(To wytnesse God ych take, that agen my wylle yt was)
And dude by me ys lecherye, alas! thulke stounde!
R. Gloucester, p. 206.

The kyng biheld him a stound, & sauh no repentance,
He bad drawe away that hound, God has taken vengeance.
R. Brunne, p. 55.

And on a day it happed in a stound,
Sike lay the manciple on a maladie,
Men wenden wisly that he shulde die.
Chaucer. The Reves Tale, v. 3991.

"Thou sayst that oxen, asses, hors, and houndes,
They ben assailed at diverse stoundes,
Basins, lavoures, or that men hem bie,
Spones, stooles, and all swiche husbondrie."
Id. The Wif of Bathes Prologue, v. 5867.

—This wind that more and more
Thus stoundmeale encreaseth in my face.
Id. Troil. & Creseide, b. v.

With that the hande of heuen him smote,
In token of that he hath forswore
There he bothe his eyen lore,
Out of his head the same stounde
Thei stert, and so thei were founde.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

That when his deare Duessa heard, and saw
The evil stound that daungerd her estate,
Unto his aide she hastily did draw
Her dreadfull beast.—Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 8.

Now they print it on the ground
With their feet in figures round;
Marks that will be ever found,
To remember this glad stound.—B. Jonson. The Satyr.

With me you need not rise at early dawn
To pass the joyless day in various stounds;
Or louting low, on upstart Fortune fawn,
And sell fair honour for some paltry pounds.
Thomson. Castle of Indolence, c. 1.

STOUR. } Stour, (A.S. Stur) (a common STOUR, adj. } word in G. Douglas, and formerly in much use,) is,—Stir, stur, or stour, and means moved, stirred: applied to dust, water, men.
See Tooke.

Stoorer, in Ascham, comp. of Stoor, adj. Dut.
Stuer, Ger. Stur, austerus,—austere, harsh.

Edward & Edmund, knyght gode in stoure.
R. Brunne, p. 213.

At that ilk stoure was slayn on our side
God men of honour, that wald to the bataille bide.
Id. p. 297.

The knight was faire and stiffe in stour.
Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

A fenny goose, even as her fleshe is blacker, stoorer, unholosomer, so is her feather, for the same cause, courser, stoorer, and rougher, and therefore I have heard very good fletchers say, that the second fether in some place is better than the pinnion in other some.—Ascham. Toxophilus, b. ii.

But he was wary of that deadly stoure,
And lightly lept from underneath the brow.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 7.

And after those brave spirits in all those baleful stours,
That with duke Robert went against the pagan powers.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 16.

STOUT. } Skinner says,—from the Dut.
STOUTLY. } Stout, audax, ferox, daring, STOUTNESS. } fierce; Ger. Stoltz, superbus, proud; with ourselves, merely, fortis, strong.
Stout seems to be, stowed, stow'd, stout or stout:
i.e. placed; placed or set in opposition; and
thus,—

Obstinate, stubborn; placed or set together.
Strong, firm, compact; (met.) bold, firm, constant, determined, resolute.

Stout, n.—a beer so called from its stoutness or strength.

A man that beris him stoute, whan that he suld bowe,
In chance if that he coute, he findes foos inowe.
R. Brunne, p. 290.

Thise men lift ther standard, that stoute was & grim.
Id. p. 115.

Steuen stoutly deles, in stedes thor he kennes,
That ageyn him holdes kasteles on tham rathely rennes.
Id. p. 113.

He is a foole in sikernesne,
That with daunger or stoutnesse
Rebelleth there that he should please,
In such folly is little ease.—Chaucer. Rom. of the Rose.

I thought Minerua's gift had beene of poure
By holsome reade to roote this fansie out:
But now I see that Venus in an houre
Can bend the best, and dawnt the wise and stout.
Turberville. To his Friend T.

Ill harte had he that would not stoutely fight,
When as his prince is present still in sight.
Gascoigne. The Fruites of Warre.

[We do] make our humble petition unto your highness, and renew our former suit, not in any respect of self-will, stoutness, or striving against your majesty, (God we take to witness) for with David, we confess we are but as canes mortui, aut pulices, in comparison.
Burnet. Records, pt. ii. b. iii. No. 6.

He was, to weete, a stout and sturdy thiefe,
Wont to robbe churches of their ornaments,
And poore mens boxes of their due reliefe,
Which given was to them for good intents.
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 3.

For it is well knowne, and stoutlie maintained with strong reasons of the learned, that the yeare beginneth in March.
Id. The Shepherd's Calender, Arg.

But this is nothing but a Spartan obfirmation of mind back'd with the sense of shame, a desire of glory, on the contentment of being conscious to themselves of their own stoutness and tolerance.—More. On Enthusiasm, § 59.

Scandals and lies went merrily about,
With heavenly lambs-wool, and nectarial stout.
Somerville. The Wife.

The same is commended to us by the phrases of not to faint or falter; not to cease, or give over; to continue instant, or hold out stoutly.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 6.

Strong Labour got up.—With his pipe in his mouth,
He stoutly strode over the dale,
He lent new perfumes to the breath of the south,
On his back hung his wallet and frail.
Smart. A Morning Piece.

STOW, v. } A. S. Stow, a place. See BE-STOWAGE. } STOW.

To place, to put; to put or place in order; to put or pack together.

And be stywardes of goure stedes. til ge be stuede betere.
Piers Plouhman, p. 83.

Cap. Poet, you feign perdie, the wit of this man lies in his fingers ends, he must tell all; his tongue fills his mouth like a neats tongue, and only serves to lick his hungrie chaps after a purchase: his brains and brimstone are the devils diet to a fat usurers head: to her knight, to her: clap her aboard, and stow her.
Beaum. & Fletcher. The Scornful Lady, Act iii. sc. 1.

— To your charge
My bountifull brave butler, I must deliver A bevie of young lasses, that must look on
This nights solemnity, and see the two dukes,
Or I shall lose my credit; you have stowage?
Id. The Bloody Brother, Act ii. sc. 2.

Her whole number of hands on her return is usually little short of six hundred, all which are easily provided for,
by reason of the small stowage necessary for the silver.
Anson. Voyages, b. ii. c. 10.

Unfortunately, at the time of the greatest darkness, a seaman in stowing the main-top-mast stay-sail, fell overboard.—Cook. Third Voyage, b. vi. c. 8.

On Wednesday we had finished the stowage of the holds;
got on board all our wood and water; and were ready to put to sea at a day's notice.—Id. Ib. c. 5.

Sometimes, as we were credibly informed, they are a fortnight or twenty days at sea, and could keep it longer if they had more stowage for provisions, and conveniences to hold fresh water.—Id. First Voyage, b. i. c. 18.

STRADDLE, v. The dim. of stride (strid-dæl or strad-dæl). A. S. Stræde, from stræd-an, to spread. See STRAGGLE.

To spread, or open widely (in walking, the feet.)

To walk or move with the feet spread or parted widely at each step.

From Shetland straddling wide, his foot on Thuly sets:
Whence storming, all the vast Deucalidon he threatens,
And bears his boisterous waves into the narrower mouth
Of the Virgivan sea.—Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 10.

Thy canvas giant at some channel aims,
Or Dowgate torrents falling into Thames;
And straddling shows the boys brown paper fleet
Yearly set out there, to sail down the street.
B. Jonson. To Inigo Marquis Would-be.

A certain king of Siam was firmly persuaded, that Som-mona-Codom had straddled over the gulf of Bengal; that the print of his right foot was seen at Pra-bat, and that of his left foot at Lanca.—Bolingbroke. Let. to Mr. De Pouilly.

STRAGGLE, v. } Skinner suggests, (q. d.)
STRA'GGLER. } straggle, i. e. a dim. of STRA'GGLINGLY. } the verb to stray; A. S.
Stræg-an, to straw or strew; to stray. See STROLL.

To straw, to scatter, to disperse, to spread abroad; to move or go abroad, widely, separately, disconnectedly; to rove, to ramble, to wander.

There sat they downe, and Nestor spake: O friends, remains not one,
That will relie on his bold minde, and view the campe alone,
Of the proud Trojans? to approve, if any stragling mate
He can surprise neare th' utmost tents.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. x.

The king of Tripolie in euery hold Shut vp his men, munition and his treasure,
The stragling troupes sometimes assaile he would,
Sae that he durst not moue them to displeasure,
He staid their rage with presents, gifts and gold,
And lead them through his land at ease and leasure.
Fairefax. Godfrey of Boulogne, b. i. s. 76.

But Homesdale raised hills, to keep the straggler in.
Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 17.

The most part of them got into the castle, being very near unto them: the other that could not get in in time, fled straglingly up and down, whom the Grecian souldiers slew, chasing of them.—North. Plutarch, p. 813.

He hath no claws, nor teeth, nor horns to hurt me,
But looks about him like a callow-bird
Just straggl'd from the nest.
Dryden. The Tempest, Act iii.

The winds breathe low, the elements serene;
Yet mark what motion in the waves is seen!
Thronging and busy as Hyblean swarms,
Or straggled soldiers summon'd to their arms.
Id. Absalom & Achitophel, pt. ii.

Cromwell had sent him to follow in the track of the king's march to gather up the stragglers, and such as were not able to keep pace with the army.
Clarendon. Civil Wars, vol. iii. p. 403.

The Manila ships are the only ones which have ever traversed this vast ocean, except a French straggler or two.
Anson. Voyages, Introd.

Some other stragging low rocks lie west of the Cape, and one south of it.—Cook. Second Voyage, b. iv. c. 3.

Thus thro' the fields their course the tigers bend,
And, fiercely growling as they rush along,
Invade a straggler of th' Inachian throng.
Lewis. Statius. Thebaid, b. vii.

STRAIGHT, adj. } Straight or straught (also STRAIGHT, ad. } written straight, see in v.
STRAI'GHTEN, v. } stretch,) is the regular past STRAI'GHTLY. } tense and past part. of the STRAI'GHTNESS. } A. S. verb Stræc-can, to stretch. Straight means—

Stretched, (sc.) into a right line, (the shortest between two points,) direct; opposed to—crooked or curved; (met.) to—crooked, perverse.

The kyng Wyllam, vorto wyte the wurth of lond,
Let en query stretyllyche thoru al Engelond,
Hou mony plou lond, & hou mony hyden al so, &c.
R. Gloucester, p. 374.

Whan this thing was grant, Henry dred disceite,
He wild, that his conant were holden stable & streite.
R. Brunne, p. 139.

The kyng perceyued nought of that ilk desceit,
The chartre was forth brouht with wittnes enseled streit.
Id. p. 214.

For all this thraldam, that now on Ingland es,
Thorgh Normanz it cam, bondage & destres,
& if thei now powere had of vs, wite ge wele,
Streiter we suld be lad bi the tend dele.—Id. p. 261.

The kyng Allee fourth with thassent
Of Custe his wife, hath thider sent Morice his sonne, as he was taught
To themperour, and he goth straught.—Gower. Con. A. b. ii.

This riche man the same throwe
With sodein deth was ouerthrowe,
And forth withouten any went Unto the hell straught he went.
Id. Ib. b. vi.

And the Lorde sayde unto him: Arise and goe into the strete which is called strayght.—Bible, 1531. Actes, c. 9.

Prepare the waye of ye Lord, makes his pathes straight, [Wiclif—right].—Id. Luk. c. 3.

I shall make darckenesse lyghte before them and the thyng that is croked to streighte.—Id. Esaye, c. 42.

As a rule is alway to be vnderstood to be straight, and to which all workes be conformed, and by it to be iudged: I doe not meane the Lesbians rule, which is conformed to the stone: but the right rule whereby the artificer and the architect do iudge the straightnes of euery mans work, hee to be reckoned to make his worke perfectest, who goeth nearest to the straightnesse.—Smith. Commonwealth, c. 1.

No creature but only man which hath the last end of his actions proposed as a recompence and reward, whereunto his mind directly bending itselfe, is termed right or straight, otherwise perverse. They which travell from citie to citie, enquire euer for the straightest way because the straightest way is that which soonest bringeth them unto their iournies end.—Hooker. Of the Nature of Pride.

They reply, that to draw men from great excesse, it is not amisse though we vse them vnto somewhat lesse then is competent: and that a crooked sticke is not straightned, vnlesse it be bent as farre on the cleane, contrary side, that so it may settle itselfe at the length in a middle estate of euenesse betweene both.—Id. Eccles. Politie, b. iv. § 8.

"O let me not," quoth he, "then turne againe Backe to the world, whose loyes so fruitlesse are;
But let me here for aie in peace remaine,
Or streightway on that last long voiage fare,
That nothing may my present hope empare."
Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. i. c. 10.

"Ah, dearest lord," said then that doughty knight,
"Of ease or rest I may not yet devise;
For by the faith which I to armes have plight,
I bownden am streight after this emprise."—Id. Ib. c. 12.

Which Guyon hearing, streight his palmer bad
To stere the bote towards that dolefull mayd
That he might know and ease her sorrow sad.
Id. Ib. b. ii. c. 12.

God's word (or true religion) is a lamp unto our feet, and a light unto our path; enabling us to perceive things, and judge rightly of them; teaching us to walk straightly and surely, without erring or stumbling.—Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 3.

The streets are straight, and of a convenient breadth, intersecting each other at right angles.
Cook. First Voyage, b. i. c. 2.

Rectitude is the means of pleasing God: "I never saw any one lost in a straight road."
Stewart. Philosophical Essays, Ess. 5. c. 2. Note.

STRAIN, v. } Dut. Streng-en; Ger. Streng- STRAIN, n. } en; Sw. Stränga; Fr. Es-
STRAINABLE. } treindre; It. Strignere; Lat.
STRAINABLY. } Stringere. Vossius proposes STRAINER. } various Greek etymologies, STRAINING, n. } and gives the preference to the STRAINT, n. } Gr. Στρεγγιζειν, radere, to scrape, to graze. Our northern Sträng-ian, valere, vigere, may be the true origin. (See STRING, STRENGTH, STRONG.) The Dut. Ger. and Sw.
Streng are still used in the sense of arctus and also fortis. Strain is—

To bring close, or tight, together; to close, to press, or express, or squeeze; to tighten, to extend, to exert; to extend too far,—beyond the natural continuity or coherence of the parts.

Strain, (met.)—a strained voice, vox intenta.

A stretch, a reach, a wrench; a reach or extent, heighth or elevation—of voice, of sound, of verse; applied, generally, to music or poetry,
to composition in prose or verse.

And whanne he hadde takun such a precept he putte hem in to the ynnere prisoun and streynyde the feet of hem in a tree.—Wiclif. Dedes, c. 16.

For thyng is none, that me is leuer,
Than her seruice, whose presence
Mine heauen is whole, and her absence
An hell, full of diuers paines,
Whyche to the death full oft me straines.
Chaucer. Dreame.

Yf thou desyrest or wylt vsen grapes, ne seke thou nat a gloutons honde to straine and presse the stalkes of the vyne in the first sommer season.—Id. Boecius, b. i.

And sith an hert is so streined,
The reddour ought to be restrained,
To hym that maie bet awaye,
Whan he mote to nature obeye.—Gower. Con. A. b. iii.

STR

His harpe agayne into hys hand he rought,
Tunynge accorde by judgment of hys eare,
His hartes botome for a syghe he soughte:
And there withall upon the holowe tree
With strayned voyce agayne thus cryeth he.

Wyat. The Auctor.

Ye blynde gydes whiche strayne out [in Common Version, strain at] a gnat and swalowe a cammell.

Bible, 1551. Matt. c. 23.

At musickes sacred sounde, my fansies eft begonne,
In concord, discords, notes and clifles, in tunes of vnisonne:

In Hyerarchies and straynes, in restes, in rule and space,
In monacordes and mouing moodes, in burdens vnder base.
Gascoigne. The Green Knights Farewell to Fannie.

The wynde was so sore and streynable that they coude cast none ancre, nor also they durst nat.

Berners. Froissart. Cronycle, vol. i. c. 356.

And I haue in these matters biddē him be bolde, without any straying of curtesie.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 107.

So having sayd, her twixt her armes twaine
Shee straightly straynd, and colled tenderly;
And every trembling ioynt and every vaine
Shee softly felt, and rubbed busily,
To doe the frozen cold away to fly.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iii. c. 2.

Precisians and plaine plodders (such Is this, and so is that)
In loue do swallow cammels, whilest
They nicely straine a gnat.

Warner. Albion's England, b. vi. c. 31.

Our king has all the Indies in his armes,
And more and richer, when he straines that lady,
I cannot blame his conscience.

Shakespeare. Henry VIII. Act iv. sc. 1.

As many as live thereof, are infested and troubled neither with the dysenterie or bloudie flux, ne yet with the troublesome offers and streins to the seege without doing any thing, nor any other diseases of the belly.

Holland. Plinie, b. xxii. c. 21.

Ile entertaine my selfe like one I am not acquainted withall: for sure vnlesse hee know some straine in mee, that I know not my selfe, hee would neuer haue boarded me in this furie.

Shakespeare. Merry Wiues of Windsor, Act ii. sc. 1.

Their accusations and inquisitions have been strict, swearing men to banks and generalities, not included within compass of matter certain, which the party which is to take the oath may comprehend, which is a thing captious and strainable.—Bacon. Of Church Controversies.

In this Josina his daies it chanced that a Portingale ship was driuen and drowned by force of a streinable tempest neere vnto the shore of one of the Scottish Isles.

Holinshed. Historie of Scotland. Josina.

The wind in that instant being somewhat aloft, caused these bundels of ling to blase and burne vehementlie, and hereto standing that waies forth, droue the flame so strein-able amongst the tents and cabins of the Saxons, that the fire catching in the straw and twigs which they had couched together vnder them in steed of beds, increased the feare amongst the souldiors woonderfullie.—Id. Ib. Dougall.

The same pitch-rosin, if it be boiled more lightly with water, & be let to run through a strainer, commeth to a reddish colour, and is giewie: and thereupon it is called stilled pitch.—Holland. Plinie, b. xvi. c. 11.

He [Sir Artegall] saw no way but close with him in hast,
And to him driving strongly downe the tide,
Upon his iron collar griped fast,
That with the straint his wesand nigh he brast.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 2.

In vain the leering actor strains his tongue
To cheat, with tears and empty noise, the throng.

Dryden. Suum Cuique.

Harbour no thought that may disturb thy peace;
But gently take thyself away, lest she Should come, and see the straining of my eyes
To follow thee.—Coagreve. The Mourning Bride, Act ii.

Shave the goat's shaggy beard, lest thou too late
In vain should'st seek a strainer to dispart
The husky, terrene dregs, from purer must.

J. Philips. Cider, b. ii.

He talks to you of the different strainers through which the sap is filtered, and of the great alterations he has observed to be wrought to the taste, as well as to the sight and smell in fruits, as well as flowers, by this operation of nature.—Bolingbroke. On Human Reason, Ess. 2.

Then raising her voice to a strain,
The sweetest that ear ever heard,
She sung of the slave's broken chain,
Wherever her glory appear'd.

Cowper. The Morning Dream.

Now every English eye, intent,
On Branksome's armed towers was bent;
So near they were, that they might know
The straining harsh of each cross-bow.

Scott. Lay of the Last Minstrel, c. 4.

STR

STRAIN, or } A. S. Strind, from stryn-an, STRENE. } gignere, procreate, (Skinner,) to generate, to produce. Scotch, Strynd.
Generation, progeny, birth, descent, family, race; consanguinity, blood; inborn, inbred, inherent qualities or dispositions.

"For God it wot, that children often ben Unlike hir worthy eldres hem before,
Bountee cometh al of God, not of the stren
Of which they ben ygendred and ybore.

Chaucer. The Clerkes Tale, v. 8031.

For because all is corruptable
And faile should succession
Ne were there generation,
Our sectes strene for to saue.—Id. Rom. of the Rose.

But if few plants, preserv'd through heavenly ayd,
In princes court doe hap to sprout againe,
Dew'd with her drops of bountie souveraine,
Which from that goodly glorious floure proceed,
Sprung of the auncient stocke of princes straine.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. iv. c. 8.

And them amongst, her glorie to commend,
Sate goodly Temperance in garments clene,
And sacred Reverence yborne of heavenly strene.

Id. Ib. b. v. c. 9.

Where if you fling your love upon this stranger
This young Arnolde, not knowing from what place
Or honourable strain of blood he is sprung, you venture
All your own sweets, and my long cares to nothing,
Nor are you certain of his fate.

Beaum. & Fletch. The Custom of the Country, Act i. sc. 1.

To this, Joux seede, this answer gaue againe;
Anchises? happiest of the humane straine?
I am no goddess.—Chapman. Homer. Hymne to Venus.

Both fleck'd with white, the true Arcadian strain
Which Thestylis had often begg'd in vain:
And she shall have them, if again she sues,
Since you the giver and the gift refuse.

Dryden. Virgil, Past. 2.

STRAIT, or } This word is not unfre-STRAIGHT, adj. } quently confounded with STRAITS, or } straight or straught, the past STREIGHTS. } part. of the verb To stretch.
STRAIGHT, v. } Strait, — Fr. Estroict; It.
STRAIT'LY. } Strètto; Sp. Estrecho; Lat.
STRAIT'NESS. } Strictus, past part. of stringere, STRAIT'EN, v. } to strain.

Constrained or constricted; brought close, closed; narrowed, confined, contracted; (met.) strict, rigid, or rigorous; stingy, covetous.

And he seide to hem. Stryue ye to entre by the streyt gate.—Wiclif. Luk. c. 13.

And he sayd vnto them: strive w^t your selues to enter in at the strayte gate.—Bible, 1553. Ib.

My wages ben ful streit and eke ful smale.
Chaucer. The Freres Tale, v. 7008.

Hire hosen weren of fine scarlet rede,
Ful streite yteyed, and shoon ful moist and newe.

Id. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 459.

But for he wolde be no more
Amonge the women so coueited,
The beautee of his face streited
He hath and put out bothe his eien.—Gower. Con. A. b. v.

We past Mariochus streightes, and at the last descried
The fertile coastes of Cyprus soile, which I my selfe first spyed.

Gascoigne. Deuse of a Maske for Viscount Mountacute.

But here marke thou, gentle reader, into what straites
these men be driuen.—Jewell. Replie to Hardinge, p. 474.

But saint Hierom that so narrowly dyd examyne hys workes, and so straightly marked and condemned his errors:
dyd reckon this for none, but dyd in this matter like and alow hym well.—Sir T. More. Workes, p. 410.

Now to fall to a sudden straightening them, what can it do but argue suspicion? What doth jealousy, but stir up the mind to think what it is from which they are restrained.

Sidney. Arcadia, b. i.

[Crassus] set his ranks wide, casting his souldiers into a square battell: yet afterward he changed his mind again, and straighted the battell of his footmen, fashioning it like a brick, more long then broad, making a front and shewing their faces every way.—North. Plutarch, p. 479.

He brought him, through a darksom narrow strayt,
To a broad gate all built of beaten gold.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. ii. c. 7.

"Indeed," then said the prince, "the evill donne
Dyes not, when breath the body first doth leave;
But from the grandsyre to the nephewes sonne
And all his seede the curse doth often cleave,
Till vengeance utterly the guilt bereave:
So straightly God doth iudge.—Id. Ib. c. 8.

1830

STR

Yet in the streightnesse of that captive state
This gentle knight himselfe so well behaved,
That notwithstanding all the subtil bait,
With which those Amazons his love still craved,
To his owne loue his loialtie he saved.

Spenser. Faerie Queene, b. v. c. 6.

Since the late cold weather, there is complicated with it a more asthmatical straitness of respiration than heretofore.

Wottonianæ Reliquiæ, p. 467.

It helpeth streightnesse of breath, and such as cannot take their wind but sitting upright.—Holland. Plinie, b. xxi. c. 20.

And there arose such rut th' unruly rout among,
That soon the noise thereof through all the ocean rung.
When Portsey, weighing well the ill to her might grow,
In that their mighty stirs might be her overthrow,
She strongly streightneth—in the entrance to her bay.

Drayton. Poly-Olbion, s. 2.

The dreadful bellowing of whose strait-brac'd drums,
To the French sounded like the dreadful doom;
And them with such stupidity benumbs,
As though the earth had groaned from her womb.

Id. The Battle of Agincourt.

I know not what philosopher hee was, that would have women come but thrice abroad all their time, to be baptised, married and buried, but he was too strait-laced.

Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 629.

The Jewish divorce being upon unwarrantable cause, made their liberality so much more sinful, as their divorce was more unjust: for the divorced woman was still in right the lawful wife of that unrighteous husband that dismissed her; the Romish doctrine makes their strait-handedness so much more injurious, as the cause of separation more just.

Bp. Hall. Cases of Conscience, Dec. 4. Case 3.

Than sailors homeward bent, who cut their way Through Helle's stormy straits, and oyster-breeding sea.

Dryden. Virgil. Georgics, b. i.

Th' unletter'd Christian, who believes in gross,
Plods on to Heaven; and ne'er is at a loss:
For the straight-gate would be made straighter yet
Were none admitted there but men of wit.

Id. Religio Laici.

Notwithstanding the present straitness of his condition, or scantness of outward things, he hath a title to goods infinitely more precious and more considerable.

Barrow, vol. i. Ser. 2.

That we may not pretend to want objects of compassion and charity, or to grow strained and narrow in our affections, all mankind have an interest and concern in them.

Waterland. Works, vol. viii. p. 374.

But to make your strait circumstances yet straiter, for the sake of idle gratifications, and distress yourselves in necessaries, only to indulge in trifles and vanities, delicate food, shewish dress, ensnaring diversions, is every way wrong.

Secker, vol. ii. Ser. 11.

To grudge those who belong to us the expence of a proper education, or what is requisite for disposing of them decently in the world; to deny them the means of appearing suitably to their rank, and keep them in straits, while we have superfluities ourselves, is very cruel, and equally pernicious.—Id. Ser. 5.

As woodbine weds the plant within her reach,
Rough elm, or smooth-grain'd ash, or glossy beech,
In spiral rings ascends the trunk, and lays
Her golden tassels on the leafy sprays,
But does a mischief while she lends a grace,
Strait'ning its growth by such a strict embrace.

Cowper. Retirement.

STRAMINEOUS. Lat. Stramineus, stramen, straw.

Strawy, chaffy, stalky.

Their wits indeed serve them to that sole purpose, to make sport, to break a scurrile jest, which is the froth of wit, as Tully holds, and for this they are often applauded:
in all other discourse, dry, barren, stramineous, dull and heavie.—Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, p. 149.

The flowers are stramineous and seem to be of an herbaceous colour.

Dampier. Voyages, vol. iii. Plants in Brasil, &c.

STRAND, v. } A. S. Strand. The bank of STRAND, n. } the sea, or of a river; whence the bank-side of the river Thames in London, vulgarly so called, (Somner.) Dut. Ger. and Sw.
Strand. To strand.—

To come upon, force or drive upon a bank, a shelf or shallow.

But of his craft to reckon wel his tides,
His stremes and his strandes him besides,
His herberwe, his mone, and his lodemanage,
Ther was non swiche, from Hull unto Cartage.

Chaucer. Prol. to the Canterbury Tales, v. 403.

— And let the dreadfull queene
Of darknes deepe come from the Stygian strands,
And grisly ghosts, to heare this dolefull teene.

Spenser. Daphnida.

They drew them through the spacious shore, one by another still;
Till all the bosome of the strand, their sable bulks did fill.
Chapman. Homer. Iliad, b. xiv.

As those who live by shores with joy behold
Some wealthy vessel split or stranded nigh,
And from the rocks leap down for shipwreck'd gold,
And seek the tempests which the others fly.
Dryden. Annus Mirabilis.

The scaly nations of the sea profound,
Like shipwreck'd carcasses are driven aground:
And mighty phocæ, never seen before
In shallow streams, are stranded on the shore.
Id. Virgil. Georgics, b. iii.

— I ran along the strand
Till, spent and weary'd on the sinking sand,
I shriek'd aloud.
Addison. Ovid. Metam. b. ii.

In the year 1353 that fine street, the Strand, was an open high-way, with here and there a great man's house, with gardens to the water side.—Pennant. London.

They likewise asserted that neither she, nor any other ship had been stranded on the coast, as had been reported.
Cook. Second Voyage, b. iii. c. 11.

STRANGE, adj. } Fr. Estranger; It. Strani-
STRANGE, v. } are, stranàre; Sp. Estranar, STRANGELY. } from the Lat. Extraneus.
STRANGENESS. } See To ESTRANGE.
STRANGER, n. } An outlander, a foreigner,
STRANGER, v. } an alien.

Foreign, alien; not familiar; not well known, or acquainted with; having no affinity or consanguinity; unrelated, irrelative; disunited; not approaching or approximating to, distant, remote; uncommon, unwont, unusual; singular, extraordinary.

Wat by toknede thys, that the hey men velle so,
Bote that hii and al that lond bynethes ssolede be ydo,
Thoru folc of strange lond, and that me ssolede yse, Vor hii soffrede her kyng so vylyche y morthred be?
R. Gloucester, p. 288.

Tho thys strangemen hurde thys, ynou of folc hii nome,
Of men and of wymmen ek, and to thys lond come.
Id. p. 254.

In Ingland neuer before was kyng lufed so wele,
Ne of the folk strange non honourd so mykelle.
R. Brunne, p. 36.

Therefore now ghe ben not gestis & strangeris but ghe ben citsens of seyntis, and of houthold meynes of God aboue biddid on the foundement of apostlis and profetis upon that highest corner stoon Crist Jesus, in whom ech bilydng maad wexith into an hooli temple in the Lord.
Wiclif. Effesies, c. 2.

Nowe therefore ye are no more strangers and foreners; but citsens with the sayntes, and of the houthold of God; and are bylt vpon the foundacion of the Apostles and Prophetes, Jesus Chryste beyng the heade corner stone, in whome euery bilydng coupled together, groweth vnto an holly temple in the Lord.—Bible, 1551. Ib.

And thries hadde she been at Jerusaleme.
She hadde passed many a strange strene.
Chaucer. Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, v. 465.

Yet were me lever houndes had me eten,
